The improbable name of Ren G. May was actually an anagram. Mix the letters around and they spell Germany. Think of a famous song writer whose last name has a certain identification with Germany and you get Irving Berlin. In contrast with Victor Herbert, Berlin used his pen name toward the beginning of his career. As a young songwriter fresh from his success with "Alexander's Ragtime Band," he would work from midnight to dawn picking out tunes on the piano in his publisher's office. His output became so impressive that Ted Snyder, his publisher, thought that it would be a good idea to make it seem as if he had more than one prolific writer in his stable. Therefore, it was Ren G. May who was credited with two popular numbers of the day, "Pullman Porter On Parade" and "As I Was Aviating Around." They didn't last very long but then neither did Ren G. May.

The most all-encompassing pseudonym was Herbert Richard Lorenz. This one not only stood for one writer, it referred to three—Herbert Fields, Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart. The Team of Rodgers & Hart had met Fields when they were all quite young. Fields' father, Lew (Weber &) Fields, had given the songwriters their first professional break in 1919, and the following year Rodgers & Hart supplied half the score for a Lew Fields musical called "Poor Little Ritz Girl." The show wasn't any staggering hit, and the boys went back to writing amateur musicals for any organization that would hire them. During this time they kept up their friendship with Herbert Fields who was anxious to pursue a career as a playwright. In 1924, the trio decided to take a crack at Broadway together. They collaborated on a comedy—not a musical comedy—called "The Melody Man" which they conveniently tailored to the specifications of Lew Fields. Since the play was about the music business, two satirical songs, "I'd Like to Poison Ivy" and "Moonlight Mama," were interpolated and credited to the same three-headed individual—Herbert Richard Lorenz—who was responsible for the play. Needless to say, this protective anonymity was never again required.

The identity of Dick Howard does not need too much detective work. Howard Dietz merely turned his name around and chose a first name that sounded closest to his last name. Dietz's use of a nom-de-plume stemmed from the fact that for most of his life he was MGM's top publicist by day and one of Broadway's brightest lyric writers by night. For a while he thought that the best way to keep his business career entirely separate from his writing career was to adopt a pen name. This didn't exactly work out too well, and the idea was soon abandoned. But not before Dick Howard got at least four songs published. In the mid-Twenties, before forming his more-or-less steady partnership with Arthur Schwartz, Dietz worked with a number of composers, including Ralph Rainger and Jay Gorney. As Dick Howard, Dietz wrote the lyrics to two songs with Rainger, "Seems to Me" and "Got a Man On My Mind." Also as Dick Howard, Dietz collaborated with Gorney on two songs for a 1930 Paramount film, "The Battle of Paris," starring Gertrude Lawrence. The titles were "What Makes My Baby Blue" and "When I Am Housekeeping for You."

Ira Gershwin and Gus Kahn

Arthur Francis was a name that came into being through genuine modesty. It was used by Ira Gershwin who merely combined the names of his younger brother, Arthur, and his sister, Frances. His self-effacing reason: brother George had already won a reputation by the time Ira began writing professionally, and he didn't want to seem as if he were taking advantage of his brother's fame. Ira Gershwin used a pen name for a longer period of time than the other writers discussed. The first published song written by George and Ira together, "Waiting for the Sun to Come Out" (1920), still bears the credit line on the sheet music, "Words by Arthur Francis." It was not until four years later, when he collaborated on the score of a musical called "Be Yourself," that Ira Gershwin was finally identified publicly as Ira Gershwin.

Gus Kahn may have flirted briefly with the name Gilbert Keyes, but at least he kept his own initials. Records show that on original copies of "Toot Toot, Tootsie" and "On the Alamo," Kahn was billed as Keyes, though later credit listings revealed his true identity. "Toot Toot, Tootsie" was a collaboration of Gus Kahn, Ernie Erdman, and Ted FioRito, with Robert King credited with an assist on the melody. Now, there was a fellow who really made a name for himself!

My Friend, The Son

By MAURICE ZOLOTOW

A year ago, last December, Allan Sherman came back to New York. He had been away for two years and those two years had turned his life upside down. From an obscure producer of television shows for CBS and Westinghouse he had become an overnight sensation with "My Son, the Folksinger." He rang me the afternoon he got into town. Would we join him for dinner at Danny's Hideaway that evening?

I naturally wondered whether success had changed Allan Sherman—whom I had known for 10 years as a kindly, modest, gentle, lovable, plump individual, with a bizarre sense of the ridiculous in life and a giver of enormous and delightful parties. Now he had become a rich man, with almost a million-seller LP, and a series of concert engagements lined up—with more records scheduled, with night-club engagements, with film companies bidding for him, with two networks wanting him at $5,000 an appearance.

Eight of us foregathered at the restaurant. Present were NBC percussion virtuoso Bobby Rosengarden, insurance executive Dave Streger, myself, Sherman — and our wives. At once, I seemed to detect a shocking alteration in Sherman. Had he gone Hollywood? Did he have delusions of grandeur? For, with the air of a rajah, he at once took over the ordering of dinner. Waving his hands majestically, he spoke to the captain in a bold, almost arrogant voice:

(Continued on page 220)

Pop Tunes Puffing Cigs for 100 Years Via Frank Plugs and Moralistic Raps

By JIM WALSH

Vinton, Va.

By the time this is in print the U.S. Surgeon General's Committee on Smoking & Health probably will have made public its anxiously awaited report on the effects of nicotine addiction.

Regardless of what the committee's findings may be, there should be some interest in going back over the years and seeing how "the weed" has fared in sheet music and on records. This account can claim only to being representative instead of comprehensive.

A hundred years or so ago two ditties of the kind commonly called "college songs" had to do, respectively, with cigars and pipes. One, which many oldtimers remember from its first line, "'Twas off the blue Canary isles," told of the sufferings of an unfortunate smoker who consumed his last stogie at a time and place when he couldn't get another supply. It was called "My Last Cigar." The other was a paean of praise to "My Meerschaum Pipe."

Probably of about the same era, or even older, is a song which advises the hearer to "Smoke Tobacco" as a solace for all the ills that afflict mortality. The "Old Tobacco Box" tune popular with hillbilly fiddlers and git-tar players is most likely of equally great antiquity.

Off-hand, the historian can't think of any vehemently anti-nicotine musical propaganda of that period, but there must have been some.

It probably would be a good bet that the most unabashed plug any cigaret ever got on a phonograph record was contained in a 1901 "descriptive specialty," issued by Eldridge R. Johnson before he founded the Victor Talking Machine Co., and called "A Sleigh Ride Party." The record is by the once world-famous Haydn Quartet. The voice of the quartet baritone, Sam Rous, is heard saying, "Waiter, bring me a pack of Sweet Caporal cigarets—the only kind worth smoking!" Rous, who became assistant director of the Victor a&r department and author of the first editions of the Victor Book of the Opera, didn't smoke).

A few years later that famous Kansas agitator against liquor and tobacco, the sainted Carrie A. Nation, while in London made records for the old Gramophone Co. in which she denounced both booze and smokes.

In 1892 Princess Eulalie of Spain visited the Chicago World's Fair and publicly smoked a cigaret. Newspapers throughout the country began a campaign to have the shameless hussy deported. Smoking by women however, began to catch on, though at first only among a dribble of the sporty set, and toward the turn of the century Anna Held sang Ivan Caryll and

(Continued on page 222)

Record Pluggers Are People—Too

By VARNER PAULSEN

(Program Director, WNEW-Radio, New York)

He was dressed in a mohair suit with wide vents, Continental shoes with buckles instead of laces and a white tie to match his Dean Martin tab collar shirt. On one arm clung a tall, redheaded model dressed in a bikini, uneasy with her one-day title of "Miss RPM of 1963." Under his other arm he had a number of promotion copies of his firm's latest—"Bikini Bossa Nova."

He had to do something to attract attention at his radio station stops. Without the crowd-pleasing redhead, which surely would trigger the interest of the stations' talent and program execs, his other alternates were limited.

The policy of Station A requires that he slip the new releases under the front door.

Station B, much more liberal, allows him into the building on Thursdays from 2 to 3 p.m. But then, he is restricted to the lobby from whence came the expression: "lobbyist."

Station C doesn't want him in the building at all. They want new releases mailed, preferably from a foreign country, since the librarian is a stamp collector.

No such problem at Station D. He is admitted freely into the building as long as he is smuggling an exclusive, advance release of a surefire hit.

Station E doesn't want to see him unless he has a Top 10 "rocker." They don't play classical music, recorded by a classical artist—say—like—Perry Como.

Station F only plays "standards." They don't want those wailing rockers—say—like "Now" by Lena Horne. The program director of this station believes "Now" is a steal from an old New Orleans rhythm and blues classic called "Have A Magilla."

Is a puzzlement.

And so it goes for many of the record promotion representatives who freely wince at being called "record pluggers."

Musical Liaisons

These men, however persistent in their desire to exploit their product, are the closest link between the creative forces in music and the medium whose basic raw material is talent.

Like a midwife, they may not always deliver a prize package, but they perform a unique service of keeping the broadcaster aware of the new creations—screaming or melodic. At WNEW-Radio, we want to hear what's new—and as quickly as it comes off the presses—or before. We could not establish the proper rapport with the record reps if we were difficut with which to do business.

In a way, broadcasters are in the business to supply services. Services to people. Sometimes for money. Frequently free to community organizations. Certainly to the many sources who supply product, whatever it may be.

We do have a few restrictions imposed on the hard working record reps but they are logical and well taken.

Active studios are off-limits. We do not want the working personalities disturbed. But, this rule also applies to our own staff who have no busines in the studios. Another policy involves new releases. They must be given to our Chief Librarian, Al Trilling. Since personalities do not clear or build their own music programming, releases are approved by management.

We respect the record reps and the job they have to perform. We endeavor to make it as easy as possible for them to communicate with us. We've been calling our business "communications" for some years—and if a communication is not a two-way street we are closing doors on those who are willing and able to contribute.

Most record reps are valuable, necessary, industrious and anxious people. Except a chap I know who had the audacity to knock on a broadcaster's door to plead for a few plays for someone called The Singing Nun. And, she isn't even an American. Something called "Dominique" I think. What a nut.

"Mr. Piano Personality"

"BIG" TINY LITTLE

and His W-i-i-l-d Ones

Ed Sullivan TV Show, Jan. 12th, "HONKYTONK - HOOTENANNY"

17th Coral Record Album to be Released in January. Already Booked Solid 8 Months in 1964.

Management: HAROLD JOVIAN-PREMIERE ARTISTS AGENCY

1046 Carol Drive, Hollywood 69, Calif.

British Songs Hit On Home Grounds

By HUBERT W. DAVID

(Chairman, Songwriters Guild of Gt. Britain)

London.

No more than two years ago the British songwriter was completely overshadowed in his own Hit Parade by song material imported from the U. S. A recent checkup has shown that it is now no unusual thing for 16, 17 or 18 numbers out of the Top 20 to be the work of British tunesmiths and sung by British recording artists.

The boxoffice always tells the tale and it has been illustrated beyond any shadow of doubt that the British record-buying public prefers the homegrown product both as to the material itself and the singer who presents the song on record. With a vast teenage buying wave triggered off by some smart salesmanship on the part of our eager enthusiastic recording execs, yes, the whole music industry in Britain is thinking English.

This state of affairs has been brought about mostly by the American music men themselves. Many so-called stars come to Britain for nationwide tours, billed as the American "tops," but our boys and girls are dumbsters and they have quickly realized that most of these American artists being foisted on them were far less entertaining than the local boys—so they came to the inevitable conclusion that the whole thing was a bit of a phoney -and once bitten, twice shy!

The Battle Is On

If, in the future, you in the States hope to get any sort of representation in our Hit Parade, then I do implore you to send Britain only your very best artists. Good singers are associated with good songs, but I must warn you that we have girded our loins, and donned our armor, and our songwriters and singers are fit and ready to do battle on our own doorstep!

It is doubtful if current American pops were ever any better than their British counterpart, but American exploitation certainly was better and probably still is. For many years we suffered from a lack of initiative on the part of our recording companies' a. & r. men. They had only a fixed sum available to produce their crop of records, so what was easier (and cheaper) than to plump for the American hits, where they got the packaged production with artist included, all ready on a "master" for immediate pressing! By this method, they had no need to spend vast sums on studio costs with British artists and band fees mounting higher and higher — much of course to the detriment of the British song and its writer, who couldn't get any sort of showing.

But this has changed. The recording companies seem to prefer British songs and it is a break for a publisher, because he doesn't have to pay away royalties abroad nor barter with his rivals for British representation of an American hit. The publisher makes far more money out of a British tune, and in consequence I think the day is not far away when, in conjunction with the Songwriters Guild, every publisher is going to be happy to work through a Standard Contract devised by our Guild.

American Heyday

The British songwriter had a pretty lean time during the 20s and 30s, for after the wonderfully successful partnership between my father, the late Worton David and Horatio Nicholls (Lawrence Wright), British songs took a back seat. This was solely due to the fabulous run of hit songs being turned out by American writers of the calibre of Irving Berlin, Cole Porter, Walter Donaldson, Jerome Kern, Rodgers & Hart, and later Rodgers & Hammerstein. The world has never seen such a phenomenal output at any other time during this century. I hate to admit it, but, at that period, the British writer (with very few exceptions) didn't have what it took! He just couldn't produce those wonderful sentimental melodies that shook the world for almost a generation. How could one possibly emulate Kern's immortal "All the Things you Are," the "unusual" words and music of Porter, or the masterly film scores which Berlin created for Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire with as many as six hits in one film!

That was America's day of plenty—and we are suffering for this now for the only American songs heard regularly on our air today are the oldies. So at least you still get quite a showing although you may not now get the glamour of the Hit Parade. But even with the oldies, you may soon get a shock—for publishers here are busy combing their catalogs to find old British material that can be reexploited. It is here that television is helping, and in particular such programs as The Black & White Minstrel Show, lend a visual background.

And The Future

As I have mentioned earlier, the British wave of success is rather geared to the buying power of the teenagers, but there is a growing feeling in the U.K. that with proper exploitation, we shall soon see special recordings made for the moms and dads—so we are game for anything. There is a real spirit of adventure alive once again in the British music industry.

Our Guild cannot always be expected to agree with our counterpart in the States, the American Guild of Authors & Composers, but I am delighted that our secretary, Victor Knight, and Miss Miriam Stern, executive director of AGAC, have been working so very closely together. I feel that all this get-togetherness on their part may in time lead to the Utopian position where the best British songs go automatically to America and the best American songs come to Britain.

Payola Gets You Nothing

By RALPH J. GLEASON

San Francisco.

(Following comments by the San Francisco jazz critic appeared in his San Francisco Chronicle column under the caption, 'A Real Hit Is in the Groove." Much that has been written about the payoff rackets in pop music have stressed the bad ethics. Gleason makes an equally deplorable accusation—"payola" doesn't pay, accomplishes nothing, can't prevent and can't make a hit. Graft is paid for advantages that are illusory. As a publication which has frequently denounced "payola" in its columns, VARIETY reprints these comments, and adds its own amen.—Ed.)

More on payola: The most fascinating thing about the whole payola situation is that you do not need to give payola in order to have a hit.

In other words, not even payola can make a hit and you can't make a hit by spending money. The hit is in the groove, as the record men say. And nowhere else.

Fantasy, the local record company which has had two national hits in the past year—Vince Guaraldi's "Cast Your Fate to the Wind," which was up in the top 25 and their current hit, Little Johnny Taylor's "Part Time Love," which is now 43 on the chart—is the living proof that you don't have to give payola to get hits. Some strong stations where the jockeys are on the take have not played the records.

"We can sell without it," says Saul Zaentz, the sales manager. "The hell with them. If they don't want to play it, that's their problem. We sold 'Cast Your Fate' without them and we're going to go over 400,000 with Little Johnny Taylor without them. Luckily, a lot of guys don't ask for anything."

All that it proves is that if the record has it, you don't need the payola. And even in a case where payola jockeys own the artist, the record company and the song publishing rights and plug the disc unmercifully, they can still lay an egg. There's a current example that almost fits this description. It shows no signs of becoming a hit despite promotion out of all proportion.

"They ask for 35 or 40 copies of an album by the artist sometimes," one distributor complains. "And if you turn them down, they get very salty."

A small, independent manufacturer (a man who puts out half a dozen records a year and hopes one will catch on) says, "The little guy like me hasn't got a chance. They bleed us to death. They want a piece of the rights or they want money. And if you don't go along, they'll get on the phone and call all around the country and keep their friends in other cities from playing on ti too."

His view that you have to go along with payola represents the opposite point of view from that of Fantasy. Once in a while, these small-time manufacturers, who are sort of wildcaters in the record business, come up with a hit, but it's rare.

A man who is today a major record-company executive told me a couple of years ago that San Francisco had become the worst payola city in the U.S.A.

"I can't let you use my name; they'd ruin me," he said. Another man who was then and still is high in the executive echelons of the major company he works for, said: "We have got to do something about this before the business rots to pieces."

What can be done about all this? I'm not sure. After the original payola investigation and the FCC crackdown, stations were making announcements and refusing even to accept free discs.

The FCC code doesn't really scare disc jockeys; only station owners and operators. In some cities, like New York where disk jockeys have been tried and convicted, there is local legislation. There is no effective Federal legislation. Only the record industry itself and possibly the Federal Trade Commission can get in here and clean this up.

Bros. Four Net 7½G For JFK Dallas Scholarships

Dallas.

The Brothers Four recent benefit concert at Southern Methodist U. Coliseum showed a lusty $7,500 net. With house scaled at $3 top, the take is going to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Scholarship Fund for the Children of Dallas Policemen and Firemen killed in action. The stage crew and ticket force waived their fees and the Brothers Four worked gratis, drawing only travel expenses.

The benefit was a replacement for ticketholders to the Peter, Paul & Mary concert scheduled for Nov. 23, which was cancelled due to the assassination of President Kennedy here Nov. 22.

HEROINE'S COSTUME PROBLEM

Maternal Angles Threaten Paris Hit of "Wozzek"

Paris.

"Wozzek" is a hit at the Paris Opera House in its current "new" staging, with hundreds of turnaways nightly, but will have to come off after only a dozen or so showings, much to managing director George Auric's chagrin. Unless he can find a new leading lady who can sing the difficult role in German—and he says he can't.

What's wrong with Helga Pylarczek, who has the role now? well, much . . . but in about two months, at the most, she will be a mother, and her costumes are beginning to be a bit too difficult to alter for each new performance.

Incidentally, one of the Paris critics who reviewed the show at its opening, apparently uninformed of the facts of life, lambasted Mme Pylarczek for "being neglectful of her appearance in public; she is getting inexcusably fat."

MILLION (and Over) RECORD SELLERS

As far as possible this is a roster of recent pops which have sold 1,000,000 records or better. They are identified only as to Title, Artist and Label. No record number is indicated, but ASCAP or BMI clearance is identified by appropriate symbol. The extraordinary smash sellers that have gone into multiple millions have been spotlighted in VARIETY from time to time, such as the seasonal "White Christmas" and "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer." Perhaps the single pop artist record-holder is Bing Crosby with "White Christmas (20,000,000 sum total over the years). There are instances of perennials, such as "Star Dust," "St. Louis Blues," and the like, having sold into staggering totals because of multiple recordings; these two, for example, may have had as many as 1,000 different versions each over the years. This and other footnote information for programmers, is basically something for individual spotlighting, depending on the usage of this information. It might also be spotlighted that, especially with the rock 'n' roll, quick-flash disksellers, not always have their "gold record" claims (1,000,000-or-better sales) been verified. Some time later the RIAA (Record Industry Assn. of America) set up a confirmation system to verify and officially police "gold record" claims for 1,000,000 singles. A standard of $1,000,000 in sales at factory price for albums was also set up at the time.

A BIG HUNK OF LOVE†	Elvis Presley	RCA
A FOOL SUCH AS I*	Elvis Presley	RCA
A GUY IS A GUY†	Doris Day	Col
A HUBBA-HUBBA-HUBBA*	Perry Como	RCA
A LITTLE BIRD TOLD ME*	Evelyn Knight	Dec
A LOVER'S QUESTION†	Clyde McPhatter	Atl
A ROSE & A BABY RUTH†	George Hamilton	ABC
A-TISKET, A-TASKET*	Ella Fitzgerald	Dec
A WONDERFUL TIME UP THERE†	Pat Boone	Dot
ABA DABA HONEYMOON*	D. Reynolds/C. Carpenter	MGM
AGAIN*	Vic Damone	Merc
AIN'T IT A SHAME†	Fats Domino	Imp
AIN'T THAT A SHAME†	Pat Boone	Dot
ALL BY MYSELF†	Fats Domino	Imp
ALL I HAVE TO DO IS DREAM†	Everly Bros.	Cad
ALL I WANT FOR CHRISTMAS*	Spike Jones	RCA
ALL OR NOTHING AT ALL*	Frank Sinatra	Col
ALL SHOOK UP†	Elvis Presley	RCA
ALL THE WAY*	Frank Sinatra	Cap
ALLEY OOP†	Hollywood Argyles	Lute
ALLEGHENY MOON†	Patti Page	Merc
ALVIN'S HARMONICA*	David Seville	Lib
AMAPOLO†	Jimmy Dorsey	Dec
AMERICAN PATROL*	Glenn Miller	RCA
AMONG MY SOUVENIRS†	Connie Francis	MGM
ANNA†	Sylvano Mangano	MGM
ANNIE HAD A BABY†	H. Ballard & Midnighters	King
ANNIVERSARY SONG*	Al Jolson	Dec
ANYTIME†	Eddie Fisher	RCA
APRIL LOVE*	Pat Boone	Dot
APRIL SHOWERS*	Al Jolson	Dec
AT THE HOP†	Danny & Jrs.	ABC
ARE YOU LONESOME TONIGHT†	Elvis Presley	RCA
AUF WIEDERSEHN†	Vera Lynn	Lon
AUTUMN LEAVES*	Roger Williams	Kapp
BACK BAY SHUFFLE*	Artie Shaw	RCA
BABY†	D. Washington/B. Benton	Merc
BABY FACE*	Art Mooney	MGM
BALLERINA*	Vaughn Monroe	RCA
BATTLE OF NEW ORLEANS†	Johnny Horton	Col
BE BOP BABY†	Rick Nelson	Imp
BE MY LOVE*	Mario Lanza	RCA
BECAUSE†	Perry Como	RCA
BECAUSE OF YOU†	Tony Bennett	Col
BECAUSE THEY'RE YOUNG*	Duane Eddy	Jamie
BEEP BEEP†	Playmates	Roul
BEER BARREL POLKA*	Will Glahe	RCA
BEGIN THE BEGUINE*	Artie Shaw	RCA
BELIEVE WHAT I SAY†	Rick Nelson	Imp
BIG BAD JOHN†	Jimmy Dean	Col
BIRD DOG	Everly Bros.	Cad
BLACKSMITH BLUES†	Ella Mae Morse	Cap
BLUEBERRY HILL*	Fats Domino	Imp
BLUE DANUBE WALTZ*	Leopold Stokowski	RCA
BLUE MONDAY†	Fats Domino	Imp
BLUE MOON*	Marcels	Colpix
BLUE SKIRT WALTZ*	Frank Yankovic	Col
BLUE TANGO*	Leroy Anderson	Dec
BOLL WEEVIL†	Fats Domino	Imp
BOOGIE WOOGIE*	Tommy Dorsey	RCA
BONY MORONIE†	Larry Williams	Spec
BOUQUET OF ROSES†	Eddy Arnold	RCA
BREATHLESS†	Jerry Lee Lewis	Sun
BRIDGE ON RIVER KWAI*	Mitch Miller	Col
BROKEN HEARTED MELODY†	Sarah Vaughan	Merc
BUTTERFLY†	Charlie Gracie	Cam
BUTTONS AND BOWS*	Dinah Shore	Col
CALCUTTA*	Lawrence Welk	Dot
CALIFORNIA HERE I COME*	Al Jolson	Dec
CALYPSO MELODY*	David Rose	MGM
CANADIAN SUNSET†	Hugo Winterhalter	RCA
CAN'T HELP FALLING IN LOVE†	Elvis Presley	RCA
CARA MIA*	David Whitfield	Lon
CARAVAN*	Ralph Marterie	Merc
CATCH A FALLING STAR*	Perry Como	RCA
CATHY'S CLOWN†	Everly Bros.	WB
CHAINS OF LOVE†	Joe Turner	Atl
CHANCES ARE*	Johnny Mathis	Col
CHANGING PARTNERS†	Patti Page	Merc
CHANSON D'AMOUR†	Art & Dotti Todd	Era
CHARLIE BROWN†	Coasters	Atl
CHARMAINE*	Montovani	Lon
CHATTANOOGA CHOO CHOO*	Glenn Miller	RCA
CHATTANOOGO SHOE SHINE BOY†	Red Foley	Dec
CHERRY PINK, APPLE BLOSSOM WHITE†	Perez Prado	RCA
CHIPMUNK SONG*	David Seville	Lib
CHOO CHOO CH'BOOGIE*	Louis Jordan	Dec
CHRISTMAS ISLAND*	G. Lombardo/Andrews Sis.	Dec
CIRIBIRIBIN*	Harry James	Col
CITY LIGHTS†	Ray Price	Col
CLAIR DE LUNE*	Jose Iturbi	RCA
COCKTAILS FOR TWO*	Spike Jones	RCA
COLD COLD HEART†	Tony Bennett	Col
COLD COLD HEART†	Hank Williams	MGM
COME ON-A MY HOUSE*	Rosemary Clooney	Col
COME GO WITH ME†	Del Vikings	Dot
COME SOFTLY TO ME†	Fleetwoods	Dol
CONFESS*	D. Day/B. Clark	Col
CORINA, CORINA*	Joe Turner	Atl
CRAZY ARMS†	Ray Price	Col
CRAZY OTTO†	Johnny Maddox	Dot
CROSS OVER THE BRIDGE*	Patti Page	Merc
CRUISING DOWN THE RIVER*	Blue Barron	MGM
CRUISING DOWN THE RIVER*	Russ Morgan	Dec
CRY†	Johnnie Ray	Col
CRY ME A RIVER*	Julie London	Lib
CRY OF THE WILD GOOSE†	Frankie Laine	Merc
CRYING IN THE CHAPEL†	Orioles	Jub
DANCE WITH ME†	Drifters	Atl
DANCE WITH ME, HENRY†	Georgia Gibbs	Merc
DANCING IN THE DARK*	Artie Shaw	RCA
DAVY CROCKETT†	Bill Hayes	Cad
DAY-O (BANANA BOAT)*	Harry Belafonte	RCA
DE DE DINAH*	Frankie Avalon	Chanc
DEAR HEARTS & GENTLE PEOPLE*	Bing Crosby	Dec
DECK OF CARDS*	Wink Martindale	Dot
DEEP IN THE HEART OF TEXAS†	Horace Heidt	Col
DEVOTED TO YOU†	Everly Bros.	Cad
DIANA†	Paul Anka	ABC
DING-A-LING*	Bobby Rydell	Cam
DOGGIN' AROUND†	Jackie Wilson	Brun
DONNA†	Ritchie Valens	Del-Fi
DON'T†	Elvis Presley	RCA
DON'T ASK ME WHY*	Elvis Presley	RCA
DON'T BE CRUEL†	Elvis Presley	RCA
DON'T COME KNOCKIN'†	Fats Domino	Imp
DON'T FENCE ME IN*	B. Crosby/Andrews Sis.	Dec
DON'T FORBID ME†	Pat Boone	Dot
DON'T LEAVE ME THIS WAY†	Fats Domino	Imp
DON'T LET STARS GET IN YOUR EYES†	Perry Como	RCA
DON'T YOU JUST KNOW IT†	Huey Smith	Ace
DREAM LOVER†	Bobby Darin	Atco
EARLY AUTUMN*	Jo Stafford	Col
EASTER PARADE*	Harry James	Col
EASTER PARADE*	Guy Lombardo	Dec
EBB TIDE*	Frank Chacksfield	Lon
EH CUMPARI†	Julius LaRosa	Cad
EL PASO†	Marty Robbins	Col
EVERYBODY'S SOMEBODY'S FOOL†	Connie Francis	MGM
EXODUS*	Ferrante & Teicher	UA
FASCINATION*	Jane Morgan	Kapp
FAME & FORTUNE*	Elvis Presley	RCA
FAT MAN†	Fats Domino	Imp
FEVER†	Little Willie John	King
FINGER POPPIN' TIME†	H. Ballard/Midnighters	King
FIVE-TEN-FIFTEEN HOURS†	Ruth Brown	Atl
FLAMINGO*	Earl Bostic	King
FLYING SAUCER†	Buchanan & Goodman	Luni
FRANKIE†	Connie Francis	MGM
FRIENDLY PERSUASION*	Pat Boone	Dot
FRENESI†	Artie Shaw	RCA
FROSTY, THE SNOWMAN†	Gene Autry	Col
GALWAY BAY*	Bing Crosby	Dec
GAMBLER'S GUITAR†	Rusty Draper	Merc
GET A JOB†	Silhouettes	Emb
GLOW WORM†	Mills Bros.	Dec
GOODNIGHT, IRENE†	G. Jenkins/Weavers	Dec
GOOD TIMIN'*	Jimmy Jones	Cub
GOIN' HOME†	Fats Domino	Imp
GOIN' TO THE RIVER†	Fats Domino	Imp
GONNA FIND ME A BLUEBIRD†	Marvin Rainwater	MGM
GOTTA TRAVEL ON†	Billy Grammer	Mon
GREAT BALLS OF FIRE†	Jerry Lee Lewis	Sun
GREAT PRETENDER*	Platters	Merc
GREEN DOOR†	Jim Lowe	Dot
GREEN EYES†	Jimmy Dorsey	Dec
GYPSY*	Ink Spots	Dec
HALF AS MUCH†	Rosemary Clooney	Col
HANDY MAN†	Jimmy Jones	Cub
HARD HEADED WOMAN*	Elvis Presley	RCA
HAVE YOU HEARD*	Joni James	MGM
HEARTACHES*	Ted Weems	Dec
HEARTACHES BY THE NUMBER†	Guy Mitchell	Col
HEARTBREAK HOTEL†	Elvis Presley	RCA
HEARTS OF STONE†	Fontane Sisters	Dot
HEARTS OF STONE†	O. Williams/Charms	Del
HE'LL HAVE TO GO†	Jim Reeves	RCA
HE'LL HAVE TO STAY†	Jeanne Black	Cap
HELLO MARY LOU†	Rick Nelson	Imp
HERE COMES SANTA CLAUS*	Gene Autry	Col
HE'S GOT WHOLE WORLD IN HIS HANDS*	Laurie London	Cap
HERE I AM BROKEN HEARTED†	Johnnie Ray	Col
HEY PAULA	Paul & Paula	Merc
HEY THERE*	Rosemary Clooney	Col
HIGH AND THE MIGHTY*	LeRoy Holmes	MGM
HOLIDAY FOR STRINGS*	David Rose	MGM
HONEYCOMB*	Jimmie Rodgers	Roul
HONKY TONK†	Bill Doggett	King
HONEY BABE*	Art Mooney	MGM
HOT DIGGITY†	Perry Como	RCA
HOW HIGH THE MOON*	L. Paul/M. Ford	Cap
HOW IMPORTANT CAN IT BE*	Joni James	MGM
HOW MUCH IS DOGGIE IN WINDOW*	Patti Page	Merc
HUBBA HUBBA†	Perry Como	RCA
HUMORESQUE*	Guy Lombardo	Dec
I APOLOGIZE*	Billy Eckstine	MGM
I ALMOST LOST MY MIND†	Pat Boone	Dot
I BELIEVE*	Frankie Laine	Col
I CAN DREAM CAN'T I*	Andrews Sisters	Dec
I CAN'T BEGIN TO TELL YOU*	Bing Crosby	Dec
I CAN'T GO ON†	Fats Domino	Imp
I CAN'T STOP LOVING YOU†	Ray Charles	ABC
I CRIED A TEAR†	LaVern Baker	Atl
I GOT STUNG*	Elvis Presley	RCA
I HEAR YOU KNOCKING†	Gale Storm	Dot
I HAD THE CRAZIEST DREAM*	Harry James	Col

(Continued on page 199)

Blues On The Danube & Watch That Step On The Rhine

Modern Germany's 'Riverboat Shuffle' for Teen-Twisters And 'Bavarian Beatniks'

By HAZEL GUILD

Frankfurt.

They call it the "Riverboat Shuffle" here. And the new form of relaxed music and entertainment for the teenagers in Germany is reviving much of the leisurely, casual charm of a cruise with a showboat down the Mississippi.

Only today, in busy bustling modern Germany, thousands of youngsters are being slowly wafted down the Rhine, the Main, the Elba, the Isar and the Danube Rivers to the tunes of Dixie, the blues, oldtime jazz, and the cool contemporary sounds of modern jazz . . . or even to the jumping, shouting music of the Twist.

Twisting on the high seas—or on the riverboats cruising offshore down the major rivers of Germany—has become a new rage to avoid some of the local villages' short-sighted bans on the wild strains of the Twist music.

When the city officials at the town of Bregenz called a halt to the Twist last year, some enterprising shipboard operators started offering the local teenage communities "twist parties" aboard the riverboat Montafon.

And on the Saturday and Sunday sprees aboard the ship, the teenagers could twist to their hearts' content—without worrying about the old blue laws that ban dancing in many communities in Germany on Sunday, and about the local regulations that prevented the young people from doing the Twist any night at all.

And just as the twist parties onboard the ships have become part of the West German scene, so the "riverboat shuffle" is another phase of the same lure to a kind of mixed musical and spiritual freedom.

"Once you're cruising on the river, you're free from just about all the strict codes in Germany," one bearded youth explained.

And so the last decade has seen more and more of the young people taking to the rivers for their Saturday and Sunday entertainment.

It's two o'clock in the afternoon on Saturday, the stores and factories have just shut down. And along the waterfront at Frankfurt, Wiesbaden, Heidelberg, you can watch just about the same scene . . .

A crowd of teen-agers, looking amazingly like their American counterparts, clad in levis and heavy sweaters, are gathering at the dock. Parked nearby are the motorized bicycles, mopeds, motorcycles, and old broken down Volkswagens that brought them to their destination.

And as they board the ship — plunking down about two dollars for a 10-hour cruise—they carry an odd assortment of "instruments."

One boy clutches a homemade guitar, a couple of others carry bongos, a pretty girl with a crew-cut has an enormous eggbeater in her hand, a lad with a Truman Capote look of concentration drags a heavy teen washboard, and even a couple of heavy iron pots for carrying coals are pulled aboard.

From this polyglot collection of music-makers comes the music — with variations ranging from oldtime Dixie to the coolest jazz. Sometimes the ship offers a broken down piano to help with the cool sounds. And certainly many of the pure young voices can carry a tune like "John Brown's Body . . ." or "Deep River."

And so the cruise begins.

The young people are not only armed with a strange collection of instruments, but many of them are also carrying the official-looking German brief cases, which generally wrap around a collection of sandwiches, a couple of bottles of beer, or even stretch to conceal a huge two-liter bottle of Chianti wine.

True the riverboats serve food, soft drinks, and beer and local wines—but the additions carried in the brief cases enable many a teenager to keep within his limited spending for the cruise.

Not only is the shipboard the

(Continued on page 201)

LESTER LANIN
Internationally
Famous Society Orchestra
His latest release: Volume No. 20
"Lester Lanin Dance Album"
America's Best Selling Dance
Albums

Nashville Disks Felt Overseas

America's country & western music is beginning to make a dent in the European disk market. That's the report from W. E. (Lucky) Moeller, exec-veepee general manager of the Jim Denny Artist Bureau in Nashville, who recently toured several countries in Europe.

Moeller pointed out that many of our c&w artists are already being displayed in record shops throughout Holland, Germany and France. "Even with the language differences," he said, "the people of Europe are buying the sound of c&w music. If our songs and lyrics can be properly translated and rendered with the same feeling in the various languages, c&w music would be the most popular music in Europe."

Moeller, who spent a week with Connie B. Gay's "Town & Country" show, mentioned that The Willis Bros., who record for Starday Records, were quick to realize the acceptance of the country music sound by Europeans while they were playing in Amsterdam and recorded two songs in German there before leaving.

The 18-day "Town & Country" show in Amsterdam was the first of its type to present a command performance for royalty when it was requested to play a command performance for Queen Julianna and Prince Bernhard at The Hague. The show also appeared on the world-wide Telstar communication satellite, and was done simultaneously on Dutch tv, Voice of America, Eurovision-TV, Radio Free Europe and the Armed Forces Network.

Moeller feels that in the coming year many country artists will follow The Willis Bros.' lead and record their songs in the native langauge of the European countries and that there will also be many more c&w performers hitting the European personal appearance circuit.

Moeller already has made arrangements for a number of c&w artists and groups to appear in Frankfurt, Berlin, Paris and London.

Duo Acquires 90th Floor, Texas Jazz Landmark

Dallas.

The 90th Floor, Texas' jazz landmark, has been sold by pianist Dick Harp to Herb Kravitz and Neil Vandenberg, who will continue operating the suburban intimery "for listeners only."

Harp and his trio will stay on the dais, with guest acts.

'Hiawatha' Assist

In 1956 Bing Crosby was the first to record my song, "I Heard The Bells On Christmas Day." The lyric I adapted from a poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Bing had previously recorded several of my songs, including "Rudolph The Red-Nosed Reindeer" and he knew that I generally wrote words and music. Shortly after he recorded "I Heard The Bells" he was visiting in New York and I went up to see him.

As I entered the door, he turned his head, took the pipe out of his mouth and greeted me with: "So you finally got yourself a decent lyric writer."

Johnny Marks

Performance Collections In European Lands

By EMIL MAASS

Vienna.

The collection—distribution systems of the various national societies of authors, composers and music publishers differ considerably. But the basic idea remains the same. They want performance fees paid by users for profit of copyrighted music. So-called "little rights" cover bars, cafes, restaurants, ballrooms, concert halls, radio, tv et al. There are millions of such places, where copyrighted music is "consumed" in contrast to grand rights more easily negotiated—and policed—as to operettas, musicals, opera, staged presentation on the air, and so on.

Performance fees collected, less collection expenses and a percentage for pensions and charity, are divided annually among members of the societies per a point system, again varying from country to country.

These are the salient facts in Austria:

(A) Program system—Musicians and orchestra leaders forward monthly a list, containing the titles of the compositions played. According to an intricate system each public performance receives "points" in which attendance, admission scale are "weighted." A general license fee suffices for most users.

(B) Program and Estimate. A certain percentage is held back ending investigation by a special commission of titles believed not properly marked on the submitted program lists. The larger part of points are, however, free of doubt.

(C) Estimate only. Still in use in very small countries, where the performance fee collection agencies are encountering difficulties. Systems A and B require a huge office force and with negligible revenues smaller agencies cannot afford it.

To come to a true audit as closely as possible is the axiom of every society. Much checking is entailed because of changes, errors, human carelessness and cheating. Pianist John Doe repeats compositions of his friend pianist John Smith and vice versa. But generally speaking, there are better "morals" in this respect nowadays.

Societies discovered years ago and stick to the figure 12, which is divisible by 2, 3, 4, 6—and there are three kinds of members to be fed, the authors, the composers and the music publishers. In some countries there is a fourth group, the arrangers. In most European countries the author, the composer and the publisher receive one-third each of the total points each compositions reached, also if the money comes from a foreign country, where there are other rules than the one-third payment.

The following societies collect and distribute to Western countries:

Zamp (Zavod za Autorskih prava) Belgrade (Yugoslavia).

ZAIKS, Warsaw (Poland) Bureau pour la Protection, Budapest, Hungary.

OSA (Ochranny autorsky), Prague, Czechoslovakia.

AWA (Antstalt zur Wahrung), Berlin German Democratic Republic.

Each time a new country is born—and that's rather often these days—a new "collecting agency" will soon start operations, meaning more money for this part of the amusement trade.

Brushed Off 2 Years Ago, Indie Disk Prods. Now Welcome Even at Majors

Hollywood.

The indie disk producer is rapidly gaining in stature these days, according to many execs in the wax whirl here. Diskeries, especially the smaller ones, are relying more and more on masters submitted by the freelance producer.

Mike Maitland, prexy of Warner Bros. Records, is sold on the indie: "With the great and growing diversity in the market today," he says, "there's no one a&r department in the world that can possibly answer the demand."

Though Capitol Records prexy Alan Livingston estimates only two or three percent of his company's total output originated with indies, he opines, "the advantage is greatest with the little and middle-sized companies. By using the independents, they avoid keeping a great number of a&r people on staff—which is expensive. The big advantage for us is getting production talent we wouldn't otherwise get under contract."

Indie producer's cut is generally a 2% to 3% override, or 8% of gross sales, out of which the producer gives 5% to the artist. Rarely does diskery give advance-in-royalty cash outlay, however.

Dot prexy Randy Wood is deluged with masters from the indies. "There's hardly a day that goes by that I don't see a dozen or 15 new masters on my desk." Wood spins every platter submitted and goes so far as to say the "great majority" of Dot hits during the past 18 months have had their origin with the indie producer.

On the negative side of the ledger is Neely Plumb, Coast a&r chief for RCA Victor, who says, "We're reluctant to take masters from the independent producer because you also have to take an option on the artist at the same time. Therefore, you're jeopardizing the position of someone on your own roster."

Plumb recalls two or at most three masters diskery picked up from the indies during 1963. "The percentage is infinitesimally small," he concludes.

With opinions on the subject as diverse as they are, it's mebbe too early to say anything more than the trend is here; whereas two years ago, it was a tightly closed door to the freelancer, 1963 witnessed its opening—even if only a crack.

EDDIE LANE
And his SOCIETY ORCHESTRA
Currently Hotel Astor, New York,
Anthony M. Rey, V.P. & Gen'l Mgr.
Mgt.: Imperial Artists Corp.

Euterpe and The Lucky Lyricist

By IRA GERSHWIN

The authorities on respectable English and formal prose warn against sliding into slang or into polysyllabic humor or the mixed metaphor or the genteelism or the inadvertent jingle or overuse of the foreign phrase, and other verbal mire. And, especially, sentences must never get bogged down in, or become contaminated by, the cliche. Inasmuch as I have little to do with formal prose, I bow respectfully to all the advice, rules, and definitions given by the usage and abusage arbiters—going along with them all the way from Ambiguity to Zeugma. But, alas, much of what they advocate doesn't apply to the lyric-writer. The jingle quality (inadvertent or deliberate), for instance, is part and parcel (oops! cliche) of lyric writing. As for cliche itself:

Eric Partridge, in his "A Dictionary of Cliches," lists alphabetically—leaving out X and Z—over 2,000 phrases that "careful speakers and scrupulous writers shrink from . . . Under A are such examples as "as a matter of fact" and accidents will happen"; under Y: "Your guess is as good as mine" and "young in heart." In a matter of minutes I have selected an example from each section: "at (a person's) beck and call"; "build upon sand"; "cross the Rubicon"; "dance attendance on"; "eat humble pie"; "flash in the pan"; "good Queen Bess"; "hitch one's wagon to a star"; "I mean to say"; "je ne sais quoi"; "keep one's nose to the grindstone"; "lay one's cards on the table"; "make the welkin ring"; "non compos mentis"; "on one's mettle"; "pay the piper (and call the tune)"; nothing in Q; "red-letter day"; "six of one and half a dozen of the other"; "this vale of tears"; "upset the apple cart"; "vanish into thin air"; "(the) writing on the wall"; "year in (and) year out."

Why this deluge of watered-down phrase? If not immediately obvious, the answer is: because I have used every one of them, and hundreds of others, in songs. So, I list them not flauntingly, nor to thumb-nose, but because the literary cliche is an integral part of lyric-writing. If I were doing editorials, I might never write, say: "Things have come to a pretty pass" (re some disturbing conditions), but I like it when it is sung to start the verse of "Let's Call the Whole Thing Off."

As Congreve didn't quite put it:

Not only hath music charms to soothe the savage breast;
To soften rocks, undo the clenched fist . .
It refurbisheth the puissance
the cliche once possessed.

(How fortunate the priv'leged lyricist!)

Drafts Trade Practice Rules to Establish Marketplace Equity

The American Record Merchants & Distributors Assn. (ARMADA) has drafted a complete set of trade practice rules to be advocated before the Federal Trade Commission in an effort to achieve "a sane and lawful marketplace for phonograph records."

Amos Heilicher, ARMADA president, explained that the reason his organization has undertaken the initiative in establishing rules for the entire phonograph industry is because unlike other trade lines the wholesale disk distributors are responsible for promotion of product.

"We are the ones who have to go out and make a 'hit'—to obtain exposure of particular records through radio programming, super salesmanship, window display or by other media," he stated. He also added that this function makes the wholesale distributor the key figure in this trade.

"We have striven for an FTC-sponsored trade practices conference since 1961," Heilicher said, "so we could put an end to the furious and chaotic competition which has existed in this business." He described this competition as involving use of discriminatory discounts, discriminatory "advertising allowances" and other unlawful practices. These conditions have led to over-extension of customer financing; to "profitless prosperity," and to disappearance of many small businessmen operating record stores, he declared.

The FTC in September disclosed its intention to hold a trade practice conference for the phonograph industry but so far has not announced a date. Trade opinion, however, is that the FTC will hold

(Continued on page 201)

MILLION (and Over) RECORD SELLERS

Continued from page 197

I LIVED MY LIFE†	Fats Domino	Imp
I NEED YOU NOW*	Eddie Fisher	RCA
I NEED YOUR LOVE TONIGHT*	Elvis Presley	RCA
I SAW MOMMY KISSING SANTA CLAUS*	Jimmy Boyd	Col
I STILL LOVE YOU†	Fats Domino	Imp
I UNDERSTAND*	Four Tunes	Jub
I WANT YOU, I NEED YOU, I LOVE YOU†	Elvis Presley	RCA
I WENT TO YOUR WEDDING†	Patti Page	Merc
I YUS GO NUTS AT CHRISTMAS†	Yogi Yorgeson	Cap
I'LL BE HOME†	Pat Boone	Dot
I'LL BE HOME FOR CHRISTMAS*	Bing Crosby	Dec
I'M GONNA SIT RIGHT DOWN AND WRITE MYSELF A LETTER*	Billy Williams	MGM
I'M IN LOVE AGAIN†	Fats Domino	Imp
I'M LOOKING OVER A FOUR LEAF CLOVER*	Art Mooney	MGM
I'M WALKIN'†	Rick Nelson	Ver
I'M WALKING†	Fats Domino	Imp
I'M WALKING BEHIND YOU*	Eddie Fisher	RCA
I'M SORRY†	Brenda Lee	Dec
I'VE GOT A GAL IN KALAMAZOO*	Glenn Miller	RCA
I'VE HEARD THAT SONG BEFORE*	Harry James	Col
IF I KNEW YOU WERE COMIN' I'D HAVE BAKED A CAKE*	Eileen Barton	Natl
IT'S ALL IN THE GAME*	Tommy Edwards	MGM
IT'S IN THE BOOK†	Johnny Standley	Cap
IT'S JUST A MATTER OF TIME†	Brook Benton	Merc
IT'S LATE†	Rick Nelson	Ver
IT'S MAGIC*	Doris Day	Col
IT'S NOT FOR ME TO SAY*	Johnny Mathis	Col
IT'S NOW OR NEVER*	Elvis Presley	RCA
IT'S ONLY MAKE BELIEVE†	Conway Twitty	MGM
IT'S YOU I LOVE†	Fats Domino	Imp
IN A SHANTY IN OLD SHANTY TOWN*	Johnny Long	Dec
IN THE MOOD*	Glenn Miller	RCA
INDIAN LOVE CALL*	Slim Whitman	Imp
INTO EACH LIFE SOME RAIN MUST FALL*	E. Fitzgerald/Ink Spots	Dec
ITSY BITSY TEENIE WEENIE YELLOW POLKA DOT BIKINI*	Bryan Hyland	Kapp
IVORY TOWER*	O. Williams/Charms	DeL
JAILHOUSE ROCK†	Elvis Presley	RCA
JALOUSIE*	Arthur Fiedler	RCA
JEALOUS OF YOU†	Connie Francis	MGM
JEZEBEL†	Frankie Laine	Col
JIM DANDY†	LaVern Baker	Atl
JINGLE BELLS*	Andrews Sisters	Dec
JINGLE, JANGLE JINGLE*	Kay Kayser	Col
JOSEPHINE†	Bill Black's Combo	Hi
JUMPIN' JIVE†	Cab Calloway	Col
JUST A DREAM†	Jimmy Clanton	Ace
JUST WALKING IN THE RAIN†	Johnnie Ray	Col
KANSAS CITY†	Wilbert Harrison	Fury
KISS OF FIRE†	Georgia Gibbs	Merc
KISSES SWEETER THAN WINE†	Jimmie Rodgers	Roul
KOOKIE, KOOKIE LEND ME YOUR COMB*	E. Byrnes/C. Stevens	WB
LA BAMBA†	Ritchie Valens	Del-Fi
LA DEE DAH*	Billie & Lillie	Swan
LAST DATE†	Floyd Cramer	RCA
LAURA*	Woody Herman	Col
LAWDY MISS CLAWDY†	Lloyd Price	Spec
LEROY†	Jack Scott	Carl
LET ME GO LOVER†	Joan Weber	Col
LET THE GOOD TIMES ROLL†	Shirley & Lee	Alad
LIPSTICK ON YOUR COLLAR*	Connie Francis	MGM
LITTLE BITTY GIRL*	Bobby Rydell	Cam
LITTLE BROWN JUG*	Glenn Miller	RCA
LITTLE DARLIN'†	Diamonds	Merc
LITTLE STAR†	Elegants	Apt
LITTLE THINGS MEAN A LOT*	Kitty Kallen	Dec
LITTLE WHITE LIES*	Dick Haymes	Dec
LISBON ANTIGUA*	Nelson Riddle	Cap
LONELY BOY†	Paul Anka	ABC
LONELY BLUE BOY†	Conway Twitty	MGM
LONELY TEARDROPS†	Jackie Wilson	Brunswick
LONESOME TOWN†	Rick Nelson	Imp
LONG GONE†	Sonny Thompson	Miracle
LONG TALL SALLY†	Little Richard	Spec
LOVE IS A MANY SPLENDORED THING*	Four Aces	Dec
LOVE LETTERS IN THE SAND*	Pat Boone	Dot
LOVE ME†	Fats Domino	Imp
LOVE ME TENDER†	Elvis Presley	RCA
LOVE SICK BLUES*	Hank Williams	MGM
LOVE SOMEBODY*	Doris Day	Col
LOVING YOU†	Elvis Presley	RCA
LOVELIEST NIGHT OF THE YEAR*	Mario Lanza	RCA
LUCILLE†	Little Richard	Spec
LUCKY LIPS†	Ruth Brown	Atl
LUCKY OL' SUN†	Frankie Laine	Col
MA BLUSHIN' ROSIE*	Al Jolson	Dec
MACK THE KNIFE*	Bobby Darin	Atco
MACNAMARA'S BAND*	Bing Crosby	Dec
MAGIC MOMENTS*	Perry Como	RCA
MAKE LOVE TO ME*	Jo Stafford	Col
MAMA*	Connie Francis	MGM
MAMA (HE TREATS YOUR DAUGHTER MEAN)*	Ruth Brown	Atl
MAM'SELLE*	Art Lund	MGM
MANANA*	Peggy Lee	Cap
MARIA ELENA†	Jimmy Dorsey	Dec
MARIE*	Tommy Dorsey	Dec
MARIE*	Four Tunes	Jub
MAYBE YOU'LL BE THERE*	G. Jenkins/Weavers	Dec
MELODY OF LOVE†	Billy Vaughan	Dot
MELANCHOLY SERENADE*	Jackie Gleason	Cap
MEMORIES ARE MADE OF THIS†	Dean Martin	Cap
MICKEY*	Ted Weems	Dec
MOCKING BIRD HILL*	Patti Page	Merc
MOCKING BIRD HILL*	L. Paul/M. Ford	Cap
MONA LISA*	Nat King Cole	Cap
MOMENTS TO REMEMBER*	Four Lads	Col
MOODY RIVER†	Pat Boone	Dot
MOONGLOW*	Morris Stoloff	Dec
MOONLIGHT BECOMES YOU*	Harry James	Col
MOONLIGHT GAMBLER*	Frankie Laine	Col
MORITAT*	Dick Hyman	MGM
MR. BLUE†	Fleetwoods	Dolt
MR. SANDMAN*	Chordettes	Cad
MULE TRAIN*	Frankie Laine	Merc
MUSIC, MUSIC, MUSIC*	Teresa Brewer	Lon
MY FOOLISH HEART*	Billy Eckstine	MGM
MY HAPPINESS*	Connie Francis	MGM
MY HAPPINESS*	Jon & Sondra Steel	Coral
MY HEART HAS A MIND OF ITS OWN†	Connie Francis	Col
MY HEART CRIES FOR YOU*	Guy Mitchell	Col
MY MAMMY*	Al Jolson	Dec
MY PRAYER*	Platters	Merc
MY SPECIAL ANGEL†	Bobby Helms	Dec
MY TRUE LOVE†	Jack Scott	Carl
MY TRULY, TRULY FAIR*	Guy Mitchell	Col
NATURE BOY*	Nat King Cole	Cap
NAUGHTY LADY FROM SHADY LANE*	Ames Bros.	RCA
NEVER BE ANYONE ELSE BUT YOU†	Rick Nelson	Imp
NEW JOLE BLON†	Moon Mullican	King
NIGHT†	Jackie Wilson	Bruns
NIGHTMARE*	Artie Shaw	RCA
NO NOT MUCH*	Four Lads	Col
NUTTIN' FOR CHRISTMAS*	B. Gordon/A. Mooney	MGM
NOW IS THE HOUR*	Bing Crosby	Dec
OH*	Pee Wee Hunt	Cap
OH JOHNNY, OH JOHNNY*	Orrin Tucker	Col
OH JULIE†	Crescendos	Nasco
OH MEIN PAPA*	Eddie Fisher	RCA
OH-OH I'M FALLING IN LOVE AGAIN†	Jimmie Rodgers	Roul
ON A SLOW BOAT TO CHINA*	Kay Kyser	Col
ON THE STREET WHERE YOU LIVE*	Vic Damone	Col
ON TOP OF OLD SMOKY†	Weavers	Dec
ONE NIGHT†	Elvis Presley	RCA
ONE O'CLOCK JUMP*	Harry James	Col
ONLY THE LONELY†	Roy Orbison	Mon
ONLY YOU†	Platters	Merc
PAPER DOLL†	Mills Bros.	Dec
PAPA LOVES MAMBO*	Perry Como	RCA
PARTY DOLL†	Buddy Knox	Roul
PATRICIA†	Perez Prado	RCA
PEACE IN THE VALLEY†	Red Foley	Dec
PEGGY SUE†	Buddy Holly	Cor
PEG O' MY HEART*	Harmonicats	Merc
PEG O' MY HEART*	Peggy Lee	Cap
PENNSYLVANIA 6-5000*	Glenn Miller	RCA
PERSONALITY†	Lloyd Price	ABC
PETER COTTONTAIL†	Gene Autry	Col
PETITE FLEUR†	Chris Barber	Laurie
PIANO CONCERTO IN B FLAT*	Freddy Martin	RCA
PICNIC THEME*	Morris Stoloff	Dec
PINK CHAMPAGNE†	Joe Liggins	Spec
PINK SHOELACES†	Dodie Stevens	Crys
PISTOL PACKIN' MAMA†	B. Crosby/Andrews Sis.	Dec
PISTOL PACKIN' MAMA†	Al Dexter	Col
PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA*	Guy Mitchell	Col
PLAY A SIMPLE MELODY*	Bing & Gary Crosby	Dec
PLEASE DON'T LEAVE ME†	Fats Domino	Imp
PLEASE, PLEASE, PLEASE†	James Brown	Fed
POLONAISE (BY CHOPIN)*	Carmen Cavallaro	Dec
POLONAISE IN A FLAT*	Jose Iturbi	RCA
POISON IVY†	Coasters	Atco
POOR LITTLE FOOL†	Rick Nelson	Imp
POOR PEOPLE OF PARIS*	Les Baxter	Cap
PRAISE THE LORD & PASS THE AMMUNITION*	Kay Kyser	Col
PRETEND*	Ralph Marterie	Merc
PRIMROSE LANE†	Jerry Wallace	Chal
PRISONER OF LOVE*	Perry Como	RCA
PRISONER'S SONG*	Vernon Dahlhart	RCA
P.S. I LOVE YOU*	Hilltoppers	Dot
PUPPY LOVE†	Paul Anka	ABC
PURPLE PEOPLE EATER†	Sheb Wooley	MGM
QUEEN OF THE HOP*	Bobby Darin	Atco
QUIET VILLAGE†	Martin Denny	Lib
RACING WITH THE MOON*	Vaughn Monroe	RCA
RAG MOP†	Ames Bros.	Cor
RAGS TO RICHES*	Tony Bennett	Col
RAINBOW*	Russ Hamilton	Kapp
RAMONA*	Gene Austin	RCA
RAUNCHY†	Bill Justis	Phill
REBEL ROUSER†	Duane Eddy	Jamie
REMEMBER YOU'RE MINE*	Pat Boone	Dot
RETURN TO ME†	Dean Martin	Cap
RICOCHET†	Teresa Brewer	Cor
RIDERS IN THE SKY*	Vaughn Monroe	RCA
RIP IT UP†	Little Richard	Spec
R. M. BLUES†	Roy Milton	Spec
ROCK AND ROLL WALTZ†	Kay Starr	RCA
ROCK AROUND THE CLOCK*	Bill Haley	Dec
ROCKABYE YOUR BABY*	Al Jolson	Dec
ROCKABYE YOUR BABY*	Jerry Lewis	Dec
ROCKIN' ROBIN†	Bobby Day	Class
ROSE MARIE*	Slim Whitman	Imp
ROSE O'DAY*	Kate Smith	Col
ROSES ARE RED†	Bobby Vinton	Epic
'ROUND AND 'ROUND†	Perry Como	RCA
ROVING KIND†	Weavers	Dec
RUDOLPH, THE RED-NOSED REINDEER*	Gene Autry	Col
RUM AND COCA-COLA*	Andrews Sis.	Dec
RUNAWAY†	Del Shannon	BigT
RUNNING BEAR†	Johnny Preston	Merc
SAIL ALONG SILV'RY MOON*	Billy Vaughn	Dot
SAN ANTONIO ROSE*	Bing Crosby	Dec
SAVE THE LAST DANCE FOR ME†	Drifters	Atl
SEA OF LOVE†	Phil Phillips	Merc
SEARCHIN'†	Coasters	Atco
SECRET LOVE*	Doris Day	Col
SECRET LOVE*	Slim Whitman	Imp
SECRETLY†	Jimmie Rodgers	Roul
SEE YOU LATER, ALLIGATOR†	Bill Haley	Dec
SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY*	Les Brown	Col
SENTIMENTAL ME*	Ames Bros.	RCA
SEXY WAYS†	H. Ballard/Midnighters	King
SH-BOOM†	Crew Cuts	Merc
SHAKE, RATTLE & ROLL†	Bill Haley	Dec
SHINE*	Frankie Laine	Merc

(Continued on page 201)

COPYRIGHT & GENTEEL SHARP PRACTICE

During 1963 Extensive Hearings On Proposed New Copyright Legislation in 1964 Established Gaps In Viewpoint—Libraries' Use of Photocopying to Duck Copyright a Shocker—Professional Creative Talent Discovers 'New Enemy' In Academic & Scientific Vested Interests

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

During 1963 there was incessant skull practice in New York and Washington, the two most-concerned centres, regarding a new Federal copyright statute to be presented for Congressional enactment in 1964 in replacement of the creaky mechanism of the 1909 law. Acting for the congressional committee of jurisdiction was the Register of Copyrights, Abraham L. Kaminstein. He conducted hearings, organized consultant trade groups, and marshalled an enormous volume of testimony. Kaminstein is a functionary of the Library of Congress, the repository of copyrights.

The many persons involved in the discussions, and their widely divergent attitudes, were predictable evidence of enormous difficulties in finding compromise positions for an undated and reformed copyright law. Nor was there unanimity on the "show business" side of the issue since book publishers and music publishers have different problems and goals; broadcasters and film companies take dissimilar views of property rights; and, finally, creators are addicted to vexation in their business dealings with those who buy, hire, lease or covet fiction in any form or music likely to attain sales, and/or performance points.

Much of the 1963 discussion was lawyer talk. Some of it was technical and boresome, or downright abstruse. But always it was clear that money was at stake. Copyright revision made a jousting field for those who wished to sell as limited a right as possible for as much money as possible against those who wanted fullness of control and tenure for as near to pittance as they could manage.

The discussions were reported at considerable detail in VARIETY and yet only fragmentarily, so vast was the subject. It was a job to keep even the broad trends clear, and never mind much of the sub-clausing. There was not even agreement as to what the broad trends were, or their significance.

THE JUKEBOX LOOPHOLE

One clear-cut villainy of the existing 1909 law stood out, the curious loophole through which the operators of musical jukeboxes have for 30 years eluded all payment of performance fees to composers and publishers. One great anticipated reform, when new legislation comes into operation, will give copyright owners a legal position from which to negotiate for fees from the jukebox proprietors. Latter will have to yield, for the first time, a portion of their vast haul of coins. At a guess there are probably 500,000 jukeboxes in the United States carging nickels, dimes and quarters from a music-fancying public in eating, drinking, dancing spots.

CULTURE AS DEADHEAD

But another villainy, unique to our present scientific age, came under the spotlight, to wit, free-riders wearing the livery of learning. This threat was a by-product of the photo-duplicating process whereby it is possible for libraries, colleges and cultural institutions, among others, to reproduce, at cheap cost, printed materials covered by copyright but without request to, or permission of, the copyright owners.

It took some time for the enormity of this threat to sift down into the consciousness of mere commercial minds accustomed to think of the administrators of culture as above sharp practice. But once it was realized that the men who live by foundation subsidy and academic tenure, independent of ordinary business risks, were remarkably indifferent to the rights of creative talent, a roar went up.

Apparently it started innocently enough. Students, researchers and professors sought out-of-print works. Or the existing library copies were falling to pieces from too frequent use. Libraries and other institutions would then photo-duplicate the desired material. But it was an easy step from a few copies to a great many copies and —rather more serious—cases came to notice where very recent printings were so treated. The librarians in their zest to serve their peers in scholarship chose to ignore publisher or author on the grounds that having to write a letter first and obtain permission was intolerable.

'WE'RE DIFFERENT'

Two defenses have typically been offered by the administrators of culture for their piracy. (1) Photo-duplicating was preponderantly with magazines and (2) Photo-duplicating was of scientific and technical material which physicists needed in a hurry. Taken together this constituted the unique thesis that the national interest was at stake, that scientists were a privileged class not to be hampered by forced consideration of copyright. Never was the conceit of the new intellectual elite more evident. They were above the accepted morality of payment of royalty.

The implications brought shudders to those whose incomes and self-interest were so blithely undermined by scholarship wrapped in the cloak of patriotism. But the incongruity of the nothing-should-stop-science argument lay in the obvious truth that our cold war with Russia certainly was no excuse for obliterating copyright as to short stories, novels, plays and so on. Access to mathematical and scientific data was one thing. Uncompensated and uncleared exploitation of creative writing by academic interests was quite something else.

GRANTS-IN-AID

Authors by and large must maintain themselves at gainful employment, perform a full job of work in order to afford the luxury of writing on the side. Grants-in-aid to working authors are hard to come by, generally niggardly and tend to be reserved to authors with college status. Against this, as the authors view the matter, academicians travel the world, attend seminars ad infinitum and have nearly everything they undertake subsidized by foundations. That such freeloaders take a condescending attitude toward authors working for, and dependent upon, sales and popularity was deemed unbearable intellectual arrogance.

Not that this latent feud between professional writers and professors who write only for prestige reasons to further higher rank and more subsidies exactly burst out into a public clash. Still, the Authors League of America certainly made its resentment articulate.

A key to payoff through copyright lies in the phrase "use for profit." Right here every "philantrophy" is prone to raise a joyous shout. "Aha, we are clearly not for profit, just for careers and group advantage. We ride free of fees for performance."

It is true that various bodies with copyright control under their supervision have, through the years, made various gestures to schoolchildren and schoolteachers, educational radio stations and those who read poetry to groups. Perhaps indeed the time has now arrived for some foundation to finance a scholorly investigation of the friendly sons and daughters of culture who never pay for the creative material they exploit. Suffice that the discussions under maestro Kaminstein's direction exposed that where royalties are staked out, either for payment or exemption, questions of fairness and motivation come to notice.

Breadth of the copyright issue appears in the very roster of people in attendance at the Library of Congress. The list includes spokesmen for Music Publishers Protective Assn., Music Operators of America, American Council of Learned Societies, American Assn. of University Professors, various recording, publishing and filmmaking companies, American Bar Assn., Sidney Schreiber for Motion Picture Assn. of America and so on. The interest of a great number of Federal departments and agencies, including the Army and Navy, in copyright was evident.

IT'S PROPERTY

John Schulman, for The American Patent Law Assn., remarked that "Copyright essentially is not a privilege, it is property, a property right in something which a person creates." Paul Sherman of MCA, introduced a tangential point that "choreography and dances woven into present-day musicals are an integral part of a dramatic presentation," and hence entitled to protection.

As to the common practice of commercial rental libraries in the United States, Harry R. Olson Jr. of NBC observed: "Some remuneration should be paid to authors or copyright proprietors generally by people who lend books for profit."

The Washington discusions revealed the complexity of the performance market. Copyrighted writings are extensively used, for instance, in correspondence courses conducted by mail, and again for profit, or at least for not inconsiderable tuition fees. Irwin Karp for the Authors League hammered home anent the commercial lending libraries, "There is money to be made and the only person who isn't making money is the author." Edward A. Sargoy recalled the film industry problem: "Hundreds of feature films and shorts are in the hands of bootleggers and are being unauthorizedly rented all over the United States."

Here is a curious aspect. How did the bootleggers, or pirates, of copyright films get control of the prints? They have been stolen from the Army and Navy, the Veterans Administration, the Red Cross and other patriotic bodies" to which they were entrusted."

Philip Wattenberg remarked tartly "an educator makes a ditto copy or he makes a record without a license and he says, 'Well, this is not for profit, this is for education, it is fair use'." Attorney James A. McDonald remarked, "I think no one here would say that it was right to photocopy a whole work just because you do it quickly and economically." He added, "A company may subscribe to 10 copies of a scientific journal and yet have a hundred engineers working on the problem who on Monday morning must have on their desks the article which appears on page 36."

GENTEEL SHARP PRACTICE

The shoulder-shrugging of libraries about copyright came as close to scandalizing many of the lawyers as such sophisticated men would permit themselves to show. "The publishers 'reaction to this is violent.'" remarked Horace Manges of the American Book Publishers Council. "There is nothing we disagree with more completely." He went on to explain that many scientific volumes are retailed for $12, $15 and $20. Why would any corporation, labratory, engineering concern or university pay the market rate if some library stands ready to photocopy the work for half-price? Sharp practice indeed among the genteel!

There remained the recurring question of that booby-trap for all creators—"non-profit" organizations seeking exemption and special privilege, while itself living tax-free. Examples multiplied. Even the Federal government freeloads on the author and composer. All sorts of albums, books and other printed materials have been sent overseas. The manufacturer was paid his full price, the shippers theirs, the government employes full salary and so on. Only the creative talent was asked to waive payment.

Of course copyright is a relatively late concept of property. Intellectual property of any kind has been protected only in the present century although the theory of copyright dates back at least to Martin Luther's efforts to guard his hymnals against piracy.

Intellectual property protection has a great chance in the proposed new copyright law of 1964. But the hopefulness felt by such organizations as the Authors League of America has been considerably dampened by the probability of the vested interests of the scientific and academic lobbies driving a wedge for new, and worse-than-the-jukebox racket, loophole.

Tivoli Gardens, Copenhagen

[Everybody's Dream Amusement Park]

By J. R. KEITH KELLER

Copenhagen.

During the four summer months of its operation the Tivoli Gardens here sells over 4,000,000 admissions. The gate charge of one and a half kroner (seven kroner to dollar) is trifling, of course, but the very cheapness is part of the uniqueness of this amusement park located in the heart of Denmark's capital city. It is as if Palisades Park, say, was directly across the street from the Astor Hotel in Times Square.

Tivoli Gardens is constantly being "discovered" by tourists. It is the dream park for convenience, taste, variety and, curiously, unspoiled charm. Are there, many tourists ask, no beatniks, no spivs, no hoods in Copenhagen? How can it be that a park to which anybody with 11c may enter can maintain dignity so that respectable people flock there, too?

Since 1843

Tivoli is a real park, one of Copenhagen's biggest, with plenty of trees and lakes and elaborate flower lay-outs. It is a private company, founded in 1843. The ground landlord is the City of Copenhagen which last year was paid 1,862,962 kroner in straight rent by the operating company. Tivoli's lease expires in 1995.

Founder Georg Carstensen's dream in 1843 was to unite the charm of a park with public fun. Both factors are found to this day. Every season, the opening day guests find a rejuvenated Tivoli from which brashness and vulgarity are strictly banned.

In Tivoli, everybody is moderate. The rollercoaster is never too steep. The children's speedboats in one of the lakes are everything but speedy. Older people sit comfortably on the benches along the young lovers' pearl-peppled lanes among tiny trees and giant rose bushes.

80 Concessions

About 80 concessionaires make a very good living during the few months they occupy their restaurants, galleries or frame houses on the 20 acres they are allotted. Many of them simply pack up and spend the rest of the year in some tax-free Spanish haven. Nobody can rent any place of business for more than a year, but the concessionaire who sticks to the rules of the park, normally gets his concession renewed almost automatically. If nothing particular speaks against it, concessions are often passed down from parents to children.

Concessionaires pay between 10 and 40% of their gross to the Tivoli company, which has a share capital of 5,000,000 kroner in 10,000 shares of 500 kroner each. The dividend in 1963 was nine percent of the shares' face value. For concessionaires, the longest leases belong to the restaurateurs. Restaurants like the Chinese Tower or the fashionable Divans I and II have held their concessions for about 70 years.

A particular tradition is the midnight fireworks. Other illumination is supplied by upwards of 100,000 multi-colored electrical bulbs, places in trees and along the lakes and in oriental patterns on some of the larger buildings. During daytime, 45,000 tulips, 47,000 spring flowers and 45,000 summer flowers take care of the color scheme. Chief gardener Erik Olsson again takes care of the flowers, while Erik Hass has charge of all electrical illumination. The two men collaborate with architect Simon Henningsen and art director Erik Christensen in a never-ending work on "next year's Tivoli." Year-round employes of the park are a little over a hundred in number.

Birger Swan is leader of the Tivoli Variety and spends much time abroad looking for talent for his very tourist-oriented three summer shows that have presented such entertainers as Frankie Vaughn, Eartha Kitt, Josephine Baker and Sarah Vaughan within the last two seasons. On the bill are many standard vaudeville artists. Five new acts are required every month. A million and a half Danish kroner are paid out in artists' salaries during three months, but very possibly the prestige connected with having performed at Tivoli is more valuable in European theatrical trade circles.

"Plaenen," actually The Lawn although it is a huge wooden, outdoor stage, has a 500,000 kroner seasonal artists' budget. Clown acts and dumb acts dominate this stage, but jazz artists such as Duke Ellington, Count Basie and Louis Armstrong were used last year. Ellington and Basie also performed with their orchestras for the 2,000 dancers in the huge "Dansetten."

Boy Guards' Band

Tivoli Concert Hall was built in 1956 and has a fairly high rating as far as acoustics go among classical conductors on the international circuit. The notes painted on the balcony-rail of the hall are the introduction to the "Champagne Galop," Tivoli's signature tune. In 1963, 307 concerts were given here. Out of these, 269 were given admission free. Tivoli has 105 musicians on its payroll. The Concert Hall has its own, about 75 man strong symphony orchestra. Other, smaller orchestras with a conservative or a very carefully selected modern repertoire, play from small outdoor stages.

Managing director of Tivoli Ltd. is Henning Seager, an easy-going Copenhagener of romantic disposition but also with a very sure business hand. The man who runs Tivoli will always be watched very closely by the Danish press which considers the garden almost as a national shrine. Which it may well be—to a Scandinavian design for living that is not all teak wood furniture and streamlined silverware.

MILLION (and Over) RECORD SELLERS

Continued from page 199

SHOP AROUND†	Miracles	Tamla
SHORT, FAT, FANNY†	Larry Williams	Spec
SIGNED, SEALED & DELIVERED†	Cowboy Copas	King
SILENT NIGHT*	Bing Crosby	Dec
SILHOUETTES†	Rays	Cam
SILVER HAIRED DADDY†	Gene Autry	Col
SIN†	Eddy Howard	Merc
SINCE I MET YOU BABY†	Ivory Joe Hunter	Atl
SINCERELY†	McGuire Sis.	Cor
SINGING THE BLUES†	Guy Mitchell	Col
SIXTEEN CANDLES†	Crests	Coed
SIXTEEN REASONS†	Connie Stevens	WB
SIXTEEN TONS†	Tennessee Ernie Ford	Cap
SLEEPWALK†	Santo & Johnny	Can-Am
SLIPPING AROUND†	M. Whiting/J. Wakely	Cap
SMOKE GETS IN YOUR EYES*	Platters	Merc
SMOKE, SMOKE, SMOKE†	Tex Williams	Cap
SMOKIE†	Bill Black's Combo	Hi
SMOKIE (PART 2)†	Bill Black's Combo	Hi
SO MANY WAYS†	Brook Benton	Merc
SO RARE*	Jimmy Dorsey	Frat
SONG FROM MOULIN ROUGE†	Percy Faith	Col
SONNY BOY*	Al Jolson	Dec
SORRY, I RAN ALL THE WAY HOME†	Impalas	Cub
SOUTH AMERICA, TAKE IT AWAY*	B. Crosby/Andrews Sis.	Dec
SPLISH SPLASH†	Bobby Darin	Atco
STAGGER LEE†	Lloyd Price	ABC
STAR DUST†	Artie Shaw	RCA
STAR DUST†	Billy Ward	Lib
ST. GEORGE & DRAGONET*	Stan Freberg	Cap
STOOD UP'	Rick Nelson	Imp
STRANGER IN PARADISE*	Tony Bennett	Col
STRANGER IN PARADISE*	Four Aces	Dec
STRIP POLKA*	Kay Kyser	Col
STROLL†	Diamonds	Merc
STUCK ON YOU*	Elvis Presley	RCA
SUDDENLY THERE'S A VALLEY†	Gogi Grant	Era
SUGAR BLUES*	Clyde McCoy	Dec
SUGAR SHACK†	Jim Gilmer	Dot
SUGARTIME†	McGuire Sis.	Cor
SUMMIT RIDGE DRIVE*	Artie Shaw	RCA
SUNRISE SERENADE*	Glenn Miller	RCA
SURRENDER†	Elvis Presley	RCA
SUSIE DARLIN'†	Robin Luke	Dot
SWINGING ON A STAR*	Bing Crosby	Dec
SUNDAY, MONDAY OR ALWAYS*	Bing Crosby	Dec
SWANEE*	Al Jolson	Dec
SWEET LEILANI*	Bing Crosby	Dec
SWINGING SCHOOL†	Bobby Rydell	Cam
TALES FROM VIENNA WOODS*	Leopold Stokowski	RCA
TALK TO ME, TALK TO ME†	Little Willie John	King
TALLAHASSIE LASSIE*	Freddy Cannon	Swan
TAMMY*	Debbie Reynolds	MGM
TEA FOR TWO CHA CHA*	Warren Covington	Dec
TEARS ON MY PILLOW*	Little Anthony/Imperials	End
TEDDY†	Connie Francis	MGM
TEDDY BEAR*	Elvis Presley	RCA
TEEN ANGEL†	Mark Dinning	MGM
TEENAGE CRUSH†	Tommy Sands	Cap
TEENAGER IN LOVE†	Dion & Belmonts	Laur
TEENAGER'S ROMANCE†	Rick Nelson	Imp
TELL ME YOU'RE MINE†	Gaylords	Merc
TELL ME WHY†	Four Aces	Dec
TEMPTATION*	Perry Como	RCA
TEMPTATION*	Jo Stafford	Cap
TENNESSEE WALTZ†	Cowboy Copas	King
TENNESSEE WALTZ†	Patti Page	Merc
TEQUILA†	Champs	Chal
THAT LUCKY OL' SUN*	Frankie Laine	Merc
THAT'LL BE THE DAY†	Crickets	Brun
THAT'S ALL YOU GOTTA DO†	Brenda Lee	Dec
THAT'S AMORE*	Dean Martin	Cap
THAT'S MY DESIRE*	Frankie Laine	Merc
THE LION SLEEPERS†	Tokens	RCA
THE THING†	Phil Harris	RCA
THEME FROM SUMMER PLACE*	Percy Faith	Col
THERE ARE SUCH THINGS*	Tommy Dorsey	RCA
THERE GOES MY BABY†	Drifters	Atl
THERE I'VE SAID IT AGAIN*	Vaughn Monroe	RCA
THERE'S A STAR SPANGLED BANNER WAVING SOMEWHERE*	Elton Britt	RCA
THINKING OF YOU†	Fats Domino	Imp
THIRD MAN THEME*	Guy Lombardo	Dec
THREE COINS IN THE FOUNTAIN*	Four Aces	Dec
THREE LITTLE FISHES*	Kay Kyser	Col
THREE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING*	Paul Whiteman	RCA
'TIL*	Roger Williams	Kapp
TILL I WALTZ AGAIN WITH YOU†	Teresa Brewer	Cor
TILL THE END OF TIME*	Perry Como	RCA
TO EACH HIS OWN*	Eddy Howard	Merc
TO EACH HIS OWN*	Ink Spots	Dec
TO KNOW HIM IS TO LOVE HIM†	Teddy Bears	Dore
TOM DOOLEY†	Kingston Trio	Cap
TOMORROW NIGHT†	Lonnie Johnson	King
TONIGHT YOU BELONG TO ME*	Patience & Prudence	Lib
TOO-RA-LOO-RA-LOO-RAL*	Bing Crosby	Dec
TOO FAT POLKA*	Arthur Godfrey	Col
TOO MUCH†	Elvis Presley	RCA
TOO YOUNG*	Nat King Cole	Cap
TOPSY (PART 2)†	Cozy Cole	Love
TOSSIN' AND TURNIN'†	Bobby Lewis	Bel
TRAFFIC JAM*	Artie Shaw	RCA
TRAVELIN' MAN†	Rick Nelson	Imp
TREE IN THE MEADOW*	Margaret Whiting	Cap
TRUE LOVE*	B. Crosby/G. Kelly	Cap
TRUE LOVE, TRUE LOVE†	Drifters	Atl
TRY ME†	James Brown	Fed
TUTTI FRUTTI†	Little Richard	Spec
TUXEDO JUNCTION*	Glenn Miller	RCA
'TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE XMAS*	Fred Waring	Dec
TWEEDLE DEE†	LaVern Baker	Atl
TWEEDLE DEE†	Georgia Gibbs	Merc
TWENTY-SIX MILES†	Four Preps	Cap
TWILIGHT TIME†	Platters	Merc
TWIST†	Chubby Checker	Park
TZENA, TZENA, TZENA*	Weavers/G. Jenkins	Dec
TWELFTH STREET RAG*	Pee Wee Hunt	Cap
VAYA CON DIOS*	L. Paul/M. Ford	Cap
VENUS†	Frankie Avalon	Chan
VOLARE*	Dean Martin	Cap
VOLARE*	Domenico Modugno	Dec
VOLARE*	Bobby Rydell	Cam
WABASH CANNONBALL†	Roy Acuff	Col
WALKIN' TO NEW ORLEANS†	Fats Domino	Imp
WAKE UP LITTLE SUSIE†	Everly Bros.	Cad
WANTED*	Perry Como	RCA
WATERLOO†	Stonewall Jackson	Col
WAY DOWN YONDER IN NEW ORLEANS*	Freddy Cannon	Swan
WAYWARD WIND†	Gogi Grant	Era
WEAR MY RING AROUND YOUR NECK†	Elvis Presley	RCA
WHAT AM I LIVING FOR†	Chuck Wills	Atl
WHAT IN THE WORLD'S COME OVER YOU†	Jack Scott	TopR
WHAT'D I SAY†	Ray Charles	Atl
WHATEVER WILL BE, WILL BE*	Doris Day	Col
WHEEL OF FORTUNE*	Kay Starr	Cap
WHEN*	Kalin Twins	Dec
WHEN YOU WERE SWEET SIXTEEN*	Perry Como	RCA
WHIFFENPOOF SONG*	B. Crosby/F. Waring	Dec
WHISPERING*	Paul Whiteman	RCA
WHITE CHRISTMAS*	Bing Crosby	Dec
WHITE CHRISTMAS*	Freddy Martin	RCA
WHITE CHRISTMAS*	Frank Sinatra	Col
WHITE SILVER SANDS*	Bill Black's Combo	Hi
WHITE SPORT COAT & PINK CARNATION†	Marty Robbins	Col
WHO WOULDN'T LOVE YOU†	Kay Kyser	Col
WHO'S SORRY NOW*	Connie Francis	MGM
WHOLE LOTTA LOVIN'†	Fats Domino	Imp
WHOLE LOTTA SHAKIN' GOING ON†	Jerry Lee Lewis	Sun
WHY†	Frankie Avalon	Chanc
WHY, BABY, WHY†	Pat Boone	Dot
WHY DO FOOLS FALL IN LOVE†	Frankie Lymon	Roul
WHY DON'T YOU BELIEVE ME*	Joni James	MGM
WILD ONE*	Bobby Rydell	Cam
WILD SIDE OF LIFE†	Hank Thompson	Cap
WINTER WONDERLAND*	Andrews Sis.	Dec
WITCH DOCTOR*	David Seville	Lib
WONDERLAND BY NIGHT†	Bert Kaempfert	Dec
WOODCHOPPERS BALL†	Woody Herman	Dec
WOODY WOODPECKER*	Kay Kyser	Col
WORLD IS WAITING FOR THE SUNRISE†	L. Paul/M. Ford	Cap
WORK WITH ME ANNIE†	H. Ballard/Midnighters	King
YAKETY YAK†	Coasters	Atco
YELLOW ROSE OF TEXAS*	Mitch Miller	Col
YOU ALWAYS HURT THE ONE YOU LOVE*	Mills Bros.	Dec
YOU ARE MY DESTINY†	Paul Anka	ABC
YOU MADE ME LOVE YOU*	Harry James	Col
YOU MADE ME LOVE YOU*	Al Jolson	Dec
YOU SEND ME†	Sam Cooke	Keen
YOU'LL NEVER KNOW*	Dick Haymes	Dec
YOU YOU YOU†	Ames Bros.	RCA
YOUNG AT HEART†	Frank Sinatra	Cap
YOUNG LOVE†	Tab Hunter	Dot
YOUNG LOVE†	Sonny James	Cap
YOUR CHEATING HEART†	Joni James	MGM

Blues On the Danube

Continued from page 198

birthplace of a new kind of musical freedom for the young folks, it's often the showcase where new comedians and singers first offer their performances.

As the music grows mellow and the guests grow quieter, suddenly a young comic stands up—and tries his first repertoire of gags about Adenauer and deGaulle and city politics on the cruisers.

As the applause after his act disappears, two or three young students push forward one of their group—and a deep bass voice growls out some low-keyed Negro spirituals, sung in a heavy German accent.

After a couple hours of river travel, the boat pulls to a halt at another wharf long-distant from the hometown of the assembled students, factory workers, clerks and trainees who make up the cruise.

For an hour or so, the young people stroll through a popular village on the river, famed perhaps for its cathedral, for its Renaissance town square, for its fine old Baroque courthouse, and dotted throughout with the ever present German "water houses," tiny stands which sell a variety of magazines, pocketbooks, late papers, corny souvenirs, and snacks.

It's midnight when the ship pulls up at its home dock. And the tired young people, who have had a whole day of entertainment, music, sightseeing and thinking have wound up another day-long cruise with the "riverboat shuffle" . . . . a kind of stimulation that probably has a counterpart among the young people in every other country on the globe.

On The Upbeat

Toots Thielman's "Bluesette," etched on the ABC-Paramount label, copped second prize at the International Music Festival held in Warsaw, Poland. The song was written by Thielmans for a radio transcription in Belgium, and was selected as Belgium's entry in the Festival . . . The Five Keys have been signed to Wand Management . . . Coleman Hawkins and his jazz combo currently at the Gordian Knot, eastside nitery.

Hildegarde has recorded two songs for the indie Spiral label: One side is "Over 50—So What," written by Frank Hogan, and the other is "Leave It to the Girls," written by Gladys Shelley . . . Peter M. Detwiler has been elected to the board of Handleman Co., disk distributors based in Detroit . . . Paul Heinecke, president and founder of Sesac, has been named to the board of Music For the Blind.

Revise Disk Tradeways

Continued from page 198

the conferences in Washington sometime in February.

Heilicher stated that record manufacturers, who are associate members of ARMADA, assisted in drawing up the proposed trade rules and that the regulations, if approved by the FTC, would cover manufacturers and all sellers of records, magnetic tapes, etc.

Some Mfrs. Exempt

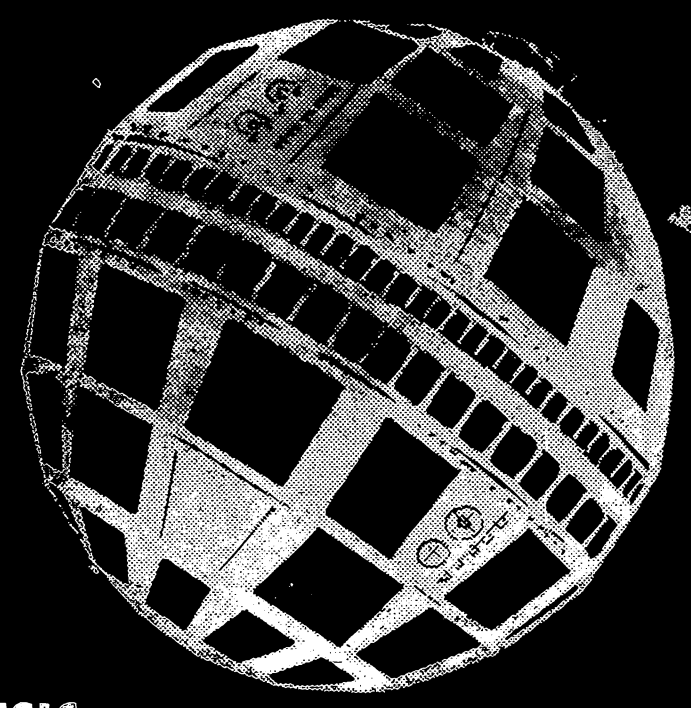
The manufacturers of playback devices, such as phonograph players, tape recorders and their accessories would not come under ARMADA's proposed rules, however, he explained. Neither would those operations in the record industry which are related solely to pressing or stamping out the actual disks because these generally are custom operations and do not enter the marketing or supply operations.

Other segments of the trade including organizations of retailers as well as individual manufacturing firms are preparing their own positions for discussion when the FTC holds its open conferences. Heilicher expressed willingness on the part of ARMADA to meet with any firm or any group in order to compose differences in views so as to hasten final approval by the government agency.

"We will have to alter the present collision course on which our industry is sailing or all of us will go down," he commented. During the last hearings of the House Small Business subcommittee on dual distribution, Heilicher was one of the principal spokesmen for the record industry. He is active as a manufacturer, a wholesale distributor and an operator of multi-unit retailing system for records in the mid-west.

A world of entertainment is revealed through our exciting wealth of records. It is populated by some of the top performing talent of our time, internationally renowned artists representing a cross-section of most of the world's nations. It takes in almost every form of musical expression, including popular, classical, jazz, country and western, religious, original Broadway cast and motion picture sound track recordings. It is a treasury we are continually attempting to enlarge with every passing year. Columbia Records

® "COLUMBIA" MARCAS REG. PRIMCO IN U.S.A.



MUSIC covering each and every field of musical achievement of all types and varieties

FROM the simplest children's songs the classical symphonies an incomparable collection of famous copyrights

THE great songs of the past the hits of the present the moods of the future a comprehensive compilation of GREAT songs written by the world's foremost authors composers all combined in an outstanding

CATALOG including production, standard popular vocal instrumental the most famous accomplishments

OF the most creative artists in musical history
all responsible for making

MILLS One of the Most Celebrated Names in MUSIC!

CIRCLING THE GLOBE WHEREVER MUSIC IS HEARD

MILLS MUSIC, Inc.

JACK MILLS, President IRVING MILLS, Vice-President

WORLD HEADQUARTERS: 1619 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y. 10019

RICHARD MILLS — Gen. Prof. Mgr. SIDNEY MILLS — Gen. Recording Mgr. BERNIE POLLACK — Prof. Mgr.

HOLLYWOOD: 6533 Hollywood Blvd. • PAUL MILLS, Gen. Mgr. • CHICAGO: 64 East Jackson Blvd.

and a Sincere Thanks to our Foreign Branches and Affiliates:

MILLS MUSIC, LTD.
20 Denmark Street
London, W.C.2., England
CYRIL GEE, Gen. Mgr.

MILLS FRANCE sarl
46, Rue Laffitte
Paris 9e, France
GERARD TOURNIER, Gen. Mgr.

MILLS MUSIC DE MEXICO
Av. Insurgentes 85
Mexico 6, D.F.
ALFREDO GIL and COSTAS OMERO, Mgrs.

EDITORIAL MILLS MUSIC ESPANOLA
Alcala, 70
Madrid, Spain
MANUEL LOPEZ-QUIROGA and CARLOS P. CANCIO, Mgrs.

EDITORA MUSICAL MILLS LTDA.
Avenida Ipiranga 1123
Sao Paulo, Brazil
ENRIQUE LEBENDIGER, Gen. Mgr.

MILLS HOLLAND
Leidsegracht 11
Amsterdam, Holland
HANS GOMPERTS, A. G. C. STRENGHOLD and G. BASART, Mgrs.

MILLS MUSIKVERLAG GMBH
Kurfurstendamm 103
Berlin-Halensee, Germany
ROLF BUDDE, Gen. Mgr.

The World is Listening to Mills Music

THE MAGIC OF
LEROY ANDERSON

BELLE OF THE BALL
BLUE TANGO
BUGLER'S HOLIDAY
FIDDLE-FADDLE
FORGOTTEN DREAMS
THE GIRL IN SATIN
HORSE AND BUGGY
JAZZ LEGATO
JAZZ PIZZICATO
PENNY WHISTLE SONG
THE PHANTOM REGIMENT
PLINK, PLANK, PLUNK!
SANDPAPER BALLET
SERENATA
SLEIGH RIDE
SONG OF THE BELLS
THE SYNCOPATED CLOCK
A TRUMPETER'S LULLABY
THE TYPEWRITER
THE WALTZING CAT

THE JAZZ OF
DUKE ELLINGTON

SOLITUDE
SOPHISTICATED LADY MOOD INDIGO
CARAVAN
AZURE
IN A SENTIMENTAL MOOD
PRELUDE TO A KISS
THE GAL FROM JOE'S BOY MEETS HORN
IT DON'T MEAN A THING
LOST IN MEDITATION
I LET A SONG GO OUT OF MY HEART
DROP ME OFF IN HARLEM LAMENT FOR A LOST LOVE
ROCKIN' IN RHYTHM
THE SKRONTCH
CREOLE LOVE CALL
BLACK AND TAN FANTASY

LEADER IN HIT INSTRUMENTALS

DIZZY FINGERS
KITTEN ON THE KEYS
DREAM OF OLWEN
THEME FROM "THE APARTMENT"
TAMBOO
FANDANGO
KENTUCKY TROTTER
BUGLE CALL RAG
FLAPPERETTE
EMALINE
ORGAN GRINDER'S SWING
BUBBLE BUBBLE BUBBLE
(Pink Champagne)
CUBAN HOLIDAY
DREAM OF A DOLL
SAMBARINA
FRUSTRATED FLOORWALKER

AUDIENCE DELIGHTING
COMEDY SONGS

WHEN BANANA SKINS ARE FALLING
(I'll Come Sliding Back To You)
DOES THE CHEWING GUM LOSE ITS FLAVOR
(On The Bedpost Overnight)
THERE'S A FLY ON AUNTIE'S NOSE
TWO-TON TESSIE
WHERE DID ROBINSON CRUSOE GO WITH FRIDAY ON SATURDAY NIGHT
MA (He's Making Eyes At Me)
I'M JUST WILD ABOUT ANIMAL CRACKERS
I'M AN INDIAN
I GOT STUCK ON THE PEPPERMINT STICK
(And The Stick Got Stuck On Me)
I'VE BEEN FLOATING DOWN THE OLD GREEN RIVER
O GEE O GOSH O GOLLY I'M IN LOVE
HOLD TIGHT-HOLD TIGHT
MINNIE THE MOOCHER
CEMENT MIXER (Put-ti Put-ti)
HOW YA GONNA KEEP 'EM DOWN ON THE FARM

from Mills comes these foremost WORLD-WIDE STANDARDS

STAR DUST • LITTLE DRUMMER BOY • THAT'S MY DESIRE • STARS FELL ON ALABAMA • I CAN'T GIVE YOU ANYTHING BUT LOVE • I CAN'T BELIEVE THAT YOU'RE IN LOVE WITH ME • WHEN YOU'RE SMILING • GIRL OF MY DREAMS • I'VE GOT THE WORLD ON A STRING • WHO'S SORRY NOW? • SWEET LORRAINE • BETWEEN THE DEVIL AND THE DEEP BLUE SEA • MOONGLOW • TAKE ME IN YOUR ARMS • ALL MY LOVE • FOR ME AND MY GAL • HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE • BLUE SKIRT WALTZ • (I Don't Stand A) GHOST OF A CHANCE (With You) • ROCKABYE YOUR BABY WITH A DIXIE MELODY • SCHOOL DAYS • LET A SMILE BE YOUR UMBRELLA • JEALOUS • AIN'T MISBEHAVIN' • MADEMOISELLE DE PAREE • WHEN MY SUGAR WALKS DOWN THE STREET • I'M GETTIN' SENTIMENTAL OVER YOU • I SURRENDER DEAR • DON'T WORRY 'BOUT ME • MARGIE • SERENADE IN THE NIGHT • I LOST MY SUGAR IN SALT LAKE CITY • THE SHEIK OF ARABY • BILLY • DINAH • HOME (When Shadows Fall) • WHEN YOUR OLD WEDDING RING WAS NEW • DOES YOUR HEART BEAT FOR ME? • IDAHO • A BLUES SERENADE • WHEN YOU AND I WERE YOUNG MAGGIE BLUES • LOVE'S THE THING • FAREWELL BLUES • YAAKA HULA, HICKEY DULA • HEY, MR. BANJO • SHOE SHINE BOY • ONE MORNING IN MAY • SMOKE RINGS • RIVERBOAT SHUFFLE • I MUST HAVE THAT MAN • MY HONEY'S LOVIN' ARMS • LONESOME AND SORRY • and many, many others.

write for catalog.

HOOTENANNY AND COUNTRY

SCARLET RIBBONS • TZENA TZENA TZENA TZENA • CORRINE CORRINA • ST. JAMES INFIRMARY • LOVESICK BLUES • THE LILLIES GROW HIGH • THE RIVER AND I • DODI LI • DONA DONA • BIM BAM • ARTSA ALINU.

CONCERT INSTRUMENTALS

Morton Gould
PAVANNE
TROPICAL GUARACHA
AMERICAN SALUTE

Paul Durand
ANDALUSIAN FRESCO
GREEK FRESCO
MEDITERRANEAN FRESCO
TANGO DE LA ROSA

Alfredo Antonini
ITALIAN FESTA

Richard Hayman
"POPS" HOEDOWN
(Her Name Was) SUZANNE

Abraham Ellstein
NEGEV CONCERTO

Leroy Anderson
CHICKEN REEL
PIRATE DANCE
PYRAMID DANCE

Don Gillis
PEACHTREE PROMENADE
TANGO LULLABY

Noel Gay
WINDSOR MELODY

Mantovani
GYPSY LEGEND
POEM TO THE MOON

Melachrino
WINTER SUNSHINE

Sholom Secunda
TANGO DE LA LUNA

Through the years - - - a Special Appreciation to LAWRENCE WRIGHT for a multitude of meritorious music including
THEME from THE APARTMENT
DREAM OF OLWEN
and the brilliant melodies of DONALD PHILLIPS
BROKEN DATE • CONCERTO IN JAZZ • MERMAID
ISRAELI CARNIVAL • STREET OF A THOUSAND MEMORIES and greetings to those publishers we proudly represent - - -

EXCLUSIVELY
JOSEPH WILLIAMS, LTD., London
ALFRED LENGNICK & CO., LTD., London
W. PAXTON & CO., LTD., London
PIGOTT & CO., LTD., Dublin
GOODWIN & TABB, LTD., London
EDICIONES QUIROGA, Spain
OTTO KUHL MUSIKVERLAG, Cologne
MOZART ALLAN, Scotland
ASSOCIATED BOARD OF THE ROYAL SCHOOLS OF MUSIC, London
CLIFFORD ESSEX MUSIC CO., LTD., London
E. H. FREEMAN, LTD., Brighton
I.C.L.P. — Tel Aviv (Israeli Composers League Of Publications)

SELECTED PUBLICATIONS
CARISCH, Milan
PATHE MARCONI, France
GEHRMANS, Sweden
LAWRENCE WRIGHT MUSIC CO., LTD., London
MUSIKVERLAG HANS GERIG, Cologne
EDITIONS PARIS ETOILE, Paris
EDITION SIDEM, Switzerland
EDITIONS CONTINENTAL, Paris
ENOCH CIE., Paris

Mills Proudly Welcomes
PAUL CRESTON

to its ever important list of renowned composers who have helped build this internationally famous catalog of contemporary music.
LEROY ANDERSON • JACK BEESON • MARIO CASTELNUOVO-TEDESCO • CARLOS CHAVEZ • PAUL DURAND • ABRAHAM ELLSTEIN • IRVING FINE • ROBERTO GERHARD • DON GILLIS • MORTON GOULD • ROY HARRIS • RICHARD HAYMAN • GORDON JACOB • MARTIN MAILMAN • DARIUS MILHAUD • ALEX NORTH • H. OWEN REED • SHOLOM SECUNDA • ERNST TOCH • RICHARD WERNICK • JOHN VINCENT • EUGENE ZADOR.

and announces five contemporary operas

LOVE PROPITIATED — music by Carlos Chavez
Premiere — Opera De Bellas Cortes — Mexico City — 1963

THE GOLEM — music by Abraham Ellstein
Premiere — New York City Center Opera Co. — 1962

THE LEDGE — music by Richard Rodney Bennett
Premiere — British Broadcasting Co. — 1962

THE LAST TALE — music by Ernst Toch
Western hemisphere premiere "CBC Wednesday Night" — Jan. 12, 1964

HELLO OUT THERE! — music by Jack Beeson
Premiere — 1964

from the Popular Catalog of B. F. WOOD
NEW '64 CHART OPENERS . . .

From EUROPE . . .
The Italian Novelty
GRAZIE, PREGO, SCUSI
Dean Martin
(Reprise)

#1 in France
SARA DARLING
(Elle Etat Si Jolie)
George Maharis
(Epic)

I WANT TO FIND OUT FOR MYSELF
Julie London
(Liberty)

WORRIED GUY
Johnny Tillotson
(M-G-M)

It Has To Be Great! 7 Important Records in 1963 . . .
SWEET SEPTEMBER
. . . and heading for the standard lists! Watch it in 1964!

B. F. WOOD MUSIC CO. INC. STANLEY MILLS 1619 Broadway New York N.Y.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

FROM ME TOO!

JOHNNY MERCER

"FOXY"

Opening on Broadway
Early in February

with

ROBERT EMMETT DOLAN

"CHARADE"

Now Playing at the

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL

with

HENRY MANCINI

Truly
the proudest
name UNITED ARTISTS in Entertainment
it's the biggest entertainment ever to hit the screen!
UNITED ARTISTS
STANLEY KRAMER
SPENCER TRACY
MILTON BERLE
SID CAESAR
BUDDY HACKETT
ETHEL MERMAN
MICKEY ROONEY
DICK SHAWN
PHIL SILVERS
TERRY-THOMAS
JONATHAN WINTERS
JIMMY DURANTE
"IT'S A MAD, MAD, MAD, MAD WORLD"
THE PATTY DUKE SHOW
UA/TV
UNITED ARTISTS
IN SUNDAY

Season's Greetings

HARMS, INC.

REMICK MUSIC CORP.

M. WITMARK & SONS

ADVANCED MUSIC CORP.

NEW WORLD MUSIC CORP.

PEPAMAR MUSIC CORP.

●

Music Publishers Holding Corp.

"FOXY"

(Ziegfeld Theatre — New York City)
February 1964

Lyrics by JOHNNY MERCER

Music by
ROBERT EMMETT DOLAN

COMMANDER PUBLICATIONS

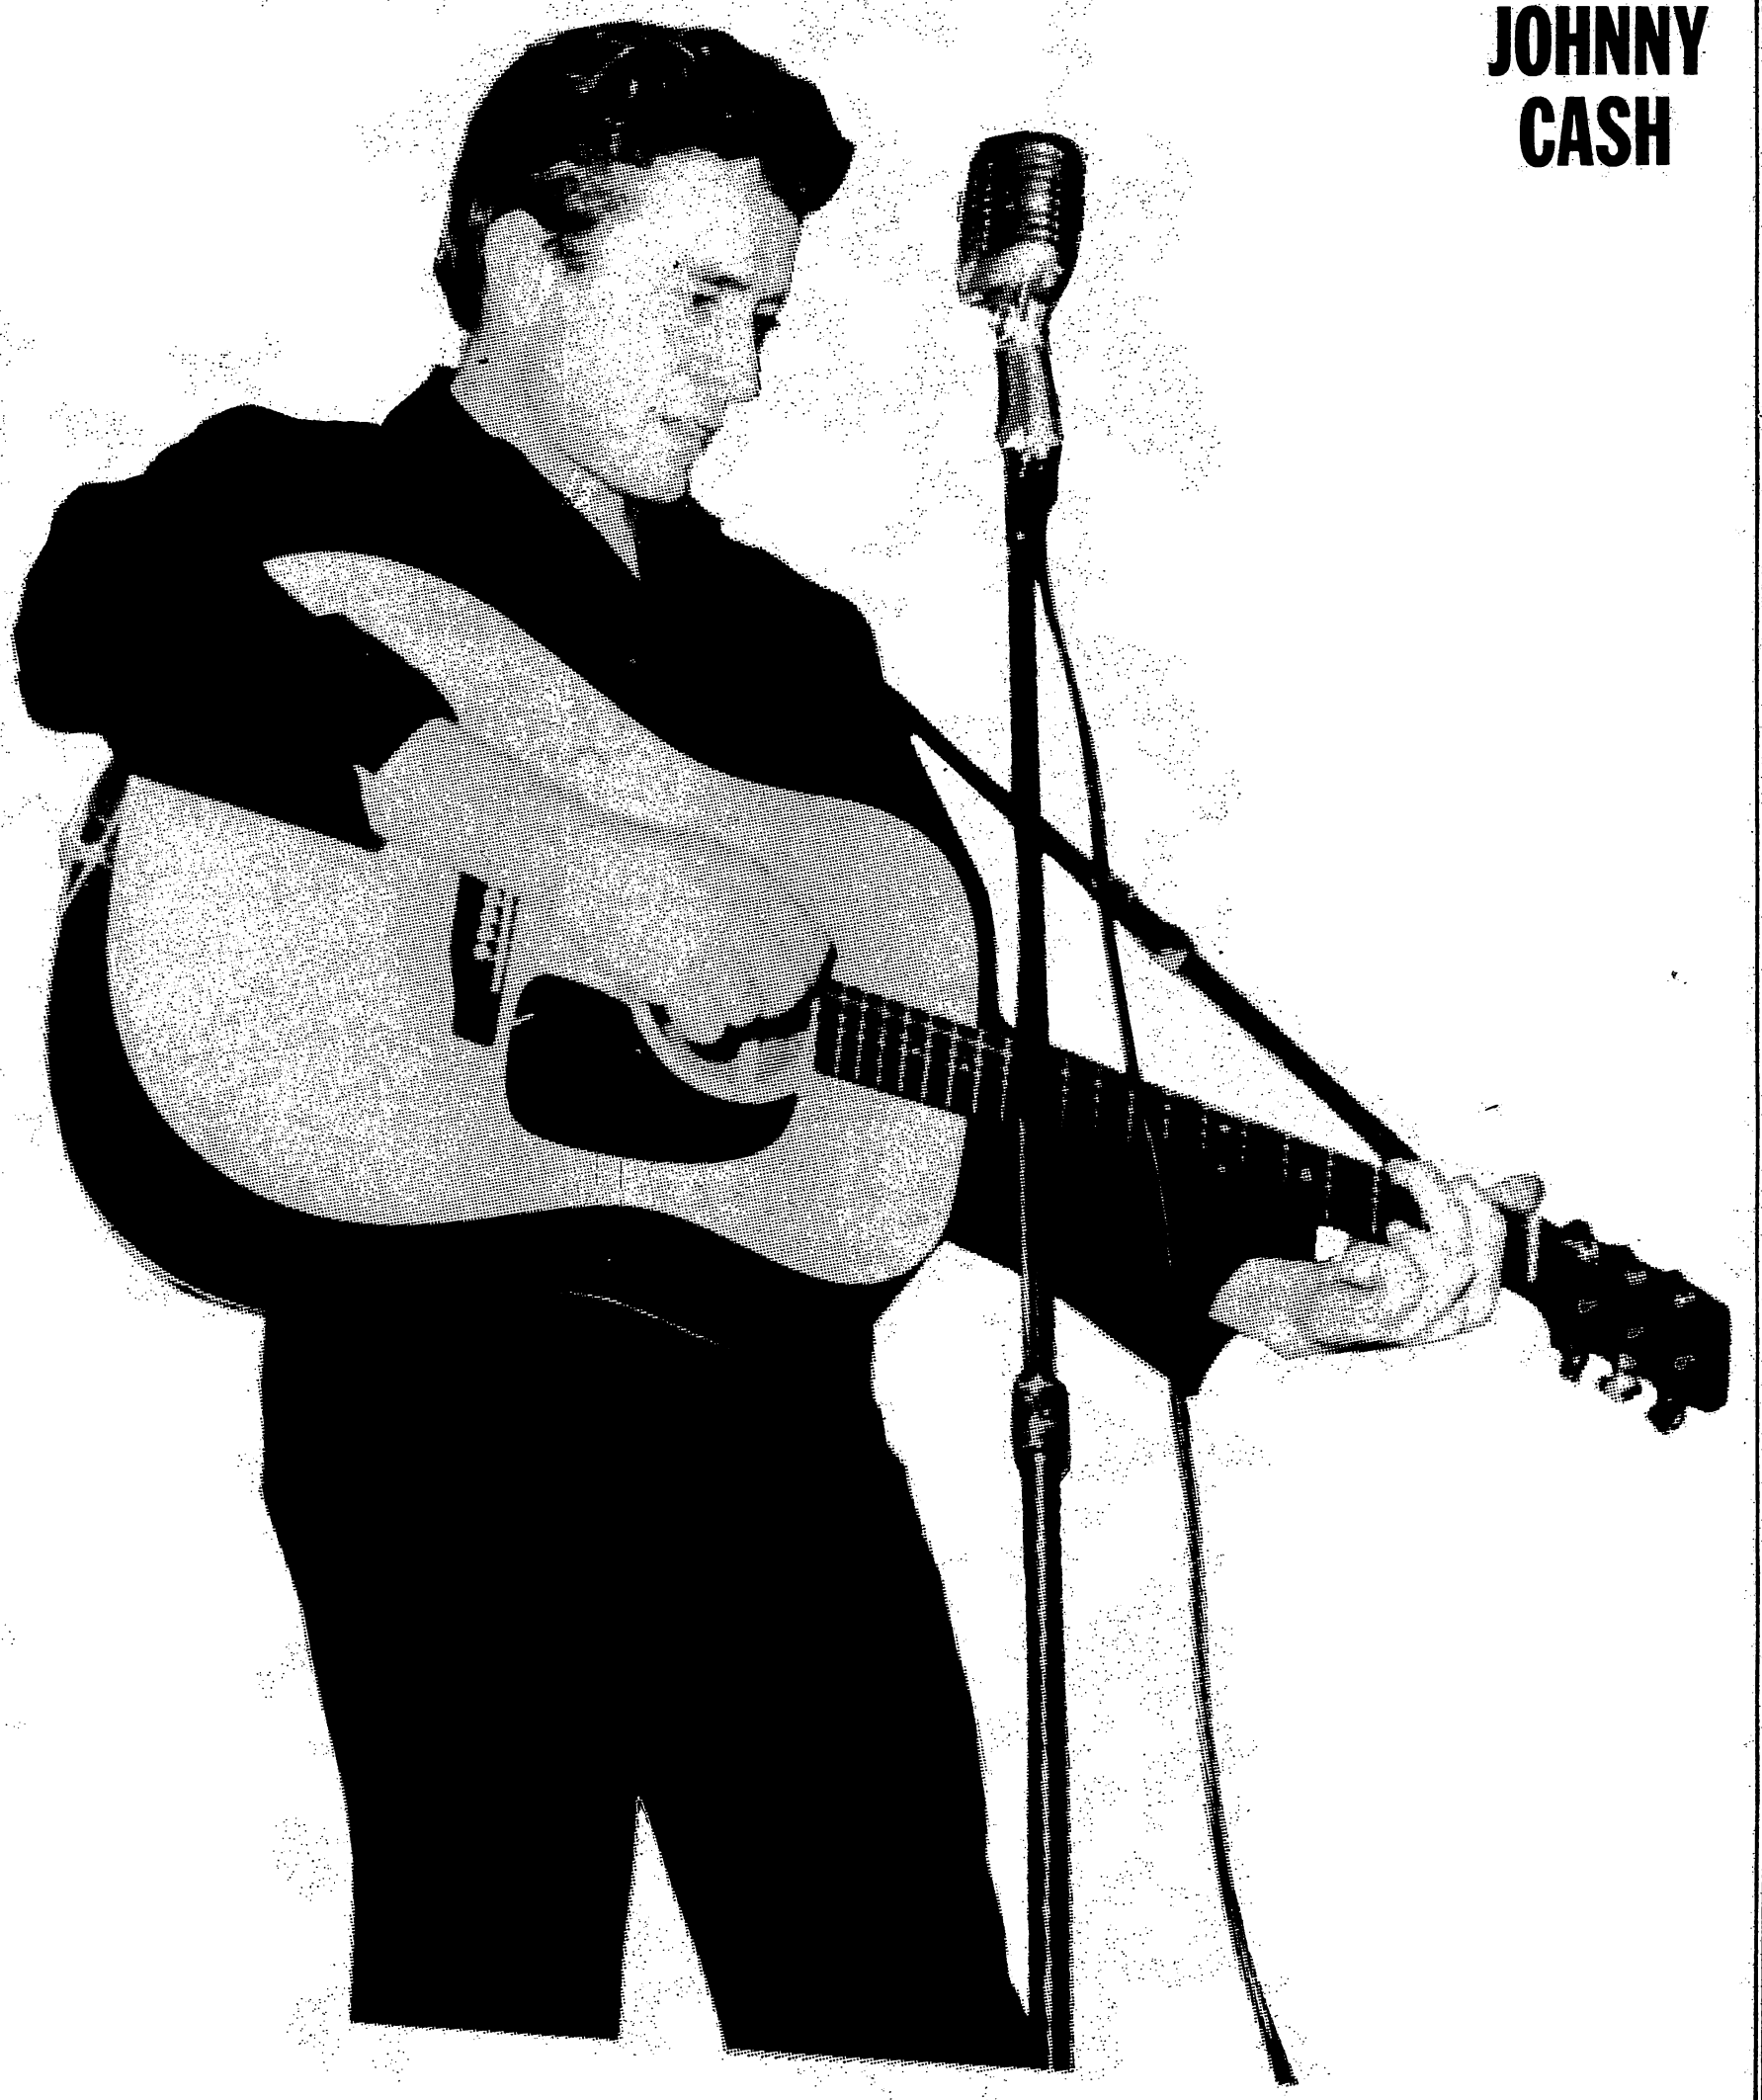
General Manager: MARSHALL ROBBINS

1610 N. Argyle Ave. Hollywood 28, Calif.

ROBERT ARMBRUSTER

MGM

JOHNNY CASH



NOBODY, BUT NOBODY
MORE ORIGINAL THAN

JOHNNY CASH

Season's Greetings
TO ALL MY FRIENDS

jack shaindlin

Best Wishes

ALFRED NEWMAN

Congratulations to

LEE HAYS*

FRED HELLERMAN*

RONNIE GILBERT*

BERNIE KRAUSE*

(and Bill Chadwick) on the occasion of their

15½ ANNIVERSARY

Best of luck to you all as you go your respective ways.

DAVID W. SERETTE
Production Mgr., WCSH-TV

 The Weavers

Congratulations from one great tradition to another

RCA VICTOR

The most trusted name in sound

Season's Greetings

BREGMAN, VOCCO and CONN, INC.
NEW YORK • HOLLYWOOD

BREGMAN, VOCCO and CONN LIMITED
LONDON • PARIS • AMSTERDAM • MUNICH • SYDNEY • WELLINGTON • TORONTO • MILANO

And affiliated companies:
Chatham Music Corporation
Lombardo Music, Inc.
Publishers Service Corp.
Rosemeadow Publishing Corp.
Supreme Music Corporation
Triangle Music Corporation
Vernon Music Corporation

1964

Thanks... it's been a Record-Smashing Year!

Samuel H. Clark
President

ABC-PARAMOUNT
Subsidiaries: COMMAND • IMPULSE • WESTMINSTER • GRAND AWARD • MUSIC GUILD • WHITEHALL

THE BIG 3

WORLD-WIDE MUSIC PUBLISHING ACTIVITY

•

With Branch Offices, Affiliates and Associates In Principal Cities

NEW YORK • CHICAGO • HOLLYWOOD • TORONTO • MEXICO CITY
BUENOS AIRES • RIO DE JANEIRO • LONDON • PARIS • VIENNA
AMSTERDAM • FRANKFURT • COLOGNE • BRUSSELS • MILAN
MADRID • GENEVA • STOCKHOLM • TOKYO • SYDNEY

We make good records.

KAPP

OUR THANKS TO THE ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY FOR HELPING MAKE US THE #1 SHOW BUSINESS CHOICE IN THE USA

Goya GUITARS

Choice of TV-Theatre-Movies

Goya instruments used in:
SOUND OF MUSIC
(Show & forthcoming movie)
TOVARICH
GIFT OF TIME
SPOON RIVER
THE GIRL WHO CAME TO SUPPER
MY MOTHER, MY FATHER AND I
THE CHAPMAN REPORT
TAKE HER, SHE'S MINE
THE GALLANT MEN
and a host of other productions

SPONSORS OF THE ANNUAL GOYA FOLK FESTIVAL
In 1964-June 8 to 11
Grossingers, New York

GOYA GUITARS, INC.
53 West 23d St., N.Y., N.Y. 10010

SEASON'S GREETINGS

MEYER DAVIS' MUSIC

Orchestras Extraordinary

Offices:
NEW YORK
119 West 57th Street
CI 7-6161

PHILADELPHIA
1411 Walnut St.
LOcust 3-7768

WASHINGTON
NEW ADDRESS
1414 17th Street, N.W.
Tel. 483-3354

season's GREETINGS

from CADENCE RECORDS
ARCHIE BLEYER president
PETER HESS sales & promotion manager
BOB MACK production manager
MAX FEIT controller

BART HOWARD

Music and Lyrics

MANUSCRIPT PAPER — SKETCHES — SCORES
VELLUMS in UNLIMITED QUANTITIES
Photocopy — Photo Vellums — Diazo Reproductions
Scores Designed for Your Personal Needs
NEW CATALOG NOW BEING COMPILED
Reserve Yours Now
PACIFIC MUSIC PAPERS
1305 N. Highland Ave., Hollywood 28, Calif.
462-7257
Servicing The Entire World

The Ultimate
In Entertainment

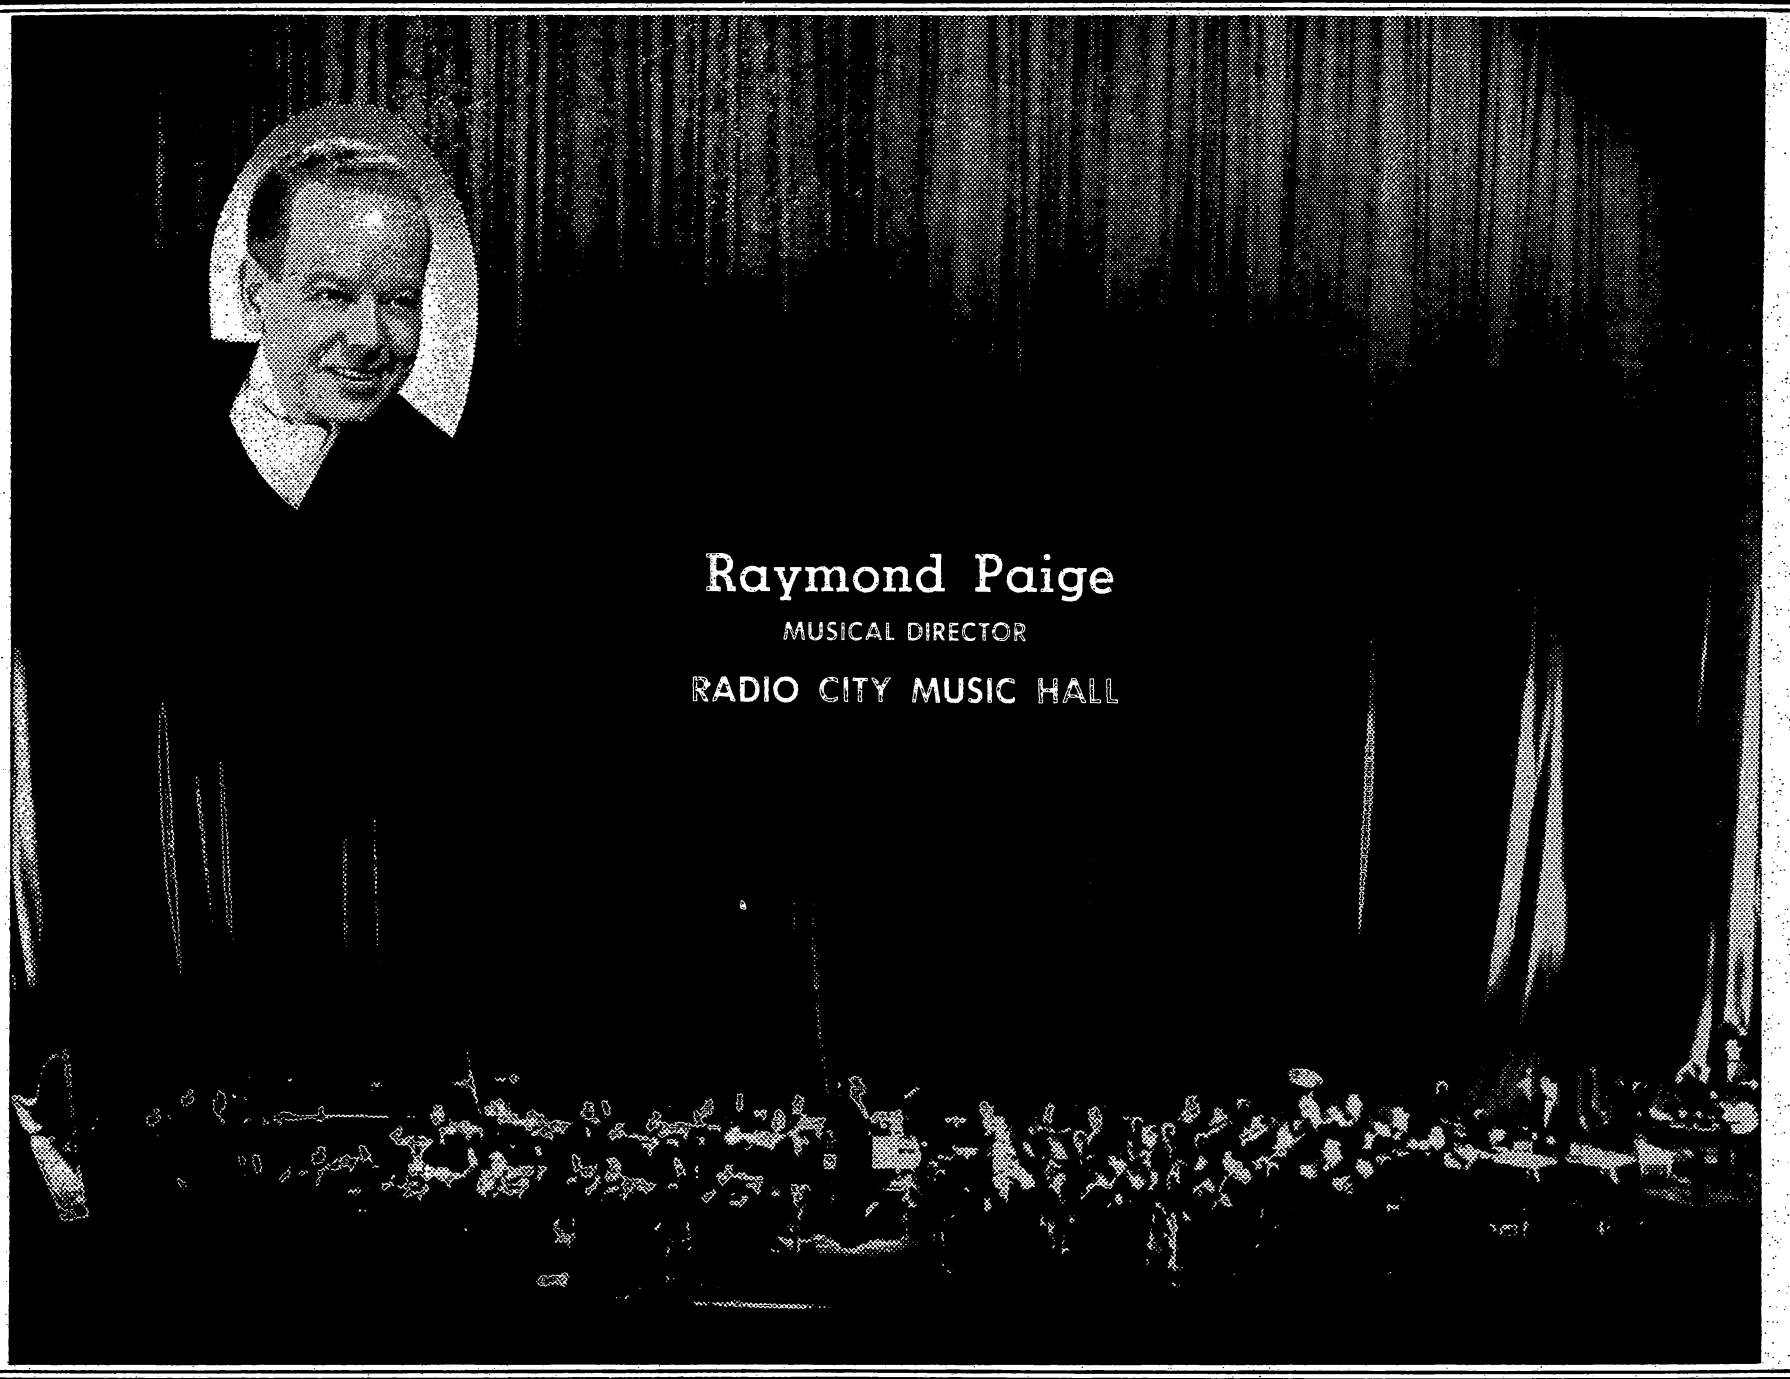
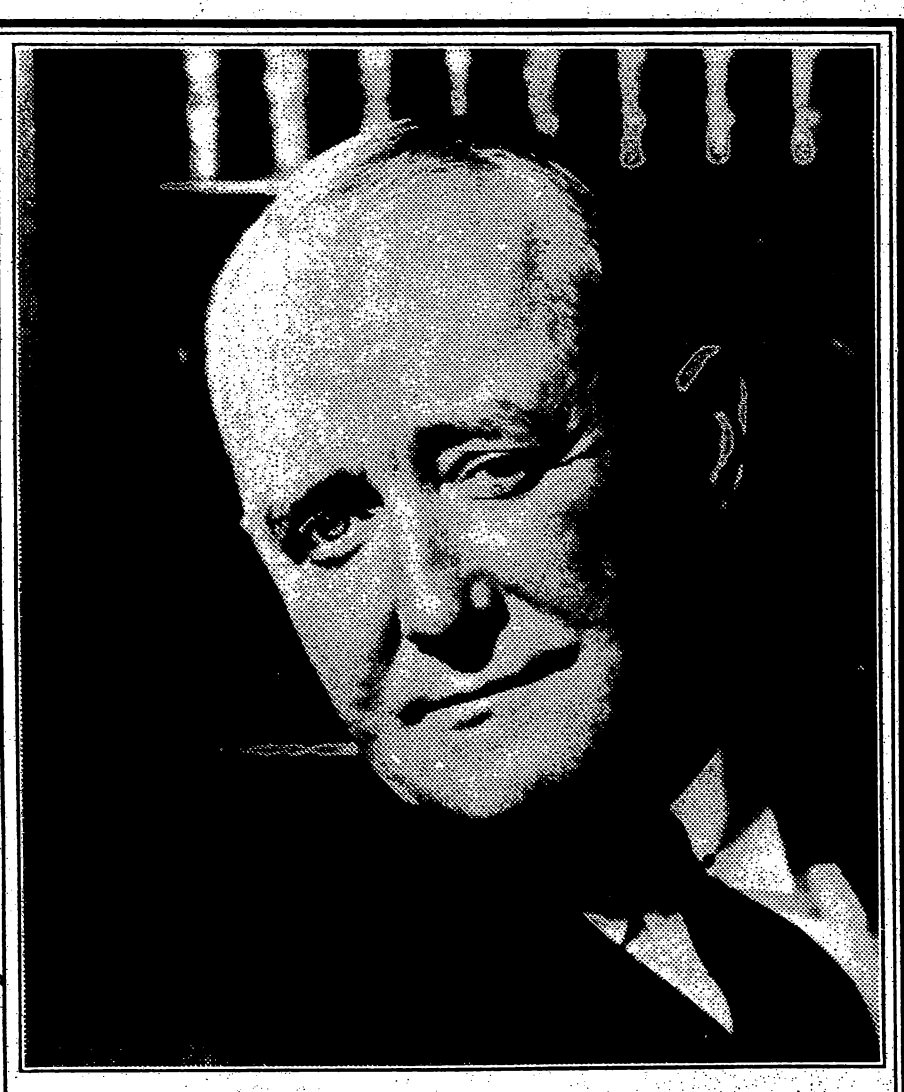
20th CENTURY-FOX RECORDS





MUSIC
GEORGE M. COHAN MUSIC PUB. CO.
1776 Broadway
New York 19

PLAYS
GEORGE M. COHAN CORPORATION
1776 Broadway
Representative:
WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY

MORT LINDSEY

Composer - Conductor

Current Television:

"THE JUDY GARLAND SHOW"
CBS-TV

Current Film Release:

"STOLEN HOURS"
Mirisch Co.-UA

In Preparation:

"THE BEST MAN"
Millar-Turman Prods.-UA

Representation: WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY

CHAPPELL
THE WORLD OVER

THE CHAPPELL GROUP

Chappell & Co., Inc.

Arlou Music, Inc.

Buxton Hill Music Corporation

Chappell-Styne, Inc.

DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc.

Dorella Music Inc.

Florence Music Company, Inc.

G & C Music Corporation

Gershwin Publishing Corporation

Ivy Music Corporation

Jubilee Music Inc.

Mara-Lane Music Corporation

Mutual Music Society, Inc.

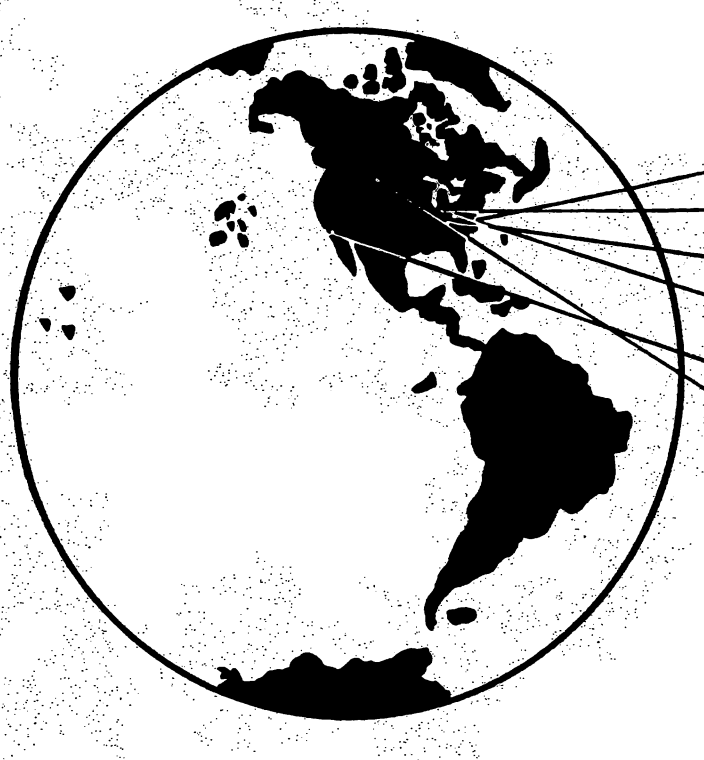
Sahara Music Inc.

Stratford Music Corporation

T. B. Harms Company

Victor Young Publications, Inc.

Williamson Music, Inc.



NEW YORK

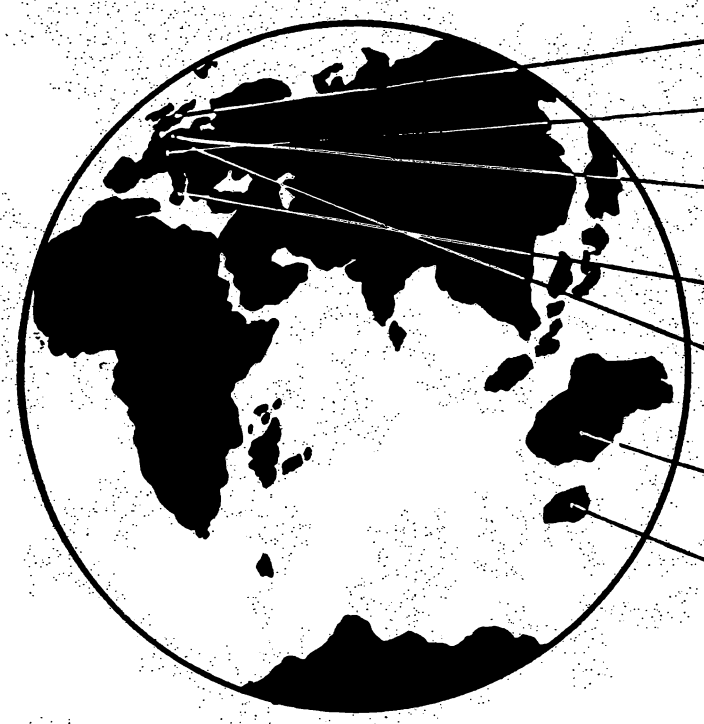
CHICAGO

DETROIT

CINCINNATI

LOS ANGELES

CANADA
Chappell & Co., Ltd.
14 Birch Avenue, Toronto, Ontario



ENGLAND
Chappell & Co., Ltd.
50 New Bond St., London, W.1

FRANCE
Chappell, S.A.
4 Rue D'Argenson, Paris

HOLLAND
Chappell & Co., Holland, N.V.
Weteringschans 35, Amsterdam

ITALY
Edizioni Chappell, S.p.A.
Galleria del Corso 4, Milan

GERMANY
Chappell & Co. G.m.b.H.
Schwanthalerstr 51, Munich

AUSTRALIA
Chappell & Co. Ltd.
68/70 Clarence St., Sydney

NEW ZEALAND
Chappel & Co. Ltd.
39 Lower Cuba St.,
Wellington

CHAPPELL & CO., INC.

609 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK 17, N.Y.

BEST WISHES

"The STARpower Label"

MGM RECORDS

"The JAZZ & WIT of America are on Verve"

Verve HIGH FIDELITY®

MGM & Verve Records are divisions of METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER, Inc.

Just a Few Suggestions From Our Complete Catalogs of FAMOUS—PARAMOUNT STANDARDS

BABY ELEPHANT WALK
BEYOND THE BLUE HORIZON
BIBLE TELLS ME SO
BLUE HAWAII
BLUE ORCHIDS
BUBBLES IN THE WINE
BUTTONS AND BOWS
CALL ME IRRESPONSIBLE
CHAMPAGNE WALTZ
COCKTAILS FOR TWO DOLORES FALLING IN LOVE AGAIN
GOLDEN EARRINGS
HEART AND SOUL
I DON'T CARE
IF THE SUN DON'T SHINE
I DON'T WANT TO WALK WITHOUT YOU BABY
I GET ALONG WITHOUT YOU VERY WELL
I'M POPEYE THE SAILOR MAN
I'M YOURS
IN THE COOL, COOL, COOL OF THE EVENING
I REMEMBER YOU
IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU
IT'S EASY TO REMEMBER
JINGLE JANGLE JINGLE
JUNE IN JANUARY
JUST ONE MORE CHANCE LONESOME ROAD
LOUISE
LOVE IN BLOOM
LOVE IS JUST AROUND THE CORNER
LOVE LETTERS LOVER
MIMI
MONA LISA
MOONLIGHT BECOMES YOU
MOON LOVE
MOON RIVER
MY IDEAL
MY OLD FLAME
MY SILENT LOVE
NEARNESS OF YOU
ONLY A ROSE OUT OF NOWHERE
PENTHOUSE SERENADE
PLEASE
SILVER BELLS
SING YOU SINNERS
SMALL FRY
SOME DAY
SONG of the VAGABONDS
STELLA BY STARLIGHT TANGERINE
THANKS for the MEMORY
THAT OLD BLACK MAGIC
THAT'S AMORE
TO EACH HIS OWN
TWILIGHT ON THE TRAIL
TWO SLEEPY PEOPLE
VAGABOND KING WALTZ
WHEN I TAKE MY SUGAR TO TEA WITH EVERY BREATH I TAKE WITH THE WIND AND THE RAIN IN HER HAIR
YOU BROUGHT A NEW KIND OF LOVE TO ME

FAMOUS MUSIC CORPORATION

1619 Broadway, New York 19, N. Y.

Current autobiography: "Without Rhyme or Reason," "Jeannine I Dream of Lilac Time," "By Heck," "My Mother's Eyes," "This Is Your Life," "Hitchy Koo," "Mama Don't Want No Peas and Rice," "Are You From Heaven?" "Shades of Night"

"Down Yonder," "I Miss My Swiss," "Green Eyes," "Dreamland Rendezvous," "If You Believe In Me," "Lucky Lindy," "Don't Wake Me Up, Let Me Dream."

"Hopalong Cassidy March," "Mario La-O," "My Little Dream Girl," "My Sweet Adair," "Lily of the Valley," "I Love You—That's One Thing I Know."

VARIETY

Started 58 Years Ago

I Started Writing Songs 58 Years Ago and We're Both Very Much Around

L. WOLFE GILBERT

ASCAP

"Wolfie, The Dean Of Tin Pan Alley"

ENJOYING HIS 77TH BIRTHDAY JUBILEE

THREE OTHER BIRTHDAYS

"WAITING FOR THE ROBERT E. LEE" (52)

"DOWN YONDER" (42)

"RAMONA" (36)

"Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," "Ramona," "Marta," "Oh Katharina," "Peanut Vendor," "Mama Inez," "Hello Aloha, How Are You?," "African Lament."

Dot RECORDS Proudly Presents

THE HOT DOTS

"The Greatest Talent on Record"

Lawrence Welk
Pat Boone • Billy Vaughn • Steve
Allen • • • Mills Brothers • • • Jimmie Rodgers
Lennon Sisters • • Liberace • • The Andrews Sisters
Louis Armstrong • • • • Walter Brennan • • • • Jerry Burke
Jo Ann Castle • • Jimmy Gilmer & The Fireballs • • Danny Kaye
Tony Martin • • Wink Martindale • • Don McNeill • • Vaughn Monroe
Eddie Peabody • • • Louis Prima • • • Keely Smith • • • Debbie Reynolds
Helen Traubel • Robin Ward • Maury Wills • Myron Floren • George Wright
The Fontane Sisters • • The Dartells • • Norma Zimmer • • Tommy Jackson
Jack Fina • Eddie Baxter • George Cates • Mike Minor • The Fairmount Singers
Lucky Starr • • Hal Aloma • • Bob Crosby • • Gene Austin • • Shep Fields • • Walter Winchell • • Lawrence Welk • • Pat Boone • • Billy Vaughn • • Steve Allen • • Mills
Brothers • • Jimmie Rodgers • • Lennon Sisters • • Liberace • • The Andrews Sisters
Louis Armstrong • Walter Brennan • Jerry Burke • Jo Ann Castle • Jimmy Gilmer &
The Fireballs • • Danny Kaye • • Tony Martin • • Wink Martindale • • Don McNeill Vaughn Monroe • Eddie Peabody • Louis Prima • Keely Smith • Debbie Reynolds
Helen Traubel • Robin Ward • Maury Wills • Myron Floren • George Wright • The Fontane Sisters • The Dartells • Norma Zimmer • Tommy Jackson • Jack Fina
Eddie Baxter • George Cates • Mike Minor • The Fairmount Singers • Lucky Starr
Hal Aloma • • Bob Crosby • • Gene Austin • • Shep Fields • • Walter Winchell
Lawrence Welk • Pat Boone • Billy Vaughn • Steve Allen • Mills Brothers
Jimmie Rodgers • • Lennon Sisters • • Liberace • • The Andrews Sisters
Louis Armstrong • Walter Brennan • Jerry Burke • Jo Ann Castle
Jimmy Gilmer & The Fireballs • Danny Kaye • Tony Martin • Wink
Martindale • Don McNeill • Vaughn Monroe • Eddie Peabody
Louis Prima • Keely Smith • Debbie Reynolds • Helen Traubel • Robin Ward • Maury Wills • Myron Floren • • • George Wright • • • The Fontane Sisters

"The Nation's Best-Selling Records" Dot RECORDS

MAX STEINER

Just Completed
"YOUNGBLOOD HAWKE"

Current Assignment
"A DISTANT TRUMPET"

Warner Bros.

Gladys Shelley

My Friend, The Son

Continued from page 195

"First, we will have the clams casino." He didn't even bother to ask any of us what we wanted. Ah, yes, it was a new Allan Sherman. "And with the clams casino should come a wonderful big piece garlic bread and then a shell steak which we'll cut up into pieces and with the shell steak a plate of spaghetti al dente with meat sauce." The ladies present groaned at the mention of spaghetti.

Sherman, obviously became a domineering male, waved aside their objections. "You should all eat the spaghetti. You won't regret it. And then a nice salad with roquefort cheese dressing." Then he sighed. He glanced about with a satisfied air. "And now the wine." Wine? That really shook me. Why, I could remember just a few years back when Sherman had bought his first mansion in Westchester and had decided it was necessary to know how to make a martini. Since I am considered something of an authority on wines and spirits in my social circle, Sherman asked me what went into a martini and exactly the proportions of the vermouth and the gin and what brand of gin to get and I remember once having entered the kitchen unexpectedly and seen him shaking —yes, shaking—the martini. He was surprised when I gently explained that you never shook martinis. You stirred them—ever so gently. Bacardis you shook. Sidecars you shook. Stingers you shook. But martinis — never, never were shaken.

Like Frankie & Rubirosa

And now here he was ordering wine. "I would like a Chateau Lafite 1947," he told the captain. And to us he stated: "That's a very good year for Chateau Lafite. All the odd number years in the 1940s are great for French wines, but you have to remember to drink them in the even numbered years. I have been learning about French wines from Frank Sinatra and Porfirio Rubirosa. Spent a weekend with them down in Palm Springs."

The captain returned to say that there was no Chateau Lafite of any year in the house—nor any Chateau Latour nor Chateau Margaux nor any other grand cru red Bordeaux. Terribly saddened, Sherman finally compromised on a 1955 St. Emilion — an amusing but honest Bordeaux of the second rank. The captain extracted the cork and was preparing to pour the usual soupcon of wine into the host's glass for his opinion—when Sherman restrained him.

"One moment, please," he said. "First—I must feel the cork." I was really impressed now. For only the true wine connoisseur knows the importance of touching a cork, for if the cork is dry, crumbly, it means the bottle hasn't been properly laid down and the wine will taste "corky." Sherman looked at the cork. He smelled the cork. He even squeezed the cork. Then, for several moments, he reflected seriously on the cork. We all held our breaths. The bottle, held by the captain, was suspended over Sherman's glass.

Finally, Sherman returned the cork to the captain and he nodded judiciously and said, "Not bad—for a cork!"

And he broke me up—as he's been breaking me up for 10 years. And I hadn't suspected he was putting me on until he gave his opinion of the cork. . .

Penalties of Success

Later I asked him if fame and wealth had drastically changed his life. "Definitely," he said. "From this, I got the first nervous breakdown of my life and also a heart condition. The success from the record came so fast and I was making all these personal appearances to plug the record on these deejay shows in Los Angeles and San Francisco and then they made me a commitment to go to Chicago. There was a nice deejay there, Dan Sorkin, that had been dedicated to putting over my record and they told me I have to go to Chicago and thank him and all the people who helped make the record big. You see, I wasn't prepared for this kind of a life, a celebrity, a big shot. I was debilitated from all the running around. In Chicago, they took me around from nine in the morning until late at night, talking with deejays and giving interviews to newspapers and I was sick and exhausted but I couldn't sleep or feel relaxed and I was belting double Scotches and it still didn't help me. I came back from Chicago in terrible shape. I was full of like a terrible nervous anxiety. So I went to see the doctor and he said if he hadn't treated combat fatigue during the war, he wouldn't know what was the matter with me. So he took a cardiagram and he said I had branch cable blockage of the heart. It's not a heart attack, it's not a coronary—but still and all, it's not good. He tells me it's caused by all this tension and pressure so he puts me under sedation for two weeks. I had to drink this red medicine, tincture of azurate, and just lie on the couch and be groggy and not answer the telephone and let my body recover strength. So I did it. I lay there for two weeks. And then, like a woman who buys a new hat, or like somebody who has to get in practise for getting rich, I said, I have to buy something to prove to myself I'm rich and successful. So I said what the hell I'll buy myself a Lincoln continental. I called up Beverly Hills Lincoln-Mercury and said, "You got there a Lincoln continental, a nice one?' And the salesman says, 'Yes, indeedy.' And I ask, 'Has it got airconditioning?' He says indeedy yes it has. I ask, 'Has it got Dual 90 tires?'. And he says, 'Naturally —you think we're running here a store with jaloppies?' So I ask him what color and he says Desert Gold and I ask him the price and he says the list is $7,500 but if I'm a fast worker he'll let me have it for $6,900—it's a steal at this price. 'Mister,' I says quickly before he could change his mind, 'you get you'self a deal. Drive it over right now.' He says, 'You don't want to come in the store? You don't want a demonstration?' I told him what did I have to go in the store. I know what a Lincoln continental looks like, don't I?"

HEAR IT WHEN IT HAPPENS
SUPPORT LIVE MUSIC

●

American Federation of Musicians

United States and Canada

AFL-CIO

HERMAN KENIN, President

SEASON'S GREETINGS

JULIAN T. ABELES

and

JOHN S. CLARK

ASCAP'S 50th Anniversary

The Music of America 1914-1964

1964 marks the 50th Anniversary of the founding of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Organized in 1914 by Victor Herbert and his colleagues, ASCAP has always been an unincorporated, non-profit, membership association which today numbers more than 9,000 outstanding men and women who write and publish our nation's musical works.

Members of ASCAP represent every phase of musical literature: the popular songs of today, the standards of yesterday, the Broadway and motion picture hits, the finest symphonic, concert and religious works, jazz, folk, country and band music.

The Society serves the American public by encouraging musically creative talent. It also serves the public by making it possible for every user of copyrighted music to obtain, quickly and reasonably, the right to perform that music publicly for profit through a single ASCAP license.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers
575 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10022

Best Wishes From

PALM SPRINGS MUSIC

JOHNNY MERCER MILTON RASKIN

1601 N. Gower Hollywood 28, Calif.

Gallic Teens Call Paris Tunes

Continued from page 195

justed" almost to extremes. And record sales skyrocketed. Early rock practitioners disappeared and new ones came up. But it has now settled down and a group of actual stars have appeared and made their names.

At first in-person dates were not too successful. But then these, too, began to draw youthful patrons. Olympia Music Hall was salvaged last year by several rock shows. If many did not have pro poise, projection and talent for personal appearance, they drew business.

Barstorming around the country led to both successes and failures. The overwhelming mechanical needs, mikes for small voices and the electric guitars, sometimes led to riots if current or mikes failed. Oldtimers could have held a crowd but not these still amateurish youngsters. But material was improved and, in the final count, they were in and many actual stars on both disk and stage. Films also called.

A definite star roster emerged. Hardly any ever played niteries. They bore such names as Johnny Hallyday, Richard Anthony, Francoise Hardy, Sylvie Vartan, Sheila, Claude Francois, Eddy Mitchell, Dick Rivers and one non-French personage, British performer Petula Clark. But she made it on disks and has not, as yet, showed the vaude stamina and draw of the others.

The above group among them accounted for over 5,000,000 records during a six month period in '63. Their names and songs are mainly American but locals are also writing these four beat ditties and sometimes resort to Yank sounding names on this score too. One local one even rebounded for a short but okay U.S. career in "Chariot."

French Accent

But now the French way is getting accepted. Record companies played it big and there were radio and tv pitches to play records and use singers. Sometimes important program heads ended up as A and R reps or as co-writers on songs. But SACEM put an end to latter practices by insisting that any songwriters credited pass the SACEM tests. All this was also in the early stages and is now petering out as these idols take their regular niches on the show scene.

Several cafes, and notably the Golf Drouot, became hangouts for proven, rising and would-be idols. Over 1,000,000 electric guitars were sold the last two years and there are countless amateur bands. But records remain the mainstay and the split has 12% for the performer, 25% in taxes, 10% for song authors, 26.9% for the music publisher and 26.1% for the record handlers and companies.

All this looks to last for some time yet and the important stars should easily be able to assimilate into other and newer offshoots of the pop music fads. Hallyday and Miss Vartan, engaged in real life, recently made a film together "Where Are You From Johnny?" It was not good and did not register with regular filmgoers but got youthful attendance.

The song refrains, in which most sing at vaude shows, are "Ye, Ye" cries after each chorus. It is pronounced "Yay, Yay" and is an adaptation of the Yank "Yes, Yes" intonations by such singers as Ray Charles. And in show biz importance and staying power of this new wrinkle the answer is definitely ye ye.

This does not mean that more personalized singers who purvey weightier lyrics and more stringent talents are on their way out. On the contrary. Youth finds a place for them too and they may be around long after the rock fad has passed.

Most pay homage to the ye ye crowds by adding twists to their reps or doing good natured takeoffs on them a la Maurice Chevalier. Elvis Presley did not unseat Frank Sinatra and there is room for the local Hallydays and such song stalwarts as Yves Montand, Georges Brassens, Gilbert Becaud, Charles Aznavour and others. The idols have fulfilled a need and been a successful addition to the show aspects here.

So far the new buying power of the French teenager, who calls himself a decegenaire, has not been too influential on legit if the penchant for Yank westerns actioners, comedies and specs has swelled their takes. But the effects of the idols on American style clothing has been big. The idols should be around for some time yet.

Coffin Nails In Song 'n' Lyric

Continued from page 196

Lionel Monckton's song, "The Sly Cigaret," from "The Country Girl."

The catastrophic decline of modern morality, brand of 1903, was lamented in a song written by Alfred G. Robyn and sung by Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Consul." It was called "In the Days of Old," and, as a shocking example of the way things had changed for the worst, mournfully remarked: "Today some real ladies drink and a few even smoke cigarets."

English music hall comedians of 50 to 60 years ago could always milk a few laughs by singing compositions that told of the agonies a beginning smoker endured. In this category were "Little Willie's Woodbines". ("Woodbines" seem to have been a cheap brand of "gaspers"), made popular by Billy Williams, from 1907 until his death in 1915 the most popular music hall performer and recording artist England ever had, and "My First Cigar," dolefully intoned by Louis Bradfield.

Women smokers received scant respect from songwriters for some years to come, although Sigmund Romberg's "Some Smoke" in 1913 had a scandalous cover showing a couple of wenches puffing away.

Thanks to smoking scenes in the movies and onstage, feminine smoking gained more social acceptance in the 1920s. As a corollary, songs in which women smokers were mentioned, with no indication of disapproval, grew in number. You can recall "Two Cigarets in the Dark," "My Lady of the Cigaret," "While a Cigaret Was Burning" and "A Cigaret and a Silhouette." "Two Sleepy People," made popular by Shirley Ross and Bob Hope, began, "Here we are, out of cigarets."

Other "cigaret songs include two called simply "Cigaret." There was one christened "Cigars, Cigarets" and another "Cigarets, Cigars." And Zeke Manners seems responsible for a hillbilly, "Cigars, Cigarets, Souvenirs."

A 1929 hillbilly tune was called "A Chaw of Tobacco and a Little Drink Won't Send Your Soul to Hell." Many years later the backwoods narrator of "Smoke, Smoke, Smoke That Cigaret" viewed with tolerant amusement his girl friend's nicotine slavery.

Songs praising the alleged solace of a "good pipe" have been many, among them "My Old Pipe," "Pipe Dreaming," by Cole Porter, "Pipe Dreams," by Thomas A. Reynolds, and "A Puff of Me Pipe and a Song," by Walter Scanlan. There have been at least three called "Smoke Rings" and one "Smoke Wreaths." Another cigaret opus is "A Cigaret, Sweet Music and You."

Somewhat less favorable in its comment on the weed was "Good Morning, Mr. Zip-Zip-Zip," part of whose chorus proclaimed: "Ashes to ashes and dust to dust, if the Camels don't get you the Fatimas must."

There was a "Smokes for Yanks" song in World War II.

No matter what the Surgeon' General's Committee reports, or has reported, it's obvious that "My ady Nicotine" has come in from a lot of attention from the cleffers and recordmakers.

Happy Anniversary

MANTOVANI
CATERINA VALENTE
FRANK CHACKSFIELD
EDMUNDO ROS
WERNER MUELLER
THE BACHELORS
STANLEY BLACK
GEORGIA BROWN
BILL BLACK
ACE CANNON
JOE TEX
JIMMY SOUL
MARCIE BLANE

LONDON RECORDS
and the
THE AMERICAN LONDON GROUP

FOLKSINGERS

FOR YOUR CONCERTS. Presenting ballads, blues, rags, reels, country, western, bluegrass, old-timey music, songs-of-all-nations . . . the variety uncovered by our modern folksong revival.

JOAN BAEZ
REV. GARY DAVIS
BONNIE DOBSON
BOB DYLAN
JACK ELLIOTT
JOHNNY HAMMOND
THE JUG BAND
THE NEW LOST CITY RAMBLERS
TONY SALETAN
PETE SEEGER
JACKIE WASHINGTON

CALL OR WRITE FOR BROCHURES AND AVAILABILITIES ABOUT THESE AND OTHER FOLKSINGERS folklore productions 176 Federal Street Boston 10, Mass. Tel.: HUbbard 2-1827

Manuel Greenhill, Mgr.
Arthur Gabel, Assoc.

The TOMMY DORSEY ORCHESTRA

Administrative offices
State Amusement Corporation
Jane New Dorsey, President
1005 Kane Concourse -
Miami Beach 54
Area Code 305 - UNion 4-2733

The Most Beautiful Hall in New York

CARNEGIE RECITAL HALL

298 LUXURIOUS SEATS — AIR-CONDITIONED

Available the Year Round

FOR DETAILS WRITE OR CALL: BOOKING MANAGER
CARNEGIE HALL, 154 W. 57th St., New York 10019
212-Circle 7-1350

LIFE & DEATH OF VAUDEVILLE

The Fabled 50-Year (1875-1925) Amusement Form and Profession As Captured by One of Its Illustrious Alumni Who Graduated to Revue, Radio, Television and Literary Eminence–The Flavor of the Smalltime Vaudeville Couples Who Raised Their Young In Trunks–Performers Knew Little Except Performing

By FRED ALLEN

(The late, great Fred Allen, born Sullivan, who wrote columns for this periodical over decades of a show business no longer extant, was one of the best of the historians of vaudeville. The humorous and wise text reprinted below first appeared as part of Allen's book, "Much Ado About Me," published by Atlantic-Little Brown & Co. This excerpt is by the kind permission of the copyright (1956) owner, Portland Hoffa Allen—pseudonum for Mary Portland Sullivan—herself a former vaudevillian. This will recall not only the wonders of vaudeville but the wonders of Allen's salty style.—Ed)

Vaudeville is dead. The acrobats, the animal acts, the dancers, the singers, and the old-time comedians have taken their final bows and disappeared into the wings of obscurity. For 50 years—from 1875 to 1925—vaudeville was the popular entertainment of the masses. Nomadic tribes of nondescript players roamed the land. The vaudeville actor was part gypsy and part suitcase. With his brash manner, flashy clothes, capes and cane, and accompanied by his gaudy womenfolk, the vaudevillian brought happiness and excitement to the communities he visited. He spent his money freely and made friends easily.

In the early days, the exact degree of prosperity the smalltimer was enjoying could be determined by taking inventory of the diamonds that adorned his person. If he was doing well, the smalltimer wore a large diamond horseshoe in his tie and two or three solitaires or clusters on his fingers; his wife, dripping with necklaces, rings, earrings, and bracelets, looked as though she had been pelted with ice cubes that had somehow stuck where they landed.

The smalltimer's diamonds didn't have to be good. They just had to be big. What difference if the eight-karat ring was the color of a menthol cough drop as long as the stone sparkled in the spotlight during the act? To the smalltimer, a diamond represented security. It impressed the booker, the manager, and the audience, but, more important, the diamond was collateral. Confronted with a financial crises in a strange community, the smalltimer didn't have to embarrass himself by attempting to convince a tradesman or a hotel manager that his credentials were valid. To obtain emergency funds, he merely stepped into the nearest pawnshop, slipped the ring from his finger, and consummated a legitimate routine business transaction.

When his diamonds were temporarily on location, the smalltimer avoided his friends and his usual haunts, knowing that the absence of his Kimberley gravel was an admission that the panic was on. The instant his luck changed, the diamonds were redeemed and returned to their customary places. Back in the spotlight, with the horseshoe pin and the rings sparkling, the smalltimer's necktie and his ring fingers resumed strutting their stuff.

Summer Habitats

The herd instinct was a dominant impulse in the vaudeville actor's behavior pattern. When the season closed, the smalltimers congregated at vacation resorts to revel in each other's company. The smalltimer lived in another world. He thought and talked only about his act and about show business. Nothing else interested him. If you said to him, "Do you remember the Johnstown flood?" he would probably reply, "Remember the Johnstown flood? Are you kidding? I and the wife were playing Pittsburgh that week. Eva Tanguay was the star. Walter Kelly was next to closing. After the first show the manager comes running back and say, 'You kids is the hit of the bill!' He moves us down to next to closing for the rest of the week. Kelly is blowing his top. All week long I and the wife murder them!" Everybody in Johnstown could have been swept out of town; the smalltimer wouldn't know or care. He had nothing in common with anybody who was not in his profession.

Vaudeville Generations

Vaudeville families endured for generations. The female of the species foaled on trains, in dressingrooms, in tanktowns, and in the big cities. The show must go on. At the theatre the baby slept in the top of the trunk in the dressingroom. At the hotel a crib was improvised by removing a large bureau drawer and placing it on the bed or between two chairs. A large blanket filled the drawer nicely; the baby, wrapped in its quilt, rested serene in his drawer bassinet.

The vaudeville baby carried its own baggage. A small valise contained milk bottles, nipples, safety pins, and emergency diapers.

On a sleeper jump, vaudeville couples with a baby always had the same routine: at 1 a.m., with the train thundering through the night, a tiny cry is heard. In two berths, an upper and a lower, lights snap on instantly. The husband jumps down from his upper berth into the aisle. The curtains of the lower berth part just a crack, muted voices are heard, the clasps on the miniature valise click open, and a nippled bottle, filled with milk, appears through the curtains. The husband steadies himself as he sways down the aisle on his way to arouse the porter to warm the precious quota of milk. In the lower berth, the sounds of the mother's soothing voice and the baby's cries persist until the husband returns. The warm milk bottle is passed in, the baby gurgles and stops crying, the curtains close, the husband crawls back up into his berth. The lights go off in both berths, and it is dark and silent once again; the train hurries ahead into the night.

Vaudeville families flourished. The babies teethed on greasepaint, and their sitters were other acts on the bill who watched the tots while the parents were onstage. When the babies were able to walk, they were led onstage to take their first bows. Later, they learned to imitate their parents and many other acts who played on the different bills. After completing their schooling, most of the children grew up and went into vaudeville, and had children who grew up and went into vaudeville.

Next to the audience, in its importance to the smalltimer, stood the theatre orchestra. If the orchestra could not play his wife's ballad properly, if the tempo of his dance music was too fast or too slow, if the drummer didn't catch his pratfalls with a well-timed roll and crash or tear the cloth on cue as he pretended to rip his trousers, the actor fought with his wife and sulked in his dressingroom until the next show.

Vaudeville orchestras varied from one piece—a piano—to seven or eight pieces. The usual smalltime theatre had piano, cornet, and drums. The drums were very important; they accentuated the falls and crashes of the comedians and played long rolls for the aerialists' sensational slides. For his music, the smalltimer carried eight or nine parts in cardboard or leather covers. Playing the cheaper theatres, which had only a piano and drum, only the piano and drum parts were used.

After the smalltimer had played several weeks in dumps, and was then booked into a big theatre, he would occasionally brag at rehearsal in order to leave the musicians with the impression that he was accustomed to playing good theatres. He couldn't fool the musicians, because the minute they saw the smalltimer's music they knew where the act had been playing. The violin, clarinet, cornet, and bass parts were brand-new; the piano and drum parts were filthy. At rehearsal in a new town, the smalltimer, sensing that the orchestra wasn't too friendly, examined the music. It explained everything. The drummer in the last town had written on the drum part, "This act is lousy." The clarinet player had written, "He died here." The cornet player had summed everything up by simply writing one word: "Stinks."

Cherished Billing

The smalltimer's billing was a matter of great concern. Before the opening show at each theatre he examined the front of the theatre to check on the size of his name and his position in the list of acts. The vaudeville headliner often had a clause in his contract assuring him of top billing. The smalltimer's billing depended on the whim of the local manager or the man who printed or painted the theatre signs. Seeing his name in runt letters could catapult the smalltimer into a three-day funk. His position on the bill was of major importance. If his act had been next to closing and he suddenly found himself second on the bill, wires were dispatched to the booking office and his agent, and the theatre manager was summoned to the dressingroom before the smalltimer deigned to do the first show.

Headliners had clauses in their contracts that entitled them to the best dressingrooms. The smalltimer dressed where he was told. If he used the same dressingroom as his wife, the smalltimer immediately examined all walls and connecting doors for holes. A few depraved actors carried gimlets and bits around with them, and drilled holes in the walls to watch the sister act or the single woman in the next room undress. If holes were discovered, the stage manager was notified and the apertures were filled with shoemaker's wax. One worry less for the smalltimer.

Respectability

The censoring of his act also upset the smalltimer. When B. F. Keith, after running a museum on Washington Street in Boston, opened his first theatre, the Bijou Dream, he insisted on clean entertainment. Mrs. Keith instigated the chaste policy, for she would tolerate no profanity, no suggestive allusions, double-entendres, or off-color monkey business. As the Keith circuit grew, every theatre carried a sign on the bulletin board:

NOTICE TO PERFORMERS

"Don't say 'slob' or 'son-of-a-gun' or 'hully gee' on this stage unless you want to be canceled peremptorily. Do not address anyone in the audience in any manner. If you have not the ability to entertain Mr. Keith's audiences without risk of offending them, do the best you can. Lack of talent will be less open to censure than would be an insult to a patron. If you are in doubt as to the character of your act, consult the local manager before you go on the stage, for if you are guilty of uttering anything sacrilegious or even suggestive, you will be immediately closed and will never again be allowed in a theatre where Mr. Keith is in authority."

Long after Mr. Keith's death the circuit was still waging its campaign against suggestive material. For many months VARIETY published a column called "You Mustn't Say That" which featured deletions in stage material ("Hell" or "Lord Epsom, Secretary of the Interior" or "An old maid taking a tramp through the woods," and so on) made by the Keith censorship bureau. As most of the gamy lines and jokes were his biggest laughs, the smalltimer would fight to the death to keep them in his act.

Many smaller acts who used one or two jokes, or a few comedy lines, and could not buy special material subscribed to "Madison's Budget." For 20 years—from 1898 to 1918—a man named James Madison published an annual collection of monologs, crossfire jokes, sketches, ministrelshow afterpieces, and parodies. This assortment of humorous matter sold for $1 and was known as "Madison's Budget." If a comedian found six or eight jokes in the Budget that he would adapt to his act, his dollar investment had returned a hearty dividend.

One blackface comedian on the big time stole so much material that he couldn't use it all in his act; he hired another blackface act and paid him a salary to play the smalltime using the stolen material he had left over.

There was a young comedian whose father regularly attended the opening show at the Palace. If any of the acts had news lines, jokes, or song titles, the father copied them down and wired them to his son. The act continued convulsing the Palace audience in New York, little dreaming that its best jokes were being told in Omaha, San Francisco, or wherever the son happened to be playing.

Original material was spread around in many ways. For instance, when blackface acts and other comedy teams split up, many times the men or women took new partners, and both new acts continued to do the same routines. After a series of splittings it was not unusual to find four or five teams all doing the same act.

Burlesque shows lifted scenes bodily from Broadway revues. Social directors at summer camps spent the winter copying down anything they found in the Broadway theatres which they thought they could use at the camps next summer. Johnny Neff, a monologist, used to explain to his audiences how crazy comedians were to buy jokes. Johnny would relate how Frank Tinney had paid $100 for a certain joke. Johnny would then tell the joke to prove that Tinney was insane. When Johnny had finished explaining how much money Raymond Hitchcock, Ed Wynn, Jack Donahue, Leon Errol, and Richard Carle had paid for their jokes, and after he had told all these jokes himself Johnny had a hilarious monolog that hadn't cost him a penny. And Milton Berle for years has been bragging to audiences that he has stolen jokes from other comedians. There has been no reason to doubt his word.

Their Oddball Names

Vaudeville acts often assume strange names to attract attention. An unusual name was easily remembered by bookers, managers, and audiences. A few uniquely named acts were: Fyne & Dandy (acrobats), Sharp & Flat (musicians), Willie Rolls (rollerskate), Amazon & Nile (contortionists), Nip & Tuck (acrobats), North & South (musical act) Worth & While (sister act), Possum Welch (dancer) and Darn, Good & Funny (comedy trio).

The early vaudeville performers were inventive; they had to create the unusual specialties they performed. Vaudeville grew, and new acts came along to help themselves to the ideas of the originators, and to elaborate on and embellish them. Many specialty artists, in constructing their acts, came up with some weird innovations. One of these was Orville Stamm. Not long ago I got a letter from Orville, asking if I remembered him. It was not easy to forget Orville. He billed himself as the "Strongest Boy in the World." To demonstrate his great strength, Orville played the violin; as he played, he had suspended from the crook of his bow arm an enormous English bulldog. The bulldog made graceful arcs in the air as Orville pizzicatoed and manipulated his bow. For the finish of his act, Orville lay flat on the stage and arched his back; in the better acrobat circles, this was known as "bending the crab." When Orville's chest and abdomen attained the correct altitude, a small upright piano was placed across his stomach. An assistant stood on Orville's thigh and played the piano accompaniment as Orville, in his "crab" position, sang "Ireland Must Be Heaven 'Cause My Mother Came From There." This finish was a sensation, and I'm sure it was Orville's own idea.

Raymonde, a female impersonator, also originated an unusual finish. After doing his entire act as a girl, Raymonde took a bow and removed his wig. The audience seeing man's hair, was amazed to find that the girl was a boy. As the applause continued, Raymonde removed the man's wig, and blond tresses tumbled down over his shoulders. The boy was now a girl again. The audience, again duped, was frantic. Raymonde took another bow or two to thunderous applause, then removed the girl's wig and was a boy again. Raymonde, emulating the manner of a female impersonator's conception of a truckdriver, swaggered off the stage to absolute bedlam.

A man named Willard was billed as "The Man Who Grows." As he talked, he stretched his arms out a foot or more beyond their normal length. For his finish Willard grew four or five inches in height. I watched Willard many times backstage without being able to discover his secret. He must have been able to telescope his skin.

Another great inventive act was that of Will Mahoney, who danced to his own melodies by attaching xylophone hammers to the toes of his shoes, and then danced atop the xylophone. If Will had spent the same amount of effort in thinking that he did on his xylophone, he might have discovered penicillin. I am sure that if all the hours vaudeville performers spent trying to improve their acts had been donated to science, automation would have been here 50 years sooner . . .

Cats And Rats

Nelson's Cats & Rats were a bigtime act. The cats and rats, traditional enemies, performed together to the astonishment of audiences. One time, on a bill in Chicago, Fanny Brice was the headliner. As she arrived at the theatre one evening and opening her dressingroom, she shrieked. The stage manager rushed over to her and said, "What's wrong, Miss Brice?" Fanny gasped, "A rat. There's a big rat in my dressingroom. The stage manager, no fool, caught him in a heavy towel and took the rat out of the dressingroom. A few weeks later, I was on the bill with Nelson's Cats & Rats. I asked Nelson what had happened to the rat he had caught in Fanny Brice's dressingroom. He said, "The next show, watch the finish of my act." I watched the finish, and saw a big black rat walk across the tiny platform carrying an American flag. "That," said Nelson, "is the rat."

The smalltimer, as he trudged through the seasons, always felt that he was getting closer to his goal. Every vaudeville actor dreamed of his personal Utopia.

Weekly sums were banked or mailed home against the day the smalltimer "quit the business." Then he would open his restaurant, filling station, realestate office, chicken farm, dancing school, or other project that he had envisioned supporting him through his remaining years.

Very few smalltimers saw their dreams take dimension. As the vaudeville monologist would explain it, "A funny thing happened to my savings on the way to my Utopia."

A few diehards who knew and enjoyed vaudeville hover over their television sets, hoping for a miracle. They believe that this electronic device is a modern oxygen tent that in some mysterious way can revive vaudeville and return its colorful performers of yesteryear to the current scene. The optimism of these day and night dreamers is wasted. Their vigils are futile. Vaudeville is dead. Period.

Borscht Circuit Goes South; Now It's Blinis & Caviar

By HENRY TOBIAS

It has been 10 years since I last wrote about the Borscht Belt entitled "Borscht Belt Boswell Recalls Era of Sharp Angles in Resort Shows." In that article I related the highlights of my 25 years in the resort business starting around 1927 at Totem Lodge, Averill Park, N.Y. This was about the same time when Moss Hart worked at Copake, Max Liebman at Tamiment, Ernie Glucksman at Green Mansions, Dave Schary at Grossingers, and Danny Kaye at White Roe Lake.

In those days there were no visiting stars or variety acts. We had to be producers, directors, writers, actors, song-and-dance men, emcees, comedians, scenic designers, electricians, stage managers and stagehands all in one. We had permanent social staffs (musical stock companies) who doubled in other jobs such as athletic directors, tennis pros, basketball players, lifeguards, waiters, bus boys, ballroom partners for lonely femme guests, etc.

Almost every big name in show business started in the Borscht Belt: Danny Kaye, Milton Berle, Jackie Gleason, Jerry Lewis, Red Buttons, Phil Silvers, Henny Youngman, Buddy Hackett, Jack E. Leonard, Myron Cohen, Sam Levinson, Joey Adams, Phil Foster, Robert Merrill, Jan Peerce and many others.

In 1927 when I secured my first "big time" Borscht Belt job at Totem Lodge, my boss, David N. Kotz, had to choose between Moss Hart, Max Liebman, and me as social director. His best line in later years was, "I wonder whatever happened to those two other fellows"?

My first permanent staff consisted of Mischa Auer and George Tobias (dramatics), Gertrude Niesen (singing ingenue), Harry Stockwell (juvenile), Benny Lessey and Julie Oshins (comedians) and a kid by the name of Gene Baylos as "tumbler."

Our weekly program varied. It included campfires, masquerades, concerts, amateur nights, game nights, basketball games, dramatic nights, vaudeville shows and every Saturday night another big original revue or Broadway production. In our constant search for something different we finally started using (without permission of the copyright owners) such Broadway shows as "Good News," "Connecticut Yankee," "Whoopee" "Ziegfeld Follies" and "George White Scandals." They were done with such success that White and Ziegfeld finally put a stop to the amateur plagiarism.

We produced only two musical comedies a summer season and alternated every Saturday with original revues which were easier to produce. Much of Max Liebman's tv "Show of Shows" material was born in this manner and kept in his trunk for that big day on Broadway.

Benefits With Fresh Air

As time went on the resort owners realized that the expense and upkeep of the big staff for 10 weeks was too prohibitive. So slowly but surely, my staff grew smaller and as replacements we brought in free outside talent for Saturday nights. These were usually show business friends we knew, or friends of the staff. For instance, Benny Lessey and Julie Oshins would invite their friends and former coworkers Phil Silvers, Rags Ragland and Joey Faye up for the weekend. They would put on their own burlesque bits. My brother Charlie would bring up other well known songwriters and present their "Songwriters on Parade."

The smaller hotels which could not afford a big staff and had no show biz friends had to pay for outside talent. This was the beginning of what now is one of the most important parts of the entertainment business. "The Big Time Borscht Belt."

Since the end of burlesque and vaudeville, the Borscht Circuit has been one of the few places where new talent can get an opportunity to learn their trade and to be shown to the public. At present the leading booker of talent for the "mountains," Charlie Rapp, represents almost 70 hotels and books several thousand acts during the summer season. To give an idea of how much the salaries have jumped this past summer, Sophie Tucker, Joe E. Lewis, and Harry Richman played a one-night engagement at the Concord Hotel for a fee said to be $15,000. Back in 1942 I booked both Sophie Tucker and Joe E. Lewis at Totem Lodge for $500 each for one-night's engagement. The highest salary for a one-nighter at a resort is said to be Judy Garland who played the Concord Hotel for a reported figure of $25,000.

Phil Rapp's Technique

The greatest demand is for comedians and so, to insure himself in that department for the summer, Rapp makes deals with the best around guaranteeing them flat salaries per week that, in many cases, far exceed their usual night-club salaries.

When the new names graduate to higher brackets and more lucrative fields, as result of tv, record or picture clicks, as such Red Buttons, Sid Caesar, Alan King, Buddy Hackett, Henny Youngman and others, they eliminate themselves from the Borscht Belt playing only an occasional date for sentimental reasons. Then the rest of the standard established comics are in greater demand and, as a result, raise their price. This forces Rapp and other bookers to look for new faces and introduce new comedians.

Latest in this field the last few years included Dick Shawn, Larry Storch, Phil Foster, Larry Best, Jackie Wakefield, Morty Gunty and others.

In Rapp's world the most valued entertainers are the comics—one comic is worth 500 baritones, as Rapp puts it. "One time I had this singer working for me. We had Lenny Kent signed up to do one show on a Saturday for $200. On Saturday Kent walks into the office and says he got an offer to do two shows for $200 each. Unless we get him another show to do, the deal's off. The baritone went crazy and grabbed the comic around the neck. I managed to pull him off and after it was over I told him, listen, if you want to hit a tenor or primadonna, go ahead. But as long as you work for me, never hit a comic, they're too hard to get."

End of an Era

The closing of Totem Lodge in 1958 marked the end of an era in the summer resort business. The competition created by Grossingers and the Concord and other hotels that followed was too much for the old adult camps. The guests got a taste of luxury, both in accomodations and bigtime entertainment, and would not settle for less.

When I learned that an old friend was building the most luxurious and newest hotel in Miami Beach, the Eden Roc, I contacted him and convinced him that Florida was ready to introduce a self-containing program of activities and entertainment, similar to the Concord and Grossingers. The competition in Florida was getting keener and tougher and I figured the first hotel that could offer this kind of a program would have a big advantage over his competitor and attract many of the summer resort customers down south.

I was a little ahead of the times for hotels like the Eden Roc, Fontainebleau and Americana were still operating successfully on the European Plan.

However a most enterprising hotel owner by the name of Morris Lansburgh finally brought the Borscht Belt to Miami Beach by introducing a full American Plan at his various hotels such as Deauville, Cassablanca, Sherry Frontenac, Versailles and Saxony. He inaugurated a "Cavalcade of Stars" which made it possible for all his guests to see big name shows free, also free golf, free trips, and everything, all for only the cost of room and board. He was the first hotel owner who adopted a complete self-containing program in Miami Beach and has been a most successful operator. Thus, as I predicted, the Borscht Belt has gone South.

JACKIE MASON

"I want to wish me the best of luck on VARIETY's 58th ANNIVERSARY. ...I hope this year will be the kind of year I should have had last year."

When 'Lifted' Gags Riled Troupers

Museum-Piece Letter from Archives of 'Variety' Typical Vaude Squawk—Written By Steve Allen's Mom

(From VARIETY—May 9, 1919)

New York, May 3, 1919.

Editor, VARIETY:

In a recent issue of VARIETY, your reviewer referred to our act in a somewhat flippant, yet misleading manner, concluding with the sentence that Stan Stanley would shortly open at the Loew's Time. Just why that was added is problematical, but it apparently had the desired effect, since Mr. Stanley and Mr. Allen discussed the matter personally, and the former accused us of lifting his material, claiming priority for all audience acts in a general way.

In the same issue of VARIETY, we published a page advertisement carrying press opinions of our act and in none of those press opinions was Mr. Stanley referred to. However, we are not objecting to your reviewer's opinion, but more so to Mr. Stanley's claims. Why does Mr. Stanley place himself on the altar of originality? Who heard of him prior to the time he began advertising in VARIETY? Does he hold a mortgage on all audience acts, or is vaudeville an open market? I should imagine Mr. Stanley would be content, knowing that his own material was not being "lifted," but when he assumes the position of sole claimant to the idea of an audience act—he makes himself appear ridiculous.

I believe the audience style of working was done in a show called "1492" in which Harry Weber was connected. He may verify this. Numerous other audience acts have come and gone, long before Stan Stanley was known to vaudeville even as an acrobat or trampoline performer.

My partner, Mr. Allen, has been doing an audience act for the past 16 years, formerly working with a trio, Allen, Maher & Barton. In this act was a money "bit," but nothing like the money "bit" done by Mr. Stanley. We are not including this bit in our routine, but should we decide to (and we have a perfect right to do so), Mr. Stanley would probably rise up and shout, "Stop, thief." But we are not accusing Mr. Stanley of lifting our "car gag" copyright over five years ago. This line has been practically released and we merely keep it in because it's a big laugh. Yet, it belong solely to us for we originated it. And we are the originators of every other line in our present vehicle, because ours is an act that goes naturally for such dialog and we do not have to resort to burlesque bits and aged gags.

We are not taking Stanley seriously. Nor do we care to advertise him at length, but his position is unique since he foolishly is pointing the finger of accusation to everyone who is doing an audience act, something probably done before he left school. Our act is copyrighted and we stand prepared to prove our right to all our material. Mr. Stanley may probably answer with the usual wail that he has never heard of me. To offset that in advance, I'll refer him to Harvey Watkins, of the Keith Agency, and suggest he ask Mr. Watkins how long he knows Belle Watson, of the original Watson Sisters.

But, Mr. Stanley don't tip my age off, and meanwhile roll your little hoop along, for you are doing nicely having graduated from the acrobatic class. Don't spoil it by trying to convince intelligent people that you are the author of vaudeville.

Belle Montrose
(Montrose & Allen)

Gamblers Canvas Hawaii; Asians Love the Play

By JACK HELLMAN

Honolulu.

This is to report a groundswell of dialog among the knowing on the small island of Maui. A word ugly in the lexicon of the founding Christian missionaries—gambling—is being sounded. Vegas barons have sent emissaries to survey the scene.

Already Maui is a booming island, a half hour's flight from Honolulu. Its catalyst is the Sheraton Maui hotel and the adjoining Royal Lahaina Beach hotel. A prospectus shows three more hotels in blue print and two more golf courses to complement the professional links laid out by Robert Tyre Jones and to be the scene of the upcoming international matches to be televised with Carling (ale) underwriting.

A statistic which may have tempted the casinos bosses of Vegas is that, on the breakdown of states, Hawaii ranks fifth in gambling money left behind. No one needs to be told obout the oriental penchant for rolling the cubes and playing the wheel. In Honolulu the oriental population runs to better than 26%.

Another ideal spot for open gambling would be on the big island of Hawaii where, 40 miles from Kona on a strip of the Parker ranch (world's largest single-owned), Laurence Rockefeller is building a $15,000,000 resort. Its big advantage over the other islands is the climate—light rains and warm trade winds. The Rockefeller resort is not yet far enough along to attract the inspectors from Vegas other than cursory.

Johnny Green, Miss Nixon To Bow Dallas $ Concerts

Dallas.

Johnny Green will be guest conductor and soprano Marni Nixon guest soloist with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra in a Jan. 12 matinee of Viennese music, opening the Dollar Concert Series at Dallas Memorial Auditorium. Programs are underwritten by the Dallas Morning News as a Dallas Symphony benefit.

Andre Previn will return as guest conductor and soloist at a Feb. 11 matinee. He was set to open the new series on Dec. 5, but had to postpone due to his illnes. In his first Dollar Concert here as conductor-soloist last Feb. 14, Previn drew a record $10,250

KIM SISTERS

(Just Completed 7 Weeks at Latin Quarter, New York. Booked solid for the year 1964)
Exclusive with the Ed Sullivan Show for television. Playing Desert Inn & Stardust, Las Vegas — Palmer House, Chicago — Harrah's Lake Tahoe — Vapors, Hot Springs — Shamrock, Houston — Dallas, Hilton — Roosevelt, New Orleans — Sheraton, Puerto Rico — Cave, Vancouver — Chi Chi, Palm Springs.
Booking now for 1965. Thomas Ball, Agent, 50 West 57th Street, 11444 Decenta Court, Studio City, Calif.
Thanks to Joe Glaser, Assoc. Booking Corp. for much assistance.

Music Halls For Workingmen: New Glow On British Varieties

By DICK RICHARDS

London.

Never quite defeated, even on the West End, London, once the capital of music hall entertainment, the hardy British varieties seem to be staging a rather sensational "comeback" in the industrialized provincial centers. It's a rowdy kind of free-and-easy fun playing to workingmen. Sublety is probably not wanted. Exuberance is. Make it loud. Make it clear. Make it socko.

First information on these new homes away from home for the music hall entertainers picture old-time lustiness in working class clubs where British labor becomes a member for perhaps $1.80 and acquires the privilege of eating, drinking, playing bingo, watching the cabaret, and/or, say, wrestling.

As often happens with show biz phenomena this revival of the varities has popped up like mushrooms in dank soil. It could easily be reasoned that actually it represents a return to yesteryear. The music hall had its roots in roistering times.

But none of this is depressing. Artistes do not feel that they are "slipping." Hard the work may be, but it is rewarding, in that audiences are really there to enjoy themselves. There is an atmosphere that could never be whipped up in a half empty theatre or in one of those West End plushy, ermine-and-cigars night spots. And even top liners can make as much money as they can in more ritzy surroundings.

Just how many pubs and working men's clubs are putting on organized pop entertainment is difficult to estimate. They started tentatively and have now spread all over like the proverbral rash. One of the first to get interested was Lita Roza, a disk and video personality of an "earlier day" some years ago when it often took an artiste as much as two or three months to become a "star." The tongues wagged maliciously when Lita agreed to play a week in a tavern in Salford, near Manchester. "She's had her chips," they hinted darkly.

On the contrary," Miss Roza said at the time: "I earned three times more in Salford than I could have done equivalently in the West End. The audiences were more enthusiastic. The pub was packed from opening time and, though I had to extend my 20-minute act to 40-minutes, it was because of sheer enjoyment both by the audience and for myself."

Donald Peers, Robert Earl, Penny Nicholls and that ripe, robust comedian Jimmy Wheeler were others who got in early on the profitable bandwagon. "I can earn as much playing one show at each of 14 working men's clubs in one of the North of England circuits as I can at the Palladium at the same time," opines Wheeler. 'What's more, there's a feeling of a re-birth in the spirit of music hall entertainment."

London & Manchester

Both London and Manchester are fruitful arenas for the modern music hall artiste. At the Russell Social Club, a typical example an annual membership fee of $1.40 enables members to come eat, cabaret or even wrestling with Ernie Derbyshire, the bossman, refereeing. It was Dan Farson, the television writer and personality, who perhaps did as much as anybody to put the East End of London on the map with vigorous, exeuberant, saloon bar entertainment that has the glasses rattling and the customers cheering into their beer. Farson took over the old Newcastle Arms on the south bank of the River, bedecked it with signed pictures, chanderliers, old musical prints and posters. He has put on new talent and also brought oldtime warblers like 81-year-old singer, Ida Barr, and Marie Lloyd Jr. to sing at his joint.

Other pubs in the East End are swinging with electric organs, singing acts, trad bands and blues singers and the customers lap it up. Farson cashed in with a tv film based on visits to four of these "musichall" taverns. Apart from the hope that some tv producer, agent or talent scout will nip in one night and "discover" an artiste, most of them get a kick out of just performing in such a lively, colorful atmosphere. After all, comedian Ken Dodd, Charlie Chester and Roy Castle are just three of a large number of present day stars who learned the game in the exacting surroundings of publand.

Ray Martine, first discovered emceeing and gagging in a London pub show, is maybe the first big discovery from this field. He was considered sufficient of a novelty for them to persuade him to bring his blueish jokes and cheeky line of patter to the world of West End cabaret. He clicked and made a name for himself as the linkman of "Star and Garters" a tv series with a studio mocked up as a typical saloon bar. But Martine often has a wistful yen to get back to the heartier, less formal atmosphere of the East End.

Up From Song Pubs

The singing pubs and clubs spread through the counties. "It's the current trend," a spokesman of a brewery said. "Most houses now have an entertainment room, and many others are being reshaped and converted." And, in many cases, it is taking its toll of television. Sets are being whipped out of bars. The customers can get sated on telly at home. When they come out they want a live entertainment ball.

But it would be a colossal mistake to think of the provinces merely in terms of pubs and sawdust-floored social clubs. In this Affluent Age there is money spread round and it is not only in London's Golden Square Mile that customers seek top league conditions. There are cabaret and dining and dancing clubs out of London which would make some of the top Mayfair and Soho showplaces look to their laurels (and their cash registers).

One man, who owns half a dozen clubs can offer a substantial month's work for his acts by doubling and switching. Cardiff is shortly opening a new luxury club and the boss has already announced that he is prepared to pay $700 a week for star draws. One of the ritziest clubs in the North of England is La Dolce Vita in Newcastle. The club, reputed to have cost $140,000 to put over, has already offered its patrons such artistes as Alma Cogan, Billy Daniels, Roy Castle, Ketty Lester, Timi Yuro and Dick Haymes, names that would be attractions at any London top spot. To prove the ambitions of some of the bosses of what has now become Big Business, La Dolce Vita recently offered $1,10 to Dusty Springfield who, after the Springfields act split, has just started on her own and has one bigselling disk to her credit.

Ideas Mean Cash

Manchester, Leeds and Newcastle each has a well appointed "Talk of the Town," and someone like Alma Cogan, for instance, can command $1,400 a week at any of them. "Yes," says Don Black, of the Blackburn, Lewis agency in London, who is specialising on this profitable angle, "it's encouraging disheartened vaude artistes to realize that ideas and hard work, when geared to opportnuity, spell cash." They are realising that because musichall, as such, has curled up there is no need for the individual to do the same.

Manchester, Black finds, is one of the most profitable and glittering Tom Tiddler's grounds. The sprawling, grimy, affluent city is proving a crock of gold. There are the usual spate of more modest establishments like the Keg O'Kee, which flourishes in the Manchester suburb of Atherton. Run by Rita Sadler, sometime manageress at Winston's Club in Mayfair, she has settled down in a similar capacity at the Keg O'Kee. She has even opened a gambling room. Maximum stake 35c.

There must be some 350 different kinds of clubs in Manchester and most of them are a stamping ground for local and national talent. Some of them, like Milverton Lodge, the Queen of Hearts' Club, the Buckingham and Bampton House Club represent niteries that would shame no capital in the world. And they're rather cheaper.

BLESS YOU!
HILDEGARDE

Scot Show Biz Seeks Hypo as Act Exodus to London Hits Vaude, Cafes

By GORDON IRVING

Glasgow.

Enterprise is badly needed in Auld Lang Syne show biz. Vaude is dying but won't lie down, revue continues to flourish, legit fodder is not offered in sufficient quantities, much of television is mediocre—but the paramount need, in a busy industrial country such as this, is for niteries in the larger towns and cities, and a new style of live entertainment for which the customers long.

As is, bingo continues to pull thousands nightly from the theatres and cinemas, and there is hardly anything in the category of nitery fodder, due, mainly, to outmoded drink laws and a notable lack of daring on the part of would-be operators.

Scots, tied to their tv sets no matter how poor the fare is that's offered, are becoming largely a nation of home-bound families, with only the teenagers darting out to the city-center cinema or the nabe house. It is a contrast to the days when thousands flocked to see their native Auld Lang Syne comedians and singers, and live vaude ruled the day.

Among the comedians who headline currently, Jimmy Logan, Rikki Fulton, Jack Milroy, Lex McLean and Johnnie Beattie hold the main positions, while Jimmy Fletcher is probably the only upcoming comedy artist to note. Others, such as Stanley Baxter, have emigrated south to London. Duncan Macrae is in his proper category as a comedy actor in films and tv; Jack Radcliffe continues as Scotland's senior character comedian, but devotes himself mainly to dance functions and cabaret. Alec Finlay, who became a sort of modern-day Harry Lauder, is working mainly in Australia and New Zealand.

In the tv field, Larry Marshall stays on, now in his sixth year, as comedy host of the daily lunchtime show, "The One O'Clock Gang," seen Mondays to Fridays on the commercial tv channel in Central Scotland. Same program also features a singer, Charlie Sim, who is regarded by many as being a better comedian, and who wins star roles in comedy on the revue and pantomime stage.

Scotland excels, however, in its singers, both male and femme. Kenneth McKellar leads the field with his fine tenor voice, and others prominent include Bill McCue, Moira Anderson, James Urquhart, the Alexander Brothers, Dennis Clancy and a Scots-Canadian, John Dunbar, who plans to return to Canada during 1964.

Though he might be classed by some as a comedian, Andy Stewart, recently returned from a long North American tour, is more in the category of a minstrel-entertainer singing the auld Scotch sangs and bothy ballads. He has not registered any notable disk hits since his coin-spinning "A Scottish Soldier," but keeps slogging assiduously to enter the chart again. He retains much of his native appeal, and can still command packed audiences.

Calum Kennedy, a kilted Gaelic singer with much charm, is another name artist, and has enhanced his b.o. power by his Grampian-tv song-and-dance-show series, "Calum's Ceilidh," a heather-and-hooch stanza which clicks with those who like Highland music and movement.

Television

In television, both the BBC and Scottish Television turn out a fair quota of local programs. Those who have impressed recently have been Bill Tennant, anchor-man of a nightly "Here and Now" newsmagazine on the commercial channel, and John McGregor, emcee of a lively BBC-TV magazine from Scotland, "Scotland at Six," also beamed nightly Mondays to Fridays. "The White Heather Club" is a somewhat tired formula for a BBC song-and-dance program which appears to have run its course.

Summer revues at vacation resorts appear to have "had it." All, that is, except the famed Popplewell family's "Gaiety Whirl" at the Gaiety Theatre, Ayr, which still does top business by virtue of its polish, zest and new faces. Other resorts may be putting up the theatre shutters next summer; this is not due entirely to the poor shows offered. A new drift by holiday makers to sunnier spots in Spain, Italy and elsewhere is a key reason.

Legit is quietly served by the Citizens' Theatre in Glasgow, and repertory companies in Dundee, Perth, St. Andrews and Edinburgh. It employs local actors at small salaries, and suffers from poor publicizing and a certain snob outlook.

The absence of Moss Empire theatres in Scotland (the Edinburgh Empire is now a bingo hall, and the Glasgow Empire has been razed to the ground to make way for office development) means that fewer than ever American artists now visit the country. This is to be depreciated ,since the demand to see top artists in the flesh still persists. Those who do come make hit-and-run visits and are mainly "beat" artists with disk names, starring in teenage-angled layouts at the Odeon Theatre, Glasgow.

Touring plays are also notable by their absence, and, when they do come, usually visit Edinburgh instead of Glasgow. The latter city is usually booked far ahead with long resident runs of pantomime and revue.

In television, top-rating shows have included the local comedy series, "The Adventures of Francie & Josie," starring local comix Rikki Fulton and Jack Milroy; "The Dick Van Dyke Show," on BBC-TV; "Bonanza," "Maverick," "Hawaiian Eye," "Bus Stop," "Follow The Sun," and "Thank Your Lucky Stars." Other popular programs are "Dr. Kildare," "Dr. Finlay's Casebook," "Ben Casey" and "Maigret."

A Carny Which Became Big Biz

Sedlmayr's Royal American Shows Stresses Screaming (& Smooching) Rides—Classy 45-Minute Revues—Elaborate Mobility—Travels 25,000 Miles Yearly

By ODIE ANDERSON

Tampa, Fla.

"Carnivals will be here forever—because you can't put a merry-go-round in your living room," is the philosophy of Carl J. Sedlmayr Sr., whose Royal American Shows continues to outgross their last gross at chalk-up time each season. Royal covers the continent of North America every summer and entertains between 20-25,000,000 people on an itinerary of about 25,000 miles, and immensely rich Sedlmayr continues to steer the business which he entered 49 years ago as an indigent 'bally' for a freak show.

1,200 Employes

Now in winter quarters in Tampa, perhaps the biggest collapsible show in the world is undergoing its annual facelift, with some 1,200 employes engaged in rejuvenating and improving every item involved in a giddy gallery which spreads itself into a mile-long midway at the drop of 'Mr. Carnival's' shaggy eyebrows.

Thrill rides, those great steel monsters of exhilarating movement, create the breath of life for the carnival business, accounting for the biggest gross of the entire production. Royal transports everything from the kiddie's carousel to the wild whip-and-twist to the seductive tunnel of love. Powered by 30 diesel generators are the world's only portable Dodgem, a Rocket, airplane rides and the Wild Mouse, which cost almost $100,000.

Following the Minneapolis State Fair in St. Paul, the Space Wheel, constructed in Germany and the only one of its kind ever built, was stored and will be used there only in future, since it takes a prohibitive three days to re-assemble. Under construction in Germany now is a portable replacement, the 'Velt Bomber' or World Traveling Tram, which will be erectable in less than six hours and can be dismantled in less time than that.

(This engineering enigma is the brainchild of C. J. Sedlmayr Jr., the carnival's Assistant General Manager and specific right hand man to his father.)

Bought Seattle Wheel

The 120-foot ferris wheel used at the Seattle World's Fair was purchased at a cost of $300,000, is being added to the attractions, substantiating Sedlmayr's conviction that the wheel is mankind's greatest invention. He contends that his wheels provide the perfect setting for romance, and that with a little thrill and a little sex every man becomes a big spender. Back in Kansas City in 1911 he conspired with a ferris wheel operator to keep them aloft long enough for him to kiss his girl, then a dressmaker named Laura Jones. She has been Mrs. Sedlmayr since that time and continues to oversee the designing of the ornate costumes worn in the girly shows. (These are not the cheap gaudy ornaments usually associated with side shows. Only top materials are used and all are individually fitted and hand sewn and management endeavors to keep the morals of the carny chorus at the same high level.)

The two big entertainment productions, the Club Lido Revue and the Harlem Revue run about 45 minutes each and each season the terps make their bows in new routines and new gladrags. Lila Turner starred in the 45-girl Club Lido, produced by Leon Miller, in '63. An equal number twirled to the tunes of a 10-piece band in charge of Leon Claxton in the Harlem Revue. Some 16 additional shows—mostly in the freak frame — the rides and 50 concessions complete the midway.

Sedlmayr speaks little of the fast talkers of the game tents in his show, although he admits to their necessity in the financial structure of a carnival. Most customers (you don't call them 'suckers' in his presence) are aware of the odds against them in the games, but male ego continues to prompt a show of prowess and a good barker can still cast a bit of black magic.

The popularity of the freak shows is diminishing, with the disappearing all-American rube, but nothing developed so far can negate the overall lure of the bright lights, the sounds and the smells of the midway. Sedlmayr has succeeded in erasing many of the burns once marking the traveling carny, even as he has eliminated one competitor after another. Almost nostalgically he points out that he has no more competition—only opposition—and that most of the little shows are financially unable to keep the few engagements they get.

By producing a clean show and by pouring thousands of dollars back into the business every year in a ceaseless effort to build a bigger and better production, Sedlmayr has acquired — and keeps — the best dates in this country and Canada. (The 'Royal' is for Canada; the 'American' for the States.) Early in May the 80, double length railroad cars emblazoned with the brilliant red and blue lettering of the Royal American Shows and carrying personnel and equipment destined to entertain millions of young and old funfans, snake their slow way out of Tampa. First stop is the Cotton Carnival in Memphis, followed by stands in Evansville, Ind. and Davenport, Iowa.

Canada Big

Some 20 cars are added for the Canadian tour, with its stops in Brandon, Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina. Back in the States, the show unfolds at the Wisconsin State Fair, the Minneapolis State Fair (biggest of them all), the Mid-America Fair in Topeka, the Kansas State Fair, the Oklahoma State Fair, the Arkansas Livestock Show, the Mississippi State Fair and the Louisiana State Fair in Shreveport. Included in the 28 standard, all steel sleeping cars—with drawing rooms — are the two private 5-room air conditioned cars occupied by the senior Sedlmayrs and the younger Sedlmayr and his wife, the former Egle Zacchini of the celebrated circus act, the Great Zacchinis. C. J. III, of the three-generation show family, is presently enrolled at a southern prep school. (Annually, railroads collect more than $250,000 from Royal American for hauling the entourage.)

In Tampa, in early February, the chores of building, mending and painting are interrupted and the towers, striped with fluorescent lamps, are erected to bathe the midway in light for the Florida State Fair, presented on grounds and in buildings adjoining the RAS spread. Afterwards the business of getting the show on the road is intensified, directed by Sedlmayr from his mahogany-paneled, airconditioned white truck trailer. Many of the company have been with the show for years; all are fiercely loyal. (A glittering diamond-studded, solid gold automobile key was Sedlmayr's 77th birthday gift from his concession manager.)

Tampa, despite long absences, is home to most of the troupers. Here they have established the Greater Tampa Showmen's Assn. with some 2500 active members, and built a lavish clubhouse. Only requisite for membership is participation in some phase of outdoors showmanship and admission is by an electronic key card only.

It is not known just how much money Sedlmayr has ploughed into this organization but the goodwill of the members overflows to aid countless community projects, including the entertainment of indigent youngsters of the area at an annual Christmas party, with a separate Yule party for retarded children and another for hospitalized tuberculosis patients. The troupers don their costumes for these performances and rides and refreshments are made available without cost to the children. The club leads all others in the local March of Dimes collections and membership in the club is not required for a needy showman to obtain assistance — before or after death. In a quiet little corner of Tampa, known as "Showmen's Rest," the GTSA has its own cemetery. Here are already buried an elephant skin man, a giant, a fat lady, infants, the famous and the nondescript of the showmen's world. The mausoleum, of imported Italian marble, was donated by Sedlmayr and proceeds from all sales here go to the perpetual upkeep of the grounds.

JOAN BISHOP
Mezzo-Soprano, Pianist
Currently 2nd year
BILTMORE HOTEL
Dec. 15, '63, HALLMARK
"CRY OF ANGELS"
Dec. 25, '63, "AMAHL," NBC-TV
"Lucia"—Jan. 19, '64, N.B.C.-TV
IMPERIAL ARTISTS CORP.

EIRE'S TOURISM GETS NEW INT'L FLAVOR

By MAXWELL SWEENEY

Dublin.

Visit of the late U.S. President John F. Kennedy in June gave a lift to Irish tourist biz. This boost is also linked to increased American investment in Irish hotels. Americans are not alone in the field, English, Germans and Dutch have also bought in.

Intercontinentar opened hotels in Dublin, Cork and Limerick in May, and Conrad Hilton confirmed his decision to build a Hilton near Dublin Airport for operation by the summer of 1965. The Rank Organisation, diversifying from cinemas, has bought a hotel in the Dublin suburbs as a motor inn and has another building in Cork.

U.S. investors are going in for top class business and several old castles have been taken over for remodelling as luxury hotels. The Germans have mainly concentrated on Killarney with two major buildings in the neighborhood.

Show business is deriving some side benefits and there is an increasng interest in booking acts, both of the tradtional Irish hootenany type and the more sophisticated material. At present business is not strong enough to carry international acts, but locals are cleaning up.

Band business has boomed in both city and out-of-town terperies and showbands are taking the top coin. It is largely on one-night stands and a number of the bands are semi-pro, but they all have heavy date books at home and some are travelling to Irish dance halls in the U.S. and England.

Chi Still That Toddlin' Town

By MORRY ROTH

Chicago.

Whatever might be said for other show biz areas, as far as night club biz is concerned Chicago is still that toddlin' town. While club owners are as cautious about talking about good times as are football coaches and baseball managers, the fact is that there are more clubs now in operation in Chi than in many years.

Windy City nitery biz hustled into the final months of '63 with the preem of a new edition of the old Chez Paree on Wabash Ave. across from the Sun-Times building and the bow of the Chateau Continental, nitery in the new Continental Hotel on N. Michigan Ave.

One of the healthiest signs in the Chi nitery heartbeat was the rash of new smaller clubs in the Wells St. and Old Town area, a boite belt best described as "everybody's neighborhood nitery centre" since it is patronized to a large extent by Chicagoans and suburbanites out on the town. While such clubs as Mother Blue's, the Plugged Nickel, Hungry Eye, Touch of Olde, Old Town North, Crystal Palace and Le Show (formerly the Small World), are anything but posh, they are operations that by their low-overhead nature can take a chance with new and untried talent.

To some extent, the success of Chi as a talent hatchery has depended upon the availabilities of just such spawning places. Mike Nichols & Elaine May and Shelley Berman came into their own at the Compass on the south side, earlier George Gobel moved into the big-time from Helsing's Lounge, and before that Danny Thomas developed his first sizeable following at the old 5100 Club. The springboard clubs provide one of the most important ingredients of nitery biz—hope.

Suburban Nitery Circuit

For the first time in a long while, Chi now has what amounts to a suburban nitery circuit. The Dorchester in the south suburb of Dolton is now booking names, in addition to the long-established Mangam's Chateau westward (Lyons, Ill.) and the Sahara Inn north of the city (Schiller Park). The latter was purchased by Gene Autry in August and moved its entertainment from the plush motel's Club Gigi to its flossy Sultan's Table diningroom. Ray Colomb's on the for south side alternates names and semi-names, as does the west side Club Laurel, which also books name bands.

While the downtown area toddles less than it did a couple of decades ago, the Chez Paree will provide a considerable shot in the arm, and the Empire Room in the Palmer House continues in full sway as the king of Windy City swankeries and one of the most prestigious bookings for acts in the country. Too, the Bonaparte Room in the Sheraton-Blackstone is now firmly established as a top entertainment spot and is in hot competition with the Drake Hotel's Camellia House for supper club honors.

In the same area, George Marienthal's London House continues to thrive on a steady diet of modern jazz, and on the other side of the Loop the Blue Angel is firmly ensconced as a calypso citadel.

While the rise of Wells St. was at one time seen as a threat to the traditional nitery centre on Rush St., it has yet to make any serious inroads. The Rush St. night club-restaurant complex still bustles with tourists and conventioners and has, for instance, recently added two new fancy French restaurants, not to mention the ultra Maxim's, first U. S. branch of the famed Paris institution.

Among the major ongoing clubs in this area are Mister Kelly's, the Happy Medium, the Gate of Horn, New Living Room, Bourbon Street and the Playboy Club. A few blocks south is the Tooker Place congerie, which was established a few years ago and includes Le Bistro and several smaller cabarets.

The foregoing is in no way a roster of downtown, Rush St., Wells St. and outlying clubs.

JERRY VAN DYKE
"NO TIME FOR SERGEANTS"
Melodyland — Anaheim, Calif. Feb. 23rd for 2 Weeks

Heirs To Circus Wonder and Glory

By CLAIRE & TONY CONWAY

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

VICKIE UNUS, TO THE LOT BORN, MAKES HERSELF A STAR OF THE BIG TOP AT 18—THE FAMILY TRADITION STILL THE GREAT ASSURANCE OF CIRCUS' FUTURE —SAD LESSON NEWCOMER OWNERS LEARNED WHEN THEY HIT OVER-BOOKED TERRITORY

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

When does a circus season begin? Sounds like a silly question. They begin in the spring, don't they? Since a circus is a business and its purpose is profit, a circus starts at the time when it can make the most money. So Ringling-Barnum holds its production number rehearsals at Venice, Florida, early in January of each year and opens during that same month at Miami Beach in the fancy auditorium there. Polack Bros. opens its series of Shrine and fraternally sponsored dates in January, too. And most tented operations get underway in mid-April when the days begin to get longer and the snows have disappeared. So let's begin at Venice and look back at the rehearsals for the 1963 show:]

(The text which follows is incomplete. It represents the first draft of an annual report, made regularly by the Conways for VARIETY starting in 1957. Omitted from this report is the highly significant event of the fall period, the tour of the Moscow Circus, under Morris Chalfen's management. This and other omissions in the story below will be understood with the statement that Mrs. Conway died suddenly at 44 on Oct. 19 at her home in Falls Church, Virginia. Painter and sculptor and lifelong circus buff, her acquaintance with performers was well-nigh universal in the special world of circus show business.—Ed)

A permanent winterquarters is a giant workshop and is about as likely to be given to glamour as the production line of a Detroit auto factory. Oh, it's interesting to watch props being built, railroad equipment being repainted, costumes being put together, and to see how the units of a production are transformed from a group of people in rehearsal clothes into a costumed unit with action and movement which tells a story. But normally there isn't too much excitment. However, January 1963 was different.

Dick Barstow, Bob Dover and Maggie Smith had rehearsals well underway when we arrived at the big building. We had a wonderful welcome. It was good to be back with the showfolk again. Everyone, the circus people and the continuingly large contingent of visiting tourists in the seats, was talking about two topics: Vickie Unus and the Desilu-ABC TV show "The Greatest Show On Earth." And they weren't just talking, this was a case of real excitement which you felt at once and which continued to build.

Child of Headliner

Vickie Unus, daughter of "the man who stands on his forefinger," had been announced as the new aerial star of Ringling-Barnum, a finished centre-ring artist—taught by the great Lalage and her husband Wolfgang—in the grand tradition of the immortal Lillian Leitzel. The tv "Greatest Show" was to be based on the Ringling-Barnum of the '60s and would star Jack Palance and Stuart Erwin.

Every now and then, Barstow would stop all the action on the track and in the three rings and ask the organist to play "Happy Birthday To You" for Duffy, one of the clowns. Immediately Duffy would disappear and a laughing cast would again sing their greetings to him. This happened, by the way, every day during the entire rehearsal period.

The tv entourage arrived. Lights, cameras and cables suddenly poped up all around. Palance and Stu Erwin were present, ditto Robert Webber, Tuesday Weld, Ruth Roman, Russ Tamblyn. Webber and Tamblyn almost immediately were at home with the circus folk and having a wonderful time and it was not unusual to have a contest of strength or of dexterity going on between one of them and one of the circus performers.

At this time the circus' schedule was not affected by the telepic filming and the work on the four productions continued each day from 9 to 6. Barstow would have to pick up his microphone, "Girls, I'm losing my voice." This evoked mass cheers from the showgirls.

During the morning rehearsals for web, the aerial ballet, Vickie Unus would appear in practice clothes to do her centre ring solo around which the entire production would be built. Rumors of the number of times which she could (or would) perform her one-arm planges (pulling her entire body up and over one arm innumerable times) sometimes seemed fantastic. Just how good was this girl?

Only yesterday there was a little girl playing in the backyard of the Ringling-Barnum big top, playing with the other circus children. She was no better behaved than the others, nor more tidy. She was a child of the circus. Her older sister, Nina, already was an accomplished all-round circus performer who could ride a horse or an elephant, work web or ladders, and take part in a bareback riding act. Her father, "Unus, the man who stands on his forefinger," was one of the stellar attractions of the show. Vickie, for that indeed was the little girl's name, was just part of the background of the drama which the public saw as "The Greatest Show On Earth." The most remarkable thing she did was to fall and break her arm while attempting, without guidance or assistance, to do her father's famous trick of standing on one finger.

But now, in 1963, Nina had married and left show business, Unus remained. Vickie was to make her debut in a production appropriately titled "1963 Debutantes Ball." On the night of Jan. 24, Vickie, now billed as "La Toria," wearing a spangled dress and glass slippers and carrying ostrich plumes, stepped out into the track and walked to the centre ring.

If at age 18 she walked proudly, she had earned the right to do so for this was the culmination of a lengthy battle, a battle against parental opposition and sarcasm, a battle against aching muscles, a battle against endless hours of training, a battle to please her teachers, and a battle to satisfy herself that she could accomplish her goal. Now Vickie handed her feathers to her page, shook her hair, and began ascending her web to the high trapeze.

Soon, her body roll following body roll, we held our breath as we watched—knowing that a new star shone in the circus sky. This sort of thing is healthy for the circus industry.

We were all conscious that an American circus unit might visit Russia. We knew of Ringling's one-ring circus for the 1964 New York World's Fair. The year started with special significance indeed.

Other Youngsters

Another "youngster" of the circus was among the many fine acts which appeared with the Al Dobritch International Circus, under Shrine auspices, in Washington, D. C. John Zerbini, wearing only a loincloth-type pair of shorts, is at 20 the youngest "subjugator of big cats" we know of to appear in any steel arena in years. He works entirely with lions, but he does have both males and females in his display. This act was but one of a number owned by Mills Bros. Circus which made indoor winter dates for Dobritch prior to its own tented season. And since Mills sets were on the show, it was to be expected that George Strongman, assistant to the manager of Mills, would also be in evidence.

Only a few weeks earlier Strongman had lost his entire personal wardrobe in an accident which destroyed most of Mills' wardrobe, badly injured the truckdriver, and took the lives of all the trained chimpanzees with the show. Now, standing with us near the lion cages, Strongman suddenly pointed and shouted "my sweater" and we all looked to see some shreds of cloth (which might once have been a sweater) disappearing between the jaws of a big male lion. The sweater, placed atop the cage for safekeeping, had draped itself invitingly across the bars so that it was an easy matter for the lion to reach out a paw and bring home its quarry.

When Ringling-Barnum appeared in Washington, there was much talk about who was going with the European unit which, we learned, would be titled "Ringling's Barnum & Bailey" since both "brothers" and "circus" have many spellings in Europe and would require additional amounts of advertising matter, stationery, etc., if used. A permanent winterquarters for this show has been established at Lille, France, and the productions for each year's tour will be prepared there much as are the numbers for the American show at Venice, Florida.

Over on Doc Bartok's United

(Continued on page 242)

DICK WESTON and AUNT MARTHA with "CLARENCE"
"Aunt Martha and Clarence are highly believable, lovable and endearing."—Long, VARIETY
Exclusive Management: GEORGE SOARES
Las Vegas, Nevada Phone 384-2182

A Remembrance of Solly Violinsky:

Master of Jokes For Jokers

By ABEL GREEN

When Solly Violinsky, Friars' fave and vet vaudeer who bragged he had "laid off under four presidents," died early this year he left a heritage of show biz nifties. He was one comic gypsy who made his violin (sky) laugh. His one-liners (chiefly) were succinct, brittle and intratrade. The hipsters loved 'em.

"I just found a way to get Nick Kenny sore," he said. "I wouldn't tell him my birthday."

"I met a fellow actor on the street. He asked, 'How you doin'? I'm laying off this week.' I said, 'That's a funny thing, I'm laying off on the same bill'."

"I once wrote a song called 'Moonlight'—it never saw daylight."

The songwriter-musician-monologist (when he worked he finished his act with a fiddle specialty, hence the billing) always returned to Binghamton (N.Y.), his hometown, for the summer. "But I hate that long eight-hour train ride!" A Friars pal said, "Why don't you take a plane?" Violinsky replied, "Who the hell wants to get to Binghamton that fast!"

Years ago when the Friars were in need of working capital a special meeting was called to assess each member $50. From the rear came Violinsky's voice, "I object!" The chairman asked why. "I don't want to owe the club that much money," said Solly.

ASCAP sent Violinsky a membership insignia button. He wired back, "Received lapel button, please send jacket."

Sid Gary was double-talking Violinsky one night and he retorted, "I don't even understand you when you're talking single."

He liked to visit Lindy's in the old days but protested, "I can only stay for a cup of coffee and 10 acts" (referring to the comics' penchant for doing-their-stuff ad lib).

Broadwayite Fred Block and he lost heavily at the track and Violinsky wanted to know what he was doing later. The legit manager said, "Sorry, this is my bridge night." Violinsky retorted, "Mine too—let's jump off together."

Harry Hershfield recalls when Violinsky returned from a lodge affair and asked how his performance went he replied, "Well, all I can say is that the reading of the minutes was the hit of the evening."

He got a Hollywood studio contract but was laid off quickly. Violinsky burst into the producer's office, "Two weeks ain't enough time to prove I have no talent."

At one time he roomed with Joe Frisco on the Coast. Latter got booked for six weeks. Frisco later wired Violinsky, "Please send $200, just got tapped out, must get out of town." Violinsky sent the money. The next week, same pleading wire, "Need money badly, send $150"; Solly again sent. Third week, same SOS, "Please send," etc. Violinsky wired Frisco's agent instead, "Please stop booking my pal, he's breaking me."

"Booked solid" was the vaudevillian's idea of heaven and "layoff" was a sad commentary on his financial status, but when Violinsky was asked how long he hadn't worked he bragged, "I layed off under four Presidents, and remember one of them served four terms!"

Song & Dance Circa Vaude

By HARRY PUCK

I won't say I was born in a theatrical trunk because that's been used before. If it hasn't been used, I was. At least at the age of five I knew that a stick of greasepaint was not to be used for flavoring noodle soup. My father was an Englishman, a shoecutter by trade, making $18 a week. Along about five and six years of age, my sister Eva and I could sing a little and dance a little. We began our theatrical career by playing ladies' coffeeklatches for which we were paid off with a silver spoon or I got a bright red necktie. Then we started getting money. As much as $20 a week at which time my father quit shoecutting and retired, never to work again. He sure had it made.

They tell a funny story about my father standing in front of the Palace Theatre (all the actors congregated in front of the Palace). This day his crony was Jack Pearl's father. Pearl turned to my father and said, "Where are you this week Puck?" My father (still standing in front of the Palace)

(Continued on page 244)

Trick-or-Treat With World Famous As an Illusionist Opens His Diary

By MILBOURNE CHRISTOPHER

Sometimes when my tons of illusionary paraphernaila are being set up in theatres or television studios I remember the experiences I've had with little or no equipment.

I met Archbishop Makarias, the president of Cyprus, in the lobby of the Ledra Palace Hotel in Nicosia. Suddenly the tall, black-whiskered and blackrobed dignitary roared with laughter. When he had gone the desk clerk asked what I had done to move Makarias to mirth.

I showed him. I produced a red thimble on my index finger, gave my hand a flourish and three other thimbles appeared on as many fingertips.

In Egypt a few days later I made a pilgrimage to Gizeh. Thousands of years before the first known magician, Dedi of Dedsnefru, had performed for the pharoah Cheops, who built the Great Pyramid as his final resting place.

A windstorm churned up the desert sand and forced me into the small entranceway at the base of the pyramid. As guides and camel-drivers watched I scooped up a handful of sand, gave it a squeeze and opened my fingers to show that the sand had changed into a silver coin. Nonchalantly I dropped the coin in my pocket, picked up more sand and produced more piastres.

As I bent down and hunched through the corridor that led up to the burial chambers I saw the Egyptians feverishly scooping up and sifting the loose sand near the doorway with nary a coin as result of their labors.

For years I had used the sudden blast of fire as a sort of trademark. In 1957, when Castro was still in the Cuban hills, I was invited to meet President Batista, who was living in Camp Columbia on the outskirts of Havana.

Close Call

He was surrounded by several men in uniform as my car drove up. I stepped out and started in his direction. Almost there I produced my flash of fire. Several of the officers reached quickly for their pistols, then they realized it was not at attempt on his life, but a visiting magician.

I performed for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor at an intimate party given by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Sr. At the end of my exhibition I asked for a cigar. The Duke came forward with one in a metal cylinder. I pulled away the covering, put it between my lips, lit it and took a good puff. As the smoke wreathed my head I said: "After a show there's nothing I enjoy more than a good cigar", and with a wave of my hand walked into the next room.

How well I remember a hospital show for an audience of one at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore. The doctors had to operate on an elderly patient with a weak heart. It was important that his mind be diverted from the operation immediately before surgery.

I performed by his bedside using every device I could think of to rivet his attention on my conjuring. He was wheeled directly from my sorcery to the operating room. I'm pleased to report that the operation was a success.

Traveling by cabin cruiser down the muddy river from Paramaribo to Moengo in Surinam, thick jungle vegetation lined the narrow waterway. Occasionally we came across small cleared areas with thatched huts.

We pulled in at one of the villages. I walked to the center of the hut area, drew a handkerchief from my pocket, waved it to attract attention, then tide it in a knot.

The natives watched as I held the knotted cloth in one hand, gestured with the other. Slowly the lower end of the handkerchief, quivered snakelike, then rose up through the knot and untied it. I looked from the handkerchief to my audience. It had vanished without a trace.

Later in Moengo the story of the white wizard and the snake handkerchief reached us. There was no telephone or telegraph connections to the village far upstream. The news must have been passed by word of mouth—or perhaps drums—miles through the tangled jungle.

In The French Manner

One beautiful spring night in Paris, after my show with Freddy Sanborn at the Alhambra Theatre, I was doing tricks for some friends in a corner of a Montmartre cafe. A burly Frenchman glanced our way, saw what was going on and walked across to our table.

With a word of apology he picked up the little rubberball I had just produced, closed his fingers around it, then opened his wand to disclose a cigaret.

My eyebrows, I am told, shot up in amazement. I took a second rubberball and changed it into a box of matches. This time his eyebrows lifted.

A boy in Rio de Janeiro has two unusual forged autographs. I was walking down Avenida Rio Branco with Fu Manchu. Fu is really David Bamberg, sixth generation of the famous Dutch family of magicians. On stage he wears Chinese make-up. The night before I had made a guest appearance with his elaborate two-hour theatre show.

"Please," the boy said in Portuguese, looking first to one of us, then the other," can I have Fu Manchu's autograph?" Fu took his autograph book and the proferred pen and passed them to me. I signed "Fu Manchu" with a flourish. Then I passed the book back to Fu and explained to the boy, "You'll want the autograph of Milbourne Christopher, the American magician, too."

Season's Greetings
JO LOMBARDI
Musical Director
LATIN QUARTER, NEW YORK
Enjoying 9th year thanks to
E. M. Loew and Ed Risman

Lotsa Femmes For N. Y. Fair

By BILL DOLL

Out in their Hollywood workshop Sid and Marty Krofft are busy stitching up 216 miniature brassieres to make sure that the cast of their "Poupees de Paris" does not offend the sensibilities of the "family" trade at the Big Show opening here April 22.

In other quarters the selection of pulchritude for the Ultimate Spectacle is proceeding in a logical and orderly fashion.

Michael Brown, having screened over 3,600 young ladies for beauty and versatility, is first to complete his casting and has already awarded contracts to the 60 singers and dancers to be seen in the smartly tailored musical revue he has devised for the DuPont "Wonderful World of Chemistry" exhibit.

Leon Leonidoff, field marshall of the biggest show of them all—"Wonderworld," which he and Meyer Davis will serve at the 1,200 seat Amphitheatre—is making the selections that will eventually fill to overflowing the 600 gowns and costumes schedued to arrive from France in time for dress rehearsals.

Manuel Ortuno and Robert Kennedy, directors of the Pavilion of Spain, are frantically plotting the logistics of deploying a mighty troupe of 400 senoritas assembled from all the provinces of Spain who will debark from a chartered Spanish steamer and dance in the streets of every key N.Y. neighborhood before going to the Fair for a week of outdoor fiestas.

Dick Button, the Olympic skating champ, and his partner Broadway's Paul Feigay, have set themselves the unusual task of collecting, not only 65 talented skating queens, but also two dozen Amazonian showgirls who must tower to a minimum six feet two and be able to parade—or glide—through the five daily shows of the World's Fair "icetravaganza."

Campus Cuties Wanted

Even now executives of American Machine & Foundry, having been catapulted into show business, are fanning out around the country to recruit the campus beauts from leading universities who will comprise the most comely railroad crew in the entire history of transportation and will help to operate the World's Fair Monorail. George Murphy is being besieged by countless undiscovered movie starlets dreaming of appearing in his "How Movies Are Made" divertisment at the Hollywood Pavilion.

In retrospect this serves to conjure up a memory of the 1939 exposition when a certain madness seemed to sweep over the midway and decree that, if possible, all girls should be presented in what my dictionary describes as "a state of nature." Never, surely has so much theatrical ingenuity been expended to create a reason for presenting the female form in an almost total state of undress.

Along the length of the midway one could find: Crystal Lassies, one nude girl reflected a hundred times in a system of mirrors devised by Norman Bel Geddes. The Ice Maidens stripped of most of their clothing, "hypnotized," and encased in a cake of ice. N.T.G.'s Nude Ranch—girls wearing little more than triangular handkerchiefs tied loosely around their necks and all engaged in sports that required leaping and bending. The Enchanted Forest where Tony Sarg, through the use of reducing mirrors, presented the world's smallest n u d i e — "just three inches tall," the barker said. Dali's Dream of Venus where mermaids, naked from the waist up, swam at eye level in a glass tank. There were these and many more.

Mike Todd, no prude, joined in the fun. At Gay New Orleans he presented the Flame Dance—his own invention — wherein Muriel Paige, as a moth with wings of flash paper, danced round and round a gigantic prop candle. At the proper music cue, Muriel's wings went up in flames and she zipped out of her costume. ("I burned up six girls," Todd used to say, "but I finally got it right.")

When Freeport Was Actors' Haven

(And the Lights Club Its Citadel)

By HELENE MARAFINO

A representative of the Junior D.A.R. of Freeport, New York, asked me to write as completely as possible, my recollections of Freeport's theatrical colony in the days when so many performers lived here; so, to the best of my ability, I have done this. This article was, I believe, to be used as a chapter in "The History of Freport," which is to be compiled for the future generations of Freeporters.

Since writing this and reading it at a meeting of Junior D.A.R.'s, I have received several comments to the effect that I have said nothing about myself. I consider this rather in the light of a compliment and I assure you I have no desire to press agent myself. However, my late husband, Jack Barnes, and I comprised the team of Helene Hamilton & Jack Barnes and played for about 15 years (until his death) on the Orpheum and B. F. Keith Circuits in this country, as well as in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, Honolulu, Hilo, etc. Suffice to say, we were a well-known light comedy act and made our home in Freeport just off West Merrick Road for years, in the house where I live now on Elm Place. I think we bought in Freeport in 1914 or thereabouts, so you can understand I have seen many changes.

To the younger generation of Freeporters, who never knew the town in its heyday, as a home of so many (at that time) theatrical luminaries, some of the names I may recall will have little or no meaning.

The fire that destroyed the old Lights Club to you was just a big fire somewhere down by the water. To us who recall the gay times we had there and the memories it brought back, to see it—that old landmark—go up in smoke that night brought the tears to our eyes.

It was in Frank Tinney's garage that the idea of the Lights Club first started. He was, at that time, almost at the height of his career. A number of dwellers of the actors' colony who had been living here during the summer vacations decided to get together and organize a club of their very own where they could enjoy themselves with their friends and families and, during the idle summer months, celebrate the various winter holidays like Christmas, New Year's, Thanksgiving, Halloween, etc., at which time they were always away on the road.

To anyone who has to spend holidays like Christmas and New Year's, in a hotel, no matter how gay and festive the occasion, it is a far cry from the little home gathering around your own hearth that means so much to you, with your own around. So the idea was born to make some Saturday nights gala nights and have our own Christmas, New Year's, etc., celebrated in our own way with Christmas tree, snow house, gifts, Santa Claus, and all the trimmings, only in the summertime, when we were home with out loved ones, too.

Quickly Underwritten

Bonds were sold. Charter members were Victor Moore, Frank Tinney, T. Roy Barnes (a cousin of Jack, my late husband), Jim Dooley (of Dooley & Sales), Leo Carrillo, Howard Anderson, Charles Middleton (of Middleton & Spellmeyer), whom you have seen in pictures, as well as Tom Dugan, Arthur Deagan, and several others.

And as the rest of us came in from the road, we all joined, of course—The Four Mortons (Sam, Kitty, Paul and Naomi), the Doretys, Diamond & Brennan, Ralph Austin, and so many more—Sliding Billy Watson, of burlesque fame, my neighbor and a resident of Freeport for years; Gladys Clare & Henry Bergman, Gertrude and Max Hoffman; Vic Milo of quartet fame; Frank Morrel, the silver-voiced tenor who later died in California where he was sheriff. Sophie Tucker rented a place here for at least one summer. George P. Murphy (Spider Murphy) always used to put on a yearly benefit for the late Father O'Toole's church (Spider was Jewish).

I didn't tell you how the Lights Club came to be so called. In searching and racking their brains for a name, someone hit on the bright idea of taking the first letter of each word of Long Island Good Hearted Thespian Society—hence, LIGHTS—a name that came to be known all over the country.

The last festive occasion of the season was the Lights Cruise, which was usually in late August

(Continued on page 244)

NINA SIMONE
Singer-Pianist
Star of The FORD CARavan of Music for 1964
Management, ANDY STROUD, 419 Tecumseh Ave., Mt. Vernon, N. Y.
MO 7-5871
Promotion: PAUL BROWN

JIMMY BLADE
And His Orchestra
Currently—11th Year
The Camellia House, The Drake—Chicago

Thanks again for another successful year
Chubby Checker
&
Light

CARMEN CAVALLARO

"THE POET OF THE PIANO"

Latest Album Releases

WALTZING IN THE DARK — DANCING IN A DREAM

1964 Spring Release: SONGS EVERYBODY KNOWS

1963 Japanese Release: "POETRY IN JAPAN"

1964 " " "POETRY IN THE WORLD"

****

Concert Tours—Foreign

JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, SOUTH AFRICA, PERU, COLUMBIA, ECUADOR

****

Concerts, U.S.A.—SAN FRANCISCO, BUFFALO

Foreign—MEXICO CITY

Hotels, U.S.A.—SHOREHAM, AMERICANA, SHAMROCK

****

1964 APPEARANCES—CANADA

ROYAL YORK HOTEL, TORONTO QUEEN ELIZABETH, MONTREAL

Personal Management

JAY ALBERT ROBINSON

WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY, INC. STEINWAY PIANOS DECCA RECORDS

Season's Greetings

From the Staff and Management of the Famous

THUNDERBIRD HOTEL

Las Vegas, Nevada

Home of the Broadway "Twins"

MONTE PROSER

Presents

DICK SHAWN

Starring in Both Productions

COLE PORTER'S

"ANYTHING GOES"

with EILEEN RODGERS

(Dinner Show)

STYNE & CAHN'S

"HIGH BUTTON SHOES"

with PATRICIA MARAND

(Midnight Show)

Winner of the 58th Running of the VARIETY Stakes

JOE E. LEWIS IN THE SADDLE

AUSTIN MACK: Trainer

Such a happy 1963

in SOUTH AFRICA, AUSTRALIA, LONDON
and the
ROYAL COMMAND VARIETY SHOW

My heartfelt thanks and love to all my friends and fans.

SOPHIE TUCKER

Me too, TED SHAPIRO

There's no business like the show business at

WILBUR CLARK'S

DESERT INN
AND COUNTRY CLUB

LAS VEGAS, Nevada

Great Entertainment! Celebrity Golf Course! Great Fun!

Our Very Best

BEN ARDEN ORCHESTRA

Featuring Sylvia and Her Violin
7th Consecutive Year
Empire Room of the Palmer House
Chicago

Represented by Associated Booking Corp. 203 N. Wabash Chicago 1, Ill.

THE NOVELITES

Stardust, Las Vegas
Johnny Carson 'Tonight' Show NBC-TV
Ed Sullivan Show, CBS-TV
Joey Bishop Show, NBC-TV
Latin Quarter, New York
Vapors, Hot Springs
Riverside, Reno
Saturday Night at the Hollywood Palace, ABC-TV

Agent: SENNES THEATRICAL AGENCY, Stardust Hotel South, Las Vegas, Nevada

Happy Anniversary!

MARC PLATT

CHOREOGRAPHER-PRODUCER

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL

Rockefeller Center, New York

BEST WISHES

DONALD SADDLER

CHOREOGRAPHER

Just Concluded

LATIN QUARTER PRODUCTION

Currently

"TO BROADWAY WITH LOVE"
WORLD'S FAIR, TEXAS PAVILLION

Direction: COLEMAN - ROSENBERG

The show place of Show Town extends best wishes and greetings to friends all over the world.

STARDUST
HOTEL

"The World's Largest Resort Hotel"

LAS VEGAS

Nevada

18 Hole Golf Course

1300 Rooms

"With the world's greatest floorshow" (Life Magazine)
Playing to more than 1,400 people every night!

*Lil ol' Hitmaker, she!

BRENDA LEE

again in '63!

VOTED #1 FEMALE SINGER AROUND THE WORLD BY:

BILLBOARD

CASHBOX

MUSIC REPORTER

NEW MUSICAL EXPRESS (London)

MELODY MAKER (London)

*Thanks, Bill Gavin!

PERSONAL MGT.
dub allbritten
1717 WEST END BLDG.
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Exclusively on DECCA

Direction
WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY

Esquivel

Current
STARDUST HOTEL
LAS VEGAS

ALBUMS
RCA-VICTOR-REPRISE

Opening, Feb. 27th
NEW PAVILION ROOM
HARVEY'S WAGON WHEEL
LAKE TAHOE

SENNES THEATRICAL AGENCY, STARDUST HOTEL SOUTH, LAS VEGAS, NEVADA
NORMAN J. MILLEN-ASSOCIATES, PRESS RELATIONS HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

DONNA LYNN
CAPITOL RECORDING ARTIST
Newest Release
"RONNIE"
b/w
"THAT'S ME I'M THE BROTHER"
McCLENDON AGENCY TN 7-2287

"THE COMEDIAN"
The Only Real Monthly
PROFESSIONAL GAG SERVICE
THE LATEST — THE GREATEST — THE MOST-UP-TO-DATEST
Now in its 157th issue, containing stories one-liners, poemettes, song titles, hecklers, audience stuff, monologs, parodies, double gags, bits ideas, intros, impressions and impersonations, political, interruptions, Thoughts of the Day, Humorous Views of the News, Vignettes, etc. (20 Pages).
$25 YR.—SINGLE ISSUES $3
Foreign
$35 YR.—SINGLE ISSUES $4
No C.O.D.'s
BILLY GLASON, 200 W. 54th St. New York City 10019, CO 5-1316

WANTED
AUDIENCES TO WATCH FUNNY, HILARIOUS, COMEDY WAITER
ARTIE ROBERTS
PERFORM
He made these audiences happy: STEVE ALLEN, CANDID CAMERA, G.M., XEROX, I.B.M. Now let him do the same for you.
FREE Brochures and price on request.
Contact: ROBERT REXER
1674 Broadway, New York City
CI 5-3660

WE WANT IN!!!
Organ Groups! Organ Groups!
DYNAMICS MADHATTERS
BILL CALLAN GEORGE BRAITH
SARAH McLAWLOR and RICHARD OTTO
GLORIA COLEMAN
Featuring POLA ROBERTS
ANDY & The BEY SISTERS (Conventional)
CHARLES EARLAND
Featuring MILLIE McLAINE
AL (Frantic-Antic) KING & The SWINGING KINGSMEN
If Your Rooms Lacks Action . . . Call
SUBURBAN ATTRACTIONS
310 Washington St., Newark 2, N. J.
MArket 3-6751-2

THE RED GARTER
Boston • San Francisco
New York
BANJOS
Exciting Entertainment
8 P.M. to 2 A.M.
7th Avenue at 10th Street
New York City
OR 5-5855

hotel RIVIERA
LAS VEGAS, NEVADA

a resort city in a tower of luxury

All the fun, the glamour, the excitement that spells LAS VEGAS—fabled city of thrills and fabulous entertainment—are captured under one roof at the RIVIERA HOTEL.

—NOW—
Tony MARTIN Cyd CHARISSE

magnificent rooms from $12.00 double complete convention facilities for reservations CALL

BRadshaw 2-0421
MAdison 3-3102
CRestview 5-4889

Greetings to All Our Friends
ELI'S
STAGE RESTAURANT
AND DELICATESSEN
50 East Oak Street, Chicago, Illinois

Best Wishes
THE LIVING ROOM

RICKI DUNN IS A THIEF!

Dir.: Harry Greben, 203 N. Wabash Av. DEarborn 2-0996, Chicago, Illinois

Best Wishes to All Our Friends
MUTUAL ENTERTAINMENT AGENCY, INC.
CHICAGO—Esquire Bldg., 65 E. So. Water
BEVERLY HILLS, CALIFORNIA—410 S. Beverly Drive

After a Series of SMASH Coast to Coast Engagements, Another GREAT YEAR to you too...

Belle Barth

Currently (Since Dec. 21)

EDEN ROC

Miami Beach

Just Concluded 16 Weeks in 1963

THUNDERBIRD

Las Vegas

Returning for

THIRD ANNUAL ENGAGEMENT IN 1964

VARIETY
"—in her second engagement here she is selling out completely for her three week stand . . . Miss Barth reigned supreme . . smash biz with lines every night." Guy.

DAILY SUN, Miami
Paul M. Bruun
"—talk of the entertainment nation . . . couldn't praise Belle's drawing power enough a sure fire attraction."

N. Y. JOURNAL-AMERICAN
Nick Lapole
"Brought the heart of Miami to the heart of Manhattan . . . jammed to the doors . . . won over the audience in her first few moments on stage and never let it go."

Booked Exclusively by

ASSOCIATED BOOKING CORPORATION

JOE GLASER, President

50 WEST 57 STREET, NEW YORK 19 JU 2-7700

CHICAGO • MIAMI • BEVERLY HILLS • LAS VEGAS • DALLAS • LONDON

Always

THE SMARTEST SHOW

THE DANCIEST MUSIC and

THE FINEST FOOD

JULES PODELL'S

COPACABANA

10 EAST 60 STREET • NEW YORK

PL 8-0900

MAURICE SEYMOUR

OF CHICAGO

Internationally Famous Professional Photographer Wishes all our friends a happy new year

111 E. CHICAGO AVE.
DE 7-2250

WILBURN LOY

is the funniest 95 lb. weakling I know! He is able to leap off tall buildings in a single bound and rides out of town on a rail gracefully, says Bob Stane. (Manager of The Ice House, a theatre restaurant in Pasadena, Calif.).

WILBURN LOY

Comedian

Beat your favorite agent into submission. Circular available.
P.O. Box 1741, San Diego 12, Calif.

The Knickerbockers Al and Fred

"A Most Entertaining Musical Duo"

Piano - Bass - Combo Drums - Vibes
Accordion - Vocals & Comedy
3 solid years from Florida to Canada to West Coast
Bookers & Operators contact

AL SCHRADER

800 Colonial Gardens, Forty Fort, Penna.
Phone:
Kingston, Penna., 28-78691—Area 717

BILLY GLASON'S FUN-MASTER

PROFESSIONAL COMEDY MATERIAL

For every branch of theatricals
"WE SERVICE THE STARS!"
35 Gag files $15, plus $1 postage
FOREIGN: 35 for $30

- 3 Parody Books, per Bk. $10
- 5 Blackout Books 1-2-3 Each $25
  No. 4 for $35—No. 5 for $30
- Minstrel (white face) Budget $25
- "How to Master the Ceremonies" $3 PER COPY NO C.O.D.'s

BILLY GLASON

200 W. 54th St., N.Y.C. 10019 CO 5-1316
(We TEACH M.C.'ing and COMEDY)
(Let a real Professional train you)

IN CHICAGO... the place to stay is

SHERATON BLACKSTONE

Overlooking Chicago's beautiful Lake Front ...and just minutes from the "Loop" the Sheraton-Blackstone boasts the famous Cafe Bonaparte and other dining and cocktail lounges featuring the finest of menus. It's ideal for visiting businessmen with excellent meeting facilities for groups from 10 to 1000.

FOR RESERVATIONS:

IN NEW YORK—CHickering 4-0700 IN MIAMI—369-6454
IN BOSTON—HUbbard 2-2004 IN LOS ANGELES—DUnkirk 2-7171
IN WASHINGTON—COlumbia 5-2000 IN CHICAGO—HArrison 7-4300
IN PHILADELPHIA—LO 8-3300

SHERATON BLACKSTONE HOTEL
Michigan Avenue at Balbo

GEORGETTE TWAIN

QUEEN OF THE BANJO

Acclaimed as

"THE WORLD'S GREATEST FEMALE BANJO ARTIST"

•

Thanks Variety and All Agents for a Fabulous Year!

•

CONSISTENT SHOW STOPPER ANYWHERE!

•

Contact:

San Francisco Agencies

Phone: BEacon 2-4614

or write

5413 Hillside Rd.
El Cerrito, Calif.

RAT FINKS REJOICE YOU HAVE A NEW HOME

"Jackie Kannon's Rat Fink Room is an idea operation for a sophisticated New York . . . Kannon oozes personality . . . Throws barbs with disarming grin to ringsiders like Ray Bolger, David Susskind, Buddy Hackett, McGuire Sisters, Robert Young, etc. . . ."
—Bill Smith, Backstage

JACKIE KANNON'S RAT FINK ROOM

Atop The Roundtable
151 East 50th St., New York, N. Y.

HARVEY HOTEL from $3.50 DAY WEEKLY MONTHLY RATES

EXPERIENCED PROMOTER SEEKS FACIALLY BEAUTIFUL AND PHYSICALLY ATTRACTIVE YOUNG WOMAN FOR EXTENSIVE PROMOTION. Send pictures and complete info to: AMCO PICTURES, P.O. Box 4396, Chicago, Illinois.

BARRY ROSS

Singer — Pianist — Accordionist

Currently appearing:
Rolling Hills Country Club
Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.
Contact through Local 802.

A HOPPY 1964

From ROLF HARRIS

Re-opening March 16 at the

BLUE ANGEL, New York

Management: FRED HARRIS, 1270 6th Ave., N.Y., N.Y. CI 7-3025

BEST WISHES

LIBORIO RESTAURANT

Public Relations: MARVIN KOHN

Personal Management: ADAH LEWIS

HAPPY NEW YEAR

To All My Friends All Over the Country

PEARL WILLIAMS

A Special Thanks to

GARWOOD VAN and THE CASTAWAYS, LAS VEGAS where I just completed my second successful engagement within 4 months

★

My very best wishes to my manager

JOE GLAZER and ASSOCIATED BOOKING

★

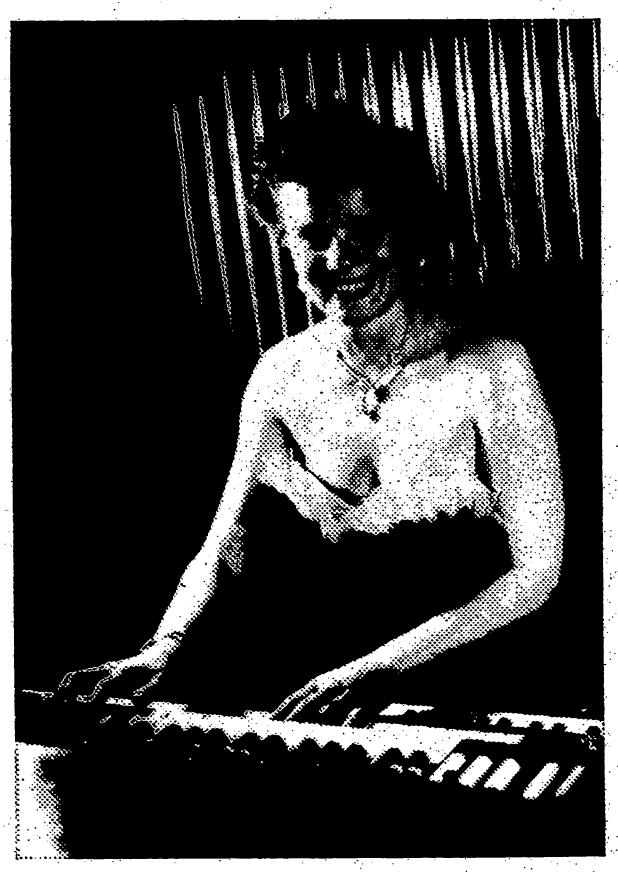
Thanks to MILT ROSS for my successful records,

"A TRIP AROUND THE WORLD IS NOT A CRUISE"

"SECOND TRIP AROUND THE WORLD"

"PEARL WILLIAMS AT LAS VEGAS"

"Music Hath Charms"



JOYCE "Tex" GENTRY

Currently Appearing at

THE FORD HOTEL

Toronto, Canada

●

GENTRY MUSIC PUB. CORP. LTD.
140 West 57th Street, New York 19, N.Y.
Circle 5-6565

The STAGE

★

DELICATESSEN and RESTAURANT

★

WE CATER TO "THOSE" OFFICE PARTIES AND ALL OTHER SOCIAL FUNCTIONS

834 SEVENTH AVE.
BET. 53rd & 54th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

Circle 5-7334

NOTHING BUT BELLYLAFFS!

Send for price list of skits, monologs, dialogs, gagfiles, etc., by one, if not the top, comedy writer in the business, Art Paul.
Or send $10 and get 10 parodies, 10 monologs, 10 skits, 10 dialogs and 5 gagfiles — worth thousands.

LAUGHS UNLIMITED
106 W. 45th St., New York City

THE DRUM DANCERS OF TAHITI

Pearls of the Pacific

A DYNAMIC Attraction with Universal Appeal

AUTHENTIC! CAPTIVATING! CLIMATIC!

Personal Management

AL DVORIN AGENCY, INC.

54 West Randolph St. Chicago, Illinois

Phone: FRanklin 2-4980

Vaughn MEADER

• Records

"HAVE SOME NUTS"
VERVE Album

• Night Clubs

Currently
BLUE ANGEL
New York

Feb. 17
DEAUVILLE HOTEL
Miami Beach

Feb. 22
OUTRIGGER INN
St. Petersburg

April 1st-12th
CRESCENDO
Hollywood

• Television

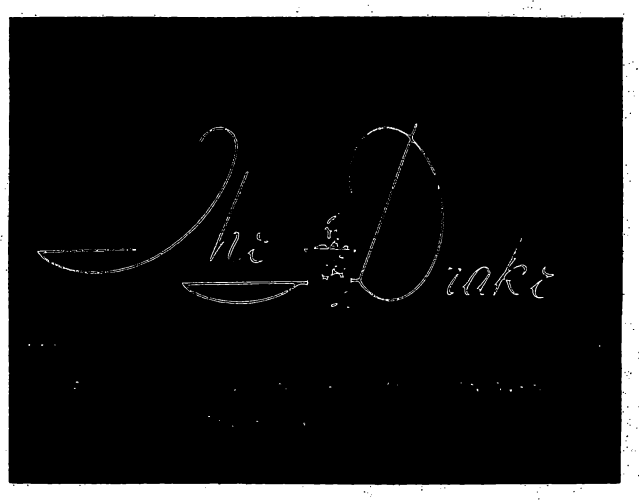
Week of FEB. 3rd
"To Tell The Truth"
CBS-TV

March 4th
"Hootenanny"
ABC-TV

GAC

BUDDY ALLEN MANAGEMENT, INC.
65 West 55 St., New York 19, N. Y.
LT 1-8988

Public Relations
GARY STEVENS ASSOC. (N.Y. and National)
(AL THAL)
HANSON-SCHWAM (Hollywood)



The Camellia House,

Where Smart Chicagoans Entertain

For a memorable evening of dancing and sophisticated entertainment : . . superb Drake cuisine . . . in a setting of elegance.

Conways on Circus

Continued from page 227

Nations Circus, sometime later in 1963, we found new generations of the Cristiani Family taking part in family acts. These Cristianis go back so far we'd have to check through volumes of circus history to confirm their beginnings. Now, on a small show, a boy of about 12 was working trampoline and a tiny tot somewhere between three and five was wearing a makeup and a costume almost identical to his father and appearing with a troupe of musical clowns.

Doc Bartok, a medicine show operator until a few years ago, last year had been in a partnership called Hoxie-Bardex Circus. In 1963, the partnership had been dissolved and two separate shows took to the road, Hoxie Bros. and United Nations. Unfortunately, they both chose to play a territory which was being booked by eight other shows. Both shows went home early and wiser.

Over on Clyde Beatty & Cole Bros. Combined Circus, you'll find a young lady named Karla (Wallenda) Jordan who, in her mid-20s, probably already has 20 years of high wire work behind her. Yes, she lost a cousin and a brother-in-law when the Wallendas fell in 1962. But that is past; Karla smiles slightly when she tells you that already her tiny daughter assumes a style and casually remarks, "Look, mama, I've an act of my own." Two of Karla's three children say they want to be performers, the third thinks he wants to work with circus concessions (novelties, cotton candy, etc.).

Hamid-Morton

Hamid-Morton Circus again featured Dime and Connie Wilson, a clown couple, and two of their daughters, Linda and Donna. All of the Wilsons are versatile and can do any number of circus routines.

One older daughter, Trudy, and her husband have a fine trapeze act with the Gil Gray Circus, another. Joanne, and her husband, are with one of the younger flying-trapeze acts now touring. By the way, this circus family goes back at least three generations for Dime's parents, Gil and Lil, were on the road in '63 with Hoxie Bros. doing clowning and presenting their dog act.

When Mills Bros. finally came within driving distance, they had behind them a month of strongly promoted, completely sponsored Hood Dairy dates in New England. The season had been a good one and everybody was happy. One night, during the performance, young John Zerbini inquired if we would be on the lot the following Sunday, a day off on Mills traditionally. He went on to explain that if we would be there he was inviting us to his wedding party.

Arranging for a wedding when you are with a traveling circus must really be a problem. There was a distance of many miles between the circus lot and the town of the wedding. So most of the circus performers drove four hours one way and, after the brief ceremony, turned right around and drove the four back.

Then the evenings' festivities began. Using materials available on the show, the performers constructed a complete barbecue outfit and under the big top roasted a whole lamb and a number of cuts of beef. A complete wedding supper was served at the huge U-shaped table and the wedding gifts were piled on a special table nearby. Oh, but it was a grand evening!

Another visit to Beatty-Cole directed our attention to a very talented tot, Rickie Gaona, who does exceedingly well as a member of the family tramoline act. Bouncing and bounding all over the place, little Rickie is well on his way to circus stardom at the tender age of four.

So, now we come to the end of another circus year, and yet it isn't an end for soon the weeks of the layoff, the weeks at home, will become the opening of a new season. The circus stars will continue to shine and new performers will be added to the rosters of circus greats. Vickie Unus,, John Zerbini, and all the rest are our assurance of a circus future for long years to come.

In All the World There's Only One

LINDY'S RESTAURANT

An American Institution

1655 BROADWAY at 51st STREET, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK CITY'S POPULAR

APOLLO

THEATRE

125th STREET

Direction: FRANK SCHIFFMAN

and His Son, BOB

HONI COLES, Production

CAL CLAUDE

Master of the Art of Balancing

Currently touring Japan and Hong Kong

For open time contact:

CAL CLAUDE, 5 Vail Court, Cambridge 39, Mass.

THANKS! HARRAH'S

In Reno, Lake Tahoe

FOR REPEAT ENGAGEMENTS IN BIG '64

All Associated Booking Corp. Offices

Mgt. TOMMY TATTLER, Studio No. 34

1716 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, LOcust 3-5121

RONNIE BARTLEY, and

The Gas House Six and REVUE Present

★ "A Complete Evening for You" ★

Dixieland Music Dancing

Singing Comedy

Just completed new Dixieland Album at United Recording Corporation

AVAILABLE FOR SELECTED ENGAGEMENTS

Exclusive Management: RONNIE BARTLEY PRODUCTIONS

P. O. Box 1204, Hollywood 28, Cal.

Best Wishes

THE BON SOIR

Best Wishes

TO THE ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY

THE BITTER END CAFE

Best Wishes

THE BLUE ANGEL

Congratulations

VARIETY

THANKS
TO AMERICA'S SMARTEST HOTELS
AND SUPPER CLUBS

MYRON COHEN

Press Relations:
JEANNE and JERRY SAGER

Management: BILL ROBBINS
Artists Corp. of America
1697 Broadway, New York, N. Y. 10019

Booking:
WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY

Notes For Harry Puck's Memoirs

Continued from page 227

answered, "This week I'm in New Haven and next week I'm in Bridgeport."

My sister Eva and I were two of the few if not the only kids to get by the Gerry Society by playing New York theatres under age. This was a very strict organization to keep children under 16 from working. We were 10 and 11 at the time and how we got away with it I'll never know.

Maybe it was the way Eva was coached when we appeared in court after being arrested, which was more than once. When the Judge said to her, "Tell me little girl, how old are you?" Eva, who had been told over and over that she was 16, gave out with what was then known as the first courtroom belly laugh when she said, "Your Honor, I'm 60 years old." She stuck to it and we got away with it.

Then take the matter of half-fare when traveling by train. Eva had a doll in her hand until she was 22 and I carried a rubberball until I was 25 in order for us to appear young enough to get by with half-fare.

They used to give numbers for your turn to rehearse your music. And Albee help the woman singer on the bill who was singing "Dark Town Strutters Ball"; if she didn't get to the theatre by 7 a.m. to get her rehearsal check in case someone else on the bill might also be singing that number.

The music business was something else again which has to do with some thoughts a few years later. Bert Kalmar and I were going to lend some dignity to the firm of Kalmar & Puck by wearing striped pants and charcoal gray cutaways. This didn't help our cause when, on our first appearance as songpluggers, we ran into "Minnie Glutz" at the Grand Opera House on West 25d Street. She was intrigued with our attire and welcomed us into her dressing-room but when she heard we were trying to interest her in our songs she threw up her hands and hollered "Songpluggers, get outta' here!"

Plugger's Work Never Done

Oh yes, about plugging songs. We started at 7 p.m. after a full day in the office by singing and playing in moving picture houses, then seeing acts in theatres, then cabarets until 3 a.m. One of our best pluggers left us; his excuse: he never had time to take a bath.

And oh yes, you think payola is new? We had it in 1913-14 in the music business. We bribed acts to sing our songs with a hundred photographs, or a set of music covers, or a special drop, or a new tux.

And the boys in the pit orchestra who would write personal messages on your music. Joe Blow playing a cornet in New Haven had a friend (Frank Blow) who played a clarinet in Hartford. So Joe would write a "love message" to Frank which might say, "This act stinks," or "How is your family Frank?" This writing got so out of control that by the end of the season there were no notes left on your music and all that appeared were personal messages. And this was long before "Dear Abby."

BEST WISHES TO VARIETY
from
THE EMBERS
Currently Appearing:
JONAH JONES

BEST WISHES TO
VARIETY
Currently Appearing:
DUKE ELLINGTON
AHMAD JAMAL
at BASIN ST. EAST

ROBERT CORP.'S THEATRE

Philadelphia.

Robert Theatre Corp. is to erect a new 1,400-seat pop house in the Parkwood Manor Shopping Center.

Structure will be colonial in design, in keeping with new homes in section, and construction begins in January with operation scheduled for summer. Robert Theatre chain, which operates in a number of shopping centers in area, will also make theatre available for civic gatherings, religious services and charity events.

MICHAEL KENT and HIS GOLDEN STRINGS
5 Years Continuously at the DESERT INN, Las Vegas
Opening February 15th, THE HONOBASHA CLUB, Tokyo

Freeport, Headliners' Home

Continued from page 228

before too many of us went out on the road for the season. The "Cruise" was a one-night entertainment in each of the larger Long Island towns on the water, such as Long Beach, Bayshore, Oyster Bay, Freeport, etc.—six towns in all. The seventh and last was one of the big theatres in New York City which closed the "Cruise" for the season. We played a complete vaudeville show picking from a long list of performers, volunteers who gave their services free. The proceeds went to the upkeep of the Lights Club and I wish I could remember all the well-known, as well as high-salaried, acts we had to choose from. People who were playing in New York or nearby came down by motor after their show to join us, so you never knew really just what big names you might get for the latter part of the bill.

Mitzi Green's father and mother (Joe Keno and Rosie Green) (this was in the late 20's, as I remember), and Mitzi was a tiny child. Joe wanted to show us her imitation of Moran & Mack, which she did with her father, and we got him to put it on after their act. Mitzi was a sensation. She has come far since then.

Fred Stone, whose family has lived in Freeport also, was always willing to give his services, and so was his friend, the late adored Will Rogers, when he was anywhere near. The Stone Bldg. in Freeport was Fred's father's where he was in business, and it is still in the Stone family. Of course, the famous "Stepping Stones"—Paula, Carol and Dorothy—were all prominent in New York theatricals. Helen Broderick of Crawford & Broderick, whose son, Brod Crawford, is well-known in pictures and tv. Lulu McConnell with whom many laughed in the radio show, "It Pays to Be Ignorant," was a beautiful woman, then teaming with her late husband, Grant Simpson. Vic and Emma Moore (Moore & Littlefield) in their act, which they played for so many years, were always available. Leo Beers, who was so handsome, gave us such a clever act at the piano with his song about the "Persian Pussy" which was truly a classic!

Each night after playing the various towns nearby, we took all our guest artists to the Lights Club for a get-together supper.

Laymen's Delight

A number of lay members were later taken into the Club, and they began bringing in their friends and weekend guests until it was impossible to get a table on Saturday night or Sunday. Nowhere in the city could they get a dinner and a show to compare with what they got here for $2 or $2.50 a piece. You must realize these shows were impromptu and would consist of half a dozen stars from various shows then playing in New York. You really saw an all-star show with a lot of the lesser acts ready to fill in for any disappointment. I really should not call them "lesser acts," as they were the old dependable "standbys." Many were much better than some of the big name stars.

We had a lot of fun, of course. I remember one very funny incident one Fourth of July when we were having diving and swimming races for the youngsters and giving prizes. Arthur Deagan was master of ceremonies, and he looked very natty in his smart blue serge suit and straw hat with a white carnation in his buttonhole. While he was announcing the events, he unwittingly stepped on the diving board as he was reading the announcement of the next swimming race. One of our best-known male comics, who was in a bathing suit and full of fun (and quite a little else) jumped on the board and Arthur shot up in the air and did a straight dive, feet first, he bounced up, straw hat and all, even his cigar still in his mouth, soaking wet, of course, and went right on reading the following event! My mother, who was visiting me from Atlanta at the time, just couldn't get over this. She never got over it! One minute you saw him, the next you didn't, and then to see him come up out of the water still immaculate and apparently unperturbed—even to the cigar!

Also Songwriters

All the music hit writers used to come down. The late Harry Von Tilzer, a resident here, was a familiar figure at the Club. Joe Howard, who lived in Baldwin, was another and many, many others.

Do you remember Buster Brown & Tige? Well, Tige lived in Freeport for years in the person of Gertrude Ali, and what a dog impersonator he was!

Williams & Wolfus had a home here, also Marion Davies' sister, Rene, who lived on Wilson Place which was later bought by Charles Freeman, former head of the RKO booking office, whose sister, Hattie, is the widow of the late Sime Silverman, founder of the theatrical paper known as VARIETY.

In late years I often saw Arthur McWaters whose act with his late wife, Grace (McWaters & Tyson) was a well-known name in vaudeville a generation ago. I recall Charlotte Mulvey of the Amoras Sisters who traveled all over the world with her family. Pat Rooney and Marion Bent were too well known to ever forget.

I hope I have been able to give you a little idea of some of the oldtimers that the older generation of Freeporters knew and welcomed as neighbors; who had much to do with the growth and progress of the village and who were also instrumental in bringing many of the present residents to our village and spreading the reputation of Freeport from one coast to the other as a haven to weary Thespians, tired of hotels, restaurants, trains. In short, just tired of traveling and seeking a home not too far from the centre of things theatrical, and with all the advantages, of which we have many (Chamber of Commerce, please note!). Where the actor can lay his weary head on his own pillow when he is tired of fishing, gardening, working or playing and living his own life as he sees it. Just being a common real person devoid of make believe and sham and chat over the fence with his next door neighbor, even as you and I—in short, I feel that we are happiest just being Freeporters.

MINGUS
for second consecutive year again selected by
TIME MAGAZINE
Among the Year's Best Recording Artists
For Info—Call, Write or Cable:
J. KUNST, 18 West 55th, New York 19
CI 6-1691

FRANZ BENTELER
Musical Director — Talent Coordinator
HOTEL CONTINENTAL—CHICAGO
Thanks DOUGLASS M. BOONE for the Six Wonderful Years I Have Just Completed at the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel.
Contact: RO 4-0080—Chicago, Illinois

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY VARIETY

LIDO

CHAMPS ELYSEES

PARIS

STARDUST HOTEL

LAS VEGAS

Will There Be Enough British Actors For Olivier, West End & Broadway?

By HAROLD MYERS

London.

In 1848 a London publisher made the bold suggestion that Britain deserved a National Theatre. Just 115 years later, to be precise on Oct. 22, 1963, the idea became a reality. For the moment using the Old Vic Theatre, the National Theatre, with Sir Laurence Olivier as director, is in orbit. In another four or five years it will move to a permanent site on the South Bank of the Thames. Meantime, a prestige company, almost unparalleled in its creative resources, is gaining valuable experience and has proved that there is a tremendous demand for quality and classy productions of the kind mainly out of the reach of the commercial managements.

While commercial showmen welcome a National Theatre, several independent managers have voiced misgivings. Between them, the National company and the Shakespeare theatre in Stratford and London have the cream of acting talent under contract, limiting the choice available for regular commercial production. With less talent available on the free market, some impresarios fear a danger of coming out on the wrong side in future casting.

This, however, was forseen, and forward-looking entrepreneurs like to believe that a National Theatre will stimulate added interest in drama, and thus benefit all.

Otherwise, the London scene remains largely unchanged. "The Mousetrap" is now in its 12th year at the St. Martin's Theatre, "Oliver" is still a big hit, and the Whitehall Theatre maintains its fabulous durability for its farcical presentations. "My Fair Lady" has finally departed the Drury Lane, only to be replaced by another American musical import, "The Boys From Syracuse."

New Elements

The last 12-14 months have, however, seen two significant developments, the opening of the Prince Charles Theatre, off Leicester Square, and the inauguration of the May Fair Theatre as an adjunct of the May Fair Hotel. The Prince Charles, which opened on Christmas week, 1962, has had an assortment of attractions, and a number of experimental programs, some of which have clicked and others have not. The May Fair, however, got off to a strong start with the importation of the off-Broadway production of Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author." It opened in midsummer with Sir Ralph Richardson as the lead, but has maintained a healthy b.o. pace ever since the star had to ankle the show for a film assignment.

The most remarkable feature of the past year, however, is the resilience of the British theatre and British playwrights. Just a few years back, the West End was dominated by a run of Broadway hits and, it is interesting to recall, British Actors' Equity was then squealing at the number of American artists appearing on the London stage. With the situation reversed and New York dominated by British hits, American Equity is also complaining.

But while the British invasion of New York seems to have made the bigger headlines, the fact remains that Broadway is still adequately represented along Shaftesbury Avenue and its environs. As one outstanding example, by the end of the year one distinguished American had three shows current in the West End. That person, of course, is Richard Rodgers, whose "No Strings" opened at the tailend of last year. Just a few weeks earlier "The Boys From Syracuse" (Rodgers and Hart) opened at the Drury Lane and "Sound of Music" (Rodgers and Hammerstein) has been a hotsy attraction for nearly three years.

The Broadway musical, of course, has a built-in attraction for British theatregoers, dating back for many years, and other current hit specimens are "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," and "A Funny Thing Happened On the Way to the Forum," both of which are standout b.o. hits. In the comedy field, there is the boff "Mary, Mary" and the farcical "Never Too Late." There was, however, one major Broadway musical failure in "On the Town," though it was widely agreed that this had been left on the shelf for too long. If it had come to London at about the time it was launched on Broadway it would surely have made as big an impact as other musicals of that decade.

London's equivalent of Off-Broadway, theatres such as the Mermaid in the City, the Theatre Royal in Stratford East, the Arts Theatre Club in the heart of the West End, the Royal Court in Sloane Square and, more recently, the Hampstead Theatre, have all played a vital role in stimulating public interest and providing an outlet for the offbeat vehicle that might be regarded as too chancy under normal conditions. Yet many such projects, launched away from the centre of town, have eventually landed up in the heart of the West End. In the past year, for example, the Mermaid has had an amazing run, and at one time had four of its originations in the West End. Even the more modest Hampstead venture had two transfers under Michael Codron's managements, while Joan Littlewood's Stratford company inaugurated the current Wyndham production of "Oh, What a Lovely War." The theatre has always thrived on such stimulation and it is to be regretted that other enterprising ventures in the suburbs and the provinces have had a hard time to keep their establishments open.

But while production costs in London continue to mount and the proportion of hits to failures invariably presents an adverse balance, the West End theatre is still a lively, going concern. All through the year there are productions on tryout waiting like vultures for a show to fold and the chance to move in. That, as the saying goes, is showbusiness.

Legit's Bargain Basement

By SIDNEY ROSE

The "window privilege ticket," more commonly known in its times as a "billboard ticket" is now an obsolete document, but it was once a highly negotiable piece of scrip. It denoted payment for the display of theatrical posters in shopkeepers' windows. These posters were the main agents of publicity—along with the big 3-sheet murals attached to random fenceboards and walls by the ubiquitous billsticker—in a period when the theatrical columns of the newspapers were confined to inconspicuous positions in the back pages. The posters have since become prized collectors' items but in their heyday were generally consigned to the ashbarrel when they had outlived their usefulness as heralds of the drama.

The payment aforesaid was in the early days, a pair of tickets weekly for seats in the gallery, but as the shopkeepers began to sense the value of the privilege, the theatre managers gracfully accepting the situation, began to issue orders on the lower regions and the rear rows of the orchestra were generally dedicated to "papers."

A traffic grew up under the new dispensation and the cigar vendors, barbers and saloonkeepers, who were its beneficiaries, began a little quiet trading in theatre tickets. Runners appeared among them to effect exchanges when there was an over- or undersupply. The pioneer figure to centralize this traffic, however, was one Herman Rapf whose cigar store on Houston St., in New York, became the Big Exchange of the "cutrate" theatre ticket.

Rapf occupier a strategic position between the cheap theatres of the Bowery—the Windsor, the Peoples, Harry Miner's, the Thalia—and the last relics of the Broadway theatre south of Madison Square, Niblo's, Harrigan & Hart's Theatre Comique, Tony Pastor's, the Star, the Union Square, the Academy of Music and the 14th Street. Rapf not alone catered to his own district but traded among the dealers in the new rialto on upper Broadway.

In the 1890s, however, the glory had departed from Houston St.—the Broadway theatre now extended as far north as 42d St. and the chief entrepreneur of the cutrate ticket was one Joe Leblang whose little cigarstore on Sixth Ave. and 29th St. became the centre of his operations. It was in the very heart of the Tenderloin, the Cairo dancehall was just around the corner, the venerable Haymarket a block above, and the mighty citadel of the 19th Precinct police on 30th St.

Leblang not alone had scouts raking the market but he himself pedalled through the town on a newly invented vehicle called a "safety bicycle" on the days when the advertising agents of the theatres "paid off." His energy was enormous, he scouted every nook and corner of his source of supplies and eventually had the cutrate theatre ticket "in the bag."

Went Over With a Leblang

The managers of precarious attractions in the playhouses were not unaware of Leblang's operations and soon a sort of cozy rapprochement developed between them and the up-and-coming ticket tycoon. Batches of unsold tickets after 7:30 p.m. appeared on Leblang's racks. Customers were cajoled to buy tickets for dubious dramas which had been damned by the press but which Leblang declared had been utterly maligned and were well worth the half price he demanded. And in many cases he was right. Many theatrical turkeys escaped the axe through Leblangs intercessions, and took to the road boasting of a New York run but omitting mention of the forced feeding.

A few years after the opening of the Interborough subway, Leblang found quarters in the Times Square Station — "King of the Scalpers."

Only cutrate dealers were "scalpers;" those selling at a premium were "speculators." He was now in the very vortex of theatre land. The movies were still silent and more or less regarded as juvenile entertainment. The patrons of the live drama had not seceded to a new heresy, and the devotees of the stage still vastly outnumbered those of the screen. Nightly, at the witching hour, the impecunious playgoers gathered in Leblang's bargain basement watching a kind of bulletin board on which the latest consignment from the boxoffice was announced. Sometimes it was from a hit show, weak-kneed toward curtain time, at which there was a scramble among the customers toward the counter. It was no longer a sub-rosa collusion between the seedy tobacco shop and the theatre boxoffice, but an acknowledged agency of the playhouse.

With the passing of Leblang, however, and the vicissitudes of a changing theatre, its bargain basement, under pressure of an increased rental, was forced to ascend to street level where it became a subsidiary of Gray's drugstore, and after a few years of dwindling patronage finally succumbed.

Perhaps this memoir of a departed institution might well close with a reference to its trailblazing pioneer. Herman Rapf lacked the dynamic drive of Joe Leblang, but was of a more genial disposition. His later years were devoted to ventures in real estate—the conversion of rural acreage into suburban building lots—which he pursued without conspicuous success. He had a passion for depreciated paper and on his demise his estate yielded a trunkful of handsomely engraved stock certificates of bankrupt corporations.

That's Show Biz Off-Broadway

By EDNA AMADON TONEY

He is breaking into show biz! He'll be making his debut
With a hefty batch of sketches written for a new revue
At a cafe situated roughly off-of-off-Broadway
Where the coffee could be coffier and they don't give any pay.
But who's complaining when he thinks of all the write-ups he will get
In the better publications like The Bleecker St. Gazette?

He only goes to one rehearsal. There is so much else to do:
First, phoning everyone he knows, then everyone he ever knew,
And contacting producers and agents who just might Take it into their pointy heads to catch the show some night.

Alas, poor Yorick! You didn't mind the store.
Where now you sit on opening night you shoulda stood before
And kept a wary eye upon whichever shifty wretches
Have slashed to one ten-second bit your hefty batch of sketches—
Replacing same with fun and mirth by Freddy Faraday,
The coming Noel Coward. Or so some people say.

Hail to the Bard on 400th Anni Of World's Greatest Dramatist

By WILLIAM HOULTON

Shakespeare's friend and fellow dramatist, Ben Jonson, in his prophetic posthumous tribute said of his beloved rival, "He was not of an age, but for all time." Jonson might have added that Shakespeare was "for all people." Translated into every written language his plays it has been said are performed "wherever the sun sets and curtains rise."

All the world will honor April 23, 1964 as the 400th birthday of its greatest dramatist, but the theatre festival to take place in Britain throughout Shakespeare Year is believed unlike anything previously attempted anywhere at any time.

The nationwide celebrations will include the presentation of seven historical plays spanning a century of the kingdom's history from Richard II to Richard III. They will be performed by the Royal Shakespeare Co. in Stratford-upon-Avon, the still-small Warwickshire country town where the poet-dramatist was born, went to school, did his courting of Anne Hathaway, married and raised his children, retired and is buried.

International Festival

Merging patriotism with prophecy, Jonson wrote in his Eulogy to the Author in the First Folio, "Triumph, my Britain, thou hast one to show to whom all scenes of Europe homage owe." And appropriately Shakespeare Year in Britain will include an international festival of drama to honor the master of the art. Appearing at London's Aldwych Theatre will be the Comedie Francaise; the Schiller Theatre, Berlin; Peppino de Filippo and his company from Naples; the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, with two Sean O'Casey classics; Teatr Wspolezesny, Warsaw; Technis Theatre, Athens; and the Moscow Arts Theatre. Audiences will have a rare chance to hear Moliere, Brecht, Aristophanes, Chekhov and Gogol performed in their native tongues; or listen through UN-type headphones to simultaneous English translation.

Aldwych and Old Vic

Shakespeare-Year theatre will commence at the Aldwych—the "London branch" of the Royal Shakespeare Theatre—with a production of Peter Hall's "War of the Roses" trilogy, the outstanding success of the 1963 Stratford season.

Hall's production of "Henry VI," "Edward IV" (parts 2 and 3 of Henry VI); and "Richard III" will be presented in morning, afternoon, and evening performances on opening day. Dame Peggy Ashcroft will act Margaret of Anjou in all three plays. "The Comedy of Errors" and "King Lear" will complete the Shakespeare repertory.

On March 17, the foreign companies begin their London run with the Comedie Francaise presentation of Moliere's comedy "Tartuffe."

The Aldwych will also be the scene of an experimental theatre program called "Theater of Cruelty," a series of contemporary productions featuring what the Shakespeare company call "way out" repertory.

On April 23, the birthdate of the bard, Sir Laurence Olivier opens in "Othello" in the part of The Moor at the Old Vic (temporary premises of Britain's new National Theatre).

At the Thames-side Mermaid Theatre, the stage will be reconstructed in the shape of Shakespeare's original Globe Theatre that stood nearby. Productions of "Macbeth," "The Tempest," and Elizabethan entertainments popular in Shakespeare's lifetime will be presented in May, June and July.

Many outdoor productions have been scheduled including "Henry V" in London's famed Regent's Park May 25-July 11; and "Two Gentlemen of Verona" July 13-August 15. "Taming of the Shrew" will be presented at the Fulham Open Air Theatre July 14, near the site of Queen Elizabeth's favorite palace where Shakespeare often acted; then repeated on July 18 at London's oldest inn, The George, at Southwark.

For Iconoclasts and Students

For theatergoers who feel uncomfortable about honoring a genius who only went through grammar school, the Shakespeare company and the Arts Council of Great Britain are presenting at least one play and a poetry reading ("Come live with me and be my love . . .") of works by No. 2 dramatist-poet of the Elizabethan era, Christopher Marlowe, B.A., M.A.—claimed by some to be the author of Shakespeare's works. Coincidentally, 1964 is also the 400th birthday of Marlowe.

Of importance and interest to students of the theatre—in all its dimensions—is the great Shakespeare Exhibition planned at a cost of half-a-million dollars for Stratford's riverside (April 23 to August 5), Edinburgh's Waverley Market (Aug. 18 to Oct. 5) and London's South Bank (from Oct. 26).

With the Queen as The Patron and a committee headed by the Prime Minister, the producers of the Exhibition will seek to faithfully illustrate the life and career of William Shakespeare against the backdrop of Elizabethan and Jacobean England.

Celebrated painters, stage and television designers and sculptors will evoke scenes of life in country and town, in court and university, in London street and on the Thames, and will reproduce the great Globe itself as a full-size theater. At the Globe voices of the most eminent living actors will be heard speaking passages from Shakespeare's plays, in a program arranged by George Rylands, the Cambridge Shakespearean scholar and producer. The players whose voices are being recorded are: Peggy Ashcroft, Alan Bates, Judi Dench, Edith Evans, John Gielgud, Richard Johnson, Peter McEnery, Laurence Olivier, Michael Redgrave, Vanessa Redgrave, Ralph Richardson, Paul Scofield, John Stride, Sybil Thorndike, Dorothy Tutin, Irene Worth, Donald Wolfit will be speaking an epilogue to the exhibition.

The Shakespeare Exhibition has been planned by the writer and critic, Richard Buckle, who directed the Diaghilev Exhibition in Edinburgh and London 1954-55 and the Epstein Exhibition in Edinburgh in 1961. Alan Tagg is to reconstruct the Globe Theatre, with lighting by Richard Pilbrow; and a vital contribution will be made by choreographer and director Jerome Robbins.

Jean Hugo (great-grandson of Victor Hugo, who wrote an essay on Shakespeare a century ago, and great-nephew of Francois-Victor Hugo, who translated the plays of Shakespeare into French) one of the foremost painters in France is

(Continued on page 270)

HAVE ACTORS, NEED CHURCH & $

A Daring Idea: Normal People

By PHILIP DUNNING

Once upon a time there was an actor out of work. This particular actor had the reputation of being a very good actor who had the misfortune of always appearing in very bad plays. You know the type perhaps?

When he first came East he went directly to Actors Equity and applied for membership. He proudly showed his scrapbook and told of his years of experience with various stock companies in the West. He informed them he was a descendant of the famous Spelvin family of thespians, that his name was George Bernard Spelvin. He was flabbergasted when told that another Equity member already had the name George Bernard Spelvin and since only one member was allowed to use the same name it would be necessary for him to change his.

The initials G.B.S. were on his baggage and some of his other belongings so he decided to change his name to fit his initials. Our hero had fooled around for years with the idea of becoming a playwright, so he decided to change his name to Shawling, figuring the George Bernard Shawling monicker might come in helpful. He joined The Footlight Club and made many friends. They were always sympathetic during his string of 10 flops in a row that netted him only 14 weeks work in two years. Some of his friends left the business and advised him to do the same. So of course he began writing a play. Five years later, he completed typing the script. That was the beginning of the suggestions incorporated into new versions. He wrote 11 versions without ever getting a nibble. But he remained an optimist.

Soon he had the distinction of being out of work longer than any other actor in his club. They even talked about giving a "pipe night" in his honor.

Secretly he now worked the night shift in a lunchroom on 10th Ave. This enabled him to keep up a good appearance and have meals at the Club a couple of days a week. With this routine he was able to keep in touch with what was going on.

Built-In Central Casting

One day, while sitting around the Club after lunch, he had a sensational new idea. He would rewrite his play on completely radical lines. He would delete all profanity, all innuendo of perversion. He would be deaf to the advice of producers and angels that the more loathsome the characters the more certain the hit. He would de-louse his script and even reduce its title from 14 words and two modifying clauses to a simple, oldfashioned three word title: "Tall and Handsome."

He now proposed to try out this daring notion of a play without a trace of Psycopathia Sexualis in the Footlight Club's own theatre on the top floor.

Everyone was leery of club tryouts because they had turned out so disastrously in the past. He had to give up being choosey and finally passed the scripts around to anyone who would read it. All had excuses. Actor-like then had a superstitious dread that G.B.S. luck might rub off on them. In his desperate attempt to line up a cast he would lay in wait at the front door and pounce upon any likely looking personality. One day he buttonholed a fellow he thought would be just the type for one of the parts only to discover that he wasn't an actor but a bill collector.

G.B.S. become the brunt of a lot of corny casting jokes and some of his friends avoided him. One day he was sitting alone at a corner table trying to figure out his next move. The president of the club—who also was a fine stage director—sat down beside him and said, "I think it's got a chance. Let us cast it for a taped reading, then if it listens good it will be easier to line up a cast for a regular tryout." G.B.S. threw his arms around the President and kissed him on the forehead. He thought this was a wonderful idea. It would give him an opportunity to listen to the playback to see if more work on the script was needed.

Vidtape To The Rescue

During the next 24 hours things hummed at the club. A taping machine was set up in the club theatre, a fine cast was selected for the reading, with G.B.S. in the star part. The reading was a huge success. It changed the course of nearly everyone's life who belonged to the club. The tape was played-back several times, giving members an opportunity to hear it. A group of veteran managers and pressagents, who had been spending all their time in the cardroom came out of retirement and joined together in the formation of Tall & Handsome Productions. They paid George Bernard Shawling an advance and signed a Dramatists Guild contract. Shares per sold at $10 per to members of the club.

An excellent cast was engaged, the play was tried out in the club theatre for a week's run and later was produced at a Broadway theatre. It was acclaimed by one and all as one of the greatest smasheroos the town had ever seen. Within two months there were six "Tall and Handsome" road companies playing the principal cities in the United States. Four motion picture companies bid astronomical figures for screen rights.

There were 188 members of the Footlight Club on the Tall & Handsome Productions pay roll; actors, managers, stage managers, pressagents, etc., and the remaining members of the club each owned at least a few shares.

Since the whole situation is completely improbable it is possible to report, in the same spirit, that "Tall and Handsome" had a longer and more profitable run than "My Fair Lady." It made everyone connected with the enterprise independently wealthy for life.

Thus ends the tall tale of an actor-playwright who had a lot of tough breaks but was unable to quit because he had show business in his blood and he couldn't do a thing about it.

'Stop World' Ended Tour Last Week

"Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" ended its road run last Saturday (4) at the completion of a three-day stand at the Brown Theatre, Louisville. The touring production was a big moneymaker as evidenced by a Nov. 23 audit, which reveals an operating profit of $61,739 for the four weeks ending that date. That covered two weeks at the National Theatre, Washington, and two weeks at the Shubert Theatre, Boston.

"World" began touring last March, first with Joel Gray and Julie Newmar as leads and more recently with Kenneth Nelson and Lesley Stewart in the key roles. Grey is currently appearing in the British import on Broadway, having replaced Anthony Newley, who was repeating the role he originated in London. Anna Quayle, who made the West End-to-Broadway shift with Newley, withdrew from the Main Stem offering when he did. Her role was taken over by Joan Eastman.

The tuner, written by Newley and Leslie Bricusse, is currently in its 67th week on Broadway. It's at the Ambassador Theatre, N.Y., and is one of the Main Stem entries with two-for-one discount tickets in circulation. The Broadway production may be sent out on the road to pick up such time as a four-week date which had been scheduled for the touring edition at the Royal, Alexandra, Toronto, starting in February.

BISHOP'S CO. TOURS 4 UNITS

By ROBERT B. FREDERICK

Los Angeles.

California, which has never been famous for its contributions to the American theatre, has one of the nation's more unusual theatrical enterprises—The Bishop's Company. Formed in 1952, it continually sends companies of professional actors, with a repertory of seven or eight plays, all over the 50 United States—to hospitals, penal institutions, military installations, and to educational institutions of every level, from intermediate through college—but mostly to Protestant Churches.

The "bite" for the services is $150 a night! An amount within the budget of almost any group hungry for theatre. In this manner, troupe makes a considerable contribution to the American theatrical picture and, yet, has remained virtually unknown in professional circles.

Eight individuals of different race and religion but with the common bond of being actors started Company in 1952 under the leadership of Phyllis Beardsley Bokar. Today, six of the eight are still members of the group, now totaling 29, who make up four units plus administrative staff.

These actors do not consider themselves "chancel" players in the literal sense as performances are given wherever an audience can be gathered. When a church is their theatre, the entire chancel area is used. There are no sets, only a few props, simplified costumes, and dependence on the unit's portable banks of lights for any atmospheric changes.

The presiding minister is always asked to participate and the drama becomes part of an evening of worship. The thespians, however, admit that they act anywhere. It may be the initial national drama-in-the-church company. Its name derives from a Methodist Bishop, Gerald H. Kennedy. Corporate by it's "Drama-In-The-Church Inc."

According to Mrs. Bokar, founder and still producer, we never take a date without the approval of the particular minister even if, as sometimes happens, the booking was made by higher authority. Some years ago we did that, with an unfortunate incident. One minister, who disliked all actors, would not refuse us his church as the date had been set by diocesan headquarters, but he went on the local radio station and told his parishioners not to come to see us. Ministers are actually our best advertisement and our best booking agents.

Started Cold

That first tour was a journey into uncertainty. The troupe had been told to acquire an advance man but were so green themselves they weren't too sure what his duties were supposed to be, other than to fill in some of the open dates. Arriving in Albuquerque, they found a message from him that he had returned to L.A., having made no arrangements for their board and lodging, no future bookings, and done nothing in the way of publicity. That night company played to eight adults and a child.

For six weeks they played it by ear, finally arriving in Evanston at the conference dead beat and discouraged. This was immediately forgotten when, after their first performance, ministers stood in line to book them for the rest of the tour, a trek which took them all the way to the Atlantic and home again.

Economics

The Company now asks a guarantee of $150 for a performance, suggesting that the next $50 of any money go to the church or sponsoring group, with a 50/50 split over $200. As it is a nonprofit corporation, gifts and donations are tax deductible. They also ask that evening meal, bed and breakfast for the cast, with maximum of eight, be provided.

Although the Company now can provide busses that could seat a large group, it purposely keeps the number to no more than eight.

(Continued on page 274)

Passionate Playing

By ROBERT DOWNING

Every few years, at the request of practically no one, I have peered down Memory Lane for suitable recollections of my youthful yesterdays in smalltime show biz in the hope that some of my errant experiences might amuse Anniversary Issue readers.

Having revealed in an earlier issue my misspent seasons with a rural "Tom" show in Iowa in the 1930s (I played St. Clair, doubled a slave at auction, and bayed in the wings to simulate a bloodhound in full cry after Eliza), it occurs to me that possibly to set straight the records of the Great Legit, I should report something of my gypsy tour as a lad of 21 with the great European "Passion Play."

Everyone knows that Oberammergau has its "Passion Play." Some people have heard that Freiburg (Bavaria) gives the original troupe a bit of competition with a No. 2 show. A few Bible buffs may recall that Morris Gest brought the Freiburg company to the New York Hippodrome in the late 1920s. Almost no one will remember that the German business manager of that attraction translated the text into lugubrious English, cast himself in the role of Judas (he had a beguiling Weber & Fields accent), and took his show on the road.

After a year of playing juvenile leads aboard Chicago's "Showboat Dixiana" (1934-5), I was tired of playing blue-shirt stalwarts and sought a more demanding assignment. Also, I was canned by the showboat's ungrateful manager for kidding around in the big fight scene of "While the City Sleeps." Luckily, I was offered the role of Pontius Pilate (the original "what is Truth?" boy), for the West Coast tour of the above-mentioned bratwurst translation of the Freiburg "Passion Play."

I joined in San Bernardino, and soon learned what was expected of a Passion Player. Not much playing and no passion! We were booked under the auspices of various ministerial associations on a murderous guarantee that favored our Judas-boss, naturally.

We rambled around the Coast in a caravan of vehicles consisting of one Cadillac sedan, one roadster, one stationwagon, and a truck full of scenery and costumes. The wardrobe was magnificent, and came from Freiburg. The scenery was awful, and could be put up either indoors in schoolhouses, Mormon tabernacles, or opera houses; or rigged in open-air amphitheatres or college stadiums.

The Rains Came

We played a lot of outdoor dates. I remember in Fresno, where we played the college athletic field, that we tried to get through the show one night before a threatening rainstorm broke. We railroaded the Gethsemane scene, and got to the finale with admirable alacrity. As usual, our extras were recruited from local talent. In this instance, the two "thieves" hired for the Crucifixion scene were Fresno college boys.

We almost had the rain beat that night, but just as Jesus was about to hit the tag line, the rains came. The minute the first drops hit our two thieves on their bare chests, they unhitched themselves from their crosses of shame, shinnied to the ground and ran for the dressing tents. It was a good thing we were in Chico the next day. The front-page story in the Fresno Bee was devastating.

One of the penalties of outdoor dates was the agony suffered by the actor playing Jesus. I don't mean his discomfort in being nailed to the cross. I mean mosquitoes. We took turns smearing the poor fellow with citronella, but even so, he finished most of the al fresco performances covered with lumps.

We were stranded several times during the season while our Teutonic manager went ahead to grab more bookings. Once, we were stuck for 10 days in Salinas, Calif., where we got so hungry we ate up the Cadillac (or its equivalent in restaurant bills) before the boss got back.

Finally, Judas ditched us for good in Aberdeen, Wash. (one of the real jumping-off places of the Far West). Judas went back to Germany on a Japanese freighter to rejoin his old friend Hermann Goering in the Nazi regime (he even looked like Fatso).

Of course, our company was non-Equity. My salary was $35 a week. In the northwest, we were paid in silver dollars. This was very hard on weak pockets in old suits, and once I lost half a week's pay when a pocket gave out on the poopdeck of a ferryboat between Seattle and Bremerton.

Nobody ever laughed at our rotten performances. Audiences sat out front in a state of pious fixation. Sometimes, it made us ashamed of the fakery we purveyed, particularly with a subject so sacred to so many people. I never ceased to be astonished at the praise heaped upon our worldly employer by the gentlemen of the cloth who never seemed to grasp the underlying fraud of the enterprise.

Real 'Wooden' Indians

No audience ever demanded more of us than a theatre full of American Indians at some little town in the Columbia River Valley. They simply wouldn't react. They sat there, staring at the stage like—I was going to say—like a lot of wooden Indians. However, when Jesus was nailed to the cross, the Indians commenced a chorus of excited grunts. They just couldn't believe it. Later, their head man brought some of his warriors backstage to inspect the hands and feet of the actor who played Jesus. Finding no blood, no scars, the Indians departed, shaking their heads, sulking, and muttering unhappily among themselves. I was glad we hightailed it out of town that night for Yakima with our scalps intact.

When we awoke to the fact that we had been marooned in Aberdeen, I hitch-hiked to Hollywood (a far piece), and spent three horrible years before the Lunts came along and gave me an audition that eventually brought me to New York.

Next year: Life Aboard a Showboat; or, Fecund Facts Ferber Failed To Fathom!

'Shade' Has Made Back 27% of Nut

"110 in the Shade," currently in its 12th week at the Broadhurst Theatre, N. Y., is figured to have thus far recovered over 27% of its $300,000 investment. As of a Nov. 23 accounting, unrecouped costs had been cut to $264,680. It's estimated that income earned since then by the musical has reduced that figure to under the $220,000 mark.

The David Merrick presentation, which cost $283,586 to produce, can clear over $11,000 weekly on capacity business at the Broadhurst. The SRO potential at the house is around $58,000, but theatre party commissions have been keeping the take on sellout stanzas below that figure. The production costs, plus $33,500 for special advertising, represented a combined outlay of $317,086. That amount was reduced by an overall out-of-town tryout profit of $7,568 which brought the tab on opening the show in New York to $309,518.

The operating profit for the first five weeks on Broadway, through Nov. 23, was $41,839. Other revenue for that period comprised $2,500 income from music rights and $500 orchestrations recovered. Robert Horton and Inga Swenson costar in the musical version of N. Richard Nash's play, "The Rainmaker," for which Nash wrote the book, Harvey Schmidt the music and Tom Jones the lyrics.

Here Comes The Showboat! Its Calliope Lingers On

By CAP'N BILLY BRYANT

Point Pleasant, West Va.

When the late Oliver Bailey, who operated the Republic Theatre during the long Broadway run of "Abie's Irish Rose" once told me that the legitimate theatre was on its way out, I replied, "Maybe so Mr. Bailey, but as long as there are seats to sit in there will be entertainment."

Cap'n Billy Bryant

These words came back vividly again as I recently stood on the wharf at St. Louis watching a group of painters, carpenters and electricians putting the finishing touches to the auditorium on the Goldenrod Showboat of which two-thirds was recently destroyed by fire.

When the fire was first discovered at three o'clock in the morning, 84-year-old Cap'n Bill Menke, skipper of the Goldenrod, quickly aroused the actors and crew and, in their night clothes, led them from the burning boat and out on the river bank to safety. Their wardrobe, musical instruments, scripts and personal belongings were all destroyed by fire and as Cap'n Bill sat on the river bank wrapped in a blanket watching his beloved showboat go up in smoke he whispered feebly, "I'll build her up again. I can't take the showboat with me but I can't take my money with me either."

The people of St. Louis were quick to respond to these stranded showboaters. They sent them blankets, clothing and food. Some of the Civic Clubs donated in cash as much as $600. Cap'n Bill Menke has kept his word and once again the Goldenrod Showboat, in all its magical splendor, is anchored at the foot of Locust St. making ready to open another season in that city.

The Goldenrod is the largest and finest showboat afloat. It seats 1,200, has a large stage equipped with spotlights and special sets, an orchestra pit, the main floor, a horseshoe balcony and loges with brass rails and as it lies tugging at its hawsers with the muddy Mississippi breaking around its bow, it resembles a huge white swan.

The Goldenrod, on its way down the Mississippi on a tour of one-night stands, originally landed at St. Louis for one performance and has been there for 23 years. "How did they do it?" the people asked. "What is the secret of the drawing power of a showboat in the c ities and the smaller towns?" "When will they tire of it?" That's just like asking. "When will they tire of fishing, county fairs, hillbillies, square-dancing and baseball?"

There's an unexplainable charm about visiting a showboat. When one goes aboard the Goldenrod the first thing that greets him is a large open deck on the front end with lounging chairs and benches. Here the people gather early in the evening to watch the passing towboats, excursion boats and racing outboard motors. By the time the overture starts there are no strangers in the boat. Just one big family.

The audience sits through "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" or "East Lynne" eating popcorn and drinking soft drinks. Nothing stronger is served. Some of them are fully relaxed and deeply absorbed in the melodrama while others are hissing the villain and cheering the hero on to victory. If the waves of a passing steamboat rocks the Goldenrod, causing it to twist and squeak, some woman in the audience may scream but they will go on with the show just the same.

Candy Pitch Climaxes All

The prize candy pitch is the big moment of the evening. If some shy timid old lady comes down the aisle with a lucky number and hands it to the salesman, instead of giving her an Indian blanket or a Kewpie doll, he asks her which she would want, a quart of milk or a pint of whisky. The audience screams "take the whisky!" but she invariably takes the milk. Any number of stars and celebrities have spent many enjoyable hours on the boat such as Red Skelton, Gregory Peck, Monte Blue, the late Gertrude Lawrence and George M. Cohan.

After the performance the people file out on the front deck where the actors join them for a get-together and autographs. They sing all the oldfashioned songs as they watch the blinking lights on the old East Bridge and a full moon turns the Mississippi into a stream of bright running silver. At the unbelievable prices of 75c for reserved seats and $1 for loges, a boy and his girl can live it up on popcorn and coke for two bucks.

Conventions and private parties

(Continued on page 274)

'Loves Me' Still $252,441 in Red

"She Loves Me," now in its 38th week at the O'Neill Theatre, N. Y., had cut its deficit to $252,441 as of last Nov. 30. The financial condition of the musical, which has thus far repaid its backers 10% of their $300.000 investment, isn't figured to have improved since then. Gross receipts during the last four weeks indicate an overall operating loss for the period.

However, it's difficult to estimate what amount, if any, was dropped over the four frames, as the production has been instituting royalty adjustments for the purpose of breaking even or keeping losses down to a minimum when weekly business warrants. An audit, dated Nov. 30, reveals that for the show's 32 weeks of Broadway activity ending that date, the total income was $42,736. That included, besides operating profit, $2.000 water damage insurance and $1,093 souvenir book revenue.

Weekly grosses for the period from Oct. 28-Nov. 30 ranged from $26,730 to $42,433. An operating profit of $4,649 was cleared on the latter figure. The $26,730 represented a seven-performance take and a royalty arjustment of $2,873 reduced the operating loss on the stanza to $757. The musical, produced by Harold Prince, in association with Lawrence Kasha and Philip McKenna, cost $295,177 to open in New York. That included a four-week out-of-town tryout loss of $50,192.

Barbara Cook, Daniel Massey and Barbara Baxley costar in the tuner, based on the Miklos Laszlo play, "Parfumerie."

'Deputy' Gets Generally Good Reviews in Paris; Audience Erupts Again

Paris.

Disturbances at the performances of the controversial Rolf Hachhuth play, "The Deputy" ("Le Vicaire"), had abated somewhat and two complete shows given without incident until eruptions broke out anew. Auditors jumped onstage even to assault the cast. A special matinee was held for critics to insure a lack of disorder as well as due to the SRO sales of ducats.

Reviews were mixed, but generally favorable and this much discussed play appears to be a hit here. The most influential daily, Le Figaro, said the play gives all aspects of the allegation that the late Pope Pius XII failed to make sufficient protest at the massacre of the Jews by the Nazis.

The paper's critic thought first part, showing Nazi carrying out the infamous project, was ardent and done with a dignified, eloquent simplicity, that had scenes of spectacular effectiveness without vulgarity. He was somewhat against the scenes showing the Pope, since the author gave all the advantages to those opposed to the Pope's reasoning for his silence. The settings and costumes by Peter Brook and the direction of Francois Darbon were praised, as well as the acting.

The staid Le Monde thought the treatment of the problem was not caricature, unwarranted or premature. The critic approved Jorge Semprun's adaptation, which he found a summing up of the Nuremberg Trials. He felt that it transcends its theme to become a universal tragedy.

Congressman Asks Tax Probe of 'Ice' on B'way

Washington.

Rep. Robert Giamo has called on the Internal Revenue Service to investigate the "ice" men uncovered in the New York probe of theatre operations. The Connecticut Democrat told the House that IRS and other Federal law enforcement activities should "act without delay."

"If tax money has been kept from the government, I want to know of it," he said. He added that the probe by state Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz has shown that the Broadway stage "has become the prey of adventurers, opportunists and charlatans of the worst description."

The Representative declared that Government efforts to encourage the theatre will go for naught unless the type of activity disclosed in Gotham "is immediately stopped."

Theatrical Bird-Watching

By WERNER HAAS

I have seen on or near Broadway in New York, and on or near Sepulveda in Hollywood these specimens:

STICKY-FINGERED BOXOFFICE THRUSH — usually an old bird, easily recognized by his perpetual frown, gruff voice, and his uncanny ability to flutter about in a theatre boxoffice and rest his fingers on extreme side seats.

CASTING COUCH LOON — also known as the "fool bird" for he rushes in where angels have feared to tread.

SIMPERING STARLET SWALLOW — a flighty bird, with lovely plumage with the parakeet-like capacity to speak. Easily house-broken, but usually impossible to teach to say anything clearly. These birds moult early, sometimes mate with Texas Millionaire Tanagers, a polygamous wastrel bird that is glutton for punishment, thrives on oil wells alimony payments.

UNDERSTUDY WARBLER — a talented singer who is seldom heard, well-known for her healthy condition, second only to the star canary, who never gets sick, old, or tired.

POT-BELLIED STAGEHAND GROUSE — oldest of all living birds, who will never become extinct as long as he has relatives. Occasionally moves or pushes scenery, but is most often found backstage in theatres assuming pinochle posture, cigar clamped in beak.

HUMMING BIRD — a young perporming warbler who hasn't learned the lyrics.

CULTURE VULTURE — usually a blue-tinted old crow deserted by her young, flutters around young male starlings, or roosts in avant-garde theatres, concert halls, and poetry recitals. Easily recognized by scads of jewelry and pearls and an entourage of scavengers for whom she carries a full purse.

TRUMPETER CRITIC SWAN — usually beautiful to look at, but making horrible noises.

LITTLE REVIEW TRUMPETER CYGNET — makes more horrible noises than the critic swan, and is horrible to look at, too.

Kopit Kapital, Kast Kaput

Vienna.

At the Atelier theatre here on Dec. 28 the American play with the long title was paraphrased with Viennese quippery as "Oh, Dad, Oh Dad, Kopit Has Hung Him In the Closet, but The Staging Is So Bad." Despite which humor, the play seems to have intrigued critics and public alike here in Sigmund Freud's old medical haunts.

"Born of psychiatry, made into an audience's enjoyment", was one critical comment. But the natives here managed to balance relish of the work with pans of the cast. Erika Zihn looked the part but didn't have nuance. Petero Matic reminded the Viennesse of Herr Professor in a high school. And so on.

Attention, Please, Spelling Class

By BERNARD SIMON

Funny thing! How is it that VARIETY, which does it right, hasn't noticed and criticized the fact that the N. Y. Times has begun to do it wrong? I'm talking about spelling the word "theatre."

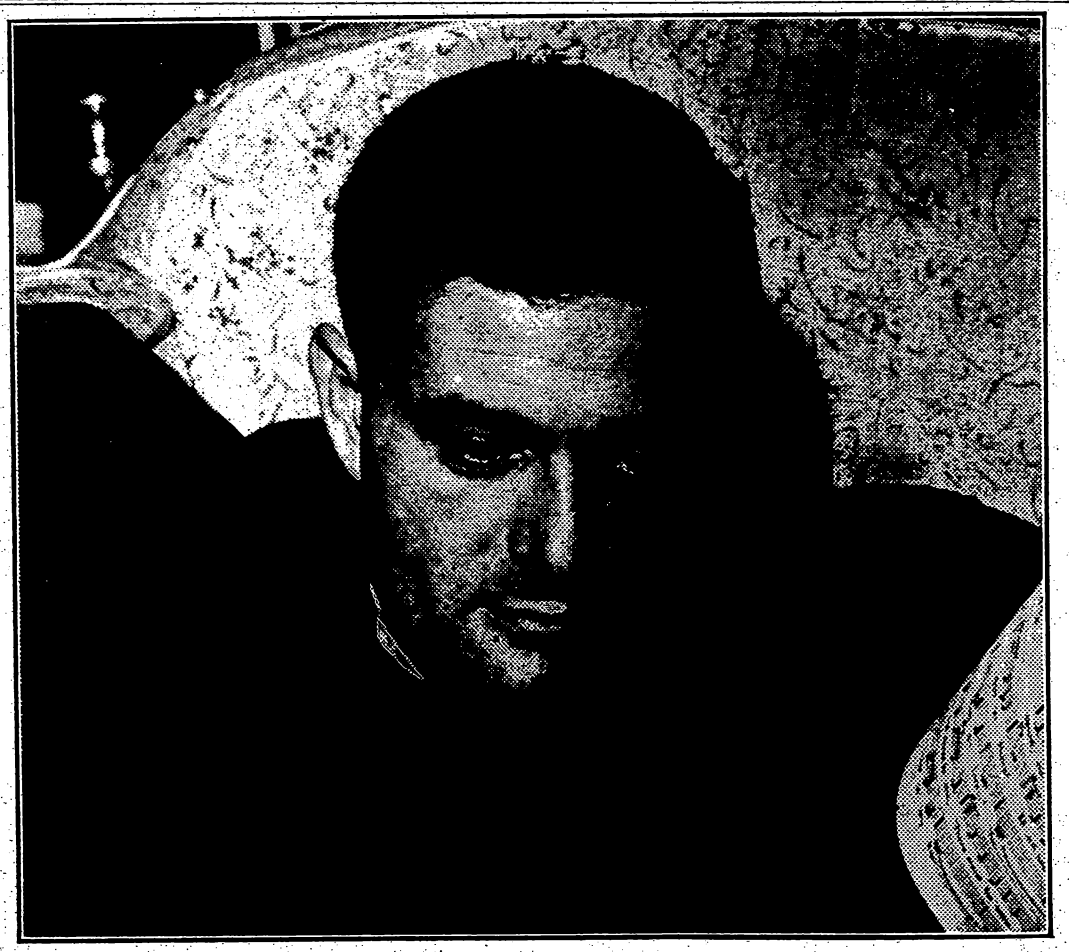
The files of the Times would show that for at least the 40 years up to the fall of 1962, it spelled theatre in this theatrically accepted way. Then suddenly, in October of last year, the Times decided to go along with the Herald-Tribune, Time mag, Show and a few others and spell it with an "er" ending.

When I noticed this last year I wrote a letter to the Times to ask why this sudden style change had been made. I received a reply stating that it was because H. W. Fowler, in his "Dictionary of English Usage" ("British Usage" would be a more accurate title) had proclaimed that, though "theatre" is the correct spelling in Great Britain, the -er ending is general American usage.

Said he—with what I felt to be a touch of British condescension toward the barbarous Americans. (And how come the Times had suddenly decided to obey Fowler's directive to Americans, that was first published in 1926?)

But I contend that Fowler was and is wrong. It is true that most American dictionaries now spell it with -er—Fowler's influence? But what is the preponderant theatrical usage in the U. S. A.? It's just as civilized as the English, by gar!

People in the theatre, amateur and professional, almost overwhelmingly spell it -re. VARIETY does, and so do the marquees of every playhouse I've ever seen, such publications as the New Yorker, Theatre Arts, Equity mag, Educational Theatre Journal (bible of the learned drama professors), Tulane Drama Review, Catholic Theatre, Players Magazine, Encore Magazine, Simon's Directory of Theatrical Materials, Services & Information, the catalogs of Samuel French, Dramatists Play Service, Tams-Witmark, Dramatic Publishing Co., Theatre Production Service, Package Publicity Service, the big lighting houses like Kliegl, Century, Grand Stage Lighting, and all the costume houses.



JERRY HERMAN

Ruth Etting's Break

In 1930, Larry Hart and I were in Boston with a show called "Simple Simon" which we had written for Flo Ziegfeld. Ziegfeld asked us to write a song for a girl in the show and it had to be done in a hurry because we were closing at the Colonial within a few days, prepartory to the New York opening at the Ziegfeld Theatre. We wrote the new number in no more than 45 minutes at the Ritz Hotel, played it for Ziegfeld and we taught it to the girl.

The night she did the song for the first time Ziegfeld and I sat together in the second or third row waiting anxiously to see how the audience would accept the number. To our horror the girl came out on the stage blind drunk and not only didn't know the words or the music but could barely stand up. Ziegfeld fired her immediately and engaged in her place an up-and-coming singer named Ruth Etting.

The show opened in New York and the song went extraordinarily well. Two weeks later I left on my honeymoon and after traveling through Italy and France went to a party in London where I discovered that Ruth Etting's recording of the song had become an enormous success and that Larry and I had a big hit on our hands. The song was called "Ten Cents A Dance."

Crazy business, isn't it? Richard Rodgers.

Contralto Wise To Adhere to Natural Notes & Morals

By JEAN MADEIRA
(Metropolitan Opera)

"Isn't it hard being a contralto, when most opera heroines are sopranos?" This is a question often tossed at me by sweetly smiling women.

Jean Madeira

I smile, too, when I tell them: "It's not hard—it's fun. It feels good to be bad, and most contralto roles are."

The women are right of course about operatic and operetta heroines. For some reason, composers seem to think that high range donates high morals. In musical comedy, it's the same: the nice girl, who wins the handsome hero, is usually a high-E ingenue.

But as Carmen, there's high excitement in going after the man I want despite the sweetheart's soaring solfeggios from back home. The role of ruthless woman is one I wouldn't dare play in real life, and onstage I'm applauded for it.

Even when we low-ranged villainesses in opera, operetta or comedy are not cast in the title role, the plot usually pivots on our low deeds. In Strauss' "Elektra," the role of Klytaemnestra gives me unforgettable evenings of being made up to look beautiful and paid up to be bad. My only regret about this opera is that it's given so seldom here, I always have to wait for my summer European tours to sing of this murderess' loves, lusts, terrors and remorse which have retained fame through 23 centuries and two civilizations.

Seriously, no singer should despair of her low range and try to push it up to mezzo. I've learned from my own experience at the Metropolitan Opera and on concert and opera stages in Germany, Austria, France, Spain and Peru, as well as on tv in this country, that audiences respond not to note range, but to the artistry with which the music is produced. And in general a contralto's roles have far wider dramatic range and impact than the soprano's sweet avowals.

In either popular or classical music—as soloist or in a theatrical production — the singer who yields to the temptation of pushing a contralto up to mezzo, or a mezzo up to dramatic soprano, is like the comedian who always wants to play "Hamlet." This is particularly true today.

When a composer writes music for a certain voice range, he has in mind not only the capability of the singer to "reach" the higher tones, but mainly the quality of the sound of that voice register. The singer who reaches for too high a range robs her voice of its richest qualities — sheen, lustre, and tonal beauty.

Whether you are a contralto or a baritone or a bass, remember that "doin' what comes naturally" is the way.

Lee Shubert Tax Suit Spotlights Falloff Of Legit Since 'Syndicate'

By ABEL GREEN

Statistics on the diminution of the American "live" theatre show in the Government's $15,705,387 tax claim against Lee Shubert, who died Dec 25, 1953, at 78. In tracing the Messrs. Shubert's career in their fight against the "syndicate"—Marc Klaw and Abraham Lincoln Erlanger — these staggering figures are vivid because of their contrast to the handful of American legitimate theatres in operation today, including the 30-odd Broadway playhouses, in themselves a marked contrast to the 70-89 legitimate theatres in operation on Broadway in the 1920s.

K&E, in 1905, managed 1,250 of the 5,000 legitimate theatres operating in 3,500 cities, towns and hamlets from coast-to-coast.

As an equally vivid sidebar, in that same era there were 25,000 vaudeville theatres in operation. Both segments of America's "round actors" platforms, of course, were given sharp curtailment by the upsurge of the moviegoing habit as an American family entertainment, buoyed in later years by the coming of sound. In turn, the filmgoing habit experienced inroads from still another technological encroachment — radio and television.

In the era of those 5,000 legiters, the 1,250 cream houses naturally concerned themselves with touring Broadway attractions. The others presented permanent stock, with name stars, many of them doing better in fixed seasonal localities than chancing the Broadway hazards. These were in addition to a thriving "little theatre" movement, not to mention lyceum, chautauqua, opera, concert, the usual spate of "Firemen's Hall" entertainments and the like. Not forgetting their aquatic variations, the showboat, another timehonored, now dim in memory, bit of Americana.

In the heyday of vaudeville an act could play a solid year's "time" in New York City alone, taking in the bigtime theatres in The Bronx and Brooklyn. Similarly, the legit theatre had its own "subway circuit" of post-Broadway touring companies whereby neighborhood greater New York playhouses presented top hits, many with their original companies, at pop prices. (This was separate and apart from the Leblang, the "cutrate King," succoring many an in between show during its Broadway run).

When the brothers Sam S., Jacob J. and Lee Shubert came down from Syracuse, N.Y., to invade Broadway (actually it was at Herald Square, in a theatre on West 35th St., opposite Macy's) they found themselves smack-dab up against the Klaw & Erlanger "syndicate." Eventually the Shuberts (in 1950) were to be accused of similar tactics and the Government was successful in 1956, in its contention that theatres came under the Sherman antitrust act. The Shuberts agreed to divest four theatres in New York and 11 in other cities; stop restrictive booking practises, and refrain from financial investment in any theatre ticket brokerage wherein there was a Shubert theatre.

MANHATTAN'S SIDE-STREET OPERA

No Subscribers-No Chic-No Claques-No Prompter

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

In the beginning there was a tax-defaulted hall, Mecca Temple, on West 55th St., with 3,000 seats and Arabic scrollwork imbedded in the not-very attractive decor. The years was 1944, the war was on, LaGuardia was mayor. It was then that the N. Y. City Center of Music & Drama was born of poor but respectable parentage. The first of its several components was opera and the original season ran one week, offering standard bread-and-butter works, Tosca, Martha, Carmen and Bohemey Mimi.

This was, it may now be reported, the original poor man's center for the performing arts, well before Lincoln Center. After 20 years of up and down fortunes the side-street, one-roof centre has become respected in America and celebrated in Europe, in furtherance of the venerable proverb about prophets lagging in honor at home. Along the rugged course Newbold Morris played Homer and Morton Baum played Horatio.

The opera unit of the city-sponsored project began with a Hungarian, Laslo Halaz. He reigned over the eggshell kingdom of lyric drama with his share of troubles, both self-created and external, until 1951 when he was deposed. Joseph Rosenstock ruled, 1952 through 1956. By this time the City Opera had presented the back-breaking impressionistic opera "Wozzeck", Bartok's "Bluebeard's Castle", also Von Eiman's "The Trial" and a world premiere of Copland's "The Tender Land." Thus was established, early, the policy of presenting innovations and novelties.

Opera a la Minsky

In 1956 came the brief regency of Eric Leinsdorf. Those who were present at his opening event, an English language Eric Bentley adaptation of Offenbach's "Orpheus In The Underworld", debate still whether it was, or was not, the most embarrassing evening of opera within the memory of living man. It was replete with a kind of determinedly sophisticated bedmanship whose explicit lines made sophisticated people squirm. This "Orpheus" called for, or allowed, Hiram Sherman to lose his trousers on stage for a laugh.

Despite mischances and misguided novelties during the 20 years, now being celebrated, City Opera has built a reputation for wide-ranging achievement at a top price (until recently) of $3.95. Discipline, program-making and policy sharply improved after 1957 when Julius Rudel, who had served from the first season as assistant conductor, was made managing director. He knew from long familiarity the practical scope and limits of the house.

As of the present writing City Opera has mounted a total of some 106 operas. The standbys were predictable. "La Boheme" has been warbled 120 times during the 20 years. "Carmen" rated 131 performances. Both City Opera and the Met have turned often to "Fledermaus". It has racked up 35 presentations on 55th Street. At the Met "Fledermaus" has served nine times in the 14 years of Rudolf Bing's direction as the New Year's Eve gala.

Cost Comparisons

Costs are not, of course, comparable. City Opera expends around $35,000 on a new production, the Met perhaps $150,000. Similiarly the top soloist at City Opera is paid $150 per performance whereas the greats at the Met rate $1,500. Even so, with all the comparative modesty of 55th Street compared to the golden horseshoe, City Opera represents an annual budget of around $1,000,000.

A comparison is drawn on occasion to the Opera Comique of Paris. There is a modicum of merit, since City Opera does things the Met cannot, or at least will not, do. Both the grand establishment and the poor man's haven depend overwhelmingly upon public sale of tickets but with one stunning advantage for the Met — the subscription harvest reaped annually there before the first curtain rises in October.

It puts City Opera in focus to spotlight four negatives characterizing the company, to wit:

No subscribers
No chi-chi
No claque
No prompter

There exists a fund-raising Friends of City Opera but in general the second Manhattan shrine to lyric drama cannot count upon support from white-tie lawyers and stockbrokers or members of the American Establishment. The big helping hand has come from the Ford Foundation. A few rich personages have helped, notably Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. and Jean Tennyson, the former Celanese radio soprano who now resides in Italy.

New State Subsidy

A special kind of aid comes from the N. Y. State Arts Council, administered by John MacFadyan. Some $6,000 in subsidy is handed to local auspices who are thus able to book City Opera road dates in such improbable opera towns as Batavia and Geneseo. Interestingly the City Opera associate director, John S. White, is his own bookers and touring logistics expert.

It will be asked if talent and technicians can "make a career" at this house? In general, no. And yet Rudel and White do all they can, working in close tandem, to create a stock company, to use singers as often as possible in as many roles as possible. Certainly a great many singers have, by now, found a valuable showcase. A couple of dozen have gone on to membership in the Met's posher environment.

City Opera runs a tight ship, and an economical one necessarily. The permanent cadre of know-how includes such regulars as executive stage director Hans Sondheimer, stage managers Bill Field and John Seig. The unions naturally determine the minima. For a Mozart work the musicians may number 40; for "Wozzeck", 60; for last sesson's revival of "Louise", 65.

Champagne, Mais Non

Under American Guild of Musical Artists scale the choristers are paid a basic $85 for eight "services," in which rehearsals may be counted. Otherwise rehearsals amount to about 14 hours extra weekly at $2 an hour. Stagehand requirements range from 19 to 26, depending upon the opera.

Little is spent by City Opera on advertising, nothing on champagne suppers. The command is so avid for benefit performance money that on occasion it has cancelled press courtesies to certain premieres. Passes are under puritanical control for the all-vital weekend performances. (Publicity is handled on a fee basis by the Dorfmans.)

European prestige newly enjoyed by City Opera derives in part from the folk operas of American origin, made possible by Ford donations. Seasons of new native scores are something managing directors of continental opera houses cannot duplicate. The significant trend under Rudel has been toward contemporary works, both American and European. A check shows that up to 1956 the company produced 12 contemporary works by Europeans and 10 by Yanks. Rudel has stepped this up with an arresting statistics of 21 American-composed operas and 11 contemporaries of overseas origin.

There is too, the proneness of New York reviewers to complain that certain modern operas are not operas at all. Such was the case this fall when Rudel ventured to offer "Gentlemen, Be Seated", a hybrid of minstrelsy, choral singing, comedy sketches and vaudeville specialties. He probably would have perferred something musically on a par with Verdi, Bellini, Puccini and such-like talents. Unfortunately, they just don't seem to be around nowadays.

Enough to testify that there is considerable gratitude in the music world that New York has a haven for newscomers — singers, directors, conductors, designers, customers and, above all, composers. Rudel is an honest broker of aspiring talent and Manhattan is fortunate to have a second company as dependable as this side-street company. Its presentations are frequently exciting.

YOU'RE NOT THE TYPE

By DOROTHY STICKNEY

I looked for work in early fall,
And could not find a part at all.
I looked and looked and looked and then
I looked and looked and now it's Spring,
And still I haven't anything.
Too fat, too thin, too short, too tall,
Too blonde, too dark, too large too small.

An office boy my dream would thwart,
"You're not the type," I'd hear him snort,
So then I asked a big producer,
"Oh, let me play a part for you, sir!"
And as my eye he saw me wipe,
He yawned and said, "You're not the type."
A playwright next I interviewed,
My heart with highest hope imbued.

He turned away and lit his pipe,
And shortly said, "You're not the type."
To see an agent then I went,
My shoes worn out, my money spent.
The agent smiled, and said, "My dear,
You're not the type Come in next year.
For doubtless then I'll be engaging."
And I departed, madly raging.

So here within my furnished room,
At last I face my awful doom.
I'll starve and go (I hope) above,
And this is what I'm dreaming of—
Perhaps if I am very good
And play my harp as angels should,
Saint Peter will be kind to me
And lend me once his Golden Key.

I hope to see upon the stair
Imploring for admittance there,
Producers, playwrights, agents too,
And all the deadly office crew.
When my familiar face they see
They'll say, "Don't you remember me,"
Then from the Pearly Gates I'll pipe,
"Oh, go to Hell! You're not the type."

Barn at Holyoke, Mass., To Be Shuttered in '64

The Casino in the Park Playhouse, which last summer replaced the 22-year-old Valley Playhouse at Mountain Park in Holyoke, Mass., will not reopen next season. That's the decision of the nonprofit Pioneer Valley Theatre Foundation, which had been organized to sponsor the Casino operation. The venture lost more than $25,000.

The foundation's aim was to keep legit active in Holyoke.

George S. Kaufman: A Profile

George S. Kaufman, first a newspaperman, drama critic and sardonic wit, later a playwright, was never a gregarious character, though widely acquainted in show business, which is gregarious. The legend of his snarling at waiters, cabbies and bores has been set forth heretofore. The central fact of his career was his versatility as a dramatist (in collaboration) and as a doctor of ailing scripts. A detailed fullscale biography of Kaufman is in the works by Howard Teichmann who joined him on "The Solid Gold Cadillac," Kaufman's last Broadway click. Teichmann, like Moss Hart in "Act One," pictures the warm, quiet sentimentality and generosity of the gangling, bushy-browed, betimes wildhaired scribe. Meanwhile a chapter in "Max Gordon Presents," now on the stands, also describes George S. This is reprinted below, in somewhat curtailed form, by permission of Gordon and his coauthor, Lewis Funke, N.Y. Times drama editor, and Bernard Geis Associates, publisher of "Max Gordon Presents." But these prefatory sentences cannot omit one of Kaufman's knowing cracks about stage plays, and true of so much else: "Satire is what closes on Saturday night."—Ed.

By MAX GORDON (With LEWIS FUNKE)

Although I had no money of my own to invest, financing "My Sister Eileen" was no problem. Costs were lower in those days, and for a play such as this there was no need for an extravagant budget. (Joseph) Fields and (Jerome) Chodorov, confident of their work, each invested $2,500. Mrs. (Beatrice) Kaufman put in $1,500, Sam Harris $1,000, and Moss (Hart) $750. (Marc) Heiman put up $750 and guaranteed the bond for Actors Equity. Other friends chipped in $6,000. My share of the gamble was notes I signed with the scene builders and costume people, for which I received a 15% interest in the production.

In the fall of 1940 George assembled the company for its first rehearsal. Plans had been made for an opening at the Biltmore the day after Christmas. George decided that it was not necessary to go out of town. Aside from the obvious savings, he was confident that the play was in sound shape and that we could open "cold."

With George in charge and Moss hovering closely on the sidelines, I attended rehearsals infrequently, keeping busy with the other details involved in preparing a production.

Tragedy

One event marred the rehearsals. Four days before our opening word came that the real-life Eileen and her husband, the novelist and screen writer Nathanael West, had been killed in an auto accident. The news was appalling. For a while consideration was given to postponing the opening. It was George who decided to go ahead, saying that a delay could hardly do any good....

Up until opening night I had restrained my anxieties. But as curtain time neared, my heart beat faster. Millie noticed a flush in my cheeks. I could not stand still. If this were "it," if this turned into a smash hit, I could begin to extricate myself from the mess into which I had fallen.

I grabbed Jerry Chodorov by the arm and pulled him out to the sidewalk. Up and down 47th Street we paced. Once we stopped briefly to talk with Richard Rodgers, whose "Pal Joey" was running at the Barrymore. The clock in the corner store moved on.

Toward the end of the third act we returned to the theatre. The audience was laughing—riotously. The curtain came down. The applause boomed forth. In the excitement I heard someone say that the whole thing had been wonderful. The comedy, we were told, had built steadily through the first act and the turning point had come in the middle of the second. Even Robert Benchley, the humorist and critic, was laughing out loud.

I went backstage with Millie. Congratulations were exchanged on all sides. I told Fields and Chodorov I would call them at their hotel as soon as I read the reviews. At about 3:30 a.m. I called Jerry at the St. Moritz.

"We're in," I screamed. "Listen!" And a proceeded to relay the content of each of the reviews while he relayed them to Fields standing next to him. In the morning there were lines at the box-office. The afternoon papers followed the morning leads. "My Sister Eileen" ran 865 performances on Broadway; there were road companies across the country. Ultimately, I sold the picture rights for $225,000 and signed a separate contract with Columbia for $50,000 to produce the film and act in a general advisory capacity for six months of each of two years.

What a season that was for all of us. "My Sister Eileen" made Burns Mantle's list of 10 best plays. So did "George Washington Slept Here," by George and Moss. So did "Lady in the Dark," written by Moss alone.

* * *

Sam Harris Passes

What a season it was, indeed—and yet not without its sadness. In March Sam Harris underwent an emergency appendectomy, in Florida, from which he never recovered his strength. He returned north and developed pneumonia. On July 2, at the age of 69, he died in his apartment in the Ritz Tower—Sam, who would not grow old, who once had boasted, "I have no intention of growing old despite the fact that my birthdays pile up," Sam, who had loved youth, life and the world.

Sam's death brought to an end his unofficial partnership with Moss and George, a partnership that had given the theatre some of its richest and happiest moments. For me it was the end of a precious friendship. Sam, like my brother Cliff, occupies a place deep inside my heart.

Not long after the funeral Moss and I spoke of our future relationship. I suggested that I would be happy to serve him as Sam had. But even as I made the offer, I knew that the chance of its being accepted was slim. Moss said he would think it over. When he made up his mind to cast his lot with Joseph Hyman, it was a gesture of friendship and loyalty that needed no explanation . . .

When Moss told me of his decision, he was careful to assure me that he would always be at my service. He also expressed his wish to be considered a potential investor in future productions of mine. And that is the way it was.

With George it was different. After directing "My Sister Eileen," he returned to collaborating with Edna Ferber. They had just about completed "The Land Is Bright," a serious play about a wealthy American family, which Sam Harris was to have produced in the fall. I hinted to George that I wanted to reach an agreement with him.

"Max," he announced one day, "Edna and I have completed "The Land Is Bright," and we would like to have you produce it. Edna and I have 80% between us, and you can have the remainder. It will mean a great deal of prestige for you—doing a play by Edna and me—even if it isn't a hit."

It was gratuitous and irritating advice. But I did not have the nerve to say, "George, it seems to me I already have prestige. What about my productions of "Three's a Crowd," "The Band Wagon," "Dodsworth," "Design for Living" and all the others? What about Coward, what about Jerome Kern? George, don't you think my successes have far outweighed my failures?"

I dared not say these things. Nor did I dare reject what he must have thought was a magnanimous offer. I was on the first leg of a comeback from disaster. I may not have expected an alliance with Moss, but with George I felt that I had earned preference. As far as I knew, there was no one like a Joe Hyman in his life, no one to whom he owed prior consideration. We had, indeed, worked together on and off ever since "The Band Wagon." I had been with him, as with everyone else, a loyal and fastidious manager. If I did not produce his plays now, others certainly would, regardless of terms. Moreover, if I did not, it would appear, however untrue, to be an unfavorable reflection on me. I knew that George would be difficult. But I also knew that he was George S. Kaufman—writer, director, synonym for genius in the field of American stage comedy.

Aligned with him and having, in addition, Moss' assurance of cooperation, I would have as good a hedge against insecurity in the theatre as any man could wish. And, heaven knows, I was hungry—hungry for solvency, security and stability.

"The Land Is Bright" was short-lived. But it was not without its compensation. When the production had been wrapped and stored away, parts of it, perhaps, to be used another time, I received a call from George. The outcome was a loose arrangement between us to work together. He received half of my interest in any show he wrote or brought to me for which there was outside financing. When I put up money, so did he. We had no contract. George not being interested in such formalities. And that is the way it was for 20 or so remaining years of his life.

By all normal standards ours was an ideal relationship. I did everything possible, always, to please him, to guess his needs, to understand his whims. I cannot remember a single instance during our relationship when he reproached me for something I did as a producer, nor a single instance when he whined or whimpered over failure or money lost. And yet, what a strange man he was, one of the strangest I have ever met in more than half a century in show business. In the years of our association I don't think I really ever learned, as I had feared I would not, how to relax in his presence.

'Gloomy Dean of Humor'

Tall, lean, with a long, bony face, his head was topped by a bushy pompadour. He had a large nose, large ears, and he never seemed quite certain that he was holding his six-foot frame together, there being a looseness about him that suggested a perpetual disjointedness. Most striking, however, were his eyes, shielded by glasses. Above the eyes there were two heavy black brows, generally arched in plaintive inquiry. The eyes themselves could be piercingly sharp, disconcerning as they reflected what would appear to be an internal sneer, a sort of derision. Generally, though, they suggested funeral mournfulness, the look of a lonely, troubled, harried man, remote and beyond the crowd. It was a look that earned him the sobriquet "The Gloomy Dean of Humor." But the eyes alone did not always repel. What put most persons off, what actually frightened them, was his impatient brusqueness, a cantankerousness that caused strangers and ordinary acquaintances to shy away and avoid his company, which I'm sure was just what he wished in most instances.

So unlike Moss he was, Moss who had the knack of making every man think he was his friend. George deliberately shut people out. And if he did not succeed with his eyes or his manner, he did so with his rapier wit, which he used so effectively onstage and off. He had, as everyone knows, a great gift for satire, a gift for making fun of both people and the mores of the time. But constant derision is not pleasant. Indeed, it has been said that a "satirist is too often a sadist, very thinly disguised."

George had additional weapons with which to scare people. He could be the most impatient and irritable of men—as taxidrivers, officeboys, barbers, waiters and telephon girls learned to their discomfort. There once was considerable jubilation among those who had felt George's sting when word passed around the Broadway district of a courageous taxdriver's rebellion. The driver had been hailed by George to take some of his relatives to a midnight sailing from a North River pier. About halfway between 10th and 11th Avenues the driver, weary of the caustic comments George had been making about his driving, suddenly pulled over to the curb and refused to move a wheel's turn further. He ordered George and the other passengers from the car and roared off, leaving them on the wind-and-rain-swept sidewalk to trudge the remaining distance on foot, carrying their own baggage.

It still nettles me to recall George's begrudging attitude following the opening of "The Late George Apley," one of the finest pieces of work he ever did as a writer and director. I had read J. P. Marquand's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel about upper-strata life in Boston, and it had occurred to me that it would make an excellent play. I urged George to read it with that in mind. Before he finished, he said he would like to do it. I called Harold Friedman, Marquand's representative. A meeting was arranged at which it was agreed that Marquand would collaborate with George on the play. It opened in the fall of 1944, was recognized as superior work, and played 385 performances on Broadway. Looking for a little kudos, I remarked to George about what a good idea it had been to make him read the book.

"I can't understand," I said, "why no one else ever thought of doing this play."

"Oh," he said dryly, "someone would have."

Nothing, I think, epitomized George's reputation more tellingly than a suggestion made by the late S. Jay Kaufman. An erstwhile journalist and Broadway press agent, Jay was concerned over the tendency of the uninformed to confuse him with George because of the similarity of their surnames. He would say that he could be identified as the kind Kaufman.

But, paradoxically, those who knew George, those who had survived his slings and arrows and had succeeded in breaking through the outer ring of his defense, knew that this Kaufman could be kind, too. I had only to remember his reply when, after the crash in '29, I told him I was broke. "I have $2,500 in the bank," he said. "You can have $1,500."

Many Faces of Kaufman

There were, as Moss once pointed out, many Georges. There was George the misanthrope, the harsh, metallic, poison-tongued George who, like some ogre out of an old-fashioned fairy tale, could scare people off, the "wintry and distant George, sad, lonely, remote from his fellow men." But there was also a loving George, a man who, beneath that jaundiced, craggy facade he presented to the world, could care deeply, could be a determinedly devoted friend, who could be, and was, thoughtful of the needs of others. When he heard that an actress was having difficulty making ends meet, he could write to me and say, "I don't know how much she's getting. But I hear she's got a little boy and other problems. Can we afford to give her a little more?" Or, "Dear Max, I keep thinking about those Christmas bonuses for the box-office boys and wish they could have been larger. Am I crazy? We expect, and I think we get, complete honesty from them in a tempting job. Any chance of giving them something extra, or are you against it?"

The 'Kind' Kaufman

Years after S. Jay Kaufman had basked in the smiles of those who sympathized with his wish to be identified as the kind Kaufman—a quip that hardly endeared him to George—he lay in a London hospital, alone and miserable, victim of a stroke. George also happened to be in London and Jay, knowing this, and in trouble, swallowed his pride. He asked George to visit him. George went. Later he wrote:

"Well, yesterday I did a Good Deed, and I should learn that it is out of character. I went to visit (at his request) S. Jay Kaufman, whom I never could stand, but he had had a stroke, is paralyzed on the left side, leg and arm, and is in the ward in Paddington Hospital. You can imagine how I transferred all this to myself and spent a splendid night in a cold sweat. The poor fellow will be taken home in the hospital of the Queen Elizabeth this week, and there is a nephew there who will put him in a home somewhere in Jersey. How it depressed me, even a fellow whom I never have liked. I even offered him money if he needed it . . ."

How revealing that remark about his good deed being out of character. How he tried to cover up the sweeter aspects of his nature. Although he was incapable of praising me to my face for "The Late George Apley," he could, in letters, tell me what he truly thought of me. During one of my recurring periods of self-doubt, he wrote:

"The main thing is that you know your judgment is still good—in fact, better than ever. If you have not produced a lot of hits in recent years, it is because there were not a lot of hits written. You also did not produce a lot of failures, remember— and remember that hard. Most producers temporarily down on their luck would lose their sense of balance and do the stinkers. You didn't. Nobody but you and I notice that you have not been active, and you and I know that you are waiting for the good one . . . ."

And in the same vein later:

"I wish there were some way that I could restore your faith in your theatrical judgment, which has always been close to 100% sound and I am certain still is. Despite your present low estate, you had no trouble detecting that "Men of Distinction" was not a masterpiece . . . And why do you think Lee Shubert sent you that script to appraise? Obviously, because he valued your opinion above anyone else's,

(Continued on page 252)

RICHARD BARSTOW

PRODUCER — DIRECTOR — CHOREOGRAPHER — WRITER
COMPOSER — LYRICIST
VARIETY:—"One of the true De Mille's of the living theatre."
Personal Mgr.: VAL IRVING Representation: WM. MORRIS AGENCY

Theatre 'Billing'; Managers Outnumber Femme Stars

By SAMUEL STARK

Doing research to fathom the method used in the naming of theatres, you find they really did-not-do-right-by-our-N e l l. N e l l could mean Nelly Leonard, which was Lillian Russell's true name. But, equally, they did not do right by Minnie, Lillie, Adah, Billie, Julia, Mary, or any of the prominent actresses of the American stage.

How many theatres were named for an actress? Okay, the Maxine Elliott, the Nora Bayes, the Ethel Barrymore and the Helen Hayes. Allow a half unit for the Lunt-Fontanne, and, if you insist, another half unit for the Julian Eltinge, the only female impersonator to have a theatre named in his honor.

It is understandable, by reason of indicating its location, that a playhouse would be named the Bowery, the Broadway, the 14th St. and the Fifth Ave. Theatre, although at one period in 1877, the Fifth Ave. Theatre was situated on the southside of 24th St., between Broadway and 6th Ave. Later Proctor's 5th Ave., a vaudery, was at 28th St. and Broadway.

Surely, no contemporary playgoer of the 1830s questioned the naming of the Mud Theatre, at the corner of Holliday & Pleasant Streets, as this place of amusement was located in a section known as The Meadow.

Theatre "billing," of course, traditionally honored great histrionic names such as Edwin Booth, Richard Mansfield, Edwin Forrest and David Garrick.

Quite a few assumed the name of their London counterpart and we find the Adelphi, Canterbury, Drury Lane, Empire, Globe, Mayfair, Piccadilly, St. James and many others derived from the British.

Managers

From yesteryear playhouses, which were named for actor-managers who had a following, such as Tony Pastor's, (Lester) Wallack's (William) Harrigan's the Arnold Daly, the James K. Hackett, eventually 20th century managers put their names on their holdings, viz. George M. Cohan, Al Woods, Sam H. Harris, A. L. Erlanger, Marc Klaw, George Broadhurst, Martin B e c k, David Belasco, Charles Hopkins, John Golden, Henry Miller, John Cort, Oliver Morosco, Homer Curran, Florenz Ziegfeld Jr., Earl Carroll, Sam S. Shubert, Billy Rose, as well as the first names of Alex Aarons and Vinton Freedley, to form the Alvin.

This paralleled the vaudeville tycoons giving themselves billing, whether big or small time, or, even such "death trail" circuits as Turner & Dahnken, Kohl & Castle, Ackerman & Harris (also known as the "aching heart circuit"), along with Sullivan & Considine, Sylvester Zeffarino Poli, Gus Sun, Alexander Pantages, Marcus Loew, B. F. Keith, E. P. Albee, not to mention the great and small movie chains, viz., Balaban & Katz, Harold B. Franklin, Robb & Rowley, Wilbur & Kincey, Julian Saenger, Finkelstein & Ruben, Sablosky & McGurk, Durwood Bros., Moe Mark, S. L. Rothafel (Roxy), the Skourases, Bennie Berger, Stanley Mastbaum et al.

Often, the ladies tried to get in the name-calling act and a wife would rely on her husband's laurels as in the case of John Brougham's spouse. In 1850, this well-known comedian and producer, established Brougham's Lyceum, on Broadway near Broome St., and later in 1869, Brougham's Theatre on 24th St. near 6th Ave., only to have his wife open Mrs. Brougham's Theatre at 444 Broadway, in 1860.

Mrs. John Wood, the former Matilda Vining, a popular actress-manager, waited until her husband's death in 1863, before taking over the Olympic Theatre, at 624 Broadway, to rename it Mrs. John Wood's Olympic. This playhouse leaned toward the distaff side, having originally been Laura Keene's Varieties from 1856 to 1863, as well as, for a few months in 1863, the Jane English Theatre.

Of the thousands of theatres in New York City since 1750, a mere 32 playhouses have been given the names of actresses and several of these were off-Broadway, and in two instances, Yiddish theatres.

Two notable examples would be the Maxine Elliott on West 39th St. and the present Ethel Barrymore Theatre on West 47th St. The former was built by the Shuberts, for Miss Elliott, and opened Dec. 30, 1908 with "The Chaperons." This house enjoyed a long, successful and placid career, marred only once by a small riot of the partisan Irish during the run of "The Playboy of the Western World" in 1911. It ceased as a legitimate playhouse around 1941, with the exception of a few plays and ballets in 1948, when taken over by the Mutual Broadcasting, and, later CBS-TV. The site is now occupied by an office building.

The Barrymore opened Dec. 20, 1928 with the not-so-successful "The Kingdom of God." Miss Barrymore was rewarded for appearing in this Spanish adaptation, under the Shubert banner, by having this new playhouse named for her.

The Messrs. Shubert were masters at handing out accolades in the form of namesakes. The 39th St. Theatre, also, built by them, became the Alla Nazimova when she premiered with the Ibsen play, "Little Eyolf," on April 18, 1910. The Russian tragedienne's name was retained until Oct. 2, 1911, when it opened with "Green Stockings" and reverted to the 39th St. Theatre. Thus it continued until its closing in February, 1926.

Helen Hayes was deservingly honored, in 1955, when the Fulton on West 46th St., was accorded her name. This house, curiously named after Robert Fulton, the steamboat man, and not Maude Fulton, the playwright, had opened in 1911 with "The Cave Man," having previously been the Folies-Bergere. Well, the facade of the theatre sported two huge F's from Folies-Bergere days, so it was cheaper to give the remodelled house an indigenous York state name beginning with F than to rip out the huge letters, which persisted in facade until theatre was renamed The Helen Hayes.

Frequently, ex-husbands and ex-wives got into the act. The great team of Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth had been divorced, legally and professionally, for five years, when she opened the Bayes Theatre, atop the 44th St. Theatre in 1918. Not to be outdone, he followed suit, the same year, with the Norworth Theatre at 123 West 48th St. The latter house became the Belmont, now no more.

Laura Keene, best remembered as starring in "Our American Cousin" at Ford's Theatre, Washington, the night President Lincoln was shot, struggled to maintain two theatres in New York. First, she leased, in 1855, the Metropolitan Theatre on Broadway, opposite Bond St., and gave it her name for one year. The following year, she built, at a cost of $74,000, Laura Keene's Varieties, located at 624 Broadway. Seating 1,800 persons, she operated it as actress-manager until 1863 when it was taken over by Jane English. Miss English, like Laura Keene, was a British-born actress who found favor, together with her two daughters, Lucille and Helen Western, in the U.S.. She graced this theatre for a mere five months before surrendering the lease to the aforementioned Mrs. John Wood.

Sophie, Irene and Jennie Worrell, daughters of an old circus clown, "Pa" Worrell, had bright, but brief careers just following the Civil War. This prompted them to open the Worrell Sisters' Theatre at 724 Broadway, where they remained two years with their light musical burlesks and pantomimes. Their success was short-lived and the name was changed to the Globe.

This same 724 Broadway (the city changed all the numbers on Broadway, and this would now be 728) had a hectic career. It had been built as the Church of the Messiah (1838-1864) and, after being converted into a playhouse, endured many name changes. A. T. Stewart, the merchant prince, bought it in 1864 and it became the Lucy Rushton Theatre for two years. Miss Rushton had a sporadic career as an actress from 1865-1871.

Mary Provost, the wife of Samuel Colville, a prominent pro-

(Continued on page 272)

Dublin Rialto's Actors and Plays Half-a-Success

By MAXWELL SWEENEY

Dublin.

While the Dublin Theatre Festival sparked interest in the theatre in the fall of 1963 the general interest in productions through the year has been below average. The output of plays continues high, but few have been picked up for production outside Ireland. Exceptions have been Hugh Leonard's "The Poker Game", standout of the Festival, and the musical "Carrie" which was bought by Jack Hilton for a London presentation. Alun Owen's "A Little Winter Love", a third Festival production, also rates a chance of success in London and on Broadway.

Year was marked by the return to stage production by Hilton Edwards, after spell as Head of Drama for Telefis Eireann (Irish TV). Edwards has formed joint production company with Louis Elliman, prexy of Dublin Gaiety Theatre, and actor-playwright Michael MacLiammoir. The group had a major success with Patrick Paterson's "The Roses are Real" in the late fall and this looks a prospect for business outside Ireland.

Abbey, just entering what company hopes is last year in temporary premises in the old Queen's Theatre, broke its pattern of Irish-authored pieces to stage Eugene O'Neill's "A Long Days Journey Into Night" and Reinhard Raffalt's play about the election of a Pope, "The Successor". The Company expects to be in the new theatre, replacing building burned out ten years ago, by Christmas, 1963. During the year Ria Mooney bowed out as producer for reasons of health and was succeeded by Frank Dermody. Company will make its first appearance in London for more than 20 years next April when it stages two plays by Sean O'Casey, "Juno and the Paycock" and "The Plough and The Stop". O'Casey banned professional production of his plays in Ireland but has given green light for the special occasion as a run-in to London presentation. A deal with Sol Hurok for an American tour in the spring of 1965 is being mulled.

Several new production units have been created but no major works have been forthcoming from these groups. Several of them have been staging plays rejected by the Abbey.

As a stimulus to new playwrights an insurance company is now offerring a $1,400 prize for a new play for the 1964 Dublin Theatre Festival.

Olympia Theatre, second largest of Dublin's legit houses, was put on the market in the fall following decision of majority shareholders to quit show biz. No bid was received at auction and house continued to operate under direction of joint managing directors Leo McCabe and Stanley Illsley.

JULIA MEADE

SARAH SIDDONS AWARD

"Actress of the Year" for her performance in "Mary Mary"
Presentation: January 17, 1964, Ambassador East, Chicago.

CONFESSIONS OF A COMPOSER

Last of the Viennese Waltz Kings Dwells on Importance Of A Good Libretto

By ROBERT STOLZ

Vienna.

The word operetta derives from opera, a diminution in the good sense of the word, and opera comes from the Latin "opus"—work. Grand opera is the musical theatre of the carriage trade, while operetta is the opera of the man in the street.

Until opera in the proper form, as we know it, was presented—I abstain from quoting names because there are too many—composing was not regarded as work. It reminds me of present day "whistling composers" (as these melody-discoverers are called here in Vienna—they whistle a tune and another one writes it down).

Composing Easier Then

Composing actually was easier in those old days, referring of course to the theoretical end of it. Discipline and exactness were not so very important; composer, director and the singers met and played for the audience. It was more or less like a "jam session."

That changed radically, when stage and orchestra were separated, thus hard work was necessary to produce an opera. I even venture to state the following: Perhaps there was so much "talking" in those old operas to give the orchestra a chance to recuperate and rearrange the music sheets on their stands. Expert historians might laugh about this, but how strange are often the motives behind our actions.

So after all these years of success, failures and hardships I have it now black on white—and so have my colleagues—that we are really workers. How often did I point out in interviews or in my modest endeavors to do some authoring also, that the greatest talent can only reach the peak by hard work? I do not know. There are exceptions to the rule.

Operetta Overtime

An operetta composer, in fact, is a worker with much overtime. Melody ideas might flock into the brain by the thousands—write them, orchestrate them and, as added hard work, find those men who will put them into frame, meaning, a good librettist. I know quite a few of them who spent half of their lives in the Austrian National Library reading—guess what? Public domain plays. But they also invented their own plots; is was sort of a coexistence. Their motto was: better a good steal than a poor original idea. Besides, we all know that—and particularly in show business—Ben Akiba's words apply: "Everything has existed already. There's nothing new under the sun."

Anyway, in writing music for shows usually the procedure was here as follows:

The composer had a nice little success with a ditty and already the first librettist turned up; perhaps not one of those top ones, but nevertheless. This brings me to Fritz Gruenbaum. Poor fellow, he did not even attempt to run away when the Nazis came into Austria; he was promptly sent to Dachau where he died. Though more a cabaret man, he wrote good operetta books. (His cabaret spirit did not even leave him during his darkest hours, because the story goes, that when he complained to a "human" concentration camp guard about hunger and the small portions of food, and the guard had answered, "We have not enough money here to buy more," Gruenbaum replied: "If you can't afford it, you shouldn't keep so many prisoners!")

In better days Fritz Gruenbaum, a native of Bruenn, approached me with a libretto while I was orchestra leader of the Bruenn (now Czechoslovakia) City Theatre, but at that time I was so busy as musical director that I had no time to compose it. "Too bad that you did not make my valuable libretto valueless by your music" he said, keeping in the cabaret style of talking. Leo Fall composed it later; it was the now immortal "Dollar Princess."

But a few days later he turned up again. Gruenbaum this time had another book—"The Favorite." I agreed to compose the score and later it was produced at a theatre in Berlin quite successfully. One number from that show, "You Are the Emperor of My Heart" (English lyrics: "Our Finest Hour") became a standard and still is very popular.

I remember now Gruenbaum saying: "This song alone is worth that you compose the e n t i r e operetta."

Other Librettists

The man who wrote for me some of my most successful operettas was luckier in the selection of his parents; that is, he did not suffer, physically at least, under the Nazis. This was Bruno Hardt-Warden. His certificates of "Aryan" origin down to the grandfather and -mother s u f f i c e d. "Whirled Into Happiness" and "Wild Violets" were the libretti he wrote for my operettas. This Bruno was an exceptional kind of writer. He could concoct the funniest situations on the stage, misunderstandings in the style of Goldoni and Lopez de Vega (this refers to the 400 plays each by them ready to be read in the National Library), but after offering the funniest comedy to a composer for an operetta at the Cafe Dobner, where he spent much of his time, he would go home, sit down and write a drama, like for instance "The King of Life" (Oscar Wilde's biography).

Two of my closest friends are librettists Robert Gilbert and Ernst Marischka, each of them being an expert in writing books and lyrics. They are the most successful authors for musical shows in this part of the world. I always enjoy workinug with them, because they have such a perfect feeling and understanding for my music. They always write the right lyrics for me. The last musical I did with book and lyrics by Robert G i l b e r t and Per Schwenzen, "Dream Island," was a pleasure to create, as Gilbert reads music and therefore it suffices to give him a lead sheet of the melody to which he writes perfect lyrics. The same goes for Marischka.

A composer might call himself successful, when he reaches the following stage: the producer (the-

(Continued on page 272)

Legit Incorporations

Albany.

Christopher Theatrical Enterprises Inc. authorized to produce musical shows, drama and variety entertainment, with offices in New York. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par value. Colton & Fernbach were filing attorneys.

Set International, Ltd. has been chartered to conduct a theatrical productions and motion pictures business in New York. Capital stock consists of 200 shares, no par value. William S. Klinger was filing attorney.

5 Musicals That Made History: But 'Princess' Plots Now Too Dated

By ROBERT BARAL

Off Broadway would like to delve into more of the old Princess Theatre musicals in the light of its click revival of "Leave It To Jane" but is finding the delving particularly tough. Jerome Kern's songs are still among his finest but the books by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse are now so dated that writers are stumped.

Robert Baral

"Oh, Boy" has been worked over at various times by several Off Broadway proucers as a next logical Princess Theatre show to revive but at present writing the project seems dead. Seasoned writers, Charles Gaynor among them, have turned the book back.

Why all this interest in the Princess Theatre offerings? These musical "gems" were our early chapter in the development of a truly American musical theatre. They became radiant hits circa World War I and their influence is still a guide for musicals today. It all started in 1915.

Musical Innovation

F. Ray Comstock owned the Princess Theatre (299 seats) on 39th Street and was having trouble filling the small house. Elizabeth Marbury, an astute literary agent of the time, and one of the three original All-American career girls (Anne Morgan, philanthropy and Elsie de Wolfe, interior decoration, were the other two) came up with an interesting idea. Her idea was to do something entirely new about the American musical comedies.

First she signed Jerome Kern for the musicals. Up to this time most of his work was confined to interpolated songs in other shows. This was his big chance and the results are now legendary.

An orchestra of 11 musicians was used—the company numbered not over 30 people and Miss Marbury personally selected the dozen or so chorus girls. She also saw to it that their gowns were so designed as to fit their individual personalities (satin dance slippers tied on with thin ribbons was le dernier cri during this era). Justine Johnstone and Marion Davies, later famous Ziegfeld Girls, highlighted the chorus of "Oh, Boy" which gives one a clearcut picture of the calibre of loveliness which was exploited in the intime musicals.

Discarded Viennese

But Jerome Kern's paramount goal was to discard the old Viennese and English formulas of musical display and bravura and concentrate on meaningful songs. The plots were to be logical and modern—and there was to be no inserted comedy specialties or interpolated songs. Kern's songs were almost conversational in theme.

The list of Princess Theatre hits and their runs follow:

"Nobody Home" (1915) — 135 performances.

"Very Good Eddie" (1915)—341 performances.

"Oh, Boy" (1917)—463 performances.

"Leave It To Jane" (1917)—167 performances.

"Oh, Lady! Lady!" (1918)—219 performances.

"Leave It To Jane" was not presented at the Princess Theatre but was created for the Princess Theatre management and is generally identified as one of the most famed shows in the series.

The above array speaks for itself and they came along long before "Show Boat" (Kern again) "On Your Toes" and "Oklahoma." Anyone plotting a cavalcade production of Broadway musical form might just as well stick to a capsule version to spark this important milestone period.

The books? Maybe Alfred Lunt or Cyril Ritchard could handle them with velvet gloves. The songs: "Till The Clouds Roll By," "Babes In The Wood," "The Crickets Are Calling," "Not Yet," "Before I Met You," "The Siren's Song," "When All The Little Ships Come Home," "The Sun Shines Brighter" etc. are best when top divas and tenors sing them.

Off Broadway which has tried just about everything in a musical frame from operetta spoofs, pretentious jabberwocky, and even a "Follies of 1910" frequently likes to overload a revival with songs from other shows for good measure (by the same composer of course). This writer remembers a strawhat production of Cole Porter's "The Gay Divorce" with Jack Whiting, Frances Williams, Harry McNaughton and Grace McDonald at the Brighton Beach Theatre at Coney Island. "Night and Day" was sandwiched in between "Find Me A Primitive Man" and "Take Me Back To Manhattan." The overture ran through several strains of "Old-Fashioned Garden" and "What Is This Thing Called Love?" as an extra fillip.

As one fat momma in the matinee audience remarked: "They sure don't write shows like that anymore . . . !"

Another time "The Siren's Song" was inserted in a Broadway revival of "Sally." It was flat and pointless. This is one Kern song which requires a Jane Froman or Eileen Farrell voice for full justice.

So if Off Broadway tackles more of the Princess Theatre works it is thought best to stay clear of any stylized ribbing. Play it straight—and sing it a la Vivienne Segal or Grace Moore. Otherwise the ghost of Jerome Kern will work overtime.

Great Curtain Lines

By EDWIN BRONNER

"I'm going to Rector's to make a hit, and to hell with the rest." (Frances Starr as Laura in "The Easiest Way").

* * *

"It is possible, dear, that someone may beat you and beat you and beat you, and not hurt you at all." (Eva Le Gallienne as Julie in "Lilliom").

* * *

"I don't ask for your pity, but just for your understanding—not even that—no. Just for your recognition of me in you, and the enemy, time, in us all." (Paul Newman as Chance Wayne in "Sweet Bird of Youth").

* * *

"Years from now—when you talk about this—and you will!—be kind." (Deborah Kerr as Laura Reynolds in "Tea and Sympathy").

* * *

"The son of a bitch stole my watch!" (Osgood Perkins as Walter Burns in "The Front Page").

* * *

"Only dat ole devil sea, she know!" (George Marion as Chris in "Anna Christie").

* * *

"Hey, Flagg, wait for baby!" (William Boyd as Sgt. Quirt in "What Price Glory?").

* * *

"It's a jim-dandy farm, no denyin'. Wished I owned it!" (Walter Abel as the Sheriff in "Desire Under The Elms").

* * *

"Oh, darling, I feel as though this were all some wonderful dream!" (Betty Field as Georgina in "Dream Girl").

* * *

"I made the last payment on the house today. Today, dear. And there'll be nobody home. We're free and clear. We're free. We're free . . . We're free . . . (Mildred Dunnock as Linda in "Death Of A Salesman").

* * *

"Gin, goddammit to hell, gin!" (Phyllis Povah as Stella in "Light Up The Sky").

* * *

"Well, I'm goin' to be hanged in the end . . . But they'll get their money's worth at the trial. You wait!" (Emlyn Williams as Dan in "Night Must Fall").

* * *

"Four years ago you took away my name and gave me a number. Now I've given up that number and I've got your name." (Jane Cowl as Mary Turner in "Within The Law").

* * *

"How they are cheering, Albert! Ah! if only you could have been here!" (Helen Hayes as The Queen in "Victoria Regina").

* * *

"That was in the winter of senior year. Then in the spring something happened to me. Yes, I remember. I fell in love with James Tyrone and was so happy for a time." (Florence Eldridge as Mary Tyrone in "Long Day's Journey Into Night").

* * *

"Gee, I'm happy. Our names will be in bright lights soon. Roy Lane and Company. Remember you're all artists. Here we go—here we go . . ." (Lee Tracy as Roy Lane in "Broadway").

* * *

"Come, we bringa him home . . . where he belong . . ." (Morris Carnovsky as Mr. Bonaparte in "Golden Boy").

* * *

"I thank you for all kindness" (Helen Hayes as "Mary of Scotland").

* * *

"We've all got our health and as far as anything else is concerned, we'll leave it to You." (Henry Travers as Grandpa in "You Can't Take It With You").

* * *

"Hm . . . Eleven o'clock in Grover's Corners. You get a good rest, too. Good night." (Frank Craven as The Stage Manager in "Our Town").

* * *

"I've had two years to sharpen my claws. Jungle-red, Sylvia! Good night, ladies!" (Margalo Gillmore as Mary in "The Women").

* * *

"Now that I am Queen, I wish in future to have a bed and a room of my own." (Margaret Sullavan as Terry in "Stage Door").

* * *

"I'm going to be baptized, damn it!" (Howard Lindsay as Father in "Life With Father").

* * *

"It's a nice name. I'd like him not to be forgotten." (Judith Anderson as Mary in "Family Portrait").

* * *

"Mr. Stanley, I am suing you for $350,000!" (Monty Woolley as Sheridan Whiteside in "The Man Who Came To Dinner").

* * *

"Did I ever tell about the time I fell in love with a midget weighing 39 pounds?" (Eddie Dowling as Joe in "The Time Of Your Life").

Remembrances of Geo. S. Kaufman or he would have sent it to someone else.

Continued from page 250

"On higher ground, there was 'Camino Real,' a difficult play to assess. Your judgment coincided, almost to the word, with that of Ruth and Gus Goetz, who are terrifically good judges—some beautiful scenes they said, but some bad ones. Which was what you said . . you are miles above the run of them. I am not handing you therapeutic guff when I say this—why the hell am I so insistent on having you for a producer if I don't believe it? I am not that crazy."

It was the same—this face-to-face reticence—with Moss. Once when Moss was leaving on a long and difficult journey, he chose to spend the night before his departure with George because, as he said, "George in many ways was more father to me than my own father." They dined together and talked through the evening. Not once did George say a word about the impending journey or the reason for Moss going. When it came time for Moss to leave, George walked him to the door, made a perfunctory farewell gesture, and that was all. Moss walked home bitterly. When he arrived in his room, he found on his desk a three-page, single-spaced, typewritten letter from George, delivered while they had sat together. In it George had written all that he knew he would be unable to say to his friend that night.

Started as a Barrister

What George could never conceal, however, was his love for the theatre, though, characteristically, there is nothing in his early history to indicate that he would make it his goal. Born in Pittsburgh, of middle-class parents, he had planned to be a lawyer. But the profession proved inhospitable and he withdrew. There followed a variety of jobs: member of a surveying team, window clerk in a tax office, secretary to the comptroller of a Pittsburgh coal company, and wholesale agent for hatbands and pump ribbons.

Those who worked with George found themselves infected by his love for the theatre. He was an indefatigable worker who enjoyed the process of creating a play so much that he wanted to work on it as long as he could stay awake. Characteristically, he derived an extra bit of pleasure from working on plays on holidays. He and Edna Ferber found enormous satisfaction in writing plays on New Year's Eve. "We used to thumb our noses at the world," he once said. "There was no need to go out and get drunk."

Abjured Pomposity

Just as he regarded many of the formalities of life a bother and a bore (he once wrote to me from Hollywood that he had attended a formal dinner party in a blue suit—"I figure they're lucky to get me even without a shirt,") so he constantly frowned on the pomposities behind which so many theatre people hide. He had pride but no vanity. He would be astonished and disbelieving if he were told how great a debt the theatre owed him, how many playwrights, including Moss himself, were obligated to him for guidance.

To George, a play was not a message or a moral or an opinion. What interested him above all else was simple: Is it first a play, a good idea—something that will work on a stage and draw an audience? He saw little point in talking about art in the theatre since he felt there was little of it in evidence. What he sought, and what he believed there was evident in the theatre, was good workmanship. It was his conviction that making dialog sound natural on the stage was a knack, a trick of the ear, and not an art in itself. A really great writer of novels, he would point out, might lack that instinct and fail when he turned to the theatre, as many have. George considered himself "merely one who happended to have the knack."

GSK's 'Knack'

That "knack"—others have called it genius—accounted for one of the greatest records ever made in the contemporary American theatre. In the more than 40 years of George's labors he was associated in the authorship of 43 plays and musicals, many of them containing the most trenchantly funny lines ever written for the Broadway stage. A score of his works were purchased by Hollywood, 18 of them ran for longer than 200 performances in New York. He shared in the winning of two Pulitzer prizes, for the musical "Of Thee I Sing," on which he collaborated with Morrie Ryskind, and the hilarious "You Can't Take It With You," written with Moss, which Groucho Marx estimates is probably the most produced stock and little-theatre vehicle written in this country.

But it was not only as a writer that George gained his fame. He also excelled as a "play doctor" and director. Let a farce, a comedy, a musical flounder in its pre-Broadway trials on the road, and the first thought would be, "Can we get Kaufman to fix it?" At least 43 productions of his own authorship and those of others were put on the stage under his direction. No one knows how many others, desperate for help, received his ministrations.

George's approach as a director was simple and straightforward. Just as he had little use for idle talk about art in the theatre, so he refrained from the ritualistic hocus-pocus common to many contemporary directors. He did not regard himself as a combined psychoanalyst, father confessor and high priest. Nor did he conduct extensive excursions into the motivations of each character in a play, his or her psychological background, or the deep hidden intentions of the playwright. In contrast to some of the present lot of directors, George never considered himself the stage's all-around actor—a genius who could portray every role better than any member of his company. He had the oldfashioned notion that the actors he had chosen possessed intelligence, taste and talent—otherwise they would not have been selected. Given a chance and some guidance, he believed they could gradually work out their roles and problems in their own way.

Equally oldfashioned was George's theorem that the best directed play was the one in which there did not seem to have been a director at all, in which what truly counted was the overall effect, not the highlights of showy pyrotechnics. Nevertheless, there was something about the plays that George directed that had his special touch no matter how much in the background he kept himself. There was a neat, unified pace to those plays. The comedy always seemed sharper and wittier under his guidance. The lines and situations seemed always to have been heightened by his own unerring ear and eye.

Unlike other directors who require considerable advance study of their designer's sets before arriving at the first rehearsal, George asked only that the windows, doors and stairways, if any, be chalked out on the floor. Then, with a few chairs or a sofa for props, he would proceed to guide the players so expertly through the rehearsals that when the time came for them to work in the actual sets and with the real furniture, the transition was made with the greatest of ease.

It must, of course, be conceded that watching George direct a play in a dark theatre on a bare stage could be among the most tranquilizing of experiences. I cannot remember that I ever heard George shout or saw him lose his temper—though I am sure he did once in a while. Mostly, when I was in the theatre, he spoke in even tones and was extremely considerate of his players. He rarely used on them the vitriol that tipped his tongue. There was a modesty about his general demeanor, a reticence that sometimes left a viewer wondering whether the play would ever be ready. Holding a script in his hand, George could be seen on the stage at the beginning of a sequence talking in hushed tones to an actor, as if he himself were asking advice. At the end of the conversation, in which plans for the playing of a scene had been discussed, George would return to his seat, slouch down, and peer intently at the stage. When the scene was over, he would again haul his lanky frame to the stage. There would be more conversations with individual members of the cast. He may have detected a flaw that needed correcting; he may have detected a piece of business he wished retained for the future. Gradually, the actors seemed to find the pattern they were seeking. Nothing had been imposed upon them. What they accomplished came from their own inner consciousness. As the rehearsals progressed, they gained in poise and naturalness, achieving more in a week than others do in twice the time.

George's easy manner, seemingly so laissez-faire, concealed a firm determination to get what he wanted, a devotion to detail, a dedication to discipline. Once he achieved the performance he visualized, he tolerated no deviation. Those who strayed into new inventions, either through a desire for bigger laughs or out of boredom with a long run, would be sharply reprimanded. George was not a director to permit a production to run down or become seedy. To do so, he felt, was unjust to the public and poor business to boot.

GENET KISSED ME

By GEORGE OPPENHEIMER

SCENE: Exterior of a theatre, exclusively devoted to the plays of Genet, Ionesco, Beckett et al (short for Albee). It is a converted firehouse at the intersection of Brecht & Sartre, under the East River.

TIME: The opening night of a new contribution to the Theatre of the Absurd. The audience is filing out for the first intermission. Mingling with them are firemen and Dalmatians who have not yet been dispossessed. Two First-Nighters in dinner coats and dungarees emerge.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
My wife and I never miss one of these plays.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Where is your wife?

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
She's at "Here's Love."

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
My wife and I never miss one of these plays either.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Where is she?

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
She's at "Here's Love" too.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Small world, isn't it?

(An OLD LADY with a box approaches. She is soliciting funds.)

OLD LADY
(Rattling box.)
Money.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
No, thanks.

OLD LADY
No. No. I'm collecting money . . . for UNESCO.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Good God! Is he broke?

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Appalling.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Shocking.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Shocking.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Appalling.

(They empty their wallets into the box.)

OLD LADY
God bless you, merry gentlemen.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Poor, poor Ionesco.

OLD LADY
Not Ionesco. UNESCO.

(She starts away, her fists full of coins.)

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Stop thief.

(They pursue her, knock her down and retrieve their money plus a small profit.)

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Imposter!

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Broadwayite!

A gong sounds to announce the second act. More people pour out of the theatre. Only the Dalmatians go in to reclaim their seats since they cannot change their spots. A THIRD F.N. approaches the other two.)

THIRD FIRST-NIGHTER
Genet kissed me.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Genet with the light brown hair?

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Genet sais quoi.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Genet made her mind up when she was three.

(That exhausts that topic. The gong sounds again.)

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
I think the second act is starting.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly sounds like it.

THIRD FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly does.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
It's starting all right.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly sounds like it.

THIRD FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly does.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
No hurry. The second act is the same as the first.

That's what makes it so different.

THIRD FIRST-NIGHTER
Oh, have you chaps seen it before?

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
Thirteen previews.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Fourteen for me.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
They only had 13.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
I saw a preview preview.

The gong sounds again and a voice cries.)

VOICE
All aboard that's going aboard.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
I think the third act is starting.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly sounds like it.

THIRD FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly does.

FIRST FIRST-NIGHTER
It's starting all right.

SECOND FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly sounds like it.

THIRD FIRST-NIGHTER
Certainly does.

They go into the theatre never, please God, to be seen again.)

(The marquee lights up and reads: NEXT WEEK: Mary Martin in "GENET.")

CURTAINS

Care & Sedatives For Dramatists

By EUGENE BURR

In increasing numbers, the writers of television scripts are turning to what is sometimes ironically called the legitimate theatre. These unfortunates often find the terrain on the other side new and strange and confusing.

If and when you get it written, you find yourself in a never-never-land whose only resemblance to the television tarpits is tht disheartening prevalence of rewrite. No more do you see your brainchild manhandled beyond recognition by editors, producers, directors and even actors; in the theatre you're asked to do the manhandling yourself. No longer may you ask, as balm for your wounded pride, that your name be omitted from the crass concoction (only to find that the critics later rave it as the best script in the series); in the theatre you must shoulder the blame, with at best the flimsy protection of an obvious nom de plume.

It all reaches climax in the legitimate with the opening night on Broadway. Just how are you to act while the tender outpouring of your inmost soul is bared before a theatreful of deadpan strangers? It was different in television; there you were pitting your craftsmanship against the leisure-time wallowings of a mindless mass audience. Now the beauty of your inner ego stands naked and afraid.

You can, if you want, flutter around backstage all evening, making a perfectly wonderful nuisance of yourself. You can get in the way of actors, stage manager and stagehands. You can transmit your nervousness to the players, and to help to ruin the performance. You can moan audibly over the treatment your play is receiving as the performers come offstage, thus making them love you. You can wander out between the backdrop and the windows of the set, thus exposing yourself to the view of the audience. And, of course, you're in a favored spot to respond to the cries of "Author! Author!" When the cries don't come, you pretend that you stayed backstage to congratulate the cast.

Or, you may prefer to haunt the lobby all evening, usually in the vicinity of the boxoffice. Here you can count the customers going in—and also those going out during your second act. After the b.o. boys have closed their windows in order to count up, you can knock on it periodically and ask the amount of the receipts. You can also help the porter sweep up cigaret butts after the intermissions. This will give you a grateful sense of being of some use in the theatre.

Experienced playwrights eschew all of these techniques, and simply go home for dinner and stay there. Fledgling dramatists find there's no fun in it. You can't annoy anybody except your family and friends. You can do that anytime—without writing a play.

Martha Greenhouse
AEA, AFTRA, SAG
SU 7-5400
Representation: UNITED TALENT
CI 6-0464

'Zizi Jeanmaire' Playing An International Tour Prior to U. S. Next Year

"Zizi Jeanmaire," a French revue which Columbia Theatrical Enterprises and Claude Giraud plan bringing to Broadway in January, 1965, is getting worldwide exposure. On the basis of dates played, as well as those scheduled, engagements for the presentation cover 17 countries, including the U. S.

The presentation, in which French ballerina-singer Renee (Zizi) Jeanmaire appears, was originally produced two years ago at the Alhambra Theatre, Paris. It was originally scheduled for a two-week run, which was extended to seven months. It toured Europe last year, playing provincial France, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Germany.

This year, a new production of the revue, with added material, was mounted for a Paris opening last Friday (27) at the Palais de Chaillot, was preceded by an engagement in Italy. The Paris stand is to be followed by bookings, starting in February, in Thailand, Japan, Hong Kong and the Philippines. It'll then be produced anew for the third time for a July 20 opening at the Vancouver Festival.

From Vancouver, the show, directed and choreographed by Miss Jeanmaire's husband, Roland Petit, will go to San Francisco and then Los Angeles. Other U. S. dates will follow, as well as a week's engagement in Mexico City and a Nov. 4-8 booking at the Place des Artes, Montreal. Arrangements for the involvement of Columbia Theatrical Enterprises in the venture was made by Herbert O. Fox, the firm's general manager, CTE is a subsidiary of Columbia Artists Management, of which Fox is vice-president. He's also executive vice-president of Macy's Theatre Club.

The production, for which costumes for a company of 40 have been designed by Yves St. Laurent, is being presented officially under the patronage of the French Artistic Assn. of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Most of the French and English songs for the presentation, which will need about $40,000 weekly to break even on Broadway, have been written by Michel Mention, who's also conducting an orchestra of 25. The production does not use scenery.

Jesse James Without a Horse

Travail of Yesteryear Turkeys (and Some More Recent Roadshows) Vs. Local B. O. Gyps

By NED ALVORD

"Every local manager is a son of a bandit," pontificated "Pop" Wilson to a gaggle of fellow turkey fanciers. No doubt the entrepreneur of such give-people versions of "East Lynne," "Fable Romani" and "Lady Audley's Secret," exaggeratel. There probably were honest local impresarios but like the Abominable Snowman few road showmen could claim actual fellowship.

At a time when a dollar would buy 20 beers and was worth stealing, town Barnums were more or less myopic in viewing the show's share of the gross. Most of the outright larceny was abated when politicians came up with Federal amusement taxes. Big Brother looked over the shoulder to see that Uncle Sam got his.

Some of the bolder predators deliberately reneged on the contract. Come the countup the company manager would be informed that the 75-25 terms in the contract were now, by unilateral fiat, 65-35. The show was leaving on the Cannon Ball at 11:45, the bankroll was lean. The Law? What chance had a "fer'iner" against a hometown boy with the constabulary or judiciary in his corner? Pistol at the head he stood for the robbery.

Other didos could be less blatant but equally costly to the show. There would be the manager who relished porterhouse steaks. The butcher's wife adored attending matinees. The manager savored the porterhouse, the lady caught the matinee for which the show paid 75 per cent without a coupcon of soupbone. Commission on draying was small but sure. Occasionally the man back with the show enjoyed cumshaw. By adding a few loads and pieces to the hauling bill with the cooperation of the drayman, he smoked 10c'ers instead of the nickel productions of the American Cordage Co.

With the connivance of the papers, bills for extra advertising were rendered at the high transient amusement or "circus" rate. The newspaper was paid at the local contract tariff. The wide spread—as much as 1,000%—not only covered the local end but made a tidy profit.

In the infancy of electric signs, wooden letters, studded with carbon globes, were used to spell out the name of the attraction. The show was charged by the letter. "Incog" or "M'liss" got off gently. Had the New Frontier fashion of expanded titles prevailed it is soulsearching to conjecture the travail of "A Funny Thing Happened As I Passed To The Forum Today's Matinee," "How to Share A Fast Buck In Business Without Going To Leavenworth" or "Pappa, Poor Pappa I'm Devastated That Maw Hung You in the Chicken-Shed."

Mail lists provided an almost foolproof source of illgotten gains; perhaps still do. It was/is an easy matter to claim double or triple the actual count. With the company paying the lion's share of material, postage and labor it is not remarkable that locals plugged the mail list with pathological fervor.

Free 'n' Easy 'Paper'

In towns where stagehands, ushers, musicians and treasurer served for the privilege of seeing the show or a pair for their fraus, the theatre could, along with other gyps, crack the nut before the show got fare to the next stand.

Until The Road went the way of Wells-Fargo stagedrivers or commercial icecream that had commerce with a cow, many rackets other than juggling tickets, persisted.

Of late years the traveling manager's worst migraine is the municipal auditorium. Conceived by politicians, built with taxpayers' money, run by and for politicians, some of them make the actual money gyps of the oldtime buccaneers seem trivial.

One such a setup was encountered by Billy Rose's "Carmen Jones." As soon as the house lights went out there would come stealthily through the exit doors a hundred or more friends, political hangers-on and assorted loafers who came in handy on election day.

The late Harold Goldberg, back with the show, was alerted. That night company stagehands and musicians, chorusboys, singers and dancers guarded the exits. The curtain was delayed. Ushers didn't dare interfere with the guards. The impatient wouldbe crashers outside became impatient and started to pound on the doors. Then Goldberg addressed the audience and called on the police to disperse the crowd outside; otherwise there would be no performance and money would be refunded.

With some 2,000 irate theatregoers in mind the politzei gave the expectant chiselers the bum's rush. The show went on but with a certain element Goldberg was as popular as ham in Tel Aviv.

Company representatives, front and back, were not immune to the exchange clout of a pair of tickets. From squaring excess bag-

(Continued on page 254)

The Wise Words Of John Barrymore

By PROF. JOHN McCABE

(Chairman, Dept. of Dramatic Art, New York University.)

What was John Barrymore really like?

History usually sets its opinion on a man with finality only after many years have passed. Genuine history, after all, is an accumulation of many facets of truth that have been examined and challenged. This process is a long one, and it is, in its initial stages at least, an uncertain one.

I think that in the case of Barrymore we may well still be too close to reach a final opinion of him, possibly as an artist, most certainly as a man. All the anecdotes and first hand testimony are not yet in, or balanced. I tell the following about one who in his last days had the reputation of being a seedy, disreputable, once-great man.

It was in 1939, as a young actor in Detroit, I felt the world mine oyster. I was not long out of high school, had considerable acting experience behind me, and there was little doubt in my innermost conviction that I was going places. I was bumptious, ebullient, devotedly selfish. I knew almost all you needed to know.

But I had an idol. It was Barrymore. It still is.

I was delighted, quite literally, to learn that Barrymore was coming to the Cass Theatre in "My Dear Children." I had heard of the monkeyshines during the Chicago run; I knew he had appeared on stage drunk a number of times; I had heard also that his antics both on and off stage had worried, and finally sickened, some of his dearest friends, men like Ashton Stevens who admired him years before as a superb Renaissance Hamlet. But these details

(Continued on page 255)

Thespic Test

London.

One hears lots of odd things in a lifetime in the theatre. One sticks in my mind—merely for curiosity value—concerning the learning of lines.

An old character actor challenged a fellow-actor's powers of "quick study," reciting the following nonsense jingle only twice. The other actor gave it back without fault. Try it on any fellow who boasts of his active prowess in "East Lynne."

"He went into the garden to cut a cabbage leaf to make an apple-pie, when an old she-bear coming down the street popped his head into the window and said: "What, no soap?" And so he died.
She—very imprudently—married the barber, and they were all present at the ceremony; the hobberlilly, the cobberlilly and the old Panjandrum himself (with a little round button on the top) and they all fell to playing a game of catch-as-catch-can till the gunpowder ran out of the heels of their boots."

Emile Littler.

A True B'way Character Was Kelcey Allen

By NORTON MOCKRIDGE

Time, of course, mutes and mellows and, over the years, even the most indelible images yellow and fray and change in character. Thus it is that today many people think of Batista as a kindly little saint, and of Calvin Coolidge as a man of vast intellectual depth.

Something of this sort is happening to my old friend, Kelcey Allen. Kelcey was the drama critic of Women's Wear Daily for 36 years until he died in 1951. A rumpled, unstylish stout, he was a man of enormous amiability. He was so well liked that about nine years ago some of his friends set up an annual award in his name to be given for contributions to the theatre.

The winner this year was a charming lady named Rosamond Gilder, a writer, critic and executive, and I do not quarrel with the choice. But I was shocked when I read the press release announcing her selection, to find the following lines about Kelcey:

"Mr. Allen had been noted for his helpful advice to directors, players and playwrights, as well as for his pithy remarks and incisive drama reviews."

Well, now—I knew Kelsey Allen quite well for 20 years and I assure you "pithy" he was not. Tersely cogent, he couldn't be. As for "incisive drama reviews", most of his prosy reports were as trenchant, penetrating and colorful as the Congressional Record.

And the only helpful advice I ever heard him give a director, player or playwright was the eye-squinting admonition: "Don't take no wooden nickels."

I do not wish to detract from Kelcey's reputation, but only to fix it accurately. Kelcey needs no false glory. He was eminently satisfied with his image, and he never got over the happy wonderment that a man of his limited attainments had risen so high. He had a thousand friends and no enemies, and he was closer to heaven right there on Broadway than any man I've known.

Kelcey, born Eugene Kuttner in Brooklyn in 1875, had little formal education, even though he was the son of a man who had come here from Berlin to teach German in the public schools. As a youngster he had a love for the theatre. He admired and respected actors, and, for a time, he aspired to be one. The closest he got, however, to becoming a performer was the taking of violin lessons.

Kelcey's ingenuity manifested itself early. In his teens he used to get into the Broadway theatres without paying admission by passing himself off as a messenger boy assigned to pick up reviews from critics and carry them to newspaper offices. He did this with such success for so long that he began to worry about being found out and so he offered his services as a messenger to critics on the Morning World, the Morning Sun and the Press. As a result, he not only got to see the plays, but he also got about 25c from each of the critics for carrying the reviews to Park Row.

When he was 20, Kelcey applied for a job on the old N. Y. Clipper as an advertising solicitor and theatrical reporter. He started at $7 a week and in 20 years he had managed to work his salary up to only $20. This depressed him and he began thinking of other avenues to glory—and financial security.

One day in 1914 when he was browsing in an ashcan, he came upon a copy of Women's Wear Daily, a trade paper often described today as the only reliable link between the garment industry and the arts. But in those days the paper was concerned solely with news of the industry, and Kelcey was shocked to find that it carried no theatrical section.

No Nasty Man, He

He immediately sold the management the idea of letting him write theatrical reviews and a column of theatrical news, and also solicit theatrical advertising. His salary, until the day he died, was a percentage of that advertising. It sometimes went as high as $12,000 a year which, at that time, was well above what his more esteemed fellow reviewers received.

Whether it was his love of the theatre or whether Kelcey worried about the delicate feelings of some of his advertisers, no one knows, but it is an established fact that almost never could Kelcey bring himself to say anything nasty about any of the 6,500 shows, more or less, that he reviewed.

Kelcey never walked out on any play, not even the worst stinker—although he sometimes permitted himself the luxury of saying to his colleagues: "This show hasn't much punch, but the tickets will'—and he seldom used a word in his reviews more devastating than "adequate." Occasionally, if a bad play had a doctor, lawyer, undertaker or drama critic in the cast, Kelcey's between-acts conversation might well be highlighted by a remark like: "Well, I see this show carries its own undertaker." But none of this feeling ever appeared in print.

I asked him once why he didn't say in Women's Wear Daily what he apparently thought in private and he said: "I like the theatre and the theatre likes me. Why should I bite it?"

I first met Kelcey Allen in the dingy, cluttered rat's nest of an office that he and Bide Dudley, another drama critic, shared in the old George M. Cohan building at 1476 Broadway. There he sat, snowy with cigar ash, writing his theatrical column with a pair of scissors and a pastepot.

Occasionally he would type out a line or two from one of the press releases he was shearing to bits, mumbling: "Carbon's so lousy you can't read it." Then he'd paste the fresh copy into his column. Bide Dudley, at that time, was reviewing shows on WOR at midnight, and I often helped him by attending the secondary openings (in those days two, three and sometimes four shows a night opened on Broadway) and typing out a brief criticism which Bide would read on the air.

"My boy," Kelcey once said to me, "what are you doing wasting your time helping a lousy critic read lousy reviews over a lousy station? Why don't you write out for me what you thought of the play, and I'll put your name in Women's Wear."

I told Kelcey, quite honestly, that I didn't like a lot of the shows I went to and that I probably would write something he wouldn't like to print. Kelcey looked at me for a moment or so, sighed and said: "You know, I think you got something there." He never mentioned the matter again.

Bide Dudley

While Bide Dudley was better known to me, mainly because I worked with him on the reviewing of plays and on the Theatre Club of the Air which we broadcast Saturdays over WOR, I got quite a kick out of watching Kelcey both in and out of the office.

On the street he was a sight to behold. A short, squat man, weighing well over 200 pounds but only about four inches over five feet, he had round, fat, fleshy face, with a large, bulbous nose from which deep lines drove down to the corners of his depressed mouth, and his eyes, heavily lidded, flashed inquisitively in almost every direction at once.

He dressed as though he were a rag bag, oversize, misshapen suits, of dull and cheerless colors, dark but well-stained ties and dusty, beaten and thoroughly defeated hats. His pockets bulged with hundreds, possibly thousands of items. I asked him once what he had in his pockets and, to indulge me, he laid out on a desk two extra pairs of spectacles, about a dozen pencils, one pen, two small pocketknives, five or six notebooks, possibly 20 envelopes, two or three sheafs of folded notepaper, one flashlight (for reading programs in the theatre), a bag of gumdrops, two wallets—both crammed with money, cards and precious papers —, handkerchiefs, three peanuts, a small bit of envelope containing four pieces of hard candy, the ace of spades and the queen of hearts from a deck of cards, scores of little notes to himself which he admitted he no longer could read, 30 to 40 typed or mimeographed sheets of releases from pressagents, passes and passbooks to various movie theatres, half a dozen letters he had been intending to mail, about a dozen letters he had received but hadn't opened, a nail file, a comb, one small pair of scissors, about 20 stamps, possibly as many as 100 business cards from restaurants, barbershops, etc., nearly 100 stubs of tickets for various Broadway shows, toothpicks, matches, cigars, a money clip, a dozen cards certifying honorary membership in various unions and organizations, and about $2 in change.

"See," said Kelcey, "I'm not as fat as they say I am."

Kelcey loved the figure he cut on Broadway, and he was happy as he strolled through Times Square, hailed by friends, sought after by pressagents and gladhanded by young actors who expected him to be kind to them in their next effort. Occasionally, he'd stop for a moment as a thought for his column struck him and he'd scribble it on a bit of paper, stuff it in an envelope and mail it to himself at his office.

"That way," he said to me once, "I'm sure of getting a lot of fan mail."

Kelcey was pleased with himself, as I said before, but I don't think he ever kidded himself that he was more than he was. He loved to see his name in huge type at the top of his amusements page in Women's Wear Daily and he had it pasted up on the wall over his desk, along with letters from advertising directors commending him for the excellence of his reviews.

Kelcey was no phony. He was a complete realist. His name, for instance, wasn't his own, but he was quick to admit it.

"I borrowed it," he told me. "I thought that Eugene Kuttner didn't sound glamorous enough, so I made up my name. It wasn't that I didn't want a Jewish name. It was just that I thought I ought to have something that sounded right for professional purposes. So, one day when I was standing in front of the Knickerbocker Theater, Herbert Kelcey, the actor, came up and stopped and he had with him the actress, Viola Allen. Now both of these charming people were somebody in the theatre and I admired them and I asked Mr. Kelcey if he minded if I used his name. He said sure, go ahead, and then Miss Allen said why don't I use her name too, so I made up my name—Eugene Kelcey Allen. Then later I dropped the Eugene because the name was too long.

G.B. Shaw's 2d Legit Musical

By EMIL MAAS

Vienna.

When the curtain rose on "My Fair Lady," Austrian premiere in the Theatre an de Wien, Sept. 19, it was for the second time that a George Bernard Shaw play had been used as basis for a musical. Today it is "Pygmalion."

Almost 55 years ago (the Vienna VARIETY correspondent remembers it distinctly) it was "Der Tapfere Soldat" by Oscar Straus, known in the English-language world as "Chocolate Soldier." The plot was exactly after GBS' "Arms and the Man," but not with a line of Shaw's dialog. This was one of the Irish dramatist's stipulations, after consenting to librettists Bernauer and Jacobson's requests.

On Nov. 14, 1908 the "Tapfere Soldat" had its premiere in the Theatre-an-Wien. Next day the management began rehearsals for its next production, so weak was the response of the premiere audience. Shaw was personally not interested, as the second condition of his consent was most surprising—he had refused emphatically to accept any sort of financial reward which might result from the musical play. He would have nothing to do with it, either artistically or financially. His one and only request was that all posters, announcements and programs must carry a notice that this was an "unauthorized parody of Bernard Shaw's play, 'Arms and the Man.'"

After the flop of the premiere the operetta would have been completely forgotten, had not New York impresario Fred C. Whitney bought the play before it had opened in Vienna. He tried it out in Philadelphia and two months later the operetta began its real career on Broadway.

(From N.Y. Dramatic Mirror, March 4, 1914)

Bill Brady Coined The 'Punchline'

The manager sits in his swivel chair, while a hasty bite he munches, and digs through his manuscripts in despair in search of those hidden punches. (Now, what is a punch? You may well demand, inquisitive sir, or lady; 'tis the knockout scene the author's planned. The term was invented by William A. Brady. And he, in turn, first used the name in his wild and varied orbit, while he was acquiring an early fame, as the pilot of Jim Corbett; and Jim in his turn grew first acquaint with that noun to plague and vex us, when Lanky Bob, with a dexterous feint, discovered his solar plexus. And so you see that potent word that tells of an art so mystic in the craft of a kindred world was heard, a kindred world artistic.)

Now why does the manager tear his hair and blanch with his desperate seeking? He can't find a single punch anywhere, though with a frenzy the script is reeking. Alas, for that search for the ocean's prize, can't shaft or plummet sound it? But, alas, much more, for the manager wise who never can tell when he's found it. But isn't it well to stop and think? Perhaps it's a false position to hold a writer who is wasting his ink who deals with a sane condition; who deals with the needs and the deeds of life that following an earnest striving, and by painting with truth this very strife may show what is worth surviving. When the clean, sane thing shall come by its own and the manager loses his hunches, the play shall thrive in a temperature zone and not be dependent on punches.

Sydney Rosenfeld

One deduces that William Brady invented the term "punchline." Sydney Rosenfeld was a librettist and playwright. Born in Richmond, Va., Oct. 26, 1855 and died in N.Y.C., June 13, 1931. Rosenfeld was a satirist and evidently kidding Bill Brady who was about to produce Rosenfeld's play, "The Charm of Isabel" at the Maxine Elliott Theatre on May 5, 1914. In fact, they could have been in rehearsal when the above quote was written. If that was the case, Brady knew what he needed because "Isabel" only ran for seven performances.—Ed.

Jesse James Dismounted

Continued from page 253

gage to acquiring that handsome red-and-green ascot in the haberdasher's window a brace of "skulls" had greater impact than cash. Besides, a complimentary ticket was a "courtesy"; money was a bribe.

Between the judicious disposition of "fakes" and shepherding the troupe to a designated inn, both agent and manager, oft came by bed and board on the cuff.

In is heartwarming to recall the togetherness that frequently existed between a troupe's Captain Kidd and the local Emmet Dalton. Any proprietor in absentia who claimed he got all that was his due over the season would qualify as an Ananias or White House spokesman. If the trick returned at the end of the season in the black that was about all he could reasonably expect.

All of these were minor larcenies compared to the hocuspocus that concerned hard cash. No matter what the ramifications all systems were based on one goal—paying the show off with less than its rightful share of the gross. In all cases this required that the box count be less than the pure quill. Getting shut of the surplus developed classics in the art of skulduggery.

Stiffening on The 'Stiffs'

The simpler forms played tricks with the "hards" or "stiffs" that served the unreserved gallery. (In picturehouse parlance "hard" tickets are not hard at all. They refer to the numbered coupon, reserved, seat billet.)

In a sizable Wisconsin city the house manager, a portly little chap along Mr. Pickwick lines, could do as much with his belly as Dick Contino with a squeezebox. Come to the countup he sat at a kitchen table with a few inches of the drawer open and his midriff retracted. As he upended the tin box from the gallery a cascade of hards descended. So deft was he that many fell into the drawer which he closed without hands—the expanding tummy. If he got a hundred by the shenanigan for Frank E. Long's 10-20-30 reptile outfit at 50-50 terms, he would have but a meager five smackers for his violation of "Thou shalt not steal." But it kept him in practice for when, say, Grace Van Studiford in "The Red Father," with roost seats at four-bits, the terms at 80-20, then his modus operandi could net $40.

A Kansas-Nebraska-Missouri circuit had another scheme for lessening the count of hards. The gallery ticket box had a false bottom hinged to permit hards to fall down a spout to the boxoffice. When the company watchdog turned his head the doorman pulled a hidden string. Inasmuch as company representatives have access to the boxoffice at all times the gallery Cerberus had to be warned when the coast was clear. This was two taps on the tinchute that masqueraded as a hot air funnel.

A company manager who was in the ticket booth inadvertently tapped the chute twice. Down came a Niagara of hards.

Confronted with the fait accompli the head of the circuit, a pious octogenarian, a church deacon who would not permit Sunday shows, fired the entire boxoffice staff and doortenders. After the troupe involved had departed all were rehired. The incident was well circulated but the effect was nil. Showman considered a gyp here and there just one of the costs of doing business, like an after-hours clipjoint which pays the convent tuition for the daughter of the precinct captain.

Besides, it was a good show town and good show towns with crooks were more profitable than bad ones with honest men.

Agent were royally entertained. With this softening up gambit when it came time for the courrier avant to fill out his advance information sheet that went back to the show, he accepted the information such as hotels, dray call, crew call, departure, extra advertising and scale, with the number of seats at each price, so graciously advanced.

The Olympia Opera Co. in repertoire of "Fra Diavalo," "Olivette," "Said Pasha," "Chimes of Normandy," "Martha," "Bohemian Girl" and "Rip Van Winkle," was booked for a week. Ed Seamon, the manager, had ample time to snoop — and snoop he did. He thought that the parquet seemed more spacious than his advice sheet called for, 510.

The Bull Durham Switch

The tickettaker was the house advertising agent. Beside the waisthigh ticket box stood a tall brass cuspidor. Much to the exacerbation of Mrs. Post's predecessor, Willie chewed tobacco as he tore off the coupons of the pasteboard slips.

Watching out of the corner of his eye it appeared that Willie dutifully dropped the severed stubs into the padlocked box. Every now and then he passed his hand over his face as though to wipe the brown juice that trickled down the corner of his mouth.

"Willie, give me a chew," Seamon said.

"Shure, Ed," and reaching in his pocket he tendered the manager a plug of Battle-Axe ("A great big piece for 10c").

"No, I mean the red kind you've got in your kisser." With this, Seamon hit Willie in the back of the neck with the edge of his hand.

Will gagged and spat out a mouth full of half masticated red parquet stubs. Too bad. He was already on his 81st and only 19 more to go when spoilsport Seamon asked for a chew.

CATS ON STAGE

By GEORGE FREEDLEY

One of the first appearances of a live cat on stage occurred in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in which he starred for a generation. Cats rarely appear on stage by pre-arrangement because of their known dislike of dictation (read direction in theatrical parlance).

Their appearances on stage have more often been inadvertent than planned. On one opening night of a dismal failure called "Decision" in 1929 (not to be confused with Edward Chodorov's wartime play of the same name) a kitten wandered into the footlights and played there to the delight of the audience which Robert Garland recorded in the then N.Y. World-Telegram.

When S. N. Behrman's "Biography," starring Ina Claire, appeared at the Guild Theatre, the house cat sauntered on stage and approached the supposedly red-hot stove in which Miss Claire was burning up the manuscript of the title. The cat drew closer and closer and Miss Claire, who had spotted him grew more and more nervous. Just as the cat was about to sniff at the stove, Miss Claire swept down and smothered its outraged cries in her bosom until she found an opportunity to thrust it offstage.

George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart wrote two kittens into the Pulitzer Prize winning comedy, "You Can't Take It With You." They were to be onstage at the opening crawling over Penny Sycamore's typewritter used by the lovable Josephine Hull. It is easy to write the stage directions but it has never been known to me who actually "directed" the kittens. A cat lover obviously was on hand and told the director that a light cardboard box should be placed over the kittens on the typewriter table and removed just as the curtain rose. When kittens are confined and freed, they rise slowly and stretch and start to move around and climb. No wonder audiences roared with laughter.

Examples

There were not so many problems when Spring Byington undertook Mrs. Hull's role on the screen. Cameras can move and the patience of camera men and directors is proverbial so that the scene can be shot over and over again. That wasn't true in the original stage production because the kittens grew up every six weeks or two months and had to be replaced and rehearsed. The job of a stage manager is rarely a happy one.

When John van Druten was casting Uncle Elizabeth, the cat in "I Remember Mama," he telephoned me and asked if I could recommend a feline for the role. I might have suggested the Library cat but I knew that he was fully occupied with his official duties of mousing and keeping the rodent population under control. His hours are mostly nocturnal and would have been interfered with by nightly performances, not even considering the out-of-town tryout. Shamelessly I suggested my own pet Persian, Mr. Cat, as a candidate for audition. John agreed to come to the apartment to interview him as cats other than the much publicized Nicodemus ordinarily do not make the rounds of offices. I told this story once at an Episcopal Actors' Guild meeting in the presence of its president, my cousin, Vinton Freedley.

He quickly riposted. "George, you'd be surprised" to the delight of the actors present.

However, Van Druten agreed to come for cocktails on a Sunday and thinking the feline and I would be nervous I invited in a few close friends. I needn't have bothered. Mr. Cat resplendent with a bright red bow took the centre of the floor and held it until the conversation shifted to subjects uninteresting to him. He prowled around the room and edged closer to Van Druten's chair. For the first and only time in his long life, he jumped into the lap of a stranger. John reacted at once as he stroked the cat.

More recently Ginger Downing, handsome orange Persian belonging to Bob Downing has been preempting the feline roles beginning with "Cheri" with Kim Stanley, Lili Darvas and Horst Buchholz.

Musings of A Collector

Third-Generation Theatre Historian Dwells on Show Biz Trivia, Now Priceless For Historians, Writers, Researchers

By SAMUEL STARK

San Francisco.

FOR SALE: Original programs for "Our American Cousin" as performed at Ford's Theatre, Washington, D. C., on April 14, 1865. Slightly damaged by bullet hole and marked with spots of blood.

If you ever see the above advertised, don't try for it as I will have gotten there first. That advertisement, of course, will never appear, but it would be a collector's dream. An equally prized program would be one for the Iroquois Theatre, Chicago, for the matinee of Dec. 30, 1903, with Eddie Foy starring in "Mr. Bluebeard." Its value would not be lessened should it be slightly burned and showed signs of having been trampled on.

Not all collectors have such macabre thoughts but most of us keep alert for the unusual. It would appear that fate has deserted us that a program cannot be found from the Madison Square Garden Roof for "Mamzelle Champagne" on the night of June 25, 1906, with a hastily scribbled notation, on the cover reading, "Harry Thaw did it (signed) Stanford White."

Programs for premieres are eagerly sought and an opening night program of a hit show, also, inaugurating the opening of a new theatre is a jackpot.

Each collector has a main theme or values one type type of item above all others. Along with the books, plays, photographs and other memorabilia necessary in assembling a collection some concentrate on autographs, others on manuscripts, while still another will try for original scenic or costume designs. However, the most rewarding to a theatre collector is an accumulation by seasons, or by theatres, or by cities of old playbills and programs.

'Clear-Througher'

I am a "clear-througher." Which means I search out the programs for a hit show, commencing with its opening night out of town, then follow through with a program for its tryout in other cities before the New York opening; as often, there are changes in the cast and sometimes a title change. The New York opening night program is easy to secure, but a "clear-througher" has to obtain those for the national and foreign companies as well as closing night ones. All this takes a bit of doing.

Among some of the "straight-throughers" I have are those for "Show Boat," "No, No, Nanette," "Katja, the Dancer," "Sunny," "Bye, Bye, Bonnie" and "Kiss Me, Kate." The toughest to complete through are "Florodora," "The Merry Widow," "The Student Prince" and "Blossom Time" because of the many companies and frequent cast changes. It is almost impossible, at this late date, to achieve clear-throughs on any of the early "Ziegfeld Follies" or the old New York Hippodrome spectacles, as in those productions, acts were dropped, with new ones substituted and there was a constant changeover among the showgirls and dancers.

The theatrical collection, for which I am credited, was started by my grandfather, who born and reared in Philadelphia, was exposed, very early in life, to the best in American theatre, considering that Edwin Forrest, the Drews and the Barrymores achieved their recognition there. Although his preference was for Shakespearean drama, he, also, supported the lighter fare and he commenced then saving the programs, photographs and even ticket stubs that were eventually to become mine. My mother absorbed the hobby and, in her own fashion, sorted, catalogued and filed everything pertaining to the theatre.

Each member of our family and all our friends were enlisted toward gathering and preserving these items. When you consider that my mother had four sisters all actively engaged in expanding the collection, it is not surprising that I ended up with a tremendous amount of memorabilia, quite a bit of trivia plus an equal fervor and dedication.

A must, in those days too, for our family, were opening nights, but more important, was the 100th or 150th performance of a show. That was the night the management gave souvenirs, often, merely a silk program, but sometimes a real treasure. If mother was unable to attend a 100th performance with us, she would wait home, like a female Fagin, until my sister and I trudged home with the loot. I have most of those souvenirs at the present time. An iron elephant, 3 inches high, reading around the base, in caps, "WANG SOUVENIR—BROADWAY THEATRE —MANAGER MR FRANK W SANGER—100TH PERFORMANCE FRIDAY AUGUST 14 1891—DE WOLF HOPPER OPERA COMPANY." A real nice item is a silver nut dish, in the centre, engraved in a circle reads, "Herald Square Theatre—Charles Frohman, Manager. Wed. Eve. March 23, 1904. Charles Frohman & George Edwards present for the 150th time in New York 'The Girl From Kay's' with Sam Bernard." Also some silk and paper fans from, "Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic," "Maytime" and "Irene."

There was no thought at the time that our haphazard collection would ever be of value to anyone or that it would be used in future years by students, writers and researchers. What proved to be a frustrating and time-consuming effort to me in later years was my habit of cutting the name of the performer or the play title from below certain photographs. We readily knew and could identify at once any particular picture and the photo caption seemed unnecessary. This played havoc with me later when I started a file system and had to match up all those faces and plays.

Equally baffling to me now, are a type of scrapbook kept by my sister and other young girls in the 1890s and early 1900s. A publishing company placed on the market a "Theatre Record & Scrapbook." It was meant for the romantic misses of that period and the publisher must have succeeded beyond his wildest dreams as these horrible keepsakes have a way of turning up in old bookstores and there are at least two or three in with every theatre collection I purchase. These scrapbooks, covered in blue indigo muslin, are about the size of an average novel, and contain 75 blank pages, except for the headings: Play; Theatre; Date; Accompanied by.

Beneath this is a blocked-out space, five inches by five inches, in which the cast from the program may be cut out and inserted.

Anonymous Opry Houses

The date space, if filled in and legible, can be of some help but, often, the year is omitted.

The theatre line, in most cases, reads: "Opera House." There were hundreds of opera houses throughout the United States during that period, so, the researcher is thwarted at the start.

However, the line, "Accompanied by" is always a bust. This line, in at least 18 out of 20 pseudo-scrapbooks, is inked in with trivia, such as "Dodo & Uncle Frank (peppermints, Yum Yum!!!)" or, with "Mummy & Mr. B." As a young boy, I was not bothered by the line, "Accompanied by." Perhaps I thought Dodo was a dog and it seemed a novel idea to take a pooch to the theatre.

All the above must paint a dismal picture of the life of a collector, however, there are compensations, such as the friend who telephones and says, "Maybe I have something for you. I was helping an elderly neighbor, by carrying some trash from her basement, and there were four cartons of old theatre programs that belonged to her uncle, who was a drama critic on some New York paper. Of course, they are awfully old and he evidently scribbled notations all over the margins but she gave them to me . . . would you like them?"

John Barrymore Recalled

Continued from page 253

meant nothing to me. I knew only that & at least I had the chance to see my idol in person, and that I might have the chance perhaps even to talk to him. If that chance came, I knew exactly the one question I wanted to ask him. I also knew that his answer would remain with me always.

Well, I did meet him. How is not important here, but perhaps you may be interested in his answer to my very simple and perhaps naive question, "Mr. Barrymore, how can one become a great Shakespearean actor?"

I can see him now, rubbing the makeup off his ravaged but still magnificent face, pondering an almost ridiculous question from an eager, highly impressionable young man. He looked at me gravely, and then at length he answered my question. Mind you, I was nothing to him. I cannot repeat all that he said, although everything he said is still bright in my heart. What I can tell you is the essential point of what he said, and this point he emphasized with many examples. In sum, he said that a man must know what he wants to do, know all the reasons why he wants to do it, and then he must do it with all his mind and all his soul. He used the two words "mind" and "soul" frequently.

"Answer this question," he said to me. "Why do you want to become a Shakespearean actor? Why indeed do you want to become an actor?" Thunderstruck, I couldn't answer. He went on: "That's exactly what I mean. I don't think you'll be satisfied with life until you can answer those questions with total satisfaction to yourself. You say you love Shakespeare. Do you know Shakespeare? Do you know him well? Do you know why you love him?" I was silent. "That's part of the answer. That's what is so wrong with so much of the world — so many people who don't know why. I was shoved on to a stage when I was a kid, before I had a chance to even ask why. But you—you've got your chance. Just remember this: don't make a move in life until you're pretty damned sure you know the answer to why."

Those words of his are still with me. They are words that made me burn to know Shakespeare more; made me want to know the answer to a lot of "whys" about Shakespeare; made me, eventually go to Stratford-upon-Avon for three years of graduate study.

I knew before I saw John Barrymore that wintry evening in 1939 that his words would stay with me, but I had no way of knowing that they would literally become my professional way of life. I like to think that the academic theatre is the study not only of the "how" of theatre but also of the "why," and that those of us who are in it come to our calling with this as our guide word. I found the guide word through the forbearance and kindness of a very great gentleman.

RE-DOING MOLIERE

'Tartuffe' By Richard Wilbur Into Miller, Milwaukee

Milwaukee.

A new translation by Richard Wilbur of Moliere's "Tartuffe" is scheduled to open, arena style, tonight (Wed.) at the Fred Miller Theatre here. Stephen Porter is directing the presentation in which Philip Minor will play the title role.

Other members of the cast include Robert Stattel, Patricia O'Connell, Mylo Quam, Anne Lynn, Dennis Longwell, James Cahill, Mary Doyle, David Grimm, Barbett Weiss, Janet Noble and Jan Oliver.

Pressagentry Of Yester B'way

By BERNARD SOBEL

Theatrical press stunts, once the joy and pride of the pressagent and a first-aid to the boxoffice, are rare today but the memory persists: Joe Flynn, the greatest stunt man of his era, put over more musicals than he could count; and he counted among his most spectacular stunts a chorus girl tug-of-war, right in the heart of Broadway, and a tight-wire exhibition, high over the Palace Theatre electric sign.

Another great stunt man, sure to pull a surprise trick out of his pocket for anything, from burlesque to Shakespeare, is Charley Washburn. His devotion to this form of legerdemain caused him to write a book about it—the only one ever published—together with a history of pressagents.

Washburn preceded Polly Adler with a book about the Everleigh sisters who preceded that literary madame. When he wrote it, the subject made the raised-eyebrow set shudder. The book has just come back into print in a paperback edition.

The greatest press agent of his era was a producer, Florenz Ziegfeld. Though more than a quarter of a century has passed since his death, his achievements still live. He created the American revue, produced "Show Boat," was the first exponent of mixed casts, "glorified the American girl," and introduced or developed a small army of musical comedy and revue stars; and an imposing list of imitators, headed by George White, Earl Carroll and John Murray Anderson.

The most famous stunt in theatrical history was Anna Held's milk bath. Who devised it, has never been determined but the man who helped put it over was certainly Ziegfeld, who provided the lactic liquid for his whilom wife's daily ablutions.

A year or so ago, I made a discovery that may have provided the idea. In a collection of short stories by Emile Zola, known best to this non-reading generation by "Life of Emile Zola," the motion picture, starring Paul Muni, the story stated that French women preserved their beauty by taking milk baths. Obviously, Anna Held, familiar with this theory, passed it on; and Ziegfeld or one of his lively-minded p.a.'s or a newspaper reporter telled it into a legend.

Incidentally, Ziegfeld anticipated the motion picture junkets by at least 10 years before the advent of the cinema. When he produced a show in Washington, he took the Baltimore critics there in a special train to cover the opening.

Another famous stunt concerned Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the original Eliza of "Pygmalion," subsequently "My Fair Lady." She was said to have been so sensitive to noises that a tanbark covering had to be placed around the theatre in which she played in order to insure pianissimo quiet.

Jazz Wedding

The most outrageous stunt in the history of publicity was the invention of Neil Kingsley. The time was the beginning of the Jazz era when that type of dancing, body to body, was as shocking as it was agreeable. The place was Roseland—the old building on Seventh Avenue. The occasion was a wedding. Not a formal wedding and not an informal wedding but a Jazz Wedding.

The bridesmaids, 12 beauteous selectees from the 10c-a-dance hostess personnel, honored the ceremony by swaying up the aisle of the terpsichorian emporium. The invited guests and crashees undulated to a jarr band prothalamion. The groom did a rhythmic sway as he said "I do." The bride did a simultaneous tempo for her "I do." The preacher, an unfrocked worthy, likewise swayed away as he intoned "I now pronounce you man and wife."

The occasion was onerous, but the guests were honorable and distinguished members of the Cheese Club—that pioneer organization of pressagents, advertising agents and men-about-town which included Harry Hirshfield, then already famous for his m.c. expertise.

Jule Styne

GEORGE ABBOTT

"NEVER TOO LATE"

"A FUNNY THING HAPPENED ON THE WAY TO THE FORUM"

THE NEW MUSICAL COMEDY

the Girl Who Came to Supper

BROADWAY THEATRE, NEW YORK

Alexander H. Cohen

presents

TWENTY EAST FORTY-SIXTH STREET • NEW YORK 17, N. Y. • TN 7-3434 • CABLES: ALEXCOHEN
QUEENS THEATRE, • LONDON, W.C.2 • TEMPLE BAR 5224 • CABLES: ALEXCOHEN

General Manager: Roy A. Somlyo
Comptroller: Seymour Herscher
Gen. Press Rep.: David Rothenberg
Company Manager: A. Gino Giglio
Press Associate: Michael Alpert
Production Assistants: Annette Segal, Robin Rudd
Production Secretary: Davina Crawford
Staff Assistants: Jane Vanderploeg, Anne Langdon, Virginia Smyth

Production Manager: Jean Barrere
Casting Directors: Jessica Levy, Warren McClane
Master Carpenter: John Towers
Master Electrician: Robert Schwagerle
Master of Properties: Mario Fedeli
Wardrobe Supervisor: Ruth Tishman
Advertising Rep.: Ingram Ash
Counsel: Colton and Fernbach
Auditors: Murray H. Hollender and Co.

PRODUCTION ASSOCIATES: Gabriel Katzka André Goulston

1963 1964

GOLDEN THEATRE	BEYOND THE FRINGE
MAJESTIC THEATRE	THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL
ZIEGFELD THEATRE	MAURICE CHEVALIER
LYCEUM THEATRE	AGES OF MAN
HAYMARKET THEATRE	THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA
PLYMOUTH THEATRE	LORENZO
ROYALE THEATRE	KARMON ISRAELI DANCERS
ATKINSON THEATRE	MAN AND BOY
MARK HELLINGER THEATRE	RUGANTINO
LUNT-FONTANNE THEATRE	HAMLET
NATIONAL COMPANY	BEYOND THE FRINGE
IN PREPARATION	BAKER STREET
IN PREPARATION	WORLD WAR TWO and A HALF

HAROLD PRINCE PRODUCTIONS 630 Fifth Ave., New York 20, N.Y.

AMERICA'S FUNNIEST MUSICAL

ZERO MOSTEL in

A FUNNY THING HAPPENED ON THE WAY TO THE FORUM

21st MONTH—ALVIN THEATRE—N.Y.C.

NOW... ENGLAND'S FUNNIEST MUSICAL

4th Month—Strand Theatre—London

(produced by HAROLD PRINCE, TONY WALTON, RICHARD PILBROW)

NATIONAL COMPANY

FORREST THEATRE—PHILADELPHIA

(Presented by MARTIN TAHSE by arrangement with HAROLD PRINCE)

"SEASON'S BEST MUSICAL"

Variety Poll-N.Y. Reviewers, July '63

BARBARA COOK DANIEL MASSEY

BARBARA BAXLEY in

SHE LOVES ME

with JACK CASSIDY

also starring

LUDWIG DONATH

9th MONTH—EUGENE O'NEILL THEATRE—N.Y.C.

Opening in London, April, 1963

(produced by HAROLD PRINCE, TONY WALTON, RICHARD PILBROW)

OPENING N.Y., SEPT. 1964

"TEVYE"

A New Musical

(Presented with FRED COE)

Congratulations!

RICHARD RODGERS

BOB SWASH IN LONDON

IN ASSOCIATION WITH

BEN KAMSLER

PRESENTS

PORTRAIT of MURDER

By ROBERT BLOOMFIELD

Directed by GEORGE SHDANOFF

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE

BOB SWASH IN NEW YORK

AND THE

ENGLISH STAGE COMPANY'S

PRODUCTION OF

WESKERS

CHIPS WITH EVERYTHING

Directed by JOHN DEXTER

Presented by

MORTON GOTTLIEB & HELEN BONFILS

BOOTH THEATRE

rd Year!

MOLLY PICON

Starring In

"Milk and Honey"

Book: DON APPEL

Music and Lyrics: JERRY HERMAN

JACOB KALICH, Personal Representative

Ed Robbins, WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY

Starlight Musicals

THANK YOU

One and all for another

FIRST RATE SEASON

and especially

VAN JOHNSON ★
★ ETHEL MERMAN
JULIA MEADE ★
★ ROBERT HORTON ANN BLYTH ★
★ PATRICIA MORISON

also

JEFFERY LONGE—Director

ED RESENER—Musical Director

TOD JACKSON—Choreographer

ROBERT GREEN—Scenic Designer

GORDON O. BROWN—Choral Director

FORREST CARTER—Production Stage Manager

ROBERT WAIT—Stage Manager

TOMMY THORNTON—Assistant Choreographer

MANHATTAN COSTUME CO.—Costumes

PATRICIA THOMPSON—Productions Secretary

ROBERT L. YOUNG, JR. — General Manager

ROBERT BRUCE HOLLEY — Producer

STARLIGHT MUSICALS, Inc.

Indianapolis, Indiana

119 West 57 Street, New York

JODY BERRY

Just Completed Starring as Sky Masterson in "Guys & Dolls" at

DORCHESTER MUSIC HALL

Per. Mgr.: JACK BEGUN, 20 E. Delaware, Chicago, Ill. Phone WHitehall 4-4970

ZEV BUFMAN—STAN SEIDEN

THEATRICAL ENTERPRISES

LOS ANGELES

IVAR THEATRE • CIVIC PLAYHOUSE • LE GRAND THEATRE • CAMEO PLAYHOUSE

also THE BACKSTAGE LOUNGE

MIAMI

COCONUT GROVE PLAYHOUSE and RESTAURANTS

ON TOUR

"PAJAMA TOPS" NATIONAL CO.

PRE-BROADWAY

(In Association with Roger Stevens)

CELESTE HOLM • JEAN PIERRE AUMONT • MACDONALD CAREY

"MADLY IN LOVE"

(In Association with Herbert Swope, Jr.)

LEO GENN • FORREST TUCKER • MAGGIE HAYES

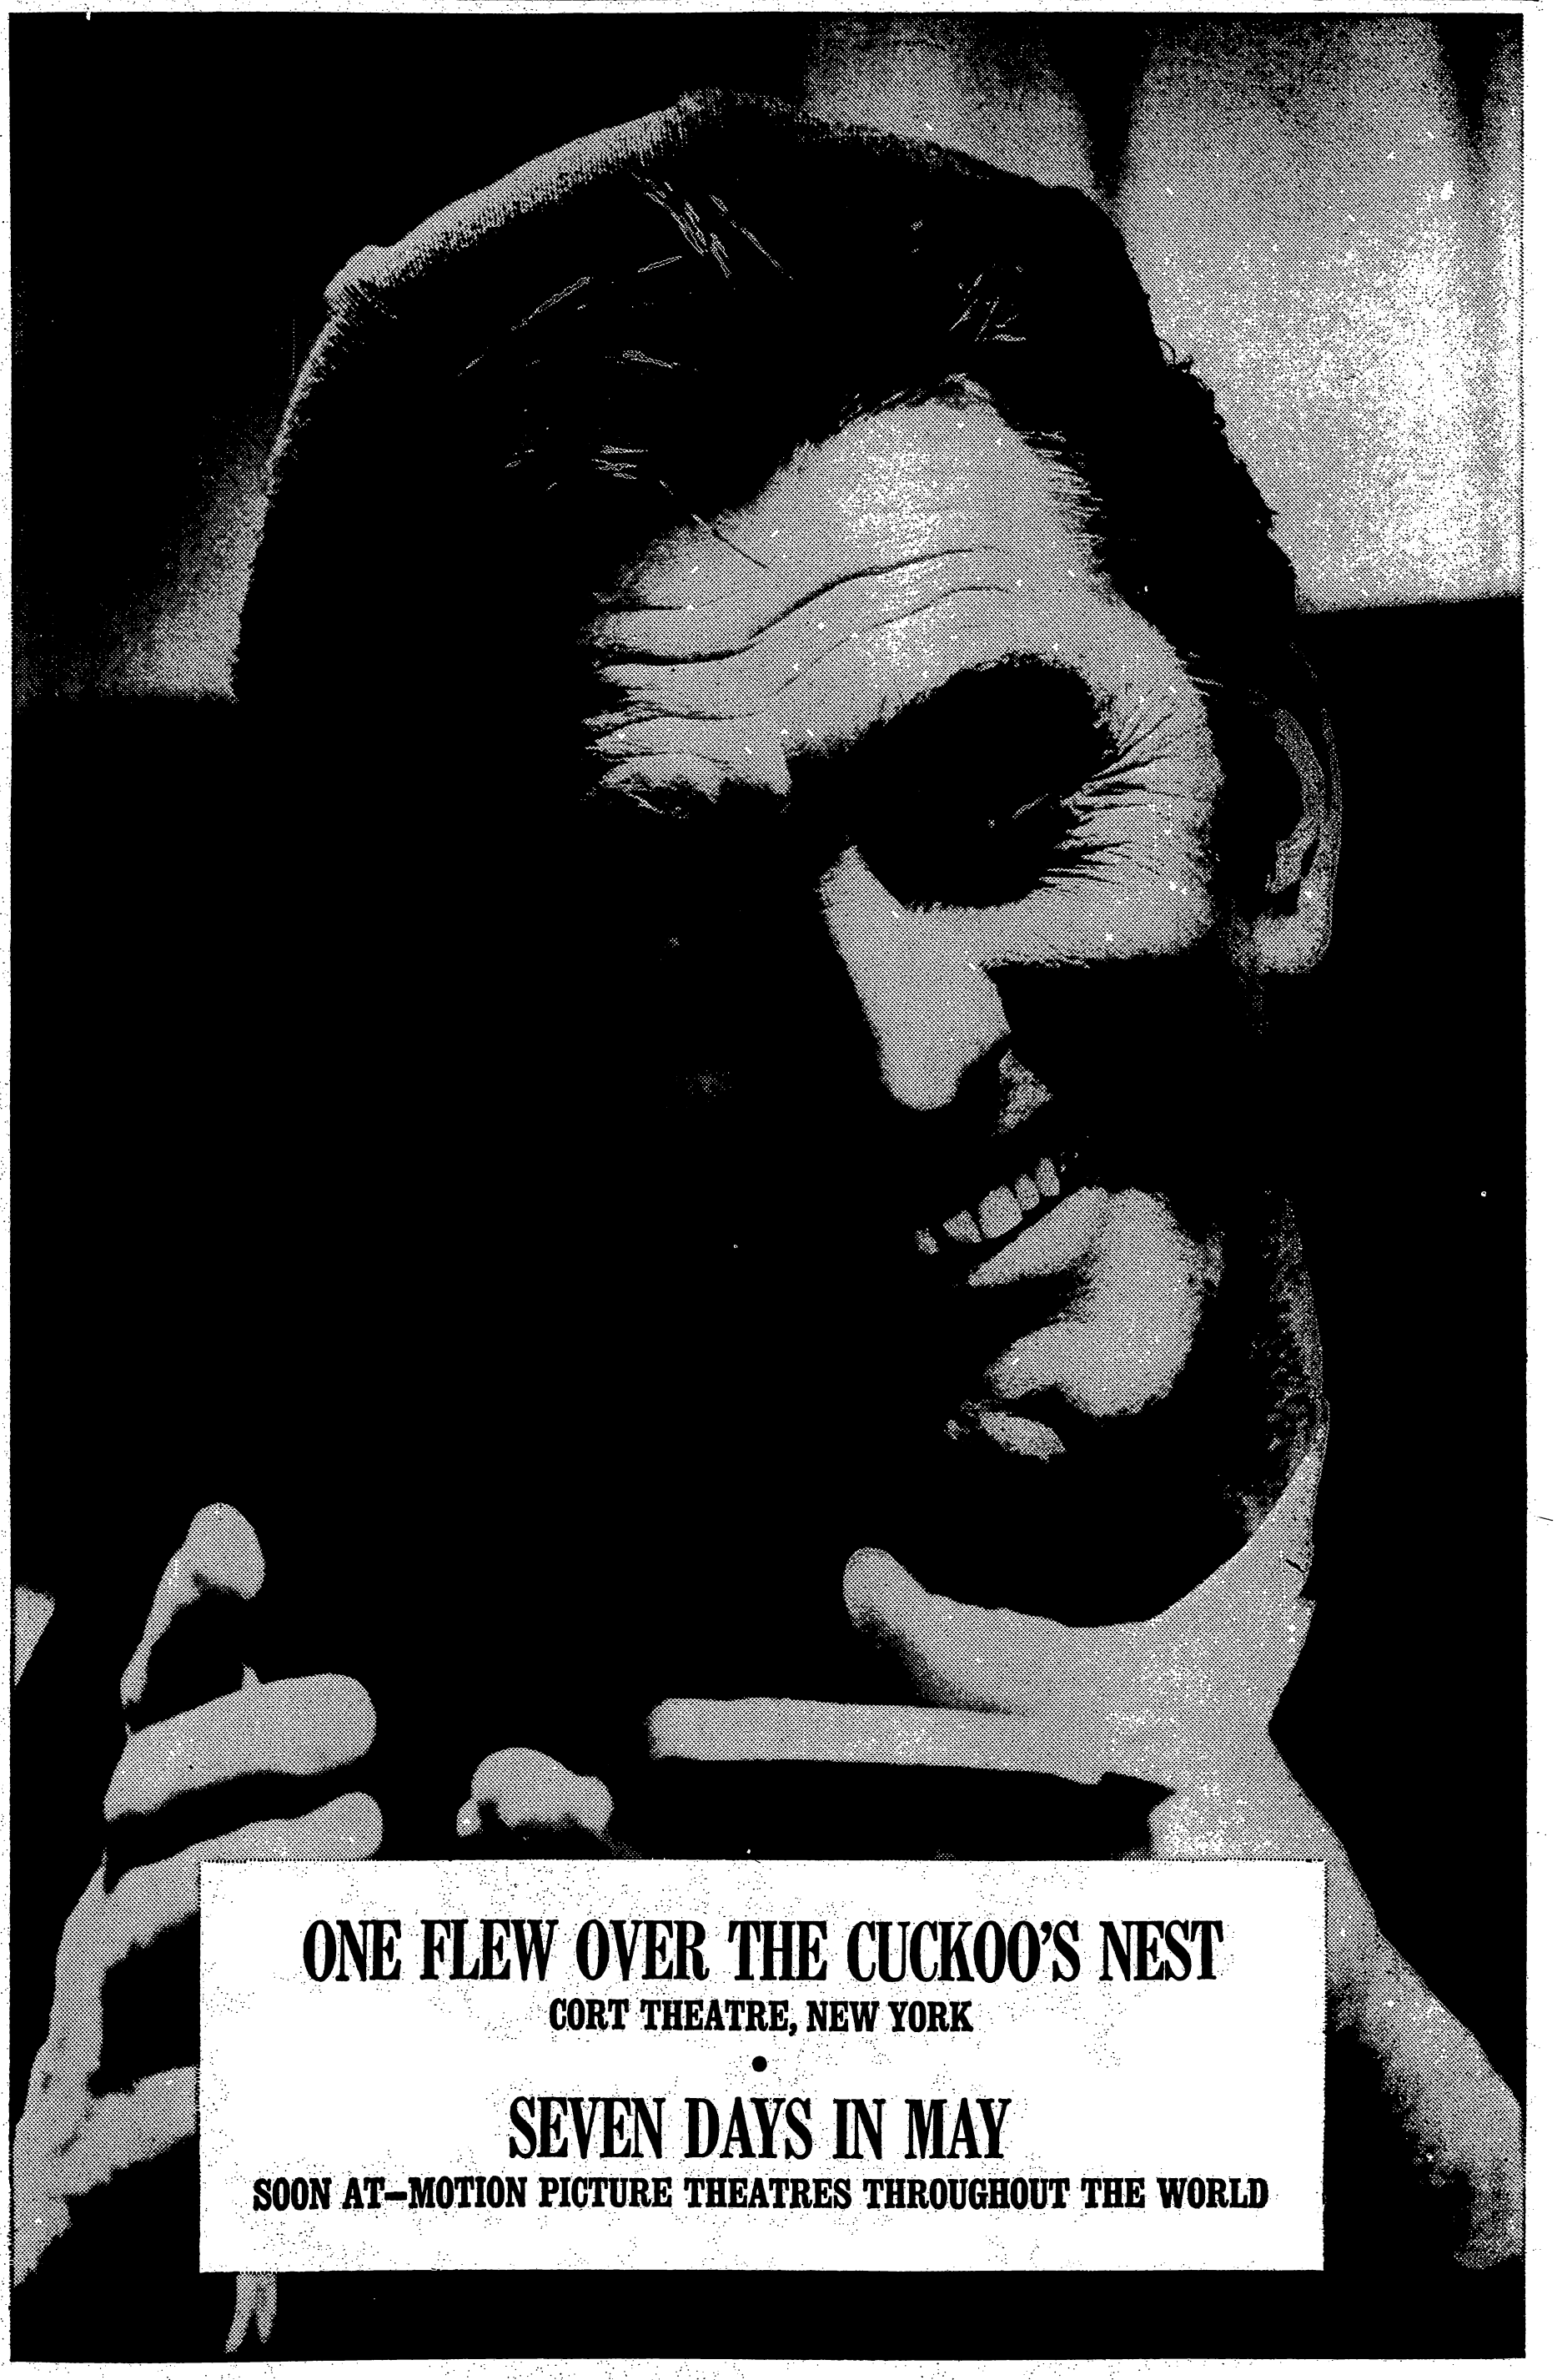
"FAIR GAME FOR LOVERS"

IN PREPARATION

LILLIPUT THEATRE (TV)

For Information

1605 N. Ivar, Hollywood 28, Calif. • 3500 Main Hiway, Miami 33, Florida • 234 W. 44 Street, New York (9th Floor)



ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST
CORT THEATRE, NEW YORK
•
SEVEN DAYS IN MAY SOON AT-MOTION PICTURE THEATRES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Best Wishes, VARIETY

JUDY HOLLIDAY

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE
"NEAR NORTH" STAR

TOM WILLIAMS

A LIFER AT THE HAPPY MEDIUM
901 N. Rush St., Chicago

Now Starring in "THREE CHEERS FOR THE TIRED BUSINESS MAN"

Also STARING AT THE RUSH STREET GIRLS (4th Yr.)

Greetings

Claudia Franck

Drama Coach to the Stars

145 West 55th Street
New York 19, N. Y. CIrcle 7-6394

MAIDMAN PLAYHOUSES

AVAILABLE—BOOKINGS OR ANNUAL LEASE

MAIDMAN	MIDWAY	MERMAID	MAYFAIR	MASQUE
416 W. 42	420 W. 42	422 W. 42	235 W. 46	442 W. 42
199 seats	149 seats	149 seats	299 seats	149 seats

Beautiful, and specially architectured for all presentations. Modern acoustics, lovely backstage, first class electrical equipment. The best showcase for your production.

ALL THEATRES INCLUDE STUDIOS — REHEARSAL AREA — WORKSHOPS

IRVING MAIDMAN - 1501 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, - BR 9-7235

Best Wishes to VARIETY

Victoria Crandall

Opening Feb. 6, 1964
Orpheum Theatre — New York City
"JO"

Opening June 26, 1964
Brunswick Summer Playhouse, Brunswick, Me.
"IRMA LA DOUCE"

S. HUROK

PRESENTS FOR

1964-1965

SOPRANOS
VICTORIA DE LOS ANGELES
ROBERTA PETERS
GALINA VISHNEVSKAYA
MARY COSTA
ADELE ADDISON
ELINOR ROSS

MEZZO-SOPRANOS
GRACE BUMBRY
ZARA DOLOUKHANOVA

CONTRALTOS
MARIAN ANDERSON
CLARAMAE TURNER

TENORS
JAN PEERCE
CESARE VALLETTI

BASS
JEROME HINES

PIANISTS
ARTUR RUBINSTEIN
EMIL GILELS
GINA BACHAUER
JOHN OGDON
ABBEY SIMON
RALPH VOTAPEK
SVIATOSLAV RICHTER
VAN CLIBURN
BYRON JANIS
EUGENE ISTOMIN
DANIEL BARENBOIM
ANN SCHEIN
LUBOSHUTZ and NEMENOFF

VIOLINISTS
ISAAC STERN
NATHAN MILSTEIN
HENRYK SZERYNG
SHMUEL ASHKENASI
DAVID OISTRAKH
LEONID KOGAN
IGOR OISTRAKH*

CELLISTS
GREGOR PIATIGORSKY
MSTISLAV ROSTROPOVICH*
DANIEL SHAFRAN
ANTONIO JANIGRO
LESLIE PARNAS

CONDUCTORS
LORIN MAAZEL
CARLO MARIA GIULINI
PAUL KLETZKI
ALFRED WALLENSTEIN
ANTAL DORATI
EFREM KURTZ
ANDRE VANDERNOOT
ANTONIO JANIGRO
MAURICE ABRAVANEL
WALTER HENDL
WITOLD ROWICKI
AKEO WATANABE
and
IGOR STRAVINSKY with ROBERT CRAFT

GUITARISTS
ANDRES SEGOVIA
JULIAN BREAM
JOHN WILLIAMS
and
PRESTI AND LAGOYA

FOLK SINGER
RICHARD DYER-BENNET

FLUTIST
ELAINE SHAFFER

THE LENINGRAD KIROV BALLET
MOISEYEV DANCE COMPANY
THE BOLSHOI BALLET*
THE ROYAL BALLET*
WARSAW PHILHARMONIC
BALLET FOLKLORICO OF MEXICO
D'OYLY CARTE OPERA COMPANY
ANTONIO and LES BALLETS DE MADRID
COMEDIE FRANCAISE
MOSCOW CHAMBER ORCHESTRA
RUDOLF BARSHAI
THE VIENNA CHOIR BOYS
NATIONAL SWEDISH CHORUS
SOLISTI DI ZAGREB
EMLYN WILLIAMS
as CHARLES DICKENS
BRAINWELL FLETCHER

FOR THE FIRST TIME!
METROPOLITAN OPERA NATIONAL COMPANY

FROM LONDON
B.B.C. SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA with ANTAL DORATI, Musical Director and guest conductors

FROM TOKYO
THE JAPAN PHILHARMONIC with AKEO WATANABE, Musical Director and Conductor and TOSHIYA ETO, guest violinist

FROM WARSAW
POLISH MIME THEATRE
The extraordinary company which thrilled Paris

YAKOV ZAK
The renowned Soviet pianist

IRINA ARKHIPOVA
The brilliant Soviet mezzo-soprano

THE ROGER WAGNER CHORALE WITH ORCHESTRA

MARTINA ARROYO
Exciting international opera soprano

RAFAEL PUYANA
The superb harpsichordist

and
THE MASSED BANDS, DRUMS, PIPES AND DANCERS of the ROYAL INNISKILLING FUSILIERS
THE ROYAL ULSTER RIFLES
THE ROYAL IRISH FUSILIERS
in an unforgettable spectacle of marching ceremonies, rousing music and thrilling dances

EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT:
HUROK ATTRACTIONS INC.
HUROK CONCERTS INC.

*Not available season 1964-65

ALL GOOD WISHES

O'KEEFE CENTRE

TORONTO

HUGH WALKER
Managing Director

THE THEATRE GUILD

THEATRE GUILD PRODUCTIONS, INC.

GERTRUDE BERG in "DEAR ME, THE SKY IS FALLING"

SAM LEVENE IN "SEIDMAN AND SON"

THEATRE GUILD FILMS, INC.

THEATRE GUILD MUSIC, INC.

MelodyLand THEATRE

OPPOSITE DISNEYLAND

The Most Beautiful Theatre In The World-In The Round

PLAY SERIES 1964

JAN. 14-26 TWO WEEKS ONLY!

SAMMY LEWIS & DANNY DARE present

BURGESS MEREDITH

"the Teahouse of the August Moon"

by JOHN PATRICK

Adapted from the novel by VERN SNEIDER

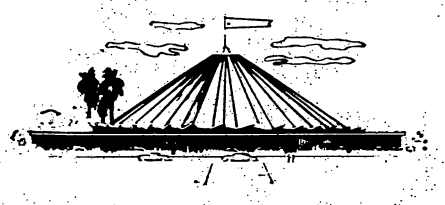
also starring

JOHN McGIVER & GENE BLAKELY

NITELY except Mon at 8:30 SUN. MATS. at 3:00 pm

Seats Now at Boxoffice, or by Mail. For Information call Anaheim (714) 776-7220

TICKETS also on sale at So.Calif. Music Co., 637 S.Hill, L.A., All Mutual Agencies, Wallich's Music City Stores.



HOWARD DUFF & ANNE JEFFREYS in "ANNIVERSARY WALTZ" JAN. 28
GISELE MacKENZIE in "AUNTIE MAME" FEB. 11
JERRY VAN DYKE in "NO TIME FOR SERGEANTS" FEB. 25

Mr. J. J.

By Rev. Dr. Nathan A. Perilman

(At the Funeral of Jacob J. Shubert, Temple Emanu-El, December 29, 1963)

Just ten years ago yesterday many of us were gathered in this sanctuary to say farewell to Mr. Lee Shubert. Everyone of the many hundreds who were present then, felt, as we do at this moment, that we were gathered to pay the tributes of our hearts not to one person alone, but to a part of a family and of a great and unique institution — the American theatre.

Today we come to bid farewell to Mr. J. J. who represented the other part of that almost fabled family, and in an important sense, to bid adieu to an era which will long be remembered, but will possibly never be relived.

We Americans love legends and success stories. We like our heroes to have had humble origins and we want their dedication to duty, and their hard labors to win great rewards. J. J. Shubert fits this pattern as did Mr. Lee and Mr. Sam many years ago.

It can be an awesome thing to become a legend in one's own lifetime and to live to see that legend embellished by the imaginative, exaggerated by the sycophant, challenged and pried into by the curious, and denigrated by those whose only need of heroes is to destroy them.

J. J. Shubert was a vital part of this legend which touches a significant area of our American civilization. He was among the pioneers who brought the American theatre into the modern age. His name is associated with over 500 plays which he produced—with many thousands which his theatres housed in every part of this land over the past century. It would be difficult, indeed, impossible to name the great stage and screen personalities of the past generation without listing many of those who were discovered by Mr. J. J. or who began and developed their careers under his demanding and exacting tutelage. As it was with performers, so was it with authors and playwrights whose names and works are classic in the theatre.

To New Yorkers, Broadway is more than the name of a meandering avenue running from the Battery to Yonkers. It is a magic world where people go to find all the manifold values that they prize in life. As not all of these are good, so are they not all evil. Broadway's very locale was largely determined by the choice which these fabulous brothers made over a half century ago. Where they led, all the rest were bound to follow.

The time must come when someone versed in theatre lore, familiar with the great personalities who have peopled the stage and the business offices of this world of make-believe, will do an authentic work on the significant contributions which this trio of brothers made. There will be many legends to enrich that story.

But behind the legends were men, each with peculiar gifts of heart and mind and spirit. Each serving in his own deeply personal way. Today we come to pay our final tribute to the last of them.

Like every person of great dimension, J. J. Shubert had contradictory personal characteristics and qualities. He loved the theatre with all of his being. It was almost like the love of a man for the women of his heart's desire. He delighted in its beautiful unreality, and was intimately involved with so many for whom the glaring spotlight of publicity was the warming, lifegiving, sun. J. J. shrank from this aspect of theatrical life. He was almost painfully shy of personal attention. He rarely gave interviews and avoided as much as he possibly could the haunts where people of the theatre went to be seen. When some night place claimed his presence, it was almost invariably in search of the talent to which he was peculiarly sensitive, and which he helped in so many instances achieve fame and success. There was nothing of the flambouyant in this retiring, almost self-effacing, often somber man.

He could be generous in a princely manner toward those for whom he felt affection or gratitude. Many people knew the benefits of his kindness without even knowing who their benefactor was. He was as reticent in his public benefactions as he was in his private life. His giving knew none of the barriers of race or religion or any other distinction.

But J. J. could be demanding too. There was no limit to which he would not push himself in the busy creative years of his life when as many as a score of productions were under his directing hands at one time. He demanded of others the same undeviating loyalty and unqualified devotion which he himself was ready to give. When he was disappointed or felt betrayed by another, he withdrew his attention and friendship and could be adamantine in a relationship which once had been warm and deeply affectionate.

J. J. loved to travel. He knew this country very well. Every cosmopolitan community in Europe was familiar to him. But home was the heart of things — 44th Street was most of his world.

J. J. loved his family. His devotion to the memory of his brother, Sam, was one of the most meaningful and enriching factors of his life. With his brother Lee he confronted and met the challenge of the theatrical world for fifty magnificent years. Together they were a part of its golden age. This man who shrank from sentimentality had a deep and abiding sentiment for all his family.

He was a loving and proud father of his only son, John, who died just a little over a year ago. He leaves behind not only a devoted wife and nephews, but a great host of people in and out of the theatre who will long remember him for his personal involvement in their lives and for his role in a dynastic family whose name will forever be a part of this exciting world which they helped to build.

The wise men of old tell us we should not mourn for the dead. All the tears in the world could not bring J. J. Shubert back, even for a moment, to say "do not weep for me." For too long he has walked deep in the valley of the shadow. His life was blessed in years, rich in accomplishment, enlarged by enduring friendships. His imprint upon the life of our time will long be clearly seen.

To him we say, GO IN PEACE, may peace and quiet be thy portion in life eternal. To his bereaved wife, his nephews, his friends and associates, to all who were bound to him by whatever tie, what was precious in him will remain in the treasure house of memory. Let those who truly loved him follow his example of cherishing and enshrining the memory of a beloved.

AMEN

Season's Greetings—

CAROL CHANNING

Starring in

DAVID MERRICK'S Production
"HELLO, DOLLY!"
Directed & Choreographed—by Gower Champion

AMERICA'S FOREMOST SUMMER THEATRE
OPERATING JUNE THROUGH SEPTEMBER

DALLAS SUMMER MUSICALS
TOM HUGHES, PRODUCER

Sardi's
"Your Restaurant"
234 W. 44th ST.
NEW YORK, N.Y.
LA 4-0707

THE PRODUCERS THEATRE

ROBERT WHITEHEAD ROGER L. STEVENS ROBERT W. DOWLING LOUIS A. LOTITO

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

ST. JAMES THEATRE

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SHUBERT THEATRE

BOSTON, MASS.

COLONIAL THEATRE

WILBUR THEATRE

SAMUEL H. SCHWARTZ
JUJAMCYN THEATERS
246 WEST 44TH ST., N. Y. 36, N. Y.

19th GIANT NEW EDITION!

"A SPHERE OF BEAUTY" EXTRAVAGANZA presenting

SHOWTIME ON BROADWAY
...in the glorious Ziegfeld tradition

BARN DANCE U.S.A.
...Western Americana in song and dance

A LOVE TALE OF JAPAN
...excerpts from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly"

THE ENCHANTED CLOCK SHOP
...a piquant fantasy

THE MELODIES OF VICTOR HERBERT ...profile in song and dance

MARDI GRAS "DIXIELAND"
... New Orleans Style

Plus A SENSATIONAL CAST of INTERNATIONAL CHAMPIONS and STARS!

HOLIDAY ON ICE OF 1964

MORRIS CHALFEN presents
WORLD FAMOUS

A SPARKLING SPECTACLE!

HOLIDAY ON ICE SHOWS, INC.
Producers of the World's Greatest Ice Spectacles!

NEW YORK 23, N. Y. (General Offices 1860 Broadway, Circle 6-8660
CLEVELAND, OHIO: 11607 Euclid Ave., SWeetbriar 1-8474
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.: 1801 Nicollet Ave., FEderal 2-8059
PITTSBURGH 35, PA.: 2 Shady Lane
PARIS, FRANCE: Claridge Hotel
LONDON W. 1, ENGLAND London Pavilion Chambers, Great Windmill St.
and
HOLIDAY ON ICE AROUND THE WORLD: International (Europe), Great Britain (London), South America, Far East, Middle East
For Information Contact:
A. E. GRANT (Cleveland) — JOHN FINLEY (New York)

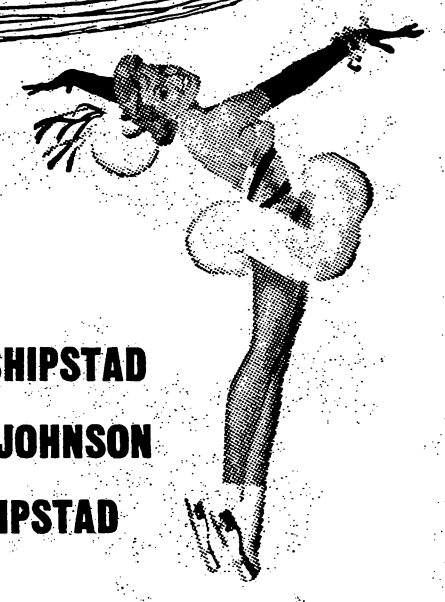
GILBERT MILLER

NEW YORK:
Henry Miller's Theatre
124 West 43rd Street

LONDON:
6B Hertford Street
W. 1.

THE SHOW OF CHAMPIONS
28th Annual Edition
SHIPSTADS & JOHNSON
Ice Follies
1964

NOW
MADISON SQUARE GARDEN



Fourteen cities remaining on 28th Edition schedule:

NEW YORK, N.Y.	Jan. 7-19
SYRACUSE, N.Y.	Jan. 21-26
TORONTO, CANADA	Jan. 27-Feb. 2
MONTREAL, CANADA	Feb. 4-11
BOSTON, MASS.	Feb. 13-23
CLEVELAND, OHIO	Feb. 25-Mar. 8
PITTSBURGH, PA.	Mar. 10-15
BUFFALO, N.Y.	Mar. 17-22
EASTER VACATION	Mar. 23-27
BALTIMORE, MD.	Mar. 28-Apr. 5
OMAHA, NEB.	Apr. 8-12
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.	Apr. 14-26
SEATTLE, WASH.	Apr. 29-May 10
PORTLAND, ORE.	May 12-17
VACATION	May 18-June 23
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.	June 24-Sept. 6

★ EDDIE SHIPSTAD
★ OSCAR JOHNSON
★ ROY SHIPSTAD

Congratulations VARIETY

On Your 58th Anniversary

SHELLEY WINTERS

Best Wishes

DAVID MERRICK PRODUCTIONS

STOP THE WORLD—I WANT TO GET OFF

OLIVER!

LUTHER

110 IN THE SHADE

THE MILK TRAIN DOESN'T STOP HERE ANYMORE

HELLO, DOLLY!

FOXY

GARINEI E GIOVANNINI

Thank

ALEXANDER H. COHEN and JACK HYLTON

and Their Staff for the Broadway Presentation of

RUGANTINO

Musical Comedy by GARINEI E GIOVANNINI

Written with FESTA CAMPANILE E FRANCIOSA

Music ARMANDO TROVAIOLI

Scenes and Costumes GIULIO COLTELLACCI

Dances and Musicals Scenes DANIA KRUPSKA

Starring

NINO MANFREDI

ORNELLA VANONI

ALDO FABRIZI

WHICH WILL OPEN AT MARK HELLINGER THEATRE ON FEBRUARY 8TH, 1964, AFTER A TRYOUT AT THE O'KEEFE THEATRE IN TORONTO.

DeSantis

FIORIN - MILANO

TEATRO SISTINA, Rome, Via Sistina, 129

MAMMA

Mamma Leone's Ristorante

"Where strong appetites are met and conquered."

239 WEST 48TH STREET, JU 6-5151

Season's Greetings

EDDIE DIMOND

PRODUCTION STAGE MGR. "CAMELOT"

(On Tour for Guettel-Cantor)

Congratulations to VARIETY

SAM STARK

EX-COLLECTOR and EX-HISTORIAN

1980 JACKSON STREET, SAN FRANCISCO 9, CALIF.

THEATRE and SPORTS TICKET BROKER to the Profession and Variety Muggs

LS/MFT

OUR CHOICEST EIGHTY LINE TICKETS

MACKEYS, Inc.

234 West 44th Street, New York

Robert Louis Stevenson Defense of Lepers' Priest Dramatized in Hawaii

Honolulu.

Honolulu Community Theatre preemed "The Damien Letter," by Mrs. Aldyth Morris, for six performances at the Ruger Theatre, Hawaii, starting last Friday night (3). The play concerns the personal scandal which threatened the 19th century Rev. Damien, who worked among lepers, and his defense by Robert Louis Stevenson.

Besides the Ruger Theatre performances an additional showing is planned for the Kalaupapa Settlement on the island of Molokai, the place of Rev. Damien's work among the lepers. L. Newell Tarrant is director of the production for which the sets have been designed by William Trotman.

The Bard at 400

Continued from page 246

responsible for recreating the countryside of Stratford.

For many years Austrian-born musicologist Dr. Frederick Sternfeld has been in England exploring the field of Shakespearean music; and the Exhibition will profit from his researches. He has discovered the original settings for a number of songs in Shakespeare's plays, as well as some incidental music. These discoveries will be included with Elizabethan dance music, religious music, madrigals, street cries and ballads to be played in different locations throughout the Exhibition.

Shakespeare-Inspired Music

At Covent Garden Shakespeare Year will be saluted by revivals of Verdi's "Macbeth," "Otello" and "Falstaff" and Britten's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." At the Royal Festival Hall, the program for 1964 will include works inspired by the plays of Shakespeare. On April 22 the Royal Philharmonic Concert by the Halle Orchestra, conductor Sir John Barbirolli, will include works by Mendelssohn, Elgar, and Tchaikovsky. On April 30, the London Symphony Orchestra, conductor Pierre Monteux, will give a complete performance of Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet."

From the bard's birthday on April 23 until the autumn, musical events will be presented at Stratford's Shakespeare Theatre, Hall's Croft—the home of Shakespeare's daughter, and at Holy Trinity Church where Shakespeare was baptised and is buried. On the afternoon of the day of Shakespeare's baptism, April 26, a concert will be given at Holy Trinity Church by Yehudi Menduhin and the Bath Chamber Orchestra.

On June 14 at the Royal Stratford, the concert given by the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, conductor Sir Adrian Boult, will include the first performance of "The Noble Heart" composed by John Gardner to honor the quatercentenary year.

From April 21 for two or three weeks, "Shakespeare on Film" will be the theme at the National Film Theatre, South Bank, Waterloo. Films to be shown will include "Hamlet" (1913) with Forbes-Robertson, "Richard III" (1910) with Frank Benson, and "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Max Reinhardt (1935).

Special Shakespeare events are scheduled to take place literally throughout the realm during 1964.

FLAG BARRAULT, 1965

Salzburg.

French repertory actor and director Jean-Louis Barrault is already contracted to stage "The Silken Slipper" by Paul Claudel in Salzburg during the summer after next. He will visit here in 1964 to familiarize himself with the area and its acting resources.

During 1964 Barrault will stage unlisted-at-present plays for the Burgtheatre in Viena, separately.

The Grotto Continental Restaurant

FAMOUS FOR FINE FOOD. NEW YORK'S ONLY CAVE RESTAURANT

Open Daily from 12 Noon

For Reservations Call CI 5-1848

Dinner from $3.50

Your Host THE BAZZINI FAMILY

224 WEST 46th ST. — Next Door to the 46th St. Theatre, New York

RAY STARK presents

BARBRA STREISAND · SYDNEY CHAPLIN

A NEW MUSICAL

Music by JULE STYNE · Lyrics by BOB MERRILL

Book by ISOBEL LENNART

from an original story by MISS LENNART

Musical numbers staged by CAROL HANEY

With ALLYN ANN McLERIE DANNY MEEHAN

JEAN STAPLETON ROGER De KOVEN JOSEPH MACAULAY

BUZZ MILLER GEORGE REEDER RUFUS SMITH ROYCE WALLACE

and KAY MEDFORD

Scenery and lighting by ROBERT RANDOLPH

Costumes Designed by IRENE SHARAFF

Musical Director MILTON ROSENSTOCK

Orchestrations by RALPH BURNS

Vocal arrangements by BUSTER DAVIS

Dance arrangements by LUTHER HENDERSON

Associate Producer AL GOLDIN Associate Director LAWRENCE KASHA Production Supervisor DAVID PARDOLL

Presented in association with SEVEN ARTS PRODUCTIONS

Original Cast Album by CAPITOL RECORDS

Directed by GARSON KANIN

OPENS THURS. EVE. FEB. 27 WINTER GARDEN THEATRE

Prior to Broadway: Boston, Shubert Theatre, January 13 through February 1 Philadelphia, Forrest Theatre, February 4 through February 22

GAMBIT
an international drama quarterly
#3 • Winter 63/4
New American Drama Issue
THE WINDOWS OF HEAVEN a dark comedy by Shimon Wincelberg
based on A Cat in the Ghetto by Rachmil Bryks
also
THE WORKOUT
by Albert Bermel
Sample Copy $1.25 ($4.50 yr.) GAMBIT
67 Cookridge Drive, Leeds 16, England

SONIA MOORE STUDIO
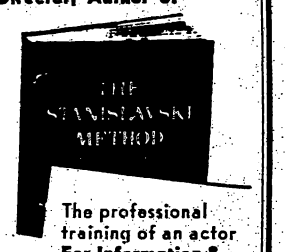
Of The THEATRE
Director, Author of



The professional training of an actor
For Information & Interview PL 5-5120

DIG THE GOLD MINE
Available Works by CHARLES FUE
17 Modern Plays
5 Play-Novelizations
Box V-3547, c/o VARIETY
154 West 46th Street
New York, N. Y. 10036

McCarter Theatre of Princeton University
A Regional Center for the Performing Arts
DRAMA • MUSIC • DANCE • FILMS • SPECIAL EVENTS and home of the
McCarter Professional Repertory Company
1963 Fall Season Breaks All Records:
88 EVENTS • 50,000 PEOPLE
1964 WINTER–SPRING SEASON:
The McCarter Professional Repertory Company in Five Plays by William Shakespeare
February 10 - April 19
ROMEO AND JULIET • OTHELLO • RICHARD III
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING • THE TAMING OF THE SHREW
Plus These Special Events:
THE HOLLOW CROWN • SEGOVIA • JOSE GRECO
THE LITTLEST CIRCUS • SAN FRANCISCO
BALLET • MODERN JAZZ QUARTET • BAYANIHAN
IN WHITE AMERICA • TRETEAU DE PARIS
SECOND CITY • THEATRE DE FRANCE • NEW YORK PRO MUSICA • CLASSIC FILM SERIES
PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA • MARK TWAIN
TONIGHT • CLANCY BROS. and many others.
NOW BOOKING • 1964-65 SEASON
Arthur W. Lithgow, Executive Director
Gilbert V. Hemsley, Associate Producer
W. W. Lockwood Jr., Associate Producer & Booking Director
Box 526 • Princeton, N. J. • WA 1-8700

Show on Broadway

The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore

David Merrick revival of two-act drama by Tennessee Williams. Staged by Tony Richardson; decor, Rouben Ter-Arutunian; incidental music, Ned Rorem; associate producer, Neil Hartley; lighting, Martin Aronstein. Stars Tallulah Bankhead, Tab Hunter, Ruth Ford; features Marian Seldes, Bobby Dean Hooks, Konrad Matthaei, Ralph Roberts. Opened Jan. 1, '63, at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre, N. Y.; $6.90 top weeknights, $7.50 Friday-Saturday nights.

Stage Assistants.....Bobby Dean Hooks, Konrad Matthaei
Mrs. Goforth.....Tallulah Bankhead
Blackie.....Marian Seldes
Rudy.....Ralph Roberts
Christopher Flanders.....Tab Hunter
Witch of Capri.....Ruth Ford

It was the late George M. Cohan who, after dropping in without warning one night to check up on the performance of a play he had staged, posted a notice on the backstage bulletin board. "Rehearsal tomorrow," it read, "to take out the improvements." Something of the sort applies to "The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore," which opened last Wednesday night (1) at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre.

The Tennessee Williams drama, originally done at the Festival of Two Worlds, at Spoleto, Italy, was produced on Broadway last season by Roger L. Stevens, with Herbert Machiz as director, Jo Mielziner as designer, Paul Bowles as composer of the incidental music and a cast headed by Hermione Baddeley, Mildred Dunnock, Paul Roebling and Ann Williams.

The author is a tenacious man about his scripts, as he has demonstrated several times, notably with "Battle of Angels," which finally got to Broadway, after about a decade, as "Orpheus Descending," but still a failure. In the case of "Milk Train," Williams has refused to quit, but has done considerable rewriting, and the new version has been presented by David Merrick, with Tony Richardson as stager, scenery by Rouben Ter-Arutunian, incidental music by Ned Rorem, and a cast including Tallulah Bankhead, Ruth Ford, Tab Hunter and Marian Seldes.

In this instance, comparisons are indeed odious, for "Milk Train" isn't as good as it was before. Or, to be blunt, it's worse than ever. What was once a somewhat obscure talkfest about a dying harridan and her mysterious young poet-visitor has become a slightly clearer conversational jamboree, but an absurdly pretentious, over-produced, exasperating bore.

Richardson's mannered, "busy," hopped-up direction, coupled with the arty fussiness of Rouben Ter-Arutunian's scenic design and Rorem's studiously artificial music, has about as much reality as a bad dream. Miss Bankhead gives a vivid but empty portrayal of the dissipated old harpy, but she doesn't create more than the outline of a character of the vulgar, egocentric, exhibitionist windbag. Moreover, her enunciation is so slurred that's she's frequently hard to understand, and its slightly disconcerting to see such type-casting as the ruin of a once-great but squandered talent.

Miss Ford has style and admirable emphasis as the venomous friend whom the garrulous heroine calls the witch of Capri, and Hunter is at least animate in the still vague role of the young visitor with the sinister reputation of an "angel of death." Marian Seldes is properly intense and occasionally vital in the slightly simplified part of the young secretary.

"Milk Train" is obviously not going anywhere as a boxoffice bet, and the film rights already belong to last season's production. This edition is a presentation of the David Merrick Foundation, which has already been represented this season by the successful "Luther" and the flop "Arturo Ui."

Someone should have flagged down "Milk Train" while it was ahead, or rather, not so far behind.

(Closed last Saturday (4) after five performances.) Hobe.

Theatre Billing

Continued from page 251

ducer of the 1860s, assumed management of Brougham's Lyceum, Broadway & Broome St., in 1862 and converted it into her theatre for a year. This house was better known as the Olympic.

As early as 1836, Annette Hawley Nelson leased the Richmond Hill Theatre, on the southeast corner of Varick & Chambers, and gave it her name for several months. She had been the second wife of John Brougham, the comedian, but retired from the stage following her marriage to a New York hotelman.

The Madison Square Theatre, on the southside of 24th St., between Broadway & 6th Ave., was in 1878, for a few months, known as Minnie Cummings' Drawing Room Theatre.

A place of amusement, known in 1837, as Miss Monier's Dramatic Saloon, formerly the City Theatre, occupied the "upper part of a building on Broadway, opposite St. Paul's Church." It opened and closed the same year.

The Berkley Lyceum at 19 West 44th St. was, for a brief time from 1902 to 1903, known as Mrs. Osborn's Playhouse.

Lucille La Verne managed the Princess at 104 West 39th St. under her name in 1929, but it soon reverted back to the Princess again. Later it was known as the Labor Stage, the Assembly Theatre, and Orson Welles used this originally as his Mercury Theatre. Now it is a car-park.

A Yiddish theatre at 45 Bowery was named for Bertha Kalich, an outstanding Jewish tragedienne, in 1907, and Molly Picon had her own theatre in 1942. Maurice Schwartz's Art Theatre, now the Phoenix Theatre, on 2d Ave. and 12th St., for a time was called the Molly Picon. This popular actress' name also graced the old Al Jolson Theatre on 59th St. and 7th Ave., now, a new cooperative apartment. Still another Molly Picon Theatre was on 2d Ave. at 2d St., which, also, for a time bore the name of another Yiddish great, David Kessler.

Sydney Group Schedules Wilde's 'Earnest' Revival

Sydney.

The Old Tote Theatre will open its second season Feb. 1 with a revival of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest." The cast for the local group's production will include Ron Haddrick, Sophie Stewart, Ellis Irving, Neva Carr Glyn, Reg Livermore, Hilary Bamberger and Janice Dinnen. Settings and costumes will be designed by Robin Lovejoy and the play will be staged by Robert Quentin.

The Old Tote's Lunchtime Theatre suepended operations Nov. 22 for the summer, but will reopen again about the end of February.

—Says Robert Stoltz

Continued from page 251

atre director) offers him a book for a show. This not only means a sure production, but also first class collaborators and presentation.

The formula of taking a famous, established play as the basis for a musical show has been applied by all famous composers the world over. This idea has been and still is the best. The difficulty lies in finding a suitable book for a musical show which the producer, director and everybody else will find wonderful and which will not be too costly from the viewpoint of royalties for the original writer. The public domain plays in this category have been done time and again and still seldom fail.

Writing musical shows has always been and is today a very hazardous profession. Sometimes the writer and composer (often in collaboration with the director, choreographer, stage designer and even his or her majesty the star) work for months, even years. After having reluctantly given in to the demands and wishes of most of them, including the producer, his wife and his sweetheart, they get panned by the press and all dreams are shattered, all efforts, sacrifices were in vain, the show folds.

You have to be quite a fanatic in this business to stay on and not to give up in disgust. The only way to recover your self-respect, self-confidence and joy of living is to start immediately working on a new project. It's like horseback-riding; when you are thrown off, mount the horse immediately again, otherwise you'll never be able to ride. Tenacity and stamina, self-discipline and a good stomach are just as important in order to get anywhere in this profession as God-given talent for composing music.

I suppose this is the case everywhere in the world and will be so as long as there will be show business.

Still, to quote Irving Berlin, "There's no business like show business"!

GATEWAY PLANS 23rd SUMMER FOR TEENAGERS
The teenage workshop division of Long Island's Bellport Gateway Playhouse will again give classes in Acting, Voice, Dance and Jazz as well as acting opportunities in the 30 plays and musicals to be given in Gateway's two theatres.
Program is carefully supervised, serves as training farm for Columbia Pictures and an accredited semester for Suffolk Community College. Center, 65 mi. from N.Y.C., has dormitories, studios, dining rooms, and a pool. Write Gateway, Bellport 7, N. Y., for information, & specify age. PL 7-0590.
Advertisement

Season's Greetings
HOTEL ALGONQUIN
59 West 44th Street
New York
MUrray Hill 7-4400

Russian Tea Room

150 W. 57 ST., N. Y., CO 5-0947

JOAN WHITE & ROBERT PAINE GROSE will present the 33rd season of
THE BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE
Stockbridge, Mass.
GROW PRODUCTIONS, INC.
(Grose, Russell and White) present
ANNA RUSSELL
in
"LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET or WHO PUSHED GEORGE"
Now booking Spring tour through National Performing Arts
Tel: PL 7-9440

"Argentina was broiling steaks before Texas ever heard of Sirloin."
One day an Argentinean Chef walked into La Fonda and said: "I can broil the best steaks you ever tasted."
He's been doing just that for us ever since. You can find him in front of our 25-foot Broiling Wall, in what must be the most exciting room in any New York restaurant. Luncheon, Dinner, Supper daily. Reservations if you wish. Fiesta every Sunday and holiday. (No dancing on the tables.)
La Fonda del Sol
123 WEST 50TH STREET, PLAZA 7-8800

Claire Nichtern

NORMAN WALLACE
Chicago's Troubadour

COLE PORTER

Best Wishes

MAX GORDON

MAX GORDON PRESENTS

The Star-Studded Autobiography of His Life on Broadway as Lived and Written by MAX GORDON, with Lewis Funke, Drama Editor for The New York Times. Encore: Sixteen pages of priceless photographs

A BERNARD GELS ASSOCIATES PRODUCTION
Distributed by Random House

Congratulations

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON

XXX

OBITUARIES

HUMPHREY DOULENS

Humphrey Doulens, 56, vice-president of Columbia Artists Management Inc., New York, died Dec. 30 at Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., of complications, following heart surgery. He had been active in concert management and as personal representative of top concert artists for many years.

Doulens joined CAMI in 1937 after serving as a reporter on the Norwalk (Conn.) Hour, as editor of the Bridgeport Sunday Post and music editor of Newsweek. He was head of Columbia's radio and television departments and as such was responsible for the appearance of many prominent concert artists on the networks' radio and tele programs.

Elected a v.p. of Columbia Artists Management in 1954, Doulens at the time of his death was personal representative for Dorothy Kirsten, Robert Merrill, Licia Albanese and Rosalind Elias. He was manager of Lily Pons and of the late Grace Moore, and had been associated with the concert appearances of Hildgarde, Marlene Dietrich, Lillian and Dorothy Gish and Faye Emerson. Doulens was a frequent contributor to VARIETY.

In 1958, he was a producer of "Music With Mary Martin," which toured the country. Doulens was instrumental in the formation of the Broadway Theatre Alliance which was devoted to the revival of touring Broadway shows on the road. Early in his career, he toured with the Ringling Bros. circus. He was an ardent circus buff.

Elected to the Connecticut State Council of Fine Arts, Doulens helped start the Westport Playhouse in 1931. He was a member of ATPAM, the Jewish Theatrical Guild, the Catholic Actors Guild and the Dutch Treat Club.

During the last World War, as captain in the Air Force, he served as press aid to General Lauris Norstad and later as aide-de-camp to General Lawrence Kuter, in charge of Air Force operations in the Pacific Theatre.

Funeral was held from the Trinity Church, Norwalk, last Friday (3). A brother, Roger Doulens, a v.p. of Pan American Airway, is the sole survivor.

HARRY F. MACE

Harry Fred Mace, 41, a cartoonist whose works appeared in many national magazines, died Dec. 30 in Redding, Conn., after a brief illness.

Mace, who specialized in the children's cartoon field, was best known for a cartoon character, "Amy" which he drew for the Des Moines Register and Tribune Syndicate.

Survived by wife, two daughters and parents.

DAVID BURTON

David Burton, 86, a retired stage director, was found dead Dec. 30 in his New York apartment. He was also a Hollywood director for a time.

Burton's Broadway credits include "The Royal Family," "The Swan," "The Firebrand" and "Serena Blandish."

BILL TELAAK

Bill Telaak, 65, onetime gagman for Bob Hope, died of cancer Dec. 21 in Long Beach, Cal.

His wife, son and daughter survive.

Mother of Marchette and Joy Chute, authors and dramatists, died Dec. 24 in New York. Marchette Chute is best-known for her biography, "Shakespeare of London," and is coauthor of the current 2-person entertainment, "Worlds of Shakespeare." Joy Chute wrote "Greenwillow," on which Frank Loesser based a musical a few seasons ago. Another sister, Mary Grace, resides in Boston.

Mother, 73, of Thomas Velotta, v.p. in the ABC News department, died Dec. 27 in New York. Survived by another son and three daughters.

Hugh McGowan, 69, scenic artist for ABC-TV in Chicago, died Dec. 22 in that city. Wife survives.

Kate Oglebay, 88, time member of Minnie Maddern Fiske's legit company who also toured in vaude, died Dec. 27 in Cleveland.

In Memory of a trouper to the end

NAT CHERIN

known in show business as

NAT BAKER

one of the original Gus Edwards School Day Group

Died Dec. 3, 1963

Paul Hindemith

The staff, officers and directors of Broadcast Music, Inc. records with deep sorrow the passing of Paul Hindemith. One of the foremost composers of our century, he has greatly enriched the musical culture of our nation and the world. BMI is honoured and privileged to have the music of Hindemith in its repertoire. We extend our heartfelt sympathies to Mrs. Hindemith.

In Loving Memory

CHARLES V. YATES

January 9th, 1955

Reggie

In Memoriam
1963

SAUL ABRAHAM
SAM ARNOLD
CLARENCE BELL
HERMAN BERNSTEIN
MANNY DAVIS
ARTHUR LIGHTON
HAL OLVER
EMANUEL ROSENFELD
FRANCES WEINTRAUB

ASSOCIATION OF THEATRICAL PRESS AGENTS AND MANAGERS

Showboat With Caliope

Continued from page 248

often have a wiener roast or barbecue on the wharf alongside the showboat after the performance and they invite the actors to join them. It's the most enjoyable evening anyone can imagine and it brings people and their families back week after week to this clean and different entertainment that is true Americana.

No TV Bogey Here!

Television has undoubtedly hurt and all types of entertainment but it has not changed the river bottom-land farmer's love for a showboat or brought him any sophistication. It would be hard to attach sophistication to a cow pasture, penthouse or a crop of tobacco. True, they have television, but they will quickly turn off "The Price Is Right" to get the Chicago stock market report for the price on hogs or to spend an evening at the river landing on a showboat.

In the good old days when the actors doubled in brass, they were known as band actors. It was a heyday for the showboats as they could pick a 10-piece band out of their cast to make a daily parade at no extra expense. It was almost impossible for a man in Chicago to get a job unless he blowed a horn so he usually mastered the horn first and then learned to act later. Incidentally, Charles Winniger was once an "under canvas" band actor—and a good one.

'Band Actors'

These actors hibernated around Chicago where hundreds of one-night stands took to the road every fall and headed for Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska featuring a brass band. The leading man might play a trombone, the character man alto and the soubret drums. The long list of producers of these one-night shows included Kilroy & Britton, Roland & Clifford, Holton Powell, Jim Wakefield, Lincoln J. Carter, Jack Hoskins, Bob Sherman, C. S. Primrose etc. At one time Carlos Inskeep had six "The Girl and the Tramp" shows on the road.

In those days there was a small four-page theatrical sheet that was published at Esterville, Iowa, called The Opera House Reporter. In a copy I once had was a letter from an opera house manager in Parsons, Kansas. "Last Saturday I played a show that was a Peacheroo! There were six people in the company, a girl and five men. They called it 'The Girl and a Tramp.' Wrong title. It should have been 'The Girl and Five Tramps'."

New York had always been suspicious of band actors from Chicago and looked down on them to a certain extent. This. I could never understand because at the same time, in New York, Augustus Pitou had a melodrama, "The Galley Slave," on the road; Al H. Woods had "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl"; Sam H. Harris had Terry McGovern in "A Fight for Love"; Charles E. Blaney, "Across the Pacific," and all were the same type of one-night shows as were going out of Chicago.

The smaller showboats acknowledged the big Goldenrod to be the flagship of the fleet. Yet, when the Goldenrod headed all its billing, in big type, with, "After the minnows comes the whale," they resented having their small boats referred to as minnows. However, when the Goldenrod decided it was time to bring the Broadway plays to the river, they all followed suit. The river people didn't like such Broadway standbys as "A Pair of Sixes," "Peg O' My Heart," William Cushman's "Toy-Maker's Dream" etc. They wanted plays with a mortgage on the farm and a happy ending.

Cohan's Beau Geste

We fared better than any of them. I went to New York to try and lease one of George M. Cohan's shows. As I had known him for years, I thought I might make a go of it. I met him in his dressingroom at the Erlanger Theatre where he was starring in "The Merry Malones." When I told him what I had come to New York for, he took me by the arm and led me to a trunk at the other end of the dressingroom. "I've written 50 plays and hundreds of songs," he said. "They're all in that trunk. Take your pick. It won't cost you a dime."

Tears blurred my eyes as I mumbled something about thanks. He put his arm around me and said: "Cut it kid, I remember your act, it was a knockout."

Overjoyed, I took one play, "Broadway Jones," a comedy, and streaked for the river. We put a line of girls in the show and turned "Broadway Jones" into a musical. It was a homespun comedy and the river folk loved it. When Cohan heard what I did he threatened to come to the river and see our musical version but his mother passed away at that time and he changed his mind. However, he copied my idea and he, too, turned "Broadway Jones" into a musical starring Polly Walker and he named it "Billie" after a friend of his down along the river.

Have Actors

Continued from page 247

knowing that quarters and food for more could work hardships on some smaller churches.

The nucleus of The Bishop's Company is, and has always been, a staff made up of founder-producer Phyllis Beardsley Bokar, executive secretary Elizabeth Wolfe, booking manager Merle S. Harbach, general manager Tom Mills, public relations chief Elisabeth Officer, and costumes supervisor Jean Needham. Their duties overlap and, in addition, they're all active performer-members of the resident unit.

Since its inception Company has produced 19 plays. The 1963 repertory consisted of Christopher Fry's "The Boy With The Cart" (their first play, and never out of the repertory), Alan Paton's "Cry, The Beloved Country," Fry's "A Sleep of Prisoners," Rumer Godden's "An Episode of Sparrows," C. S. Lewis' "The Great Divorce," A. A. Milne's "Winnie-The-Pooh" and Mrs. Bokar's "Pass By This House."

"Billy Budd" is the only play that has required considerable rewriting. It had too large a cast and ran too long for church presentation. "Church seats are invariably hard seats," Mrs. Bokar reminded.

Operation expenses for 1962 totaled $18,382; living expenses, $50,596; general expenses, $8,452; production expenses, $6,202—a total of $83,633. Operating included such items as travel (gas, etc.), $5,038; maintenance, $1,874; repairs, $3,142. Living included food, $9,767; lodging, $4,885; personnel insurance, $4,229. General expenses charged more than half its $8,452 total to telephone and telegraph ($3,420) and postage ($1,470), due to the tremendously heavy correspondence necessary to book and rebook engagements. The Company has found that ministers are not the promptest of correspondents and wire or phone followups are constantly required.

Production expense, a very big item with most theatrical companies, is kept under control through the use of lighting instead of scenery, a minimum number of properties, and extremely adaptable costumes. Some necessary charges include costumes, $664; promotion, publicity and public relations, $3,935; royalties, $560.

In Memory of

ROBERT LEONARD

Marilyn, Roy, Lillian

In Loving Memory

Mabel Esmeralda

EDNA ESMERALDA

In Loving Memory

MAUD MARIAN BISHOP

EDNA ESMERALDA

FRED HARPER

In Memory of My Husband

LULA HARPER

• NEW YORK, 10019,

50 West 57 Street 212 - JUdson 2-7700

JOE GLASER, President

BOB BUNDY • FRANCES CHURCH • OSCAR COHEN
DAVE GOLD • JACK L. GREEN • HARVEY GREENBERG
NOEL KRAMER • FRANK MUSIELLO • JOE SULLY

• CHICAGO, 60601,

203 No. Wabash Avenue 312 - CEntral 6-9451

FRED WILLIAMSON, Vice President
PAUL BANNISTER • HARRY BREYN • CHUCK EDDY
HAROLD GROSENBACH • T. T. KERMAN • HAL MUNRO
JOE MUSSE

• BEVERLY HILLS, 90210,

9477 Brighton Way 213 - CRestview 3-5600

BOBBY PHILLIPS, Vice President
AL ALWEIL • BILLY McDONALD • FRANK RIO
SHIRLEY SHAININ • CHUCK TRENDA

• MIAMI BEACH, 33138,

6660 Biscayne Blvd. 305 - PLaza 8-2511

ART FREW • JACKIE PEARL

• LAS VEGAS, 89105,

1820 East St. Louis Avenue 702 - EVergreen 8-2505

ART ENGLER

• DALLAS, 75219,

3511 Hall Street, Lee Park Bldg. 214 - LAkeside 8-8295

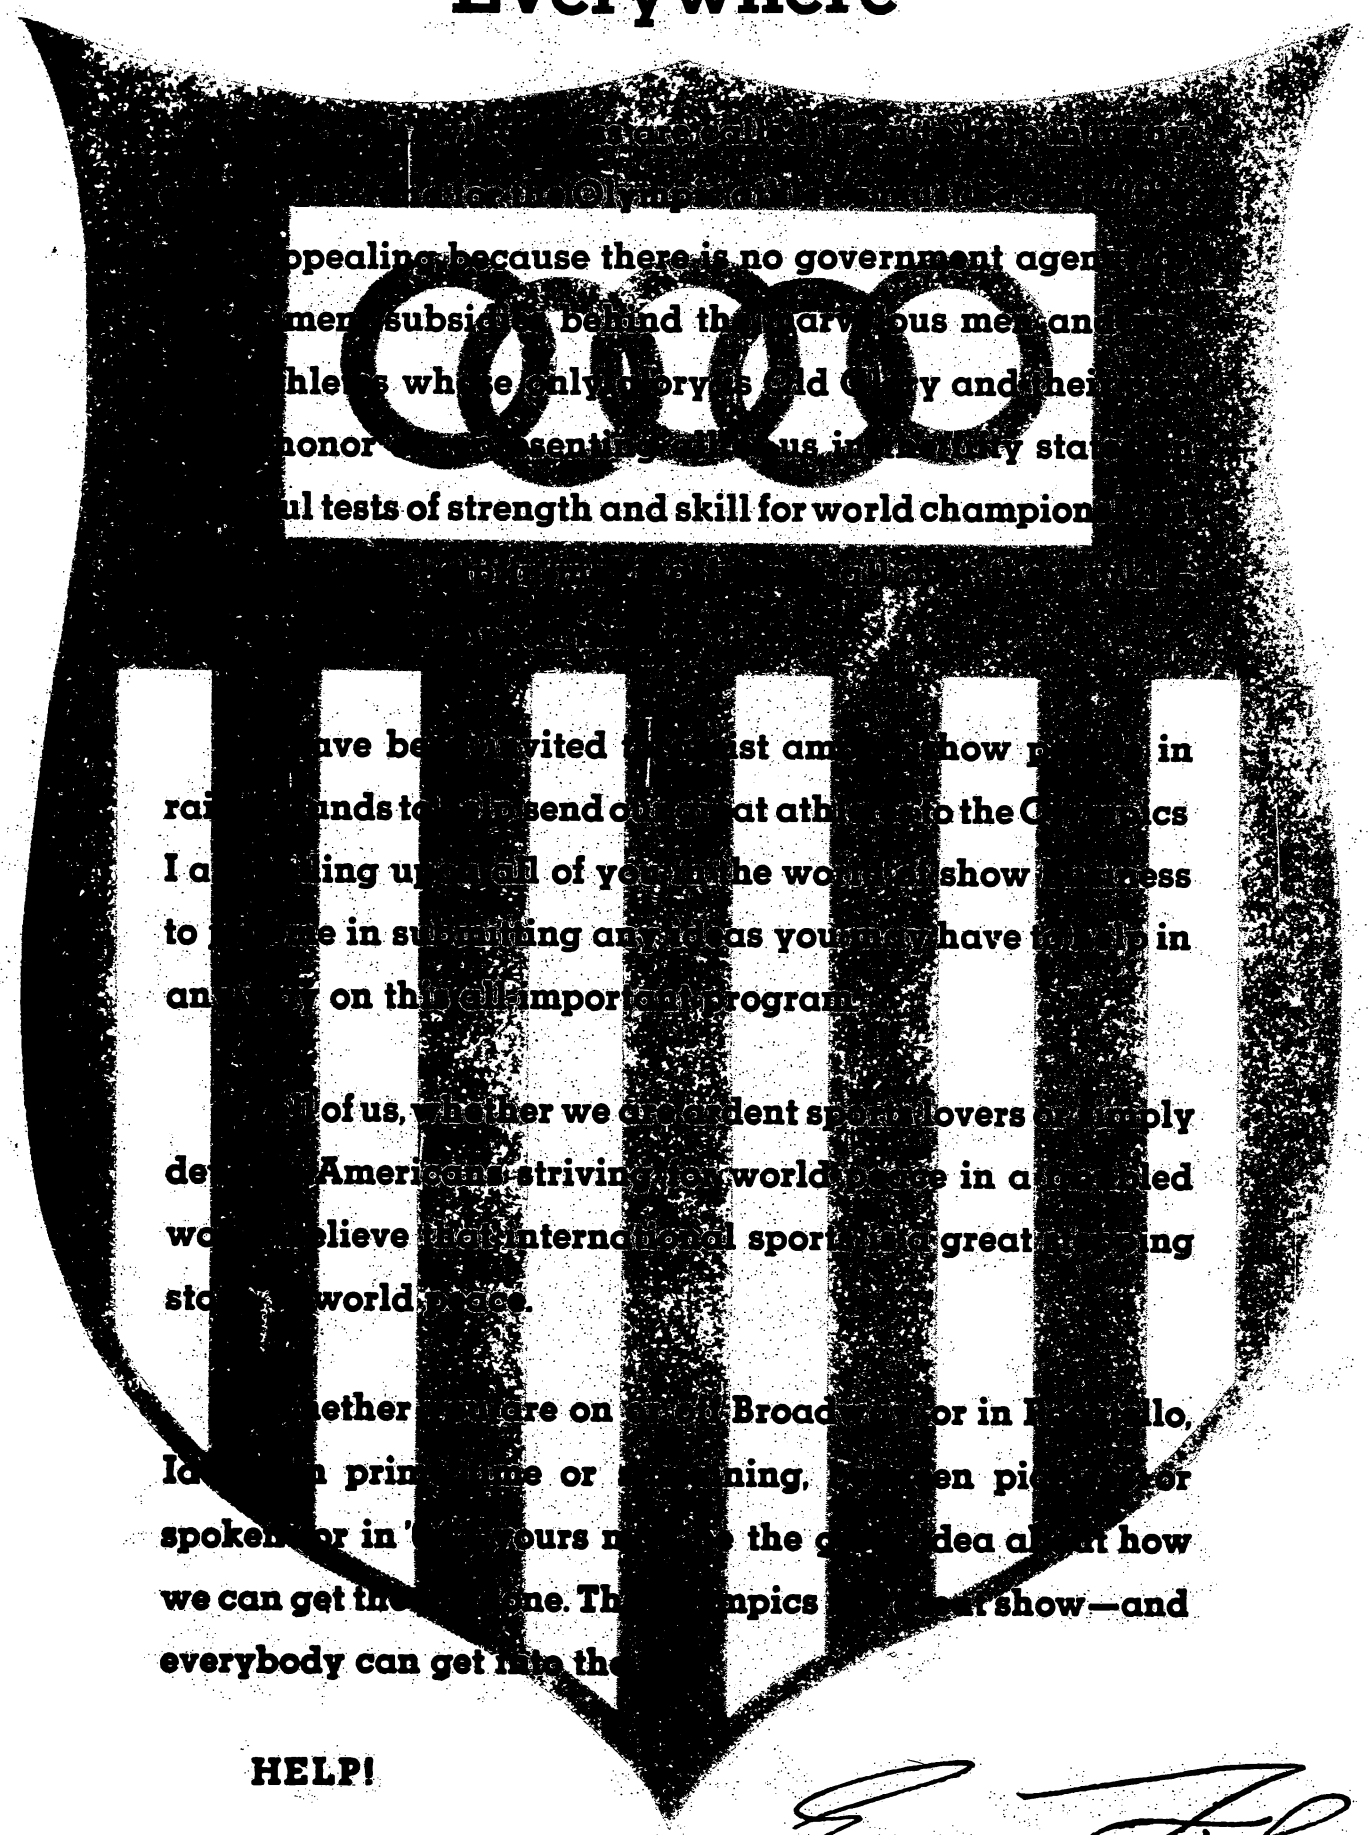
TONY PAPA • BETTIE FOSTER

• LONDON S.W.1,

29/31 Regent Street, Eros House

HAROLD DAVISON

AN OPEN LETTER TO SHOW PEOPLE Everywhere



opealing because there is no government agen men subsid[illegible] be[illegible]nd th[illegible] arv[illegible]ous me[illegible]an hle[illegible]s wh[illegible]e only [illegible]ory is [illegible]d [illegible]y and hei nonor[illegible] [illegible]senti[illegible]g[illegible]i[illegible]us in[illegible]ity sta[illegible] ul tests of strength and skill for world champion ave be[illegible]vited [illegible]st am[illegible]how p[illegible] in rai[illegible]nds to [illegible]send o[illegible]at ath[illegible]o the C[illegible]ics

I a[illegible]ing u[illegible]all of yo[illegible]he wo[illegible]show[illegible]ess to [illegible]e in su[illegible]ting any[illegible]as you[illegible]have t[illegible]p in an[illegible] on th[illegible]important program[illegible] of us, [illegible]hether we a[illegible]dent sp[illegible]lovers o[illegible]ply de[illegible]Americans striving [illegible]world [illegible]ce in a[illegible]led wo[illegible]believe [illegible]international sport[illegible]great[illegible]ing sto[illegible]world [illegible]ce.

[illegible]ether [illegible]are on [illegible]Broad[illegible]or in [illegible]llo,
Ia[illegible]n prim[illegible]e or [illegible]ning, [illegible]en pi[illegible]er spoken[illegible]or in '[illegible]ours n[illegible]the g[illegible]dea a[illegible]t how we can get th[illegible]ne. Th[illegible]mpics [illegible]r show—and everybody can get [illegible]to th[illegible]

HELP!

Eddie Fisher

Eddie Fisher
Olympic House
57 Park Ave., New York 16, N.Y.
J. Lyman Bingham, Executive Director

FILMS | VIDEO | TV FILMS | RADIO | MUSIC | STAGE

VARIETY

PRICE 35¢

Published Weekly at 154 West 46th Street, New York, N. Y. 10036, by Variety, Inc. Annual subscription, $15. Single copies, 35 cents.
Second Class Postage Paid at New York, N.Y.
© COPYRIGHT, 1964, BY VARIETY, INC., ALL RIGHTS RESERVED
Vol. 233 No. 8 NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1964 72 PAGES

'FILM UNDERGROUND' EXPLOSION

May 30 Groundbreaking Set For JFK Center of Performing Arts

Washington, Jan. 14.

Matching Congressional enthusiasm for the renamed John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, trustees for the $30,000,000 memorial project have set May 30—the late President's birthday—for a groundbreaking.

If the present timetable is maintained, the Center could open in late 1966.

The stepped up pace for the long delayed National Cultural Center was one of several new accomplishments announced by the Center's planning board to the trustees at a meeting last week.

Other developments were:

1. President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson have accepted invitations to head a fund raising benefit for the Center set for April 21. The event will be a $150-a-ticket World's Fair Inaugural Ball to be held at the New York Hilton Hotel.

2. A total of $13,500,000 has been raised in contributions and pledges for the Center, leaving another $6,500,000 still needed from private donations to complete the Center. The Federal Government will provide the rest.

3. A program of activities has been shaped to develop the Center into a "port of entry" where international artists will make their debut on the U.S. cultural scene. Similarly, the best of American

(Continued on page 71)

West Europeans, French Particularly, Downbeat On U.S. Jazz, Survey Shows

Washington, Jan. 14.

Western Europeans, particularly the French, are down on American jazz, a U.S. Information Agency survey shows.

The USIA poll, just removed from classified status, showed negative reactions to jazz in four European countries while registering approval for other Yank show business and literati.

While impressions of jazz were downbeat in Britain, West Germany, Italy and France, Yank films, television, books and magazines received good reception in varied degrees.

Partly annulling the poor readings on jazz was the report that the music was appreciated by Europeans in their twenties. Poorest response came from those 45 and over.

While social class differences caused no variance in European dislike of jazz, it received a better reception among higher educated people.

Yank television's best impression was registered in Britain while books were most favorably received in Germany and Italy.

Germans and Italians also liked U.S. magazines while the French and British were negative in their reactions.

Nervous Italians

Jerusalem, Jan. 14.

The press arrangements for the Pope's visit naturally caused many headaches to all concerned. The Italian Ambassador was distraught over the visit. Surely it was not his responsibility? he was asked. Was not the Vatican wholly independent? Yes, he answered, the Vatican does not belong to Italy, but the pressmen and photographers do.

One man working for a news agency found that a message he had sent had been queried on security grounds. The cable was returned with a question — where would the Pope visit "secret sites"? He answered wearily that he had written "sacred sites."

Ban Feature Of Swedish Punks Steeped in Trix

By FREDERIC FLEISHER

Stockholm, Jan. 14.

In an action exceptional for this kingdom of liberal attitudes, the Swedish Board of Film Censors has voted to entirely ban a film. It is without example in some 50 years of supervision.

Feature is "491" directed by Vilgot Sjoman after the novel of Lars Gorling, a big seller here for a year. It is Sjoman's second feature, following "The Mistress."

Story deals with six juvenile punks about to be incarcerated but assigned to an open home because social workers wish "to study them." One of the social workers

(Continued on page 20)

RECOGNITION RUMORS; SPAIN-USSR HOOF SWAP?

Unconfirmed report in Spain that the Antonio Dance Co. may be going to Soviet Russia soon via cultural exchange, the Igor Moissev Dance Co. coming to Spain on the return bound. This would be the first time either for Russ artists in Spain or for Spanish artists in the Soviet. Government officials refused to deny or confirm, but it is known that there have been secret confabs between the two governments in the recent past for possible diplomatic recognition of the two governments, the cultural exchange thus becoming an opening wedge.

Actually, it is not likely that Antonio can go to Russia this year, since he is booked for a U.S. tour via Sol Hurok.

BELGIANS BALK N.Y. 'CREATURES'

Knokke, Belgium, Jan. 14.

Belgium's "Experimental Film Festival" here last week refused to show a New York-made film of Jack Smith, "Flaming Creatures," on the grounds that the Americans were running experiment into the ground. Film is about guys who want to dress up like gals. It is plenty explicit. Some weeks ago the auspices rented the Tivoli Theatre on 8th Ave. in Manhattan for a post-midnight screening of the same film but the theatre cancelled at last minute.

"Flaming Creatures" divided the delegates, the critics and the Belgians. Comment ranged from terming the film a crude stunt, a stag film, a misnamed "artie." In any event the laws of the Kingdom of Belgium, a Catholic country, were invoked against it. This stirred a dispute led by Jonas Mekas, avante-gard film buff of Greenwich Village, who is chief spokesman for the so-called "New York Film Underground," now about to tour the capitals of Europe to show the continental brethren that Hollywood product is not all there is.

Mekas did what he could to dramatize a protest. He personally resigned from the festival jury. He tried to get the American contingent to withdraw all of their 47 films (shorts and features) on the fest schedule but the Belgians refused to release the films, the single largest registry of experi-

(Continued on page 15)

USIA to World: 'Culture We Got'

Washington, Jan. 14.

Pushing the "we got culture" theme with added oomph, the U.S. Information Agency is telling foreigners that Yank television is going highbrow and that Hollywood is turning out "artistically superior" films. In its "yearender" reports for publication in the foreign press, USIA puffed Yank culture in eight of the 18 dispatches on American life and business.

Coming in for praise were cultural exchange, films, tv, legitimate theatre, opera and music, dance, art and literati.

The cultural exchange survey was pretty much a report on the trips of American and foreign performers, but interpretation and predictions were offered in the other messages.

USIA said the motion picture industry last year "emerged from the doldrums . . . after being overshadowed by television for several years."

Film producers, agency said, credited the resurgence to their

(Continued on page 17)

Should TV Stop Smoking? Networks Confronted With a Critical Problem

With $135,000,000 in cigaret advertising at stake, the U.S. television networks this week were put in a critical spot—perhaps as critical as the uncomfortable position of the tobacco industry itself.

Now that it is "established" that cigarets imperil the nation's health by substantially contributing to the American death rate from lung cancer and coronary artery disease, by the judgment rendered in the long-awaited U.S. Government report, each tv industry leader has been forced into a position where he must determine—and fast—if the medium has the responsibility to contribute to the "appropriate remedial action" which the report urgently recommends.

As some see it, the networks cannot duck what will prove to be the ire of a watchful Congress and public if they confine their moves only to "re-examining" their advertising standards (as they've pledged to do) in light of the new Government findings.

There's a body of opinion which feels that the tv network chieftains would be better advised to change course and heed—now that his position has been thoroughly supported—the leadership of the National Assn. of Broadcasters, Gov. LeRoy Collins. They feel that tv, as the nation's leading "persuader" of cigaret use, must decide between its moral obligation and its highly profitable cigaret advertising franchise.

Reduced to the heat of cold statistics, they equate $130,000,000 in revenues with 41,000 lung cancer deaths a year—or a tv "sacrifice" of a little more than $3,000 for a life.

There's the danger, too, that the longer television waits in making

(Continued on page 44)

LP to Quit Butts By

Moving in on the heels of the smoking report issued last Saturday (11) by the Surgeon General's Advisory Committee, RCA Camden is issuing this week an album titled "Music To Help You Stop Smoking." The album, which stars The Living Strings, is a collection of melodies arranged in a manner, it's claimed, "to delight the ear and thus assuage the larynges, pharynges and esophagi of coughing citizenry in dire need of relief."

Italia-Ship As Instant Hotel For Bahama Site

Old luxury ships may never die—they'll just become floating hotels. Investment capital has apparently evolved a new way of creating instant inns. The Canaveral International Corp., a diversified holding company, has completed arrangements for the purchase of the Home Lines' Italia for use as a floating hotel at Freeport in the Grand Bahamas. It'll be refurnished to meet its new situation with the addition of more rooms and a 1,000 seat convention hall to be created from the forepart of the ship now needed for nautical purposes only.

The 16,777-ton Italia is being pressed into service around June in its new berth in order to meet an anticipated demand for accommodations for patrons enticed by the new entertainment develop-

(Continued on page 56)

PRO ACTORS SET FOR 'THEATRE-IN-CHURCH'

Hamburg, Jan. 14.

Well known for its opera house, legit theatre and modern art exhibitions, Hamburg is also about to open its "Theatre in the Church," a rarity. In the venerable church of St. Catherine, a large stage is being constructed, on which old mystery plays and contemporary dramas based upon religious subjects, will be presented.

Leading spirit is local priest, Father Hartmut Siering, who before taking orders was an actor and director. He is being helped with technical advise by the Hamburg Opera Theatre, in the northern segment of the big cathedral, will hold 450 seats.

Spring Buyers Trapped In N.Y.'s Winter; Good For Inns But Cafes Dip

The opening in the Spring buying season in New York was greeted with the heaviest snowfall of the year Monday (13). The 10-inch downfall which desolated cafes and other amusements, however, provided an added bonanza to the midtown inns.

The hotels had already gotten a comfortable registration with the influx of buyers and those who came in in advance of the Boat Show which opens Sunday (19) at the Coliseum. Later, those marooned by the snowfall gave several midtown inns a virtual SRO situation.

The start of the buying season is generally eagerly awaited by the niteries. It's the usual start of an upbeat business tempo. The individual tabs are heavier and the number of customers are greater. However, on Monday, many cafes

(Continued on page 71)

Palm Beach, Site of 'Establishment,' Veers in Direction of Classless Society

By CHARLES LAZARUS

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 14.

It wasn't so long ago, it seems, when this hibernation spa lay firmly in the hands of The Establishment, that milieu of High Society which has dominated possibly the most expensive private real estate in the United States including Southampton, Newport, Beacon Hill and, in the years gone by, Saratoga.

Like the Saratoga that was, Palm Beach IS still seasonal, of course in reverse, with the multi-millionaire sun worshippers gathering in their private homes, usually not before the beginning of the new year.

On the surface, it might appear that the sun and the seasons remaining constant, The Establishment can hibernate to its heart's content is a modus vivendi which makes no special demands on its purse and personality.

That's on the surface.

In actuality, however, there are profound changes taking place in Palm Beach which, while comforting to know that it will never become another Miami Beach—one is welcome and quite enoug'—nevertheless is already revising the image from staid and sometimes stuffy Upper Crusters, to a more outgoing Upper Middle Class which is adding life to the Palm Beach night, and a spark to the creative arts.

Main credit for these changes can go to one man—a gregarious tycoon of American industry, a former vaudevillian with a penchant for the arts and particularly the

(Continued on page 71)

Huntley & Brinkley Put '63 News on Victor LP

NBC newscasters Chet Huntley and David Brinkley have moved into the grooves for a special RCA Victor album on last year's news events titled "A Time To Keep: 1963."

The recording was produced by James L. Holton, NBC Radio News producer for the Cooper Space Flight, and edited by William Alan Bales, writer of "The Tumult and the Shouting." It was written by Bales, Huntley and Brinkley.

The album, which covers the top news events of '63, culminates in a coverage of the John F. Kennedy assassination, going from the first garbled news reports that shots had been heard in Dallas and on to such places as Symphony Hall in Boston where Erich Leinsdorf interrupted a symphony concert to inform the audience of the tragedy.

The title of the album was taken from the Bible, from the scripture which was read during the funeral, "A time to live ad a time to die . . . and a time to keep."

FRANKLIN VICE McNULTY

Change of PR Director at Lincoln Center

Lincoln Center of Performing Arts in Manhattan has a change of face in the Public Relations directorship. Exit John W. McNulty. Enter Peter D. Franklin.

McNulty moves over Jan. 24 to the personal staff of John D. Rockefeller 3d.

Berlin's Centre Of Shows, Bars

Berlin, Jan. 14.

The foundation stone of West Berlin's most courageous building, the socalled Europa Center, has just been laid. It's this city's version of New York's Rockefeller Center. Its location is the 20,000 square metres area in front of the Memorial Church, near the Hilton Hotel, which has been the site of all sort of things (mobile circuses, missionary tents, amusement grounds, etc.) within the past years. The Europa Center will cost 70,000,000 D-Marks (about $17,500,000) and will be opened in fall next (1964) year. Man behind this undertaking is Karl H. Pepper, 53, who put up 14,000,000 D-Marks. Some 20,000,000 D-Marks are contributed by the European Relief Program (ERP) while the remainder of the money is covered by mortgages.

Site is planned as mixture of business, amusement, culture and sports centre. It counts a 22-story skyscraper, skating rink to operate year round, swimming pool on roof, two film houses, a boulevard theatre, with about 750 seats, mostly in boxes, minigolf, cabaret, restaurants, bars, dancing spots, wine restaurants, sauna, drugstores, parking lots and — as a special attraction — a new modernized erection of the famous Romanische Cafe (Roman Cafe), the favorite hangout of Berlin's Boheme before Hitler, which didn't survive the war.

Clarence Kolb Very Ill

Clarence Kolb, now 88, is seriously ill at his home, 1546 North Crescent Heights, West Los Angeles, 46, Calif. He recently suffered stroke. He is the surviving partner of the famed Pacific comedy pair, Kolb & Dill, who toured western states from 1904 to 1948 until the decline of the road.

After the end of their touring musical comedies Kolb turned to films and as a character actor built up a credit list of 75 features. He also has some 80 major television credits.

JIMMY McHUGH

Eminent Popular Composer, says: "Of all the young singers today, PAUL ANKA is unique as he adheres to the melody and the lyrics are always intelligible. PAUL ANKIA is a sympathetic, delightful interpreter in the popular idiom. A superb stylist. Crowned by the Press as an acknowledged International Institution.'"

Showman to End, Doulens Had Set His Own Rites

A showman to the very end, Humphrey Doulens was buried in his home town of Norwalk, Conn., on Jan. 3 strictly in accordance with his own program of events. The late vice president of Columbia Concerts had suffered several heart attacks during 1963 and faced grim surgery at the Mayo Clinic. Maintaining his usual cheerful spirit, as reflected in his final Christmas card (he always made a production of them) Doulens calmly planned his own funeral.

His friends were true to the trust when the operation proved fatal just before year-end. Baritone Robert Merrill sang in costume a beautiful "Ave Maria." Francis Robinson, assistant manager of the Metropolitan Opera and a longtime "Chum" (Doulens' favorite word), gave an eulogy, unique for its dignity and unique, too, in a High Episcopal Church. Further carrying out the manager's wishes the services ended with "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" played full as mourners left the church. At graveside a kilted musician sounded taps for the former Air Corps Captain.

This love of theatrical gesture and flourish characterized Doulens, a quiet man with a lifetime passion for showbiz, including cir-

(Continued on page 66)

Italo Chief's Mixed Fare At White House Banquet: Operatics & Folksy

Washington, Jan. 14.

For their first White House state dinner honoring a foreign head of state, President and Mrs. L. B. Johnson tonight (Tues.) presented an entertainment double bill. Italian President Antonio Segni was the banquet's honor guest.

Robert Merrill sang Italian arias, representing that country's gift to music, and the New Christy Minstrels sang American folk songs, depicting a phase of music purely U.S.

Richard Adler, consultant to the first lady on White House entertainment, arranged and directed the program.

Targ Scrams Editorship; 21 Years With World Co.

William Targ vamooses World Publishing Co. on Jan. 31. He was veep-editor-in-chief and with the company since 1942. He resides in Manhattan.

Los Angeles Times-Mirror acquired control of World on a stock swap some time ago and began changing the facts of authority with Targ not caring to fly with clipped wings.

'Picture America Wasn't Ready For'

Perry Ponders Revised Sell of 'Ladybug' Via European Festival Exposure and Overseas Reputation

Disappointed in its performance, indie filmmaker Frank Perry is considering the idea of pulling his "Ladybug, Ladybug" out of circulation and trying to give it a fresh start by entering it at some foreign festival, probably Cannes.

Thinking goes thus: Film might get an award in some category; this would give it new exhibition b.o. impetus both at home and abroad. Separately, even if Perry didn't win any award he might market the picture abroad with the hope of establishing a track record there and then bringing it back to the States as a foreign hit.

One notion showman has for the selling of the film abroad is to refer to it as "the picture America wasn't ready for," of something to that effect. The film deals with the reactions of a group of rural school children and the school's staff to what later truns out to be a false atomic attack alarm. The picture was pretty roundly rapped by critics in New York and Los Angeles, the only two situations so far. Attendance has been disappointing.

Perry was the director of the highly successful "David & Lisa." As in that case, "Ladybug" was written by his wife, Eleanor Perry. He had considered it better than his initial effort. He has no definite plans for what his next project will be, although United Artists will be the distrib via a two-picture deal he made. Whether the distrib will go along with his plan for "Ladybug" is another matter but since it is doing less-than-exciting biz with the film, UA is presumably open for suggestions.

"David & Lisa" did well in the States and is just getting to certain locations abroad. Continental, which distributed it in the U.S., is handling it abroad as well. "Ladybug" could qualify for some foreign fests because it has not played any commercial dates anywhere but in the U.S.

RALPH GINZBURG 'FACT'

'Eros' Suspends Pending Appeal on Philly Conviction

"Eros," the $10 quarterly, is in suspension pending final disposal of litigation against it and publisher Ralph Ginzburg. Latter has appealed his Philadelphia conviction and sentence on charge of obscenity.

Meanwhile Ginzburg is starting a new publication, "Fact," to deal with non-sexy themes, apparently with a debunking accent. First copies due off press in 10 days.

Television Museum Vs. H'wood Ditto?

Sol Lesser was in Manhattan over the weekend in connection with the Hollywood Museum. A luncheon of 30 persons was held Friday (10) at the Metropolitan Club, a purpose being to stir interest among broadcasters. Latter tend to lag in regard to this venture, thinking in terms of a Television Museum one day in Washington, D.C.

Hollywood Museum for which ground has been broken will award construction contracts late in January. Some 60% of the $14,000,000 budget is cash in hand.

Lesser returned to Coast.

President Lauds Films

Washington, Jan. 14.

President L. B. Johnson lauded the flim industry during a luncheon by the Hollywood Musem honoring the Library of Congress. His statement was read by U.S. Information Agency film chief George Stevens Jr.

Ralph Wonders Hailed

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

For Ralph Wonders last week it was a "daily double" and he didn't have to go to the track to collect. More than 100 friends turned out at the Ambassador hotel to fete his 50 years in show business and 68th birthday. Gifts and toasts marked his dual anni and wires poured in from all over the country, among them a congrats from CBS board chairman William S. Paley, who remembered that Wonders organized and managed Columbia Artists Bureau and groomed many of the web's stars.

Wonders made his entry into show biz as a hoofer and for a time was standby dancing partner of Irene Castle. He is now operational aide to James Doolittle at the Greek and Biltmore theatres.

Stolz at Statoper

Vienna, Jan. 14.

Last living master of the Vienna operetta form, Robert Stolz, crowned his career on New Years eve in the Vienna state opera. He was invited to conduct the Johann Strauss operetta "Die Fledermaus" (The Bat).

This is a traditional New Year's eve performance here, as lately at the Met in New York. Stolz was enthusiastically cheered by the packed house and Vienna newspapers were full of praise for his baton work.

A new operetta by Stolz, "Spring Parade," will have its world premiere in the recently new adapted Volksopera in March.

1/15

VARIETY

Subscription Order Form

Enclosed find check for $.....

Please send VARIETY for ☐ One Year ☐ Two Years ☐ Three Years

To .....
(Please Print Name)

Street .....

City..... Zone.... State.....

Regular Subscription Rates

One Year—$15.00 Two Years—$28.00

Three Years—$39.00

Canada and Foreign—$1 Additional Per Year

VARIETY Inc.

154 West 46th Street New York, N. Y. 10036

VARIETY

Trade Mark Registered

FOUNDED 1905 by SIME SILVERMAN; Published Weekly by VARIETY, INC.

Syd Silverman, President
154 West 46th St., New York, N. Y. 10036 JUdson 2-2700
Hollywood, Calif. 90028
6404 Sunset Boulevard, HOllywood 9-1141
Washington, D. C. 20004
784 National Press Building, STerling 3-5445
Chicago, Ill. 60611
400 No. Michigan Ave., DElaware 7-4984
London, S.W.1
49 St. James's Street, Piccadilly, HYde Park 4561-2-3

SUBSCRIPTION Annual, $15; Foreign, $16; Single Copies, 35 Cents

ABEL GREEN, Editor

Volume 233 120 Number 8

INDEX

Bills	61	Night Club Reviews	58
Casting	68	Obituaries	61
Chatter	70	Pictures	3
Film Reviews	6	Radio	24
House Reviews	60	Radio Reviews	42
Inside Radio-TV	44	Record Reviews	48
International	22	Television	24
Legitimate	62	TV Film	30
Literati	64	Television Reviews	35
Music	47	Vaudeville	52
New Acts	60	Unit Reviews	60
		Wall Street	17

DAILY VARIETY
(Published in Hollywood by Daily Variety, Ltd.)
$20 a year. $25 Foreign.

B.O. THANKSGIVING IN JANUARY

NARY A GROAN FROM GROANY CHI

By MORRY ROTH

Chicago, Jan. 14.

It is the almost-unanimous opinion of Film Rowers that the total take for all motion picture theatres in the Chicago area during the two week holiday period just ended was the largest 14-day gross tally in the history of Windy City exhibition. And, like a family that has inherited a sizeable fortune, the bonanza period has brought into focus new hopes for Chi film biz, new squabbles, and some radically new directions in which films might be distributed here.

Contributing to the fortnight of bulging theatre coffers was an array of heavyweight holiday preems that accounted for $602,000 in 17 downtown firstrun houses, and a 12-theatre nabe firstrun "showcase" of "Move Over Darling" which contributed $407,000 to the over-all total. Another big chunk came from a 45-theatre firstrun saturation booking of "Who's Minding The Store", generally in tandem with "Wheeler Dealers". The Jerry Lewis starrer played only one week at some of the theatres, and the take for the pic has as yet not been tallied.

What's most pleasing to distribs and owners is the cash register reminder that there is that much total ticket money to be taken in. As a matter of fact, the over-all gross could have been higher if the first holiday week had not been nicked by a string of days of sub-zero weather.

'Charade' a Leader

The most frequently-asked question on Film Row is: "Why didn't somebody have a 'Gypsy' ready for the holidays?" That one grossed $62,000 in its first frame at Christmastime a year ago at the Chicago Theatre. The highest grosser this year was "Charade" at $48,000 at the same house and with New Year's Eve included in the tally period.

It's the tradesters opinion (which seems to be born out by the boffo takes) that the film houses will pick up their share of the "spend frenzy" that takes over the populace at Yuletime, and they are surprised that no one had held up or advanced a blockbuster to siphon off a bigger share. It's the first year in many that there hasn't been a picture around big enough to rack up $60,000 or better for a week that included Christmas Day and New Year's Eve.

Most precedental showing for the period was "Move Over Darling", 20th-Fox's first major Chi venture

(Continued on page 18)

And Par Makes 3 For Preminger

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Otto Preminger now has production-distribution ties with three majors as result of deal completed on Friday with Paramount. The new agreement calls for three features, first of which will be adaptation of James Bassett's World War II naval novel, "Harm's Way." Preminger had originally planned to direct-produce this story for Columbia release, but "by an amicable agreement" arranged to transfer the project to Paramount.

"Harm's Way" will be Preminger's next undertaking. Story is set in period following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. It is at present the only story he has definitely decided on in relation to the Paramount affiliation.

Preminger, whose "The Cardinal" recently was put into release by Columbia, has two more pictures to do under agreement with the studio. He also has two commitments remaining on his United Artists distribution deal.

There is no time limit for completion of any of the three company obligations, Preminger explained. "That's one of the advantages we independents have," he

(Continued on page 18)

Big 'Zulu' Whoop

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Exploitation budget of $1,000,000 has been set for Embassy Pictures' "Zulu," according to Joseph E. Levine, here for company's "Zulu" caravan, involving screening of film for some 150 distribs and exhibs.

Levine also disclosed that a deal is about to be closed for a second pic with Cy Endfield and Stanley Baker, coproducers of "Zulu." Filming is slated to start in September, with Baker to star as well as coproduce with Endfield, who will direct.

Ross Hunter Unamused By 20th's Doris Day Copy Recalling Her Earliers

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Downgrading another studio's product to bathe your own in a more favorable light is just not cricket, contends Ross Hunter. Specifically, he pinned 20th-Fox's N. Y. ads for its Doris Day-James Garner starrer, "Move Over Darling" which features these comparisons:

"More Pillows Than 'Pillow Talk'"; More Thrills Than 'Thrill of it All'"; "More Love Than 'Lover Come Back'"; and "More Touches Than 'That Touch of Mink'". All films used in ploy are Doris Day starrers for Universal, "Thrills" and "Pillows" Hunter-Melcher productions, others made under Shapiro-Melcher-Arthur banner.

"I saw the picture," muses Hunter," and I didn't see a single pillow."

Producer charges that there is a "great dishonesty" in much of film advertising which often tends to mislead the filmgoer anent what he is actually going to see. He, however, flipped a bouquet to Universal ad-pub veepee David Lipton who, he maintains, "never gilds the lily" and is able to whet the public's interest and yet always stay within bounds of good taste.

Trend towards injecting sex of "questionable" taste in Hollywood pix and their exploitation is self-defeating and in the long run "keeps people out of the theatres" opines Hunter. While acknowledging that sex was a basic ingredient in the b.o. success of "Thrill", he maintains, it was handled in "good taste", anything smacking of "bad taste" having been scalpeled out of script prior to filming.

He expresses puzzlement over seeming contradictions of the way in which the MPAA Production Code is applied. He agrees that Code was right in excising a man-to-wife line in "Thrill" which ran "I love you and I can't wait to get you home" but wonders how Code could nix it and approve either premise or handling of UA's "Irma La Douce."

Hunter is presently producing "I'd Rath Be Rich" on the Universal lot on a budget of $1,600,000 which he maintains is rock-bottom for production and cast values pic will sport.

FIRST BUILT SINCE 1929

Knoxville Opens New Riviera on Jan. 21

Knoxville, Jan. 14.

The first theatre to be constructed since 1929 on Gay Street, the main artery of Knoxville, will have its grand opening on Jan. 21. It's The New Riviera, on site of the old one destroyed by fire last year.

Costing $325,000, the house will be operated and leased by Simpson Operating Co. of Atlanta. Hugh Rainey is vice-president and manager of local Simpson theatres. Seating capacity is 850 with enlarged concession areas, lobby and ultra-modern construction.

Mayor John Duncan and other dignitaries will be present at the evening performance to cut a ribbon opening the theatre. Opener is Universal's "Charade."

In recent months Wilby-Kincey Theatres has made available the main street Bijou Theatre for the Simpson concern. This house will be returned to the owners on Jan. 15. The Bijou is also a main street first-run theatre.

Other Darlings In Prospect at UA, Post-Mirisches

United Artists has been hotting-up several new production deals. These are designed to bolster the company's product position, over the next six months, heading into the big spring stockholders meeting.

When all the Mirisch Corp. reports began circulating in the film trade several weeks ago to the effect that the prolific producers might be plotting to leave UA when their contract is up in 1967 or maybe even before, emphasis fell upon UA's product position sans Mirisch. Actually, the company has much product of its own without the Mirisch Bros. but the new deals, when disclosed, will demonstrate, it is felt at UA, a substantial product schedule for the future.

Believed pending are several "name" producers and directors. Not all have worked for UA in the past. UA won't hint. First in the series is now revealed, however. This involves the Pan Arts Co., helmed by producer Jerry Hellman and director George Roy Hill who have made their first effort, "The World of Henry Orient," for UA. Pan Arts has signed screenwriter Arnold Schulman, who'll produce and write two original screenplays.

Schulman is presently working on the first script, an as-yet-untitled story about a trio of young United Nations femme guides who room together. No cast or director is set yet and Hill isn't being mentioned to lense the project. Location work, naturally, will be done in New York. It is undecided whether studio work will be done in Gotham or Hollywood. "Orient" has lensed in Michael Myerberg Studios on Long Island but Hellman didn't enjoy the experience, to say the least.

What the second Schulman project will be isn't ready yet. He's presently responsible for Paramount's "Love With the Proper Stranger," which he wrote but did not produce. He has also written other pix, as well as for legit and tv.

20TH'S INVESTMENT IN JERRY DEVINE PLAY

Twentieth-Fox, which already has a number of Broadway play adaptations on tap, has made "a substantial investment" in the upcoming "Never Live Over A Pretzel Factory," thus insuring that the film rights will go to 20th. Play, by Jerry Devine, is to open in New York March 25 with Dennis O'Keefe starring under the production auspices of Paul Vroom, Buff Cobb and Albert Marre.

20th's Broadway adaptations include its current release, "Take Her She's Mine," the finished but unreleased "The Visit" and the still-to-be-shot "The Sound of Music" and "Goodbye, Charlie."

"Pretzel Factory" is a comedy dealing with three young men who start to make a small art film but then become involved with an alcoholic screen star who induces them to expand the modest budget to epic proportions.

Metro's Betty Smith Novel With 25c on Extra Sales

Greensboro, N.C., Jan. 14.

Betty Smith has sold MGM the rights to her latest novel "Joy In The Morning" which will have the Doctor Kildaire of television Richard Chamberlain, and Elizabeth Ashley, of the Broadway hit, "Barefoot in the Park" in the leads.

MGM has also promised the novelist 25c for every book that's sold over the 50,000 mark. Miss Smith doesn't anticipate any problems here because the book is selling at the rate of 1,000 copies a week now plus 20 foreign publications contracted.

Yale No Handicap

Gerald Ayres, who joined Columbia in 1960 as assistant story editor in New York, has been appointed assistant to Mike J. Frankovich, production head.

A graduate of Yale, where he majored in drama and English, Ayres was a free-lance writer and reader before joining Col.

Van Johnson, Facing 2d Cancer Op, Prefers Talk Of His New Cafe Act

Montreal, Jan. 14.

Van Johnson, concluding a solid run at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel's Salle Bonaventure, is acting like it was someone else going into the Gotham Memorial Hospital this week for cancer surgery on his leg.

Except when you get him to talk about his tough, personal health problem, when he isn't virtually bubbling to tell his showbiz colleagues about the problems and challenges facing a long-run film actor, in switching to cafes.

On the cancer thing:

"It's a funny thing, but I've never felt in better health and I've never been in better condition. They did surgery on me for cancer before, and now I've got to go back.

"This has been a very happy time for me, this cafe exposure—new faces, new experiences, a new career adventure. But every now and then I think of what's facing me at the cancer hospital, when I'm alone particularly, and get that funny feeling. It's not pleasant."

"I'll be hospitalized for two weeks, I hope," he said during an interview, "after that it's Blinstrub's in Boston and Harrah's in Lake Tahoe. And don't forget. I've still got five pictures to do for Hal Wallis. So you can see, my main thoughts are on the future."

On the specific problems he faced in switching from films to the live cafes with live audiences, Johnson confided "My first and biggest problem," he said, "was and is staying awake for that second show, after years of an early-to-bed routine to be on the set early."

His cafe act began to take form when he took a bow at the Gordon and Sheilah MacRae show at the Waldorf.

Lyn Duddy and Jerry Bresler, his producers and writers who also turn out the stuff for such as Judy Garland, Carol Lawrence, the MacRaes, Arthur Godfrey, etc., worked on him for two years until he took the plunge.

Since then, approximately $15,000 has been invested in the act which, says Johnson, is "never out of rehearsal."

There was 12 solid days of night-and-day rehearsal before he opened and, he says, "you have to be prepared to give up some friendships, when you try a new thing like that."

Actually it's not that new: Johnson was last in Montreal 25 years ago when he appeared in a song-and-dance turn called "Eight Men of Manhattan" at the old Normandie Roof in the Mount Royal Hotel.

CANADIAN NEGRO HERO

Calgary Mayor's Script Will Roll As Feature

Calgary, Alta., Jan. 14.

Victoria Productions of Canada is to produce a full-length color motion picture based on the book, "John Ware's Cow Country," written by J. W. Grant MacEwan, now mayor of Calgary.

The book is a biography about a Negro, John Ware, who was born into slavery in North Carolina. After the Civil War he moved to Western Canada and eventually owned his own ranch in Alberta. He was killed in 1905 when a horse fell on him.

Screenplay is now being written. Company is headed by John Edward Lee and I. H. Rose of Montreal.

BENIGN VISAGES QUITE COMMON

By MIKE WEAR

A judicious perusal of the reporting cities covered in this publication's weekly boxoffice estimates indicates that the recent holiday period was very noel-noel, especially after New Year. Sale of tickets soared to three-year highs, creating a sanguine reaction among theatremen and distributors alike. The fine takes came, in some areas, in the teeth of blowing snow.

United Artists, Paramount, 20th-Century, Universal, Columbia, Buena Vista and other companies all had occasion to break with the wreaths in the form of smiles. The happy daze at UA related not alone to the biz done by its Cinerama comedy, "Mad World" but to the powerhouse form shown by the British-made "Tom Jones" which copped the year-end accolades of the National Board of Review, the N.Y. Film Critics Circles, the IFIDA "Best Foreign Film" and numerous citations by amusement editors around the country which habitually sift favorite releases.

Columbia had "The Cardinal" from Otto Preminger as its big one over the holidays. Carl Foreman's "The Victors" was only just into release when Santa Claus's reindeer were heard jingling in the background.

How has been boxoffice in Texas since the Dallas assassination of President John F. Kennedy? There are no hard facts, as usual, since Texas circuits and theatres, by long tradition, hold to the policy that their business is nobody's business. Boxoffice receipts in Texas film houses may be the film trade's best-kept secrets.

It is heard in New York, and credited, that there has been a falling off in ticket purchase and that Texas did not reflect the good business reported following New Year's Day in nearly all sectors of the union. The term "remorse" is used as respects Texans.

Bigg st total registered by a single picture was for "Charade," which Universal opened in some 200 situations on Dec. 25. Pic came in with nearly $3,000,000 gross for the two weeks, ended last Jan. 7, according to Universal. Major item, of course, was the $233,825

(Continued on page 17)

Loew's Pair Into Metro 'Showcase'

Two theatres in the Loew's metropolitan New York chain have been set to participate in the showcase exhibition plan which is to be adapted by Metro with "Wheeler Dealers" on Jan. 22. But only two—the other 16 all are independents.

The situations firmly are set—18 in all—for MGM to go showcase in the Gotham exchange area following the pattern established by United Artists and then adhered to somewhat by 20th-Fox.

Joining the field in the case of MGMs "Dealers" are Loew's metropolitan, Brooklyn, and Loew's Jersey City Theatre.

Heretofore, Loew's, as the RKO circuit in N.Y., eschewed any kind of showcase participation.

Hint around town (Manhattan) has it that Loew's will go more and more for showcase, and providing its top houses including the Broadway firstrun Loew's State, once certain problems can be solved.

Nature of the problems has been explained. But it's more or less an established fact that if all the distributors, or at least the majority of them, insist upon going for the blanket firstruns of their pictures, then Loew's will have to go along, too.

Many Today Dub Selves 'Producers' But Qualify on None of Essential Realities of Title—John Wayne

Madrid, Jan 14.

The only independent film producer who is truly independent is one who operates with a fully-staffed production operation, not relying on major studio or distributor staffs and production people to do the work. The latter condition results in hefty charges against the production and other factors which make the filmmaker independent in name only. Such is the opinion of John Wayne who's Batjac indie company has been making pix this way for years.

Batjac Setup

Batjac is set up with its own, contracted production people, right down to its own auditing department. Wayne recalls that it was originally formed with the idea of being a production unit which would function for independent producers, supplying them with all the production personnel necessary to make a picture. The actor, who is familiar with production having started in the film biz as a prop man, saw a potential for this kind of company.

Later he made a deal with Warners to produce low-budget westerns and the like and to make pix for tv. Warners, however, began to make the telepix themselves and Batjac entered feature film production. It has turned out some substantial efforts too, such as "The High and the Mighty," "The Alamo," "Hondo," "Island In the Sky" and, most recently, "McLintock," which became one of UA's hotter pix of 1963. The distrib originally turned it down, Wayne noted, as did Paramount on the "we're not interested in westerns" idea. It has put about $5,000,000 in the UA coffers so far, Wayne estimates.

The real independent makes his own pictures, the actor avers. Today, everybody is calling himself a "producer" but most of these claims are "ridiculous," Wayne says. Most of these work under the umbrella of a major "and it costs them a lot for it," he contends. With Batjac's own staff and production setup, the company has never spent more than 10% over the original estimated budget, not the final revised version either.

Reins of the Batjac operation are being passed to Wayne's son Michael. He handled the "McLintock" production and pop has lotsa praise for the way it was done. He said that he was always taking a beating on the distribution side of things but that Mike is a businessman and supervises this aspect well. As far as plans for Batjac, Wayne reported last week that the indie presently doesn't have a picture lined up. There will, of course, be more pictures to come, some to star Wayne and others not. "Duke" still keeps a careful eye on the operation of the company.

Non-Exclus Par Pact

He is also under non-exclusive contract to Paramount as an actor and has some projects in the wind there, although nothing is firm. Par studio head Martin Rackin is here now talking with Wayne about the future. He still has to finish special effects work on "Circus World" for Samuel Bronston, which will take another few weeks.

As an actor, Wayne has been under non-exclusive contracts for 35 years, he said, and enjoys working that way. His Batjac company has long been a pet project and was one of the innovators in indie production and, he feels, it is still one of the only real indies around. At 56 he just won an exhibitor poll as top male actor of 1963, not the first time he's done so either. His comment: "At my age it's about time some younger fellas would talk over." But he really digs it and people here all feel that when he quits, it will be with his boots on.

The best things in air travel are on TWA

Sparkling wine, a connoisseur's menu, and a fine first-run movie. What more could you ask for when you're going places? You get them all... at no extra charge... when you're a TWA First Class Royal Ambassador. In fact, only TWA treats you so royally on nonstop coast-to-coast and overseas flights to ten of Europe's favorite cities. Live it up next time you travel. Call your travel agent or Trans World Airlines.

Nationwide Worldwide depend on TWA

Goldwyn's 10 Stages

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Samuel Goldwyn Studios will soon add two soundstages to present facilities. Goldwyn has purchased two existing stages from UA-Ziv Studios, which is located across the street from the Goldwyn lot and will transplant them to his property. The UA-Ziv lot was sold some time ago to be revamped for commercial usage.

The purchase will give Goldwyn a total of 10 stages. The new ones will be completely refurbished and will include, among other things, new sound channels. Goldwyn's total outlay for the expansion is estimated at $1,000,000. Move was triggered by an increase of rental deals the studio has been making lately.

Forman Pitching C'rama at Ozoners

William Forman, president and chief executive officer of Cinerama, this week disclosed plans to have drivein theatres "get with" C'rama. Forman, who took over the top spot from Nicolas Reisini on Dec. 22, said he's accelerating work on suitable screens and projection of C'rama for the ozoners.

If accomplished this doubtless would enlarge the market place for the dimensional type of screenfare which C'rama engages in. "The success of this program should result in a substantial increase in our exhibition outlets in this country and elsewhere," he said.

Forman is the West Coast circuit operator who last February took over the $15,000,000 indebtedness which C'rama had with the Prudential Life Insurance Co. of America. He now says he has a firm belief in the future of the organization, is aware of the need for more financing and is underway with a program of bringing in new capital.

Also on the fiscal end, Tom Deane, former senior v.p. of the Bank of America, has been named chairman of the finance committee at C'rama.

FAITH IN ORIGINALS MARK OF UNIVERSAL

Universal Pictures, which has gone strongly in recent years with original screen stories, has a new array of same on spindle for 1964. Of the 26 pictures planned for the year, 17, or 65%, are originals.

This is a calculated gamble away from costly established book or legit properties. Proved successful at U are "Charade," "Thrill of It All," "That Touch of Mink," "Lover Come Back," "Come September," "Operation Petticoat" and "Pillow Talk."

Included in the other nine pix are stage and published works, per "Send Me No Flowers," "The Public Eye," "Kitten With a Whip," "The Guns of August," "The Cipher" and several others. Aside of its belief in original works, the studio believes that there simply aren't enough novels or plays available to maintain a satisfactory schedule.

ORGAN MUSIC LOVERS

Durham, N.C., Jan. 14.

Theatre organist Stephen Brown of Knoxville, Tenn., gave a concert on the Center Theatre's recently renovated theatre organ here Dec. 21. The concert, open to the public free of charge, was sponsored by the Piedmont Chapter of the Assn. of Theatre Organ Enthusiasts. It was the third on the Center Theatre organ since its restoration was completed last March.

Brown is with Tennessee Theatre in Knoxville.

Europe to U.S.

Warwick Brown
George Chakiris
John Dexter
Sir John Gielgud
Anita Gillette
Barry Gray
Kenneth Hyman
Norman Katz
Judith Tarlo
Arnold Wesker

'Stick-With-Winners' Means Dullsville; Pataky Calls Bankers Copy-Cats

Columbus, O., Jan. 14.

The film industry is suffering because of its policy of "sticking with the winners," thinks Ron Pataky, theatre editor of the Columbus Citizen-Journal. He blames bankers for this conservative policy. He said: "Play-the-odds has become nearly a battle cry. Nothing new. No new personalities. Stick with the winners. Go with the tried and proven."

It's become an industry of sequels, says the critic. "Make one big hit and you've got a dozen cheap copies. The big stars? The Gidgets and Tammys, natch . . and Elvis and Troy Donahue and Paula Prentiss and Connie Francis and Bobby Darin and others equally without talent."

"A promising young writer with an original screenplay has at least one course of action toward getting the necessary backing. He can finance it himself . if he has the money."

"Best-selling books and hit plays are horses of another color. Another color indeed. Hollywood will be happy to butcher both. The same goes for Broadway stars."

"Again, Hollywood is quite willing to pilfer. But develop stars of their own? Stars with real talent? Out of the question."

"Want to know what a man with a great idea has to go through? Ask Frank Perry, whose 'David and Lisa' was one of the giants of the past year. Before the film started to soar, he couldn't get arrested. Moreover, he couldn't give the story away. Ah, but walk in with an inane script about a Tammy or a Gidget, star a no-talent, blank-faced juvenile like Sandra Dee and you have it made. Really made, brother!"

"It's not that there is a shortage of talent. Nor is there a shortage of money. It's simply that financial control is in the wrong hands, held by people who are unwilling to gamble on anything, especially anything artistic. Art will never be as profitable as slop. As long as profits are the major issue; as long as the powers that be approach the whole thing with the rationalization that 'It's business, after all', we're in trouble."

"Business? Profits? 'David and Lisa' hasn't done so badly. Nor have 'The L-Shaped Room,' 'Tom Jones,' the Bergmans and the Fellinis."

LOCAL PASTOR CAST IN 'SHEPHERD' RE-DO

Shreveport, Jan. 14.

A remake of the late Harold Bell Wright novel, "Shepherd of the Hills," starring Richard Arlen and a cast of unknowns, is in the can. Producer Jimmie McCullough has signed for distribution with Howco International of New Orleans.

The widescreen, color film was shot on location near Branson, in Missouri last fall with a script by Ben Parker, who also directed. McCullough's Maco financed.

Casting was done mostly in Louisiana and Missouri. In the title role, played by Harry Carey in the 1939 version was Dr. James Middleton, pastor of the Shreveport First Baptist Church. Life Mag shot photo feature on the guy. Story may hit in February.

Camera crew was Ted and Vincent Saizis from Birmingham. Editing in Hollywood by George White.

McCullough and Joy Houck of Howco are lining up playoff strategy at present.

Next Macco project is oater with "inspirational" theme Parker is to direct again. Arlen may repeat.

Luis Bunuel Borrows Trumbo's 1940 Horror Tale From NBC Radio

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Spanish director Luis Bunuel has bought rights to the old Dalton Trumbo story, "Johnny Got His Gun." It is planned for production in France with Trumbo doing screenplay, after completing his present assignment for Columbia-Martin Ransohoff, "Sandpiper."

Under contract negotiated by agent Ingo Preminger the property is a lease to pay Trumbo immediate coin, percentage and reversion of rights after nine years. Bunuel is currently completing a feature titled "Diary of A Chambermaid."

"Killed But Didn't Die"

Luis Bunuel is known for his nightmare realism of theme and scene and the old Dalton Trumbo story presumably should offer him a field day. Of this story, when presented as an NBC sustainning radio drama with James Cagney starred, VARIETY's reviewer, Land, wrote, issue of March 13, 1940, as follows:

"This story of a human hulk unmercifully spared from the battlefield to live shut up within itself for 20 years turned out to be, as an Arch Oboler radio drama, appalling, horrible, heartbreaking, stomache-upsetting bit of delirium in monolog. Dalton Trumbo's story and James Cagney's tender, introverted, vacumized performance combined to produce moments that were clutchingly grim and hellishly vivid. It was a tale of squirrel-cage spiralism within a human brain with only remnants of a body. It had the drama and the trauma of sanity and insanity locked in a tug o'war. It was terrific but terrible. For general purposes it was unendurable and, on the whole it was inexcusable.

"The piece seemed in final essence not so much a good case against war, although that intent was loudly proclaimed, as a particularly imaginative and unpleasant exploration of the dread of all mankind of being buried alive, for that was the particular horror of the fate of legless, armless, speechless, earless, Johnny, who was killed but didn't die.

N.Y. to L.A.

Eddie Carmel
Roger Carmel
Jack Lenny
Donald Madden
Ben Segal
Monique Van Vooren

L.A. to N.Y.

Dick Dinsmore
Bill Froug
Gilbert Marchant
Robert Reed
Lee Remick
Omar Sharif
Pat Suzuki
Sylvester (Pat) Weaver
Harold Wirthwein

NASSAU COUNTY'S IA NIXES MIX WITH 52

The proposed merger between International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees studio mechanics New York Local 52 and Nassau county Local 340 was voted down by the latter membership at a meeting recently. A majority of 33 to 20 voted in favor of amalgamation but a ⅔ majority was required to pass the proposal.

Local 52 had been the inceptor of the merger proposal, which had the open backing of the parent International.

Queried as to why his membership behaved as it did, 340 business agent Ben Bradley said last week that he didn't have any explanation for the vote. He said that he has "maintained a neutral position" throughout the entire matter. It is believed, however, that Bradley was not entirely in favor of amalgamation.

Marshall Thompson's Pic

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Marshall Thompson has joined Ivan Tors Films as producer-director and will prepare an African adventure film.

Tors is now editing "Rhino for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Picture originally was filmed in Africa and new project is expected to continue along same line.

U.S. to Europe

Rex Harrison
Cy Harvey
Mitchell R. Leiser
Martin Rackin
Rachel Roberts

The Finest Address In London

May Fair Hotel

BERKELEY SQUARE, LONDON, W.1.
Res.: Cable Collect—Mayfairtel, London or Your Travel Agent

WANDERERS BACK TO COAST?

Universal Sets a 'Golden Showcase'

'Charade' and 'Fave Sport' Get Special Marketing—How Stands Palace in Times Square?

The "Premiere Showcase" running story in New York continues to take on new aspects. At a press conference last Thursday (9), Universal v.p.-general sales manager Henry H. Martin revealed U's intentions as regards "showcasing," a move which has several ramifications.

Universal will open its "showcase" scheme with "Charade," which is now in its sixth week at Radio City Music Hall. In so doing, it will actually be carrying out what United Artists, inceptor of the "showcase" plan, has been calling "golden showcase," in that is taking a pic which has already played a firstrun engagement and then giving it a selective nabe firstrun treatment.

U will utilize the "showcase" logo developed by UA and also used previously by 20th-Fox, though the showcase theatres will not be confined to those used by UA and Fox. The Universal plan will mark the debut of the RKO circuit in "showcase" participation, it long having been a holdout. The Astor in Manhattan, from the start the "showcase" flagship, some Skouras theatres and indies will also be involved, bringing the total to 20 theatres in all daydating "Charade." Target date for this is Jan. 29, depending, of course, on the Music Hall run.

Next, Universal will "showcase" "Man's Favorite Sport" using the idea as originally designed — for multiple firstrun showing without any previous dates. The Howard Hawks comedy is tentatively set to debut Feb. 19. At the moment, Martin said that U's "showcase" plans don't extend beyond these two features. He described his company's action as a variation of its "peremter plan" which operated along the lines of "golden showcase" but which utilized the RKO circuit as a followup. U has been using "perimeter" for two-and-a-half years. Unlike "showcase," it didn't daydate firstruns all over but used only a few selected theatres running with the Palace on Broadway, like the Brooklyn Albee and a couple others.

The new Universal approach brings up some points in regard to the Broadway scene. What U's future relationship with the Palace will be is up for speculation but no answers are forthcoming, as yet

(Continued on page 18)

On to Weeki Wachi

Warner Bros. is doing it up big with its unveiling of "The Incredible Mr. Limpet." Film company reps report they are junketing 250 reps of the national and world press, radio and television to Weeki Wachee Springs, Fla., tomorrow (Thurs.) for a specially-devised underwater screening of the picture Friday. "Mr. Limpet" is a comedy focusing on frogmen exploits.

Film is to be shown in a submerged theatre operated by American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres in Brookville, Fla. John C. Rose produced, Arthur Lubin directed and the star is Don Knotts.

Scratch Capitol Off PR Tour for Fleming Tale; Kennedy Had Been Fan

Washington, D.C., has been cut out of the schedule of promotional stops by advance ballyhoo artist Tom Carlile, who is touring the country plugging "From Russia, With Love." This is yet another happening in the aftermath of the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

The former president was a big fan of author Ian Fleming, who penned "From Russia," along with the whole series of novels about fictional international spy chaser James Bond. Kennedy had been quoted at one time as saying that, of all the Fleming books, "From Russia" was his favorite. In fact, after the film was completed, a special screening was held in the White House for the late chief exec.

When the Carlile bally tour was being set up originally, Washington was prominently on the list, the strategy being to milk the most out of JFK's passion for the Bond books. After the assassination, however, it has now been considered better to drop Washington from the trip and Cincinnati has replaced it, not for proximity reasons, naturally, but as an additional city to be hit.

"From Russia" is the champ in England currently, playing to the best biz the town has ever seen in some situations, including roadshow pix. It is due to arrive in the U.S. shortly, the second of ten pix based on Fleming novels to be made by Eon Productions for United Artists. The first, "Dr. No," was a solid grosser both in the U.S. and abroad.

TOA-ALLIED HOLDING HARMONY PRACTICE

What were described as a "frank and friendly exchange of views" was the substance of the meeting in Miami Beach last Friday (10) of leaders of Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Assn., huddling there to explore the possibilities of merger between the two exhibitor organizations.

Nothing definitive developed out of the session but it was termed by leaders of the organizations as "most productive and fruitful." The harmony in which this session was conducted will lead to further meetings at a later date, it was also stated by the participating exhibition leaders.

The meeting had originally been called to determine, in the words of Allied prez Jack Armstrong, whether or not a merger of the two "is possible, practical or feasible." Armstrong stressed that the get-together at the Hotel Fontainebleau would be "merely exploratory."

Present from Allied at the session were Armstrong, chairman Marshall Fine, Ben Marcus, Wilbur Snaper, Irving Dolinger and Milton London. Repping TOA were prez John H. Rowley, chairman John H. Stembler, Mitchell Wolfson, George Kerasotes, Myron Blank, Dave Wallerstein and Joe Alterman.

'THUNDERING WHEELS' TITLE IN DISPUTE

Willpat Productions, indie filmmaker, has filed suit in N. Y. Federal Court against Sigma III Corp., a distributor, seeking an injunction to halt the defendant from exhibiting "Thundering Wheels."

Willpat claims that it produced a western film by that title for release early this year. It is alleged that Sigma obtained a pic about stockcar racing called "Big Wheel" and has renamed it "Thundering Wheels" also. It is claimed that Sigma's action has hurt Willpat's project and so an injunction is being sought to prevent licensing and exhibition of the Sigma property.

McIlwain Exits Cinerama

William J. McIlwain has bowed out as general manager of theatre operations for Cinerama. This per B. G. Kranze, v.p.

McIlwain had been with C'rama since its inception and took on the job he's now leaving in September, 1959. He has no plans except to return to California.

PRELIM COUNT CHEERS COLONY

By MICHAEL FESSIER Jr.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Scanning the 1964 production picture — strictly conjectural at this point, of course—a continuing drift of filming from overseas to the U.S. is indicated with but 35 of 165 vehicles in active preparation being geared for lensing abroad either in whole on in part. Last year of 162 American-backed pix 53 filmed in toto overseas.

Whether or not actual production totals for 1964 will surpass or fall short of number of films "prepping" is, of course, strictly guesswork as the studios seem more than ever to be playing it by ear on a month to month basis, declining to give a go ahead on projects until all components of a package are fixed and ready.

Only 48 of the 165 in the works have been allotted as much as a "seasonal" start date, i.e. "spring, summer," etc. The company with most pix pinned to fairly specific launchings is 20th-Fox, which has so tagged 14 of 22 films it is readying for '64, many of them for the first part of the year.

Figures do not include potential Disney product, that studio declining to name any films being prepped, though a company spokesman allowed that "we'll probably make our usual half dozen." Nor is the indie 7-Arts included since no rep of that company could be reached for comment. Company topper Ray Stark has been laid up in a Sun Valley hospital with a broken leg suffered while skiing. Several months ago, however, 7-Arts announced that it had some 23 properties in various stages of preparation.

Metro, prepping 30 pix, boasts the most ambitious sked, though only five of them have been handed start dates. Studio made 27 films last year. Warner Bros. which lensed 14 last year, has five firmed to go, four of them with

(Continued on page 17)

Disney, After Tax Net, $6,574,321

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Walt Disney Productions and its domestic subsidiaries continue an upward financial stride, consolidated net profit after taxes for fiscal year ended Sept. 28, 1963 hitting a record high of $6,574,321, according to Roy R. Disney, President, in annual report to stockholders.

Take, which reps $3.81 per share on 1,727,743 common shares outstanding, is a 24.9% increase over last year's net of $5,263,491, equal to $3.14 per share on 1,674,804 shares of common then outstanding. Provision of $6,100,000 in income taxes was made for 1963 and $5,650,000 for 1962.

Disney also reported a 8.34% jump in gross income for 1963. This amounted to $81,922,127, an increase of $6,310,300 over 1962's $75,611,827 gross.

Film rentals for 1963 totalled $40,918,923 as against previous year's $42,408,634; and television income amounted to $8,259,723, a boost of $2,266,362 over '62; Disneyland Park revenues for year were $24,076,844, uppance of $4,020,120 over previous year. All other income from publications, newspaper comic strips, licensed cartoon characters, music records and Celebrity Sports Center was $8,666,637, Disney stated, an increase of $1,513,529 over last year, most of which resulted from reflexion of a full year of Celebrity's income compared with six months in 1962.

Disney told stockholders that all product in release is profitable and all divisions and subsidiaries are operating profitably. He predicted that the new current year also will be good for company.

Spain-Mexico-Argentina 'Festival' Rotates Nationally, Plus Confabs

Madrid, Jan. 14.

Sevilla will be the locale for a first Hispano-American Film Festival, as a result of a pact reached by Argentine, Spanish and Mexican film chiefs at the recent Acapulco gathering. According to David Jato, Secretary-General of Uniespana, the Spanish-language film event will rotate Geographically from year to year.

Jato defined the October-date project as a festival only for want of more precise terminology. The festival will go beyond the traditional screening of films and jury awards to include a working agenda for discussion of tighter co-ordination of film industries in the Spanish language areas—both in the field of production and distribution. At the same time Jato thought the annual fest would provide an exclusive forum for Spanish-language film industry representatives that has not been available in the past at such Int'l film meets as Cannes, Venice, Berlin, San Sebastian and Mar del Plata.

Jato also stated that the Sevilla film fest would in no way reduce Uniespana's support for San Sebastian. On the contrary he expects the producer group to play an even more influential role this year in selecting and replacing the three-man San Sebastian fest directorate with a single topper as well as in shaping a more vigorous policy and structure for the Basque festival.

'Jones' Places 1-Thru-10

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

"Tom Jones" (UA-Lopert) will not be shown here until next month, but that fact didn't stop Morning Tribune's Will Jones from a lengthy rave on film which he caught at a special Hollywood screening Jones echoed National Board of Review and New York Film Cirtics Circle with a "first" but awarding it the other nine places as well.

This unusual tribute already has localites' curiosity piqued to an extent that should help the boxoffice plenty even though the film's arrival is comparatively far distant.

New Mexico Fan 'Bests'; Mastroianni of Italy, Rutherford of Albion

Albuquerque, Jan. 14.

"Lawrence of Arabia" was named as the top film of the past year shown in this town, by reader poll conducted by Fred Bonavita, film editor of the afternoon daily Tribune. At the same time, locals picked Hitchcock's "The Birds" as the worst of the past season.

"Best actor" went to Marcello Mastroianni, with "best actress" choice of Margaret Rutherford.

Choice for worst actor went to James Garner. Three-way tie was noted for worst actress—Elizabeth Taylor, Carol Lynley and Merry Anders.

Ten best list was heavy with foreign films. Included in order of preference: "Sundays and Cybele," "David and Lisa," "Taste of Honey," "Divorce—Italian Style," "To Kill a Mockingbird," "8½," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Bye Bye Birdie" and "Elektra."

GEZA POLATY UNDER POE'S NEW ECHELON

Geza Polaty, most recently general manager in Japan for United Artists, has been named 20th-Fox Far East supervisor, with headquarters in Tokyo. Exec is now in New York for indoctrination at the 20th h.o. before taking up his Tokyo duties.

Polaty's appointment is part of exec veep Seymour Poe's plan to revamp the 20th foreign operation by appointing field supervisors who are to be back up by their counterparts in the homeoffice. Last month Francisco Rodriguez was named Latin American supervisor, with headquarters in Mexico City, and Karl Knust his counterpart on the Latin American desk in New York. Polaty's counterpart in New York will be named shortly.

Polaty, a Hungarian by birth, served with UA in Japan from 1958 until last year. Prior to that, he held various sales positions with Warner Bros. for 10 years. Earlier he had been an independent film producer in Germany, Spain and South Africa.

More Milestone Awards

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

George Jessel will gagmaster the screen producers guild 12th annual Milestone Award dinner on Sunday night, March 1 at ballroom of the Beverly Hilton hotel. Bryan Foy is chairman.

Arthur Freed will be the receipient of this year's Milestone. Producers will also present awards for the best produced theatrical motion picture of the year, the best produced film television series of the year and the Jesse L. Lasky-intercollegiate competition award.

LANDAU DISTRIBUTION RESOURCE TAKES FORM

Plans for the Landau Releasing Organization, subsid formed by Ely A. Landau to handle domestic distribution of his own and other pictures, are shaping up, according to William Shelton, director of international operations for the indie. Thinking calls for the release of five to six pix a year, the first of which will be the British-made "The Servant," which will make its U.S. preem in New York within the next few weeks.

Other possibilities for release by Landau in the U.S. during the year include the recently-completed "Pawnbroker" and "The Fool Killer," which has been in the can for a while now. Additionally, Landau will soon put into production the filmization of Pat Frank's novel "The Forbidden Area" and also has skedded for later this year the production of a film based on Carson McCullers' novel "Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," both of which have been kicking around Landau's schedule for some time now.

Besides these, there are the oft-mentioned Landau projects to film Jean Giradoux's "The Madwoman of Chaillot," now being screen scripted by James Poe, and "Leonardo da Vinci," being scripted by Howard Fast. This production schedule will be augmented by the purchase of still other films for release in the U. S., such as was done with "Servant." This pic, incidentally, may make its Yank bow in one of Landau's two Gotham theatres, the 57th St. Normandie or the Little Carnegie. It's not decided as yet, however.

Shelton himself sails for Europe tomorrow (Thurs.) aboard the Queen Mary. The object of his trip will be to buy more completed pictures and arrange further foreign distribution deals for the Landau projects. He will be headquartering in Paris and Rome and will visit, among others, London, Munich and Stockholm. He has been in the States for several months now, huddling with Landau and solidifying production- distribution plans and projects.

Jules Pincus Re-Locates

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Jules Pincus, formerly associated with Randforce Amusement Corp. in Brooklyn, has joined Fred Stein's Statewide Theatres circuit as manager of the refurbished Picfair Theatre.

He's making his home in Sherman Oaks.

The Pink Panther
(TECHNIRAMA-COLOR)

High-gloss nonsense with standout comic highlights and brilliant playing by Peter Sellers. His clowning and a star roster add up to topgrade fodder for escapists.

London, Jan. 7.

United Artists release of a Mirisch-G.-E. production. Stars David Niven, Peter Sellers, Robert Wagner, Capucine, Claudia Cardinale. Directed by Blake Edwards. Screenplay, Edwards and Maurice Richlin, music, Henry Mancini; camera, Philip Lathrop; editor, Ralph E. Winters. Reviewed at Odeon, Leicester Square, London, Running time, 115 MINS.

Sir Charles ..... David Niven
Insp. Jacques Clouseau ..... Peter Sellers
George ..... Robert Wagner
Simone Clouseau ..... Capucine
Princess Dala ..... Claudia Cardinale
Angela Dunning ..... Brenda De Banzie
Greek "Cousin" ..... Fran Jeffries
Tucker ..... Colin Gordon
Defense Attorney ..... John Le Mesurier
Baloud ..... James Lanphier
Artoff ..... Guy Thomajan
Novelist ..... Michael Trubshawe
Greek shipowner ..... Riccardo Billi
Hollywood starlet ..... Meri Wells
Photographer ..... Martin Miller

This is film making as a branch of the candy trade, and the pack is so enticing that few will worry about the jerky machinations of the plot. The production crams in so many appealing plusses that the whole luscious affair defies mental probing. And it is delivered with such an impudent, tongue-in-cheek elegance by Blake Edwards, as director and partwriter, that there is no inclination to brood over the occasional lapses. Quite apart from the general air of bubbling elegance, the pic is intensely funny. The yocks are almost entirely the responsibility of Peter Sellers, who is perfectly suited as a clumsy cop who can hardly move a foot without smashing a vase or open a door without hitting himself on the head. When memory of the others subsides, "Panther" will be a vintage record of the farcical Sellers at his peak.

Mood of jaunty distraction is splendidly launched by the witty and diverting titles from DePatie-Freleng Enterprises, who use the cartoon figure of an insolent pink panther with fine ingenuity. Action starts rolling in fairly-tale style. These are few cumbersome moments in the film, for scripters Edwards and Richlin have a complicated plot to outline and it takes some alertness to pick up the threads and join them together. The "Panther" is a priceless jewel owned by the Indian Princess Dala (Claudia Cardinale), vacationing in the Swiss ski resort of Cortina. The other principals are introduced in their various habitats, before they converge on the Princess and her jewel.

In Rome, a dashing and elusive thief pulls off another coup, and later turns out to be Sir Charles Lytton (David Niven). In Los Angeles, his nephew George (Robert Wagner) has himself photographed in student cap-and-gown, so that the uncle who supports him will not know his true profession, which is similar to his own. In Paris, Simone Clouseau (Cupucine) is almost caught in the act of passing a stolen jewel to a "fence," and makes a quick getaway. And Simone turns out to be the wife of Inspector Jacques Clouseau (Peter Sellers) who has been chasing the phantom thief for 15 years to no avail.

After this, the stage is set for a saucy and improbable imbroglio in Cortina. There is little point in tracking the twists of the plot, which only serves the useful purpose of putting all the characters in unlikely juxtaposition. Sir Charles manipulates an introduction to the Princess, whose jewel he is after, and then, via champagne, tries a little gentle seduction.

The other ingredients come straight from the Keystone Kops, and the highspot is a bedroom scene. The Inspector and his wife prepare for bed, but the cop does not know that there are two men, Sir Charles and George, concealed in the room, unable to escape. This classic situation of trousers-down comedy comes to a satisfying climax when the Inspector climbs thankfully into bed with his spouse, and is doused in champagne that she was trying to hide. The whole scene fizzes riotously, and it says much for the expertise of Blake Edwards' direction that the pace and interest do not languish after it.

Final comic setpiece at a costume ball does not quite reach these heights, but its satisfactory. With both Sir Charles and nephew George after the jewel, the fireworks unexpectedly explode in profusion. There's even a car chase, ending in a pileup in the village square.

The end is neat. Sir Charles and George seem to be caught at last. At the trial, they call the Inspector as their witness. He has to confess that every time a big jewel theft has been accomplished over the last 15 years, not only has Sir Charles been present, but also the Inspector himself. Absentmindedly he pulls a handkerchief from his pocket. Attached to it is the missing "pink panther," which has been planted on him. So the Inspector goes to jail and the crooks go free.

It is Peter Sellers who swipes the stellar honors. His razor-sharp timing is superlative, and he makes the most of his ample opportunities. His doting concern for criminal wife, his blundering ineptitude with material objects, and his dogged pursuit of the crook all coalesce to a sharp performance, with satirical overtones.

David Niven produces his familiar brand of debonair ease. Robert Wagner has a somewhat undernourished role. Capucine, sometimes awkward and over-intense as if she were straining for yocks, is nevertheless a good Simone. The sultry Claudia Cardinale also does well as the Princess, and carries off her main scene, amorously tipsy with Sir Charles.

The Swiss locales are agreeably captured by Philip Lathrop's camera, and the lensing is firstrate throughout, making tasteful use of Technicolor and the Technirama process. Svelte music comes from Henry Mancini, also responsible for the cabaret number, "Meglio Stasera" (It Had Better Be Tonight), delivered with verve by newcomer Fran Jeffries. The tune is good enough to catch on.

Editor Ralph E. Winters includes no unnecessary footage. Result should be an international winner. Otta.

The Man From Galveston

Originally pilot for WB's "Temple Houston" vidseries. Undernourished as theatrical fare.

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Warner Bros. release of Michael Meshekoff production. Stars Jeffrey Hunter, Preston Foster, James Coburn, Joanna Moore, Edward Andrews. Others in cast: Kevin Hagen, Martin West, Ed Nelson, Karl Swenson, Grace Lee Whitney, Claude Stroud. (No character names). Directed by William Conrad. Screenplay, Dean Riesner, Michael Zagor; camera, Bert Glennon; music, David Buttolph. Reviewed at World Theatre, Jan. 7, '64. Running time, 57 MINS.

This is the pilot film that spawned Warner Bros.' "Temple Houston" television series. The studio has converted it into a theatrical feature. And it was accompanying feature with "Four for Texas" last week in several L.A. theatres. As a pilot, it was obviously successful, having paved the way for the series. As a theatre feature, however, it is mighty skimpy fare—barely acceptable as a running mate.

Jack Webb, until recently tv production chief at Warners, was exec producer of the Michael Meshekoff production. William Conrad directed from a screenplay by Dean Riesner and Michael Zagor. Yarn is concerned with the adventures of a brash young attorney (Jeffrey Hunter) attached to an early Texas circuit court, or a kind of roving frontier judiciary who stormed into small towns with all the fanfare and razz-ma-tazz of Ringling Bros. Plot describes Hunter's implication in a case involving an old flame who has been accused of murder. Hunter fingers the real killer in some absurdly contrived courtroom melodramatics.

Hunter is colorful as the cocky lawyer, Preston Foster correctly irritable as a circuit judge, James Coburn reliable as a rather hapless marshal, Joanna Moore pretty and sincere as the accused woman. Competent in key support are Edward Andrews, Kevin Hagen, Martin West and Ed Nelson. Dexterous photography by Bert Glennon is a plus factor. Tube.

Strait-Jacket

Shocker about an axe murderess drawn along lines of "Psycho." Although rather crude and imitative, b.o. future seems favorable.

Hollywood, Dec. 5

Columbia Pictures release of William Castle production. Stars Joan Crawford; features Diane Baker, Leif Erickson, Howard St. John, John Anthony Hayes. Directed by Castle. Screenplay, Robert Bloch; camera, Arthur Arling; editor, Edwin Bryant; music, Van Alexander; assistant director, Herbert Greene. Reviewed at Academy Awards Theatre, Dec. 5, '63. Running time, 93 MINS.

Lucy Harbin ..... Joan Crawford
Carol ..... Diane Baker
Bill Cutler ..... Leif Erickson
Raymond Fields ..... Howard St. John
Michael Fields ..... John Anthony Hayes
Emily Cutler ..... Rochelle Hudson
Leo Krause ..... George Kennedy
Mrs. Fields ..... Edith Atwater
Dr. Anderson ..... Mitchell Cox
Frank Harbin ..... Lee Yeary
Stella Fulton ..... Patricia Krest
Carol (3 yrs.) ..... Vickie Cos
1st Little Girl ..... Patty Lee
2nd Little Girl ..... Laura Hess
Shoe Clerk ..... Robert Ward
Beauty Operator ..... Lyn Lundgren

"Strait-Jacket" could be summed up as a chip off the old Bloch. Writer Robert Bloch's "Psycho," that is. In crossing the basic plot design of that 1960 Bloch-buster with the instrument of murder (the axe) and at least one of the ramifications of the celebrated Lizzie Borden case, Bloch has provided the grisly ingredients for producer-director William Castle to concoct some marketable "chop" suey. Although it lacks the slickness, marquee stature and, obviously, the originality to generate anything approaching the response to "Psycho," it should be a moneymaker for Columbia.

Heads really roll in this yarn, which commences with a dual hatchet job on a cheating husband and his lady friend who are discovered bedroominating by the wife (Joan Crawford), whose three-year-old daughter witnesses in horror the 40 some odd whacks per victim administered by her mother. Mom goes to the insane asylum and daughter grows up into Diane Baker. They are reunited 20 years later when mom is released. Whenever the film begins to bog down from this point on, which it tends to do, Bloch just gives 'em the axe, the axe, the axe. Three more victims fall by the wayside before the mystery — which to the more alert customers shouldn't prove very mysterious—is solved. The story is purposely manipulated to lead the audience astray, with the result that at least several of the characters and situations are awfully hokey and confrived. But whenever it's time to go chop-chop, "Strait-Jacket" is scary enough for anyone, and that saves the show.

Miss Crawford does well by her role, delivering an animated performance. Miss Baker is pretty and histrionically satisfactory as her daughter. Some of the supporting work is quite inept, but competent characterizations are fashioned by Leif Erickson, Howard St. John, John Anthony Hayes and Rochelle Hudson. Some of Castle's direction is stiff and mechanical, but most of the murders are suspensefully and chillingly constructed, along the order of the bloodbath blueprints for "Psycho."

Capable assists have been contributed to the production by cameraman Arthur Arling, editor Edwin Bryant (especially good on the homicidal knitting), production designer Boris Leven, composer Van Alexander and soundman Lambert Day. Tube.

Das Grosse Liebesspiel
(The Big Love Game)
(GERMAN)

Berlin, Jan. 7.

Nora release of Team-Film and Stadthallen production. Stars Lilli Palmer, Hildegard Knef, Nadja Tiller. Directed by Alfred Weidenmann. Screenplay, Herbert Reinecker; camera, Georg Bruckbauer; music, Charly Niessen. At Gloria Palast, Berlin. Running time, 133 MINS.

The actress ..... Lilli Palmer
The call-girl ..... Hildegard Knef
The divorced woman ..... Nadja Tiller
The secretary ..... Daliah Lavi
The elderly lady ..... Elisabeth Flickenschildt
The French girl ..... Daniele Gaubert
The wife of the director ..... Alexandra Stewart
The diplomat ..... Paul Hubschmid
The school director ..... Martin Held
The chief ..... Peter van Eyck
The pupil ..... Thomas Fritsch
The student ..... Peter Parten
The policeman ..... Walter Giller

The Germans have a way with overdoing things, even with films. This pic, dramaturgically reminiscent of Max Ophuls' "La Ronde," gives evidence of it. There's a bit too much of just everything in this vehicle. The dialog sequences are much too wideopen. There's too much philosophical talk. The women in this are too fond of getting a man. The boys get the girls too easily. Much is too heavily played out. As a result, the film doesn't have what it should have had in the first place: Charm. And the pic is much too long.

Alfred Weidenmann undoubtedly is one of Germany's better directors. He knows his trade but why didn't he know when to stop? The late Lubitsch set a good example years ago. Also Ophuls did. What makes a delicate film really delicate? When much is left to the viewer's imagination. For this film, the viewer doesn't need much if any imagination. Commercially, the film has the potentials for a big local success. Artistically this doesn't amount to much. Foreign prospects are on the slim side.

Entire film centers more or less on the bed and what the film calls love. It starts out with a call girl (Hildegard Knef) who teaches the ways of love. The boy utilizes his newly acquired knowledge on the young wife of his school professor (Alexandra Stewart), while, in turn, the professor (Martin Held) has an erotical escapade with a sultry secretary (Daliah Lavi). And so it goes on.

There are some plus points with regard to the acting but they're not enough to make this an internationally attention-getting film. For the record, the best polished performances are turned in by Held and Miss Knef. Many if not most of the other name stars in this lean too heavily on the mere routine.

The film may please those who like to hear such phrases as "you want to sleep with me" over and over again. But otherwise this 133-minute film has a tendency to bore the average patron. Hans.

Il Maestro Di Vigevano
(The Teacher from Vigevano)
(ITALIAN)

Rome, Jan. 14.

Dino DeLaurentiis production and release. Stars Alberto Sordi, Claire Bloom; features Vito de Taranto, Ya Doucheskaya, Guido Spadea, Tullio Scovazzi, Lilla Ferrante, Piero Mazzarella, Eva Magni, Ignazio Gibilisco, Bruno de Cerce, Egidio Casolari Directed by Elio Petri. Screenplay, Petri, Age, Scarpelli, from story by Lucio Mastronardi. Camera, Otello Martelli. Sets, Gastome Corsetti. Music, Nino Rota. Editor, Ruggero Mastroianni. At Cinema Corso, Rome. Running time, 112 MINS.

Mombelli ..... Alberto Sordi
Ada ..... Claire Bloom
Dean ..... Vito de Taranto
Eva ..... Ya Doucheskaya
Nanini ..... Guido Spadea
Rino ..... Tullio Scovazzi
Cuore ..... Lilla Ferrante
Bugatti ..... Piero Mazzarella
Widow Nanini ..... Eva Magni
Varaldi ..... Ignazio Gibilisco
Cippolone ..... Bruno de Cerce
Filippi ..... Egidio Casolari

First major disappointment from the usually reliable Alberto Sordi, this film uncertainly wavers between the pathetic and comic, ultimately disappointing in both sectors. It has a built-in b.o. base at home thanks to the Sordi rep, but will need hard sell to overcome inevitably downbeat word-of-mouth. Export chances are iffy.

Based on a much-talked-of novel by the same title, "Vigevano" deals with a tradition-bound and colorless elementary school prof (Sordi) who only slowly and reluctantly bows to his wife (Claire Bloom) and her dreams of riches in other fields. She gets him to invest in a shoe factory of their own, but both it and the family—thanks to her extra-curricular dalliances—soon go to pieces and, after his wife's sudden death in a car crash, he is forced to return to the grey and dismal professorship for which he was trained.

The glaring error of the picture, and one which Sordi committed once before, but less violently, in "The Boom," is to feed laugh-expectant audiences an almost steady diet of pathos and gloom. The few laughs that come up once in a while only distract and clash with tone of the remainder of the pic. Sordi's portrayal of the mixed-up professor is never clearly patterned, and the jumps from pathos to bathos to satire to comedy upset each mood as it is created. Nor does Claire Bloom's diligent, but basically wasted effort, raise tone of pic, while a large supporting cast ranges from anonymity to gross caricature (as in the overdone portrayal of the school headmaster by Vito DeTaranto).

Not aided by a meandering pace which all too frequently lags, Elio Petri's direction lacks force and insight of his earlier efforts. Technical kudos are in the top Italo tradition. Hawk.

Mail Order Bride
(PANAVISION—COLOR)

Partially successful western that misfires in the stretch. Solid production and acting values could pave way for profitable b.o.

Hollywood, Jan. 8.

Metro release of Richard E. Lyons production. Stars Buddy Ebsen, Keir Dullea, Lois Nettleton. Directed and screenplay by Burt Kennedy, based on short story by Van Cort; camera (Metrocolor), Paul C. Vogel; editor, Frank Santillo; music, George Bassman; assistant director, Ed Dunn. Reviewed at the studio, Jan. 8, '64. Running time, 83 MINS.

Will Lane ..... Buddy Ebsen
Lee Carey ..... Keir Dullea
Annie Boley ..... Lois Nettleton
Jace ..... Warren Oates
Marietta ..... Barbara Luna
Lank ..... Bill Smith
Matt ..... Jimmy Mathers
Hanna ..... Marie Windsor
Sheriff Linley ..... Paul Fix
Charlie Mary ..... Doodles Weaver
Preacher Pope ..... Denver Pyle
Sister Sue ..... Kathleen Freeman
Young Old Maid ..... Abagail Shelton
Lily ..... Diane Sayer
Bartender ..... Ted Ryan

Metro's "Mail Order Bride" is two-thirds of a satisfying western with special appeal for the family trade. Until that critical juncture, the Richard E. Lyons production exudes an air of unpretentious charm and an outdoor vigor that, coupled with some breathtaking location photography and a few frisky performances, makes it a pretty palatable ear of frontier corn.

Had scenarist-director Burt Kennedy and story writer Van Cort chosen not to resolve their yarn by resorting to the tired, primitive device of separating the good guys from the bad guys and letting them go at it, they might have come up with a dark horse boxoffice contender for the studio. But as it is, Metro may have to rely more on personality rather than story values to cash in. All things considered, "Mail Order Bride" could and should emerge a profitable venture but less successful than it might have been.

The film is concerned basically with the emotional growth to maturity of a young hellion (Keir Dullea) whose deceased father has legally stipulated that his Montana ranch be run by an old buddy and erstwhile lawman (Buddy Ebsen) until such time as the latter deems his son fit to take over. As the major move in his campaign to tame and gentle the young colt in his charge, Ebsen scans the Montgomery Ward catalog, sashays to Kansas City in search of a bride for Dullea and brings back Lois Nettleton for instant wedlock, frontier style. She just happens to have a six-year-old son with her.

The wedded couple comes to a temporary understanding and just when it begins to appear that the story may be developed naturally and eventually resolve itself into a reasonably believable happy ending, writers Kennedy and Cort veer off on their foolish tangent. They proceed to turn an until then merely colorfully ornery critter (Warren Oates) into a first class, full fledged, and totally absurd heavy, and the picture never recovers from this mortal blow. The happy ending develops anyway, but it just isn't the same after all the contrived chaos and confusion. The simple charm and glow of the film is all but destroyed.

Dullea, who attracted favorable attention with his work in "Hoodlum Priest" and "David And Lisa," continues to impress and takes another stride in what should develop into a bright career. Without question one of the most gifted young actors to hit the screen in some time, he shold be utilized more frequently and to greater advantage by Hollywood filmmakers. He scores in this outing with a histrionic vitality that gives more to the character than he gets from the script. Equally impressive is Lois Nettleton, another outstanding talent on the rise.

Ebsen, whose "Beverly Hillbillies" popularity won't hurt the boxoffice any, gives a firm and reserved portrayal of the perceptive guardian. Oates, another accomplished young player, delivers a virile performance. Sound support is contributed by Barbara Luna, Paul Fix, Marie Windsor, Denver Pyle, Bill Smith, Kathleen Freeman, Abagail Shelton and moppet Jimmy Mathers.

Shot on location in Northern California's High Sierras, the picture benefits from some stunning panoramic views, appreciatively captured and conveyed through Paul Vogel's picture postcard color photography. Another major assist is George Bassman's alternately plaintive and whimsical

(Continued on page 18)

SAILING THE SPANISH MAKE

'John Paul Jones' Reverts to Bronston

He Will Re-Market It After Own Tactics— 'Roman Empire' to Market Via Par March 24—Other Projects

Madrid, Jan. 14.

With two films in release, one being scored and edited and another being completed, Samuel Bronston is heading into 1964 with the busiest schedule of his production career here. At least three more pictures will go into production this year, distribution plans will be set for others and a new studio will be begun.

The two pictures currently in release are "El Cid," which continues to earn around the globe, and "55 Days at Peking," which has been a winner around the globe, except for the U.S. where it has performed unspectacularly. Being edited is "Fall of the Roman Empire" and finishing filming is "Circus World." To go into production in 1964 are "Nightrunners of Bengal," "La Belle Epoch" (Paris 1900) and "Brave New World." Further distribution is planned on "John Paul Jones" and arrangements are being planned for "La Belle."

"El Cid" has been doing strong biz in various global showings and recently turned in a substantial showing in a third re-release in the U.S. "Peking," which paid off its negative overseas, is still just getting started in some areas of the world, opening just recently in Madrid ironically.

As far as "John Paul Jones" which is still in the debt column, is concerned, Bronston gets the negative back from Warners this year and is planning to redistribute it around the world, probably handling it through his own organization. This goes for the U.S. as well where he created Samuel Bronston Distributing Co., which is now releasing the indie "War of the Buttons."

"Roman Empire," which will be handled by Paramount in the Western Hemisphere, will open March 24. A London-Rome-New York tri-city preem may be held for the film, which was to have christened the Bronston distribution operation in the U.S. Bronston commented last week that the switch to Par was a matter of "better business," saying that it was finally decided to delegate some of the responsibility for the film and the decision was made to do so to Paramount, which will roadshow it.

"Circus," which will also be distributed by Par in the western hemisphere, winds principal shooting in Madrid this week. Then the lead players go to London for special effects work, the first time Bronston has used special effects in a film. Paramount was ready to handle the job in Hollywood but Bronston decided it would be more practical to do it in London. It is anticipated that the film will be completed by October.

When "Circus" ends its Spain filming, the Bronston organization will hit a few months period of production layoff while the organization gets ready for "Nightrunners." This begins building in February but lensing won't begin for a few months. Like previous Bronston epics, this too will have some hefty construction done on it, a portion of India to be recreated on the Las Matas backlot where the Roman Forum was erected and the walled city of Peking was built. The film may be ready by April, 1965, with Par to distribute in the West.

"La Belle" will mark a new phase in the Bronston operation. It will be filmed in Italy instead of Spain, under the direction of Vittorio De Sica. It will be another large-scale production and is being made in Italy on reasoning that the Italo director is more at home working on such a project in his native land than in Spain. Construction for this film will begin in March. No distribution plans have yet been set for the pic, which may be ready by the fall of 1965. Bronston is considering distributing it himself in the U.S. and setting up his usual multi-distrib pattern elsewhere.

Also, "Brave New World" is slated to begin filming in September under the direction of Jack Cardiff. No distrib plans have been set for this as yet either. Another film project, "Suez," is not skedded as yet but it will be handled by Paramount in the Western Hemisphere when it is ready. Additionally, Bronston has several other projects on his future schedule, making him one of the busiest filmmakers going.

With all of this activity, the producer gets somewhat annoyed at his Hollywood brethren. He says that with them its too many tears and not enough action. Bronston feels that if the Hollywood crowd would spend as much time making films as they do complaining about things, they wouldn't have so much to complain about. It is an international industry today, he said, and doesn't rule out the possibility of even making a pic in Hollywood. "If I could find a story that I could make in Hollywood, I would be delighted," he said. "I have looked but have found nothing," he added.

Importers Picks: Burstyn to '8½'; 'Jones' Also Wins

Joseph Burstyn award, given to the best foreign language film of the year, has been won by Federico Fellini's "8½," Embassy Pictures' Italo import. The Burstyn award is the major prize given annually by the Independent Film Importers & Distributors of America. It and the other IFIDA awards will be presented to the winners at the organization's annual dinner-dance in New York Jan. 21.

"Tom Jones" has been named best foreign film in the English language of 1963 by IFIDA, and its director, Tony Richardson, and star, Albert Finney, named best director and best actor, respectively. The IFIDA awards, voted by the member companies, make a distinction between foreign and English language features in the best picture category only. In all other categories, nominees compete for the same prize, whether or not they are connected with an imported English or foreign language film.

This marks the second year in a row that Richardson has won the IFIDA best director prize. He took it last year for his "A Taste of Honey."

The other IFIDA awards for 1963 include: Brigitte Federspiel, best actress, for "A Stranger Knocks" (Denmark); technical dubbing award, to Titra Dubbing Co., for English language version of the Italo import, "Divorce — Italian Style"; the Edward L. Kingsley short subject award, to Union Films' "Marc Chagall."

CANADIAN DIRECTS U.S. FILM AIMED AT LATINS

Washington, Jan. 14.

Canadian director Morten Parker has just completed a labor film for U.S. Information Agency showing in Latin America. It's a Puerto Rican cast, produced in Spanish.

Before going independent, Parker was known for his Canadian Film Board productions and labor-management documentaries.

The 30-min. film titled "Rivera" shows how a Latin American union can bargain freely and in a democratic manner with management for the same benefits Communists "promise through violence."

BY 1965 TOOLS FULLY MODERN

By EDDIE KALISH

Madrid, Jan. 14.

"A $15,000,000 baby," as he calls it, will be born to Samuel Bronston here by mid-1965. It will be possibly the most modern film studio in Europe, comprising facilities to enable the production of a picture from A to Z without leaving the plant, except for location work, of course, should this be desired.

Plans for the project are currently being looked over by the Franco government and are expected to be returned to Bronston with a stamp of approval within the month. Work on the new plant will then begin immediately.

Unlike his present studios, one stage of which is the largest now operating in Europe, the new plant will be equipped for scoring, special effects, housing, feeding, lab work and just about anything else needed to make a picture. It took two and a half years to develop the project, which will be built on a 400-acre tract of land owned by Bronston at Las Matas, a short distance outside Madrid.

Outside of the technical facilities to be offered by the plant, the new studio will be equipped with a cafeteria which will be able to feed 5,000 people per meal, a hotel and motel, separate bungalows and other room and board facilities. The Spanish government has also provided the protection that no other construction can take place for a considerable distance beyond the Bronston plant.

The producer will move all of the offices of his operation to the Las Matas site when it is completed. He will not, however, abandon the present Madrid studios. Bronston's plan is to operate both the old and new facilities, using space at both for rental purposes. Except for England, the operation will offer the only source in Europe for many technical procedures and Bronston says that he feels the new plant will attract filmmakers from all over to work in Spain.

Reports Advance Intent

The producer has already had inquiries from Hollywood picturemakers as to the availability of his studios and reported last week that during 1963 he had to refuse the requests of five film companies to use his present facilities. He himself had to go to Rome to do some work on "Fall of the Roman Em-

(Continued on page 18).

British Film Industry Eager to See What Steps Govt. Takes on Brit. Lion

London, Jan. 14.

The British film industry is holding its breath.

It's waiting now for the results of two weeks of campaigning, hard-talking, in-fighting and maneuvering over the projected government sell of British Lion shares to private interests. This has stirred producers, exhibs, unions and politicians into action.

It's waiting specifically for the Minister of Industry to reveal in Parliament whether he has altered his intention of complete withdrawal from the distributor. His decision, vital to the independents of the industry, is expected any time now (Parliament reassembled yesterday (Tues.) following Christmas recess) though there is a possibility he will wait until the Cinematograph Films Council has reported on the structure and trading practices of the industry before making a final decision.

For as David Kingsley, chairman of British Lion, says there is now general acceptance by the trade and also in political circles that the future of British Lion cannot be divorced from the CFC report. This document is expected by many to give a rundown on the Rank and Associated British duopoly position within the biz.

Late word from London: Sam Spiegel is a bidder for British Lion, and two undisclosed companies. Dickers suspended until House of Commons discussion, due momentarily.

No Longer A Secret Deal

Since first news that the government-backed film bank, National Film Finance Corp., had exercised an option and acquired all the BL stock (by buying out the five directors stake for nearly $2,250,000), what seemed destined to be a secret deal has become a highly publicised controversy making a lot of mileage in the press, on the airwaves and, to an extent, in Parliament.

The initial and vehement fuss-

(Continued on page 20)

Add Mona Lisa Jokes

Washington, Jan. 14.

Here's the latest on culture in the Capital:

U. S. Information Agency film chief George Stevens, jr., said he recently asked a governmental colleague his opinion of the Mona Lisa.

"It thought it was very well done, but much too long," answered the bureaucrat.

Shurlock 'Sealed' 191 Pix in 1963; Trend Is Up

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Hollywood motion picture production showed a slight trend upward during 1963, according to a report from Geoffrey Shurlock, Production Code Administrator of the Motion Picture Association of America.

Seal of approval was granted to 191 feature films during the year, as compared to 174 in 1962, Shurlock revealed, also noting a gain in script submissions which totalled 185 in 1963 as compared to 167 the previous year.

Total domestic releases approved was 101, with 90 approvals for foreign films. In 1962 figure was 87 in both categories.

Code figures revealed 19 of the 1963 films were produced and released by members, compared with 18 in 1962; 70 by non-members, released by members, compared with 57, and 12 for each year produced and released by non-members.

In foreign production, 11 were produced and released by members, compared to 9 the previous year; 70 produced by non-members, released by members, compared with 62, and 9 produced and released by non-members, compared with 16 the year befor. Latter category marked only area in which 1962 was higher.

Of the total of 90 PCA approved films made abroad in 1963, 40 were made by American companies and the remaining 50 by foreign producers.

YANK PRODUCT PACES SWITZERLAND HALF-YR.

Zurich, Jan. 14.

U. S. distributors were front runners in Switzerland, as to the July-December period in the five key cities of Zurich, Basle, Berne, Geneva and Lausanne. Of the 10 highest grossing releases, five American pictures and, what's more, three of the remaining five are handled by Yank distribs in Switzerland.

Topping the list is "Lawrence of Arabia," a Columbia-released British entry, with a total playing time of 44 weeks in the five cities, plus rave reviews. Runnerup is UA's "Irma La Douce." Although it played only Zurich so far, daydating in two theatres, grosses were such that it easily copped second place in the Swiss boxoffice sweepstakes. Showing amazing holdover power, the Billy Wilder comedy ran for 18 weeks in just one city. It's a New Year holiday release in other situations.

Other U.S. winners are: MGM's "The V.I.P.'s" (25½ weeks), in third spot; "The Great Escape" (U), fifth; "The Birds" (U-I), seventh; and, in tenth position, "Son of Flubber" (Disney-BV). The latter was released only in Zurich as yet, doing brisk business at the same small-seater where its predecessor, "Absent-Minded Professor," broke all longrun records in 1962.

European product handled by American distribs includes Italy's "The Leopard" (20th), in fourth spot, and France's Jean Gabin-Alain Delon starrer, "Melodie en Sous-sol" (Any Number Can Win), an MGM release, in sixth position.

Other successful entries from Italy and France, respectively, are: "L'Ape Regina" (Conjugal Bed), eighth, and "A Toi de Faire, Mignonne" (It's Your Turn, Honey), starring Eddie Constantine (ninth).

National Boxoffice Survey

Biz Holding Well; 'Charade' No. 1, 'World' Second, 'Cardinal' 3d, 'Jones' 4th, 'Darling' 5th

Usual letdown after the yearend holidays is in evidence this stanza at firstruns covered by VARIETY but, outside of key cities hit by blizzards Sunday and Monday, trade is holding up remarkably well in comparison with other years. Heavy snowstorms along Atlantic seaboard hit such key cities as New York and Philly damaging blows.

"Charade" (U) (3d wk) is finishing first for third week in a row, with better than $360,000 in some 19 keys. "It's a Mad World" (UA) (8th wk) will cop second place by a considerable margin.

"The Cardinal" (Col), hard-ticketer in many keys, is finishing third. "Tom Jones" (UA) (7th wk) is pushing up to fourth position and likely will go higher as it is launched in additional key cities.

"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk) is capturing fifth spot though it has been higher. "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk) is winding up sixth, down from its position when it had the benefit of vacationing youngsters.

"The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk), just getting around extensively, is taking seventh money. "Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk) will wind up eighth. "Four For Texas" (WB) (4th wk) is finishing in ninth place. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (3d wk) rounds out the Top 10 grossers.

"How West Was Won" (MGM), down to its lowest point; and "Kings of Sun" (UA), which has been higher, are the two runnerup pix.

"The Victors" (Col), just starting out, is showing big biz in three keys this stanza and looks a winner. "Strait-Jacket" (Col), just out this week, shapes good in K.C. and Washington, and is sharp in Buffalo and L.A.

"Children of Damned" (MGM), also new, looks big opening round in Detroit. "To Bed or Not to Bed" (Cont), another newcomer, is brisk in Boston and great in N.Y. "Love on Pillow" (Col), also a newie, looks good in Detroit and N.Y., and is fair in Frisco.

"Love With Proper Stranger" (Par) still is big on extended-run in N.Y., with promise of going places. "Ladies Who Do" (Cont) shapes stout in Balton and hotsy in Boston.

"Who's Minding Store" (Par) looks good in Frisco. "Tales of Terror" (AI), due at N.Y. Palace soon, is rated okay in Boston.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

(Complete Boxoffice Reports on pages 10-11-13).

Cold Facts

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

MILTON COHEN, UNITED ARTISTS
729 SEVENTH AVE NYK
CONGRATULATIONS, THE BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS OF $75,405 OF ITS
A MAD MAD MAD MAD WORLD AT OUR WARNER THEATRE NEW YORK FOR THE WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 31 BROKE EVERY ROADSHOW RECORD OF
THE THEATRE. PLEASE CONVEY TO MR KRAMER, UNITED ARTISTS, CI
AND TO ALL WHO HAD A HAND IN ITS PRODUCTION OUR THANKS AND APPRECIATION

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 2 PM 16
MAD MAD WORLD BROKE HOUSE RECORD AT BOTH MARTIN AND MARTIN CINERAMA NEW ORLEANS LAST WEEK

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 3 AM 1 35
SECOND WEEK OF "IT'S A MAD MAD MAD MAD WORLD" GIGANTIC $18,000.
)) BOXOFFICE RECORDS SMASHED IN PAINED HISTORY OF CAPRI THEATRE.
HOLIDAYS, HOWLING
ARE ALSO LAUGHING, PROVES COUNTRY NEED

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 2 PM 2
MAD WORLD WEEK ENDED DECEMBER 30 OUR MCVICKERS THEATRE
WEEK ENDED DECEMBER 31 OUR

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 6 PM 5 32
CONGRATS, BOUQUETS, AND HUZZAHS TO UNITED ARTISTS, STANLEY
KRAMER AND ALL CONCERNED. "MAD MAD MAD MAD WORLD" HAS BROKEN
ALL EXISTING HOUSE RECORDS AT EMPIRE THEATRE FOR A SINGLE WEEKS
GROSS CONTINUED SMASH-TYPE BUSINESS A CINCH IF WORD-OF-MOUTH

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

CONGRATULATIONS AND THANKS TO STANLEY KRAMER AND UN

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 6 PM 5 56
CONGRATULATIONS ON SUCCESS OF "IT'S A MAD, MAD, MAD, MAD WORLD"
BROKE ALL HOUSE RECORDS FOR WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 31ST AT WARNER,
PITTSBURGH AND CAPITOL, CINCINNATI. LOOKING FORWARD TO LONG AND PROFITABLE RUN
HARRY FEINSTEIN STANLEY WARNER MANAG
(30).

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 4 AM
DEAR MILT BUSINESS SENSATIONAL WITH MAD MAD MAD MAD WORLD AT NATIONAL GENERAL HOLLYWOOD THEATRE PORTLAND OREGON OPENING
WEEK GROSS OF 25,032 SETS ALL TIME HOUSE RECORD FAR EXCEEDS RESULTS OF ALL PREVIOUS CINERAMA AND THANKS FOR A

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 7 AM 10 41
MAD WORLD CHRISTMAS WEEK IN THE BOYD THEATRE PHILA GROSS 34500 DOLLARS THOUGHT YOU WOULD LIKE TO KNOW THIS IS A NEW RECORD FOR THE HOUSE REGARDS
FRANK J DAMIS

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

1964 JAN 3 AM 1 35

Hot Figures:

"IT'S A MAD, MAD, MAD, MAD WORLD broke the all-time house record in 14 of the domestic theatres where it is current on a reserved-seat basis."

City	Theatre	Old Record	"Mad World"
Chicago	McVickers	$30,970	$33,430
Montreal	Imperial	$18,194	$24,529
San Francisco	Orpheum	$44,244	$44,893
Atlanta	Martin	$12,316	$15,225
New Orleans	Martin	$12,834	$18,863
Philadelphia	Boyd	$23,779	$34,948
Cincinnati	Capitol	$15,184	$17,354
Pittsburgh	Warner	$16,013	$21,226
Cleveland	Palace	$15,738	$22,696
Houston	Windsor	$14,081	$20,934
Kansas City	Empire	$14,972	$19,964
Miami	Sheridan	$17,009	$26,366
Portland	Hollywood	$12,895	$23,575
New York	New Warner	—	$70,790

—Variety, January 8, 1964

UA

L.A. Still Perking; 'Jacket' Hefty $20,000; 'Jones' Wow 42G, 'Charade' Great 26G, 'Newman' 17G, 'Prize' 15G

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Firstruns here are continuing to attract perky biz this week, being sparked by "Strait-Jacket," which looks hefty $20,000 playing three houses, along with a flock of holdovers shaping solid. "V.I.P.s." going into first general release, shapes only fair $14,500 in three situations.

"Tom Jones" looks wow $42,000 in seventh session at Orpheum and in third at Vogue and Picfair. "Charade" looks great $26,000 or near in third week at Chinese. "The Prize" is bright $15,000 in third at Warner Beverly.

"Capt. Newman, M.D." looms solid $17,000 or near in third at Hollywood Par. "Love With Proper Stranger" is rated fancy $15,000 in third at the Village. "Victors" is torrid $15,000 in third at Fox Wilshire.

Of hardticketers, "It's a Mad World" is socko $25,000 in 10th week at the Cinerama; "Cardinal" looks smash $21,000 in fourth at Egyptian, and "How West Was Won" looks amazing with $18,500 in 47th week at Warner Hollywood.

Estimates for This Week

Los Angeles, Baldwin, Wiltern (Metropolitan - State - SW) (2,049; 1,800; 2,344; $1-$1.49) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col) and "Siege of Saxons" (Col). Hefty $20,000 or near. Last week, Los Angeles, Wiltern, "Four for Texas" (WB), "Man from Galveston" (WB) (2d wk), $10,600. Baldwin with Crest, Hillstreet, Iris, "Sword in Stone" (BV), "Stooges Go Around World in Daze" (Col) (2d wk), $17,300.

Music Hall (Ros) (720; $2-$2.40) —"Devil and 10 Commandments" (Indie). Nice $5,000. Last week, "Ceremony" (UA) (2d wk), $2,700.

Iris, Lido (FWC) (825; 876; $1-$1.49)—"Mary, Mary" (WB) (1st general release) and various second feature pix. Dull $7,000. Last week, Lido, "Ladybug, Ladybug" (UA) (4th wk), $2,600.

Hillstreet, Pix, Four Star (Metropolitan-Prin-UATC) (2,752; 756;

(Continued on page 13)

Key City Grosses

Estimated Total Gross

Last Year $2,837,900
(Based on 22 cities and 286 theatres).

This Week $2,487,000
(Based on 22 cities and 268 theatres, chiefly first runs including N. Y.)

'World' Wow 12G, Cincy; Grant 10G

Cincinnati, Jan. 14.

Cincy firstruns are sans signs of biz aches this session after easing from holidays trade splurge. "Mad World" rates sock in fourth week at Capitol as town's topper. Potent in third weeks are "Charade" at Albee, "Sword In Stone" at Keith's, "Kings of Sun' 'at Palace and "Move Over, Darling" at the Valley. "Cleopatra" looks fairish in 29th frame at Grand.

Hilltop arty houses, shaping okay, have an addition in the Plaza, Norwood, which switched from longtime doublebilling and rates a pleaser currently for "Lazarillo." "Small World of Sammy Lee" shapes nicely in third round at Guild, now operated by Eddie Slazburg, an indie, on lease from Willis Vance.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; $1.25-$1.50) —"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Solid $10,000 for Cary Grant pic after $12,500 in second week.

Capitol (SW-Cinerama) (1,339; $1.25-$2.75) — "Mad World" (UA) (4th wk). Socko $12,000. Last week, $12,500.

Esquire Art (Cin-T-Co) (500; $1.25)—"Conjugal Bed" (Embassy) (2d wk). Five days. Fair $1,200. Last week, $1,800.

Grand (RKO) (1,396; $1.80-$3)— "Cleopatra" (29th wk). Fairish $5,500. Last week, $7,000.

Guild (Kilgore) (272; $1.25)— "Small World of Sammy Lee" (Indie) (3d wk). Nice $1,400. Last week, $1,800. House was Cincy's first built for films.

Hyde Park Art (Cin-T-Co) (700; $1.25)—"Conjugal Bed" (Embassy) (2d wk). Five days. So-so $1,000. Last week, $1,400.

Keith's (Cin-T-Co) (1,500; $1.25-$1.50)—"Sword In Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Sharp $10,000 after $16,000 second round and $30,000 preem.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; $1.25-$1.50) —"Kings of Sun" (UA) (3d wk). Okay $7,500. Last week, $9,000.

Plaza (Fine Arts) (600; $1.50)— "Viridiana" (Indie). Good $2,000. Current arty policy opened on Dec. 25.

Twin Drive-In (Cin-T-Co) West side only, 800 cars; $1)—"Promises, Promises" (AA) (subrun) and "Glass Cage" (Indie). Oke $4,000. Last week, "Cry of Battle" (Indie) and "War Is Hell" (Indie), $3,500.

Valley (Cin-T-Co) (1,275; $1.50) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Stout $7,000 or over. Last week, $9,000.

'Darling' Okay $17,000, St. Loo; 'Prize' 20G, 2d

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

Heavy weekend snow is hurting biz here this stanza. However, some pix are holding up okay. "Move Over, Darling," one of few newcomers, shapes okay at Fox if not up to hopes. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" looms trim in second at Ambassador. "The Prize" is rated good in second at State. "Charade" looks sturdy in third at Esquire.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (Arthur) (2,970; 90-$1.25)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (2d wk). Trim $10,000. Last week, $16,000.

Apollo Art (Grace) (700; $1.25) —"David and Lisa" (Cont) and "Sporting Life" (Cont) (2d wk). Okay $1,000. Last week, $2,000.

Esquire (Jablonow - Komm) (1,800; 90-$1.25) — "Charade" (U) (3d wk). Sturdy $10,000 or near. Last week, $15,000.

Fox (Arthur) (5,000; 90-$1.25)— "Move Over, Darling" (20th). Okay $17,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $9,000.

Loew's Mid-City (Loew) (1,160; 60-90) — "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Fine $9,000 or over. Last week, $20,000.

State (Loew) (3,600; 60-90) — "Prize" (MGM) (2d wk). Good $20,000. Last week, $28,000.

Martin Cinerama (Martin) (913; $1.25-$2.50) — "How West Was Won" (MGM) (40th wk). Fat $7,000. Last week, $8,000.

Pageant (Arthur) (1,000; 90-$1.25)—"Cardinal" (Col) (2d wk). Okay $2,500. Last week, $4,000.

Paris Art (Chernoff) (800; $1.50) —"Love and Frenchwoman" (Indie) and "Kitchen" (Indie). Fair $1,200. Last week, "Love on Riviera" (Indie), $1,500.

St. Louis (Arthur) (3,800; 75-90) —"Who's Minding Store" (Par) (3d wk). Mild $6,000. Last week, $10,000.

Shady Oak (Arthur) (760; 90-$1.25) — "Lord of Flies" (Cont) (6th wk). Oke $1,000. Last week, $2,000.

'Jacket' Good $8,000 In K.C., 'Darling' Fast 10G, 'Prize' Boff 9G, 3d Wk

Kansas City, Jan. 14.

Thanks to the return of pleasant, open weather and the power of current product, biz continues on a higher level than might normally be expected in this post-holiday session. Many houses are holding onto strong holiday fare ("Cardinal" at Brookside, "Sword in Stone" at Uptown, "Move Over, Darling" at Plaza, "Prize" at the Roxy), and all seem good for additional weeks, now being in third sessions. "It's a Mad World" at Empire is sock in fourth.

"The Cardinal" looks lofty in third at Brookside. "Strait-Jacket" is riding a heavy campaign at Paramount and looks good on opener.

Estimates for This Week

Brookside (Fox Midwest - Nat. Gen. Corp.) (800; $1.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (3d wk). Tall $6,000. Last week, $8,000.

Capri (Durwood) (1,260; $1.80-$3)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (9th wk). Good $14,000. Last week, $17,000.

Empire (Durwood (886; $1.50-$2.50)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) 4th wk). Socko $14,000. Last week, $17,000.

Paramount (Blank-UP); (1,900; $1.25-$1.50)—"Strait-Jacket" (Col). Good $8,000 or near. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $5,500, after ballooning to $12,000 during holidays.

Plaza (FMW) (1,630; $1.25-$1.50) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Slick $10,000 or close. Last week, $11,500.

Rockhill (Art Theatre Guild) (821; $1-$1.50)—"The Trial" (Indie). Moderate $2,000. Last week, "The Suitor" (Indie) (2d wk), $1,500.

Roxy (Durwood) (664; 75-$1.50) —"The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Excellent $9,000. Last week, $11,000.

63d Street (E&S) (1,500 cars). Fairyland (Finkelstein) (1,500 cars), Shawnee and Leawood (Dickinson) (1,000; 750 cars), New 50 (Baker) (900 cars), Boulevard (Rosedale) (750 cars); Centre (Commonwealth) (508; $1.25). Isis, Vista, Fairway (FMW) (1,360; 700; 700); Waldo (Rhoden) (1,000; $1-$1.25), Dickinson, Overland, Englewood (Dickinson) (700, 700, 850; $1 each). Playing subruns. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par). Hot $40,000 as New Year's saturation attraction.

Uptown (FMW) (2,043; $1.50)— "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Hep $12,000. Last week with Granada (FMW) (1,219; $1.25), $23,000.

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; $1.50)— "Devil and 10 Commandments" (Indie) (3d wk). Mild $1,200. Last week, $1,600.

'World' Mighty $42,000, Frisco; 'Jones' 23G, 4th

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

Biz is down slightly from its recent fast pace but still doing excellently. "It's a Mad World" looms standout with a great total for fourth round at Orpheum. "Cardinal" also is smash in fourth at St. Francis. "Tom Jones" is rated sockeroo for fourth session at United Artists. "Charade" looks smash in third round at Golden Gate.

Estimates for This Week

Alexandria (United Calif. (1,444; $5)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Hep $15,000. Last week, $13,000.

Clay (Ros) (370; $1.49)—"Nurse on Wheels" (Janus). Nice $4,000 or near. Last week, $2,600. "Ladies Who Do (Cont) (3d wk), $2,600.

Embassy (Dibble-McLean) (1,400; $1.75) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Big $8,000. Last week, $9,500.

Esquire (No. Coast) (846; $1.25-$1.50)—"Who's Minding Store" (Par) (3d wk). Good $5,000. Last week, $7,000.

Geneva Drive-In (Syufy) (910 cars; $1.25 person)—"Four for Texas" ,(WB) (3d wk). Okay $5,000. Last week, $8,000.

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; $1.25-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (3rd wk). Smash $17,000. Last week, $23,000.

Larkin (Ros) (384; $1.49)— "Suitor" (Wils) (4th wk. Oke $2,200. Last week, $2,600.

Metro (United Calif.) (1,000; $1.75-$2)—"8½" (Emb) (9th wk). Solid $5,000. Last week, $5,500.

Music Hall (Rcs) (364; $1.49-$1.75)—"Love on Pillow" (Col) (3d wk). Fair $2,400. Last week, $3,700.

Orpheum (Cinedome) (1,439; $2.50-$3.50)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (4th wk). Great $42,000 or close. Last week, $41,000.

Paramount (Par) (2,646; $1.50-$1.75)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk. Big $9,000. Last week, $14,000.

St. Francis (Par) (1,400; $2)— "Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Socko $20,000. Last week, $21,000.

Stage Door (A-R) (444,, $1.75-$2) —"Lawrence of Arabia) (Col) (4th wk). Good $5,000. Last week, $6,200.

United Artists (No. Cst) (1,148; $2-$2.40)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (4th wk). Sockeroo $23,000. Last week, $29,500.

Vogue (S. F. Thtrs.) (365; $2)— "Knife in Water" (Kana) (4th wk). Okay $4,000. Last week, $5,000.

Warfield (FWC) (2,656; $1.25-$1.50)—"Four for Texas" (WB) (2d wk). Mild $8,000 or less. Last week, $15,000.

'Darling' Dandy 10G, Mpls.; 'Charade' Smooth $9,000, 3d; 'West' 9½G, 45th

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

Firstruns are standing pat currently. There's not a single newcomer of importance. While the heavy holiday takes have dropped, as expected, most of the pix are holding up well.

"Move Over, Darling," looks great in third round at the Gopher. "Charade" is rated wow at the Mann, also for third. "Four For Texas" looks solid for fourth at Lyric. "The Prize" shapes hotsy at World in third round.

It is within one week of 10 month's start for the remarkable "How West Was Won" at the Cooper.

Estimates for This Week

Academy (Mann) (1,050; $1.25-$1.50) — "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) (m.o.). Mild $4,000 for second week downtown. Last week, legit stageshow.

Avalon (Frank) (900; $1) — "Nature's Sweetheart" (Indie) and "Kill or Cure" (MGM) (subrun). Mild $1,200.

Century (Par) (1,300; $2.10-$3.50) —"Cleopatra" (MGM) (29th wk). Virile $6,000. Last week, $6,500

Cooper (CF) (905; $1.25-$2.50)— "How West Was Won" (MGM) (45th wk). Astonishing $9,500. Last week, $8,500.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Great $10,000. Last week, $12,000.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50)— "Four for Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Fine $6,000. Last week, $5,500.

Mann (Mann) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50) —"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Brisk $9,000. Last week, $13,000.

Orpheum (Mann) (2,800; $1.25-$1.50)—"Touring legit show current. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par), $6,000 in six days.

Park (Mann) (1,000; $1.50)—"To Catch a Thief" (Par) and "Vertigo" (Par) (reissues). Okay $3,000. Last week, "Creat Caruso" (MGM) (reissue), $3,000.

State (Par) (2,200; $1.25-$1.50)— "Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Good $7,000. Last week, $7,000.

Suburban World (Mann) (800; $1.25) — "Eclipse" (Times). Mild $1,500. Last week, "Play Girl and War Minister" (Union), same.

World (Mann) (400; $1.25-$1.50) —"Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Healthy $6,000. Last week, $6,500.

Broadway Grosses

Estimated Total Gross

This Week $534,100
(Based on 32 theatres)

Last Year $509,500
(Based on 30 theatres)

'Charade' Big 21G, Hub; 'Jones' 20G

Boston, Jan. 14.

With the count down after the holidays, biz is tapering off some. Locked in big films are doing okay as witness "Charade" with a boffo take at Memorial in third week. "Tom Jones" is still the big boy with a wham fourth week at Beacon Hill. "Orgy at Lil's Place," which opened at the State during the holidays broke house records for two weeks, and may hit a new third round high.

"Cardinal" is still big in fifth at the Saxon with advance-booked houses. "Four for Texas" looks good in fourth week at Paramount. "Ladies Who Do" is hotsy in third at the Park Square.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) 117; 90-$1.50)— "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) (3d wk). Big 11,000. Last week, $14,000.

Beacon Hill (Sack) (900; $1-$1.80) —"Tom Jones" (UA) (4th wk). Wham $20,000. Last week, $24,000.

Boston (Beacon Ent) (1,354; $1.20-$3.95)—"Mad World" (UA) (9th wk). Eighth week ended Jan. 13 was slick $25,000. Last week, $30,000.

Capri (Sack) (850; 90-$1.50)— "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Nice $8,000. Last week, $10,000.

Center (E. M. Loew) (1,250; 90-$1.25)—"Tales of Terror" (AI), "House of Usher" (AI), and "Raven" (AI). Sock $8,500. Last week, "Blood Feast" (Indie) and "Victim" (Indie), $7,500.

Cinema, Kenmore Square (Indie) 320; $1.40-$1.90)—"To Bed or Not to Bed" (Cont) (3d wk). Great $5,000. Last week, $6,000.

Exeter (Indie) (1,276; 90-$1.49)— "Any Number Can Win" (Indie) (3d wk). Nice $7,500. Last week, $8,200.

Fenway (Indie) (1,276; 90-$1.49) —"Playgirls and Bellboy" (Indie) and "Geisha Playmates" (Indie) reissues) (2d wk). Oke $3,000. Last week, $3,500.

Gary (Sack) (1,277; $2-$3.90)— "Cleopatra" (20th) (m.o.) (9th wk). Good $10,000. Last week, $12,000.

Mayflower (ATC) (689; 90-$1.50) —"West Side Story" (rerun). Okay $3,000. Last week, "Love on Pillow" (Col) (2d wk), $4,200.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 90-$1.50) —"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Boffo $21,000. Last week, $25,500.

Music Hall (Sack) (4,300; 90-$1.80)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Good $14,000. Last week, $18,000.

Orpheum (Loew) (2,900; 90-$1.65) —"The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Second week was trim $14,000.

Paramount (NET) (2,357; 90-$1.65) — "Four for Texas" (WB) (14th wk). Fine $11,000. Last week, $13,000.

Pilgrim (ATC) (1,909; 75-$1.25)— "Mr. Peter's Pets" (Indie) and "European Nights" (Indie) (reruns). Oke $5,500. Last week, "Take Off, Live" (Indie) and "World of Comedy" (Indie), $4,500.

Park Square (Indie) (300; $1.80) —"Ladies Who Do" (Cont) (3d wk). Hot $5,000. Last week, same.

Saxon (Sack) (1,100; $2-$3.90)— "Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Stout $23,000. Last week, $28,000.

State (Trans-Lux) (730; $1-$1.50) —"Orgy at Lil's Place" (Mishkin) (3d wk). Torrid $12,000, breaking record. Last week $14,000, also record.

West End Cinema (E. M. Loew) (500-75-$1.50) — "Pair of Briefs" (Gov) (2d wk). Neat $5,500. Last week, $6,200.

Bliz Hits Cleve. B.O.; 'Cardinal' Okay $14,000

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

Heavy Sunday blizzard is sloughing biz here this session. However, some pix are managing to keep their head above the snow. "The Cardinal" is rated passable opening round at the Allen. "Sword in Stone" looks good in third at the Ohio. "It's a Mad World" shapes nice in fourth Palace stanza.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (Stanley-Warner) (2,866; $1.25-$1.50) — "Cardinal" (Col). Okay $14,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $9,200.

Colony Art (Stanley-Warner) (1,354; $1.50)—"All the Way Home" (Par) (3d wk). Nice $3,600. Last week, $5,300.

Continental Art (Art Theatre Guild) (925; $1.50)—"Mondo Cane" (Times) (2d run). Good $3,000. Last week, "My Name is Ivan" (Shore) (2d wk), $2,600.

Heights Art (Art Theatre Guild) (925; $1.50)—"Knife in Water" (Indie). Routine $2,000. Last week, "Suitor" (Wils) (2d wk), $2,400.

Hippodrome (Hipp Bldg. Co.) (3,500; $1.25-$1.50)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Fair $9,000. Last week, $14,000.

Ohio (Loew) (1,020; $1.25-$1.65) —"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Good $10,000 or near. Last week, $18,000.

Palace (F&A Theatres) (1,263; $1.50-$3)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (4th wk). Nice $12,000. Last week, $18,000.

State (Loew) (3,450; $1.50)— "Prize" (MGM) (2d wk). Modest $11,000. Last week, $20,000.

Westwood Art (Art Theatre Guild) (955; $1.50)—"Knife in Water" (Indie). Oke $2,300. Last week, "Suitor" (Wilshire) (2d wk), $2,500.

End of Vacations Dents Chi Trade; 'Charade' Okay $24,500, 'Bed' Hotsy 17G, 'Jones' Wow 22½G, 'Texas' 13G

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Return of the students to school has put a dent in Chi firstrun biz, but the powerhouse holiday entries are still racking up hefty grosses this round. Only newies this sesh are "Three Fables of Love," which is snappy at Carnegie, and "Young Love," which is good on its Town bow. "No, My Darling Daughter" is capturing a lively second Surf frame.

Healthiest grossers are among the third rounders preemed Xmas week. "Charade" is posting an okay third Chicago stanza while "The Cardinal" is socko in same Woods frame. "Sword In Stone" is nailing a smash third Roosevelt lap. "Four For Texas" looks good in United Artists third.

Third daydated round of "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" is fancy at Loop and Esquire. "Tom Jones" is tallying another boff session in its Todd fourth frame. "Kings of the Sun" is dandy for same Oriental outing.

Longrunning "Lord of Flies" is classy in its Cinema 16th stanza. On hardticket, "It's A Mad World" is tallying a fat sixth McVickers canto while "Cleopatra" is firm in its State-Lake 28th week.

Estimates for This Week

Carnegie (Brotman) (495; $1.25-$1.80)—"3 Fables of Love". (Indie). Hot $5,500. Last week, "Conjugal Bed" (Embassy) (7th wk), $3,000.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 90-$1.80)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Okay $24,500. Last week, $48,500.

Cinema (Stern) (500; $1.50) — "Lord of Flies" (Cont) (16th wk). Good $3,600. Last week, $5,000.

Esquire (H&E Balaban) (1,236; $1.25-$1.80) — "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) (3d wk). Nifty $6,000. Last week, $7,800.

Loop (Brotman) (606; 90-$1.80) — "Who's Been Sleeping In My

(Continued on page 13)

Balto Biz Still Bright, 'Cardinal' Sock $10,000 In 4th, 'Charade' 12G

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

Firstrun business isn't booming as is was holiday week, but it's still way up there. "The Prize" looks big in third round at the Charles. "Charade" shapes sturdy in same at Stanton. "McLintock" looms big, in third at the Senator. "Move Over, Darling" is nice in third session at both downtown Little and suburban Uptown.

"The Cardinal" is socko in fourth round at Mayfair. "Murder at The Gallop" is okay in fourth at the Five West. "Ladies Who Do" shapes stout on opener at Playhouse. "Four For Texas" is fairish in fourth at the Town. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" looms warm in third week at the New.

Estimates for This Week

Charles (Fruchtman) (500; 50-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Big $8,000. Last week, $10,000.

Five West (Schwaber) (435; 90-$1.50)—"Murder at Gallop" (MGM) (4th wk). Oke $2,000. Last week, $2,500.

Hippodrome (T-L) (2,200; $1.50-$2)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Down to fair $9,000 or near. Last week, $11,000.

Little (T-L) (300; 50-$1.65)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Nice $5,000. Last week, $5,500.

New (Fruchtman) (1,600; 50-$1.50)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (3d wk). Warm $7,000. Last week, $9,000.

Mayfair (Fruchtman) (700; 50-$1.50)—"The Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Socko $10,000. Last week, $14,000.

Playhouse (Schwaber) (365; 90-$1.50)—"Ladies Who Do" (Cont). Stout $2,300. Last week, "All Way Home" (Indie) (3d wk). Fair $1,500. Last week, $2,000.

Rex (Freedman) (500; $1.50)—"House on Bare Mountain" (Indie) (3d wk). Fair $1,500. Last week, $2,000.

Senator (Durkee) (960; 90-$1.50)—"McLintock" (UA) (3d wk). Big $12,000 or near. Last week, $17,500

Stanton (Fruchtman) (2,800; 50-$1.50) — "Charade" (U) (3d wk). Lofty $12,000. Last week, $18,000.

Town (T-L) (1,125; 90-$1.50)—"Four For Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Fairish $7,000. Last week, $7,500.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i.e., without usual tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include U. S. amusement tax.

'Bed' Good $11,000 Pitt; Grant 17G

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" looms good in first round at the Stanley. The other newcomer, "Billy Liar" is fairish at the Squirrel Hill. "Charade" continues to pile up wow trade in third at Gateway.

"Cardinal" looks big in fourth at Fulton. "Lilies of Field" continues remarkable pace in 10th session at Forum. "It's a Mad World" is tall in fourth at the Warner. "Suitor" shapes okay in third at Shadyside.

Estimates for This Week

Forum (Assoc.) (380; $1.75) — "Lilies of Field" (UA) (10th wk). Wow $3,500. Last week, $4,000.

Fulton (Assoc.) (1,900; $1-$1.50) —"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Big $13,000. Last week, $15,000.

Gateway (Assoc.) (1,900; $1-$1.75)—"Charade" (3d wk). Wham $17,000 or over after second week hit $20,000. Cary Grant starrer also was huge on opener.

Nixon (Rubin) (1,760; $1.25-$1.75)—"Prize" (MGM) (2d wk). Neat $6,800 after smash opening week of $16,000.

Penn (UATC) (3,472; $1.25-$1.50) —"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Soft $5,000, with juves back in school. Last week, big $15,000.

Shadyside (MOTC) (623; $1.75)—"Suitor" (Atl) (3d wk). Oke $2,600. Last week, $2,300.

Squirrel Hill (SW) (800; $1.75)—"Billy Liar" (Cont). Fairish $3,000. Last week, "Ladies Who Do" (Cont) (2d wk), $2,600.

Stanley (SW) (3,700; $1-$1.75)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par). Good $11,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $8,500.

Warner (SW) (1,260; $1.50-$3)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (4th wk). Socko $12,000 after $13,000 for third.

'JACKET' SMART 13G, BUFF; 'DARLING' 9G, 3D

Buffalo, Jan. 14.

Firstrun takings are excellent here this session, despite usual letdown after yearend holidays. "Strait-Jacket," lone newcomer, looks sharp at Paramount. "Charade" shapes solid in third at the Buffalo while "Move Over, Darling" is rated nifty in third at Center. "The Cardinal" is fatso in third at Century. "Sword in Stone" is trim in third Granada round.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Loew) (3,500; 70-$1.49) —"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Solid $9,000 or close. Last week, $11,000.

Center (ABPT) (2,500; 90-$1.49) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Nifty $9,000. Last week, $13,000.

Century (UATC) (2,700; 90-$1.49) —"Cardinal" (Col) (3d wk). Fat $10,000 or over. Last week, $11,000.

Paramount (ABPT) (3,000; 90-$1.25) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col). Sharp $13,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (2d wk), $10,500.

Cinema (Martina) (450; 90-$1.25) —"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (3d wk). Neat $2,500. Last week, $3,200.

Amherst (Dipson) (1,000; 90-$1.25)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (3d wk). Slick $3,000. Last week, $3,400.

Granada (Schine) (1,000; 90-$1.25)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Trim $8,000. Last week, $15,000.

'Darling' Lofty $8,000, Seattle; 'Irma' 7G, 25th

Seattle, Jan. 14.

Boxoffice trade is sagging currently but some pix are doing okay. Most holdovers are now in third sessions, and that's a very extended-run in most deluxers here. "Move Over, Darling" shapes nice in second at Coliseum. "Charade" is rated big in third at Orpheum. "Irma La Douce" still is getting big coin in 25th round at Music Box.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (739; $1.25-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Hot $6,000. Last week, $8,100.

Coliseum (Fox-Evergreen) (1,870; $1.25-$1.50) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) and "Young Strangers" (20th) (2d wk). Nice $8,000. Last week, $17,000.

Fifth Avenue (Fox-Evergreen) (2,500; $1.25-$1.50) — "Kings of Sun" (UA) and "War is Hell" (UA). Fair $7,500. Last week, "Cardinal" (Col) (3d wk-5 days), $5,000.

Martin Cinerama (Martin Theaters) (870; $1.25-$2.25) — "How West Was Won" (MGM). Great $8,000. Last week, $9,600.

Music Box (Hamrick) (738; $1.50-$1.75) — "Irma La Douce" (UA) (25th wk). Big $7,000. Last week, $7,500.

Music Hall (Harmick) (2,200; $1.25-$1.50) — "Four for Texas" (WB) and "Man From Galveston" (WB) (4th wk). Mild $3,000 in five days.

Orpheum (Hamrick) (2,200; $1.25-$1.50) — "Charade" (U) (3d wk). Big $9,000 or close. Last week, $11,000.

Paramount (Fox-Evergreen) (3,000; $1.25-$1.50) — "Sword in Stone" (BV) and "Great Chase" (FF) (3d wk). Fair $5,000. Last week, $10,000.

'Charade' Fat 11G, Port.; 'World' 13G

Portland, Ore., Jan. 14.

Holdovers are the mainstay in current session at the firstruns here. Biggest coin total is going to "It's a Mad World," which is whopping in fourth round at the Hollywood, playing at $2.75 top. "Charade" is only a step behind with a socko take in third session at Broadway on popscale.

"Move Over, Darling" is rated torrid in third at Irvington while "Kings of Sun" looks snappy in third week at Laurelhurst. "Sword in Stone" looms lofty in third at Orpheum.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (1,890; $1-$1.50) — "Charade" (U) (3d wk). Socko $11,000. Last week, $15,100.

Cinema 21 (Foster) (648; $1.50) —"Yum Yum Tree" (Col) (8th wk). Neat $4,500. Last week, $5,000.

Esquire (Cruikshank) (476; $1.25) — "McLintock" (UA) (m.o.) (3d wk). Fine $3,000. Last week, $3,700.

Fine Arts (Foster) (421; $1.50)—"L-Shaped Room" (Col) and "French Style" (Col) (m.o.) (5th wk). Stout $2,500. Last week, $3,100.

Fox (Evergreen) (1,600; $1-$1.49)—"Four For Texas" (WB) and "Man From Galveston" (WB) (4th wk). Tall $5,000. Last week, $5,900.

Hollwood (Evergreen) (1,890; $1.49-$2.75) — "It's Mad World" (UA) (4th wk). Whopping $13,000. Last week, $15,600.

Irvington (Smith) (650; $1.50) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Torrid $7,000 or over. Last week, $8,900.

Laurelhurst (Cruikshank) (650; $1.25)—"Kings of Sun" (UA) and "Summer Holiday" (UA) (3d wk). Snappy $4,500. Last week, $5,000.

Music Box (Hamrick) (640; $1-$1.50) — "Who's Minding Store" (Par) and "Last Train Gun Hill" (Par) (reissue) (3d wk). Fast $3,500. Last week, $5,100.

Orpheum (Evergreen) (1,536; $1-$1.49) — "Sword In Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Lofty $7,000. Last week, $14,300.

Paramount (Port-Par) (1,406; $2-$3.50) — "Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Okay $5,000. Last week, $5,700.

Additional Picture Grosses On Page 13

Bliz Bops B'way; 'Cardinal' Boffola 35G, 'Charade'-Xmas Show 132G, 6th; 'Jones' Great 37G, 'Easy Life' 18G

Biggest snowstorm of winter, with winds reaching gale proportions, is sloughing already dented Broadway firstrun trade this stanza. After two booming weeks at the wickets, a natural reaction set in starting Jan. 5, as all students had to return to school and outoftowners left the city. Dearth of newcomers also hurt. Then the severe cold arrived Sunday (12) and the blizzard early Monday (13) morning, continuing until early yesterday (Tues.). It not only snarled traffic but kept thousands from coming into the city.

Still money champ is "Charade" with Christmas stageshow, with nice $132,000 expected in the current (6th) week ending today (Wed.) being hit badly Monday. The Hall naturally had counted on more, judging from biz the first four days, with Saturday's take hitting third best Sat. figure of run. Combo stays a seventh, and possibly longer. This was a sharp drop from the $184,300 of the fifth week after "Charade" had hung up a new mark for Christmas week.

"The Cardinal" looks to wind up its fifth session at the DeMille with a sock $35,000 but off from recent booming weeks. "Love With Proper Stranger" slipped to nice $22,000 or close in third round at the State. "Sword in Stone" also was off, with fine $15,000 expected for third at the Palace.

"Four For Texas" wound its third stanza at the Paramount with good $21,000, but also off from second. "The Victors," which was rousing $31,600 in third week at the Criterion, was down to hep $14,500 in first three days of fourth session ended Sunday (12).

"Move Over, Darling" also was off considerably in third round at the Astor as compared with second week's $19,700 as was "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed," in third at the Victoria.

"It's a Mad World," down from the two previous boffo weeks, still was great at $34,000 in eighth week at the Warner. Pic had hit $72,000 in sixth session, alltime peak for roadshow policy at house. "To Bed or Not To Bed" managed to hold with rousing $16,000 in third week at the Coronet after getting a new house record in second week. "Tom Jones" was off to $37,000, still mighty great in 14th stanza at the Cinema One.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,094; $1.25-$2)—"Move Over Darling" (20th) (4th-final wk). Third round ended yesterday (Tues.) was okay $14,000 or close after $19,700 for second. Daydating with Trans-Lux 85th Street. Stays until Jan. 22.

Cinerama (Loew) (1,552; $1.50-$3) —"Best of Cinerama" (Cinerama) (4th wk). Third session concluded yesterday (Tues.) was okay $14,000 or near after $25,000 for second, for this hardticket engagement.

Criterion (Moss) (1,520; $1.25-$2.50) — "The Victors" (Col) (4th wk). This week finishing tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like $14,500 in three days after $31,600 for third. Stays on.

DeMille (Reade) (1,463; $1.50-$3.50)—"The Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). This stanza winding today (Wed.) is heading for great $33,000 or near after $41,000 in fourth. Continues on this hardticket run indef. Storm hit this pic as well as others.

Embassy (Guild Enterprises) (500; $1.50-$2.50) — "The Doll" (Kana). Opened big on Monday (13), despite storm. In ahead, "Not Tonite, Henry" (Indie), was down to mild $5,000 in final nine days.

Forum (Norel) (813; $1.25-$1.80) —"Love on Pillow" (Col) (5th final wk). Fourth week ended Sunday (12) was good $8,000 after $11,000 for third. "Wheeler Dealers" "MGM) (m.o.) opens here Jan. 22, daydating with Trans-Lux 85th Street.

Palace (RKO) (1,642; $1.25-$2)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Third session completed yesterday (Tues.) was okay $15,000 or near after $32,000 in second, which only had a portion of week in which the juvenile attendance helped.

Paramount (AB-PT) (3,665; $1-$2)—"Four For Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Third round ended yesterday (Tues.) was good $21,000 after $31,000 for second. Daydating with Trans-Lux 52d Street.

Radio City (Music Hall (Rockefellers) (6,200; 95-$2.75) — "Charade" (U) with Christmas stageshow (6th wk). This week ending today (Wed.) looks like fine $132,000, bliz sloughing it way below original expectancy. The fifth was $184,300 while the fourth, taking in New Year's Eve and New Year's Day hit $233,825, high for Xmas week here and only about $500 away from alltime money high for single week. Stays on. Nativity portion of stageshow is dropped after Jan. 15. Fourth week was new peak for Xmas week at Hall.

Rivoli (UAT) (1,545; $2.50-$5.50) "Cleopatra" (20th) (32d wk). The 31st session completed yesterday (Tues.) was good $19,000 or close after $23,000 in 30th week). Both were down from the smash $29,500 of the 29th round. Take for 31st week was slowest of engagement.

State (Loew) (1,850; $1.50-$2.50) —"Love With Proper Stranger" (Par) (4th wk). Third stanza completed yesterday (Tues.) was nice $22,000 or near after $51,000 for second. Daydating with the Murray Hill.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,003; $1.25-$2)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (4th wk). Third week ended yesterday (Tues.) was fair $9,000 or less after $12,700 in second.

Warner (SW) (1,504; $2.50-$4.80) —"It's a Mad World" (UA) (9th wk). Eighth session finished Saturday (11) was slick $34,000 on fewer shows than in seventh week which was $59,400. Both are con-

(Continued on page 13)

'World' Smooth $17,000, Philly; 'Charade' Wow 14G; 'Cardinal' 20G, 4th

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Dearth of new product is hurting biz here this week, with the snowstorm no help, either. "It's a Mad World" shapes fine in fourth round at Boyd. "The Prize" is rated good for third week at the Arcadia. "Charade" still is wow in third session at the small Trans-Lux where it looks to hang up a threeweek high, far ahead of anything else to play house.

"Four For Texas" is rated good in fourth Stanton week. "Move Over, Darling" looms socko in third at the Fox. "Cardinal" shapes very good for fourth at Midtown.

Estimates for This Week

Arcadia (S&S) (623; $1.20-$1.80) —"Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Good $8,000 or near. Last week, $14,000.

Boyd (SW) (1,536; $2-$2.75)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (4th wk). Nice $17,000. Last week, $35,000.

Bryn Mawr (Goldman) (630; $1.49)—"Knife in Water" (Indie). Swift $4,000. Last week, "Devil and 10 Commandments" (Indie) (2d wk), $1,700.

Fox (Milgram) (2,400; 95-$1.80)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Sock $14,000. Last week, $18,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,000; 95-$1.80)—"Kings of Sun" (UA) (4th wk). Hep $7,500. Last week, $10,500.

Lane (SW) (1,000; $1.49)—"Billy Liar" (Cont). Neat $4,000 or close. Last week, "Ladies Who Do" (Cont) (2d wk), $2,500.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,200; 95-$1.80)—"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Good $20,000. Last week, $15,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,200; 95-$1.80)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Fair $7,000. Last week, $13,500.

Stanley (SW) (1,450; $2-$2.50)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Okay $12,000 or near. Last week, $14,000.

Stanton (SW) (1,483; 95-$1.80)—"Four for Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Good $10,000. Last week, $13,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 95-$2)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Great $14,000. Last week, $24,000.

World (Rugoff) (499; 95-$1.80)—"Knife in Water" (Indie). Sharp $4,500. Last week, "Divorce Italian Style" (Janus) and "Heavens Above" (Janus) (reissues), $3,400.

Yorktown (SW) (1,000; $1.49)—"Affair of Skin" (Indie). Thin $3,000. Last week, "No, My Darling Daughter" (Indie) (2d wk), $2,500.

*m.o.m.

is #1

New York Premiere
Showcase 1st two weeks unprecedented $627,209

Chicago Twelve Theatre
Multiple 1st two weeks smash $343,398

Los Angeles Twenty-Seven Theatre Multiple 1st
two weeks whopping $369,881

Toronto Eleven Theatre
Multiple 1st two weeks sensational $123,197

coast to coast!

*"move over, darling"

...from 20th Century-Fox

'Damned' Fine $35,000, Det., 'Darling' Boffo 18G, 'Charade' 17G, 'Sword' 16G

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Fat grosses are in prospect this round among firstruns. "The Cardinal" looks whopping in fourth week at the Madison. "Move Over, Darling" stays smash in third at the Palms.

"Four for Texas" continues big in second frame at the Michigan. "Sword in Stone" looks great in third session at the Grand Circus. "Charade" shapes wham in third at the Mercury. "Children of Damned" is rated nice on opener at Fox.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Downtown Fox Corp.) (5,041; $1.25-$1.49) — "Children of Damned" (MGM) and "Gladiators Seven" (MGM). Great $35,000 or near. Last week, "Comedy of Terrors" (AI) and "Madmen of Mandores" (Indie) (2d wk), $8,500.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,926; $1.25-$1.49) — "Four for Texas" (WB) (2d wk). Big $15,000. Last week, $17,000.

Palms (UD) (2,995; $1.25-$1.49) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Smash $18,000. Last week, $19,000.

Madison (UD) (1,408; $1.25-$1.49) —"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Wow $23,000. Last week, $26,000.

Grand Circus (UD) (1,400; $1.25-$1.49)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) and "Disneyland After Dark" (BV) (3d wk). Great $16,000. Last week, $21,000.

Adams (Community) (1,450; $1.23-$1.50) — "The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Torrid $10,000. Last week, $14,500.

United Artists (UA) (1,667; $1.50-$3.50) — "Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Okay $10,000. Last week, $10,300.

Music Hall (Beacon Enterprises) (1,213; $1.25-$2.80) — "How West Was Won" (MGM) (46th wk). Whopping $16,000. Last week, $27,300 with extra performances added.

Mercury (Suburban Detroit) (1,468; $1-$1.80)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Wham $17,000. Last week, $17,800.

Trans Lux Krim (Trans Lux) (980; $1.49-$1.65)—"Love on Pillow" (Col). Nice $11,000 or close. Last week, "All Way Home" (Par), $4,700 in third week.

CHESTER FRIEDMAN NAT'L SCREEN AD CHIEF

Chester Friedman, onetime tradepaper editor and for the past 10 years, while residing in Canada, Canadian ad-pub rep of various distributors and producers, has been named ad-pub director of National Screen Service. He succeeds Roger Ferri.

Friedman started as an office boy at First National while still attending school. He joined the ushers' staff at the N. Y. Paramount Theatre shortly after its opening and subsequently worked managerial and publicity jobs in theatres in various parts of the country, and with key circuits.

In 1943 he was named editor of the Manager's Round Table section of Motion Picture Herald, and later moved to the Boxoffice weekly as editor of the Showmandiser and Promotion sections. He went to Canada at the end of 1953.

'Charade' Hot $8,000 Col., 'Prize' Nice 10G

Columbus, O., Jan. 14.

Holdovers in all firstrun situations here currently continue to attract strong business. "Charade" is holding up well in third stanza at RKO Palace. "The Prize" is attracting nice trade in second week at the Ohio. "How West Was Won," with Feb. 11 closing set, looks okay in 39th round at RKO Grand.

Estimates for This Week

Grand (RKO) (860; $1.50-$2.75) —"How West Was Won" (MGM) (39th wk). Okay $5,500. Last week, $10,000.

Ohio (Loew) (3,079; 50-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (2d wk). Nice $10,000. Last week, $14,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,845; 50-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Big $8,000 or near. Last week, $14,000.

'Jacket' Trim $14,000, D.C.; 'Jones' Huge 30G

Washington, Jan. 14.

Biz is big on mainstem this round with "Tom Jones" leading pack in fantastic third session at Ontario. Film is even outdistancing "Lawrence of Arabia" which had previous house record there. Shaping sock is "Charade" in third frame at Town. "Prize" figures boffo in ditto at Embassy while "Move Over Darling" looms sock in same at Palace.

"Cardinal" is busy in fourth at Trans-Lux and "Strait-Jacket" looks fine in first at two houses.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador-Metropolitan (SW) (1,480; $1-$1.49) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col). Fine $14,000 or near. Last week, "Four For Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $6,000.

Apex (KB) (940; $1.25-$1.40)—"Suitor" (Indie) (3d wk). Oke $4,500. Last week, $5,000.

Dupont (Mann) (400; 90-$1.55)—"Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) (subrun). Good $4,000 or near. Last week, "All Way Home" (Par), $2,500.

Embassy (Loew) (567; $1.25-$2)—"Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Boffo $11,000. Last week, $15,000.

Keith's (RKO) (1,838; $1-$1.49)—"Kings of Sun" (UA) (4th wk). Okay $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

McArthur (KB) (900; $1.25-$1.40) —"Murder at Gallop" (MGM) (9th wk). Trim $5,000. Last week, $5,500.

Ontario (KB) (1,240; $1-$2) — "Tom Jones" (UA) (3d wk). Fantastic $30,000. Last week, same.

Palace (Loew) (2,360; $1.25-$1.80) — "Move Over Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Sock $14,000. Last week, $18,000.

Playhouse (TL) (459; $1.25-$1.80) —"Lord of Flies" (Cont) (4th wk). Brisk $7,000. Last week, $7,900.

Plaza (TL) (278; $1.25-$1.80)—"At Lil's Place" (Indie) (3d wk). Wow $7,000. Last week, $7,900.

Town (King) (800; $1.25-$1.80)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Sock $15,000. Last week, $17,000.

Trans-Lux (TL) (899; $1.49-$2)—"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Busy $7,200. Last week, $5,500.

Uptown (SW) (1,300; $1.65-$2.75) —"How West Was Won" (MGM) (44th wk). Big $10,000 in 3 days. Last week, $10,500.

Warner (SW) (1,250; $1.50-$2.75) —"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Okay $8,500. Last week, $9,000.

BROADWAY

(Continued from page 11)

siderably below the $72,000, highest of engagement, for sixth week (19 performances). This sixth round's total was new alltime peek for roadshow policy here.

FIRST-RUN ARTIES

Baronet (Reade) (430; $1.25-$2) —"Billy Liar" (Cont) (4th wk). Third week finished Sunday (12) was solid $11,000 after $15,000 for second.

Beekman (Rugoff Th.) (590; $1.50-$2)—"Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) (m.c.) (5th wk). Fourth round ended Sunday (12) was nice $11,000 or near after $15,000 for third.

Carnegie Hall Cinema (F&A) (330; $1.50-$2)—"Der Rosenkavalier" (Show) (4th wk). Third round held with great $9,000 or less. Second was $9,200. Run has been extended until Feb. 19. Goes to 10 shows per week with current session. Previously had played nights and two matinees weekly.

Cinema One (Rugoff Th.) (700; $1.50-$2)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (15th wk). The 14th session finished Sunday (12) was great $37,000 after $44,600 in 13th week, peak for engagement and best for an arty Eastside house.

Coronet (Reade) (599; $1.50-$2)—"To Bed or Not To Bed" (Cont) (4th wk). Third week ended Saturday (11) was smash $16,000 after giant $22,100 for second, which is new record for house.

Festival (Embassy) (546; $2-$2.50) —"Easy Life" (Embassy) (4th wk). Third week finished Saturday (11) held with smash $18,000 after $18,600 for second.

Fifth Ave. Cinema (Rugoff Th.) (250; $1.25-$2)—"Hallelujah the Hills" (Indie) (4th wk). This session winding today (Wed.) is heading for mild $3,000.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; $1.80-$2) —"Moderato Cantabile" (Royal) (2d wk). Initial week ended Sunday (12) was okay $8,000.

Guild (Guild) (450; $1-$1.75)—"Thomasina" (BV) (6th wk). Fifth session ended yesterday (Tues.) was fairish $6,000 after $15,000 in fourth.

Murray Hill (Rugoff Th.) (565; $1.50-$2) — "Love With Proper Stranger" (Par) (4th wk). Third round ended yesterday (Tues.) was good $9,000 or less.

Paris (Pathe Cinema) (568; $1.50-$2) — "America, America" (WB) (4th wk). Third frame finished Thursday (9) was fine $12,000 after $15,000 in second.

Plaza (Lopert) (525; $1.50-$2)—"City Lights" (Indie) (reissue) (8th wk). Seventh session completed Monday (13) was good $11,000 or close.

Sutton (Rugoff Th.) (561; $1.50-$2)—"The Victors" (Col) (4th wk). This round winding today (Wed.) is heading for nice $10,000.

Toho Cinema (Toho) (299; $1.50-$2) — "Bandits on Wind" (Toho). Opened yesterday (Tues.). In ahead, "High and Low" (Toho) (8th wk-10 days), fair $4,800, but for a very solid run, hurt no doubt by opening in other arty houses after third week here.

Tower East (Loew) 588; $1.50-$2) — "Fantasia" (BV) (reissue) (11th wk). The 10th round ended Monday (13) was okay $7,000 or near.

Trans-Lux East (T-L) (600; $1.25-$2)—"Act One" (WB) (3d wk). This session finishing tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to hit okay $5,000 after $7,300 for second. "The Silence" (Janus) comes in on Feb. 3.

Trans-Lux 52d St. (T-L) (540; $1.25-$2)—"Four For Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Third week ended yesterday (Tues.) was okay $5,000 after $7,400 in second. Daydating with Paramount, "Seventh Juror" (T-L) opens Jan. 27.

Trans-Lux 85th St. (T-L) (550; $1.25-$2)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Third session finished yesterday (Tues.) was good $6,000 after $8,400 for second. Daydating with Astor, "Wheeler Dealers" (MGM) (m.o.) opens here Jan. 22.

World (Perfecto) (390; 90-$1.50) —"Traveling Light" (Vic) and "Amorous Sex" (Mishkin) (12th wk). The 11th stanza ended Monday (13) was good $4,800 after $6,000 for 10th week. Stays on, with storm blamed for dip in 11th week.

Denver Stout; 'Darling' Sharp $12,000, 'Charade' Lush 11G, 'Cardinal' 9G

Denver, Jan. 14.

Although the city is 100% holdover in current session, biz is holding well, getting a boost from visitors in city to attend annual Western Stockshow and Rodeo. One of best showings is being made by "Charade" in third round at the 900-seat Aladdin where rated wow. "Move Over, Darling" also is fancy in third at the Centre.

"Sword in Stone" shapes stout in third at Denver. "Four For Texas" looms lofty in third at Paramount. "The Cardinal" is slick in third at RKO International.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Fox) (900; $1.45)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Wow $11,000 or close. Last week, $14,500.

Centre (Fox) (1,270; $1.25-$1.45) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Fancy $12,000. Last week, $19,000.

Cooper (Cooper) (814; $1.65-$2.50)—"How West Was Won" (MGM) (44th wk). Hot $10,000 or near. Last week, $20,500.

Denham (Indie) (800; $1.45-$3)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Good $5,000. Last week, $5,500.

Denver (Fox) (2,432; $1.25)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Stout $11,000 or close. Last week, $22,000.

Esquire (Fox) (600; $1.25)—"Conjugal Bed" (Embassy) (2d wk). Nice $1,900. Last week, $2,400.

Paramount (Wolfberg) (2,100; 90-$1.25)—"Four For Texas" (WB) (3d wk). Sharp $10,500. Last week, $13,500.

RKO International 70 (RKO) (1,380; $1.25-$1.45) — "Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Potent $5,000 or near. Last week, $7,500.

Vogue (Art Theatre Guild) (450; $1.25)—"Lord of Flies" (Cont) (3d wk). Stout $3,000. Last week, $4,500.

'Damned' Fine $35,000, Det.; 'Darling' 'Darling' Smart 36G, 'Charade' 17G

'Prize' Paces Prov., 12G, 'Charade' Fancy $8,000

Providence, Jan. 14.

A full house of holdovers is proving a winning hand here this week. State's "Prize" is leading the pack. RKO Albee's "Charade" is torrid in third round. Majestic's "Fourth For Texas" is good in fourth. "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" at Strand looks fair in second.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; $1-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Hot $8,000 or over expected after $9,000 in second.

Elmwood (Snider) (2,200; $2.50-$3)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (24th wk). Okay $5,000. Last week, $7,000.

Majestic (SW) (2,200; 75-$1)—"Four for Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Good $4,000 after steady $6,000 in third round.

State (Loew) (3,200; 90-$1.25)—"The Prize" (MGM) (2d wk). Hefty $12,000. Last week, $16,500.

Strand (National Realty) (2,200; 90-$1.25)—"Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) (2d wk). Fair $3,000 after $7,000 opener.

LOS ANGELES

(Continued from page 10)

868; $1-$2)—"V.I.P.'s" (MGM) (1st general release) and "Man Who Couldn't Walk" (Indie). Fair $14,500. Last week, Pix with Warren's, "Who's Minding Store" (Par), "Under 10 Flags" (Par) (reissue), $17,600. Four Star, "Kings of Sun" (UA), "Invincible Gladiator" (7 Arts) (3d wk), $1,800.

Warren's (Metropolitan) (1,757; $1-$1.49) — "Who's Minding the Store" (Par) and "Under 10 Flags" (Par) (reissue) (2d wk). Slender $4,000.

Crest (State) (750; $1-$2) — "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk) and "Thrill of It All" (U) (reissue). Busy $3,500.

Fox Wilshire (FWC) (1,990; $2-$2.40) — "The Victors" (Col) (3d wk). Torrid $15,000 or near. Last week, $21,700.

Chinese (FWC) (1,408; $2-$2.40) —"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Great $26,000 or close. Last week, $38,100.

Beverly (State) (1,150; $2-$2.40) —"America, America" (WB) (3d wk). Sturdy $12,000. Last week, $12,500.

Hollywood Paramount (State) (1,468; $1.55-$2.40)—"Captain Newman, M.D." (U) (3d wk). Solid $17,000 or near. Last week, $17,500.

Warner Beverly (SW) (1,316; $2-$2.40) — "The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Bright $15,000 or over. Last week, $22,500.

Egyptian (UATC) (1,392; $1.25-$3.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Great $21,000. Last week, $22,000.

Fine Arts (FWC) (631; $2-$2.40) —"Thomasina" (BV) (4th wk). Slow $3,000. Last week, $4,300.

Orpheum, Vogue, Picfair (Metropolitan-FWC-State) (2,213; 810; 750; $1-$2.40)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (7th wk, Orpheum; 3d wk, Vogue, Picfair). Wham $42,000 or near. Last week, $48,800.

Cinerama (Pac) (915; $1.49-$3.50) —"It's a Mad World" (UA) (10th wk). Classy $25,000 or close. Last week, $28,000.

Pantages (RKO) (1,512; $2.50-$5.50) — "Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Frisky $26,000. Last week, $28,600.

Warner Hollywood (SW) (1,291; $1.25-$2.80) — "How West Was Won" (MGM) (47th wk). Beefy $18,500. Last week, $19,000.

SO WHO'S SURPRISED?

Honolulu, Jan. 14.

"Showcase"—schmocases. Firstrun product has been shown here for several years on a multi-theatre basis similar to the current big "novelty" in New York City.

Royal Circuit pioneered in the unit operation some six or seven years back. Consolidated circuit, in addition to maintaining its two Waikiki houses as separate firstrunners, also has a three-theatre unit for additional first-run films.

The rival units, presumably not by coincidence, each consists of a downtown house, a nabe house and a drive-in. Both "showcases" are nominal double-billers

Toronto, Jan. 14.

Holdovers and extended-runs are backbone of firstrun biz here this stanza. Combo of "Cry of Battle" and "War is Hell' shapes good in first playing nine Taylor houses. "Tom Jones," playing third session at Hyland, continues its record-breaking pace.

"Charade," also in third, is rated big at the Uptown. "Move Over, Darling" shapes smart in third playing four Rank houses. "The Cardinal" looks great in fourth round at Tivoli.

"Four For Texas" looks nice in second at Imperial. "It's a Mad World" shapes great in fourth at Carlton. "Sword in Stone" looms neat in third in three Famous Player houses.

Estimates for This Week

Birchcliff, Capitol, Westwood (FP) (865; 848; 994; 35-$1)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk). Neat $11,000. Last week, with 12 FP houses, having 13,673 seats, $40,000.

Carlton (Rank) (2,058; $2-$3)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (4th wk). Holding to great $18,000. Last week, $20,000.

Century, Downtown, Glendale, Kingsway, Midtown, Odeon, Prince of Wales, Scarboro, State (Taylor) (1,342; 1,059; 995; 697; 1,082; 752; 1,197; 682; 696; 50-$1)—"Cry of Battle" (IFD) and "War is Hell" (IFD). Good $32,000. Last week, "Man with X-Ray Eyes" (Astral) and "Thunder Island" (Astral), $45,000.

Coronet, Danforth, Humber, Fairlawn (Rank) (779; 1,324; 1,165; 1,203; $1-$1.75)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Smart $36,000. Last week, $40,000.

Hollywood (FP) (1,080; $1.25-$1.50)—"Take Her, She's Mine" (20th) (4th wk). Nifty $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Hyland (Rank) (1,357; $1.25-$1.50)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (3d wk). Setting house record and remaining at $28,000, same as last week.

Imperial (FP) (3,216; $1-$1.75)—"Four for Texas" (WB) (2d wk). Nice $12,000. Last week, $19,500.

Loew's (Loew) (1,641; $1-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (2d wk). Good $11,000 but down from $20,000 of opener.

Tivoli (FP) (935; $1.50-$2.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Great $14,000. Last week, $14,500.

Towne (Taylor) (693; $1-$1.50)—"Conjugal Bed" (IFD) (4th wk). Still healthy at $5,000. Last week, $5,500.

University (FP) (1,344; $2-$3.50) —"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Sturdy $12,000. Last week, $18,000.

Uptown (Loew) (2,245; $1.25-$1.75)—"Charade" (U) (3d wk). Big $17,000 or over. Last week, $23,500.

CHICAGO

(Continued from page 11)

Bed" (Par) (3d wk). Snappy $11,000. Last week, $14,500.

McVickers (Beacon) (1,100; $2.20-$3.80)—"It's A Mad World" (UA) (6th wk). Good $20,000. Last week, $38,000.

Monroe (Jovan) (1,000; 65-90)—"2 Nights With Cleopatra" (Indie) and "Fatal Desire" (Indie) (2d wk). Fine $4,700 Last week, $6,800.

Oriental (Indie) (3,400; 90-$1.80) "Kings of Sun" (UA) (4th wk). Dandy $13,000. Last week. $22,000.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,400; 90-$1.80) — "Sword In Stone" (BV) and "Disneyland After Dark" (BV) (3d wk). Modest $13,000. Last week, $36,000.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,400; $1.50-$4)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (28th wk). Steady $17,000. Last week, $18,000.

Surf (H&E Balaban) (684; $1.50-$1.80) — "No, My Darling Daughter" (Cont) (2d wk). Brisk $3,000. Last week, $3,700.

Todd (Todd) (1,089; 90-$1.80)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (4th wk). Socko $22.500. Last week. $29.000.

Town (Teitel) (640; $1.25-$1.50) —"Young Love" (Teitel). Good $2,500. Last week, "My Life To Live" (Pathe) (3d wk), $2,800.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 90-$1.80)—"Four For Texas" (WB) (3d wk). Good $13,000. Last week, $21,500.

Woods (Essaness) (1,200; 90-$1.80)—"Cardinal" (Col) (3d wk). Great $26,000. Last week, $38,000.

World (Teitel) (608; 90-$1.80) — "My Life To Live" (Pathe) (4th wk). Good $4,500. Last week, $6,500.

THE "EYES" HAVE IT... And how!

Premiering in Chicago, Detroit and Upstate Michigan over the week-end—M-G-M's "Children of the Damned" rolled up these staggering grosses:

CHICAGO, Fri., Sat., Sun., 40 Theatre-Multiple
$149,633
(193% better than "Village of the Damned")

DETROIT, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Fox Theatre
$24,240
(243% better than "Village of the Damned")

PONTIAC, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Drive-In $4,618

PORT HURON, Friday, Saturday, Sunday
$2,368

JACKSON, Saturday, Sunday
$3,014

KALAMAZOO, Sunday Only
$2,178

SAGINAW, Sunday Only
$1,657

BAY CITY, Sunday Only
$1,407

BATTLE CREEK, Sunday Only
$1,803

All situations represent from 190% to 245% better than "Village of the Damned"

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER
presents
A LAWRENCE P. BACHMANN production

CHILDREN OF THE DAMNED

M-G-M is on the MOVE!

New York Sound Track

Frank Sinatra comes as special guest Feb. 17 at Motion Picture Pioneers dinner honoring 20th-Fox prez Darryl F. Zanuck. Affair will be held at the Americana Hotel's Imperial Ballroom . . . Universal prez Milton R. Rackmil and veep-foreign general manager Americo Aboaf left over the weekend for Mexico City to preside at the company's Latin American sales conference there this week. Also attending from New York are assistant foreign manager Ben Cohn and foreign department execs Joe Mazer and Alex Black.

Among leading British industryites skedded to attend the IFIDA dinner-dance here Jan. 21 are Sir Michael Balcon, Mike Bromhead, Nat Cohen, W. H. Jamieson and Hal Mason . . . The Jan. 6 issue of The National Observer carried a full-page story by Edward Fischer on American directors "worth attending to." Among them, Morris Engel, Frank Perry, Orson Welles, Fred Zinnemann, William Wyler, Elia Kazan, George Stevens, Robert Wise, John Ford, John Huston.

Dept. of Saucy Americana: In Paris, Reade-Sterling's film version of Jean Genet's play, "The Balcony," is being advertised in French lingo with this tagline as translated: "Only America Would Dare To Make It!"

Barney Balaban, George Weltner and Paramount eastern studio rep Russell Holman back over the weekend from a week of looking things over at Par's Hollywood operations . . . Peter Lorre, John Carradine and George Raft among the cast of Jerry Lewis' latest comedy for Par, "The Patsy" . . . Elmer Bernstein will pen the score for "The World of Henry Orient" . . . a featurette titled "Born in a Trunk," about the career of Natalie Wood, is being circulated to tv stations to plug Par's "Love With the Proper Stranger."

Richard Brooks completed the Hong Kong phase of his "Lord Jim" locationing (59 shooting hours) and is now off to Cambodia for more outdoor work . . . Sidney Ganis, Columbia publicist, engaged to Katherine Charlotte Wolin of Paterson, N.J.

Negro actor Brock Peters is having a string of roles: "To Kill a Mockingbird," "L-Shaped Room," "Heavens Above" and "Pawnbroker" all recent—and now "Major Dundee" with Charlton Heston which tees rehearsals Jan. 30 for Mexican shooting.

Local friends of former New Yorkite Mike Selsman report he's dissassociated himself from the Coast p.r. firm of Brandy, Pam & Selsman and will discose news plans soon . . . Travellers between San Juan and St. Thomas these days are being alerted by Caribair pilots to the fact that "you are now flying over Vieques Island, where 'The Lord of The Flies' was filmed."

Walter Reade Jr., chairman of Reade-Sterling, will be given the IFIDA service award in recognition of his "encouragement of specialized and imported films." Presentation will be one of a number to be made at IFIDA's annual awards dinner-dance here Jan. 21 . . . Metopera soprano Jeanette Scovotti will sing the Star Spangled Banner to open the dinner . . . The Legion of Decency has C-rated (condemned) the Bronston Company's French import, "War of The Buttons," on the grounds that "the vulgarities and obscenities used in the treatment of this film are inadmissible for the mass entertainment medium."

Fabian has returned to the Coast after a seven-city tour promoting the Jan. 20 seg of NBC-TV's "Hollywood and The Stars," which is devoted entirely to him . . . Meanwhile, NBC-TV is prepping another film industry spec, "Inside The Movie Kingdom—1964," a 90-minute special being produced by Sextant in association with Life Mag, which will be aired March 20.

Former Commerce Dept. exec Nate Golden briefed the Copyright Circle at the Overseas Press Club here Friday (10) on problems involved in the release of U.S. pix overseas . . . Otto Preminger got a private demonstration of Dimension-150 on the Coast last week . . . The Coast-based indie, Topaz Films, has acquired U.S. and Canadian rights to the Marcello Mastroianni import, "The Assassin."

Films made by students at City College, Columbia and NYU will be screened at a special symposium to be held Feb. 4 at Manhattan's Donnell Library Center. On hand to discuss the "ideal college course" on cinema will be Columbia U's Erik Barnouw, NYU's Robert Gessner and City College's Herman G. Weinberg . . . Meanwhile, Queens College is offering an evening course in "The Film As Art" starting next month. Dr. Roy Huss conducts.

Peggy Steffans, currently appearing in the Adolphas Mekas indie, "Hallelujah The Hills," has gone into the new Paddy Chayefsky play, "The Passion of Joseph D." . . . Among visitors to our town: Pierre Roustang, producer of Reade-Sterling's upcoming "The World's Greatest Swindles"; John Schlesinger, director of R-S' "Billy Liar"; R. K. Narayan, author of "The Guide" on which the new Tad Danielewski-Pearl S. Buck pic is based; Robert Wise, producer-director of 20th's upcoming "The Sound of Music" . . . Meanwhile, Governor Films head Dave Emanuel left Big Town for distrib talks on the Coast.

Alvie L. Maddox has formed a new indie production company here, Aldonrod Productions . . . A 20th-Fox employe, with an eye for specific detail, would like VARIETY to know that the man who heads 20th's artie affiliate, International Classics, is named Elmer Hollander, not Earl . . . Praetorian Productions declares that it is postponing production on "Rondera," originally skedded to get underway here about now, until next May. They also say that Rick Barry has left the company and that Larry Davis, a partner and founder of the company, has taken charge of its affairs.

"The Day Paris Fell," pilot show for 20th-Fox's "Day to Remember" tv series, has been accepted as an entry in the documentary shorts division of the upcoming Oscar contest. Malvin Wald and Jesse Sandler produced . . . Bill Gulick's comic novel, "Conquest," has been acquired by 20th with David Weisbart set to produce.

Screen Directors International Guild considers its Jan. 25 membership meeting at the Henry Hudson Hotel, N.Y., to discuss the collapse of merger talks between it and the Directors Guild of America so important that it will levy a $10 fine on any resident member "absent without cause." Terms of the merger proposals and other points involved with the now-snafued amalgamation will be aired.

David A. Lipton, Universal ad-pub v.p., in Gotham huddling with homeoffice execs re upcoming releases . . . Irving Loomis appointed east-central district manager for Embassy Pictures, succeeding the late Charles Zagrans and Arnold Monette named midwestern sales rep . . . "Lilies of the Field" given the National Audience Board's "award of merit" following a special survey held at the Fox Wilshire Theatre, L.A. . . . Paula Prentiss to do a month of promo activity for "Man's Favorite Sport?" in the Florida area to plug the pic's Jan. 30 world preem in Miami. She starts a week of Gotham promos today (Wed.).

Gregory Peck comes to Gotham next Monday (20) for a week of activities on behalf of "Captain Newman, M.D." which opens in New York at Radio City Music Hall in February . . . the National Council of Churches backing UA's "One Man's Way" biofilm of Norman Vincent Peale, cooperating with the distrib in setting up special ministerial screenings and urging NCC leaders to see the film and talk about it . . . Cinema Distributors of America held an exec meeting to discuss plans for the coming year last week in the distrib's Mobile base.

James R. Velde, UA sales v.p., and Al Fitter, the company's western division manager, in Los Angeles through Friday huddling with the UA sales force and various exhibs re 1964 product . . . National General Corp. and Fox West Coast Theatres have donated Grauman's Chinese Theatre to the Women's Council of the Hollywood Museum for a benefit performance of Ross Hunter's "Chalk Garden," being donated by Universal, April 28 . . . latest "Where Love Has Gone" cast inclusions: Howard Wendell, Carol Conn, Russell Thorson, Alex Montoya and Sue Casey.

Alan Jay Lerner and Arthur P. Jacobs will coproduce under their respective Montforte and Apjac banners a film musical budgeted at $6,000,000, based on Hugh Lofting's fictional character, "Doctor Dolittle." Lerner will script and write lyrics and Jacobs produce.

'Film Underground'

Continued from page 1

mental items. Failing his attempted boycott, Mekas unreeled "Flaming Creatures" in 16m version several times in his bedroom and once in the hotel auditorium. Thus practically anybody in attendance at the festival was able to see what the dispute was all about.

On the last evening, Mekas tried to take over the projector at the festival itself at end of the final official item. But a fest rep pulled out the projector plug. Followed a scuffle for it and much impassioned talk on "freedom of expression" by the Mekas group. It was believed the projectionist was fired for not trying to balk Mekas.

Finally, the Pre-Selection Committee put out a circular deploring the fact that this film could not be shown, reflecting on the liberty of expression in Belgium. It gave the film a special prize nod as the "Film Maudit" of the festival, literally the Damned Film of the Festival. It was felt a sufficient summing up of the affair.

Press and film people present were divided on the pic as was the jury, who also got a special screening. However many felt it was better than several shown and it should have been permitted with a special introduction to the general audience on what they were going to see.

And what was it finally? Smith had made a sort of high camp transvestite affair showing a group cavorting in a kind of 1920s setting. And the cavorting was seducing one woman among them, who was also somewhat hermaphroditic. There was manipulation of sex organs shown.

A sort of earthquake had Marilyn Monroe, played by a man, coming out of her coffin. General comment was that it was crude stunting and dull in spite of the carryings-on. On the "artistic" level there was perhaps the vamp feel of silent film days.

The undergrounders assert film is a pean to love and freedom. Consensus had it that it was too bad the film was not better done and more important to back the disagreement over "freedom." Anyway, there was another pic in competition "Chumlum," of Ron Rice, that resembled "Creatures" curiously if genitals were covered.

The same transvestites were presented in latter film and rolled about frenzieldly. Pic had good color and some arresting compositions, if it all got repetitious.

One film by Kenneth Anger, "Scorpio Rising," was about black-jacketed American motorcyclists. It depicted them as budding bullies and Nazi types rather than criminally prone deliquents. It pictured some garish homosexual-like tussles. Also the holding of a sort of black mass. But no objections were aroused and it was felt an extremely well made individual film if not exactly experimental in nature. (Marlon Brando starred years ago in a motorcycle bums film, "The Wild One.")

Undergrounders own "Twice a Man," by Gregory Markopoulos, won a $2,000 prize. Mekas thinks uproar was worthwhile and that Belgian laws on film showings may be changed as a result.

He is now starting out on a tour of Europe to show the New York experimental film movement to European capitals.

Belgians, Those Realists, Give Cash As Prizes to Film Short Makers

Knokke, Jan. 14.

The Third Belgian International Experimental Film Festival, held at the seaside resort town of Knokke-Le-Zoute, ran from Dec. 25, 1963 to Jan. 2, 1964. If the U.S. took only two of the seven official jury prizes, it was way out in front in the number of entries, general level and actual experimental qualities in this way out aspect of filmmaking. Forty-seven Yank pix were in the running among 107.

Of 364 films submitted from 32 countries only 107 were accepted by a Belgian pre-selection committee composed of filmmakers, critics and short film producers. Some 13 countries were completely eliminated. U.S. placed 47 out of 143 sent, West Germany placed 10, France 15, Japan 7, Great Britain 5, Belgium 4, Canada 4, Switzerland 3, Holland 2, Sweden 2 and one each from Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Mexico, Poland, Venezuela and Yugoslavia. Film lengths ran from one minute to the unshort-like 100 minutes.

Most of the items were in 16m, and the prizes were in hard cash, which was a boon to those who make these films, ever hard put to find markets for their product. The first prize was $5,000 with $2,000 each for the others. There were various outside awards for prestige purposes. Prize monies were donated by Gevaert Film Prod., for the lead outlay, with Bell Telephone, Solvay & Co., Belgian Radio and TV, RadioTelevisionProgram Prod. and private individuals, among them Count De Launoit and Baron Lambers. Jury deliberated a full 15 hours before decisions were made.

Knokke Fest Jurors

Knokke, Jan. 14.

Jury at the recent 3rd experimental film fest here consisted of the following:

James Broughton, American avant-garde filmmaker; Jean Cayrol, French writer and scripter of Alain Resnais' "Muriel"; William Klein, American photographer and filmmaker; Jan Lenics, one of Poland's animated, experimental filmmakers; Lorenza Mazetti, Italian authoress and filmmaker; Norman McLaren, Canadian filmmaker; Jorgen Roos, Danish documentarist; Herbert Vesely, avant-garde German filmmaker.

U. S. filmmaker-critic Jonas Mekas resigned. (see separate story).

BOOTHMEN DEMANDS KEEP TECK LOCKED

Buffalo, Jan. 14.

Downtown first run Teck Theatre (Loew's) is dark following scheduled advertised re-opening date for holidays with Metro's "The Prize." Management disclosed shuttering is "indefinite." House is involved in a labor dispute with local projectionists union.

House has been dark for several months and attempts to negotiate salary terms with boothmen ran into an impasse. Thereupon all advertising was cancelled. Frank Arena, City Manager for Loew's, said that it looked "like there will be some sort of a battle before we reopen" and representatives of the union reported themselves still "far apart from management" and "as it stands now there is just nothing more we can do."

Landau's Added Aides

There are presently some new faces at the Landau Co. For one, Herman Silver has joined the indie film production-distribution-exhibition outfit as director of advertising and publicity and for another, Erwin Lesser has come to the company to be in charge of domestic sales for the Landau Releasing Organization, the indie's distribution subsid.

Silver was public relations director of Theatre Owners of America. He steps in as Harold Rand departs Landau to become a v.p. of the pub firm Solters, O'Rourke & Sabinson. Prior to TOA, Silver was ad copy chief for Columbia Pictures and copy supervisor at Lennen & Newell.

Lesser was formerly general sales manager of Lopert Films. His first project for Landau will be the domestic selling campaign on the British-made "The Servant." Lesser most recently headed his own company, Brigadier Film Associates and was previously associated with Landau as general sales manager of the theatrical film division of National Telefilm Associates.

PALACE, CHI, RELIGHTS FOR 'EMPIRE' AND 'MFL'

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Palace Theatre, a 1,500-seat downtown deluxer which has been dark for nearly two years, has nailed the Chi hardticket run of Warners' "My Fair Lady," skedded for a Nov. 18 preem here. Theatre will warm up with Sam Bronston's "Fall of the Roman Empire" starting in mid-March.

Deal was negotiated personally by Warner Bros. Razz Goldstein and Palace owner Art Wirtz, and calls to both offices elicited the information that neither party was "at liberty" to discuss advance guarantees or at what rate they would be paid off.

Film Rowers say that in contrast to the bidding for "Cleopatra," Wirtz had little serious competition for "MFL." The Palace owner had threatened to sue 20th-Fox and Balaban & Katz after he lost the contest for "Cleopatra," which played and is playing B&K's State-Lake Theatre. Tradesters opine that unless a serious shortage of firstrun product should occur, B&K would prefer not to interrupt its grind policy and tie up a house with a longrunning road show.

The Palace has run the full gamut of theatre exhibition, including vaudefilm, grind firstruns, Cinerama, several other hardticket pix, and lastly Cinerama reissues.

Prizes at Belgian 'Experimental'

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Knokke, Belgium, Jan. 14.

German filmmaker Ferdinand Khittl's 35m feature, "Parallelstrasse" (Parallel Street), took the first prize of $5,000 at the recently concluded 3d experimental film competition held here. Jury deliberated 20 hours before handing the award to Khittl's pic, which had been generously booed at a public showing earlier.

Several prizes went to the U.S. These included Gregory Markopoulos' 16m, 55-minute color pic, "Twice A Man"; and Stan Vanderbeek's "Breath-death," an animated short about atomic peril. Additionally, a Technical Syndicate prize went to Yank Ed Emshwiller's "Thanotopsis," a short study of anxiety via shots of a man's anguished face intercut with a speeded-up dancer. Several other Emshwiller pix also were well received.

France took two prizes, both for animated shorts, via "Renaissance," made by Walerian Borowczyk, a Pole living in France, and "Le Nez" (The Nose), Alexandre Alexieff's film version of the Gogol tale. Canada received one award for Claude Jutra's "A Tout Prendre" (To Take All), a 16m feature blown up to 35m. This also won the International Critics Prize. A second prize went to Germany for Vlado Kristl's short, "Madeline Madeline."

Although Japan took no major prizes, it got a nod from the pre-selection committee on the truly experimental quality of its entries. Claes Oldenburg, who has made a name for himself in New York and abroad for his "Happenings," was given L'Age D'Or prize, in recognition of the fact that his "Happenings" made up the subject matter for several Yank entries, even though he did not direct the pix themselves.

Allied Artists Decisions On Playoff, Promotion

Allied Artists sales department huddled in New York last week to discuss plans for the marketing of several pictures. Helmed by general sales manager Ernest Sands, the session involved sales personnel from both coasts and Canadian reps as well.

Under discussion were the campaigns for further playoff on "Soldier in the Rain," "El Cid" and "55 Days At Peking." The latter two pix were talked about with Harold Roth, sales exec for Samuel Bronston Productions, in addition to the Allied sales force.

Also discussed were such upcoming pix as "The Thin Red Line," "Never Put It In Writing." "The Naked Kiss," "The Strangler" and "A Yank in Viet-Nam." In addition to the talks, "Strangler" and "Viet-Nam" were screened.

THE BRITISH PRESS UNANIMOUSLY HAILS AN UNUSUALLY FINE MOTION PICTURE!

A BRILLIANT STUDY IN CORRUPTION AND DECADENCE

the servant

..."is a masterpiece"

STARRING DIRK BOGARDE · SARAH MILES · WITH WENDY CRAIG · AND INTRODUCING JAMES FOX · DIRECTED BY JOSEPH LOSEY · PRODUCED BY JOSEPH LOSEY & NORMAN PRIGGEN · SCREENPLAY BY HAROLD PINTER · ORIGINAL STORY BY ROBIN MAUGHAM

"A FLAWLESS PERFORMANCE IN A MASTERLY FILM..." The Sunday Times
"In moments of patriotic fervor I have sometimes wished that the English cinema might make a film which would be adventurous in an 'English way' which would begin to do for our screen something of what the great Italians and the best of the young French have been doing for their own screens. 'The Servant' is that kind of film. A flawless performance, then, in a masterly film which, to come back to my starting point, brings to the English screen the sense of experiment."

"THE SERVANT IS UNMISTAKABLY A MASTERWORK..." The Sunday Telegraph
"No better film has been seen here for months. Nothing so good has been made for years. Joseph Losey's 'The Servant' is the 'best filth of the best director now working in Britain.' It is a work of steady and composed brilliance, in which every asset—script by Harold Pinter, score by Johnny Dankworth, the photography of Douglas Slocombe, the playing of Dick Bogarde and James Fox—has been made to declare a dividend. Everything matters, everything fits. 'The Servant' is witty, timely, perturbing and authoritative."

"A TRIUMPH...AN ENORMOUSLY EXCITING PICTURE..." The Observer
"Joseph Losey's film of 'The Servant' was written by Harold Pinter, and it is a triumph. The thing that is most exhilarating about the film is that it has been written by someone who is obviously excited by the cinema and made by someone who obviously respects words. It is an enormously exciting picture."

"THE SERVANT IS A MASTERPIECE..." The Guardian
"A masterpiece. The finest film in these islands—since, well, since a long, long time. Dick Bogarde gives the performance of his life—as the servant who preys on his elegant young master's weaknesses...a taste of comfort, a fondness for young girls...in order to take over the household.

"It is rare to find a film which is both elegant and tough, corrosive yet compassionate, visually exciting and yet meaningful, brilliant and profound. Rarer still is the film which deals with moral problems on any but a superficial level. And that is why, I repeat, 'The Servant' is a masterpiece."

AND

"UNDOUBTEDLY ONE OF THE MOST EXCITING AND ORIGINAL FILMS TO COME OUT OF BRITISH STUDIOS FOR A LONG, LONG TIME." The Times / "...A REMARKABLE NEW BRITISH FILM—A WONDERFUL FILM." Daily Express / "A MUST FOR ALL SEEKERS AFTER SOMETHING BOLD AND DIFFERENT IN THE CINEMA." Daily Mail / "THE SERVANT IS WEIRD, CONTROVERSIAL, ABSORBING AND, FOR ME, BRILLIANT." Daily Herald / "THE SERVANT IS THE BEST BRITISH FILM I HAVE SEEN THIS YEAR." Evening Standard / "YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS THE SERVANT—THE PICTURE OF THE YEAR." The People

WORLD RELEASE THROUGH

ASSOCIATED BRITISH-PATHE LTD.

2 DEAN STREET, LONDON W-1

EXCLUSIVE U.S. REPRESENTATION FOR the servant: THE LANDAU COMPANY · TIME & LIFE BUILDING · NEW YORK 20, N.Y.

Prospective 1964 Product

Continued from page 5

camera dates. Columbia (19 last year) has given the go ahead to eight of 22 under preparation. Paramount (11 in 1963) has greenlighted three of 10 pencilled in for '64. American International (9 in 1963) has okayed two of five; Universal (10 last year) has start dates on all six being prepped. Allied Artists (7 in 1963) thus far has set two to go this year. United Artists (15 in 1963) plans 15 in 1964, nine of them from the Mirisch Company, and six pinned to starts.

Figures, it should be stressed, are extremely flexible, with most companies assuring that deals for many additional pictures will do much to alter the final 1964 production total. Additionally, many films intended for filming this year are bound to be shelved altogether or delayed for indefinite periods.

If any trend in subject matter could be noted in films geared for '64 lensing, it might be toward adventure-drama. Comedy also looms large. Only five musicals are presently planned, but three of them are of "blockbuster" proportions. The lineups company by company:

METRO

"Only Way To Love," comedy, June start, Joe Pasternak producing. Elvis Presley starring. "Quick Before It Melts," comedy, March start, Doug Laurence producing. Delbert Mann directing. Robert Morse starring. "36 Hours," March start, suspense-drama, William Perlberg-George Seaton producing, Seaton directing, James Garner, Rod Taylor starring.

"Flipper" sequel, Ivan Tors producing. "Every Man Should Have One," comedy, Ted Richmond producing, Margaret Rutherford, starring. "A Likely Story," comedy, Carlo Ponti producing, Sophia Loren starring, to film abroad. "Say It With Music," musical, Arthur Freed producing, Vincente Minnelli directing, Robert Goulet starring. "40 Days Of Musa Dagh," adventure-drama, Pandro S. Berman producing, some overseas locations. "Choice Of Violence," A. C. Lyles producing, Bing Crosby to star.

"Caravans," adventure from James Michener's novel, no producer set. "Lies Of Silence," Richmond producing. "Joy In The Morning," Henry Weinstein producing. "Hank Williams Story," musical biopic, Sam Katzman producing, Gene Nelson directing. "Dr. Zhivago," drama, Ponti producing, David Lean directing. "The Company Girls," comedy, Pasternak producing. "Too Big For Texas," comedy, Richmond producing. "Made In Paris," comedy, Pasternak producing. "Mask Of Dr. Fu Manchu," adventure-suspense, Weinstein producing.

"Dirty Dozen," Perlberg-Seaton producing. "The Yellow Rolls Royce," comedy, Anatole DeGrunwald producing. "The Last Hill," western, Richard Lyons producing. "How The Sky Was Won," historical-drama, Andrew and Virginia Stone producing. "Secret Of My Success," to film in England, no producer set. "Ipcress File," Harry Salzman to produce in England. (Note: Columbia also lists property on its slate.) "Young Cassidy," biopic of Sean O'Casey, Robert Gaff and Robert Emmett Ginna producing, John Ford directing in Ireland.

To be produced by Martin Ransohoff and his Filmways Prods. for MGM release: "First Wife," drama, spring start. "Muscle Beach," comedy, July. "Loved One," comedy, John Calley producing for Ransohoff, Tony Richardson directing. "Aging Boy" and "Penelope" also are being prepped.

20TH-FOX

"Fate Is The Hunter," drama, starts tomorrow, Aaron Rosenberg producing, Ralph Nelson directing, Glenn Ford, Rod Taylor starring. "Cassandra At The Wedding," drama, Feb. 3 start, Martin Manulis producing, Serge Bourguignon directing, Natalie Wood starring. "Sound Of Music," musical, March start, Robert Wise producer-director, Julie Andrews starring, some Austrian locationing.

"Goodbye Charlie," comedy, David Weisbart producing, Tony Curtis, Debbie Reynolds starring. "John Goldfarb, Please Come Home" comedy, April start, Steve Parker producing, Shirley MacLaine starring. "Erasmus With Freckles," comedy, May start, Henry Koster producing, Jimmy Stewart starring. "Agony And The Ecstasy," biopic, June start, no producer set, Charlton Heston the star.

"The Day Custer Fell," western epic, July start, David Weisbart producing. "Sand Pebbles," adventure drama, Oct. start, Wise producing-directing, some Far Eastern locations. "Praying Mantises," mystery-drama, Oct. start, David Miller producer-director, to shoot in Europe. "The Circle," western drama, spring-summer start, Rosenberg producing. "Von Ryan's Express," war drama, Saul David producing. "Guns Of Rio Conchos," western, David Weisbart producing, Gordon Douglas directing. "Pleasure Seekers," romantic comedy, some overseas locations. "Fine Italian Hand," Fred Kohlmar producing. "Smashmaster Caper," comedy, Rosenberg producing.

"High Wind In Jamaica," adventure-drama, Nunnally Johnson scripting and Peter Ustinov talked for producer-director-star assignment. "Magnificent Men In Their Flying Machines," adventure-drama, no producer set, June start, to film in England. "The Bait," drama, April start, Robert Slodmak producing, to film abroad. "Our Mother's House," drama, June start, Eleanor Perry scripting, no producer set, to film in England.

"Rapture In My Rags," love story, July start in France, no producer. Patricia Gozzi to star. "Watcher In The Shadows," murder-mystery, Jack Cardiff directing, to film in England. Additionally indie producer Robert L. Lippert will contribute low-budget pix for 20th release during year.

COLUMBIA

"Major Dundee," western adventure, Jan. 30 start, Jerry Bresler producing, Sam Peckinpah directing, Heston starring, to film in Mexico. "Love Has Many Faces," melodrama, Feb. 3 start, Jerry Bresler producing, Cliff Robertson, Hugh O'Brian starring, Alex Singer directing, to shoot in Mexico. "Surfing Wild," Feb. 10 start date, Art and Jo Napoleon producing, Art Napoleon directing. "Three Stooges Meet The Gunslingers," March start, Norman Maurer producer-director, "Stooges" starring. "The Collector," drama, William Wyler producer-director. "Ship Of Fools," drama, May start, Stanley Kramer producer-director. "Inside Daisy Clover," comedy, July start, Alan Pakula producing, Bob Mulligan directing.

"King Rat," from book by James Clavell, Bryan Forbes producer-director. "The Gay Place," Irving Ravetch, producer-writer, Garner starring. "Playboy," comedy, March start, Stan Margulies producing, Curtis starring. "Three On A Couch," comedy, Irving Pincus producing Curtis starring. "Sandpiper," drama, Wise producer-director.

"The Chase," suspense-drama, Sam Spiegel, producing. "Churchill's Early Life" (working title), biopic, Carl Foreman producer-director-writer. "Village That Wandered" and "East Of Khartoum," fantasy-dramas, Charles Schneer producing in England. "Coco Beach," Robert Rossen producer-director. "Bent's Fort," western, Bresler producing. "Ipcress File," thriller, Harry Salzman producing in Europe (see MGM line-up). "Pass Beyond Kashmir," A. R. "Cubby" Broccoli producing in Europe. "Genius," satirical comedy, March start, Otto Preminger producing-directing.

PARAMOUNT

"Roustabout," comedy, March start, Elvis Presley starring. "The Patsy," comedy, Jan. 6 start, Jerry Lewis directing-starring. Ernest Glucksman producing. "Judith," drama, March start, Kurt Kreuger producing, Daniel Mann directing, Miss Loren starring, to film in Israel. "Sylvia," drama, Martin Poll producing Carroll Baker to star. "The Disorderly Orderly," comedy, John Paul Jones producing, Jerry Lewis starring.

"Spy Who Came In From The Cold," adventure-drama, Marty Ritt producer-director, Burt Lancaster stars, some overseas locations. "Boeing-Boeing," comedy, Hal Wallis producing. "Greatest Job In The World," comedy, Melville Shavelson producer-writer-director. If William Holden is inked to topline, it will film abroad. "Nevada Smith," drama to be fimed for Paramount by Joe Levine's Embassy Prods. "Rurales," adventure, Leon Uris writing and producing with Ronny Lubin.

SAMUEL BRONSTON-PAR

(Par Release In U.S.)

"Brave New World," fantasy drama, spring start, James Mason, Stephen Boyd, Omar Sharif starring. "Night Runners Of Bengal," March start, adventure-drama, Richard Fleischer directing. "Suez," adventure-drama, summer start, John Wayne to star. All will lense in Spain.

Levine is prepping one pic outside his Par deal, "A House Is Not A Home," based on the Polly Adler tome, skedded for an early start.

WARNER BROS.

"None But The Brave," war drama, March start, Frank Sinatra starring. "Battle Of Rio Fiorta," drama, Delmer Daves producer-director-writer, April start. "The Undefeated," western, March start, Henry King producer-director, to film in Mexico. "Camelot," musical, William T. Orr producing. "The Great Race," comedy adventure, Blake Edwards producer-director, spring start, Jack Lemmon starring, multiple locations.

UNIVERSAL

"The Lively Set," romantic drama, Jan. 14 start, William Alland producing. Jack Arnold directing, James Darren, Pamela Tiffin, Doug McClure starring. "Strange Bedfellows," comedy, spring start, Norman Panama-Melvin Frank producing, Frank directing, Rock Hudson starring. An untitled comedy starring Cary Grant, Peter Stone scripting. "Daffy," drama, Feb. start, Marlon Brando Sr. and Walter Seltzer exec producers, Al Ruddy producer, Brian Hutton directing, Michael Parks starring.

Ross Hunter production for Universal are "Madame X," drama, June start, Lana Turner starring. "Art Of Love," comedy, May start, Garner, Dick Van Dyke starring. "Dark Angel," Sept. start, Hudson starring.

ALLIED ARTISTS

"Isle Of Paradise," romantic comedy, June start, Presley to star; "The Party," Leon Fromkess and Sam Firks producing, dickering for Carol Lynley to star.

AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL

"The Graveside Story," satirical comedy, April start, no producer set, Vincent Price, Peter Lorre to star. "Bikini Beach," musical, March start, Frankie Avalon, Annette Funicello to star. All also will participate in three pix with Anglo-Amalgamated Films of London — "The Gold Bug," suspense-drama, Roger Corman producer-director; "When The Sleeper Wakes," horror drama, Jacques Tourneur directing. Company will combine with Italian International Films of Rome to lense "The Dunwich Horror."

MIRISCH CO.

(For United Artists Release)

"Dazzling Hour," comedy, March 1 start, Billy Wilder producer-director, Dean Martin, Kim Novak, Peter Sellers to star. "Return From The Ashes," psychological melodrama, Lee J. Thompson producer-director, May start. "A Rage To Live," drama, Walter Mirisch producing, summer start. "The Confessor," drama, March start, John Frankenheimer producer-director, Curtis and Henry Fonda starring. "Hallelujah Train" and "Law And Tombstone," both John Sturges westerns.

"What Did You Do In The War Daddy?" comedy, Blake Edwards producer-director. "Hawaii," epic drama, fall start, Fred Zinnemann producer-director. "Private Life Of Sherlock Holmes," comedy, Wilder producer-director, Sellers, Peter O'Toole to star, some unit filming in England. "Bandoola," Feb. start, Lewis Rachmil, Richmond producing, Elliot Arnold directing, Yul Brynner starring.

Other UA pix are: "Goldfinger," suspense-adventure, Feb. start, abroad, Broccoli-Saltzman Prods., Sean Connery starring. "Mister Moses," Feb. start, Frank Ross producing. "How To Murder Your Wife," comedy, George Axelrod-Frankenheimer production, Frankenheimer directing, Richard Quine directing Lemmon to star. "Khartoum," biopic, Robert Ardrey screenplaying. "One More Time," comedy, Arne Sultan-Marvin Worth producing. "Kimberly," adventure drama, Harold Hecht-James Hill-Lancaster producing, Lancaster starring.

George Cukor has set Compton MacKenzie novel, "Sinister Street," as first production for his new indie company. He previously filmed author's "Sylvia Scarlett" in 1935 with Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant dualing.

Tout Crews Visit Atlanta

Atlanta, Jan. 14.

On two successive days, film company executives were here to meet theatre owners and managers from the Atlanta, Charlotte, Jacksonville and Memphis film exchange areas. First in was Metro led by assistant sales general manager Louis Formato, Andy Sullivan, assistant advertising and public relations manager; and Terry Turner, the exploiteer. W. W. Sherrill, Atlanta branch manager, presided at luncheon at Capital City Club, which came to an abrupt end when 16mm projector broke down and it was impossible to show a product reel with samplings from Metros new pictures.

Group was shown Elvis Presley's starrer "Viva Las Vegas" in a.m. at Wilby-Kincey's Roxy Theatre and saw "Golden Arrow" in p.m. at Columbia Branch's screening room.

Followed Joseph E. Levine's "Zulu" Showmanship Caravan, Carl Peppercorn, Robert E. Weston, Ed Apfel, James Frew, Southeastern division manager; and Buford Styles, Southeastern district manager. Atlanta press was not invited to screening of "Zulu" or luncheon that followed.

Thanksgiving In January

Continued from page 3

at the N.Y. Music Hall, described as the biggest Christmas week in the history of the Hall. This Cary Grant starrer landed $84,336 in the two weeks in Chi. It also garnered $118,258 in two weeks, playing five theatres in Miami, Fla. It did the biggest ever for a U pic in St. Louis, with $52,659 in the two weeks at the fairly small Esquire. Currently, the film is playing third week in many keys where it opened Dec. 25.

UA's "It's a Mad World," which was dating in some 21 key cities Christmas week, hit new highs in 17 spots, including the N.Y. Warner where it registered an alltime roadshow high of $75,608. "World" hung up a grand total of $547,940 on Xmas week.

"Tom Jones," another from United Artists, registered around $222,000 in eight key spots Christmas stanza, landing five new house records out of the eight keys. It opened fairly recently in Miami, and is credited with an amazing $14,668 in the first two days, playing four houses. "Kings of Sun," another UA release, did surprisingly strong biz for a so-called spectacle. For eight key cities, not including L.A., the pic is credited with around $295,000. This included $190,850 racked up in 19 houses in the Greater N.Y. area Christmas session. "Kings" did an astounding $206,439 in two weeks playing 28 spots of the Greater L.A. area.

20th-Fox, too, came through with some great totals for Christmas week since having two blockbusters out on release. "Move Over, Darling," newest of its b.o. winners, is credited with better than $540,000 in the week ended Dec. 31, of which $347,765 came from 18 theatres, in the Greater N.Y. area. "Cleopatra," of course, was the other big winner from the company. This hardticketer, out for many weeks, soared to $64,371 on Christmas week and held around $50,000 in the following (New Year's) week.

Paramount checked in with two winners over the yearend holidays, with a third potentially strong pic just starting out. Jerry Lewis' "Who's Minding the Store" is credited with runninf nearly 25% ahead of the Lewis' pic of 1962, which was "It's Only Money." The company's "Love With Proper Stranger," which was smash opening (Xmas) week in two N.Y. houses including the State, racked up $197,000 in two weeks for its engagements in the L.A. area. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed," also from Par, started out well in several keys and had two big weeks at N.Y. Victoria.

Much the same pattern was followed by top pix of other companies. Buena Vista showed smash returns on "Sword in Stone," first Disney cartoon feature pic in some time. Naturally, it scored heaviest returns on the Christmas week taking in New Year's Eve since having the advantage of vacationing youngsters. One of top engagements was the N.Y. Palace where it rolled up a gross of better than $80,000 the first two weeks.

"The Cardinal," which was Columbia's top entry for the holidays, ran up an excellent $850,000 nationally in the two-week period, covering Xmas and New Year's. "The Victors," which was launched only in a few keys during the holiday, also loomed a potentially big entry for Col.

Continental reported both "To Bed Or Not To Bed," just getting around, and "Ladies Who Do" as top grossers during the holiday period. The manner in which "To Bed" started out held considerable promise, according to the company.

Warner Bros. found "Four For Texas" to be its ace holiday period grosser. This comedy western hit great figures in some eight or nine keys covered by VARIETY.

Amusement Stock Quotations

Week Ended Tues. (14)

N. Y. Stock Exchange

1963-'64 High	1963-'64 Low		*Weekly Vol. in 100s	Weekly High	Weekly Low	Tues. Close	Net Change for wk.
15⅜	11⅞	ABC Vending	182	14½	13½	13½	— ⅛
38¼	27⅞	Am Br-Par Th	259	29⅞	28¾	29⅞	+ ⅛
22¼	14½	Ampex	1249	17⅜	16⅜	16⅝	+ ⅛
84¾	42½	CBS	350	77½	71¾	73⅝	—3⅞
18¾	12⅛	Chris Craft	121	14⅛	13½	13⅝	— ¼
29½	21⅛	Col Pix	102	23	21⅝	21⅝	—1⅜
46	45⅛	Decca	5	45¾	45¾	45¾	..
46⅜	27¾	Disney	120	40¼	38½	39	—1½
122⅜	106⅛	Eastman Kdk	247	117⅜	115¼	115⅝	—1⅛
6⅜	5¼	EMI	132	6⅛	5⅞	6	..
27⅞	20⅝	General Tire	676	23⅜	22	22	— ⅞
16½	9⅝	Glen Alden	215	13⅞	13¼	13⅜	— ⅜
23¾	15¾	Loew's Thea.	81	19⅝	18¼	18¼	—1⅜
68¾	48	MCA Inc.	67	58	55⅛	56½	+1½
38⅜	15	Metromedia	108	32½	30¾	31	—1½
37¼	26½	MGM	271	31⅝	29	29	—2⅝
24¾	20½	Outlet	† 182	9½	8⅞	9	— ⅜
12¾	7⅞	Nat. G'l Corp.	1100	22⅞	22	22⅛	+ ⅛
58¼	35¼	Paramount	232	58¼	56⅜	56⅞	— ⅛
211½	120½	Polaroid	573	182¼	174½	175	+1
110⅛	56	RCA	3072	111¼	102½	110	+7⅝
10¼	6¾	Republic	57	9	8¾	8⅞	+ ⅛
16¾	14	Rep., pfd.	3	15¼	15⅛	15¼	+ ¼
27⅞	20½	Stanley War.	105	27¾	25¾	27⅝	+1½
45⅜	31	Storer	47	39¾	38	38½	—1
28¼	17⅞	Taft Bdcst.	55	24¼	23¼	23¼	— ⅞
37	20	20th-Fox	315	26	22⅛	22½	—3¼
32	17¾	United Artists	140	21½	20⅜	20⅞	+ ¾
16¼	12⅞	Warner Bros.	153	14¾	13⅞	14⅛	— ⅛
84¼	51	Zenith	603	77⅞	74⅛	75⅝	+ ⅞

American Stock Exchange

4	2⅛	Allied Artists	34	2½	2¼	2¼	— ⅛
11¼	5	BalM'nt GAC	72	10¾	9⅝	10¼	+ ¾
12¼	6¾	Cam-P'kway	27	7⅞	7½	7¾	+ ⅛
24⅞	16⅞	Cap. Cit. Bdc.	134	22⅞	20	20	— ¾
17½	10⅝	Cin'rama Inc.	687	12¼	11	11	—1
9	6½	DeSilu Prods.	62	7	6⅝	7	+ ⅛
9⅞	4¾	Filmways	50	8⅝	7¾	8½	— ⅛
11⅞	8½	Movielab	40	10⅜	10	10	..
13⅞	5¾	MPO Vid.	21	11¼	10⅝	10¾	+ ¼
3⅝	2⅛	Reeves Bdcst.	19	2¾	2⅝	2⅝	— ⅛
5⅛	2½	Reeves Ind.	105	2⅞	2½	2⅝	— ⅛
17¾	13¼	Rollins Bdcst.	23	16	15½	15⅝	+ ⅛
25⅜	16¾	Screen Gems	10	22½	21	21	—1
22	8⅝	Technicolor	548	19¼	17⅝	19¼	+1⅝
6¾	4⅛	Teleprompter	120	6	4⅞	5	+ ⅛
2¾	⅝	Tele-Indus.	45	⅞	¾	¾	— ⅛
14½	10½	Trans-Lux	18	11⅝	11½	11⅝	— ⅜

* Week Ended Mon. (13).

† Actual Volume.

(Courtesy of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc.)

Over-the-Counter Securities

	Bid	Ask
Commonwealth Theatres of Puerto Rico	5⅝	6⅜	+ ⅝
Four Star Television	7	7¾	— ⅞
Gen. Aniline & Film	320	342	..
General Artists Corp.	8	8¼	..
General Drive-in	10	11	— ¼
Magna Pictures	1⅝	2	+ ¼
Medallion Pictures	20	21½	+1¾
Pickwick International	4⅞	• 5⅜	+ ⅜
Premier Albums	7	7⅞	—1¾
Rust Craft Greeting Cards	10⅞	11⅞	+ ⅛
Seven Arts Productions	8⅜	9¼	+ ⅝
Transcontinent Television	19¾	21	+ ¼
U. A. Theatres	8½	10	..
Universal Pictures	66	70½	..
Walter Reade-Sterling Inc.	2⅝	3	— ¼
Wometco Enterprises	33	35½	— ½
Wrather Corp.	4¼	4⅞	— ⅝

(Source: National Assn. of Securities Dealers Inc.)

USIA

Continued from page 1

efforts to give the public "technically and artistically superior films." Among Yank films cited were 20th's "Longest Day," "Continental's "David and Lisa" and UA's "Lillies of the Field."

U.S. tv networks and stations "redoubled their efforts in 1963 to bring more cultural and educational programs into the nation's homes," USIA reported. Both commercial and ETV networks are "committed to expansion plans," the agency said.

Much of the legit puffery went to Edward Albee and the "emergence of talented new playwrights." Also commented upon was the growth of repertory theatre and several successful revivals on and off Broadway.

Opera's growth popularity was termed an "interesting footnote to a year of activity and achievement in every division of the musical arts." Cited by USIA were accomplishments by symphony orchestras and by jazz and folk artists.

USIA took note also of the "burgeoning" of dance groups over the country and commented that popular demand has led to the establishment of many local ballet companies.

Literary fare, said USIA, was marked by "variety and quality" in fiction and non-fiction. Noted were short stories and several authors who returned to publication after periods of inactivity.

Front Screen Projections Inc., of New York, has changed its name to Front Screen Productions Inc. Gerald Cohen was filing attorney at Albany.

Film Reviews

Continued from page 6

Mail Order Bride

score, heavy on the country style harmonica, banjo and fiddle.

On the whole, editor Frank Santillo has done a taut job, and additionally knowing craftsmanship is displayed by art directors George W. Davis and Stan Jolley and soundman Franklin Milton.

Tube.

Misadventures of Merlin Jones
(COLOR)

Disney with more miss than hit comedy.

Buena Vista release of Walt Disney production. Stars Tommy Kirk, Annette; features Leon Ames, Stuart Erwin, Alan Hewlitt, Connie Gilchrist, Dal McKennon, Norman Grabowski. Directed by Robert Stevenson. Screenplay, Tom and Helen August, from story by Bill Walsh; camera (Technicolor), Edward Colman; editor, Cotton Warburton; music, Bob Brunner for orchestration, Richard M. Sherman and Robert B. Sherman for title sng. Previewed in New York Jan. 3, '64. Running time, 88 MINS.

Merlin Jones	Tommy Kirk
Jennifer	Annette
Judge Holmby	Leon Ames
Police Captain Loomis	Stuart Erwin
Professor Shattuck	Alan Hewitt
Mrs. Gossett	Connie Gilchrist
Detective Hutchins	Dal McKennon
Norman	Norman Grabowski

Fun and boxoffice conquests footnote Walt Disney's experimentations with a boy who could turn into a shaggy dog, and then an absent-minded professor who starteled the world, including himself, with the high-flying flubber. "Shaggy Dog" and "Absent Minded Professor" were funny pictures built around a gimmick and proved smash successes.

This new one, "The Misadventures of Merlin Jones," is another try at a gimmick and had at the outset, it would seem, the potential for another amusing absurdity. Sad to say, it just doesn't come off.

Amiable characters are sketched in the tale of a college student who sockets himself into being an electrofied brain with the ability to receive other people's thoughts. And from this base, the pic goes into the field of hypnosis with his subjects including a chimpanzee at the college lab, and a judge who moonlights as the anonymous writer of crime fiction.

As it plays out, there's little high voltage in the misadventures of the title character, Tommy Kirk. His girl, Annette, is a pretty co-ed, and nothing more. Leon Ames is the sometimes exasperated judge-writer and Stuart Erwin is a cop. Alan Hewitt is a smart-aleck prof at the college's psychology department, and Norman Grabowski is a brawny and dumb student with a reputation for football agility and disagreeableness to the chimp.

They all play it well enough, or at least as well as they can under the unsnappy direction by Robert Stevenson and a screenplay by Tom and Helen Auguest which lacks the necessary comedic shock.

Music is fair, and the technical work is all top-drawer.

The Disney name will help the sale, of course. But it's an innocuous comedy that, after the first couple of reels, hopefully would, but doesn't, jell.

Gene.

La Ragazza Di Bube
(Bebo's Girl)
(ITALIAN)

Rome, Jan. 14.

Lux-Paramount release of a Lux-Ultra-Vides production by Franco Cristaldi. Stars Claudia Cardinale, George Chakiris. Features Marc Michel, Dany Paris, Emilio Esposito, Monique Vita, Mario Lupi, Pier Luigi Catocci, Carla Calo, Bruno Scipioni, Ugo Chitti. Directed by Luigi Comencini. Screenplay, Comencini, Marcello Fondato, from novel by Carlo Cassola. Camera, Gianni di Venanzo. Music, Carlo Rustichelli. Previewed in Rome, Running time, 110 MINS.

Mara	Claudia Cardinale
Bube	George Chakiris
Stefano	Marc Michel
Liliana	Dany Paris
Mara's father	Emilio Esposito
Ines	Monique Vita
Lidori	Mario Lupi
Ciolfi	Pier Luigi Catocci
Mara's mother	Carla Calo
Mauro	Bruio Scipioni
Arnaldo	Ugo Chitti

Claudia Cardinale's career comes full circle—from striking beauty to undisputed talent—with her title performance in "Bebo's Girl." It's the female acting stint of the year in these parts, and it should win her solid recognition everywhere. Role and name will also, with an assist from George Chakiris', help chances for pic itself, which would otherwise be much more limited because of subject matter.

Based on a Carlo Cassola best-seller, to which it is reputedly very faithful, "Bebo's Girl" tells of the strange muted love of a country girl for a man she scarcely knows, a partisan who has killed a man during the war and who is eventually caught and jailed for the crime. Though offered chances of a new life and love with a solid, steady writer, she prefers to remain faithful to her briefly-known wartime hero and await his release from jail.

Slowly developed, pic grows on one just as consistently as the character of Mara (Claudia Cardinale) grows in stature as she pursues her seemingly impossible romance with an ever-distant and elusive target. It is a credit to Miss Cardinale and to director Luigi Comencini as the odds pay off in the end in the characterization of the strong, silent, woman who almost blindly follows her instinct to the end against all odds and reason.

Pic is underplayed in every sector, with George Chakiris ably following the pattern in a self-effacing, but nevertheless effective role, as the partisan who befriends Mara. Marc Michel is also good as the man who offers the girl security but is turned down. Others in the large cast provide colorful wartime backdrop of types. By Yank standards, the build-up is undeniably slow, and though this pays off later, some scissoring would help the pace.

Gianni di Venanzo's camerawork deserves the extra bow this Italo craftsman usually gets; his chiaroscuro work on settings, as well as his fine closeups of Miss Cardinale especially, are of the highest standard. Carlo Rustichelli's music is neatly reminiscent in atmosphere, while other credits measure up in a painstaking production effort.

Hawk.

The Man Who Couldn't Walk

Adequate supporting item about a band of British jewel thieves. Shop-worn, but with scattered compensations.

Hollywood, Jan. 8.

Butcher's Film-Distributors Ltd. release of Jock MacGregor-Umesh Mallik production. No star credits. Directed by Henry Cass. Screenplay and story, Mallik; camera, James Harvey; editor, Robert Hill; music, Wilfred Burns. Reviewed at Joe Shore's projection room, Jan. 8, '64. Running time, 63 MINS.

The Boss	Eric Pohlmann
Keefe	Peter Reynolds
Carol	Pat Clavin
Luigi	Reed de Rouen
Cora	Bernadette Miles
Enrico	Richard Shaw
Beppo	Martin Cass
Maria	Margot van der Burgh
Lou	Martin Cordon
Joey	Maurice Bannister

"The Man Who Couldn't Walk" is a routine but acceptable supporting melodrama about a band of jewel thieves. This low budget indie has going for it some efficient direction, several skillful performances and a script that once or twice emerges from its shell of contrivance and formula and comes through with a fairly lively scene or some lifelike dialog. The Jock MacGregor-Umesh Mallik production, a presentation of a new American-Canadian company, Falcon Pictures, will make a serviceable companion feature.

Evidently the Falcon campaigners have some hard exploitation sell in mind, judging from their ad layout which stresses the notion that the film tells "the story behind the scandal that shocked London . . . baring untold secrets of vice, intrigue and international party girls." This come-on, however, is a fraud, as those who see the picture will discover. What happens on the screen isn't even remotely related to recent scandalous developments in England.

Mallik's yarn, however, does have a London background, and concerns the problems of a brash safecracker who is recruited into a gang of thieves headed by a wheelchair-confined consul general of a Central American republic. In the process of an ultimately unsuccessful diamond heist, the safecracker discovers that his boss is the man who, years before, had killed his father. This coincidence, which would have benefitted the story had it been bypassed in favor of a more natural conclusive device, leads to an overly involved climax.

The most noteworthy character in Mallik's yarn, the one that gives the film a necessary shot in the arm, is that of the likably cocky safecracker, played with amiable self-assurance by Peter Reynolds. Eric Pohlmann is a strong plus factor as the invalid mastermind and Pat Clavin has a sultry quality as the heavy's stepdaughter. Skillful direction by Henry Cass aides throughout. James Harvey's camerawork shows occasional flair, but Wilfred Burns' music tends to be too bouncy and frivolous for the serious events that are transpiring.

Tube.

Man In The Middle (C'SCOPE)

Engrossing military courtroom drama. U.S. officer goes beserk on racial issue. Good cast. So-so b.o. prospect.

Hollywood, Jan. 6.

Twentieth-Fox release of Walter Seltzer production. Stars Robert Mitchum, France Nuyen, Barry Sullivan, Trevor Howard, Keenan Wynn; features Sam Wanamaker, Alexander Knox. Directed by Guy Hamilton. Screenplay, Keith Waterhouse, Willis Hall from Howard Fast's novel, "The Winston Affair"; camera, Wilkie Cooper; editor, John Bloom; music, Lionel Bart; assistant director, Kip Gowans. Reviewed at the studio, Jan. 6, '64. Running time, 94 MINS.

Lt. Col. Barney Adams	Robert Mitchum
Kate Davray	France Nuyen
General Kempton	Barry Sullivan
Major Kensington	Trevor Howard
Lt. Winston	Keenan Wynn
Major Kaufman	Sam Wanamaker
Colonel Burton	Alexander Knox
Lt. Morse	Gary Cockrell
Lt. Bender	Robert Nichols
Colonel Shaw	Michael Goodliffe
Sgt. Jackson	Errol John
Major Smith	Paul Maxwell
Capt. Gunther	Lionel Murton
Colonel Thompson	Russell Napier
Capt. Dwyer	Jared Allen
Colonel Mayburt	David Bauer
Major Wyclif	Edward Underdown
Major Poole	Howard Marion Crawford
Staff Sgt. Quinn	William Mitchel
Cpl. Zimmerman	Al Waxman
Cpl. Burke	Glenn Beck
Cpl. Baxter	Frank Killibrew
Lt. at Sikri	Edward Bishop
Major Clement	Terence Cooper
Major Hennessy	Granam Skidmore
Col. Burnside	Terry Skelton
Col. Winovich	Paul Blomley
Col. Kelly	Alistair Barr
Major McCabe	Brian Vaughan
Major Cummings	Julian Burton

The Howard Fast novel, "The Winston Affair," has been retitled "Man in the Middle" and cinematically fashioned into a property that starts off with promise and concludes on a note of disappointment. This Walter Seltzer production has something going for it in the basic nature of the story, which is provocative, and the cast names headed by Robert Mitchum and including France Nuyen, Barry Sullivan, Trevor Howard, Keenan Wynn, Sam Wanamaker and Alexander Knox. Snappy exploitation could mean talkability and saleability, in some measure.

Film itself, concerning a court martial involving both American and British interests in India at the end of World War II, has as its drawback a certain amount of vagueness as to character delineation and story motivation. All things revolve around Keenan Wynn, as an American lieutenant who has killed a British sergeant and consequently goes to trial. The onlooker is set to wondering just what makes him tick.

At the very end it's unfolded that Wynn is a psycopath and not responsible for his crime. And meanwhile, words are spoken copiously about British-American political conflict and the need to resolve the issue through Wynn's getting the rope.

At the outset the stage is set for what might have been strong dramatic conflict. Good part of the potential is permitted to go unrealized. Why not more intensity, and wallop, in the screenplay by Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall? Why not more pinpointing of the story's key angle's in Guy Hamilton's direction? These were called for but undelivered. A shortage of clarity and organization in the story-telling renders "Man in the Middle" unqualified for any special recognition. It's a pro job, of sorts, but a letdown.

Mitchum's portrayal of the defense attorney is a fair job of emoting, though actor is looking pudgy in this outing. France Nuyen's Eurasian nurse part has little bearing on the story. Trevor Howard stands out as the British medical officer who makes it clear that Wynn was out of his mind when he murdered, having mentally constructed a cause of hate in a man he loathed because of his attachment to a Negro girl and, also, a man who threatened his authority.

Barry Sullivan, Sam Wanamaker, and Alexander Knox work out well enough in other featured parts.

Film, which originated as an enterprise of Entertainment Corp. of America, credits Max E. Youngstein as exec producer. Youngstein had headed the short-lived ECA and when the latter folded, 20th-Fox took it over. It was studio-filmed in England and on location in India. Wilkie Cooper's camera work is on the right track all the way and John Bloom's editing is particularly close, adding to the sense of movement. Music by Lionel Bart is a modest contribution.

Gene.

You Can't Say That

Albuquerque, Jan. 14.

Nudie film "Knockers Up" did a good solid three-weeks business at the 83-seat Roxy Arts Theatre here, even though both of the daily papers refused to carry the title of the pic, in paid ads.

Ad department of the Albuquerque Publishing Co. (which handles lineage for both the morning daily Journal and the afternoon Tribune) recently set itself up as censor of all film advertising "it deems objectionable."

"Knockers Up" is the first film to have its title completely eliminated.

Despite the ban from the dailies, the bi-weekly U. of New Mexico student newspaper accepted the ads exactly as drawn by theatre manager.

Preminger

Continued from page 3

said. "We don't have to go with a story until it is ready. That's why I've decided to postpone 'Genius.' I feel the script requires more work and that we have come along faster on 'Harm's Way.'"

(Upon seeing the completed "Genius" script, UA execs had expressed some script reservations of their own, among other "contingencies.")

The Paramount deal, initiated in New York, was given the finishing touches at studio here last week following arrival of Prexy Barney Balaban and exec veepee George Welther.

Preminger expects to remain in Hollwood another ten days. He is here primarily to work with David Wolper on later's tv documentary about the making of "The Cardinal," which is scheduled to be aired Feb. 12.

Golden Showcase

Continued from page 5

anyway. The question of a log jam at the Astor is also raised and it has already happened between just UA and Fox causing the Criterion to be brought into "showcase." The Palace could eventually become a "showcase" house via the same route.

UA says it doesn't see much problem, for the present at least. It doesn't have another picture for release until March 11 when "One Man's Way Opens," presumably following "Man's Favorite Sport." It is also pointed out that pix are put up for bid and no one can tell yet. But it is also true that "Kings of the Sun," UA's Christmas picture, found itself without a Broadway berth when Fox's "Move Over Darling" beat it out at the Astor and it presumably couldn't find another location on the main stem, the Criterion also being booked and so forth.

Both Warners and UA are also talking to RKO about variations of "showcase" and the three will take careful note of Universal's experience with the circuit, one theatre of which to be used is the RKO 86th Street. One thing is clear, the exhibition situation in New York is far from settled and, many feel, the vibrations from the Gotham theatre shakeup will be felt in other cities across the land.

Darken Capital, Austin

Austin, Tex., Jan. 14.

Capitol Theatre, 1896 landmark in the city, has been shuttered. Earl Podolnick, prez of the Trans-Texas Theatres Inc. decided not to renew the expiring lease on the theatre. The circuit had operated the Capitol since the circuit was formed almost a decade ago.

Capitol was formerly the Hancock Opera House, and for its first 30 years it offered stage and music bills. It turned to pictures 30 years ago.

B'NAI B'RITH FETE TO WARNER AS CITIZEN

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Jack L. Warner was on the receiving end Sunday night (12) of a tribute by the Bevhills B'nai B'rith and of some good natured kidding by show biz colleagues via a musical bio-parody, "My Fair Lady." Showman head of Warner Bros. was "Man of the Year" in B'nai B'rith for his "efforts in promoting patriotism and brotherhood and showmanship."

Dinner, attended by approximately 1,200 persons identified on local state and national levels with business, the professions, politics and religion, was chaired by Albert N. Alpern. Frank Sinatra was chairman of the honorary committee and also acted as emcee.

U. S. Senator Thomas H. Kuchel, Rabbi Edgar Magnin and Samuel Goldwyn, as well as previous B'nai B'rith honorees Walter O'Malley and Mervin LeRoy took part in the event at International Room of the Bevilton. It was preceded by a cocktail exception,

The Spanish Make

Continued from page 7

pire." The mammouth set for this film, a foot-by-foot reproduction of Roman Forum, still stands at the Las Matas site. It will soon be leveled to make way for construction of the new studios.

Bronston predicts an increase in film production in Spain and gave the recent inquiries as partial proof of this. Terrain lends itself to all sorts of story needs, he pointed out, and is in many ways like Southern California. It is also cheaper to make pictures in Spain, Bronston said, and there are no labor disputes or the like. A producer has more time and less tension in filmmaking here, he noted.

The producer feels that his stages will see plenty of activity. His new plant will have six stages, while the present one has three. Bronston is the only stockholder in the operation. He reports that the Spanish government is receptive to an influx of filmmakers, so long as those involved with picture-making behave themselves and don't try to interfere in politics and related elements.

Bronston has been operating in Spain for over six years now, starting with the production of "John Paul Jones." He has always maintained a don't-rock-the-boat attitude and is sharply critical of those who would stir up trouble, like the recent problems between Columbia and the Franco regime over "Behold the Pale Horse."

"What is the point of stirring up trouble?," Bronston asked. They will probably have to recut the film eventually anyway to appease the Spanish, he opined, and decried the waste of money and disruption of relations. "It hurts me and it will hurt others," he said. Bronston said that "poor exec decisions" were involved, in his opinion, and rapped Col for being dictated to by a director, in this case Fred Zinnemann. A company or producer should never let a star or director dictate to it, he opined. "Throw them out," he emphasized.

As for his own operation, the producer says "the Bronston name is gold here and I want to keep it that way. I will throw out anyone who misbehaves." The new studio will soon rise as further proof of his lucrative coexistance thinking.

Chi B.O. Perky

Continued from page 3

into the "showcasing" trend that is currently shaking up the Gotham exhibition scene. As the figures indicate, it was a smash success, and will no doubt be a precursor to many other similar multi-theatre preems. Although the plan could have a radical effect on the downtown deluxers, the Balaban & Katz theatre chain, which owns four of the major mainstemmers, played "Darling" in several of its nabe houses, apparently figuring that it's easier to join than fight.

It is also significant that three of the four top grossing houses in the "Darling" showcase were recorded at the new shopping centre hardtops—Old Orchard, Golf Mill and Hillside. The fourth (and top grossing) house was the south side Beverly Theatre, which notched a sensational $30,000 in its first frame.

"TO BED... OR NOT TO BED" BREAKS ALL-TIME HOUSE RECORD IN PREMIERE ENGAGEMENT AT CORONET THEATRE* N.Y.C.

1ST WEEK SMASH! $19,800

2ND WEEK WOW! $22,100

"DEVILISH AND DARLING!
A DELICIOUS FLAVORED SENSE OF HUMOR ABOUT THE CUSTOMS AND MORALITY OF THE SWEDES. ALBERTO SORDI PLAYS IT WITH AN AIR OF INGENUOUS EXPECTATION!
A GEM OF A FILM!"
–Bosley Crowther, N.Y. Times

"HIGHLY POLISHED ENTERTAINMENT. DIRECTED WITH A TWINKLE AND A TONGUE-IN-CHEEK! A BRIGHT AND CHEERY COMEDY... PROVOCATIVE!"
–Irene Thirer, N.Y. Post

★★★½★!
"A BEDTIME STORY–SLY AND BRIGHT! DELICIOUS HUMOR AND HILARIOUS SITUATIONS! ALBERTO SORDI IS SPLENDID!"
–Wanda Hale, Daily News

"BRIGHT, AMUSING, SAUCY, FRANK COMEDY
–Jesse Zunser, Cue Magazine

"To Bed... or not to Bed"

A DINO DE LAURENTIIS PRODUCTION • STARRING ALBERTO SORDI

*(capacity 599)

Available Now For All Theatres Across the Country!

Contact our office in your area!

RELEASED BY
CONTINENTAL DISTRIBUTING DIVISION OF THE WALTER READE-STERLING GROUP
241 East 34th Street, New York 16, N.Y. • MUrray Hill 3-6300

Consolidated Charges Conspiracy

Royal Went 'First-Run,' Hit With Demand For Maintenance Men—Sues Four Unions

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

A $1,500,000 suit was filed here by Consolidated Theatres Inc. against four theatrical unions for allegedly conspiring to hurt its business. The suit, which also named three union officials as co-defendants and owners of the United Artists and Esquire theatres as "co-conspirators," was filed in Federal District Court by the owners of San Francisco's Royal Theatre.

Royal, long a second-run house, last year went to a first-run policy and that's when the trouble began. On Nov. 27, the theatre was advertising "McLintock,"—First San Francisco Showing! On Nov. 28, appeared the following: "Closed temporarily due to the featherbedding demands of the stagehands union."

House did not reopen until late December, when it reverted to the previous second-run policy.

Consolidated charged that since January of last year those named had joined to "restrain trade and commerce . . . in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act," and since November had kept the Royal from showing first-run films.

Local 16 of the Theatrical Stage Employees Union, demanding that the Royal follow the practice of other first-run theatres and hire two of its maintenance men, forced the theatre to close during the one-month period.

The other three unions named in the suit had refused to cross the IATSE picket lines, it contended.

Those named are Local 162 of the Motion Picture Machine Operators, Local B-18 of the Theatrical Employees — cashiers and ushers—and the Theatrical Federation of San Francisco, an overall union governing body.

The officials mentioned by the suit are E. C. Powell, business manager-secretary of Local 16; Henry Meyer, business manager of Local 162; and William P. Sutherland, secretary-treasurer of Local B-18, and secretary of the federation.

Harold Citron, manager of the United Artists and the Esquire, also was named a "co-conspirator" along with his employers, North Coast Theatres Incorporated.

Consolidated charged that the action by the Stage Employees Union had manufactured a "fictitious labor dispute . . . in favor of theatres operated by North Coast Theatres . . . siphoning off" more than $500,000 in business.

In addition to treble damages, the suit sought an immediate injunction against these "unlawful practices."

Bostonian's Coast Loft For Filmation Expansion

Boston, Jan. 14.

Norm Prescott, locally-based indie film producer and maker of animated pix for tv, is planning to expand his Coast operations. Here on a visit, Prescott said that, on his return to Hollywood, his Filmation Associates will take over the old Stanley Kramer offices and loft at Producers Studio. The outfit will be moving out of Paramount where it has been housed for the past two years.

Company is currently preparing two full-length animated features, a one-hour tv special and an animated tv series as well as producing Gillette and Ford commercials.

New studio facilities are being undertaken to provide more room for more animators and permit the establishment of the operation's own inking and painting department, per Prescott.

Gross Off But Filmways' Quarterly Net Edges Up

Filmways' net income for the three months ended Nov. 30, 1963, climbed to $70,331, from $44,880 for the comparable period in 1962. The 1963 quarter net is equal to 12c a share on the 595,895 shares outstanding in the period, against 8c a share on 584,004 shares outstanding in 1962.

The company's 1963 quarter net increase despite the fact that total revenues in the period declined to $2,512,383, from $2,990,185 racked up in the three months ended Nov. 30, 1962. The 1963 decline in revenues, however, was more than offset by a sharp reduction in production expenses, down to $561,393 from $1,697,850 in the 1962 quarter. Total expenses in the 1963 quarter were $2,365,152, against $2,911,705 in the 1962 quarter.

Swedish Ban

Continued from page 1

turns out to be homosexual and all the punks show unattractive behavior. Censors argued their ban on basis of sadistic and destructive example, hatred of the punks for all decency, perverted sex and obscene lingo.

Believed most offensive to Swedish officials is the social worker's attempted homosexual seduction. There is also a hobo girl type who is raped while vomiting from over-drinking. She's later shown giving herself in parks and automobiles. There is also a scene of bestiality.

Add a variety of violences and suicides and the film goes as far or further than anything produced recently in Italy, France or New York City. However Swedish precedent is against outright ban and many think it probable that the Board will be overruled and the film released with cuts made.

Negative cost $140,000 (Svensk Filmindustri) and that's a lot of kroner.

How Goes British Lion?

Continued from page 7

making by the five British Lion directors—David Kingsley, Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat and the Boulting twins, John and Roy—also forced into the open the fact that NFFC was in talks with producer Sydney Box about a $7,200,000 takeover of the distrib.

In a swift and open effort, Sir Michael Balcon, boss of the Bryanston outfit which distributes through BL, asked film bank topper Sir Nutcombe Hume for time to gather resources in order to make a competitive bid for the company.

Sir Michael put forward the view that it was "very much in the public interest that the disposal of the company should be on a competitive basis in a manner similar to that in which the Independent Television Authority selects its contractors."

4 More Competitive Bids

Move has precipitated four more competitive bids including one from Leslie Grade, theatrical agency, now widening his operation into films. According to John Terry, the just re-elected secretary of NFFC, other applicants wish to remain anonymous. But he is making efforts to get them out in the open so that all is seen to be fair and above board.

Taking up Sir Michael's competitive bidding cry, the Federation of British Film Makers in a meeting with Edward Heath, the Minister for Industry, firmly reiterated the point. FBFM also made with a strong plea for the government to retain a substantial holding in the industry.

Federation, one of the two producer associations here, (BFPA is playing no part in the affair) also expressed the hope that the Minister would insist that any new owner of BL would measure up to criteria which FBFM put before him. Projected owner, says the Federation, should have successful experience of independent film production: should show evidence of faith in the importance of indie film production; should be independent of, and should guarantee future independence of the major combines. In considering applications, the Minister should take into account not only the strength of the group applying but the measure of support which it could command from leading indie filmmakers.

Urge Govt. Not To Pull Out

Prior to the FBFM's meeting with Heath, deputations comprising leading MPs, unions and the working directors of British Lion also strongly urged the government not to pull out of pix. Sydney Box, too, said he was agreeable to the government having a stake in BL if he took over. Even the Cinematograph Exhibiters Assn. said the government should stay in.

According to Kingsley, many people now had the impression that the Minister had finally been persuaded not to sell out all the company's shares to private interests.

If this impression is correct, it will be a major relief to indies who trade through British Lion, the last independent distrib, because government investment, it's felt, is the only sure way of stopping the distrib falling under the power of the Big Two.

A victory all but won, it is being said, is the fight to get competitive bidding. Depending on Heath's Parliamentary statement and providing the sale is okayed again, the NFFC is now expecting to open negotiations with applicants other than Sydney Box.

Meantime, everyone is waiting for the government.

COL FIELD MEN IN N. Y.

Mapping Tactics on 'Victors' & 'Strangelove'

Columbia's key field exploitation men are due in New York Sunday (19) for a three-day meeting with ad-pub v.p. Robert S. Ferguson and his homeoffice lieutenants concerning campaigns for "Dr. Strangelove" and "The Victors."

They'll take up specific assignments and to-each-his-own respective local merchandising. Participating from out of town will be Sid Zins, Washington; John Markle, Boston; Milt Young, Philadelphia; Bill Lewis, Dallas; Sam Siegel, San Francisco, and Joella Cohen from the midwest.

Book 'Becket' in Europe

First nine domestic dates and the first overseas engagements have been set for Hal Wallis' "Becket," which Paramount will roadshow starting in March. The 70m spectacular will have its world preem in New York at the Loew's State, opening March 11.

Tale of Canterbury Cathedral opens March 26 at the Plaza Theatre, London, it will then unspool March 28 at the Barberini Theatre, Rome, and the Apollo Theatre, Milan. Negotiations are also underway for a dual theatre opening in Paris late in March or early in April.

Other domestic dates so far set include: the Warner Beverly Theatre, L.A.; the Eglington, Toronto; Cinestage, Chi.; United Artists, S.F.; Seville, Montreal; Gary, Boston; Ontario, Washington, D.C., and the new RKO 70, Denver.

Hear Hollywood Commentator

DICK STROUT

ON over 800 Stations in Americal

Suite 404
1717 N. Highland Av.
Hollywood 28, Cal.
469-0884

Sardi's East
123 East 54th St. New York
PLaza 1-6655

Sardi's
234 W. 44th ST. NEW YORK
LA 4-0707

SCREENWRITER
Available for Assignment
Credits include recently completed feature film.
Please—no speculative offers.
Box V-3553, VARIETY
154 W. 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10036

FOR THE EXECUTIVE WHO HAS EVERYTHING Except
TOP FLIGHT ASSISTANT
Mature, personable female seeks responsible position. Broad business experience—on the line and supervisory. Gets work done!! $7500.
Box V-3554, VARIETY
154 W. 46th St., New York 10036

New York Theatres

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL
Rockefeller Center • PL 7-3100
CARY GRANT • AUDREY HEPBURN
in "CHARADE"
A Universal Release in Technicolor®
ON STAGE "CHEERS", NEW SPECTACLE

solters, o'rourke & sabinson is pleased to announce that HAROLD RAND has joined its organization as Vice President
Publicity – Public Relations

IN PRODUCTION
WARNING FROM SPACE
TITRA
DUBBING CO.
1600 Broadway New York N. Y.
PLaza 7-6681

THAT MURRAY IS K-OL$AL!

*Thank You Murray "the K" OF RADIO STATION WINS for making History at the Brooklyn Fox Theatre...

*BIGGEST CHRISTMAS DAY GROSS EVER!

*BIGGEST SINGLE DAY'S BUSINESS EVER!

*BIGGEST 8 DAY GROSS EVER!

Edward L. Fabian

VICE-PRESIDENT FABIAN THEATRES CORP.

Sauerbraten Oater, 'Silver Lake,' Top B. O. Hit of W. German 1962-63 Season

By HANS HOEHN

Berlin, Jan. 14.

In an unpredictable, or call it nutty, business, nothing perhaps should surprise us. Not even a Hollywood western made by Germans and based on a western writer, a German named Karl May, who died in 1912. Enough to report that Rialto-Film's 1962 Cinema Scope release produced by Horst Wendlandt, "The Treasure of Silver Lake" (Der Schatz im Silbersee) hit the jackpot as the domestic No. 1 boxoffice hit of the 1962-63 season.

Naturally German producers picked up the western idea. The result was the Sauerbraten western trend. Moreover the idea spread and we now experience Austrian-made and Italian-made westerns. It's Horst Wendlandt who started all this.

The reason why "Treasure of Silver Lake" clicked so big with the Germans was explained by Wendlandt as follows: "There's the big popularity of Karl May whose fiftieth anniversary of death in 1962 found much dedication and mention in Germany. The German youngsters go for a hero like that while the elder generation goes to see the film for nostalgic reasons. To most of the Germans, Karl May was a truly big name in their youth and most like to recall their youth. The characters of Old Shatterhand (Lex Barker in the films) and Winneton (played by French actor Pierre Brice) have become sort of immorial in this country."

Pinto-Borne Viking

And why has Barker clicked as Old Shatterhand? Said Wendlandt: "He's an ideal cast for that role. Big and blond, like a Viking. Nice and sympathetic—such advantages naturally click."

After "Treasure of Silver Lake," Wendlandt produced "Winnetou," also a Karl May western. While "Silver Lake," produced in collab with Yugoslavia's Jadran-Film, cost 3,000,000 D-Marks ($875,000), the most expensive film made by a German company in 1962, "Winnetou" cost 4,000,000 D-Marks (or $1,000,000), a huge amount by German Film industry standards.

"Winneton" was preemed Dec. 11 in Munich and given saturation release in 80 German cities two days later. The deals Rialto signed with German exhibs was to play the film over the Christmas holidays and over New Year's Eve. Interesting to note, that Wendlandt wants to have his second big-scale German western, "Winnetou," released in the States prior to the first one, "Silver Lake." He feels that "Winnetou" is better suited to introduce the Tewtonic cowboy to the Americans.

Actor Ralf Wolter, who played in both "Silver Lake" and "Winnetou" had this to say: "I think we should not mix up wild west popularity with Karl May popularity in Germany. These are two different things. The Wild West has always been very popular in Germany, while the popularity of Karl May in its present form is something new. I think that large segments of the young Germans have suddenly found what they didn't have before: An idol whom they can cheer."

Mixed Nationals

Oddly enough, Wolter is the only German in Rialto's "Winnetou." Lex Barker is American, Pierre Brice is French. As is his film daughter, Marie Versini. Mario Adorf, the villain in the pic, is more Swiss than German. Walter Barnes, one of Barker's followers, in American, Chris Howland, a Cook agent, is British while the remainder of the cast is of Yugoslav origin. Dr. Harald Reinl, film's director, is Austrian.

A sequel to "Winnetou" will be made in 1964. There have been reports that Rialto would co-produce with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. But Wendlandt anticipates a deal instead with British Rank. I prefer Rank. This company has proved much more generous with the negotiations we have had so far."

Artur Brauner (CCC) meanwhile turned out a western, "Old Shatterhand's Greatest Adventure" which followed Hollywood. Hugo Fregonese directed Lex Barker and Guy Madison headed the cast. James Wakefield Burke, also American, wrote the script. But Wendlandt aims at keeping a "German mentality." He said: "I would be foolish to pattern a western strictly after the Hollywood style. We never could compete with Hollywood along this line. What we intend is to make westerns that have their own German face,—westerns made the typical romantic German way."

That western Germany has going through a wild mania shows in other respects. Note: sale of blue jeans, Western hats and cowboy boots. Note, too; membership in cowboy clubs. Also Western-styled night spots have been mushrooming. Restaurant names like "Rodeo," "Rancho," "River Boat," "Texas Bar," "Western Saloon" are examples. Big attraction of the last annual German-American Folksfest was Santa Fe, a reconstruction of the famous Indian settlement. A tune by name "Ich will einen Cowboy als Mann" (I Want a Cowboy For a Husband) captured the Grand Prix at the 1963 German Song Festivals.

2 Major British Chains Assure BFPA They'll Play 45% Brit. Quota

London, Jan. 14.

The two major circuits here, Associated British and Rank, have given categorical assurances to the British Film Producers Assn. that during 1963 they will play a 45% British quota, provided the pix are of first-feature quality.

Pledge means that the two big circuits, accounting for 41% of the total seating capacity and situated in the best locations, will screen approximately 50 locally-made films over the year.

According to John Walton, general secretary of BFPA, approach was made to the circuits because "some people had given the impression that the major circuits would get down to their minimum quota requirement (30% or 36 films)."

On a possibly more important guarantee, namely, the intended percentage of British product to be screened during 1965, the producer association was unable to extract any firm assurance from the two theatre chains. The Association, said Walton, did not press the matter after the Big Two had said there were factors which made production "problematical."

ABC CIRCUIT PLANS ITS FIRST OZONER

London, Jan. 14.

The 280-theatre ABC chain is scheduled to build its first Southern England drive-in if permission is granted. In a pact with the owners of Chessington Zoo, site of the ozoner, the circuit is aiming at accommodation for about 700 cars.

Meantime, the second major cinema loop, Rank Theatres, is negotiating to convert one of its Nottingham hardtops into a "double-decked" theatre. Scheme would mean converting it to a 1,500-seat ground floor cinema with normal screen plus another 850-seat theatre upstairs equipped with wide screen pix.

Yanks Eye Spain For Kiddie Pix Peseta Boost

Madrid, Jan. 14.

U.S. film companies are hoping to pick up a premium in pesetas under the government-sponsored films-for-children drive.

Example of mutual interest was a Metro pre-premiere luncheon for government authorities and film critics prior to opening of "My Friend Flicka." Bash was attended by Director-General for Cinema Garcia Escudero who showered encouraging words on Metro's Spanish manager Caesar Alba for the company's initial entry and offered full official support in exploiting "Flicka" and others to come.

In reply, Alba indicated that his company intends to undertake a major program effort to provide filmfare for children not only as a worthy social endeavour, but also with the expectation that the specialized product would clean up at the boxoffice.

Cathay Bowling

Singapore, Jan. 7.

The Cathay Organization, a leading cinema enterprise here, will build a chain of bowling alleys throughout Malaysia with help from other local business firms. Two will be in this city. One called Jackie's Bow, will be on the ground floor of a U. S. $2,000,000 Super-Cinerama theatre, soon to be built in Singapore by Cathay. The other, The Ocean Bowl, will be next to the Ocean Park Hotel.

Metro Signs for 3 Co-Prods in Spain

Will Partner Ocean Films With Italian, French Producers, First to Start in April

Madrid, Jan. 7.

MGM has reached agreement to participate in three coproductions that will partner Ocean Films of Spain with Italian and French filmmakers. Ocean chief exec Jaime Comas negotiated the agreement with Metro Continental toppers David Lewis and Mac Atas and will leave to finalize documents in N.Y.

Three film-pact will jump off early in April with "Joaquin Murrieta," a remake of a Rio Grande western that MGM filmed with Anne Baxter in 1936. George Sherman will direct, with the cast headed by Rory Calhoun and Richard Conte (here co-starring in "Circus World"). A month later, Ocean Films will roll another Western "Talion," in coproduction, with Stuart Whitman or Don Murray starring. Jane Fonda or Carrol Baker, Comas said, will play the stellar role in the third pic, "Postman Always Rings Twice," remake of another MGM property.

Apparent pattern of participation in the three pix calls for Metro to provide star and script while Ocean and its coproducers provide remainder of cost, director and below-the-line costs. Coproducers, all Italian, are Joly Films, Filmes-Giorgio Venturini and Italian-International Films.

Probably the youngest producer at work in Spain, 27-year old Jaime Comas, has headed Ocean operations for only 14 months. During that time he has co-produced "Sandokan" (Pirate Prince) with Steve Reeves and Genevieve Grad. Budgeted at slightly over $500,000 the film was shot in and around Barcelona, with an additional eight weeks of first unit photography in Ceylon. A second unit remained behind an additional six months for background and animal footage. Metro is reported to have advanced $250,000 as a minimum guarantee against world distrib rights—except for Mediterranean markets, to be divided up among the Italian French and Spanish coproducers.

Second Ocean Films co-venture last year starred Curd Jurgens, Maurice Ronet and Folco Lulli in "Pariahs of Glory" under the direction of Henri Decoin. Metro has picked up distrib rights to this one for Germany, Austria, Scandinavia and the Middle East.

Ocean Films now has another Western "The Magnificent Stranger," in advance preparation for filming prior to its initial project under the Metro pact. Sergio Leoni will direct this one for Ocean, Constantine of Germany and Joly of Italy with a cast headed by Sterling Hayden or James Coburn, Henry Silva and Herbert Lom. Metro already has advanced Comas the peseta sum equivalent to $50,000 for distrib rights in Spain. "Stranger" will location in Almeria where Ocean Films is constructing a full-scale western town Main Street 20 miles from the provincial capital city.

The young filmmaker is no less proud of his recently completed low budgeter, "El Espontaneo" (Street Clothes Matador), brought in by the young generation director Jorge Grau for around $50,000 with a cast of non-professional actors.

International Sound Track

London

Prince Philip (the Duke of Edinburgh) to attend the Scottish charity preem of "The Victors" set for La Scala, February 11. He also attended the World Premiere of the pic in London last November and thus becomes first British Royalty to grace one picture twice . . . David Jones opened his term of office as Chief Barker of the Variety Club of Great Britain yesterday (Tues.) with Savoy Hotel luncheon at which guests of honor were local sporting celebrities . . . In the face of rising costs, the Rank hardtop circuit and the Granada theatres have upped their admission prices by a few cents. ABC chain has resisted any rise up to this point . . . Producer David Pelham signed Mandy Rice-Davies, girl involved in the Profumo affair with Christine Keeler, to the title role of a celluloid version of "Fanny Hill." Plans, at present, are to shoot the film in France . . . Reported here that Robert Bolt collected $196,000 for his film script of "Dr. Zhivago" from the novel by the late Boris Pasternak . . . Local pub outfit East Hunt Associates merged last weekend with its U.S. counterpart MacFadden & Eddy, Inc. will now function under the new tab MacFadden, Strauss, Eddy, Irwin & Goodman . . . "Cleopatra" set to open on Sunday (19) at the Pavilion, Newcastle following post-Christmas openings in Birmingham and Liverpool . . . Lord Morrison of Lambeth, British film censor, guest of honor at a National Film Theatre cocktailery tossed in tribute to George Stevens whose films have just completed a season at NFT . . . Stanly Baker to Hollywood to show advance copy of "Zulu" to local industryites. He will be back in town later this month for the World preem . . . Music pubber Ben Nesbit, with Feldmans, turned exec producer to bring in a 55 minute pic for British Lion release. Tabbed "It's All Over Town," project exposes such name talent as Frankie Vaughan, Lance Percival, William Rushton, Acker Bilk, The Springfields, The Hollies, The Bachelors and one or two others in a pop music romparound.

Paris

Andre Maurois' biography "Don Juan or the Life of Lord Byron," will be made into a film by Andre Barret and Robert Laffont in 1965 as a French-British-Italian coproduction with shooting in Britain, Italy and Greece . . . There will be a Film Sound Track "Festival" in March 1965 organized by the daughter of the late French film music composer Maurice Jaubert and headed by Georges Auric, composer and head of the Paris Opera . . . Only Japanese pic to make a good boxoffice showing here last year was "Hari Kari," a Cannes Fest prize-winner . . . Reportedly being mulled for possible Cannes Fest showing this year are Yank pix, "America America" (WB) of Elia Kazan and John Ford's "Cheyenne Autumn" (WB). However, this is only scuttlebutt . . . French Film Week in Stockholm unspools from Feb. 3-9 with many unreleased pix . . . Georges De Beauregard wants Henry Fonda and Alain Delon for his proposed film version of the anti-Pius XII play "The Deputy" which he plans to shoot later this year. Neither has responded as yet. Jean-Pierre Melville may direct this tale so distasteful to Roman Catholics . . . Producer Pierre Roustang to Gotham to huddle with Walter Reade of Continental, on the forthcoming N.Y. release of his sketch pic "The Greatest Swindles in the World." Roustang will also talk to various Yank distribs about investments in other pix for U.S. rights. He is prepping one, "Secret Paris," on offbeat aspects of the city in episodic form.

Tony Perkins into "La Ronde" which Roger Vadim is directing. Also has Jane Fonda, who bowed out of a role in another local pic "Echappment Libre" (Free Escape) and has been replaced therein by Jean Seberg . . . Algeria reportedly cancelling showings of three films due to requests from "friendly nations," to wit: "55 Days at Peking" on Red China's asking, "Ben-Hur" (MG) to please Egypt and the French spy pic "O.S.S. 117" to please USSR . . . Oldie Marcel Ayme play "Lucienne Et Le Boucher" (Lucienne and the Butcher) being prepped for a film version by Claude Autant-Lara with Jeanne Moreau and Bourvil.

Rome

Claudia Cardinale mulling offer from Samuel Bronston to appear in "Paris Exposition 1889" which Vittorio De Sica is slated to direct this year . . . Cinefinanziaria Italiana has been constituted here under prexy Giulio Chiesa to handle import and export of pix via Rome . . . Maurizio Lodi-Fe working on script for pic to be shot in South Seas for a tentative summer start, with Lodi-Fe producing as well.

Sean Flynn back from Ceylon location of "Temple of the White Elephant" . . . 28 pix and coproductions shooting over year's end here and on location . . . Catherine Spaak to Milan for role in "Man of the Five Balloons" opposite Marcello Mastroianni, which Carlo Ponti is producing with Marco Ferreri as director . . . Magali Noel due in for pic stint for producer Dario Sabatello.

Lex Barker won $16,000 court case against Globe Films on charges Globe did not meet verbal agreement for pic in "Hercules" series . . . If government doesn't meet industry demands for tax cut, the postponed national shutdown of all Italo cinemas may take place in January.

Sophia Loren does "Ficumena Martarano" this year under Vittoria De Sica's direction, as well as "Doctor Zhivago" and "Judith."

Madrid

Claudia Cardinale planning a trip to Hollywood sometime this year but not to make any pix. Some had been proposed but the deals never worked out and she has two to make in Italy plus being under option to Samuel Bronston for another after her current "Circus World." Which it will be isn't decided yet . . . Rita Hayworth has no set film projects coming up at present but is considering a picture that may roll in April or thereabouts.

Henry Hathaway, who is never without a cigar in his mouth, faced deprivation while directing "Circus" at the Gran Teatro Elisea, Barcelona, because of the danger of fire in the ancient theatre. The problem was solved by the assignment of a fireman to stay with Hathaway during all the work there . . . John Smith was mobbed by a group of visiting Vienese girls in the Barcelona airport who recognized him from his "Laramie" tv series while the Spaniards looked on silently—"Laramie" not being shown in Spain.

Franz Althoff Circus, an outfit which requires 55 train cars to move it around and the only three-ring circus in Europe, will play the Sports Palace, Madrid, following its work in "Circus World" later this month. It's the show's first appearance in Spain and was made possible by Bronston, who brought the outfit from its Austrian headquarters for the film, otherwise it would be too expensive for the show to make the trip.

George Tyne, dialog director for "Circus," expecting to make his directorial debut soon on a project of his own called "No One Gets Hurt," to be scripted by wife Ethel Tyne. Rita Hayworth has expressed interest in the project, to be made in Europe as soon as financing can be obtained . . . two Althoff Circus performers turned actors for "Circus," actually playing the characters they were to have done stunt work for. They are lion tamer Henri Dantes, who doubled for Burt Lancaster in "Trapeze" a few years back, and Katryna, a 12-year-old wire walker who plays Richard Conte's daughter.

Blanche Cardin, actress-photographer and sister of Claudia Cardinale, busy on the "Circus" sets getting lotsa photos of her sister . . . Frank Sinatra Jr. due in Madrid for a nitery date shortly . . . "Kiss Me Kate," billed here as "Besame Kati," the big legit hit in Madrid presently . . . cold and fog giving "Circus World" trouble trying to get in the last location shots outside Madrid.

Already Limping, W. German Film Biz Hit by Govt. Cut in Pix Aid

By HAZEL GUILD

Bonn, Jan. 14.

West Germany's nervous film industry leaders, who are worried by such hefty problems as lack of funds for film production, dwindling boxoffice returns at home and the few pictures acceptable outside of their own country, have just received more bad news. West German Federal Ministry of the Interior, which allotted about $2,100,000 for Film Aid in 1963, is cutting the 1964 budget to $1,750,000.

West German film folks point out that the Italian pix industry receives the highest federal aid in Europe, totalling about $19,000,000, that the French government helps its film industry with $15,500,000 and that the British give at least $10,000,000 annually to assist the film industry.

Although the Federal Ministry of the Interior has been aproached with the desperate cries of the film spokesmen and has been promising some further aids, the funds have been reduced.

So far, it's planned that the 1964 federal spending will go as follows: $900,000 via premiums for outstanding films that are completed; $200,000 for premiums to documentaries and cultural films; $375,000 for German film prizes; $90,000 to aid the city of Berlin with its International Film Fest; $150,000 to aid development of the film industry, film scientists and inventors, and to bring the German cultural and documentaries to foreign countries; plus $25,000 for special showings of documentaries.

Still Another Blow

The sliced budget from the federal government is another blow being struck at the faltering German film industry here. And meantime, the film insiders are noting that the West German government is spending more money than ever to aid the West German theatre stages that are running in competition with the cinemas.

The stage shows of West Germany, which attract about 20,000,000 visitors a year, receive about $60,000,000 in federal, state and city aid. This works out to an average of $3 paid for each seat in the houses.

Munich's new National Theatre cost about $17,500,000 which was donated by the state, and the Frankfurt City Stage received over $7,500,000 in aid.

Add to this, all the federal aid given to tele here, and subtract the high entertainment taxes which the cinemas are forced to pay. Result is that the cinemas are headed for even lower income in 1964 unless some prompt relief measures are put into effect.

Daring W. German Film Prods. Launch Western Pic on Canary Islands

Frankfurt, Jan. 14.

The "new look" in West German films last year has developed a trek to Yugoslavia where many German westerns are turned out, being based on romantic cowboy novels of German author, Karl May. Often American ex-Tarzan Lex Barker is the star of these outdoor pix.

But some adventurous German producers, who are also on the "Western" kick, have headed off in another direction. They have hired Edmund Purdom, and are making their western in a slightly more westerly direction, the Canary Islands.

Latest pic is "The Last Ride to Santa Cruz," a co-production of the Stadthalle of Vienna and Magnet Films of Germany, with Marianna Koch, Mario Adorf and Klaus Kinski in other top roles, with Rolf Olsen directing. Constantin has the German distrib rights.

The other two recent Yugoslavian-filmed Westerns, incidentally, did excellent Christmas week business in West Germany. They are "Winnetou Part I" starring Lex Barker in this German-Yugoslav co-production, and "River Pirates from Mississippi," starring Joerg Felmy, in the German-Italian-French co-production. Both were filmed at an old airport near Rijeka, Yugoslavia.

Only 357 Feature Pix Made by Japan in '63

Tokyo, Jan. 7.

Japan's film industry, which not so long ago was grinding out almost 600 feature pix a year, dropped its production to 357 in 1963, a dip of 18 from 1962 as theatres continued to close in continued downbeat biz for domestic product. In addition, six feature-length documentaries and no reissues were distributed last year.

Of the 357 new feature films, 332 were made by the five majors (a drop of 32 from 1962) and the remaining 25 by indies. There were 267 foreign films released in Japan during 1962, a boost of 39 since the previous year and the largest number in the post-war period as license allocations were liberalized.

Tokyo Roadshow Biz Hits Records

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Although national biz for all films showed a drop of about 15% from last year, grosses were at record high for foreign pix on Tokyo roadshow dates during the New Year season, traditionally best of the calendar here.

The most impressive showings were registered by "Cleopatra" (20th) at Yuraku-za, "Charade" (U) at Piccadilly, "It's A Mad World" (UA) at Shochiku Central and "Victors" (Col) and "Kings of Sun" (UA) at four theatres each. "Four for Texas" (WB) was okay at the Hibiya to round out the action at larger houses. In smaller roadshow theatres "East of Eden" (WB), one of all-time hits here, is a smash on reissue at Miyuki-za, "Come Blow Your Horn" (Par) opened impressively at New Toho and "Who's Minding the Store" (Par) okay at Marunouchi Toho.

"Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) is displaying continued strength at the Imperial, where it was moved several months ago after a boff run at Yuraku-za. "How West Was Won" (MGM) still is drawing well at Theatre Tokyo after about 13 months.

Foreign films in multiple bookings at firstruns carried over knockout punch from roadshow runs. These included "Miracle Worker" (UA) "Great Escape" (UA), "Birds" (U) and "55 Days at Peking" (AA).

Perhaps the biggest surprise was "Victors," which rang up $175,000 as Columbia's share in first nine days in 34 situations. Except for "Longest Day" (20th), this film is believed to be the first not in color to get a 60% rental. Also its believed to be the first to have such a splashy release, since until last April prints were restricted to 25 per picture.

Another big entry was "It's A Mad World," which drew doubts about its potential here because its heavy comic lineup is composed of U.S. names not generally known in Japan. But the Cineramaic opened to smash returns and UA Japan manager Ed Kerner says the Japanese are laughing at almost all the right places. "Cleopatra" continued doing capacity biz into its second month here and is also running strong in four theatres in Osaka disappointing in the city of Sapporo.

"Charade" has set house records at the Piccadilly. "Kings of Sun" also opened to a terrific b.o. clatter, far surpassing comparable figures for last year's "Taras Bulba," which was UA's second best picture here in 1963.

Irish John Huston

Dublin, Jan. 7.

John Houston became an Irishman in a brief ceremony before Irish Minister for Justice Charles Haughey at Government Buildings Friday (3) when he made the formal declaration required on taking out citizenship papers.

Huston says that the decision to become an Irish citizen follows having his permanent home in Ireland for the last 12 years. He now lives in Craughwell, County Galway.

King Vidor to Spain

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

King Vidor will produce and direct "A Man Called Cervantes," biopic of the famed Spanish author of such books as "Don Quixote." Film will be made for Alta Productions. Exteriors are to be lensed in Spain, beginning in May with interiors to be filmed in London.

Herbert Dalmas is scripting and is here now working on the project. Vidor leaves for Paris, where Alta is headquartered, the end of January for pre-production parlays with Alta heads Miguel and Alexander Salkind.

New Pix Subsidy In Spain Crimps Low Cost Films

Madrid, Jan. 7.

Government film policy of rewards for quality production and meagre subsidy classifications for below-standard product is taking its toll in the Spanish film industry. While rewards have been few and far between, government classifiers under Director-General for Cinema Garcia Escudero have tagged more than 60% of final prints submitted with low subsidy ratings since the new policy was initiated 18 months ago.

As a result, there are growing signs of economic insecurity and a marked tendency to hold or delay production until the government-appointed State Film Council completes its study of proposed sweeping reforms re state Film Aid.

Statistics for the last 18 months reveal that classifiers have applied the jackpot "national interest" rating to only three pix, the 1A rating to 22 and the 1B rating to 45 films submitted. These qualifications give the producer 35 to 50% of budget with maximum subsidies range from $50,000 to $85,000.

Below this level, the 2A rating yields only 30% of budget with a maximum subsidy of $30,000. About 93 films received this classification. Victims of the new policy, however, are those producers whose pix received the low 2B rating which merely provides a 500,000 pesetas ($8,850) maximum subsidy and 46 films landed in this cellar position. In addition, nine films received the 3 rating, and received no subsidy at all.

JACKIE IN PAKISTAN

Washington, Jan. 14.

U.S. Information Agency film chief George Stevens, Jr., has rebutted (pre-assassination) Congressional criticism of the agency's motion pictures of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy's visits to India and Pakistan. Noting the films "were a ready source of disfavor for USIA's "more zealous critics," Stevens said their effectiveness overseas "cannot be questioned by anyone who has responsibly observed their workings."

Edict Ordering All Imported Pix Be Printed in Mex Held Unlawful By Fed'l Ct.; Goes to Supreme Court

Mexico City, Jan. 7.

An Aug. 29 edict requiring the printing of all imported films to be done in Mexican film labs was held unconstitutional last week by the Federal District Court of Appeals here. All distributors and exhibitors, together with the Camera Nacional Cinemotografica, had fought the edict. They had sought a temporary suspension of the order until its legality could be determined, along with a permanent injunction ruling the edict unconstitutional.

The temporary suspension had been temporarily denied, and the edict was in force until the Court of Appeals ruling. This meant an embargo on all prints from U. S. distributors who refused to knuckle under to the edict. The Yank position was that "it represented an unacceptable precedent," according to Robert Corkery, MPEA head here.

Even with the new ruling, the ailing film industry here is not out of the woods. "An appeal by the Secretary of Commerce and Industry, taking jurisdiction to the Mexican Supreme Court, would delay decision for at least another six months," Corkery stated. The effect of this would be to further paralyze the exhibition and distribution here.

No new American pictures have been imported since Aug. 29. Fifty-five then in Customs have been cleared and are on Mexican screens. These include "To Kill A Mockingbird" (U), "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col), "El Cid" (AA), "Tammy and The Doctor" (U) and others set for release here during January.

Edict came about in the first place as an ill-conceived sop tossed the striking sindicato when its Aug. 1 strike was cancelled. It was thought the technicians in labs, one of the most depressed aspects of the industry here, would be helped by a forced processing of imports. No one took into account or seriously considered that no U. S. studio would send a color negative to a country that has no Technicolor lab for processing. About 40% of imports are in color. However, a black and white negative also would be too risky a venture reasoned the U. S. exhibs. Hence, the boycott, and the legal action.

Stars in Singapore's Film Work 'For Free'

Singapore, Jan. 7.

Stars of Cathay's Motion Picture and General Investment's film, "Magic Lamp" will work without pay so that proceeds of the pic could go to its welfare fund. This is the first time in the history of the corporation that the staff will go unbilled.

Credits have been taken off, with full agreement of the stars as a gesture of loyalty to the company now celebrating its 10th anni. The 61 stars, seven directors, script writers and composers will work also voluntarily.

Lensing, scheduled to begin early this month, will be completed in mid-January with Grace Chang, Lucilla Yu Ming and Jeannette Lin Tsui starring.

Color Pix Slow India's Stars

By N. V. ESWAR

Bombay, Jan. 14.

This may sound like the lead paragraph of yore. The story of Indian films during 1963 had been one of rosy promises and dismal disappointment, if not total failure. It was, as noted, the Golden Jubilee Year of the Indian Film Industry. An Exhibition to commemmorate the event was inaugurated in Bombay by Premier Nehru.

Quantity always gave India a first but 1963 has toppled her down to the third position among film-producting nations. A fair estimate is that the total production of films in all languages could be placed only at a little over 200. Average for the last few years has been 310 films a year.

Over 400 films "started" since 1960 have absolutely no chance of being completed and shown in the near future. They may never reach the editing table.

A curious slowing-down factor has been the new accent on color stock, in which some 45 features are currently shooting here. Longer, slower, more costly production strikes a blow at the Indian method of starring, whereby a small number of incredibly expensive stars of both sexes have in the past bicycled from film to film simulatenously, dividing their days and hours to suit their own, not the producers, convenience. VARIETY reports heretofor have suitably detailed this bizarre exploitation of the whole industry by the few stars. Compared to the privileges of India's film favorites, the topflight stars of Hollywood have seemed quite reasonable.

France, Spain Put Okay On 4-Year Film Trade Pact Setting Co-Prods.

Madrid, Jan. 14.

Members of the Spanish and French Film Commissions agreed on substantial modifications at meetings in Paris last month in the four-year old film trade pact between the two countries. Spanish delegation accepted a French proposal to lower coproducer minimum investments from 30% to 20% of total budget for all projects with a foreign coin negative cost the equivalent of $300,000 or over.

Also accepted to encourage producer partnering is the proviso raising the maximum financial investment percentage of the budget from 30% to 50%. Under reigning condition the pact amendment is expected to increase the financial role of French coproducers in favor of the economy-priced services and equipment now available here.

Distribution clauses were also modified. With relaxed censorship widening market possibilities for French product, Spain conceded five additional import licenses to its French partner — lifting the annual quota from 30 to 35. While the new figure is a reciprocal one, Spain nevertheless added an incentive proposal to this amendment. For every Spanish film, above 20, released in France as firstrun screen fare, Spanish government film officials will automatically grant two additional import licenses over and beyond the annual quota of 35.

Mex Film Production Resumed After 5-Month Closure; Bank Okays Loans

Mexico City, Jan. 7.

Mexico's picture industry at one of the lowest points in its existence got the green light from the Secretary of Commerce and Industry, who ordered the Motion Picture Bank to process pic applications. Bank had frozen funds in August in an effort to force settlement of the strike by Sindicato Tecnicos y Manuales (Directors, Writers, Actors, Technicians).

Prior to this new order, the bank had refused to consider applications until the Sindicato was reorganized, the minutes of the strike were digested by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry and all points at issue in a new contract had been satisfactorily resolved. Sample sore point was that producers were in no hurry to kick in over 7,000,000 pesos to the retirement fund. Currently no one in Mexico will go on record as stating that this payment has been made. It is known that some payments have been made, but officials refuse to disclose the amount.

First film to roll (Jan 13) is "The Gangster," by Luis Alcorize, who also directs. Picture stars Arturo de Cordova. Also ready to start this month are "Las Novias de Mis Hijas," a Rosas Priego Production starring Haricwrz Olivier "Napoleoncito" a Filmex Production starring Amador Bendayan, "Dos Pajaros de Cuenta", "Cuando Canta el Corazon" and "Llaman el Cantaclaro" are scheduled for late January or early February starts.

"Gangster" is bankrolled from private sources and produced by the Sindicato with Angelica Ortiz at the helm as executive producer. All others are financed through the Motion Picture Bank, the nationalized Banco Cinemotografica.

It was stated by a bank spokesman that five other films will be okayed for filming in the immediate future, with the financing coming from the Motion Picture Bank.

What's With Serious TV Drama Specials? Hallmark's Solo Status

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

On the tv networks, there doesn't seem to be anything more unpopular these days than drama specials of serious intent, either originals or adaptations.

"Hallmark Hall of Fame" in '64-'65 looks like it will be the only remaining network vehicle of drama specials. Sponsor Hallmark Cards, in underwriting dramatic vehicles from Shakespeare to adaptations of Broadway plays, in its specials turn on NBC-TV, is willing to give up rating points in favor of what Hallmark feels is more than an adequate audience and prestige.

On the network level, there are few Hallmark sponsors around, and the networks themselves are reluctant to give up rating points for serious drama when they could do so much better on the Nielsens with comedy and musical specials continuing series of all types.

(As to the question "where has serious tv drama gone?" the networks point to the fact that they're still around, both in quantity and quality, but are now to be found incorporated into such weekly series as "East Side West Side," "Kildare," "Ben Casey," "Breaking Point," "Defenders," "11th Hour," etc.)

CBS-TV, which had a difficult time to get Madison Ave. support this season for an outing with Ibsen, starrng Ingrid Bergman, hasn't got one tv dramatic special on the books to date for '64-'65. Web has "Cinderella," a new adaptation of the Rodgers and Hammerstein tv original; "Once Upon A Mattress" as a vehicle for Carol Burnett, and Robert Goulet slated for a '64-'65.

Situation at CBS-TV is reflective of the orientation of the other networks, as well.

One of the surprises that may evolve from this development is that the mantle of serious drama might be taken over by such group operators as Metromedia, Westinghouse, and RKO General, with syndication in other markets as an added lure. Metromedia has a start in this direction with its deal with Robert Herridge to produce six one-hour dramatic shows. Westinghouse had its first-night experiment with the Broadway opening of "Advocate," and RKO General is getting acquainted with production of serious drama on tv via its toll tv tieup.

Also in the non-network field is the "Esso World Theatre," preeming in seven cities, a once a month series of specials in the tradition of "Festival of Performing Arts," "An Age of Kings" and "Play of the Week."

It should be recalled when for the most part serious drama on network tv in the form of specials had had its day, it was the "Play of the Week," a syndication entry originating on what used to be called WNTA-TV, N.Y., that held the serious drama flag aloft.

Those Crazy Computers

CBS computer machines, which calculate the amount N. Y. home office employes receive in their weekly pay check, must of had a holiday hangover last week.

Employes of CBS Films and other CBS departments found, to their delight, that they had a greater net amount in their pay. There was quick rash of rumors about pay hikes. Then, the awful dawn. It was found that the computers failed to take the standard deductions that week, for such items as group insurance, stock buys, hospitalization, U.S. bonds, union dues, etc. Next week the computer machines will make up for their mistake.

Lincoln Center Music Theatre's Pact With NBC

NBC-TV and the Lincoln Center Music Theatre have signed a long-term contract for the network to have exclusive tv rights to the Theatre's operettas and musical plays.

Deal was negotiated by Richard Rodgers, prexy of the Music Theatre, and Walter Scott, exec veepee of the NBC tv network. A non-profit organization, the Theatre will premiere two shows this summer to be selected by Rodgers. The theatre will be housed in the New York State Theatre now under construction at Lincoln Center.

Director of the initial productions will be Edward M. Greenberg, who has been stage director and associate director of the Los Angeles and San Francisco Civic Light Operas.

3-Way Sponsor Spread On NBC's 90-Minute Special on Pix Industry

James Garner will be host of the NBC-TV-Sextant 90-minute special on the motion picture industry scheduled for Friday, March 2, from 9:30 to 11 p.m.

Garner will be spokesman for the sequences which will feature some 50 international film personalities (production company has written close to 150 contracts covering the show).

Done under a deal between Sextant and Life mag, and based on the magazine's recent double issue on the film industry around the world, "Inside the Movie Kingdom —1964" will be sponsored by three Lennen & Newell ad agency clients, Colgate, Best Foods and P. Lorillard. Several other agencies reportedly are seeking to get the show for 20 markets not covered by the network (Lennen & Newell reportedly has okayed a deal for the extra markets). One agency wanted to do an hour show upstaging the 90-minute special based on footage that Sextant shot with actress Ingrid Bergman in Italy. Although the deal was reportedly within the producer's contractual rights, the bid was refused.

Besides Garner and Miss Bergman, the show will include Julie Andrews, Carroll Baker, Omar Shariff, Debbie Reynolds, Anthony Quinn, Melvyn Douglas, Gregory Peck, Tony Perkins and other stars and industry factotums.

Aaronoff Exits MCA

Ed Aaronoff has resigned as director of advertising, publicity and promotion for MCA TV. He had been with MCA TV seven years. He's slated to move into the John Kluge Metromedia operation.

Replacing Aaronoff is Sheldon A. Saltman, who came to N.Y. from Cleveland where he was associated with Storer Broadcasting's WJW-TV as director of advertising, promotion and publicity.

'WEEK THAT WAS' NO DUTCH TREAT

Amsterdam, Jan. 14.

Dutch television program "Zo Was Het Ook Toevallig Nog Eens Een Keer" (freely translated with "Accidentally, Thus It Also Happened To Be"), ran into trouble last week when an attack was launched on "slaves of the tv set," done in the form of a prayer, for which certain words in the Lord's prayer were substituted by phrases referring to the subject in case.

"Zo Was Het Ook Toevallig Nog Eens Een Keer" is Dutch version of, "That Was The Week That Was." It is a monthly program and had been attacked by conservatives, since it appeared three months ago. Many parties, it can be said, were looking for an opportunity to silence the program, that is produced by VARA, socialist-minded television station.

It was thought that the program had not reached an artistic peak yet, and was rather tame in its opinions. The mentioned prayer, however, may trick off a series of measures. The Minister of Arts, who watched the program, immediately phoned the Minister President of The Netherlands, and it is expected that some kind of reprisals will result. Though known to insiders, it now came into the open that the Government can censor any radio or television performance when it deems necessary. Also, from The Hague a broadcast can be stopped, by pushing a button, when for instance flagrant publicity would sneak into the non-commercial Dutch programs.

May Set Up Indie TV Network For ABC-Axed Fights

With ABC-TV reportedly definitely slated to axe the Friday night boxing matches next September, the managing director of Madison Square Garden has said the Garden is looking into the possibility of an independent chain of stations to carry the fights.

Like the Met Opera, which formed its own chain when ABC pulled out, and the Philharmonic, which went the same route after CBS dropped the concerts, the tv fight promoters are forced to seek an independent line up of outlets because an increasing number of affiliates have dropped the show. Chain is now down to 132 stations for "Fight of the Week."

Word is that sponsor Gillette wanted to go with the fight again next year, but the fights, like the Met, Philharmonic or the "Firestone Hour," have a special appeal and don't pull the rating weight the net desires. Situation was similar when NBC dumped the fights a few seasons back. Network reportedly got out of a long contract via an obscure cancellation clause having to do with the rise of any unsavory aspects to the fight game.

Gillette has put a $2,300,000 bankroll into the NCAA football going to NBC next season, and its figured that network will pick up a lot of the blade maker's entertainment coin via the discounts available from the football buy.

Chemstrand Joins Lever On Hope-Lucy Special

Chemstrand has joined Lever in sponsoring the hourlong Lucille Ball-Bob Hope special, tentatively titled "Mr. and Mrs.", which will be telecast April 19, preempting Ed Sullivan that Sunday night from 8 to 9 p.m.

Comedy is based on the "Mr. and Mrs." play by Sherwood Schwartz, who also is writing the tv adaptation. Jess Oppenheimer, creator and producer of the original "I Love Lucy" series, will produce. Show will be filmed at Desilu Studios in February.

Sontag to ABC-TV

David Sontag is joining ABC-TV next week as exec producer for the programming department, working under programming v.p. Ed Scherick. Sontag is dissolving his personal management and production company, DS Inc. upon joining the web.

TV Audiences Up 7%

The networks, the Madison Ave. agencies and their sponsors were taking great comfort last week from the fact (as evidenced by the Nielsen tabulations) that tv audiences are up over a year ago. As a matter of fact they're up 7% on the basis of "homes delivered," which augurs well for sponsor allegiances for the '64-'65 season.

In terms of audience delivered by the average prime time network program, the increase is 4% (for the fourth quarter of '63 the three-network average rating hit 18.4 compared with a 17.7 for the fourth quarter of '62). But the more meaningful boost (on homes delivered) stems from the 9,440,000 per average network program in contrast with the 8,810,000 homes delivered for the fourth quarter of '62.

Burial Boys Berate 'Kildare' In Equal Time Demand to FCC

Washington, Jan. 14.

The word from the funeral directors to Dr. Kildare is "We'll bury you."

Filing at petition at FCC demanding equal time to "The Exploiters" seg about the burial industry on the Kildare show was the Los Angeles County Funeral Directors Assn.

Aside from the morbid angle, the funeral directors' request presents a policy question for the Commission. The group is demanding time under the "Fairness Doctrine" which up to now has only applied to news and editorial programming.

The funeral directors are specifically demanding time on KNBC-TV, Los Angeles which aired the show Oct. 31.

The burial boys said the Kildare seg on their number, "presented a slanderous and distorted view of funeral directors and the funeral profession."

"The program," they continued, "was intended to and did in fact portray funeral directors as ruthless, cunning, greedy, cut-throat, fraudulent, vulturous, deceitful, overbearing hucksters of grief whose principal objective is to capitalize upon the sadness, sorrow, vulnerability and bereavement of a decedent's family."

The association charged NBC and KNBC have refused to furnish a copy of the "Exploiters" script.

Pointing to the current flap about the funeral industry, sparked mainly by Jessica Mitford's book "The American Way of Death," the group said the issue was one of current public importance.

FCC last week ducked the question of whether dramatic shows come under the fairness doctrine. The issue was raised by CBS in reply to charges by a lawyer's group that its "Smash Up" program was instigated by the insurance industry.

Without touching on the fairness doctrine, FCC said there was no evidence to support the lawyers' contention.

SIG MICKELSON'S GOP CONVENTION ROLE

Washington, Jan. 14.

The Republican National Committee signed on Sig Michelson, Time-Life Broadcasting veep, as Executive Program director for the party's national convention.

Mickelson will be in charge of program presentation at the convention which opens in San Francisco July 13, GOP National Chairman William Miller said.

Mickelson will be on leave of absence from Time-Life where he handles overseas broadcast interests.

His past political convention experience includes chairmanship of the three-web executive committee which negotiated pool arrangements for both party meets in 1952.

During his tenure as CBS News President Michelson also acted as the network spokesman during the 1956 and 1960 conventions.

Jimmy Dean OK, 'McPheeters' Out In ABC-TV Shuffle

A last-minute reprieve for the Jimmy Dean show, after the network had bought "Empire" as a one-hour replacement, has cued a shift in programming and time placements. Now, "Empire" will be going in Sundays from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. starting in April as a replacement for "The Travels of Jaimie McPheeters."

The Dean variety series, which was renewed through the summer with the hope that the web could yet develop a durable personality out of the show's star, is being shifted from 9 to 9.30 p.m. on Thursday nights. "Ensign O'Toole," the other ex-NBC show which ABC bought along with "Empire," will be slotted at 9 p.m., thus adding the half-hour needed to fill in for the departing Edie Adams-Sid Caesar show at 10 p.m.

Original plans to slot old repeats of "77 Sunset Strip" in the place of "Channing" on Wednesday nights at 10 p.m. and the new show, "Destry," for the current "77 Sunset Strip" series at Fridays at 7:30 p.m. still stand. The Friday night fights will continue through the remainder of the current season before being knocked off next fall.

CBS, 'Perry Mason' Dicker on Renewal

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

CBS-TV is in negotiations with producers of its "Perry Mason" series and supporting players anent a renewal of their services for next season. Network has already signed Raymond Burr, who limns "Mason," for next year.

Series has not actually been renewed for next season, but the current activities indicate the network anticipates it will be back.

Negotiations are on now for renewals of producers Arthur Marks and Art Seid; associate producer Jackson Gillis; and Barbara Hale, William Hopper, William Talman, Ray Collins and Wesley Lau, regulars in the series which stars Burr.

Felton Puzzled

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Puzzlement over the L.A. Funeral Directors Assn.'s indignant reaction to the "Dr. Kildare" segment, "The Exploiters," was expressed by Norman Felton, exec producer of the MGM-TV series. Felton asserted "we made a point

(Continued on page 38)

Canada Pro Grid Gets U.S. Brush

Canadian Pro Football League execs were in New York last week pitching their schedule to the U.S. television webs, but there were no takers. ABC-TV, which has been carrying the championship Grey Cup games, would like to continue with this single event, but not as part of any extended package. NBC also turned down the Canadian games while CBS, which once carried the schedule several years ago is also reportedly not interested.

Meantime, another top U.S. football event, the Orange Bowl out of Miami Beach, comes up for grabs this year. ABC-TV has been carrying this game and the surrounding hoopla for the past couple of years.

The choicest sports bundle on tv, the National Football League schedule, goes on the auction block Jan. 22-23 when a three-network competition is expected to generate some fancy figures for the tv rights.

Everybody Makes Like James Bond

Debonair, woman-chasing, fortune-tempting espionage agents, each with a striking resemblance to Ian Fleming's novelistic character of James Bond, will be dashing all over the tv screen next season. Each of the three networks has one dramatic series with leading characters who will be cut from the Bond pattern.

ABC-TV has "McCaffrey," starring Darren McGavin in a series out of Bing Crosby Productions. The CBS-TV entry is "John Stryker," starring Richard Egan in a show being produced by United Artists. And NBC-TV has "Solo," an MGM-TV series starring Robert Vaughn. (NBC's current "Espionage" entry appears doomed).

This group of shows represents the only hint of a new programming cycle on tv next season while the psychiatrists, doctors, lawyers, etc., keep rolling along.

NIELSEN TOTES & TV TOUTS

NFL Bid... Mebbe $19,000,000

Most immediate interest in the tv trade, outside of the Surgeon General-sparked cigaret controversy, is focussed on which of the three networks will be high bidder for NFL football tv rights for 1964 and '65. What adds a special zest is the determination of ABC to enter what had been thought a two-network contest.

Insiders believe the winning network will have to commit a record $19,000,000 to acquire the most coveted sports rights in tv. NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle has called for bids on Jan. 22. The highest-bidding web is obliged, by terms laid down by NFL, to offer first sponsorship opportunity to present incumbents, i.e., Ford and Philip Morris, plus all regional advertisers such as American Oil, Marathon Oil, Standard Oil Calif., Standard Oil Ohio, Sun Oil, P. Ballantine & Sons, Carling Brewing, Falstaff Brewing, Hamm Brewing, National Brewing and J. A. Folger Co.

Per minute commercial cost, on new hiked price basis, is expected to approximate $57,000 for national coverage. While this would be a new top price for daytime tv, the cost-per-thousand would still run less than $6, since Nielsen scores the NFL games on CBS at 10,000,000 homes per average minute.

First call to incumbents traces to the perpetual option granted present advertisers (so long as they renew) by the NFL when tv sponsorships commenced several years ago. Any advertiser or advertisers other than those protected which might choose to "backstop" a particular web in advance of bid, must reckon with the fact that the incumbents get first crack at the offered price.

Wage Hikes, Better Working Pattern In New SAG-AFTRA Blurb Pact

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Wage hikes and improved working conditions for performers are highlights of the agreement on a new teleblurb pact between Screen Actors Guild—AFTRA and national sponsors, ad agencies and producers, pact covering rates and conditions for actors, singers, announcers and stuntmen in film and tape vidblurbs.

Lengthy negotiations were held in N.Y. between the two actor groups and joint committee of Assn. of National Advertisers and the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies. Terms were revealed yesterday (Mon.) by SAG prexy Dana Andrews and national exec secretary John L. Dales.

Spot usage of commercials rates were hiked substantially; the per play formula for class A program blurbs was improved; session fees were upped from $95 to $105 for on-camera players and from $70 to $80 for off-camera thesps; other gains were made in the rate structure; and improvements were made in terms and conditions for the actors' protection, including tightening of restrictions governing a sponsor's right to acquire and maintain exclusive rights to a commercial performer's services, and the requirement for payment for many uses of still photos in blurbs, for which the player previously got nothing.

Other improvements provide double time for Saturday work; coverage of testimonial and hidden-camera blurbs, and a clause against discrimination in hiring of performers because of race, creed, color or religion, latter a clause similar to the one SAG negotiated

(Continued on page 42)

I'd Walk a Miles

NBC-TV managed to sell a third of its hour special on the government report on the link between cancer and cig smoking Saturday from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Miles Labs, via Wade Advertising agency, picked up two minutes at the bargain rate of $20,000 a minute—but then no cig firms were bidding.

NBC Pins Hopes On Daniel Boone In Axing Richard

NBC-TV programming execs are betting that Daniel Boone will be a bigger boon to the web's rating picture than Richard Boone.

Richard Boone's anthology drama series will be axed after 26 episodes this season, but Daniel Boone is a likely entry for next season. NBC programming veepee Mort Werner reportedly signed a deal late last week with 20th Fox for an hour series on the American pioneer hero. The network and film company no doubt figure there's a good chance to cash in on a coonskin-capped lead in the manner of Walt Disney's Davey Crocket of several seasons back. It's expected the show will get a 7:30 p.m. slot to capture the kid aud.

Fox has several pilot deals with ABC-TV going for the coming season. This is the first with NBC, which currently carries the film company's feature pix as part of the Saturday and Monday movies.

Donald O'Connor Can't Find a Web

Colgate appears to be having some trouble in trying to place its "Donald O'Connor Show" for next season. The half hour situation comedy series produced by Desilu was purchased direct by Colgate (as it did last season with "Harry's Girls," which NBC subsequently took). This time out, however, NBC has turned down the O'Connor series, as has CBS.

Curently there are dickers on with ABC, but there's no decision as yet.

NCAA Fore & Aft. Coin

NBC-TV has sold the NCAA football spread all the way now with Union Carbide picking up the $700,000 tab for the pregame, 15-minute show.

Before the New Year, Brown & Williamson via Ted Bates agency pacted for the post-game wrapup, and Texaco, Gillette and Chrysler are the three bankrollers for the schedule of televised games.

Lotsa Sponsor Support On 'East Side Wide Side' Despite Its Iffy Status

"East Side, West Side," which along with other CBS-TV series is up for decision on a '64-'65 return engagement, could hardly be doing better in sponsor support.

The George C. Scott starrer is about 90% sold out in the first and second quarter of '64. When Whitehall bowed out as alternate week half-hour sponsor, web filled the Whitehall slate with participation sponsors. Philip Morris continues as an alternate week sponsor.

Coming in with participations in the first and second quarters are Bristol Myers, Block Drug, Clairol, Max Factor, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Sherwin-Williams, DuPont and Sun Oil.

NETWORK DERBY AND AD STAKES

By GEORGE ROSEN

The Madison Ave. tv turf fraternities—with their eyes on the Nielson totes and their ears bent to the networks' touts—have already started (much earlier than in previous years) to shell out what is expected to be a record budget for 1964-65. And with the rustle of the advertisers' long green, there's an excitement and electricity similar to that which builds up in front of the parimutuel windows before the first race at the "Big A."

Already a long line of anxious bluechip advertisers is forming in front of some 50 Nielsen-marked "win" counters, one for each network prime time half-hour that commands its time period. But the gathering crowd is moving most slowly because "Colonel" Jim Aubrey, boss of the CBS Stables, has not yet announced which of his geldings and fillies will be entered in what race. But the Nielsen-toted and posted-odds (see box)—29 for CBS, 15 for NBC and six for ABC — have already attracted over $100,000,000 to the networks' '64-'65 tills.

Almost $90,000,000 of that sum has been plunked down on CBS by Benton & Bowles' ace tv wager, Lee Rich, on behalf of General Foods, Proctor & Gamble and Philip Morris. While otner agencies—such as Young & Rubicam for General Foods, Compton for P & G and Leo Burnett for Philip Morris — are also involved, it's Rich who has been sparking the transactions which has put Aubrey & Co. way out in front in the early phase of the networks' '64-'65 sweepstakes.

But unlike last year, when CBS took all the early season sales honors, NBC is likewise off to a fast start, at least on two nights (Friday and Sunday) when it leads in the National Nielsens (CBS is ahead in the other five). Thus Jack Benny is slotted and SRO Fridays at 9:30 (immediately following Bob Hope) with co-sponsors State Farm Insurance and Miles Labs (latter new to the Benny show) aboard. On Sunday night, NBC has received an order for its new hour-long Four Star entry, "The Rogues," starring Charles Boyer and David Niven, in the 10 p.m. slot immediately following "Bonanza," now tied with "Beverly Hillbillies" as the fastest program race horse on the networks' turf.

"The Rogues" order, for an alternate half-hour, was placed by Leonard Lavin, owner and bossman of Alberto-Culver who acknowledged mastery in placing network program bets has made Alberto the No. 1 "growth" company in the entire package goods industry. Revealing facet of the Alberto-Culver buy lies in its placement even before sponsor had opportunity to screen the program's pilot.

Nielsen Stud Book

All of which attests to the fact that this season, more than ever, the shrewd buyers are following the Nielsen form sheets and are relying on the Nielsen speed of the lead-in, the track record of

(Continued on page 38)

AFTRA, Networks Reach Informal Agreement on New 3-Year Contract; Major Gain for Union on Int'l TV

American Federation of Television & Radio Artists and the three networks have reached an informal agreement on a new three-year pact after a long and complex series of negotiations. AFTRA ratification of the new deal now must be sealed by the national boards in New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles.

Pact gives full coverage to AFTRA members in shows sold in international television. This has been a key point for the union in light of the vast growth of the world tv market, by syndication and by the anticipated early advent of regular telecasting by communications satellites.

While the union made concessions to encourage local and radio programming, the pact involves substantial gains for dancers and singers. A particularly strong salary gain was reportedly made in behalf of the network news staffers.

In a move to boost employment for performers on radio, AFTRA is allowing free use of replays of newly produced material beyond the fourth use. In tv, the union also agreed to provisions encouraging the production of shows for limited multiple use by television chains and network owned and operated stations.

Deal with the networks is one of three deals which is AFTRA has been in the process of wrapping up since early fall. Another agreement, still to be formalized, had previously been reached with the webs and advertising agencies over a commercial tv code. The third area covers talent employed by network owned stations in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. These talks are still in progress on a local level.

AFTRA, O&O's Clash

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

"Strong" possibility of a national strike on behalf of staff radio announcers at CBS, NBC and ABC o&o stations exists, despite a basic agreement on national codes, according to AFTRA exec secretary of the L.A. local, Claude McCue. He stated that there could be no approval of the new national agreements until local negotiations were concluded satisfactorily. AFTRA has rejected the "final" offer of the nets and announcers have voted unanimously to request national AFTRA board for necessary strike action.

Ultimatum comes on eve of national board meet of AFTRA tonight (Tues.) at Continental Hotel here. Counter-proposal to break deadlock on wages and demands for fee increases for announcers will be submitted this morning (14) at which McCue termed a "critical" negotiation meeting at CBS.

NBC's $20,000,000 Pledge on Benny, Danny, NCAA Grid

With the new year barely underway, NBC-TV is already racking up sales for the '64-'65 season—and that's with only a handful of shows so far firm in the next-season slate.

That comedy pair moving over from CBS-TV, Jack Benny and Danny Thomas, are both already sellouts. Miles Labs has pacted for co-sponsorship of Benny with State Farm Mutual car insurance, which has been a bankroller on CBS for the last four seasons. Total tab for 52 weeks is a reported $7,000,000.

Danny Thomas will do five hour specials in tint for NBC next season, and Timex and Consolidated Cigar have pacted for all five shows at a total cost of $2,700,000.

Web has also sold an alternate-week half hour of the Four Star production, "The Rogues," to Alberto Culver. Show has a firm 10 to 11 p.m. Sunday night berth for next season. Network is holding out for three more bankrollers to come in on the same deal.

These sales, along with NCAA football, represent more than $20,000,000 already in the new-season, new-show cash register.

Nighttime sales for the second and third quarters of this year include a $2,000,000 scatter-plan order of 10 shows from Carter Products and $1,500,000 from Helene Curtis, also covering 10 shows.

Murrow's USIA Exit Imminent

Washington, Jan. 14.

Edward R. Murrow's doctor, not pleased with his degree of recovery from his recent lung cancer operation, has told the former CBS newsman he must resign his Government post and rest, it was reliably learned today (Tues.).

As a result, Murrow is expected to submit his resignation soon. President Johnson, who had wanted Murrow to remain as director of the U. S. Information Agency (and had called him to the White House last week to urge him to do so if his health permitted), will accept the resignation reluctantly.

The President is understood not to have decided on a successor yet.

Murrow has been working half-days at his USIA desk. His doctor, however, recently called a halt to that. Murrow's USIA associates continue to issue hopeful comments to the press that Murrow will be back on the job fulltime in February. Such optimism doesn't square with the medical facts, reliable informants insist.

Murrow's doctor is said to feel that complete rest can make a difference in his recovery.

That TV Smoke Screen

Any curtailment of time periods in which cigaret commercials are scheduled—to cut down on early evening tv influence affecting youths such as was recently effected in England, which bans all tv cigaret commercials prior to 9 p.m.—would wreck havoc with U.S. network prime time half hours, 7:30 to 11 p.m.

Throughout the entire week in any given half-hour at least one network now telecasts a cigaret-sponsored program, except for three of the 49 prime half-hours. (These are Sunday 7:30 to 8 p.m. and Sunday 10 to 11 p.m.). Of the 142 network evening hours from 7:30 to 11 p.m. (on all three webs combined) 94 (or approximately two-thirds of the prime time periods) carry programs of which a cigaret is a co-sponsor. Liggett & Myers programs straddle 19 different prime time half-hours; American Tobacco shows are also in 19 half-hours; R. J. Reynolds is in 18 while Brown & Williamson and Philip Morris are in 14 each. P. Lorillard is in 10.

The tv smoke screen envelopes almost 100% of its prime network schedule.

DUBIOUS STATUS FOR 'ROOTS OF FREEDOM'

Fate of CBS-TV's "Roots of Freedom" series will hinge on the forthcoming outing examining Roman law and its influence on western civilization.

Small unit working with producer Perry Wolff has been disbanded, pending a decision after the show on Rome which will be telecast later this season. First two episodes in the series exploring Greek civilization and the Greek theatre were considered not too exciting in terms of the ambitious nature of the series.

TV Problem for Olympic Games: Sneaking 'On the Scene' Com'ls

By HAZEL GUILD

Frankfurt, Jan. 14.

Although the stringent rules governing the Internationl Olympic Games strictly regulate "no commercials," plenty of hep radio, television and film people have already thought of angles to capitalize on the upcoming winter sports.

West Germany's Second Television Network has announced that as of Jan. 27, it will produce exclusive 30-minute television programs direct from Innsbruck, Austria.

These shows will wisely be broadcast during the station's heavy listening time, from 7 to 7:30 p.m., which is also the time during which spot commericals are aired. So the station is now accepting bids from advertisers and agencies who would like their spots to be shown during this prime time.

The First Television Net is giving both afternoon and nightly coverage of Europe's top winter sports event, and it is likely that some of the evening programs will likewise coincide with the station's commercial programs which fall in the time area between 6 and 7:30 p.m., giving the sponsors another break.

Not only that, but West Germany's Intertel television production firm has announced that it will cover the Olympic Games in Austria for American television with four mobile units, eight cameras and four Ampex units.

It's offering to rent its mobile units, to American or Europcan advertisers or to the ad agencies, at the rate of about $2,500 a day, during which time it will shoot planned commercials—at the rate of 10 or 12 daily — against the "authentic background of the Olympic games."

Slickest trick of all, though, and the one which is meeting with the most violent objections from the radio and television and film people all over Europe, has just been pulled by a firm called the Axamer Luzum Corp. of Austria.

The organization is offering major name-brand manufacturers the chance to capitalize by "showing your trademarked articles to hundreds of thousands of visitors to the winter sports, plus to the Eurovision audience and via the documentaries and newsreels that will be made of the sporting event and will be viewed throughout the world." and it's strictly legal via an ingenious loophole found in the Olympic Games regulations.

The Axamer Luzum Corp. has the exclusive right, from the Olympic committee, to set up 15 buffet cars, plus the quick snack stands and rest facilities for the Olympic sports participants, for the officials and thousands of visitors. And it is simply planning to insert placards and signboards in its restaurants—feeling sure that the roving television and film cameras will catch the signs as they train on the world's top athletes and visitors.

The television stations that are planning to run simultaneous coverage of the event across Europe via their Eurovision link are objecting to this "free commercial" cut into the commercial time that their local members will be selling. But it's a sure bet that some of the display signs will be shown by the television and newsreel cameras covering the event.

CBS-TV: 96.5% SRO

CBS-TV, whose network billings in '63 reached record proportions, finds itself in the first quarter of '64 running in the prime time sold out level of 96.5%.

That 96.5% SRO for prime evening time is the web's current position, with some participation biz open for March. Next month, marking the post-holiday period, web has a 98% sold out position in prime time.

NAB Prez on '63: 'Most Successful Year in History'

Washington, Jan. 14.

NAB prez Le Roy Collins called 1963 "the most successful and productive year in NAB history.

Citing six highlights to the upbeat year, Collins did, however, warn of three areas needing improvements in 1964. He called for concentrated efforts in accelerating Code improvement, upgrading commercial practices and relations with advertisers and agencies and giving special attention to new trends and opportunities in radio programming.

High on Collins' acclaimed list for 1963 were:

Membership—"Radio and television substantially increased to new all-time highs."

Codes—"Assumed new signifigance as meaningful instruments of self-regulation for broadcast improvement and service to the public interest, with substantially increased numbers of subscribers."

FCC—"Thwarted efforts to adopt rule on commercial time."

Ratings—"Reliability assured under new threefold plan providing accelerated accreditation, auditing, methodological research."

State association—"Liason substantially improved."

Government relations—"Efforts and member support substantially enhanced on wide front with splendid record of achievement."

NBC Extends Pact On 'H'wood & The Stars'

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

David Wolper Productions has received a midseason renewal from NBC-TV for five more half-hours of his series, "Hollywood and the Stars," of which 15 have been aired.

Web's original pickup gives Wolper 31 first-runs for this season. Mel Stuart will produce-direct two of the upcoming stanzas, and others will be produced by Nicolas Noxon, Al Ramrus and Irwin Rosten. Jack Haley Jr. is series producer-director.

Thayer's ABC Radio Slot

John A. Thayer Jr. has taken over as national director of programming for ABC Radio. He moves up from the web's sales department.

Thayer succeeds Bill Rafael, who reportedly resigned over differences in handling the projected series of nightly one-hour radio dramatic shows.

Webs to Explain Cleanup Move On That 'Rating Mess'

Washington, Jan. 14.

Research chiefs of the three television networks will soon go before the Harris Investigations Subcommittee to describe their efforts in cleaning up the "ratings mess."

The decision to hold a closed-door session of the House subcommittee was made after a meeting between Rep. Oren Harris (D-Ark.) and members of NAB's Committee on Nationwide Television Audience Measurement.

Filling in Harris and subcommittee aides on web rating efforts were research toppers Hugh Beville, NBC, Julius Barnathan, ABC, Jay Eliasberg, CBS and Melvin Goldberg, NAB's Research v.p.

Harris was called away from the meet in mid-session and didn't comment on the presentation.

With the Investigations Subcommittee anxious to know if the industry is reforming ratings or whether the "mess" still requires Federal regulation, it was decided to let the members get a fill-in on the television web phase of the NAB ratings campaign.

A date wasn't set for the session but it will likely be held within the next two weeks.

FCC Sez No Collusion Involved in CBS-TV's 'Smash-Up' Program

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC said it could find no basis for charges that CBS-TV's "Smash-up" program was instigated by the insurance industry.

At the same time, the Commission sidestepped CBS' query and contention that dramatic programs do not come under the fairness doctrine.

FCC's finding was dispatched to Jacob Fuchsberg, prez of the National Assn. of Claimants and Compensation Attorneys Bar Assn. The group alleged that the Oct. 10 program was a product of web insurance collusion.

The lawyer's group plea for further action to "deter" other webs, producers and sponsors from similar type shows was brushed aside by FCC which said it had no authority to prohibit broadcasts of program material.

Commission reportedly couldn't decide on words to answer CBS' statement and therefore left it hanging without a reply.

British TV's Top 20

(TAM Ratings; Week Ending Dec. 29)

	Homes Viewing (000's)
Coronation Street (Mon.)—GRANADA	8559
Sunday Palladium—ATV	8040
No Hiding Place—AR	7781
Take Your Pick—AR	7262
Armchair Theatre—ABC	6484
Emergency-Ward 10 (Fri.)—ATV	6225
They Don't Make Summers Like They Used To—Ang: TV	6095
Thank Your Lucky Stars—ABC	6095
The Gold Rush (Film) —BBC	5706
Emergency-Ward 10 (Tues.)—ATV	5576
Christmas Night With the Stars—BBC	5447
World in Action—GRANADA	5447
The Avengers—ABC	5187
Beat City—AR	5058
Double Your Money—AR	5058
Professional Wrestling—ATV	5058
The Larkins—ATV	4928
Dickie Henderson Show—AR	4798
All Our Yesterdays—GRANADA	4679
Billy Smart's Circus—BBC	4668
High Temperature—BBC	4668
Lost Treasure of the Amazon (Film)—BBC	4668

MILTON BERLE SET FOR DEFENDERS' SEG

M ton Berle has been set to star in a "Defenders" episode, to be telecast later this season on CBS-TV.

Berle, under longterm contract with NBC-TV, has played straight dramatic roles before, notably a drama on the "Dick Powell Theatre." In the upcoming "Defenders," Berle portrays a bigtime comedian who is committed to an institution by his wife. Titled "Murder Minus One," it costars Jan Murray, portraying the comedian's friend, and Marsha Hunt, who has the role of Berle's wife. Script was penned by Roger Lewis. Stuart Rosenberg will direct.

TV-Radio Production Centres

IN NEW YORK . . .

TV producer-director Anton Leader in from London for MGM huddles on release of his "Children of the Damned" feature which he did overseas. Leader now resided in Britain.

Morrie Roizman, vet film producer and editor, has joined Time-Life Broadcast, reporting to Edgar P. Smith, chief of the creative programming activities for the group . . . Carol Teitel taping three successive shows for ABC's "Direction-'64" . . . Frank Marth completed starring role in a "The Defenders" segment due for February telecasting on CBS-TV . . . Edward Hanna named weekend editor and commentator on ABC Radio's "Flair Reports" . . . Boris Frank joins Triangle Program Sales as an account exec . . . Selveig Sletteland, former station relations director for Broadcasting Foundation of America, appointed acting exec director . . . Jerry Solomon named regional sales manager for ABC-TV and John Tiedemann succeeds Solomon as manager of sales planning . . . WNEW's Fred Robbins interviews Shirley Jones, Robert Horton, Eva Gabor, Matt Dennis and Audrey Hepburn on his "Assignment Hollywood" show this week . . . ABC-TV taping segments of its new "New Faces" series at The Roundtable, N.Y. George Schlatter is producing . . . ABC Radio prexy Bob Pauley has turned over 150 copies of the two-record album issued by web on its four-day coverage of the events surrounding assassination of Pres. John F. Kennedy . . . Eddie Carmel, billed as "The Tallest Man in the World," skied to coast over weekend for guest stints on Art Linkletter's "House Party" and the "Steve Allen Show." . . . A special preview reeling of "The Magilla Gorilla Show," weekly cartoon series starting tomorrow (Thurs.) on New York's WNEW-TV was staged yesterday (Tues.) for the children bedded at the Hospital For Joint Diseases in New York.

Condolences being sent to Jerry Urgo, manager of CBS Photo Operations, whose nine-year-old son, Gerard, died last week after long illness . . . Shirl Conway, star of "Nurses," to Salt Lake City on Friday (17) re three-day March of Dimes appearances . . . "Rawhide" episode, "Incident of the Iron Bull" named winner of Western Heritage Award at top western fictional tv program of '63 . . . Hickman Hill, 19-year-old grandson of silent cowboy star Tom Mix, makes acting debut on upcoming episode of "Gunsmoke." . . . Rod Serling back to Coast after four-day N.Y. visit . . . Allen Funt guests on Feb. 1 "Phil Silvers Show" episode, which also introduces in regular featured roles Elena Verdugo, Sandy Descher and Ronnie Dapo . . . Gene Jankowski, CBS Radio Network Sales, beaming at the arrival last week of a baby boy, Peter Francis . . . Bertrand M. Lanchner has joined the business affairs department of CBS-TV as director of contracts, sports, effective immediately. He replaces Martin Carmichael who has resigned to set up a company to handle all tv affairs of the Professional Golfers Assn. . . . Writer Saul Loeb did a routine for Alan King to use on "Garry Moore Show." . . . Charles Collingwood assigned as European correspondent for CBS News, headquartering in Paris . . . William J. McCarter, development officer for National Educational Television, named general manager of WETA-TV, etv station in Washington . . . Arthur Godfrey celebrates 30 year association with CBS Radio today (Wed.) . . . Gene Plotnik and David Martin named to promotion committee of Television Film Exhibit—1964.

NBC-TV "Today" show negotiating an Italy junket for spring . . . Two NBC emcees plotting pilots, Merv Griffin ("Word for Word" host) and Johnny Carson of "Tonight." Carson deal is with his producer Art Stack . . . Singer Joya Sherill tapped for appearance at National Press Club's annual dinner in Washington Jan. 18 . . . Actress Jackie Bertell, who did three recent episodes of the NBC soaper, "The Doctors," is 19-year-old daughter of agent Jack Bertell . . . WPIX pubrelations director Andy McCaffrey back at his desk after major surgery at Holy Name Hospital, Teaneck, N. J. . . . WOR-TV's Joe Franklin hosts Paula Prentiss, Tom Bosley and Maureen O'Sullivan on his "Memory Lane" this week . . . Theo Bikel takes a pediatrician role in upcoming CBS-TV "Nurses" stanza . . . Julius Monk brings his troup to NBC-TV's "Today" show for an appearance Tuesday (21) . . . George Vicas, NBC News' European production chief, in town for conferences . . . Janice Berger ankled her post with NBC Project 20 unit for domestic duties. Her husband, Sy Berger, is musician on "Tonight Show" . . . Hugh Downs flies to Jamaica for vacation from "Today and "Concentration" starting Monday (20) . . . NBC International board chairman George Graham sporting shoes made from ear of elephant he shot on recent safari in Kenya . . . Bob Clayton replaces Jim Lucas as number two man to Hugh Downs on "Concentration" . . . Mickey Rooney stars in "The Seven Little Foys" with Eddie Foy Jr. and Osmond Bros. on Bob Hope NBC-TV tint spec Jan. 24 . . . Lindsey Nelson, Chick Hearn, Jim McArthur and Ralph Kiner will sportscast Crosby golf clambake this weekend (18-19). Ted Nathanson will direct . . . Five NBC employes were honored at web's Twenty-Five Year Club luncheon last week at Waldorf. Twenty-five year men were exec veep Walter D. Scott, Robert Burholt and William Carson. Forty-year men cited were Harry McKeon and John Flynn . . . NBC News "The Kremlin" to be repeated for second time Jan. 26 . . . NBC presenting film copy of four-days coverage of JFK assassination to Library of Congress.

IN HOLLYWOOD . .

NBC is shipping out Arthur Wakelee to run the coast news department for a few months until a permanent choice is made. He replaces John Thompson, who leaves the web after 27 years in Chicago, Frisco and Hollywood. William McAndrew, news veepee for the network, has posted the order: "we won't settle for less than first." All ratings have KNXT (CBS) far out in front . . . Gary Waller, program head at KCOP, decided that viewers would like to see what the radio deejays look like so he's putting all the local favs on a 90-minute special . . . KTTV added five new staffers to beef up the local news coverage. Three are cameramen . . . Harry Koplan, veepee of Dale Robertson & Associates, and Bert Berman of Young & Rubicam are setting up meetings of the TV Academy to point up the participation of crafts and creative arts . . . Frank Cooper's son Jeff made him a first time grandad . . . NBC's Monitor taped birthday greetings from Eddie Cantor to George Burns, Jimmy Durante and Jack Benny. For Eddie it'll be his 73rd Jan. 31 . . . Pat Buttram tapped for his fourth guest shot with Ed Sullivan. Last week Buttram played his first serious role, a dirt farmer, on a Hitchcock tv chiller . . . Jean Bartel, ambassadress-at-large for the TV Academy, reports that Christmas cards from iron curtain countries were printed in English . . . Art Rush has network interest in a Cliff Arquette daylight stripper . . . Joe Pyne, late of KABC, is now taking phone calls at KLAC.

IN CHICAGO

WBBM-TV starts a monthly documentary series in the Wednesday "Chronicles" slot given up every fourth week by CBS-TV. It preems Jan. 29 with a Lee Phillip opus, "The Unwed Mother." With the new series, the station has created a documentary department separate from news and pubaffairs which will be headed by Harold Wallace. Station hired Paul Cahill from the U. of Illinois' public information office as its new pubaffairs director . . . Vince Garrity, who divides his time between politics and broadcasting, has been dubbed a director and viceprez of John Weigel's new station, WCIU. The UHF outlet's antenna has finally gone up and the test pattern ready for beaming . . . Jack Eigen's latenight interview stanza on WMAQ will originate two nights a week from the Porterhouse Lounge of the Sherman House, the rest of the time from the studio . . . WBKB claims credit for in-

(Continued on page 46)

BRITISH COM'L TV STATUS QUO

'63-'64 New Shows: Top & Bottom

(National Nielsens; 2d Dec. Report)

	TOP THREE
(Situation Comedy)	Petticoat Junction—CBS	29.8
(Drama)	Fugitive—ABC	22.1
(Variety)	Danny Kaye—CBS	24.6
	BOTTOM THREE
(Situation Comedy)	Harry's Girls—NBC	12.9
(Drama)	Espionage—NBC	9.2
(Variety)	Edie Adams—ABC	7.3

Ponti's $4,000,000 'Hercules' TV Budget, With 2 More Series Upcoming

Although he wasn't mentioned anywhere in last week's proclamation by Joseph E. Levine that he would be exec producer of a tv series to be made for ABC-TV, Italo film producer Carlo Ponti is still in on the deal. As originally reported here several weeks ago, Levine is planning three tv series, of which Ponti was to be coproducer.

Things have changed a little with the ABC deal in that Ponti doesn't get any billing. The series ABC bought is "Hercules," patterned after the character which launched Levine into the film biz in a big way. The series will be made in Ponti's Rome studio. Italo filmmaker will still be partnered in the project but not as coproducer. The "Hercules" series will be lensed in color, with the first 32 one-hour shows budgeted at around $4,000,000, delivery skedded for 1965 with production beginning this spring.

Plan is to lense the series in various locations around the world, with "international personalities" in the cast. No director or cast has been assigned as yet, however. Who will essay the title role hasn't been set yet either but it won't be Steve Reeves of initial "Hercules" fame.

In addition to "Hercules," Levine will make two other series. One will be based on the life of Casanova and the other on that of D'Artagnan. Ponti is also involved with these, originally having been coproducer. They will presumably also be made in the Italian's Rome studios but not until "Hercules" is underway or completed. More on at least one of these is expected shortly, a second tv deal being close at hand.

Besides these tv series, Embassy Pictures is offering at present a catalog of 48 features for tv showing, 30 in color. Levine says that it was the success of the film "Hercules" and "Hercules Unchained" in many tv markets that first gave him the idea of the new tv series. He had long considered production for tv as a strong possibility.

Feature films still remain the big item at Embassy, naturally, and the company has set 1964 production of at least 11 pictures with an aggregate budget estimated to be in excess of $40,000,000. Of this figure, one quarter has been allocated for the making of one feature—the

(Continued on page 42)

CTV's 100G For Olympics Rights

Toronto, Jan. 14.

With the indie CTV Television Network Ltd. beating the State-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp. to the draw in the trans-Canada webs, exclusive tv coverage of the 1964 Olympic games at Innsbruck, Austria, commences Jan. 29 and continues until Feb. 9. CTV, with its trans-Canada shutout to the CBC, has purchased the exclusive tv rights for Canadian distribution from the American Broadcasting Co., with ABC asking a flat $100,000 fee for the Canadian rights. This was a total at which CBC balked, leaving an open field for CTV. (Highlight is the hockey battle between the Canadians and the Russians).

Canadian sponsors have been

(Continued on page 44)

Glidden's TV Buy

Glidden Co. has bought a 12-week saturation campaign on NBC-TV's "Today," "Tonight" and "Sunday" shows, beginning the end of March.

William Storke, director of NBC particpating programs sales, says the buy marks the return of Glidden to web tv for the first time in several years. Blurbs on all three shows will be live, and the color facilities of "Tonight" will be used in special promotion of the company's Spred Satin paints. Agency is Meldrum & Fewsmith, Cleveland.

Yank Freezeout On British Top 20 For Year of 1963

London, Jan. 14.

Television Audience Measurement Ltd., ratings operation supported by both the commercial network and adevrtising agencies, has come up with top 20 programs for the year 1963—and, worth noting, there is not one American show listed.

Based on the highest rated segment of any one series, and not including the Party Political broadcasts which go out on both channels simultaneously, the list reads:

	million homes
Royal Variety Performance, ATV	10.44
Coronation Street (Mon.), Granada	9.17
Coronation Street (Wed.), Granada	9.15
Steptoe & Son, BBC	8.79
Dr. Finlay's Casebook, BBC	8.39
Drama '63, ATC	8.27
Miss World, BBC	8.25
They Sold A Million, A-R	8.24
Max Bygraves, ATV	8.22
Take Your Pick, A-R	8.03
Sunday Palladium, ATV	8.02
This Week, A-R	7.98
Armchair Theatre, ABC-TV	7.88
Labor Leader, BBC	7.80
No Hiding Place, A-R	7.77
Hancock, ATV	7.75
Here's Harry, BBC	7.74
Play Of The Week, various indies	7.64
The Old Man, Granada	7.60
Dickie Henderson show, A-R	7.59

Westinghouse Sets CBS Participation Deals

Westinghouse Electric Corp. signed for a major participation deal on CBS-TV.

Shows involved in the Westinghouse Electric roster include: "Walter Cronkite News," "CBS Mid-Day News," "CBS Saturday News," "Chronicle," "East Side, West Side," "Perry Mason," "Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "Nurses" and "Great Adventure." Westinghouse also inked for 260 minutes in the web's morning minute plan.

Also coming in the web's morning minute plan was Gold Seal Co., which signed for 360 minutes.

NEW APPLICANTS TURNED AWAY

By ROGER WATKINS

London, Jan. 14.

Britain's 14 commercial tv contractors are off the hook—and have been offered contracts by the Independent Television Authority to operate for the next three years. The eight new applicants who sought an "in" on the indie web have been rejected.

Making with the long-awaited news which has kept the indie stations on tenterhooks for the past few months, Lord Hill, the ITA chieftain, stated that while every application for a 1964-7 franchise received "the closest scrutiny" (and some showed a "fresh and attractive" approach to tv) in no case was the ITA persuaded that appointment of a new contractor would improve the commercial channel.

Tighter Controls

But while the existing contractors will continue for the next three years, modus operandi of the web is to be significantly changed. In the first place the Authority is to have tighter control of the stations. There will be, for instance, closer and earlier supervision of programming. Skeds will be drawn up by the indies in consultation with ITA reps and an ITA supervised program policy committee will be set up on which all commercial stations will be represented. This new committee will work parallel with the present Standing Consultative Committee which will continue to discuss all questions outside programming).

Duly, the Authority is to strengthen its program services division and is in the process of making new appointments.

In addition to the ITA's bigger and more direct say in the network's overall program policy, it has introduced a new networking system geared to give the smaller independent stations a fairer crack of the whip. Under a new system of payment for shows taken from the network, the local stations will pay for the adjudged "value" of a show in relation to the buying station's "ability to pay." Previously, the small indies paid an hourly network rate for network shows plus a percentage of their ad revenue for privilege of plugging into the network. This applied whether they took programs or not.

Net ITA system will ease this financial burden on the smaller operators who, though they will still rely on the network for their main supply of programs, will now be able to trade more freely amongst themselves paying only for what product they take.

ITA is also prepping to move into the area of program-audience research and is setting up a section to deal with this, (plus press relations and publications). Topper of this new information and research limb will be Sir Harold Evans, currently ex-Premier Harold Macmillan's PRO.

Also, the ITA is to appoint a large general advisory council comprising selected members of the public whose recommendations, Lord Hill avers, will be greatly heeded in a genuine attempt to get a closer feel of the public pulse.

To Screen Commercials

Authority is also planning to tighten its control of commercials and is intending to see every vid-plug before it is aired. The advertising advisory committee has been reconstituted, a new independent Chairman appointed, and public representation strengthened. A revision of the independent television code of advertising standards is now being considered by the Postmaster General, minister responsible for broadcasting.

In additional to the new internal workings of the web which will take effect in August, Lord Hill, taking a stronger line than did his predecessor, Sir Ivone Kirkpatrick, has engendered some structural and directional changes within certain contractors.

For instance, in the cases of Associated Television, ABC-TV, TWW and Southern-TV these will take

(Continued on page 44)

Britain's 14 Com'l TV Contractors, With New Lease on Life, Now Face Wide Variety of Financial Hazards

London, Jan. 15.

Revelation that the commercial web boys are still in business and are likely to remain that way for the next three years finds them, naturally, cockahoop. Certainly their period of "Am-I-in-the-race?" uncertainty has passed, (a term in which all contractors' insecurity grew because the Independent Television Authority chief, Lord Hill, stoutly refused to "rubber stamp" contracts). But the path before them is now littered with financial hazards.

Not least of these is the heavy levy on advertising revenue which will bite deep into the indies' coffers, starting in August. Already the stations are upping ad rates to counteract some of the fiscal blow. But big question mark is: will the advertisers stand for it?—especially if BBC's second channel, which bows in August, begins to siphon off some of the indies' audience and thus upping the cost-per-thousand.

True, the commercial web's current schedule is delivering ratings admen find hard to resist, but as any experienced agency knows, BBC-TV's new fighting mood has turned the tables once, and can likely do it again. Maybe more so with two vid channels, planned centrally.

Further, the spread of the paysee trial in a half dozen different areas throughout the U.K. starting this fall is also bound to have a detrimental effect on total tv audiences. It's conceivable, therefore, if the chips fall that way, the reappointed 14 could find themselves in the future with high cost commercial airtime accompanied by a depressed share of audiences.

A ratings drop would almost inevitably involve higher program budgets which are rising anyway and with considerations as establishment of a 625-line service with its multi-million dollar equipment and plant swaparound, or the introduction of color tv just around the corner, the fiscal burden to be carried by the indie vidstations is immense.

As Lord Hill says, "The days of great risk are over—so are the days of great profit."

Further ahead, the commercial stations have the prospect in the next three years of a second commercial network. Admittedly, the plan is to establish successful applicants on a firm seven-days-a-week basis as opposed to the current split week pattern which operates with major stations, but the hard fact is that come the second commercial outlet, two sources instead of one will be chasing the available tv ad coin.

The next few years will therefore separate the men from the boys in British commercial tv.

Lotsa Sahl Series

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

GAC is pitching three Mort Sahl teleseries to the tv webs, board chairman Larry Barnett having signed comic for representation. Sahl will star in "The Misfits," which he is writing with Robert Kaufman.

Others are a situation comedy, "Perfect Wife," and "Third Party" satirizing politics. Sahl is shopping the major lots for facilities to shoot his "Misfits" pilot.

Germany Bumps 'Candid Camera' As Offensive

Berlin, Jan. 14.

Chris Howland's tv series, "Vorsicht Kamera" (Attention, Camera), a German version of "Candid Camera" has been given notice by the executive committee of TV station Cologne. Dr. Erich Mende, Federal Vice Chancellor, had objected to this program's "permanent invasion into people's privacy."

Despite the fact that this series could reach a remarkable prominence in the country, there's no denying that more and more German televiewers have began disliking the show. While more and more people found that the show is indeed hurting people's intimacy, also critical reviews haven't been so good lately. It's understood that Chris Howland, a Britisher, collected 540,000 D-Marks ($135,000) for six programs of "Candid Camera."

Howland, incidentally, has made himself a popular name in several fields of the German showbiz. He reached popularity as a deejay, comedian, film actor, pop singer (under contract with Electrola) in addition to a video entertainer.

BILL HOBIN WON'T 'SAY IT WITH MUSIC'

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Bill Hobin, director of Judy Garland CBS-TV series, has dropped planned title of "Say It With Music" for a feature film he's projecting but will continue plans for production under his Mizpah banner.

He bypassed tab when Metro attorney Saul N. Rittenberg wrote a "cease-and-desist" letter to him, informing that Metro had a song of that title written by Irving Berlin and studio is planning a musical of this name.

Add CBS to ABC News: Stephen Fleischman

Continuing to beef up its staff at the expense of the other networks, ABC News has added Stephen Fleischman as producer of special news documentaries. Fleischman comes from CBS News & Public Affairs where he was producer-director. At ABC, he joins about a dozen other alumni of the CBS news department who have switched in the last two years.

Fleischman worked on shows for both "The Twentieth Century" and "CBS Reports," including "The Teenage Smoker," which won the American Cancer Society Award.

ACLU Protests Pete Seeger Ban

The American Civil Liberties Union has protested to ABC-TV over its refusal to employ Pete Seeger on its "Hootenanny" show unless the folksinger signs a sworn affidavit regarding his part or present affiliations with the Communist Party or its front organizations.

ACLP's exec director John de J. Pemberton Jr. wrote AB-PT president Leonard H. Goldenson that "political considerations can be justified only by showing that the position involved is directly related to national security . . . It is inconceivable that a performer could threaten national security by earning his living in full hearing and view of the public on radio and television . . . The net result is to deny the public talented entertainment and, in many cases, important information."

The continued use of political affidavits, the letter stated,

(Continued on page 44)

Why do more people watch The Huntley-Brinkley Report than any other television news program?

On the surface, there's no ready answer.

True, Chet Huntley is a careful, articulate reporter. He's unusually well-informed, a sound analyst of issues and events, and he brings a depth of experience to his job. But other networks have qualified newsmen, too.

True, David Brinkley has a perceptive eye and a searching mind. He also has an engaging writing style and delivery that bring each day's happenings into sharp focus. But other newsmen have some of these characteristics.

Huntley and Brinkley are only a partial answer.

Nor is the whole answer in the scope and resources of NBC News, the largest of all broadcast news organizations. After all, the other network companies have competent staffs, well-placed bureaus and reliable sources, too.

Yet, one fact is clear. By every available yardstick of national audience measurement, more people do watch the five-night-a-week Huntley-Brinkley report than any other network news program. What, then, is the reason for its consistent leadership?

We believe it to be a singular determination to report the news and its significance fully and fairly—not merely so that it be understood, but so that it cannot be *mis*understood.

It begins with broadcasting's most news-minded administration. It flows through all levels of the NBC Television Network and NBC News.

It characterizes the enterprising teams that support the on-the-air efforts of Huntley and Brinkley and such frequently contributing NBC correspondents as John Chancellor from Europe, Elie Abel from Washington, and James Robinson from Southeast Asia.

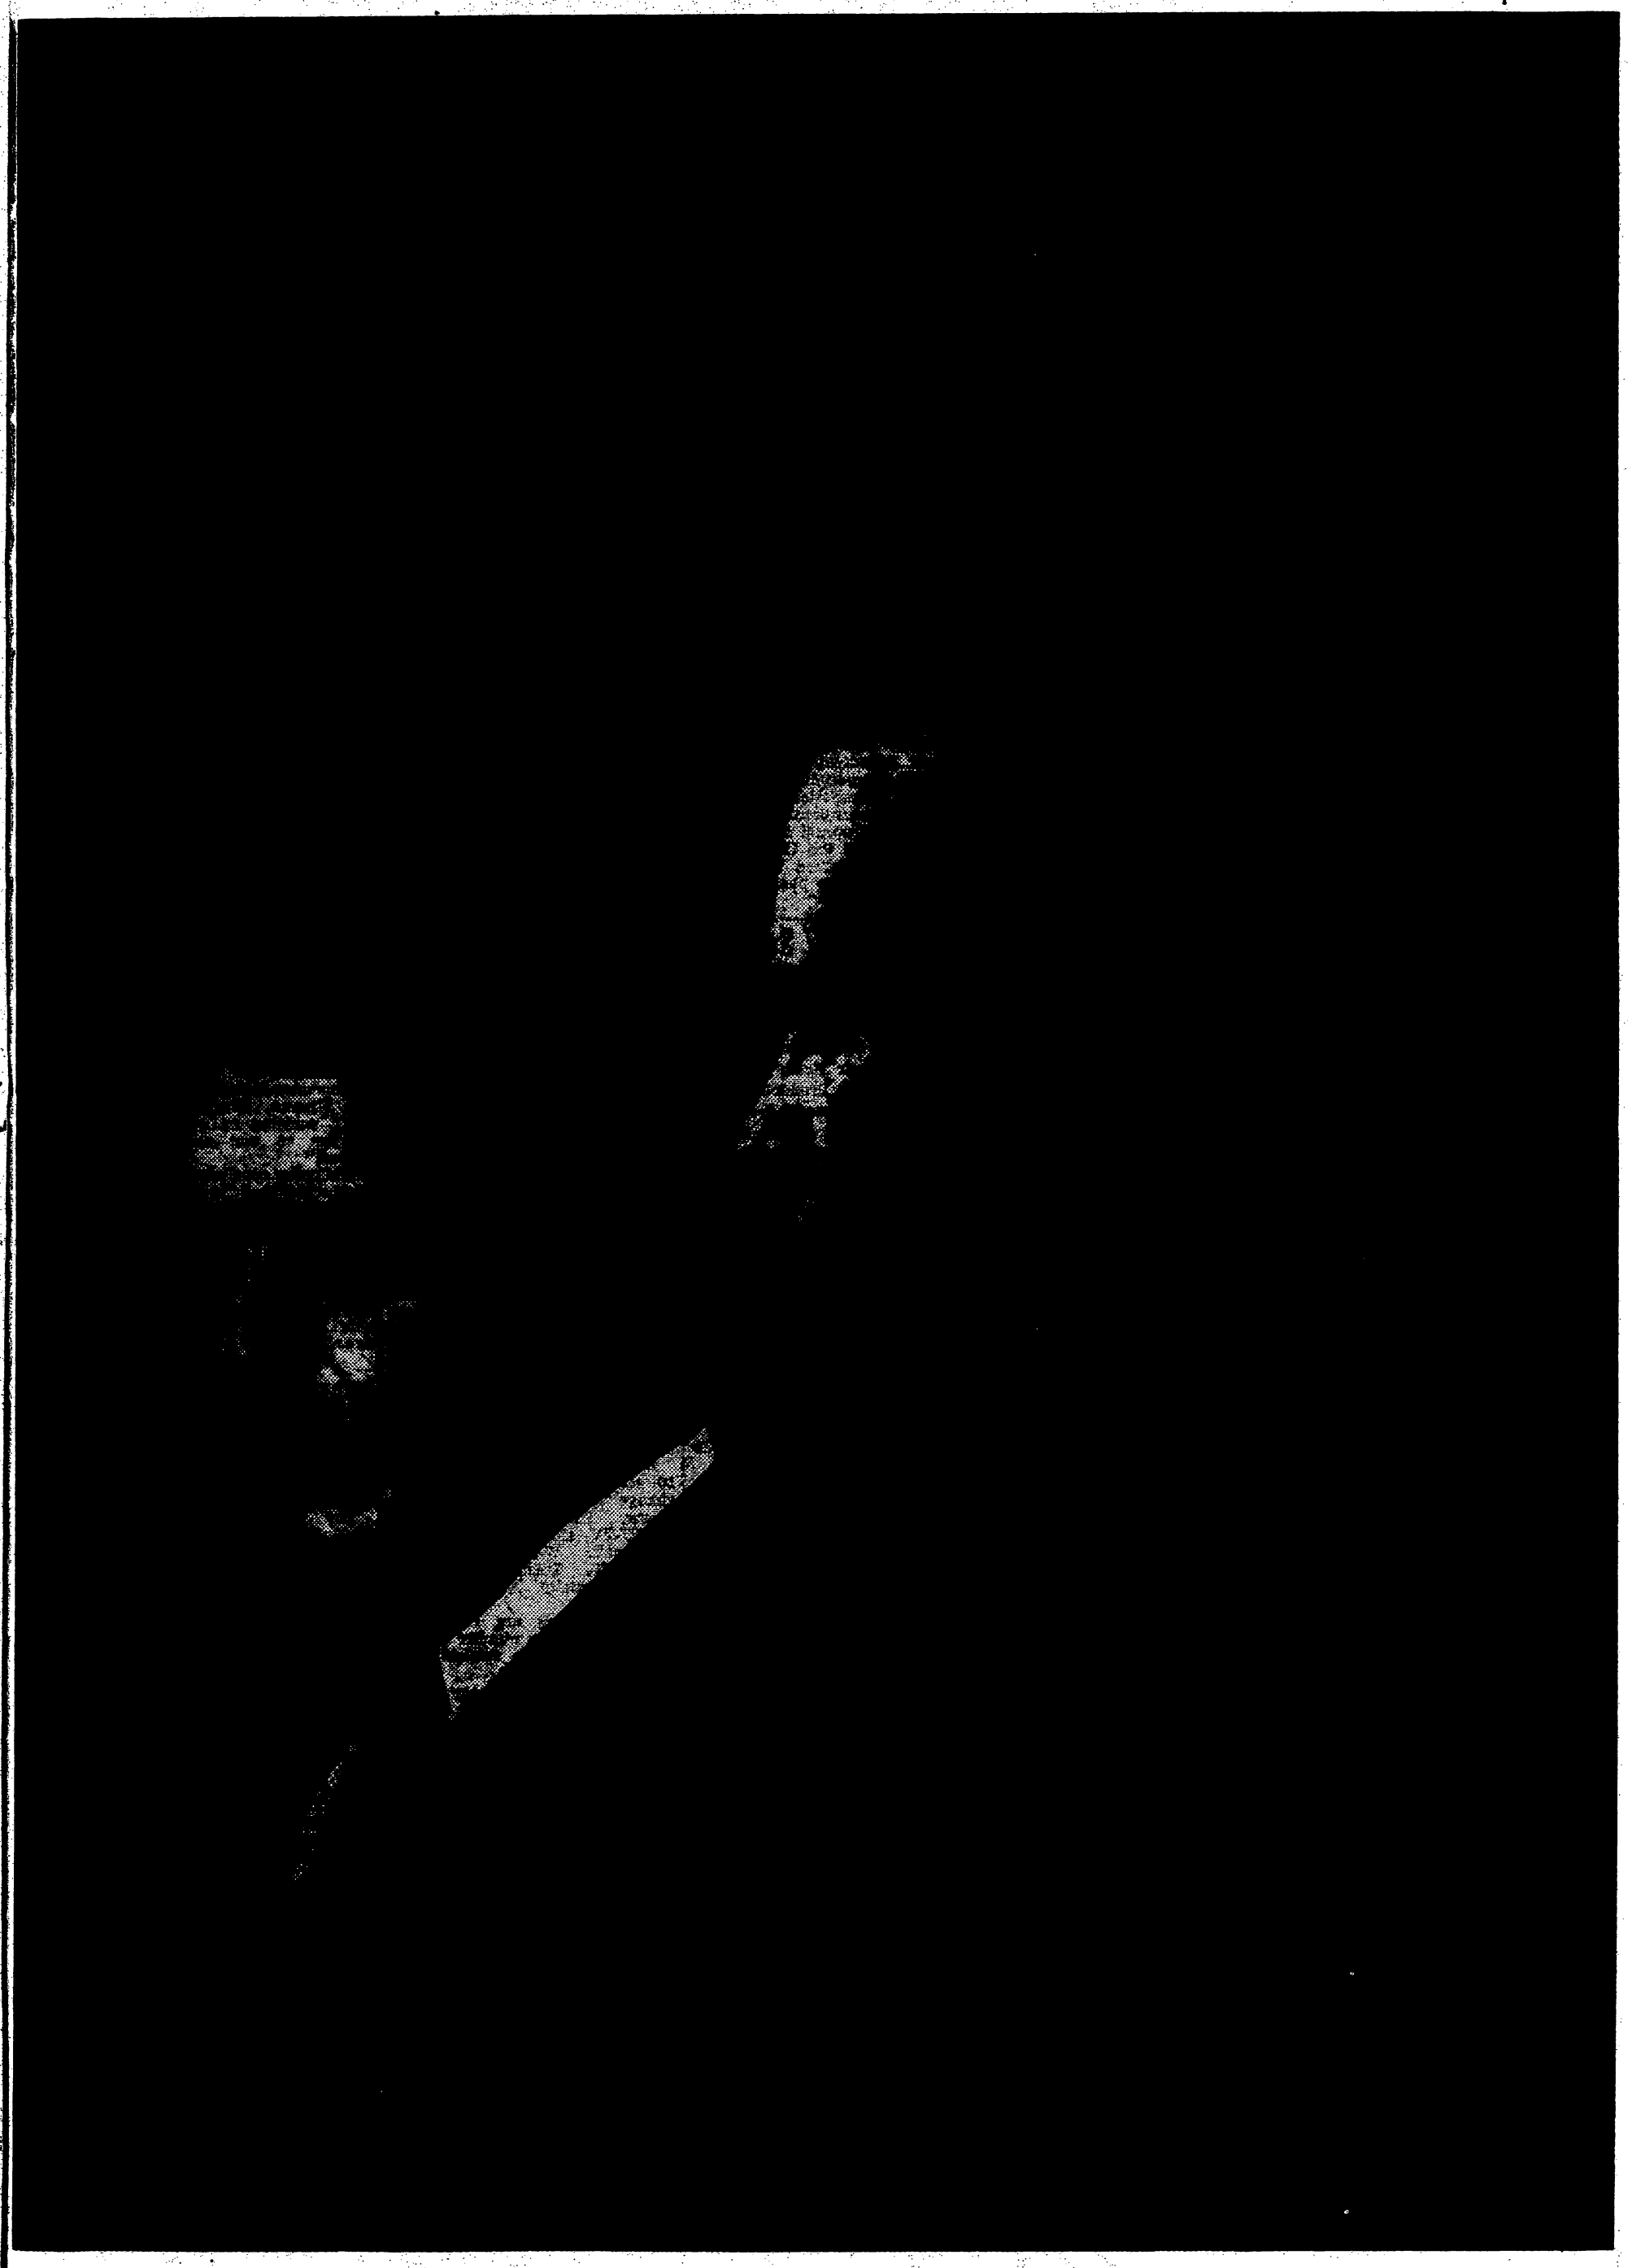
And this determination is reflected in performance on the Huntley-Brinkley Report, performance which conveys to the viewer more information, a greater depth of analysis, and a keener sense of the world around him. As one viewer put it, "I just feel that when I watch Huntley and Brinkley, I've got a better idea of what's going on."

Resolution and resources, purpose and people create a news program that uniquely serves the needs and interests of television viewers across the nation.

THE HUNTLEY-BRINKLEY REPORT

Executive Producer — Reuven Frank. Supported regularly by news reports from national NBC News bureaus in Chicago, Los Angeles, Miami, Washington; foreign bureaus in Beirut, Berlin, Bonn, Brussels, Hong Kong, London, Nairobi, New Delhi, Ottawa, Paris, Rio De Janeiro, Rome, Tokyo; and, when the occasion demands, by a staff of 800 around the world.

NBC



Milwaukee's Unique 90-Day Test; TV Homes Rigged for 'No Com'ls'

Milwaukee, Jan. 14.

A gimmick enabling tv stations to turn off the sets of certain viewers is the key to a unique test of the pulling power of televised commercials planned in the Milwaukee area this year.

The idea is to stack up the buying habits of those who presumably saw and heard a certain commercial with an identical skein of viewers who didn't get the message.

The Journal Co., which operates WTMJ-TV (channel 4) in Milwaukee, has obtained the okay of the FCC to conduct a 90-day field trial, with 40 homes rigged for the test hop.

After the shakedown, the test will be expanded to 1,500 homes for a three-year test, the company said. The gimmick for blanking out screens and audio of selected receivers was developed by engineers of WTMJ-TV. The device, installed on the home set, carries a signal transmitted on the audio frequency that blanks out the video and audio message but keeps the set "hot" so that there is no program interruption.

It works like this: A series of 30-second soft drink commercials would be blanked out on half of the sets. At the end of the test period, the buying habits of the guinea pig group—cross checked by diaries—would be stacked against the purchase of those exposed to the commercial.

Operating the tests will be the Milwaukee Advertising Laboratory. The test run will be conducted in consultation with Dwight Spencer & Associates, Chicago. Coded information will be sorted via IBM and reported monthly to project participants.

Robert K. Drew, veep of The Journal Co. and business manager of The Milwaukee Journal, said Milwaukee's other commercial stations (Hearst's WISN-TV, Storer's WITI-TV, and independent WUHF-TV) had been "invited to participate."

Running the test is the newly established Milwaukee Advertising Laboratory. Costs of the project are expected to be split by The Journal Co., some 10 national advertising agencies and their clients. Charles Clarke, Journal advertising manager, is coordinator of the project.

G. Maxwell Ule, former marketing and research expert for Kenyon & Eckhardt and former chairman of the technical committee of the Advertising Research Foundation, will be technical consultant.

Ule called the test "the first major measurement breakthrough in modern advertising history," which "comes to grips with the basic fundamentals of the business, not just side issues."

UA-TV Syndie Divisions Merge

United Artists Television, which for years held out with separate first-run and rerun sales divisions, has bowed to the inevitable. Company merged its telefilm sales division under Pierre Weis, appointing him v.p. and general manager of the merged syndication division.

Weis, who had been in charge of UA-TV's Economee rerun division, will continue to report to M. J. (Bud) Rifkin, exec v.p. in charge of sales. New sales push of the Rifkin-Weis helmed team is on the first-runner hourlong series "Human Jungle," sold to WOR-TV, N.Y.; WGN, Chicago; KCOP, Los Angeles; KHOV, Houston, among other key markets. Skein of 26 episodes, made in England and telecast there, which UA-TV co-financed, stars Herbert Lom in the role of a psychiatrist.

WABC Ups Geoghegan

Barrett Geoghegan, assistant sales manager for WABC Radio, has been promoted to sales manager of WABC-TV, N.Y. Richard L. Beesemyer continues as the station's general sales manager.

John S. Kirk, who exited the post, has been given the new job of sales specialist for the station.

JAY WARD SETTLES WRITERS DISPUTE

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Writers Guild of America West and Jay Ward Productions have resolved their impasse in negotiations for a vidpix pact, and WGAW withdrew its strike order, which was to have gone into effect last Saturday.

WGAW and Ward clashed over writers on his series, "Fractured Flickers," syndicated by Desilu. Guild charged the producer would not pay minimums, something Ward admitted, but the strike was avoided by the last-minute agreement.

Caution WLAC On Deejay Obscenity

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC warned the licensee of WLAC-AM, Nashville, it better keep an ear out for obscenities beamed on the station's signal.

Commission wrote WLAC Inc. questioning whether it was exercising proper control over the station, but said at this time it would take no further action.

Source of the FCC complaint and warning was WLAC disk jockey Hugh Jarrett who was discharged by the station for using "improper" language on his "Hugh Baby" program.

FCC chided the licensee for not monitoring the program and for not acting even after complaints were received about the disk jockey.

Station denied Jarrett used "coarse" language," "some of it susceptible of double meaning." It termed Jarrett's verbiage "improper and suggestive."

FCC reminded the licensee of its responsibility for all programs broadcast on its station and said it will keep the incident in mind at renewal time to see if WLAC Inc. is measuring up on this score.

OFFICIAL'S WW II, JFK TV SPECIALS

Official Film prexy Seymour Reed at a press conference last week announced further plans for the 90-minute special being prepared by the company on WWII, and also reported an hour special project now in the works on the life of the late President John F. Kennedy.

The WWII series, "The Last War," is an offshoot of Official's current archives half-hour series, "Battle Line," which has had a solid sales success this year in syndication. It had previously been stated that the 90-minute special would be made available to stations carrying "Battle Line." Plans, however, have been altered and the show will go up initially for network sale. Reed figures the show to be history rather than news documentary, thus making it okay at least for ABC and NBC under those web's rulings on outside telementary production.

The JFK hour, which will be produced for release after the fall presidential elections, will also go up for web sale initially.

Ron Cochran Finally Cracks Cleve. Market

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

ABC-TV news has finally cracked the area's market with WEWS scheduling the Ron Cochran 15-minute 6:30 p.m. news stanza. This gives the Cleveland the full competitive network news picture with Channel 3's NBC, and WJW-TV's CBS.

The new WEWS linep has Charles Day following Cochran with a five-minute local "Close Up"; Paul Wilcox, sports, and Ron Jaye doing the Atlantic weather as the last five-minute segment to 7 p.m. when the Scripps Howard station takes on a flim syndication while the other two outlets do half-hour local news.

Storer's New Veepees

Miami, Jan. 14.

Board of directors of Storer Broadcasting named five station managers as vice-president at its meeting here.

They are Kenneth L. Bagwell, WAGA-TV, Atlanta; Joseph T. Conway, WIBG, Philadelphia; Roger W. LeGrand, WITI-TV, Milwaukee; Keith T. McKenney, WSPD-TV, Toledo; and James P. Storer, WJW, Cleveland.

Nix AM Stations' Power Boost Bid

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC turned down a bid by the Community Broadcasters Assn. Inc. to boost power for local AM radio stations.

The group had petitioned for rulemaking to up the nighttime power of the Class IV stations which operate on local channels.

Community Broadcasters had requested the maximum power for the stations be raised from 250 w to 1 kw.

The Association also sought approval for daytimers operating with 500 w to 1 kw power to use the same strength at night.

FCC said the possibility of upping the nighttime power ceiling for local stations might be considered after the North American Regional Broadcasting Agreement has been renegotiated.

Another international question holding up consideration of the power boost proposal FCC said is renegotiation of the U.S.-Mexican Agreement in regard to possible easing of nighttime power restrictions.

Frementle's 127 Series In Global Distribution, Lots of 'Romper Rooms'

Fremantle International which handles "Romper Room" overseas for Bert Claster Productions, has started local editions of the kiddie show in Australia, Japan, Mexico, and Scotland over the past year.

Fremantle, in the course of the year, also took over the administration of the program in Canada where it is running in 15 markets.

Reporting on other actiyities, Fremantle stated that during '63, it placed a total of 5,750 hours of film programming in countries on six continents. Leading in new film sales were the first and second year of "Biography" which was placed in 13 countries. Company, which deals exclusively in the distribution of tv programs in the foreign market, has a total of 127 series in distribution.

Canada Ratings Bump Jerry Lester Show

Toronto, Jan. 14.

Because of trans-Canada ratings, the 60-minute "Jerry Lester Show" was dropped after 13 weeks by CTV Television Network but will resume its remaining 13 weeks next June-Aug. over the indie CTV network of 10 Canadian cities. Emanating from Toronto on Saturday nights in the 10-11 p.m. spot, the series was missing Jan. 11.

The hourlong weekly show, consisting of guestar appearances, unrehearsed ad libs and gag situations, ran into sponsorship snarls via Chrysler and Lever Bros. in Canada. Syndicated rights in the U.S. and Australia are not affected.

11% Net Sales Hike For CBS-TV Station Div.

CBS Television Stations Division registered an 11% net sales increase in '63, making it the most successful year in the division's history, according to Merle S. Jones, division prexy.

The division consists of the five CBS-TV o&o's, CBS Television National Sales, CBS Films, and a number of corporate international television investments.

The stations — WCBS-TV, N.Y.; KNXT, Los Angeles; WBBM-TV, Chicago; WCAU-TV, Philadelphia; KMOX-TV, St. Louis—reported a combined 12% net sales increase over '62.

LBJ Assures Stations on Tie-Line

Washington, Jan. 14.

President Johnson promised independent stations he will continue the Kennedy Administration policy of giving them a tie-line to the White House.

In a letter to WWDC radio prez Ben Strouse, the President wrote "you may be assured that the same arrangements permitting access to independent broadcasters that you had worked out during President Kennedy's administration will be carried out during my administration."

Strouse had written the President of the plan worked out with White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger in early 1961 for independents to cover the White House.

Under the arrangement either a Westinghouse station or WWDC has picked up Presidential news conferences and speechs and made them available to all independents. The stations can get the coverage by direct pickup from WWDC-FM or through patching into their loop.

Radio Press International and United Press audio are among the participants.

McCarthy Berates USIA for Holding Back Report on TV-Inspired Image

Television Program Export Assn. prexy John McCarthy rapped the United States Information Agency for waiting 13 months to release its research report which found the image of America enhanced by U.S. programs telecast abroad.

The report, released by the USIA earlier this month, based on research conducted in four Western European countries and Japan, was completed November, '62. McCarthy addressed his letter of protest to Edward R. Murrow, USIA director.

Said McCarthy: "The period between November, 1962 and the date of the release of this research report 13 months later was a particularly difficult one for those of us in the U.S. television program industry who were defending the industry against critical onslaughts concerning the image we were creating overseas by our programs.

"These onslaughts included not only our domestic critics, including the then-chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, Newton Minow, but also visitors to these shores such as Sir Hugh Carlton Greene, director general of BBC, warning us of the alleged dangers to our national image abroad."

McCarthy concluded in his letter to Murrow that "in fairness to the U.S. television program industry the results of the research ... should have been declassified and decontrolled within a very short period after the findings were available; and I hope that you will not feel that I am being unreasonable in asking why this was not done."

CHI WGN'S 4-MAN BUREAU FOR D.C.

Chicago, Jan. 14.

In a move to reduce the handicap of an independent station in the area of national news, WGN Inc. has set up a four person news bureau in Washington, D.C. to service its radio and tv stations in Chicago plus the WGN subsidiaries, KDAL-AM-TV, Duluth, Minn. The bureau opens officially tomorrow (Wed.).

Robert Foster, who had operated WGN's bureau in the state capital at Springfield, has been named the Washington bureau chief. Bert Martin, a WGN-TV newsreel cameraman, has been assigned to him, and there's to be a second reporter and a secretary. The WGN bureau will be located at 1737 DeSales St. in the capital.

Ohio's 10-Station Educ'l TV Goal

Columbus, Jan. 14.

When Bowling Green University's television station goes on the air in February, Ohio will have the greatest number of educational tv stations of any state. Florida and Ohio now have six each.

Ohio has plans for three more beyond the seven that will be operating soon, the phase one of development of a state ETV network. The Greater Cleveland ETV Association has active plans to operate the eighth—possibly by spring—and two more are in prospect for the Akron-Kent area and Dayton-Xenia.

Microwave would hook up the 10 stations, making possible exchange and interchange of programs. Existing stations are WOSU-TV, Columbus; WCET-TV, Cincinnati; WMUB-TV, Miami; WGTE-TV, Toledo; WOUB-TV, Ohio University, Athens; WGSF-TV, Newark.

ETV planners are considering hooking in with a number of commercial stations in smaller cities around the state.

NO MOONLIGHTING FOR TRENTON WAAT

Washington, Jan. 14.

An FCC Hearing Examiner turned aside the bid of daytimer WAAT-AM, Trenton, to go nighttime.

Examiner Isadore Honig said the area is already serviced at night by at least six stations in Trenton, Philadelphia and New York. The Examiner did give "serious consideration," however, to WAAT's contention that the area should have homegrown p.m. broadcasts.

Application of station, licensed by Delaware Valley Broadcasting Co. for a boost in daytime power from 250 w to 5 kw was approved.

KVOR Sale Okayed

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC's Broadcast Bureau okayed the sale of KVOR-AM-FM from KVOR Inc. to Wolverine Broadcasting Corp. Sale price was $243,000 and 90% of the stock of the Falcon Sports Network Inc.,

WNDT in Bid For Extra Channel (14)

The Educational Broadcasting Corp. (WNDT-TV), channel 13 in New York) has made application to the FCC for a rule change which would allow assignment of Channel 14 in the New York, New Jersey and Connecticut metro area, and at the same time asked the commission for permission to file an application for allocation of the channel to EBC.

At a press conference this week in EBC's New York headquarters, Samuel B. Gould, prexy of the station, said EBC for some time has seen a need for increasing its educational services to the tri-state area. He said additional service has been neglected because of the limited hours available to Channel 13, that the extra channel would be needed to present a balanced slate of educational, informational and cultural programming.

Said Gould, "Of all the educational needs within the tri-state area—and to which the new channel initially would be wholly devoted—is that of the great number of adults who, because if insufficient schooling and training, are unable to full a and responsible role in their communities."

He said the new facility would make it possible for EBC to offer courses that would make it possible for the under-educated to earn elementary and high school certificiates. Special attention also would go to the "acute problem" of the non-English speaking and non-naturalized residents of the area.

N.Y. BLURB SCENE—IT'S BLAH

My Sinn: Sweet Smell of Success

United Artists Television, whose various divisions encompass network programming, telefilms and features in syndication, forecasts a sales volume of between $43,000,000 and $48,000,000 in 1964. The forecast was made by UA-TV prexy John L. Sinn on the basis of the '63 volume of UA-TV's various divisions and expanded sales horizons seen for the divisions in '64.

Sinn said that a 29% increase in gross sales over the previous year for UA-TV's syndicated in first-run and off-network product was realized. On the network level, UA-TV had four and a half-hour of programs weekly for the '62-'63 season, compared to only one show the previous season.

UA-TV's '64 plans include seven network pilots resulting in five-and-a-half hours of potential new programming, new first-run syndication programming, new feature film packages and a continued greater sales penetration on the world market. The seven pilots being offered for the '64-'65 network programming season include five for CBS-TV and two for ABC-TV. UA-TV's current network shows, in which the company has a varying degree of interest, include: "The Patty Duke Show," "The Fugitive," "East Side, West Side," "New Phil Silvers Show," "Hollywood and the Stars," and "Outer Limits."

On the international scene, UA-TV is now supervising its own operation in Canada after years of representation by All-Canada, Ltd. This is represented by its own offices in Toronto, its own salesmen and administrative staff. Its own sales distribution overseas also has been organized, thus giving UA-TV a completely owned and operated international organization, a change from the previous sub-distributorships. This newly organized division, according to Sinn, has enjoyed its most successful year with a 100% increase in gross sales over that of 1962.

Chi Radio Plays Musical Chairs In Wholesale Shift of Personalities

Chicago, Jan. 14.

The new year has brought a raft of switches on the local radio scene.

Among the more significant ones were the McLendon Corp.'s appointment of Jack Fiedler as general manager of WYNR, succeeding Jay Schatz who took the newly-created post of resident manager of national sales for the McLendon group, basing here. Fiedler came up from San Antonio, where he had been veep-general manager of KTSA for the McLendons.

At WIND, news director Frank Goerg left Group W after seven years to take on a schedule of newscasts at the NBC o&o, WMAQ. He's being succeeded by Jerry Udwin, his former assistant who was transferred to KDKA, Pittsburgh, early last year. Parenthetically, Udwin's move to the Pittsburgh station was held up for a brief time until he could get married; now he's delaying his return to Chi until the baby is born.

The WMAQ spot opened up for Goerg with Lincoln Furber's transfer to the television side, where he'll take on the newscasting chores given up by Neil Boggs. As for Boggs, he becomes central correspondent for NBC News (as differentiated from Floyd Kalber's title of Chicago correspondent), a spot previously held by Sander Vanocur and John Chancellor but vacant since the latter's move to

(Continued on page 42)

KABC's $6,000,000 For Pix Backlog

Holywood, Jan. 14.

KABC-TV has bought a backlog of 229 post '48 Universal pix and 92 others, 20th-Fox and Warner Bros., from Seven Arts for $6,000,000. It represents the largest purchase by an ABC-owned-and-operated station, breaking down to around $18,700 per pic for unlimited runs from seven to 10 years.

KHJ-TV held option to buy Universal block but KABC formed deal when closing date lapsed. Reason given for massive buy of old pix, released from 1948 through 1956, is that "there is not sufficient number of syndicate or off-network shows of quality to schedule a station." CBS-TV bought the Seven Arts block for all its owned-and-operated stations except KNXT.

KABC-TV will show films on "The Saturday Night Movie" at 10:30 p.m., and on Sunday's Theatre Premiere" at 10 p.m. Saturday oldies will lead off Jan. 25 with "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter." in color.

RENAISSANCE OF RADIO: KHJ QUEST

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

KHJ Radio has acquired two half-hour dramatic programs, and is in negotiations for additional drama shows in what general manager Mal Fliesler deseribes as a "renaissance of radio."

Already bought from Charles Michelson are two half-hour series, "The New Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," and "The Shadow." "Holmes" tapes star John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson, were originally made in England several years ago. The 52 "Shadow" shows were originally aired about 25 years ago.

Fleisler confirmed that he is in negotiations for new product from North American Communications Alliance's NANA Radio division.

Station will also begin a five-min. daily sports show to be handled by Leo Durocher in two weeks.

Change of Heart, Japan To Release Features for TV

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Despite continued protests from exhibitors, the longpending resolution of sales of feature film libraries to tv stations appears imminent.

Aside from sale of features from shuttered Shintoho for payoff of debts, Japanese films have been withheld from tv in the past. But with steadily dwindling theatrical biz, at least partically caused by competition from tv, the five remaining Japan majors are set to reverse their position. Feeling among them is that tv has already made a saturation impact.

It has been basically decided among the majors that the films sold to tv would be more than seven years old for Daiei, Shichiku, Toei and Toho and more than five years old for newer Nikkatsu. Films sold, probably in packages of 50 to 100, would be between 100 and 500 per year for each company. Payments would be made two years after telecasting with the motion picture companies responsible for settlement of copyright and residual claims and the tv station bearing print costs.

BARGAIN HUNTING TAKES ITS TOLL

By BILL GREELEY

The last weeks of 1963 emphasized a narrowing of the New York commercial film production scene that has been going on during the last few years as Sarra and Sutherland, two major blurb houses, went under. To an independent commercial film producer, who for obvious reasons wants to remain anonymous, this narrowing process to a one, or, at best two, major blurb companies in the city is a "dangerous trend," one that has mainly been brought about by the advertiser and agency cut-the-buck practices and "deals"—"Their zeal to cut costs and organize production more efficiently has led to short sighted bargain-hunting," are his exact words. And, he contends, the dominant producers can't provide "the variety and excellence of many."

As an example of the "short-sighted hunting," the producer cites the case of the cosmetic firm which in a short span of years has grown via tv and the five top agencies which share its billings. With this firm and its agencies, the film production companies are invited to bid for the opportunity to produce commercials at cost.

A major soap company with a great variety of products has started a program to produce test commercials on a new basis. Company's five agencies—all among the top 10—are allowed $3,000 net for each film. Taking away agency commission, the cost of talent and a few other expenses, the film producer is left with $2,000, more or less, to make a one-minute blurb. It can't be done, says the producer, without the film company taking a loss.

Then there is the recently widely publicized move of J. Walter Thompson to give a "fair portion" of its $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 worth of blurb production to one company, MPO Videotronics. The deal reportedly includes a "test studio" setup.

In the case of the test deals, the producer says, "work done without profit imposes an obligation on the buyer. For doing such work at less than it should cost, production companies secure other work at least normally and perhaps better priced. Other production companies produce at a loss out of a desire to establish relations with the agencies. Some do the work non-union, probably without the agencies' knowledge, but still in violation of the agencies' and the producer's agreements.

"The fact is that almost every instance of work done below price involves a compromise of debasement of some kind. The agency foregoes complete objectivity in awarding subsequent jobs. Obviously, contracts given in payment of a favor are not awarded by competitive bid or at a competitive price. Nor is the work given to discharge the obligation always the work of the client who got the inexpensive commercial. Often another client pays the freight."

Besides the Thompson-MPO deal, the producer cites another soap company that has instructed its five agencies to restrict production to eight specified film hours. A deal exists with each of the producers to rebate a percentage of the client's combined volume on an escalating basis.

Says the producer, "guarantees of production tend to encourage monopoly far more than it would appear. Easier access to the agencies' film producers help build the guaranteed companies' sales to volumes greater than the guarantee. And in a highly cyclical business, the guarantee tends to ag-

(Continued on page 46)

Going Prices

World market currently offers a maximum realistic potential gross of $12,000 per half-hour outside the U.S.A., according to savvy estimates.

Foreign potential for an hour telefilm series episode is estimated at about $25,000.

ITC, UA-TV, CBS Films Take Lead In Bid to Reactivate First Runs; Dropoff in Off-Network Entries

New first-run syndication entries are coming from United Artists Television, Independent Television Corp., and CBS Films, as stations and distributors wrestle with a pinched product situation.

The first-runners include UA-TV's hourlong series, "The Human Jungle," described as a psychiatric show with an adventure accent, made in England, and already sold in 12 key U.S. markets.

ITC is keying the release of two new first-runners, one in the hour-long form and the other a half-hour series, to the April NAB convention.

CBS Films has inked two key regionals on a new first-runner in the adventure category. Identity of the series is being kept under wraps until other deals are inked, but skein, scheduled for telecasting next fall, represents the return of CBS Films to the first-run fold.

Warner Bros. Television is preparing to release a group of theatrical cartoons. Also on the WB syndication agenda is "77 Sunset Strip," which is being taken off the ABC-TV web after a healthy run.

What is bothering many group operators—Metromedia, Westinghouse, Corinthian, et al.—is the lack of bulk product coming down the syndication pike, product of commercial quality which can stand up to features in the rating race.

As group operators and distributors scan the possible off-network entries, there are comparative by few hits of yesteryear finding their way into syndication. The 26-weekers which had a one season network ride aren't considered good market-by-market material by and large. The dearth of good off-network product forseeable in the immediate future encompasses the hour series, as well as the half-hour series.

In the midst of this telefilm product situation, the price of new features continues to climb. Caught in the product squeeze, some group operators such as Metromedia, Triangle, and Group W (Westinghouse) are originating their own shows for their particular markets and for a sell-off via syndication in other markets as well.

Same product shortage triggered the ITC effort to co-finance first-run series, which could be produced in England for the American market. ITC expects to announce its initial coproduction shortly.

What bothers some station buyers looking ahead for product is the current dip in the network fortunes of such telefilmery syndication subsids as Four Star, Desilu

(Continued on page 42)

SUN. NITE SRO ON WABC TINT FEATURES

The SRO sign has gone up on WABC-TV's, N. Y., new series of Sunday night color features, which bowed Jan. 5. The film presentations were bought by Beech-Nut Baby Foods, Philip Morris, Northeast Airlines, Lipton Tea, Sucrets and Shell Oil.

The series bowed with 20th-Fox's "The Egyptian" and includes other color epics from 20th and American International Pictures. The features are part of the ABC-TV flagship's expansion of local color programming.

WPIX All-Nations Telementary Yen; Flock of Entries

New York independent WPIX-TV has added a strong international flavor to its line up of telementaries for the new year. Schedule of specials features shows from England, Italy, Canada and another with footage out of the Japanese archives.

Initialer in the series is "10 Seconds that Shook the World," a Davic Wolper special on the atomic bomb slated for Jan. 24 airing. It includes extensive footage on the bombing of Hiroshima and the terrifying results.

From England, WPIX will have six of the hour variety specials featuring American singer Jo Stafford that were produced for British commercial tv airing last year by ATV. Fels & Co. is sponsoring the hours on WPIX. Preem is set for Friday, Feb. 28, at 8:30 p.m. with the opener featuring Miss Stafford, Peter Sellers, Graham Stark and Patricia Hayes.

Also in the variety line is an hour special from Canada, "Wild Is Love," a musical starring Nat King Cole and featuring Larry Kert of "West Side Story" with a large supporting cast and music by Nelson Riddle. Show is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 13, at 10 p.m.

"The Death of a Dictator," slated for Thursday, April 30, is the story of Mussolini's death by assassination as it was reenacted by the people of northern Italy shortly after the dictator's death. It's a combo documentary-drama that WPIX documentary producers came across when they were researching a previous special on the dictator's life.

Other specials set by the station include "Danger: Continent Seven," the story of Antarctica as told by Admiral George Dufek; the 15th consecutive coverage of the Westminster Kennel Club's dog show from Madison Square Garden; "American Women of the 20th Century," covering the femme scene from the Gibson Girl to Jackie Kennedy; and "Anatomy of Crime," covering the growth of crime in the U.S. and dealing with the lives of such citizens as Albert Anastasia, Vito Genovese, Frank Costello, Al Capone, John Dillinger, Waxey Gordon, Lucky Luciano, Two-Gun Crowley and "Greasy Thumb" Gussic.

WWRL Sale Okayed

Washington, Jan. 14.

FCC's Broadcast Burea okayed the $1,825,000 sale of WWRL-AM, New York, from Long Island Broadcasting Corp. to W.W.R.L., Inc.

The buyer is wholly owned by WOPA Inc.

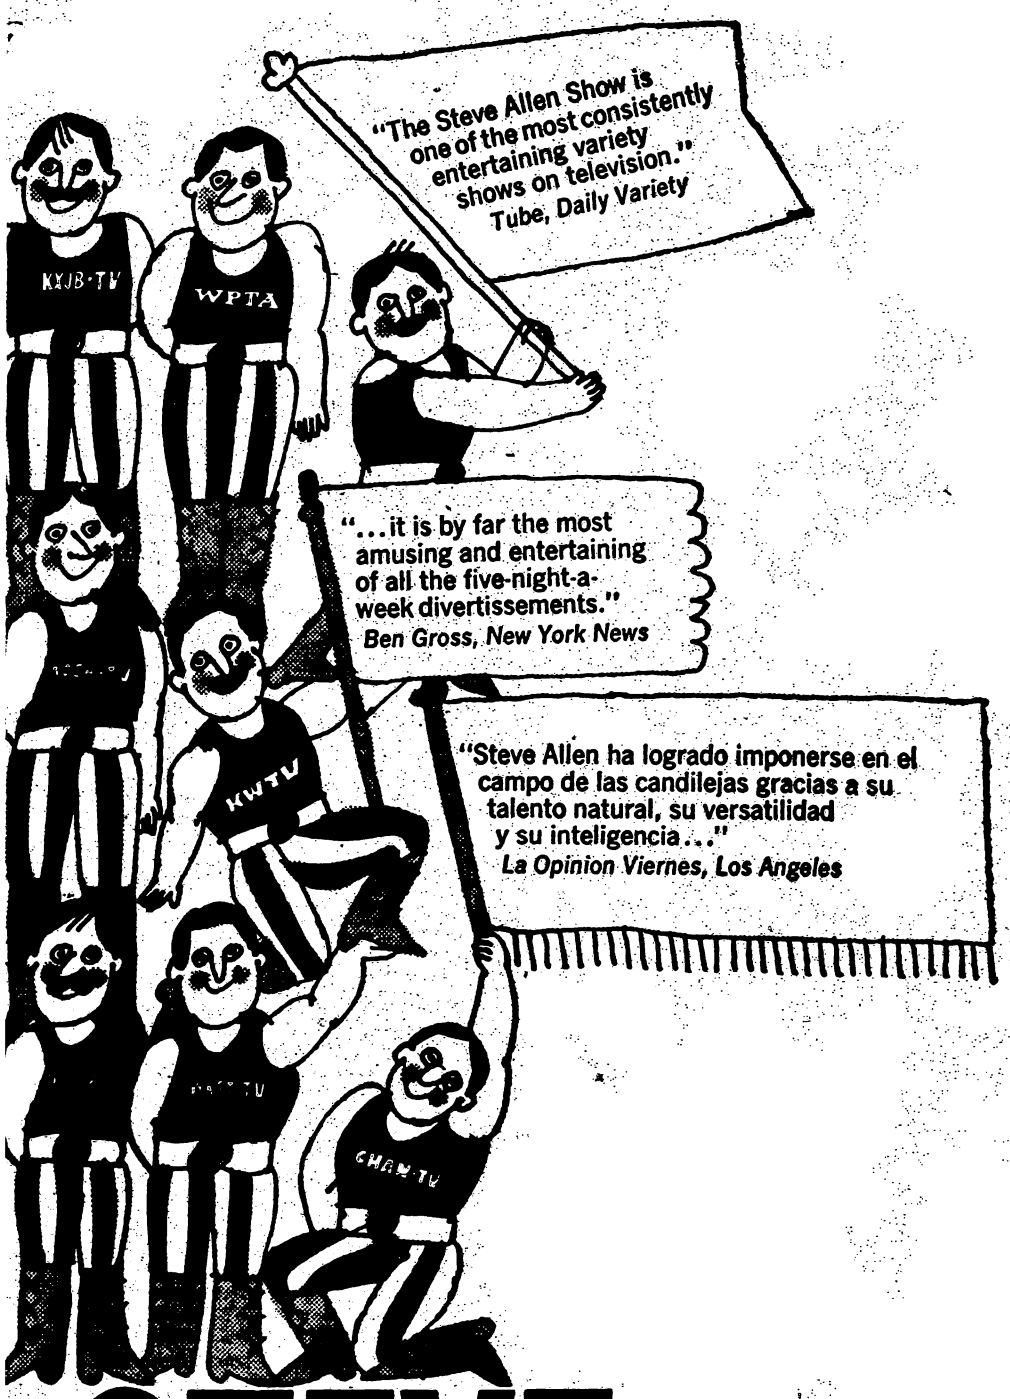
Flock of Sales On MGM Features

Film feature sales by MGM-TV are rolling at a good clip since the start of the new year with a $500,000 plus sales of 125 pre-1948 films to WBKB-TV, Chicago. Another $100,000 is heading for the MGM till via the sale of 40 post-1950 features made available this year for syndication, to WBEN-TV, Buffalo. The same package was previously sold for an estimated $500,000 to WCAU-TV, Philadelphia.

Other sales of this package, including 20 in color, have been made to KGO-TV, San Francisco; WCKT-TV, Miami; KENS-TV, San Antonio; KRNT-TV, Des Moines; KLZ-TV, Denver; and WOOD-TV, Grand Rapids. The total number of markets buying the 40 64 package now totals 12.

Additional sales of MGM features made available in previous years were made to KRNT-TV, which bought 90 other features; WSEE-TV, Erie, WKBK-TV Detroit, and KFBB-TV, Great Falls, which bought 30 features apiece; and WQED-TV, Pittsburgh, which bought five pictures.

"We watch Steve Allen on late television with unlimited delight."
New Yorker Magazine
"...the finest thing that's happened to late night television since Steve did the Tonight Show."
Cecil Smith, Los Angeles Times
KYW-TV
KRLD-TV
WJBK-TV
KROD-TV
KMBC-TV
KSWO-TV
KTLA
WCCO-TV
WPIX
KGMB-TV
KATU-TV
KSL-TV
KENS-TV
WAVS-TV
KTUL-TV
42 STATIONS CARRY



STEVE (The most successful syndicated tape show in television history)

That makes the Steve Allen Show an industry phenomenon. A late-night show taped in Hollywood. 5 times a week. 90 minutes a day of fun, music, entertainment. On 42 top stations. Including 17 of the 20 top markets. This kind of success had to happen. Here's a great talent. Backed by great talents. Over 360 of them this past year. Maybe we should list all the great stars. But that's an awful lot to put in one ad. Take our word for it. They are the hottest, brightest personalities in show business today. (If you have to know, drop us a line. We'll send the names.) That's why, at the last count, 42 top stations carry Steve. They've learned to lean on him. If your station's not one of them, get into the act. Allez-oop!

WBC PROGRAM SALES, INC. GROUP W

122 E. 42nd St., New York 17, N.Y. • MUrray Hill 7-0808

Foreign Television Reviews

A KING'S REVOLUTION
With Andrew Faulds, narrator
Director: Randal Beattie
Writer: Paul Johnson
60 Mins., Wed., 9:40 p.m.
Associated-Rediffusion, from London

Iran was the subject of this telling and absorbing report from Associated-Rediffusion, its fourth contribution to the Intertel program and a standout entry. Theme of Paul Johnson's lucid and balanced script was the Shah's reform plan to hoist the country into the 20th century, and the Shah himself was enlisted to explain its objects and scope. The narration was splendidly and intelligently spoken by thesp Andrew Faulds, and it gave direction to the show.

Another plus was the photography of Harry Hart, who caught some exciting images of a country in flux. The only aspect of Iran that was cursorily treated was its dependence on oil revenues, but, in all other respects, it gave a challenging account of a nation with gaping divisions between extreme wealth and struggling poverty. After a brief historical introduction, which touched on the Shah's three marriages in search of an heir, the program launched into his benevolent dictatorship, which suppresses freedom of opinion, but encourages parcelling out the land among the peasants.

The Shah himself was shown taking the initiative in this, as well as forming, on military lines, groups of teachers and instructors to undertake a crash program of education for children and peasants. The perils of this transformation were stated by Johnson as the reluctance of the rich to play ball, and the uncontrollable nomads, who would fight rather than allow their simple way of life to be transformed for its own good.

The production covered the country from the temples of Ispahan to the wildest villages, and generated some emotion about children being taught in makeshift schools. The Shah addressed the camera from time to time, and appeared somewhat earnest. The script implied that the progress he had initiated might go at a faster pace than he wanted—and topple him from his throne.

Randal Beattie's direction was first-rate, matching picture to commentary so that they complemented each other, and the program cunningly blended information with visual enterprise. Otta.

IT'S DARK OUTSIDE
With William Mervyn, Keith Barron, John Carson, June Tobin, James Barrett, Richard Butler, Aubrey Morris, others Producer: Derek Bennett
Writer: Andrew Hall
60 Mins., Fri., 9:10 p.m.
Granada TV, from Manchester

Granada-TV clicked in past seasons with an offbeat suspense skein called "The Odd Man," regularly peopled by martini-type characters in edgy situations. "It's Dark Outside" is a brew from the same vintage, and two of the personnel are inherited from the previous series.

Inspector Rose (William Mervyn) continues as a cool and supercilious cop, improbably ready with a quote from the works of Oscar Wilde. And Sergeant Swift (Keith Barron) returns with his conscience and impetuous moments of revolt. They make a neat pair, and they are joined by lawyer Anthony Brand (John Carson) and his cynical journalist wife, Alice (June Tobin), as steady sidekicks. The only trouble with the quartet is that none is particularly likable, but the atmosphere is cunningly manipulated to suggest sophistication.

Andrew Hall's script for the initialler set the tone by treating an "adult" crime—the criminal assault of a child—but was more remarkable for its subject than its development. Suspicion fell on a homosexual, and, while he was in jail, he was found strangled. The impatient Sergeant Swift was unjustly suspected of taking the law into his own hands, but it finally and predictably came out that the homo's brother had killed him, disguised as a cop, to cover his own guilt.

It was, in fact, a load of old nonsense, but it was presented with a flair, and titillated on a minor scale. Main complaint must be that the implications of a rather nasty subject were dodged, and left a curious taste in some mouths. William Mervyn stalked aphoristically through his part, and was capably supported by Keith Barron. As yet, the marital duo of John Carson and June Tobin lack impact. Derek Bennett's production was suitably slick. Otta.

A TOUCH OF THE NORMAN VAUGHANS
With Vaughan, Millicent Martin, Bill Pertwee, Irving Davies Dancers, Jack Parnell Orch Producer: Alan Tarrant
Director: Colin Clews
Writer: Eric Merriman
30 Mins., Fri., 10:10 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

As emcee for the commercial web's peak vaude show, "Sunday Night at the London Palladium," Norman Vaughan registered a popular image, mixing nervousness and a confidential manner with a couple of catch-phrases that caught on, "swinging" and "dodgy." He was also well supplied with gags by scripter Eric Merriman, who is performing the same service for this new skein. In the initialler, Vaughan has scaled down his mannerisms to the more intimate venue and the show pleased in an understanding sort of way.

The format is unambitious with Vaughan being joined by a guest thrush, Millicent Martin. Miss Martin belted out a tortuous "Come Rain, Come Shine," displaying vocal gymnastics that were rather too extravagant for the melody. But she scored in an otherwise mild sketch with herself and Vaughan enacting a suave love scene Hollywood-style and then repeating the situation with all the clumsiness of real life. Her "TW3" training shone through.

Vaughan also appeared in a tepid skit about a football star, and much of his material needed tightening. Irving Davies devised a couple of overstylized routines for the terpers, and Jack Parnell's band was okay. Colin Clews competently directed Alan Tarrant's production, and Vaughan's personality and following will give the show a good rating. Otta.

THE ARTHUR HAYNES SHOW
With Haynes, Nicholas Parsons, Dermot Kelly, Leslie Noyes, Janie Marden, Marty Wilde and the Wildcast, Leo Kharibian Dancers, Jack Parnell Orch
Producer: Dicky Leeman
Writer: Johnny Speight
35 Mins., Sat., 8:25 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

As a character comedian in the sturdy and ebullient vein of the musichall, Arthur Haynes has few equals and the return of this skein showed that he hasn't lost his flair for cocky comedy. The only change from previous series is the inclusion of a different pop group weekly, and it won't make much difference either way, although it doesn't quite jell with the mood of the show.

Scripter Johnny Speight devised a couple of good situations for the star, who was impudently amusing as a building foreman showing a pal his handiwork at No. 10 Downing Street while the Cabinet was in session. Later he also scored in his familiar tramp rig, insulting a dapper bigwig with a Rolls Royce while he was being pushed in a decrepit pram. Maybe the dialog wasn't quite up to snuff, but Haynes made it seem so. He was finely supported by Nicholas Parsons and Dermot Kelly, who were also allowed to register a yock or two.

"Soon It's Gonna Rain," delivered by guest chantoosie Janie Marden, was rather too tricky for this comely and uncomplicated gal. And Marty Wilde, who came to fame on the rock 'n' roll craze, showed that he was still with it in a moodish and raucous "Best Things In Life Are Free."

Dicky Leeman's production was alert and pacey, and the show is one of the deftest of its kind now available. Otta.

SERGEANT CORK
(The Case of the Fenian Men)
With John Barrie, William Gaunt, Jack MacGowran, Norman Rodway, Anthony Sagar, Arnold Diamond, others Producer: Jack Williams
Director: Josephine Douglas Writer: Bill Craig
60 Mins., Sat., 7:25 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

Devised by Ted Willis, who conceived the rival web's cozy cop, Dixon of Dock Green, this skein craved itself a welcome during its first appearance in the summer and looks likely to enhance it on this return innings. Its hero, Sergeant Cork, is a Victorian sleuth, predecessor of the Scotland Yard clue-chasers, and the segments have the added flavor of period trimmings—gaslight, sidewhiskers, and all. The tales, too, concentrate on fitting sort of crimes, this initialler being concerned with a conspiracy of Irish rebels in London and being typical of its times. Bill Craig's fluent and professional script, though written in melodramatic terms, also stated a case for Irish patriotism, allotting some sympathy to the rebels.

After a bomb attempt at the House of Commons, Sergeant Cork was informed that another outrage was in the offing. But the prostie who told him hadn't been truthful before, so she was disbelieved. Her murder roused suspicions that she had been telling the truth, and stolen papers found on her led to the plotters. D'Arcy (Norman Rodway) had finagled himself a job as secretary to a peer, and planned to shoot down with a Gatling gun a host of aristocratic and influential hoipolloi at a funeral. This was prevented in the nick of time, and the incidents included more mayhem when a police patrol bit the dust in the Irish headquarters.

Josephine Douglas directed Jack William's production briskly, and John Barrie repeated his rounded and sympathetic portrayal of Sergeant Cork, with William Gaunt supporting ably as his assistant. Performances from guest thesps were standout for this kind of fiction, with Norman Rodway, Jack MacGowran, and Anthony Sagar helping the general conviction. Otta.

HUGH AND I
With Terry Scott, Hugh Lloyd, Vi Stevens, Patricia Hayes, Jack Haig, Jacquie Wallis, Robert Raglan, Harry Brunning
Producer: David Croft
Writer: John Chapman
25 Mins., Sat., 9:15 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

The partnership of Terry Scott and Hugh Lloyd has something in common with Laurel & Hardy. Scott is the plump one, assertive and finagling. Lloyd is the meek one, who rebelliously submits. Their new series continues in the successful groove of its predecessors, helped by the farcical expertise of scripter John Chapman.

The opener was shrewdly calculated to reestablish the pair, and it packed few surprises for those who had met them before. Scott made a New Year resolution to spread unselfish sweetness and light, which involved forcing the unwilling Lloyd to have tea in bed when he'd sooner be sleeping. In revenge, Lloyd gave up smoking. Scott, not to be outdone, followed him. And the agreeable segment involved them in capers, in which each one tried to smoke without the other seeing him.

Both comics mesh well, and David Croft's production was neat and fluent. Duos of this sort are rare in local comedy skeins, and the understanding between Scott and Lloyd gives a touch of novelty to an otherwise moderate situation. Otta.

STASERA TANGO
(Tango Tonight)
With Adriano Celentano, Ornella Vanoni, Johnny Dorelli, Tony Dallara, Gino Bramieri, others, Gisa Geert dancers, Angel Gatti Orch.
Director: Eros Macchi
60 Mins.; Wed. 10 p.m.
RAI-TV, from Rome (tape)

RAI-TV missed a neat chance at a nostalgic-risible hour in this entertaining, but at same time disappointing, sum-up of the perennial dance which still ranks high with Itals.

Weakness was mainly in writing and pacing, which left stanza squarely in hands of guest performers. Fortunately, there were Ornella Vanoni and Johnny Dorelli as performer-emcess, both to good effect, while such singers as Tony Dallara and Adriano Celentano lent their surefire talents to numbers.

Gisa Geert's dance numbers were another plus factor. Miss Geert is one of top Continental choreographers, and especially strong in the gentle take-off department, which was called for here. Costumes by Sebastiano Soldati lent healthy assists in this sector. Hawk.

GALA TV
With Walter Chiari, Kessler Twins, Vittorio Gassmann, Rita Pavone, Mina, Milva, Adriano Celentano, Enzo Tortora, Pinuccia Nava, Cino Tortorella, Warner Bentivegna, Aldo Silvani, Gorni Kramer Orch., Ernesto Calindri, Franco Volpi, Alberto Lupo, Mara Berni, Ilaria Occhini, Emma Danieli, others
Director: Silverio Blasi
Writers: Giandomenico Giagni, Francesco Luzi
100 Mins., Fri. 9:05 p.m.
RAI-TV, from Rome (tape)

RAI-TV's 10th anniversary program was inevitably an uneven potpurri of events and people, milestones in the Italo telenet's initial decade, but the sum total made for okay viewing.

Equally inevitable were the gaps and omissions in this sum-up of the first 10 years in Italo video history, which, perhaps because of the pretaped format, smacked of the mechanical and lacked the immediacy which remains, despite its cost burden, the mainstay and most impactful facet of video.

Some juicy chances at spoofery were largely missed in a take-off on tv serials, acted out by most of the mainstays of this most popular RAI sector. It was overlong and lacked freshness and daring. Best bits came from the Kessler Twins, in an impeccable dance routine; Walter Chiari, in an introductory monolog; Enzo Tortora, ably tongue-in-cheek in a reminiscent bit on Italo tv quiz rages and a number of song exponents, with Rita Pavone and Adriano Celentano and Milva effective leaders.

Sum total was a show which could have been much better, but which made the grade thanks to sheer manpower and talent. Hawk.

FITZROY MACLEAN IN MONGOLIA
Producer: Stephen Hearst
25 Mins., Tues., 9:25 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

Fitzroy MacLean, an urbane traveller with an adventurous reputation stemming from his wartime behind-the-lines activities in Yugoslavia, came up with an offbeat and stimulating travelog, garnered during a trip to little-visited Mongolia. The country, now recognized by the United Nations, opened up to his camera, which ranged from the comparative sophistication of capital city Ulan Bator to the horsey life, lived outside it.

MacLean's commentary, which he crisply spoke, touched in the odd history of the place, once ruled by a mad Baltic Baron with a taste for massacre and then by a bunch of docile Tibetan lamas. And the pictures amply showed that the strangeness lives on. A wrestling routine, passed down through the ages, ended with the victors making like they were eagles, flapping their arms, and the rustics cantered around on sprightly horses, only needing covered wagons to be signed on by John Ford. Hints of Ghengis Khan abounded, and MacLean nicely contrasted them with the civilized amnities of university and theatre that the Commie regime had brought to the town. The country's political position, bordering on both Russia and China, put it in a good bargaining position for soaking both neighbours for loans.

Stephen Hearst's production was spare and telling, and the subject might well have been stretched beyond its meagre 25-minutes. Otta.

IL PROVINO
(The Test)
With Adriana Vianello, Piero Mazzarella, Evaldo Rogato, Giovanella di Cosmo, Enzo Jiannacci, Vanna Vivaldi, Augusto Bonardi, Lorena Corradi, Adriana Innocenti, Elena de Merik, Adolfo Geri, Ferruccio Amendola, Alvisi, Lando Noferi, others
Writer: Martino Montero
Director: Lyda C. Ripandelli
55 Mins.; Wed 9:05 p.m.
RAI-TV, from Rome (tape)

One of the rare tv originals presented by RAI, Martino Montero's piece made for okay viewing, without raising audience temperatures.

Item was about a smalltown girl who comes to the big city tv studio to test for a part. There she met the various pros of the business, from the know-it-all failure, to the obnoxious moppet star, to the studio wolf, etc. In the end of course, she realized this is not what she'd hoped for and that she's not made for such chores (or for the people who inhabit it), and heads back home the wiser for her experience.

Format made for some colorful bits by various video "types," with Adriana Vianello giving key role the proper innocent country-hick slant for contrast. Large cast provided colorful backing. Technical credits were good. Hawk.

Foreign TV Followup

Armchair Theatre

Writer David Mercer has won a reputation as a tv dramatist for exploring working-class clashes between the generations. He has a challenging attitude to the stifling atmosphere imposed on the ambitious and the sensitive, and this gave muscle to "A Way of Living," an above-average entry in ABC-TV's "Armchair Theatre" skein.

Set in a Northern village where coal-mining and fishing were the staple occupations, the situation centered around Alan (David Buck) and Jean (Rosemary Nicols), who had been sweethearts since their lisping days. But Jean was booked for a college education, while Alan's horizons were bounded by his grandpa's fishing-boat, which he was due to inherit. Jean jibbed at the complacency she saw around her, and took an apartment in the local city with a friend. Inevitably, she fell for someone else, a student, and Alan was ditched, but not without his acquiring some apprehension of life's opportunities outside his chosen orbit.

Mercer's script was observant about character and telling in its use of the local idioms of speech. Its chief fault was that it seemed to manipulate the development to prove the moral, and the contrivance was often obvious and kept the piece from the heights.

Despite some over-intensity due to inexperience, newcomer Rosemary Nicols gave a fine account as Jean, suggesting with sympathy the gal's awakening to political ideas and the world outside. David Buck impressed, too, as the boy, suspicious of anything beyond his limited background, and subtly indicated, at the climax, that the romantic breakup had unsettled his blind certainty. Beatrice Varley and Bert Palmer gave sturdy support.

Alan Cooke's direction made excellent use of locations and neatly underscored the social divisions implied in the script. In a season which has been distinctly dim for local tv drama, this one worked its passage. Otta.

Bartlett's WLW-I Slot

Columbus, Jan. 14.

Walter E. Bartlett, vice president of Crosley Broadcasting Corp. and general manager of WLW-C, was appointed manager of WLW-I, Indianapolis, Ind. in addition to his other duties. He succeeds John Babcock, resigned. Jack Heywood, Crosley veep and treasurer, upped to board of directors.

Bartlett will continue to live in Columbus and will commute to Indianapolis.

ORIENT EXPRESS
With Edwin Newman, correspondent; others
Producer: Lou Hazam
Director: Tom Priestley
Music: Jacques Belasco
60 Mins., Tues. 10 p.m.
HUMBLE OIL
NBC-TV (film)
(McCann-Erickson)

Travelog, news feature and personal essay all knitted together in a thoroughly absorbing reel of film—that was Lou Hazam's "Orient Express." It was an imaginative television idea to film the four day train trip from Paris to Istanbul on the storied rattler that figures in so many mystery and spy tales, but it was pure inspiration to cast news correspondent Edwin Newman as the traveler.

As with actual travel, it's a better trip when the company's enjoyable. Newman is an amusing fellow when he's in shirtsleeves, a serio-comic type who always seems a little out-of-place when he's not doing hard news. As a tourist taking his first ride on the fabled route, he was easy to identify with; and when the dining car got unhitched after Italy, the program's main suspense centred on whether the poor fellow would ever again get a square meal on the trip.

Such was his rapport with the viewer that probably no one held against him that awful crack about baby goats having a specialized taste for goats' milk. His batting average with the witticisms was only about one out of three, but even the aromatic puns (like, "I'm a member of the dinar's club," in discussing Yugoslav currency) had a certain charm in his wry delivery. Newman's narrative redeemed the camera observations which on the whole were conventional—the usual facial studies of the natives, activity in the marketplace and picture postcard landscapes.

Except for the loss of the dining car the trip was uneventful, but Newman, ever the news seeker, tried to rustle up something of value in interivews with a vender in Trieste, the train conductor and a Yugoslav journalist. All were interesting, but only the last had anything to offer as news. He pointed out that most of the farms in his country were private rather than collective and opined that this was why that Communist nation was suffering agriculturally. He said the little farms could only produce things for themselves and not for the whole country.

On the travelog level there was a glimpse of Paris at night, a view from the window of the Swiss countryside, the long tunnel so well known from mystery novels and pictures, stopoffs in Milan, Venice, Belgrade, Sophia and a number of smaller towns, and finally the arrival in Turkey. Withal it was an enjoyable video tour that helped the untraveled viewer realize the geographical nearness of European countries to each other and the cultural and political distances between them. Les.

ALUMNI FUN
With Clifton Fadiman, others
Producer: John A. Aaron
Director: Lamar Caselli
30 Mins., Sun., 5 p.m.
AMERICAN CYANAMID
CBS-TV, N.Y. (tape)
(Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample)

A new network hasn't helped this quiz entry. On CBS-TV, it remains what it was last year on ABC-TV, an imitation of the exciting "GE College Bowl." "Alumni Fun" just isn't any fun.

Sunday (5) show had one brief moment of interest, and that was an embarassing goof. Host Clifton Fadiman gave a quote, and asked if it were the lead to the Declaration of Independence. Representing UCLA were Lloyd Bridges, Jackie Robinson and Dr. Vincent Barnett, prexy of Colgate U. Bridges and Robinson looked hopefully to Barnett for the answer. The University topper promptly and confidently came up with the wrong answer. The Doctor goofed again on signers of the Declaration of Independence when he failed to identify the current governor of a New England state from among a list of Declaration signatures (a little woodshedding on American History is in order at Colgate).

Otherwise, this was a dull exchange of q. & a. The other panalists, representing the Columbia U. Graduate School of Journalism, were publisher Bennett Cerf, the Herald Tribune's Marguerite Higgins and Look mag's Mike Land. Maybe these folks were all too old for this kind of electronic parlor game. Bill.

VICTOR BORGE AT CARNEGIE HALL
With Leonid Hambro, Sergio Franchi, Hershey Kay
Producer-Director: Bill Hobin
Writer: Victor Borge
60 Mins., Thurs., 9 p.m.
PONTIAC
ABC-TV (tape)
(McManus, John & Adams)

Victor Borge's annual special for Pontiac was an amusing, if long-seeming, session of dignified disorder and cultural blasphemy, full of charm and whimsy but somewhat repetitious of the impish wink, the tongue-in-cheek take and the false musical start. It may be the stuff that his dedicated fans dote on, but in a mass audience show it comes at the expense of pacing. The program rambled slowly, lacking not only the big or climactic comedy moment but also any sense of building toward one.

Borge's is comedic artistry with class, intimate and informal in a Carnegie Hall setting that would seem to inspire just the opposite. He is a master of muddled logic and zany musings ("How does a fly land on a ceiling? Does he fly upside down, or does he turn over at the last moment?"), and has a way of creating a quiet kind of chaos onstage. In among the puns and verbal monkeyshines, he finds the need to move the piano, to negotiate with stagehands, to make chitchat with the front rows, to shuffle the sheet music and to bedevil his guest artists. It's all quite funny, but after a while the viewer finds himself wishing that he'd cut out the nonsense and let the singer sing or the pianist play.

Leonid Hambro, resident pianist of the New York Philharmonic, played straight man to Borge in a lengthy series of false starts that eventually led to a keyboard duet of an undistinguished, quasi-long-hair medley. Later baritone Sergio Franchi assumed a similar role, and the format began to be predictable. Let the singer announce his song, and that was the cue for a Borge pun; let him begin, and that's when the Danish wit has trouble finding the right key or the proper sheet music.

As for the guest contributions, it was simply light music passing for culture, as though Carnegie Hall itself gave a pop ditty like "Mimi" the stature of an aria from "Tosca." Franchi performed both, plus a Spanish song to his own guitar accompaniment and another pop tune. He's got a handsome, powerful voice and undoubtedly a lot of distaff appeal. Hambro played elegantly, but was mostly a pianistic foil for the star.

Some of Borge's funniest moments were in the Pontiac commercials. Les.

THE HOLLYWOOD PALACE
With Patachou, Anthony Newley, Rosemary Clooney, Dave King, Carl Reiner & Mel Brooks, Les Carsony Bros. (3), Paul Sydell, Volantes (2); Bob Cummings, emcee
Exec Producer: Nick Vanoff
Producer: William O. Harbach
Director: Mel Ferber
Musical Director: Les Brown
Writers: Joe Bigelow, Jay Burton
60 Mins.; Sat., 9:30 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
ABC-TV, from H'wood (tape)

Oldfashioned, straightforward vaudeville, reputedly quite dead except for its weekly quiver on the Ed Sullivan show on CBS-TV, is stirring some more oh this new ABC-TV entry, a one-hour aftermath of the web's transient experiment with the two-hour Jerry Lewis show. Like all vaude presentations, this series will vary in calibre from week to week depending on the talent, but these shows at least will have the benefit of savvy pacing and a handsome framework provided by the Hollywood studio theatre, once know as the El Capitan and more recently as the Jerry Lewis Theatre.

The Palace, however, is the precise name for the current proceedings. This is an eight-act layout with each turn front and center for a tightly tailored routine and then off with no encores. Each week, a different emcee will be doing the introductory chores. The first show (4) bowed auspiciously with Bing Crosby as emcee and the second (11) had Bob Cummings purveying his own style of patter.

The bill for the second week was somewhat uneven, but on the whole made for a varied and entertaining hour. There was somewhat too much accent on the acros and the novelties, with the opening Volantes unicycle turn, Paul Sydell and his pooch, Suzie, midway and Les Carsonys in its idiom and bear no individual fault for the imbalance.

Two sock comedy turns highlighted the bill. Carl Reiner and Mel Brooks, a couple of zanies who might be a little far-out for Dubuque, reprised their 2,000-year-old man routine. Later, British comedian Dave King changed pace with a nifty pantomime in a dentist's anteroom.

Anthony Newley was the most effectively showcased singer on the show with a group of his pop hits, including "What Kind of Fool Am I." He closed the show with his "Tribute," a dramatic song saga dedicated to late Pres. John F. Kennedy. French songstress Patachou tended to be pallid in her Gallic-flavored songalog while Rosemary Clooney, next-to-closing, had the advantage of some top-notch production, but she was not in her best voice. Herm.

ESSO WORLD THEATRE
With Sir Ralph Richardson, Angela Baddeley, Anna Massey, Paul Rogers, Peter Wyngarde Producer: Bert Lawrence
Director: Cyril Frankel
60 Mins.; Sun., 10 p.m.
ESSO
WOR-TV, N. Y.
(Needham, Louis, & Brorby)

Esso's refineries are again at work on television and once more producing a no-knock, high-cerebral, all-seasons brand of programming fare. "Esso World Theatre" is in direct line with the company's prior cultural ventures on tv with "Play of the Week," "The Age of Kings" and the last two years of "Festival of the Performing Arts." In each case, Esso has built a reputation not only for its high standards of sponsorship but, even more importantly, its daring to give complete artistic scope to the creators of its shows.

"Esso World Theatre," a once-a-month presentation to be telecast over a chain of seven eastern stations, has moved out of the concert hall into the arena of the world theatre. The opening show, "Puritan Vs. Cavalier," was shot in England and subsequent shows will be filmed in different countries in a project designed as an international anthology of cultures.

"Puritan Vs. Cavalier" was a superb culling from the English literary tradition stemming back to Chaucer and extending to Dylan Thomas and T. S. Eliot. A troupe of polished British players, headed by Sir Ralph Richardson, read from the poets and enacted scenes from plays and novels. Everything was performed in the most lustrous style in handsome settings of British mansions, cathedrals and countrysides.

This was a reading from British belle-lettres that was striking in its omission of Shakespeare. Instead, the respected, but generally neglected works of Herrick, Milton, Donne, Congreve and Jane Austin were brought to the attention of the tv viewer. After the duolog between Richardson, as the serpent, and Anna Massey, as Eve, Milton's "Paradise Lost" may be found again. Similarly was the brilliant sequence from "Pride and Prejudice" as played by Miss Massey and Paul Rogers and a scene from "The Way of the World," again with Miss Massey (the daughter of Raymond Massey) and Peter Wyngarde.

Obviously, no ratings records will be broken by this series which will require the most attentive and best prepared audiences. But though this audience be limited, Esso may be ultimately correct in believing that its circle of influence extends to the farthest reaches of the marketplace. Herm.

THAT WAS THE WEEK THAT WAS
With Elliott Reid, emcee; Henry Morgan, David Frost, Nancy Ames; guests Aubrey Meadows, Burr Tillstrom, Doro Merande
Exec Producer: Leland Hayward
Producer: Marshall Jamison
Directors: Jamison, Kirk Alexander
Writers: Robert Emmett, Earl Doud, Gerald Gardner
Music: Jacques Belasco
30 Mins., Fri., 9:30 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
NBC-TV, from N. Y.

Somewhere along the line (between that special hour air-preview a couple months back of "That Was the Week That Was" and last Friday night's official premiere of the weekly half-hour version) something went wrong. The 30-minute edition as it played on NBC-TV (as replacement for the unlamented "Harry's Girls") was as humdrum and pedestrian as the "sneak preview" was delightfully impudent. As a matter of fact in the period immediately following Jack Paar threw away more one-line funnies (and which Bob Hope does as a matter of habit with sharper scripting) than the sum total of "TW3".

The premiere can be faulted on a couple of counts: a) the inadequacy of the writing (even though the same Robert Emmett-Earl Doud-Gerald Gardner threesome were responsible for the original preview script) and b) the mistaken impression that just because you're gagging up the political scene it comes out satire. Invariably what was passed off as satire centered around LBJ, who was done to a fare-thee-well. But LBJ meant little more than lowercase "lousy bum jokes". The Chief Executive rated a better shake of the satiric dice.

Regulars on the show include Elliott Reid as the emcee (pitching too hard and lacking the finesse and pro demeanor of Henry Fonda on the 60-minute version); Henry Morgan, David Frost (from the original BBC-TV production and given special AFTRA dispensation to participate in the U.S. version), plus Nancy Ames, who does the thematic "TWTWTW" opener and closer. Guests for the premiere included Aubrey Meadows, Burr Tillstrom and Doro Merande, who was a delight on the preview, but this time took the rap from the writers in an interview with Miss Meadows on fashions.

As was hardly surprising, politics got the big play—from Pres. Johnson to Barry Goldwater to Nixon to Rockfeller, et al; Bobby Baker was the subject of an amateurish "Pinafore" takeoff; Morgan did an unfunny professorial bit on "The Body Politic" (charting the Governmental digestive tract); the Pope and West Germany (Unter der Lyndon); Castro and the Cubans had their fling. But there was precious little that was subtle or betrayed an imaginative spark. Most of it just lay there.

Oddly enough the half-hour's highlight had nothing to do with satire. This was Burr Tillstrom's brilliantly executed "show of hands" which interpreted an East-West Berlin meeting at the wall. It spoke volumes with muted eloquence. Thus for a few brief moments "TW3" achieved something unique and distinctive. Rose.

Tele Follow-Up Comment

Jack Paar Show

Tv guests of Dr. Albert Schweitzer's stature aren't easy to come by and, as his films showed, Jack Paar had to fly 19 hours by jet to West Africa, and canoe across a river, to get him. It was of course worth all the trouble. Schweitzer, at 89, is an inspiration to the human race, and it was well to give him time in a mass audience show like Paar's. Had the film been presented as a straight news documentary, it probably would have gotten half the audience, or less.

Seen in his habitation of the past half century, the hospital-village of Lambarene where he's able to put to work his philosophy of reverence for all life, Schweitzer was revealed as a gentle, witty and tireless old man whose pants were a bit baggy for someone who is larger than life. The footage was not extraordinary, but it didn't need to be because the subject was. It showed the doctor ministering to a fawn, play Bach at the organ, comforting an African who had broken his leg, feeding wildlife, touring the village he had built and and kidding Paar on how to behave with creatures of the jungle.

Following the brief reel, Paar brought on Schweitzer's daughter live for an exchange of anecdotes (Paar doing most of the talking, natch) about the old man, most of which were charming. Withal, it gave televiewers a closer look, if not a profound one, at one of the great figures of this century.

Rest of the show was hot and cold. Jackie Vernon delivered a good monolog in his deadpan style, but there seemed some straining to find something for Shirley Booth to do as a guest. She reminisced about "Duffy's Tavern," recited a poem, sang "Molly Malone" and did an undistinguished mambo with Jose Melis. It all fell pretty flat. Paar's warm-up was sharp and topical, and in some ways it stole thunder from "TW 3" which preemed in the preceding half hour. Les.

Jackie Gleason Show

CBS-TV took a stanza of this Saturday night variety show (Jan. 4) to salute its host Jackie Gleason on the occasion of his 35th anni in show business.

The rotund comedian's longtime partner Art Carney hosted "The Many Worlds of Jackie Gleason," a potpurri of film clips and tape excerpts that showed the man of the hour every way but live (no criticism intended, he was on vacation).

There was Gleason with host Carney in clips from "The Honeymooners;" Gleason leading a band (as conductor and songwriter); Gleason as a serious performer in scenes from "The Hucksters," "Gigot" and the "Playhouse 90" version of "Time of Your Life," Gleason as a genuine pool shark in a game with Willie Mosconi and as a fine golfer in a match with Arnold Palmer; and the many comic faces of Gleason—Reggie Van Gleason, the Poor Soul etc. There was Gleason soul searching in a David Susskind interview, and Gleason kidding himself publicly over the demise of his CBS quiz-hosting effort. It was a fine tribute and a dazzling performance.

In trying to probe the Gleason off-stage personality—which must be as many-sided as his exhibitionist skills—Carney opined, "... Because of his insatiable desire to be top dog, he has tasted of failure and he's risen to the heights; he's eaten caviar and he's eaten crow." Gleason added, "All through an actor's life, failure snaps at his heels like a mongrel. But, because conceit is an actor's courage, he gives the impression that failure is adversity, and the mongrel is just a little puppy. Without conceit, an actor couldn't possibly get anywhere.

And Carney concluded: "That's our boy Jackie Gleason. Comedian, dramatic actor, an intellectual despite lack of formal schooling, a man who wanders indiscriminately into literature, art, science—anything that will feed his inquiring mind." Bill.

Twentieth Century

In one of the terrible ironies of the 20th century, it was Hitler who escaped assassination. The five known plots to take his life were explored in two absorbing half-hours on CBS-TV's "Twentieth Century," telecast on successive Sundays.

The script by Burton Benjamin, who also is exec producer of the series, not only served to intelligently detail the various plots against Hitler, but it caught the brutal madness of the period as well. It was of keen interest, too,

(Continued on page 38)

ONE OF A KIND
(A Birds Eye View of America)
With Harry Reasoner, Alfredo Antonini Orch
Producer-Writer: Andrew A. Rooney
PARTICIPATING
60 Mins., Sun. 4 p.m.
CBS-TV (film)

"One of a Kind" looms as an ambitious and original bit of telethink. It's a format that hews to no special line and no continuity. Each show will stand on its own with no relation to its predecessor or successor. In short each week, this CBS-TV time period takes off on its own, bound for its own objectives.

The first of the series was "A Bird's Eye View of America" as seen from a helicopter, with Harry Reasoner providing some wry and biting commentary to the beauty and desolation of the countryside. The show started with Plymouth Rock as it might have been seen by the Pilgrims and follows up with the ultimate in man's building process, the New York skyline. In between were views of man-made blights as well as boons. It showed America from the earliest pueblos to the lavish homes of Newport. It went through a multitude of cultures from the gambling economy of Las Vegas to neglected

(Continued on page 38)

NICE GIRLS FINISH FIRST

The story behind the runaway success of The Patty Duke Show on the new ABC—and how this incredibly talented youngster holds the fascinated attention of viewers in 12,700,000 homes every week.

EIGHT YEARS AGO, Patty Duke was an 8-year-old girl on the way to her first acting lesson. When she spoke, she said, "dese, dem and dose," with all the gusto of a native New Yorker.

One year ago, Patty Duke won an Academy Award. When she spoke, it was with the grace and charm of a favorite granddaughter.

Patty Duke was a girl with talent and the will to work. Patty Duke was also a girl with a delightful personality. Patty Duke, in short, was exactly the kind of girl ABC was looking for to build a show around for its 1963-64 season. It was to be a new ABC, firmly based on wholesome entertainment. And Patty fitted in perfectly.

Would she like to do a television program of her own? She would. What kind of program? Obviously, Patty had to be a teen-ager. But how could you take advantage of her tremendous ability when most teen-age roles had become stereotyped long ago?

The answer was to *un*stereotype the role. Instead of giving Patty only one part, give her two parts—identical cousins with diametrically opposed personalities.

With those two decisions—the obvious one of making Patty Duke a teen-ager, and the not so obvious one of giving her twin acting assignments—The Patty Duke Show was born.

Breck, General Mills and Sterling Drug became the sponsors. The American public saw the show for the first time on Wednesday night, September 18, 1963. And the darndest things began to happen.

The Patty Duke Show instantly became one of the top new hits on television. Over 12,700,000 homes tune in every week. Patty's devoted followers include over 15,500,000 grownups, many of them young adults with children of their own.

Patty has become a heroine—and an example—to her own generation. High school girls from Maine to California are sporting Patty's hairdo. More important, they are copying her gentle manners.

The ABC Television Network is tickled pink about The Patty Duke Show. It demonstrates clearly and forcibly that wholesome, quality entertainment can lead to commercial success and to better television.

ABC Television Network abc

ed on an average of Nov.1 - Dec. 11 NTI Reports, Total Audience, and Nov. 1963 Nielsen Audience Composition Report estimates, subject to qualifications which are available on request.

Nielsen Totes & TV Touts

Continued from page 25

the network and the time period as opposed to the now outdated and discredited fetishes of picking a new program colt from the network's breeding farm by looking at its mane croup, shank, fetlock and hoofs. Now the buying analysis is focussed on the geneology of the horse, its network "clearance" handicap and its time period pedigree detailed in the Nielsen stud book.

Thus the same Alberto-Culver which took a powder from ABC's 10 p.m. Sunday period when this season's "100 Grand" folded and refused to continue with the substitute "Laughs for Sale," which has also been cancelled, now reenters the identical 10 p.m. Sunday race—but with "Bonanza" and not "Arrest and Trial" as its lead-in.

In other network sales heats, Timex and Consolidated Cigar bought each of the five Danny Thomas specials on NBC. And the same cigar advertiser placed with ABC an order for an alternate half-hour of "Wendy and Me" starring George Burns and Connie Stevens Tuesdays at 9 p.m. ABC's Tom Moore, who has qualms about placing the new Warner Bros. situation comedy in his ice cream spot immediately following the high rated "McHale's Navy," has not yet accepted the order. But Consolidated Cigar—which wants a sponsor association with a cigar-smoking George Burns as cigar tv advertising is expected to rise in the wake of the U. S. Surgeon General's anti-cigaret indictment—has imposed the Tuesday at 9 time as an absolute condition of the order.

The Consolidated Cigar agencies expect they'll have their way, for they well know that Chester Gersten, chairman of Consolidated exec committee and a key director, is also one of the most influential in the top councils of American Broadcasting, where he also serves as board member and on the exec committee.

At ABC-TV enthusiasm was running high in the Leonard Goldenson-Tom Moore camp after a scanning of half a dozen '64-'65 pilots, notably "Wendy & Me" (George Burns) "Jody," (Robert Maxwell) "Peyton Place" and "Alexander the Great." Indeed, Goldenson's spirits were soaring over their prospects and potentials. And so look for a 9:30 Tuesday and Thursday slotting of "Peyton Place" (as a tandem attraction similar to Britain's "Coronation St."). Also for "Arrest and Trial" (cut to hour form instead of 90 minutes) in the Friday night post-"Burke's Law" slot at 9:30. Put down "Jody" for Fridays at 8.

With the '64-'65 entries already finalized in certain key network heats, the pace of business is expected to accelerate at once. For example, Wednesday night is being strategically revamped by both CBS and NBC. Jim Aubrey is moving his topflight "Beverly Hillbillies" entry to the 8:30 race in a strong bid to capture Wednesday leadership from 8:30 on, immediately following "CBS Reports." NBC's Wednesday night will be 100% MCA—with the two-hour MCA-Revue feature-film showcase from 9 to 11, immediately following the "Virginian," which now leads each of the half hours throughout its 90-minute stretch.

On Saturday night, NBC's Bob Kintner has given the nod to "Flipper," produced by Ivan Tors for MGM, for the leadoff 7:30 half-hour. "Mr. Magoo' cartooner out of the UPA stable, will follow at 8. Latter decision was made after "Mr. Magoo's Christmas Carol" special came in ninth in the latest Nielsen tally, with a commanding 46% share of audience. The "Magoo" half-hour series will deal in children's classics.

At 8:30 Saturday, Lorillard Tobacco is expected to co-sponsor the half-hour Paul Lynde comedy series, produced by Screen Gems. In the hour category of new programs, insiders say the CBS Breeding Farm has produced some promising and strong new entries. So enthusiastic are Aubrey & Co. about "The House" (produced by Jim Moser for Bing Crosby Productions); "The Reporter" (supplied by Keefe Braselle) and "Calhoun" (starring Jackie Cooper and produced by UA-TV) than even the "Alfred Hitchcock Hour," which now reaches almost a 40% share of audience and leads all other film programs at 10 to 11 p.m., Monday through Friday, is scheduled to be dropped by CBS to help make room for the fresh horses.

But the CBS scratch, as Aubrey drops his option on the one remaining MCA-produced CBS show (MCA productions will be completely missing from the CBS prime time schedule next season), is expected to inflict its historic Nielsen wallop against all comers when it is scheduled to replace Jack Paar on NBC Friday nights at 10 next season. NBC, if anything, is hopeful that Hitchcock can even improve on the 40% share it now garners in the identical time period on CBS, by virtue of the Jack Benny lead-in.

When Aubrey announces his new schedule, as he's expected to do this month, that long line—now cooling its heels at the "win" counters—will move rapidly to snap up the 50 prime time half-hours now ranked No. 1 in the Nielsens, together with some of their more promising adjacenies. All of them are expected to be sold by the end of February.

Then, those who are disappointed (since the demand for high-rated availabilities exceed their supply) will move to the "place" windows. When their supply is exhausted (probably before spring is over), the remaining wagers will move to the "show" counters. Here supply exceeds demand, with some advertisers, in fact, withholding a significant share of their funds for warm-weather bargains.

But for the next six weeks the action will be at the "win" window and the essential sales fortunes of each of the networks, for next year, will be made or broken.

Meantime, Nielsen Stud Book in hand, the trade awaits the pronouncements from "Colonel" Aubrey.

Burial Boys

Continued from page 24

in it (the show) that not all funeral directors do a bad job, nor are all like the one portrayed in our picture, but there are some—just as in any profession—who will exploit people. We were very clear to make the point that this was not representative of all funeral directors."

Felton added, "we also made the point that there are people in the medical profession who also will be as unthinking as to charge high fees, etc. None of us who worked on the segment feel that all funeral directors mistreat people. It would be rather silly of us to think that. But there are some in any profession who will take advantage of people, and that's what we pointed out."

"If we do a play which shows that a surgeon or doctor is not of the best, this does not mean all are like that. I don't quite understand why people who represent the best would rise to the defense of a man who does not. If we said all funeral directors, lawyers or doctors were unscrupulous, then I could see why somebody would rise to their defense, but we did not. I don't understand why they rise to defend a man depicted as someone of a low order in their profession," Felton remarked.

The exec producer commented there have been motion pictures depicting some producers as incompetent, as "men who don't pay their bzills," but he said he knew of no protests against such pix since there are such producers.

TV Reviews

Continued from page 35

communities. It hit upon the splendor of nature as well as man-made squalor.

From the helicopter was seen wondrous forests, but somehow there was the need to dwell on trees. The camera needed to stop for a look at people and dwell on detail, but the show provided, such broad coverage that this was apparently impossible. Nonetheless it was an arresting hour, with an excellent concept that gave an idea of an America which has been built up and despoiled by man.

A score by Glenn Paxton, reminiscient of the music used in a DeMille ballet, played by the Alfredo Antonini Orchestra was an added plus to the proceedings.

Jose.

REPERTOIRE WORKSHOP
(We're Not in Bad Shape for the Shape That We're in Considering the Shape of Things)
With Chuck Dodds, Tom Hatten, Devra Korwin, Yvonne Othon, Don Penny, Elizabeth Shaw Producer: Joe Scully
Director: Hal Cooper
30 Mins.; Sat., 2:30 p.m.
WCBS-TV, N. Y.

More than this KNXT, Los Angeles entry will be needed to appraise "Repertoire Workshop," the CBS o&o project which finds each o&o producing programs to showcase local talent.

The coast entry looked more like a college try. The spirit, vim and vitality were there, but the half-hour was more derivative than original in nature. For such a project, an experimental venture in all the arts, it might be more profitable for all concerned to be more adventuresome.

There were portions of the show which resembled a poor man's version of "That Was the Week That Was." One of two of the skits came off, but the topics ranging from child psychology and tv commercials are old hat. A sweet number "Just Another Couple" came off nicely, as did the last skit, keyed to personalities and chairs.

The performing sextet—Chuck Dodds, Tom Hatten, Devra Korwin, Yvonne Othon, Don Penny, and Elizabeth Shaw—showed individual and collective talent. Director Hal Cooper would have been wiser to dampen their spirits for the opening number, the cast came on much too strong.

Portia Nelson did the music and lyrics, while Joel Reisner and Anne Snyder wrote the sketches.

Horo.

Nielsen's 30-Market Report

(Week Ending Jan. 5)

As with the National Nielsens, CBS-TV has much the best of it on the new 30-market Nielsens (for the week ending Jan. 5), but the more limited multi-city breakdown gives ABC a better shake vis a vis NBC. Of the Top 20 shows, CBS has 13, ABC five and NBC two. On average audience ratings, the score reads CBS 20.2, ABC 17.9 and NBC 17.6. On half-hour wins (7:30 to 11 seven nights of the week) CBS captures 20, ABC 16 and NBC 13.

Following is the Top 20 rundown:

Beverly Hillbillies—CBS	35.7
Bonanza—NBC	31.4
Dick Van Dyke—CBS	29.7
Candid Camera—CBS	28.1
Ed Sullivan—CBS	28.0
McHale's Navy—ABC	27.0
Favorite Martian—CBS	26.0
Hitchcock—CBS	25.7
Patty Duke—ABC	25.5
What's My Line—CBS	25.5
Petticoat Junction—CBS	25.2
Danny Thomas—CBS	24.5
Donna Reed—ABC	24.4
Andy Griffith—CBS	24.4
Twilight Zone—CBS	24.3
Danny Kaye—CBS	24.2
Lucy Show—CBS	24.1
Outer Limits—ABC	24.0
Combat—ABC	24.0
Kraft Suspense Theatre—NBC	23.9

Win, Place & Show

With the first heats in the '64-'65 race already under way, practically all agency and advertiser eyes are trained on the latest postings of the Nielsen totalizer.

The agencies' 15% stockholders fee is expected to reach alltime heights as advertiser bets are anticipated to mount (barring large cutbacks which may occur in the cigaret derby). Of late the agency stakeholders have been busy transferring the latest form sheets supplied by the Nielsen Thoroughbred Assn. to their high-speed electronic computers for an automatic calculation of the odds which attend next season's prime time claiming and handicap races.

Gone are the colorful bookmakers of yesteryear — the Mike Kirks, the John Rebers, the Nat Wolfes—who judged a new program steed by guess, feel and instinct. Now, the Nielsen parimutuel odds—on which the J. Walter Thompsons, the McCann Ericksons, the Young & Rubicams, et al. have been forced to become experts—govern the betting.

And their tv touts—the Dan Seymours, the Bud Barrys, the Dick Pinkhams, etc.—are already responding to the odds posted by the most recent National Nielsen Report for the two weeks ending Dec. 22, '63.

The 50 prime time evening half-hour furlongs are Nielsen-classified as follows:

	CBS	NBC	ABC
Half-Hours Number One	29	15	6
Half-Hours 2d Position	15	20	15
Half-Hours 3d Position	6	15	29

In this connection agency attention is rivited on the individual network time periods which comprise the "win, place and show" categories.

THE FIFTY HALF-HOUR WINS

CBS (29)	NBC (15)	ABC (6)
Mon., 7:30-10:00 (5)	Mon., 10:-11:00 (2)	Tues., 7:30-8:00 (1)
Tues., 8:00-11:00 (6)	Wed., 7:30-9:00 (3)	Thurs., 7:30-9:00 (3)
Wed., 9:00-11:00 (4)	Thurs. 9:00-9:30 (1)	Sat., 8:30-9:30 (2)
Thurs., 9:30-11:00 (3)	Fri., 7:30-9:30 (4)
Fri. 9:30-11:00 (3)	Sat., 9:30-10:00 (1)
Sat., 7:30-8:30 (2)	Sun., 7:30-8:30 (2)
Sat., 10:00-11:00 (2)	Sun., 9:00-10:00 (2)
Sun., 7:00-7:30 (1)
Sun., 8:30-9:00 (1)
Sun., 10:00-11:00 (2)

THE FIFTY HALF-HOUR "PLACES"

CBS (15)	NBC (20)	ABC (15)
Mon., 10:00-11:00 (2)	Mon., 7:30-9:30 (4)	Mon., 9:30-10:30 (1)
Thurs., 7:30-8:30 (2)	Tues., 7:30-8:00 (1)	Tues., 8:00-11:00 (6)
Fri., 7:30-8:30 (2)	Wed., 10:00-11:00 (2)	Wed., 7:30-10:00 (5)
Sat., 8:30-10:30 (3)	Thurs., 9:30-11:00 (3)	Fri., 8:30-10:00 (3)
Sun., 7:30-8:30 (2)	Fri., 10:00-11:00 (2)
Sun., 9:00-10:00 (2)	Sat., 7:30-8:30 (2)
	Sat., 10:00-11:00 (2)
	Sun., 7:00-7:30 (1)
	Sun., 8:30-9:00 (1)
	Sun., 10:00-11:00 (2)

THE FIFTY HALF HOUR "SHOWS"

CBS (6)	NBC (15)	ABC (29)
Tues., 7:30-8:00 (1)	Mon., 9:30-10:00 (1)	Mon., 7:30-9:30 (4)
Wed., 7:30-9:00 (3)	Tues., 8:00-11:00 (6)	Mon., 10:00-11:00 (2)
Fri., 8:30-9:30 (2)	Wed., 9:00-10:00 (2)	Wed., 10:00-11:00 (2)
	Thurs., 7:30-9:00 (3)	Thurs., 9:00-11:00 (4)
	Fri., 9:30-10:00 (1)	Fri., 7:30-8:30 (2)
	Sat., 8:30-9:30 (2)	Fri., 10:00-11:00 (2)
		Sat., 7:30-8:30 (2)
		Sat., 9:30-11:00 (2)
		Sun., 7:00-11:00 (8)

As for the average Nielsen speed throughout the 50 half-hour furlongs, the three-network horses are well spaced, although NBC is moving up on the inside in the mid-season stretch. ABC, which was first out of the starting gate, challenged at the first turn in October but now trails CBS by five and a half and NBC by three and a half Nielsen point lengths. Overall average evening ratings read 21.5 for CBS, 19.5 for NBC and 16.0 for ABC.

The 20 fastest programs as clocked by Nielsen are:

Beverly Hillbillies	38.8	Gunsmoke	25.9
Bonanza	38.8	Red Skelton	25.4
Dick Van Dyke	33.3	Lassie	25.2
Petticoat Junction	29.9	Donna Reed	24.9
Candid Camera	29.5	Lucy Show	24.9
Andy Griffith	28.6	Jack Benny	24.9
Bob Hope—Special	28.3	Ed Sullivan	24.7
Walt Disney	27.8	Jackie Gleason	24.6
Mr. Magoos Xmas Carol	27.0	Virginian	24.0
Story of Christmas	27.0	I've Got a Secret	23.9

TV Followup Comment

Continued from page 35

to meet a few of the people who either were involved in one or more of the plots, or who in some fashion, witnessed their failure.

Axel von dem Bussche, one of the plotters, probably spoke for many in his group when he told CBS' Daniel Schorr that he found he had to do something after witnessing mass extermination of Jews. He told of a co-conspirator, Count Klaus von Stauffenberg, who felt he could not go on living if he didn't do something to save Germany from Hitler. The German dictatorship provided no alternatives to assassination.

Benjamin, in his script, made no attempt to rewrite history. The plotters, it was emphasized, represented only a small fraction of the German people.

The two-parter, the last episode being telecast (12), was originally scheduled to be broadcast earlier this season, but the assassination of President Kennedy delayed the hour.

Horo.

David Frost OK'd For 'TW3' But 'Chips' Cast Barred on 'Camera 3'

Attempt by the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists to scotch the appearance of British performer David Frost from doing guest shots on NBC-TV's new satirical comedy, "That Was the Week That Was," were rejected when the Immigration & Naturalization Service refused to deny him an alien work visa.

AFTRA had contended to the service that Frost's appearances would put an American performer out of a job, but the government agency upheld the contentions of NBC and producer Leland Hayward's attorneys that Frost's role in the show was particular fitting to his background and talents. He's the originator of the BBC version of "TW3."

Not so fortunate were 17 members of the British cast of the Broadway legiter "Chips With Everything" who were barred from appearing on Sunday's (12) WCBS-TV "Camera Three." AFTRA squawked to the Immigration and Naturalization Service since their working visas applied only to the legitimate stage.

In Boston
almost everybody watches the COLUMBIA features on WBZ-TV

Pictured here [illegible] of [illegible]... the Boston Bruins National Hockey League Team.

The COLUMBIA features can be currently seen in more than 150 markets

Distributed exclusively by SCREEN GEMS

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week six different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U.S.

LOS ANGELES

STATIONS: KNXT, KNBC, KTLA, KABC, KHJ, KTTV, KCOP. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963.

RK.	Top Network Shows	Sta.	Total Area Homes Reached	Metro Area Rtg.
1.	Beverly Hillbillies	KNXT	967,100	36
2.	Dick Van Dyke	KNXT	859,300	31
3.	P. Mason; Bing Crosby	KNXT	799,100	31
4.	Bonanza	KNBC	765,300	28
5.	Candid Camera	KNXT	709,700	27
6.	Bob Hope	KNBC	699,900	28
7.	Mr. Novak	KNBC	694,500	27
8.	Red Skelton	KNXT	683,500	26
9.	Lucy Show	KNXT	641,000	24
10.	Jackie Gleason	KNXT	635,600	25

RK.	Top Syndicated Shows	Day & Time	Sta.	Dist.	Tot. Area Homes Reached	Met. Area Rtg.
1.	Death Valley Days	(Wed. 7:00)	KNBC	U.S. Borax	399,500	14
2.	Sea Hunt	(Sat. 7:00)	KNXT	Economee	394,700	15
3.	Leave It To Beaver	(Mon.-Fri. 7:00)	KTLA	MCA	251,100	9
4.	Fractured Flickers	(Thurs. 7:00)	KABC	Desilu	239,300	9
5.	Across The 7 Seas	(Tues. 7:00)	KNBC	Crosby Prod.	235,700	9
6.	Touche Turtle	(Mon.-Fri. 6:30)	KCOP	Screen Gems	206,100	8
7.	Lee Marvin	(Fri. 7:00)	KABC	UA-TV	200,400	8
8.	Tombstone; Fury; BB	(Sun. 2:00)	KABC	Economee	192,500	7
9.	Huckleberry Hound	(Tues. 7:00)	KTTV	Screen Gems	182,500	7
10.	Wanderlust	(Tues. 7:30)	KCOP	Wiljon	175,600	7

Top Competition	Sta.	Total Homes
CBS News	KNXT	364,800
Shirley Temple Film	KHJ	300,100
CBS News	KNXT	328,600
CBS News	KNXT	321,900
Leave It To Beaver	KTLA	311,200
Huntley-Brinkley	KNBC	265,900
CBS News	KNXT	295,000
Million & Movie; Golf	KHJ	69,100
Leave It To Beaver	KTLA	311,200
Mr. Novak	KNBC	700,600

CHICAGO

STATIONS: WBBM, WNBQ, WBKB, WGN. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963.

1.	Beverly Hillbillies	WBBM	853,300	40	1.	Huckleberry Hound (Mon. 6:00)	WGN	Screen Gems	346,900	16	6:00 Rpt; Standpoint	WBBM	268,600
2.	Dick Van Dyke	WBBM	815,800	38	2.	Rocky & Friends (Wed.-Fri. 6:00)	WGN	PAT	309,100	15	6:00 Rpt; Standpoint	WBBM	228,900
3.	Candid Camera	WBBM	796,500	36	3.	Yogi Bear (Tues. 6:00)	WGN	Screen Gems	301,400	14	6:00 Rpt; Standpoint	WBBM	235,700
4.	Andy Griffith	WBBM	728,500	35	4.	F. Flickers; Glass H'se (Thurs. 9:30)	WBKB	Desilu	269,900	13	Nurses	WBBM	562,500
5.	What's' My Line	WBBM	700,300	32	5.	Quick Draw McGraw (Thurs. 6:00)	WGN	Screen Gems	259,500	12	6:00 Rpt; Standpoint	WBBM	228,200
6.	Danny Kaye	WBBM	696,000	33	6.	Touche Turtle (Mon. 6:30)	WGN	Screen Gems	239,000	11	Mon. Night Movie	WNBQ	376,600
7.	Bonanza	WNBQ	689,500	31	7.	Dobie Gillis (Mon. 7:00)	WGN	20 Fox TV	226,100	10	Mon. Night Movie	WNBQ	387,900
8.	Benny; Calamity Jane	WBBM	661,500	31	8.	Bat Masterson; Hockey (Sat. 7:30)	WGN	Economee	197,000	9	Lawrence Welk	WBKB	495,500
9.	Moore; Calamity Jane	WBBM	603,100	28	9.	Death Valley Days (Sun. 6:00)	WBKB	U.S. Borax	188,300	9	Lassie	WBBM	422,900
9.	Teenage; Hitchcock	WBBM	603,100	29	10.	Detectives (Mon. 9:00)	WGN	Four Star	182,400	8	Sing Along Mitch	WNBQ	494,200

BOSTON

STATIONS: WBZ, WHDH, WNAC. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963.

1.	Jackie Gleason	WHDH	549,700	38	1.	Leave It To Beaver (Sat. 7:00)	WBZ	MCA	264,700	16	Lee Marvin	WHDH	141,100
2.	Dr. Kildare	WBZ	473,300	32	2.	Littlest Hobo (Wed. 7:00)	WNAC	Storer	219,900	17	Huntley-Brinkley	WBZ	421,700
3.	Ed Sullivan	WHDH	465,800	29	3.	Phil Silvers Show (Tues. 7:00)	WNAC	CBS Films	218,000	17	Huntley-Brinkley	WBZ	383,900
4.	Lassie	WHDH	450,400	26	4.	Dobie Gillis (Mon.-Fri. 6:30)	WNAC	20 Fox TV	201,700	14	News; Weather	WBZ	309,800
5.	Bonanza	WBZ	447,800	27	5.	Hole In One; FB (Sat. 4:30)	WHDH	J. Barry Prod.	194,700	13	Checkmate	WBZ	148,400
6.	Mr. Ed	WHDH	434,600	25	6.	One Step Beyond (Mon. 7:00)	WNAC	ABC Films	193,400	16	Huntley-Brinkley	WBZ	389,900
7.	Bob Hope	WBZ	419,600	30	7.	Fractured Flickers (Thurs. 7:00)	WNAC	Desilu	183,300	15	Huntley-Brinkley	WBZ	370,000
8.	Hazel	WBZ	409,100	27	8.	Battle Line (Sun. 7:00)	WBZ	Official	180,500	12	Lassie	WHDH	450,400
9.	P. Mason; Bing Crosby	WHDH	404,200	29	9.	Death Valley Days (Sat. 6:00)	WBZ	U.S. Borax	147,800	8	Wide World Sports	WNAC	134,000
10.	Beverly Hillbillies	WHDH	399,700	23	10.	Ripcord (Sat. 6:30)	WHDH	UA-TV	145,900	9	News; Weather	WBZ	252,200

ST. LOUIS

STATIONS: KTVI, KMOX, KSD, KPLR. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963.

1.	Bonanza	KSD	349,400	46	1.	Death Valley Days (Sat. 6:00)	KSD	U.S. Borax	104,800	13	Big 4; Editorial	KMOX	94,500
2.	Beverly Hillbillies	KMOX	322,200	42	2.	Yogi Bear (Thurs. 5:30)	KPLR	Screen Gems	86,300	13	CBS News	KMOX	92,600
3.	Candid Camera	KMOX	286,400	36	3.	Huckleberry Hound (Mon. 5:30)	KPLR	Screen Gems	76,900	12	Huntley-Brinkley	KSD	89,900
4.	What's My Line	KMOX	285,200	38	4.	Quick Draw McGraw (Tues. 5:30)	KPLR	Screen Gems	75,500	11	Huntley-Brinkley	KSD	90,100
5.	Dick Van Dyke	KMOX	280,100	37	5.	Maverick (Mon.-Fri. 4:30) (Sun. 5:30)	KSD	Warner Bros.	68,800	10	Early Show; Popeye	KMOX	58,300
6.	Andy Griffith	KMOX	273,500	37							Mr. Ed; Lassie	KMOX	163,500
7.	Petticoat Junction	KMOX	244,000	32	6.	Supercar (Wed., Fri. 5:00)	KPLR	ITC	67,400	11	Huntley-Brinkley	KSD	84,900
8.	Benny; Calamity Jane	KMOX	241,700	33	7.	Popeye; Early Show (M-F 5:00)	KMOX	UAA, KING	65,000	9	Maverick	KSD	66,900
9.	Disney's World	KSD	209,600	29	8.	Rifleman (Mon.-Fri. 5:00)	KTVI	Four Star	55,100	7	Maverick	KSD	66,900
10.	Danny Thomas	KMOX	199,000	26	9.	Battle Line (Thurs. 9:30)	KTVI	Official	49,300	7	Nurses	KMOX	187,700
					10.	Zane Grey Theatre (Mon.-Fri. 5:30)	KTVI	Four Star	49,200	6	Huntley-Brinkley	KSD	86,000

MIAMI

STATIONS: WTVJ, WCKT, WLBW. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963.

1.	P. Mason; Bing Crosby	WTVJ	173,100	34	1.	Death Valley Days (Wed. 7:00)	WTVJ	U.S. Borax	126,900	23	Rebel; Ripcord	WCKT	62,900
2.	Ed Sullivan	WTVJ	172,100	34	2.	Hawaiian Eye (Sat. 6:30)	WTVJ	Warner Bros.	105,700	18	Big Movie	WLBW	67,000
3.	Beverly Hillbillies	WTVJ	165,200	29	3.	Hooneymooners (Fri. 7:00)	WCKT	CBS Films	92,500	17	Worlds Beyond	WTVJ	96,100
4.	Jackie Gleason	WTVJ	163,500	32	4.	Rebel; Ripcord (Mon. 5:30; Wed. 7:00)	WCKT	ABC; UA-TV	55,700	12	Early Show; Weather	WTVJ	50,300
5.	Mr. Ed	WTVJ	159,700	30	5.	Biography (Sat. 7:00)	WCKT	Official	51,600	11	Death Valley Days	WTVJ	126,900
6.	Candid Camera	WTVJ	157,000	30	6.	Dick Powell Theatre (Wed. 10:00)	WLBW	Four Star	50,500	11	Hawaiian Eye	WTVJ	107,300
7.	Danny Kaye	WTVJ	145,300	30	7.	Supercar (Sun. 8:30)	WCKT	ITC	47,800	8	Danny Kaye	WTVJ	145,300
8.	To Tell The Truth	WTVJ	144,000	24	8.	W. Earp; Battlefield (Sat. 5:30)	WTVJ	ABC Films	40,700	7	Gospel; Sen. Holland	WTVJ	18,000
9.	NFL Football	WTVJ	143,900	26	9.	Bullwinkle (Sun. 8:00)	WCKT	PAT	38,400	8	Mr. Novak	WCKT	52,800
10.	Bob Hope	WCKT	140,000	32	10.	Space Angels (Sat. 8:30)	WCKT	Cartoon Dist.	35,900	7	Gospel; Favorites	WTVJ	18,100
											Coral G Rangers	WTVJ	37,400
											Alvin Show	WTVJ	53,800

ATLANTA

STATIONS: WSB, WAGA, WAII. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963. (Omitting Nov. 3-5)

1.	Beverly Hillbillies	WAGA	244,800	45	1.	Amos 'n' Andy (Mon.-Fri. 6:30)	WAGA	CBS Films	124,300	21	Huntley-Brinkley	WSB	107,900
2.	Bonanza	WSB	226,300	44	2.	Death Valley Days (Mon. 7:00)	WSB	U.S. Borax	123,300	22	Phil Silvers Show	WAGA	69,900
3.	Dick Van Dyke	WAGA	189,800	38	3.	Deputy (Tues. 7:00)	WAGA	NBC Films	99,500	18	Hennesey	WSB	91,200
4.	Virginian	WSB	179,000	34	4.	Whirlybirds (Wed. 7:00)	WSB	CBS Films	96,600	18	Mr. Ed	WAGA	115,600
5.	Petticoat Junction	WAGA	164,100	31	5.	Hennesey (Tues. 7:09)	WSB	NBC Films	91,200	18	Deputy	WAGA	99,500
6.	Andy Griffith	WAGA	156,100	32	6.	Beachcomber; Ripcord (Fri. 7:00)	WAGA	ITC; UA-TV	90,300	15	Gun Will Travel	WSB	84,200
7.	Lassie	WAGA	145,700	29	7.	Zane Grey Theatre (Thurs. 7:00)	WAGA	Four Star	89,500	17	Ripcord; Lee Marvin	WSB	82,100
8.	Sat. Night Movies	WSB	139,100	28	8.	Gun Will Travel (Fri. 7:00)	WSB	CBS Films	84,200	18	Beachcomber; Ripcord	WAGA	90,300
9.	Int'l Showtime	WSB	138,600	26	9.	Ripcord; Lee Marvin (Thurs. 7:00)	WSB	UA-TV	82,100	13	Zane Gray Theatre	WAGA	89,500
10.	Joey Bishop	WSB	132,200	30	10.	Bachelor Father (Tues. 7:30)	WAGA	MCA	79,400	13	Mr. Novak	WSB	117,300

YOU WANT
ACTION DRAMA SUSPENSE ROMANCE?

YOU'VE GOT IT!

Here's the last word in first run features for TV. 72 great motion pictures in all (Al Capone, Angel Baby, Friendly Persuasion, Pay or Die, Dondi, Big Circus, Hell to Eternity, Love In The Afternoon, Armored Command, King Of The Roaring 20's, The Bridge, and many more) — all jam-packed with big name stars (Gary Cooper, David Wayne, Audrey Hepburn, Vincent Edwards, Rod Steiger, Chuck Connors, David Janssen, Sal Mineo, Rita Moreno, Ernest Borgnine, Gina Lollobrigida, Tony Perkins, Maurice Chevalier, Vic Damone, Mickey Rooney and many more)

We call it CAVALCADE OF THE SIXTIES—GROUPS 1 & 2. You'll call it the most exciting package in years.

For more information, rates and promotional material, contact your AATV Sales Representative at any one of these locations.

165 W. 46th Street, N.Y. C. PLaza 7-8530
1232 So. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois WAbash 2-7937
4376 Sunset Drive, Hollywood, California NOrmandy 2-9181
2204 Commerce St., Dallas, Texas Riverside 7-1658

ALLIED ARTISTS TV

Schwerin's 'Why & When Do They Look at ATV'; Les Harris Shifts

London, Jan. 14.

At a time when the Independent Television Authority, (body which administers the British commercial network), is moving in the direction of greater audience research as laid down in the new TV Act which takes effect in August, Associated TeleVision's managing director Lew Grade has pacted with the Schwerin research operation here for an elaborate "find-why-they-view" probe into programs.

Over a six-month period, the Schwerin team, which has been researching commercials for ATV in the Midlands, will take a representative sample of around 3,000 viewers and record their psychological reaction to programs. Grade states he is dissatisfied with nosecounting and from here on in he wants to know what goes on in viewers heads. "It is no longer sufficient to know that a series is successful we need to know what makes a program successful."

Originally skedded to return to the States at the beginning of the year, Leslie Harris, executive in charge of production at ITC, ATV's subsid, has elected to stay in this country a further three months to join Schwerin and act as coordinator between the research org and ATV programming.

Harris has agreed to stay on for three months only "to get the scheme off and running" but then plans to wing Stateside to join his wife and family who left as initially planned.

Move, which will find Schwerin "dryrunning" one or two new audience research techniques including one where a viewer can avert his attention to a competitive program, is, according to Grade, the "first step towards improving the quality of television."

It is thought that by examining shows in depth, weaknesses of which producers are unaware will emerge and programs thus improved.

Radio Review

N.Y. PHILHARMONIC CONCERTS
With Milton Cross, Jay Harrison, guests
Director: James McAleer
Writer: Howald Bailey
120 Mins., Sun., 3 p.m.
TIME MAGAZINE
WOR, N.Y.
(Young & Rubicam)

After more than 30 years on CBS-Radio, the concerts by the New York Philharmonic are now being aired via its own network setup (83 stations at the last count) and in the New York area via WOR courtesy of Time Magazine which is picking up the tab.

The airing of the concerts have become a permanent part of the longhairs' listening habits and they should be grateful to WOR and Time for continuing the Sunday afternoon remote. In addition to Leonard Bernstein's boys, on hand for the broadcasts are Milton Gross as narrator and Jay Harrison to handle the intermission interviews. Both know their stuff and help round out a two-hour music session with interesting and lively patter. The continuity supplied by Howald Bailey is right on target and the Harrison interview with Aaron Copland on show caught Sunday (12) supplied a good insight into the composer.

For the record, the Philharmonic program from Philharmonic Hall at New York's Lincoln Center included works by Copland, Vivaldi, Mendelssohn and Austin. Featured soloists during the afternoon were Copland on piano, John Corigliano on violin, Don Ellis on trumpet, Barre Phillips on bass, and Joe Cocuzzo on percussion. Carl Berry's engineering helped bring it all into the home clear and straight. Gros.

Radio Month Theme

Washington, Jan. 14.

The theme for National Radio Month in 1964 will be "Radio, Your Constant Companion," NAB disclosed.

NAB puffery chief John Couric said the theme was chosen to show the medium's ability to serve a mass audience on an individual basis throughout the day, regardless of the listener's location, occupation or activity.

As in the past radio month will be observed in May.

Chi Radio

Continued from page 31

N. Y. (by way of Moscow). It's expected that Boggs will be assigned a political candidate to trail in a few weeks.

The NBC station also replaced its pre-noon deejay, Phil Bowman, whose contract had run out, with a tape-recorded strip hosted by Doug Pledger, a San Francisco personality who originates on sister station KNBR there. Pledger, who's understood to be immensely effective in that market, will cut a separate show for Chicago each day.

WBBM Radio, which has been undergoing a drastic but gradual program overhauling for more than a year, has dropped much of its segmented nighttime programming and installed its newest personality, Bud Kelly, from 8 to 10 p.m. weeknights and expanded his Saturday night chore to four and a half hours. With Kelly, the CBS station will put a new emphasis on current pop music (excepting the rockers) and will attempt to "break" the new hits. It's patently a play for a younger audience.

ABC Radio is making a physical switch and for the first time will centralize all central division facilities, under one roof. That will include sales, studios and talent offices. The web has taken the floor below its o&o station, WLS, at 360 N. Michigan.

Corpus Christi—Transfer of control of KVDO-TV here to Clinton D. McKinnon has been approved by the FCC.

Ponti

Continued from page 27

filmization of Pearl Buck's "Imperial Woman," to be a roadshow presentation, possibly involving Paramount. Others to be made for Par are "Where Love Has Gone" which is now shooting and "Nevada Smith," which Henry Hathaway will probably direct as a western epic.

Other features in the 11 include "A House Is Not a Home," which Par may distribute abroad, "The Major and the Private," "The Sands of Kalahari," "Casanova" (not to be confused with the projected tv series) and a film or two to topline Italo star Marcello Mastroianni. Also, in the future, Embassy will film Harold Robbins' "The Adventurers," which the author is currently writing. Skedded for release in '64 are such as "The Carpetbaggers," "Threepenny Opera," "Zulu," "Only One New York," "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," "The Empty Canvas" and "A Ghost at Noon."

First Runs

Continued from page 31

and WB. Success on the network level insures a continued flow of off-network product for syndication; conversely, failure to make it on the web level dries up the product potential in syndication.

Hanna Barbera will be out with a new cartoon series for Ideal Toy sponsorship throughout the country. UA-TV plans another go-around with Wolper pubaffairs specials for '64-'65. UA-TV also will have a half-hour first-run series. Other than a new first-runner from a house such as Official, the prospects for fresh material from established syndication houses doesn't look good at this time.

The off-network situation will come into better focus as the networks pencil in their respective schedules for '64-'65. The avalanche of off-network product, though, which occurred in previous seasons, isn't expected this time around.

N.Y. State Regents In Bid for $2,350,000 For Educ'l TV Purposes

Albany, Jan. 14.

Board of Regents, in statement of "Major Legislative Proposals for 1964," recommended the appropriation of $2,350,000, instead of $1,150,000, the present total for the extension of educational television in the State of New York.

Sum of $200,000 was suggested to be added "by increasing aid to educational councils and expanding video-tape libraries." An allotment of $750,000 to assist Rochester and Syracuse to establish ETV stations" was also requested.

And an appropriation of $750,000 "to assist schools and colleges in the use of low-power, high-frequency channels" should be added.

Regents' memorandum quoted the Starlin Report, to the effect that for a state of its wealth and prestige, New York had not been a leader in educational television, but "a slow follower." Requests of similar nature were not granted last year.

Blurb Pact

Continued from page 25

for the first time last year in its pact covering theatrical films.

SAG assistant national exec secretary Chester L. Migden explains actor gains in the new issue of Screen Actor, SAG organ.

Migden writes, "The primary thrust of the wage proposals relating to spot usage of commercials was aimed at correcting the unit rates at the lower end of the rate structure. Station-break commercials and certain local participating program commercials fall in the spot category and are paid in 13-week cycles on the basis of a count of units related to the number of cities in which the commercial is used."

New Bern, N.C. — Bob Sherrill, former program director of WAYS Radio in Charlotte, has joined the staff of WNBE, it was announced by Nathan Frank, president of the station.

NOW IN OUR 10th. YEAR

A DECADE OF RECOGNITION

SERVING KANSAS

AWARDS:
National Press Photographers Assn. (3 awards)
Kansas Parents and Teachers Assn. (2 awards)
Kansas News Photographers Assn. (2 awards)
National Headliners Club
American Heritage Foundation
Sigma Delta Chi

RATINGS:
For the past eight years KAKE-TV has been NUMBER ONE from sign-on to sign-off and ABC-TV has had 60-90% of the top 20 network shows in the Wichita market.*
*Estimates provided by Nielsen Station Index and American Research Bureau and are subject to limitations of sample size and other qualifications.

KAREN SCHWARTZ
MISS KAKELAND
1963

KAREN SCHWARTZ
MISS KANSAS
1964
Karen Kaye Schwartz, Miss Kakeland for 1963, represented Kansas at the Miss America Pageant where she won a $1,000 scholarship as the best standard or semi-classical singer.

THE KATZ AGENCY, INC.
National Representatives

KAKE abc TV ..... WICHITA

INSISTED ON SEVEN ARTS' QUALITY

Should TV Stop Smoking?

Continued from page 1

that moral decision, the tougher it's going to be to break the industry's ciggie habit. All indications point to the likelihood that on the air tobacco advertising, far from being curtailed, will be increased. The word is out to give increased orders for tv time, but with absolutely no publicity.

For example one of the largest buyers of tv advertising for cigarets, who personally supervises almost $20,000,000 in tv billings per annum, believes that the cigaret advertisers will deliberately step up the amount and intensity of tv advertising to counter and blunt the potential consumption-cutting effects of the report. He points out that whereas in England six months was required for tobacco promotion to restore cigaret consumption to the levels from which they were depressed with the issuance of the Tobacco Report of the Royal College of Surgeons, American know-how—geared to tv advertising—can do the identical job in three months.

Sweeping changes in the broadcasters' current laissez faire attitude toward cigaret advertising are regarded as inevitable in both radio and tv. But there's no likelihood of sudden withdrawal—the broadcasters' fiscal structure could not stand such cold turkey treatment. Even the industry advocates of the most "radical" measures against the ciggie commercials have not proposed dropping a total iron curtain on such business, such as now exists on hard liquor.

The indicated move will be towards "self-regulation" in the area of limiting cig commercials to the later hours and to shows which have no juvenile appeal. How effective such restrictions will be in blacking out the tobacco pitch to teenagers who seemingly have access to the set at all hours of the day and night will be an arguable point, but the broadcasters will at least have the right to claim that they are trying to grapple with the problem.

The broadcasters are on the hot seat in the controversy over cigaret advertising, because of the preponderant allocation of tobacco ad budgets to tv, but they're curious over what plans the other media have in meeting this clash of moral and monetary considerations. If the broadcasters have rushed to make statements, no matter how guarded, about "studying" the problem at the Jan. 22 meeting of the NAB Code Review Board, the print media have thus far maintained a "no comment" stance on the controversy.

The tobacco industry is expected to approve any measures that the broadcasters take in limiting the time segments in which cig advertising can be used. In fact, before the U. S. Surgeon General's report was issued, there was a rush of the major tobacco brands to lock up time slots after 9 p.m. when, presumably, the kiddies are asleep. At the same time, the cig companies have been moving strongly into sports events sponsoring because of the heavy male adult audiences. That children of all ages also watch these contests is a contradiction in approach still to be resolved.

But if the tobacco giants are amenable to time slot restrictions, they can be counted on for fierce resistance against any interference in their advertising copy. This copy is what the tobacco industry wishes to reserve for itself as its area of "self-regulation." Opening gambit by the American Tobacco Co. in listing the "tar content" of its new Carlton brand indicates the direction in which the cigaret ad copy may go towards satisfying its critics and its conscience.

In the hours following the release of the U. S. Surgeon General's report, the broadcasters gave it the full news treatment. The grisly mortality statistics were highlighted on both regular news shows and specials on all three networks and indie stations across the country. But that was no shock to the tobacco industry. It had already been conditioned to such bad news by previous tv documentaries on the link between smoking and health.

'ROBINSON CRUSOE' FOR 2D GERMAN TV

Mainz, Jan. 14.

West Germany's Second Television Network is turning to the classics for a couple of new television series.

First in the works is "Robinson Crusoe," being made in four parts, each 90 minutes long, with 50 different sets, ranging from scenes filmed on the Canary Islands to shots in the south of France.

Second German TV is coproducing the series with Franco London Films.

WLW-C Revamp

Columbus, Jan. 14.

Personnel changes have been been announced by WLW-C, Crosley tv outlet. Richard A. Howell joined the news department as a reporter - photographer. Larry Reinhart, sales service director, has been promoted to account exec. Walter Musser, set-up supervisor, is the new traffic manager. Musser replaces Jean Haines, who has accepted a position at KTWO-TV, Casper, Wyo. Betty Lee Corbett has been named assistant to Morrie Butler, special services director. She replaces Mrs. Betty Shepherd who resigned to become director of public relations for the National Conference on Social Welfare here.

Mrs. Pam Hastings Mellman, former producer of Columbus Town Meeting on WBNS radio and WBNS-TV, has been named promotion coordinator of WMNI radio here.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

NAB prez LeRoy Collins selected John Dille Jr., as chairman of the association's Editorializing Committee. Named to serve under Dille, who is president of the Communicana Group, Elkhart, Ind., were: Frank Abbot Jr., prez WWGP, Sanford, N.C.; Rex Howell, prexy, KREK-AM-FM-TV, Grand Junction, Colo.; A. Louis Reed, exec v.p. and general manager, WDSU-TV, New Orleans; George Whitney, v.p. and g.m., KFMB-TV, San Diego; George Comte, geem, WTMJ-AM-FM-TV, Milwaukee and Oliver Keller, prez and g.m., WTAX-AM-FM, Springfield, Ill.

Pope's visit to the Holy Land set up a communications problem for NBC newsmen on either side of the Israel-Jordan border. Because of the "armed-armistice" on the line, web crews had to communicate via cable to New York and back—16,000 miles to get a message a distance of three miles.

According to Iris Productions, the new Carroll Levis skein based on a newspaper feature "Did It Happen?" which started production at ABC-TV's Teddington studio last month, is not a co-production between Iris Productions and Paris-TV as indicated in VARIETY Dec. 25. The French producers, it is pointed out, have merely hired Iris Productions facilities and personnel, including Michael Vardy who is directing.

British Com'l TV

Continued from page 27

the form of "additional representation of the communities they serve". In ATV's case, there will also be some reorganization of the company's internal structure designed to separate the tv activities from non-video ventures such as bowling alleys and music interests.

Scottish-TV, 80% owned by Lord Thomson who named a British commercial tv franchise as a "license to print money", is destined to undergo the introduction of new elements into the company both on the board and in the ownership of voting and non-voting shares. Latter will be offered by Lord Thomson to investors preferably those resident in Scotland.

According to Lord Hill: "It is desirable . . that the ownership of program companies should be fairly widely spread and in the case of regional companies should include residents in the companies' areas. Further, the boards of program companies should include an adequate number of members drawn from the life of the communities they serve."

The ITA topper was at pains to point out that the decision not to let new blood into the industry at this point was not a kiss of death for hopeful contenders. "The Authority", he says, "remains anxious that opportunities to enter commercial tv . . . should be given whenever possible to new groups."

He went on to say it was not easy to compare the achievements of an established contractor with the promise of a new applicant. But, he said, he would not have hesitated to make changes for the short three-year franchise period—which he refers to as the interim period before the possible introduction of a second commercial web—if he had been convinced any of the groups gave real promise of an improvement on the performance of an existing contractor in the area for which it had applied.

CTV's Olympics

Continued from page 27

inked, with Westminster Paper in for half of the tv costs; Texaco (Canada) ltd. and American Homes Products each in for a quarter. (Agencies handling the deals, respectively, have been James Lovick & Co., Ltd., Ronalds-Reynolds & Co., Ltd., Young & Rubicam, Toronto).

Says Tom Atkins, CTV's general sales manager, gleefully over the CBC snub, "CTV will bring exclusive coverage of the 1964 Olympic games to television viewers across Canada." While the Olympic coverage marks the debut as sponsor of Westminster Paper on CTV, American Home Products are currently on the indie network and rank among CTV charter advertisers, while the "Trust Texaco" slogan is a familiar note on the CTV screen.

Under the ABC tv exclusive overseas rights to the Olympics, CTV will be feeding live coverage to its trans-Canada network, and drawing upon 40 ABC cameras and nine video tape machines. Slow motion techniques will dramatize events.

In gearing the boat over the CBC and the embarrassing tiein with ABC—which earlier tied up the North American franchise—CTV is ignoring the radio rights, all its trans-Canada outlets being tv. (Radio coverage is still being sought by CBC).

Scotland's Favorite TV Show: 'Hawaiian Eye'

Glasgow, Jan. 14.

"Hawaiian Eye" is the most popular American series in Central Scotland, according to the annual readers' poll conducted by the tv mag, The Viewer. Series, slotted here on Scottish Television at 10:30 p.m. Sundays, came out No. 1 in the "Best American series" category, and was closely followed by "Bonanza."

Top British program, according to same poll, was Granada-TV's "Coronation Street" skein, with "The Saint" as runnerup. Best feature series was Scottish Television's nightly news-magazine "Here and Now," and best comedy series was another local situation comedy, "The Adventures of Fransie & Josie."

Rikki Fulton and Jack Milroy, comedy stars of "Francis and Josie,' won The Viewer's trophy as Personalities of the Year.

ACLU

Continued from page 27

"dampens the spirit" of those who see in the radio-tv medium an opportunity for enlarging public understanding of controversial issues.

The ACLU emphasized that "since we are against censorship, we would not approve the dictating to station licensees whether or not to carry any particular program or individual. We submit, however, that the elimination of political affidavit requirements on an across-the-board basis would defeat the arbitrary censorship of the citizen's right to see and hear which is now being imposed by the ABC affidavit requirement."

BY ORDER OF HON. JAMES E. MORIARTY—REFEREE IN BANKRUPTCY

THE TRUSTEE OFFERS FOR SALE

THE ENTIRE ASSETS OF

CONTINENTAL SOUND CORP . . .

Bankrupt #159, 204S

COMPLETELY EQUIPPED SOUND STUDIO

Located at

722 N. Seward St., Hollywood 38, Calif.

HOLLYWOOD'S MOST MODERN SOUND STUDIO

WITH THE FOLLOWING FACILITIES:

• PRODUCTION RECORDING EQUIPMENT •

MUSIC SCORING • OPTICAL & MAGNETIC TRANSFERRING

• RE-RECORDING • NARRATION RECORDING •

• CUTTING ROOMS • PROJECTION ROOM •

NEW MODERN BUILDING WITH PARKING FACILITIES

. . . Advantageous Lease Available . . .

Sale conducted in the Courtroom of Hon. James E. Moriarty, Room 519, U.S. Post Office and Court House Bldg., 312 N. Spring St., Los Angeles, Calif., at 10:00 AM, Feb. 3, 1964. Inspection on Premises January 21, 22, 23, 24, 30, 31, 1964—10:00 AM to 4:00 PM each day.

For further information contact:
CARLYLE MICHELMAN, Trustee; 309 Santa Monica Blvd., Suite 306, Santa Monica, Calif. Tel.: UP 0-1042.

MCA uses revolving stages from Macton — the world's leading producer of turntables
Standard • Custom • Portable
(also rental units)
WRITE.. Macton Machinery Co., Inc. Jefferson St. Dept. V. Stamford, Conn. 06902—(203) 324-6161

IRISH SETTER PUPPIES
Outstanding litter, finest line bred stock available.
Call ORange 3-4873 (201 Code)
Greenbaum, 570 Springdale Ave., East Orange, N. J.

abc

FIRST
5:00-7:30 PM
MON-FRI

FIRST
5:00-11:00 PM
MON-SUN

FIRST
7:30-11:00 PM
MON-SUN

From The Production Centres

Continued from page 26

troducing the idea of renaming Congress Expressway the Dwight D. Eisenhower. That was proposed in a station editorial delivered by veepee Red Quinlan Dec. 13. City Council voted unanimously for it last week... WNBQ manager Bob Lemon has a brother Tom who's one of the leading gubernatorial candidates in Indiana... Jim Hanlon has been tapped to coordinate WGN-AM-TV's activities at the New York World's Fair. Station is sponsoring the speakers program at the Illinois exhibit... Richard Moss switched from WNBQ's engineering staff to head up the station's video recording sales (tape commercials) operation... Richard Moran joined the WIND sales staff from WHEN-TV, Syracuse... Daily News advertising columnist George Lazarus gets a weekly 15 minute show on WGN Radio called "World of Advertising"... Pat Leslie joined WBBM-TV, from Philadelphia, as its fourth femme personality. She starts with a Saturday show.

IN LONDON .

Both BBC and the commercial web will be covering the Winter Olympics at Innsbruck—Jan. 29 to Feb. 8—both webs linking with European services . . . Jack Hargreaves, ex Southern-TV on-screen anchor man, joins Associated-Rediusion as specialist producer. But he will still keep in front of the vidicons . . . Granada-TV picked up and slotted "Petticoat Junction" . . . Vet radio producer Bill Gates hospitalized. Likewise Frankie Vaughan . . . Anglia-TV program boss Peter Holmans snapped up yet another Yank series, this time "The Fugitive" from ABC Films . . . BBC Radio embarked on mammoth tribute to Shakespeare has skedded produtions of his works in a pattern that will spread throughout the year . . . Dan Farson, vet inquisitor of the commercial network, has come up with a new series for Associated-Rediffusion, "Something To Say" . . . BBC-TV secured Diane Cilento for the title role of "Lysistrata" now being readied for the "Festival" series . Tim Slessor back from a trek round U.S. with BBC film unit compiled 10 programs on the people and attitudes of America.

IN WASHINGTON . . .

Lester Lindow, exec director of the Assn. of Maximum Service Telecasters, was elected prez of the Broadcasters Club here. Other officers are: Robert Kennedy, Kear & Kennedy consulting engineers, chairman; Henry Rau, WOL, v.p.; Richard Stakes, WMAL-TV, treasurer; Albert Warren, Television Digest, asst. treas. and Thomas Dowd, Pierson, Ball & Dowd, secretary... Frank Wilson named Radio Editor of WTOP News, a newly-created post. He has been newsman and most recently General Production Manager for station Named Program Director at WTOP was William Hedgpeth who has been Film Director for WTOP-TV. Succeeding Hedgpeth as film director was Charles Thompson... "Today in Congress" moderated by Joseph McCaffrey went back on air for seventh year on WMAL-AM... WRC's Mac McGarry will be one of the judges at the Goodwill Ball Jan. 31... Mark Evans interviewed one of tv's more vociferous critics Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) on Sunday (12) on WTTG-TV's "Opinion in the Capital".

IN SAN FRANCISCO .

Mark Blinoff, former promotion man for the James Brothers Circus, named program coordinator at KSFO, replacing Bob Hawkins, now program director at KEX, Portland, Ore. . . . Three attorneys and an emdee went into the matter of "Personal Injury Awards—Too High?" on KRON, with Jerry Jensen, moderator on the "Speak Out" series, refereeing . . as usual, no decision . . . Mort Sahl and the Folksters Quartet featured on the first "hungry i" telecast on KGO, with Dick Gregory, Glenn Yarborough, Bill Dana and others who have played Enrico Banducci's establishment pencilled in for future shows . . . Bob Cawley directs, with Jon Heaphy scripting . . . "The Techs," a news special slated for "Assignment Four" on KRON-TV, treks to classrooms and the football field at De Anza High School for material on new educational training programs. Written and produced by Al Kowhles of the news and documentary department, with Dale McGill behind the lens . . . William B. Decker, general manager of NBC-owned KNBR Radio, named prexy of the San Francisco Radio Broadcasters Assn. for 1964. Lewis H. Avery of KYA tapped for veep and treasurer, and Don Curran, ABC vice-president, is secretary.

IN MINNEAPOLIS .

University of Minnesota reports 1,000 psychology students now receiving instruction via closed circuit tv. It's the largest class to get tv book-learnin' in the school's history. More than 6,500 U. students in 14 courses will participate in televised classroom sessions this year . Time-Life's indie WTCN-TV continuing its extensive sports coverage into '64, carrying NBA basketball "Game of the Week" . . . KSTP newscaster Bob Ryan off tomorrow (15) for the Far East. Ryan's 11th overseas newsgathering jaunt will take him to Viet Nam, Quemoy, Formosa and Japan . . KMSP-TV preemed "The Lois Leppart Show" yesterday (13). Half-hour weekday entry includes interviews with show biz personalities. Viewers are invited to phone in questions and chat with the celebs . . . CBS-TV European correspondent Daniel Schorr in town today (14) to address Minneapolis Women's Club

IN CINCINNATI .

WCPO-TV stretched its evening news and sports programming to full hour by pitting Walter Cronkite against Huntley-Brinkley on WLW-TV for 30 minutes . . . Personnel shuffling at Taft Broadcasting WKRC radio and tv stations has comparative newcomers Dorie Enser and Gene Parham, from WMOH, Hamilton, teaming on "Dialing for Dollars" and Murray Roberts, via WCKY, hosting "Bingo" and movies. Departing voices and faces are of George Palmer and Pat Boisseau, vet newsmen; Jane Lynn, longtime announcer, who holds as freelancer on Cincy Enquirer a.m. five-minute digest; Johnny Morris, tv director; Gene Brent, announcer, and Bud Stagg, newsman and announcer, who joined the WCKY staff . . . Total of the '63 Ruth Lyons Christmas fund for children in 64 Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky hospitals reached record $391,820.73.

French Cultural Leaders Protest Radio Curtailment

Paris, Jan. 14.

An open letter to the governmental Radio-diffusion-Television Francaise, handling radio and tv, and to the press, by a group of distinguished people of letters and the arts, sounded a warning against the harm that could be done to radio as a means of culture by the severe economic measures recently carried out and pending.

One of the four stations has been dropped and another may also disappear next Oct. Underwriters feel that these measures will cut down radio to an informative rather than a cultural and artistic medium. They feel that setowners, who pay licenses, are thus being shortchanged in the process. And payments have not been lowered.

They point out that orchestras will suffer as well as art centres in various parts of France that have had access to air time. It is felt that even if purely scholarly programs are built up the artistic aspects are bound to suffer. Many dramatic, literary and musical shows are to be dropped and all this is deplored by the petitioners.

A new radio and tv building was just opened and they think it ironic that radio should be cut down, perhaps to pay for this modern headquarters, at a time when the new facilities should call for new and more courageous expansions of radio.

N.Y. Blurb Scene

Continued from page 31

gravate the difficulties of the companies which do not enjoy the guarantee at times when there is little business around."

The producer figures that important to advertisers and agencies is the fact that these "deals" will eventually cut down their range of choice by leaving only a handful of blurb makers with the technical skills to turn out quality production.

He finally draws the comparison with the feature film industry, which went into a swift decline when it was controlled by just a few major Hollywood companies. It's been the work of the independents that has snapped that industry back.

Likewise, he says, "Look at the commercial film festivals. Dollar volume to quality, you will find the smaller organizations the wellsprings of creative work." Citing some of the better small blurb makers—Pelican, Pintoff, Illustro, Televideo, Wylde—he points out that most would be economically hard pressed by the "deals" and "bargain-hunting" to the point of failure.

Stanley Rubin Spurns Revue Veepee Slot

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Producer Stanley Rubin has turned down an offer for a Revue studios veepee spot, instead will produce and write his own projects for tv and feature films.

Rubin, who left Revue in June on a six-month European sabbatical with his family, returned to find the veepee bid waiting but said he prefers to operate on his own. His projects will he handled by his rep, Harold Rose.

ADVANCED TRAINING IN TELEVISION

in Directing and Producing; Acting, Technical Operations; TV Film Production; TV Announcing and The Television Personality. Courses offered in the University's own Production Center. Intended for those who require more experience in the routines of production. Beginning courses also available.

Spring Program begins February 3

Send for Bulletin TV-2

DIVISION OF GENERAL EDUCATION
NEW YORK UNIVERSITY
Washington Square, New York 3, N. Y.
Telephone SPring 7-3131

Mgt.: William Morris Agency

New York's largest specialists in motion picture & TV insurance
(cast, film, weather, liability, cameras, props, plagiarism...)
WINKLER ASSOCIATES, LTD.
120 W. 57 St., New York 19, Circle 7-3366

CONTROLLER-ACCOUNTANT
Available
10 years in TV industry. Cost conscious administrator. Strong organizer. Budgets, cash flow, financial statements, taxes, management studies. Bank negotiations. Manual and IBM systems.
Box V-2558, VARIETY
154 W. 46th St., New York 10036

TITTLE PACES GIANTS
CELTICS WIN IN EAST MANTLE HOMERS

"SOME THINGS NEVER CHANGE"

And, in Erie, Pa., some things never change. For instance, WICU-TV continues to dominate the market with a 76% average share of audience in late night viewing and a 67% average share (*) in prime time! Like Y. A. Tittle, Mickey Mantle and the Boston Celtics, WICU-TV doesn't change!

(*) NSI, Nov.'63

WICU-TV
CHANNEL 12
ERIE

THE VALUE OF INFORMATION IS MEASURED BY ITS RELIABILITY
B
BLAIR TELEVISION
A division of John Blair & Company

abc

IF YOU MAKE IT FOR A DIME...
SELL IT FOR A DOLLAR.....
AND IT'S HABIT FORMING.....

. . . then you don't need us. (Although we'd sure like to meet you.)

But if your product needs selling in the vital Northwest market, KSTP-TV is for you.

The Northwest's first TV station, KSTP-TV serves and sells a market which includes 810,800 TV homes and over $5 Billion in spendable income.

KSTP television 5
100,000 WATTS • NBC
MINNEAPOLIS • ST. PAUL

Elvis Hits $20,000,000 Gross Jackpot, Sells 49,300,000 Singles, 11-Mil Albums

By MICHAEL FESSIER, Jr.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

His imminent professional demise having been forecast annually since his dynamic arrival on the show biz scene in 1956, Elvis Presley heads into 1964 as easily the most robust corpse extant, his estimated gross income to date a lively $20,000,000.

According to figures released last week by RCA Victor, Presley's single disk sales have hit 49,300,000 in his eight years with the company. His LPs have topped the 11,000,000 mark, his EPs 12,000,000. Per his RCA pact, which runs through 1971, he will continue to etch annually two LPs and four singles. His royalties average 5% of the retail sales gross.

It is estimated that Presley's 15 films have attracted some $75,000,000 through the boxoffice wickets, launching with "Love Me Tender", a 1956 20th-Fox release.

Col. Tom Parker, longtime commander-in-chief of the Presley forces, discloses that last year's take on straight film salaries alone hit $1,500,000 with 50% of films' profits due on top of that figure.

Coin is split down-the-line 75% for Elvis, 25% for Parker with the William Moris office plucking 10% off the top of film revenues. Says Parker, "We make no picture deals without the great potentate—Abe Lastfogel."

The Colonel is a mite distressed at the public's exaggerated idea of what he derives from the Presley association, insisting that at least 50% of his share is plowed right back into the business side of the operation. This includes office expenses, advertising and exploitation, etc. Elvis' cut, he declares, "goes straight to the Memphis accountants."

Presley's last tv appearance was three years ago with Frank Sinatra, for which he received $125,000. Since then Parker has nixed all small screen offers, including one for $150,000 — althought Elvis' schedule precluded taking that offer.

Frequent rumbles around town that the edge has been taken off Presley's b.o. pull by over-exposure draws a shrug from the canny Colonel. "Look—you got a product you sell it. As long as the studios come up with the loot we'll make the deal." As an after thought, he adds, "Those guys complaining—some of them are not working too good. Me—I'm happy being able to buy the groceries."

And on b.o. returns of recent Presley pix: "They keep asking us to do more. Somebody must be making a buck. A producer was complaining that an Elvis picture of his didn't do so well. All I can say is that he must like losing money. Now he's after us for two more."

Bulldogging the same line of thought, Parker tells of his retort to a producer who tried to wheedle Presley's filmprice down. Less coin, producer insisted, would be only fair in exchange for a "great" script he had to get Elvis back on the right track. "I told him that if we're doing so badly maybe next year he wouldn't want us at all and we better get all we can while we can—and I hiked the price.

'An Oscar for Elvis'

"Another guy says he has a script which would cinch an Oscar

(Continued on page 50)

'Roses' Parody on Lewis Show Comes Up with ABC Coin for Chappell & Co.

The claim by Chappell & Co. against the ABC Network and the Jerry Lewis Show, based upon the use of a parody lyric of "Everything's Coming Up Roses," has been settled amicably and for an undisclosed sum of money which is said to be "substantial." There was also an agreement by the network against future use.

This type of violation is looked upon by authors, composers and publishers as not only an infringement of their copyrights in and to their musical composition but as damaging to the dignity and repute of the compositions themselves.

"Everything's Coming Up Roses" is from the legituner "Gypsy" and was written by Jule Styne (music) and Stephen Sondheim (lyrics).

Col Ups John Simon

Columbia Records has upped John Simon to the post of associate producer of Masterworks artists & repertoire.

Simon will be responsible to Charles Burr, editor of special projects for Columbia, for assisting in editing and producing Legacy, original cast and other sepecial project albums. In addition, he will assist in other Masterworks projects as assigned.

Simon joined Col's management trainee program in July, 1963.

ABC-Par to Cut 'Spirits' Cast Set

ABC-Paramount is moving into the original Broadway cast album sweepstakes this season with "High Spirits." The musical, starring Beatrice Lillie, Tammy Grimes and Edward Woodward, is scheduled to open on Brodway March 31. The label acquired the album rights after negotiations with On-Stage Productions, the theatrical producing firm of Lester Osterman and Jule Styne.

"High Spirits," a musical adaptation of Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit," has music by Hugh Martin, book by Timothy Gray, and lyrics by Martin and Gray. Coward is directing.

This will be the first original cast album on the ABC-Paramount label. The new Carol Burnett show, "A Girl To Remember," would have been the first, but its opening was postponed until May.

KEELY SMITH FORMS MONA LISA RECORDS

Singer Keely Smith has gone into the record business with her own disk label. It's tagged Mona Lisa Records.

The disk company was formed by Miss Smith and her business associate Barbara Belle, and all future recordings are to be waxed under Miss Smith's production firm, Keely Smith Enterprises. Negotiations are now under way for the signing of talent.

Old Dot Records masters, not only of Keely Smith alone, but also those of Miss Smith and Louis Prima together, will also be repackaged for sale on the Mona Lisa label. Roulette will handle national distribution for the Mona Lisa line, which was launched with Miss Smith's recording of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

Miss Smith's last disk tie was with the Reprise label. The firm still holds yet-to-be-released sides done by Miss Smith with Frank Sinatra from the Reprise Repertory Theatre series.

3M Adds 3 Diskeries To Stereo Tape Line

Pre-recorded stereo music under the Warner Bros., Reprise and Command labels will be marketed by the 3M Co. for use with its home tape cartridge system. The first selections of the new repertoire of pre-recorded tape cartridges will be available this month.

Under licensing agreements concluded with the companies, 3M will duplicate and market the stereo music in tape cartridge form under the diskery's labels by Revere-Wollensak salesman, primarily to those retail outlets handling the 3M line of tape cartridge machines.

Previously, 3M had made similar deals with ABC-Paramount and Westminster. Music produced under the Command label has been available for use with the Revere tape cartridge system for several months but distribution had been handled by Command itself. Now, 3M will take over distribution of the existing Command tape cartridge music selections and immediately broaden the repertoire.

Columbia Records and Musictapes, Inc., also are offering repertoire on the tape cartridges used with the 3M system. Both of these companies handle their own distribution.

Elektra's Holzman Sets 3 O'seas License Deals

Jac Holzman, Elektra Records president, has concluded foreign licensing agreements with Sonet of Sweden, Trutone of South Africa and La Gloria (Viking) of New Zealand, for distribution of the Elektra catalog in those countries.

Elektra is currently handled on the Continent by Vogue, in Great Britain by Pye, in Israel by Hed-Arzi, in Mexico by Doscos Importadora, and in Australia by Peter Mann.

Dot Label Eyes Record '64 Biz

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Dot Records, which nets $500,000 during an average year, anticipates a record-smashing 1964, if prexy Randy Wood can put the clamps on a few things and hypo a few others.

Main Dot projects for the new year, according to Wood, include (1) tighten credit selling, (2) heighten promotion of specialty items and (3) cool discount selling. He feels changes will be effected easily in that diskery had been moving in these directions throughout latter part of 1963.

Wood states that Dot's 1962 dollar volume was $13,500,000 and though 1963 volume was below this (he declined to say how much below), net profit was up. "The 18% and 20% discounts we've been giving away were what kept profits below where they should have been," he added ruefully.

When Paramount Pictures bought Dot in 1957 for an approximately $3,000,000, Wood retained 54,000 shares of diskery stock and was named prexy of Dot as well as v.p. of Paramount Pictures. According to Wood, Paramount not only recuped its entire investment within five years after purchase, but also was in a position to reject a $10,000,000 offer made by Philips Records in 1962.

Wood moved here in 1950 from his native Tennessee and launched the new enterprise. Among Dot firsts Wood boasts is the 100% no-time-limit guarantee to dealers on every disk sold, started in 1950. "We're still taking back returns from unsold 78s and when you add it up through the last 13 years, it amounts to millions. But it's worth it," he adds. "I've always been a stickler with my policy of never letting a dealer get stuck."

First big Dot smash was "Sail Along Silvery Moon" by Lawrence Welk, which sold $1,000,000 worth and was followed shortly thereafter by Welk's "Calcutta." Biggest year in Dot's annals, according to Wood, was 1961—$16,000,000.

Judy Lishinsky Reining Epic Info Services After Billy James Coast Shift

Judith Lishinsky has taken over as administrator of information services for Epic Records replacing Billy James, who has shifted to the Coast to manage Columbia Records' information division there.

In her new post, Miss Lishinsky will be responsible to John Kurland, director of public relations and information services for Columbia Records, for local and national press contact involving Epic artists.

Miss Lishinsky joined Col's information department in September, 1962, after three years with RCA Victor's publicity department.

James will be responsible to Kurland for local and national press contact involving the Coast activities of Columbia and Epic artists. He has been with Col since 1961 when he joined the diskery as a copywriter.

Fega's Focus Label

Mort Fega, New York jazz disk jockey (WEVD) has launched his own jazz record company, Focus, and has worked out arrangements to have his label nationally distributed by Atlantic Records.

The first Focus release will be "Tapestry" by guitarist-banjoist Chuck Wayne. It will be put on the market later this month.

E. H. (Buddy) Morris Buys 33-1/3% Interest in Bregman, Vocco & Conn In $1-Mil Deal With Vocco Daughter

By HERM SCHOENFELD

In the biggest deal of recent years involving an ASCAP catalog, E. H. (Buddy) Morris has bought a one-third interest in Bregman, Vocco & Conn Inc. and its various subsidiaries. Morris acquired the 33-1/3% share in BVC from Mrs. Lorraine H. Curry, daughter of the late Rocco Vocco, one of the firm's founders along with Jack Bregman and Chester Conn.

Price of the acquisition, which was confirmed Friday (10) by Bregman and Conn, was not disclosed, but the total value of the BVC firm is estimated at around $3,000,000. Its income from the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers tops $300,000 annually.

Bregman and Conn, who will continue to administer the company as combined majority stockholders, expect Morris to take a "creative interest" in the exploitation and replenishment of the BVC catalog. Morris, who as owner of Edwin H. Morris & Co., Inc., has been a prominent publisher of Broadway scores, can be expected to funnel some of this legit material to BVC in the future. Morris, incidentally, bought into BVC on a personal basis, not as part of his holdings in the E.H. Morris Co.

Bregman, Conn and Morris are understood to have arrived at a very friendly understanding about the future of BVC. Both Bregman and Morris have been ASCAP board members for the past several years and have always had amicable dealings in the past.

In fact, Morris' standing with the oldline ASCAP publishers boomed a couple of years ago when he moved to liquidate his affiliation with Broadcast Music Inc. as a matter, as Morris put it, of principle.

Morris' buy into BVC joins one of the younger ASCAP publishers with one of the veteran Tin Pan Alley houses. Although formed in 1938, BVC combined the talents of a trio of experienced music men going back to the 1920s and earlier. Vocco, who was longtime head of Feist's office in Chicago where he picked up songs from Isham Jones, Gus Kahn, Ted Fiorito and Walter Donaldson, among others, was one of the most colorful of the oldtime songpluggers and an intimate of show biz's top names of his era.

Bregman was trained in the Rob-

(Continued on page 50)

Amy-Mala's Distrib Deal

Larry Uttal, general manager of Amy-Mala Records, has inked an agreement with the Aberback group for exclusive distribution of all future releases by Lou Johnson. These records will be released on the Hilltop label and distributed by Amy-Mala.

Johnson's first release under the new distribution deal will be "It Ain't No Use," which was arranged and produced by Burt Bacharach.

Elect Wrather To Cap Records' Bd.

Jack Wrather has been elected to the board of directors of Capitol Records. Wrather is president and chairman of Wrather Corp., which includes among its holdings the Disneyland Hotel, Muzak Corp. and such tv properties as "Lassie," "Lone Ranger" and "Sgt. Preston of the Yukon."

The election of Wrather to the board is seen to be another move in Capitol's diversification program. Last year Cap tied in Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin in their theatre holdings and legit production activities.

Cap's board is chairmanned by Glenn E. Wallichs. Other members of the board are Daniel C. Bonbright and Alan W. Livingston, vice chairman and president, respectively; Sir Joseph Lockwood, chairman of Electric & Musical Industries (EMI); Richard Dawes, director of EMI's records and international division; John A. Wells, New York attorney, and Jonathan B. Lovelace, chairman of American Mutual Fund Inc.

'SPIRITS' SCORE GETS UNRESTRICTED RELEASE

The Hugh Martin-Timothy Gray score for the upcoming legituner, "High Spirits," is being released this week by publisher Howie Richmond on an unrestricted basis. The show, starring Beatrice Lillie, Tammy Grimes and Edward Woodward, is now in rehearsal and set to open in New York March 31 at the Alvin Theatre.

Saturation distribution of professional copies and demo LP records is being made to record companies, singers, tv producers, musical directors, arrangers, choral groups, plus nightclub performers in all areas without restrictions of any kind in regard to record releases and performances.

In addition to the show's top ballad plug, "Forever And A Day," sets of artist copies and demo records will include the songs, "You'd Better Love Me," "I Know Your Heart" and "Was She Prettier Than I?"

Last year Richmond scored in the legituner field with songs from "Stop The World-I Want To Get Off" ("What Kind Of Fool Am I?" and "Gonna Build A Mountain") and "Oliver" ("As Long As He Needs Me" and "Where Is Love?")

Sam Fox Now Sole Pub Rep for MJQ Catalog

Sam Fox Publishing Co. has taken over as sole publishing representative for the catalog of MJQ Music.

The MJQ catalog, featuring jazz and jazz-oriented material, contains compositions by such composers as Alec Wilder, Gunther Schuller, Andre Hodeir, Werner Heider, Lalo Schifrin, Margo Guryan, Peter Phillips, Larry Austin and others.

The catalog also includes such jazz composers as John Lewis and Milt Jackson of the Modern Jazz Quartet (from which the MJQ name is derived), Ornette Coleman, Don Ellis, Jimmy Giuffre, James Hall, J. J. Johnson, Richard Katz, James Heath, Gary McFarland and Herb Pomeroy, among others.

GLG Prods. (Gorme, Lawrence, Greengrass) Hikes Its Indie Disking

GLG Productions (Eydie Gorme, Steve Lawrence, Ken Greengrass) is stepping up its independent disk production activity.

The firm has just completed an album, "The Magic of Mayo Muir," a femme folk singer who was originally introduced by The Highwaymen on their "Hootenanny With The Highwaymen" LP for United Artists.

The Highwaymen's recordings, incidentally, are produced for UA by GLG. Just completed, too, is an instrumental single, "Carla," backed with "Tears," both tunes written, arranged and conducted by Robert Maxwell, composer of "Ebb Tide."

The company recently signed Don Cornell who'll soon be repped with a GLG-produced single directed and arranged by Don Costa. Ron Murphy, another artist signed by GLG, will record his second release this week for the 20th Century-Fox label. It will also be arranged and conducted by Costa.

In the new talent department, the organization has signed Dan Elliott, a 22-year old Columbia U. graduate. Tentative starter for Elliott, a folk singer, concert violinist and guitarist, will be a folk song album including several of his own compositions.

Incidentally, between his performances in the legituner "What Makes Sammy Run," now in its out-of-town tryout tour, Steve Lawrence devotes his time as artists & repertoire man for GLG Productions in addition to his disk work for Columbia Records.

Franchi's 'Women,' Vinton's 'Again,' Kingston Trio's 'Think,' Ethel Ennis, Wilson's 'Yesterday-Today' Top LPs

SERGIO FRANCHI: "WOMEN IN MY LIFE" (RCA Victor). Sergio Franchi's romantic tenor style has already scored on three previous Victor LP releases and he keeps his streak rolling with a solid fourth entry. The package is pegged on songs dedicated to women and Franchi pulls out all stops to create a warmth and an appeal that's completely winning. His power-packed pipes are let loose on "Marta" but there are other facets to his styling as shown by his soft swinging mood on "Jennie," his swinging drive on "Sweet Georgia Brown," his high-registered tackling of "Diane" and his intimate workover of "Laura." The aforementioned titles are just a sampling of his work, the fact is that he's solid throughout.

BOBBY VINTON: "THERE I'VE SAID IT AGAIN" (Epic). Bobby Vinton has made the best of two worlds—the teenagers and the adults—by singing out straight and true. This album, which takes its title from his current single hit, features some standout songs that will pull both the teenagers and the adults. Working with arrangements and an orch conducted by Stan Applebaum, Vinton sails through a nifty repertoire of such wide appeal that the set should hit a hot sales pace for some time. Included in this songbag are "Unchained Melody," "To Each His Own," "My Foolish Heart," "Lavender Blue," "If" and "Too Young," among others. They're all winners and Vinton helps enhance their standing.

THE KINGSTON TRIO: "TIME TO THINK" (Capitol). The dozen songs in this package are packed with message and emotion but the sincerity of style applied by the Kingston Trio makes them distinctive and effective. "Song For A Friend," written on the day of President Kennedy's assassination and recorded three days later, sets the tone but others like "The Patriot Game," "These Seven Men," "Deportee," "Coal Tattoo" and "No One To Talk My Troubles To" also have an emotional ring to them that makes the whole package hard to dismiss. The undergrads, who've been supporting the Kingstons these many years, should really pick up on this one.

"THIS IS ETHEL ENNIS" (RCA Victor). It looks like Ethel Ennis has finally found the right disk groove. After a couple of attempts on the Capitol label, she now emerges here as a potent songstress who will make a positive mark in the pop/jazz field. She's got style and control and an understanding of lyric values that gives each song an individuality of its own but still with an identifiable brand of Miss Ennis' own making. Sid Bass' orch conducting is a big help.

NANCY WILSON: "YESTERDAY'S LOVE SONGS . . . TODAY'S BLUES" (Capitol). Nancy Wilson has done extremely well in the past year with songs from the Broadway and Hollywood catalogs and now she parlays love songs from the past and blues songs from the present into another LP winner. She's a singer who knows her way around a lyric and its melody encasement and she gives the songs special meaning with her vocal flair. The backing by Gerald Wilson's orch is topflight as is the repertoire which includes goodies like "Someone To Watch Over Me," "Satin Doll," "Bewitched," "The Song Is You" and "The Very Thought Of You."

"THE PRIZE PLUS MUSIC FROM OTHER GREAT MOTION PICTURES" (MGM). Jerry Goldsmith has composed some effective themes for the Metro release, "The Prize," and he has seen to it that they are well taken care of by conducting the orch himself for this package. Four of Goldsmith's "Prize" melodies are included here and they stand up as solid samplings of the film music genre that can stand alone on the turntable. Also included in the set are melodies from "The Caretakers," "The V.I.P.'s," "Lord Of The Flies," "David & Lisa," "The Wonderful World Of The Brothers Grimm," "To Kill A Mocking Bird" and "Twilight Of Honor." The various orchs are conducted by Elmer Bernstein, Miklos Rozsa, Elliot Lawrence, Lalo Schifrin, Victor Feldman, David Rose and John Green. For those who dig pic music, this package is a tasty and varied dish.

"GEORGIA BROWN LOVES GERSHWIN" (London). Like Kurt Weill, whom Georgia Brown so effectively saluted in an LP release last year, George Gershwin is right up her vocal alley. She's a dynamic songstress with lots of style and a piping manner that takes hold of a song to give it all its worth. The Gershwin songs are worth plenty, and everything works out to advantage here. Gershwin was a versatile songwriter and Miss Brown is a versatile singer so the repertoire that includes the varied moods of a "Summertime" and other "Porgy & Bess" songs, a "Fascinating Rhythm," a "Slap That Bass," a "Blah-Blah-Blah" and "But Not For Me" comes out just fine.

LOU RAWLS: "TOBACCO ROAD" (Capitol). Lou Rawls is a blues wailer who projects a lot of platter passion. His "Tobacco Road" side made some noise in the singles market and started to bring the disk crowd around to his releases. This album should do even more to build his following. He's a hard-hitting singer who gets down to the roots of the matter with a vocal intensity that grabs attention. Backed by Onzy Matthews Orch, who worked with him on his previous "Black and Blue" LP, Rawls goes for the standard repertoire like "Stormy Weather," "Ol' Man River," "St. Louis Blues," "Georgia On My Mind" and "Summertime."

JACK HANSEN & HIS ORCH: "DANCE ALONG B'WAY" (Dance Along). This disk contains popular terp treatments of various tunes from recent fave legit shows. The songs are done in a variety of dance rhythms ranging from fox trot through cha cha, waltz, rhumba, tango and mambo. The items are slickly presented under the baton of Jack Hansen. Aside from the current show tunes, are songs from Broadway shows like "Jennie," "Girl Who Came to Supper" and "What Makes Sammy Run?" The other melodies will strike a responsive chord with legitgoers and the terp rhythms are smoothly played for top hoofing potential.

JAN & DEAN: "DRAG CITY" (Liberty). The album stems from the boys' clicko single of the same name and they roar ahead with similarly patterned hot-rod music tunes. The grooves are packed with excitement for the teen set and it should do extremely well with the young buyer who's been saving his allowance for album-buying. The "Drag City" title has the big marquee pull but there's also such other hot-rod styled items as "Little Deuce Coupe," "Schlock Rod," "Sting Ray," "Surfin Hearse" and "Dead Man's Curve" to please the hopped-up juves.

"JOE AND EDDIE COAST TO COAST" (Crescendo). Joe Gilbert and Eddie Brown deliver with style and spirit in a pop-folk and blues style. Individually they are fine singers and in a duet groove they employ their solid vocal abilities for top results. This LP is a nice showcase for the duo, displaying them in various tempos and moods. Seen on a variety of tv shows, which is the peg for the LP, the team looks to make a click on wax with this outing.

"DYLAN THOMAS READING HIS COMPLETE RECORDED POETRY" (Caedmon). There's been a growing interest in the works of the late Dylan Thomas in the past few years and now that Alec Guinness is coming to Broadway in a play about the poet's life, the Thomas cult should grow even larger. This, then, is good enough reason for Caedmon to put together a handsome two-disk package of Thomas reading his own poems. Some of them were recorded a little more than 10 years ago by Caedmon, some come from educational radio stations, some from the BBC, and some from such varied sources as the Library of Congress and another record company but they're all together now to make a standout testimonial to a dynamic Welshman.

DICK BILLS: "SONGS FROM THE HILLS" (Shasta). Dick Bills patterns a lot of his country & western song styling after the late Jimmie Rodgers which will help his standing in the c&w marketplace. Bills, like Rodgers, puts his heart into his songs and makes 'em hit home with a lasting impact. He's especially effective on "Brakeman's Blues" and "Pins and Needles" but songs like "Yodeling Cowboy," "That Silver Haired Daddy Of Mine" and I Wonder Where You Are Tonight" will also keep the alfalfa set quite content.

CALVIN COOL & THE SURF-KNOBS: "THE SURFER'S BEAT" (Charter). The surf craze has apparently been shelved by most labels for the hot-rod beat but now comes Calvin Cool & The Surf-Knobs to start it moving again. The beat is hot and frantic and the workover of last summer's clicks like "Surfin' U.S.A." and "Pipeline" will revive teener's memories and a Cool original like "Beach Bash" is good enough to hang around until the warm weather season is with us again.

LAWRENCE WELK
Has Another Hit Dot Album!
"WONDERFUL, WONDERFUL"

Tin Pan Valley

By RED O'DONNELL

Nashville, Jan. 14.

CBS architects drafting plans for new $200,000 Columbia recording studio in Music City. (Adjacent to label's presently-owned long-established Bradley Studio.)

Mercury artist Faron Young acquired two pieces of property on Record Row (16th Ave. S.) on which he'll construct office building to house his multiple operations.

Monument prez Fred Foster in New York to confer with Kim Sisters in re Nashville record session next month.

Red Foley signed managerial contract with Dub Allbritten, who also helms career of Brenda Lee.

Tourists: Roy Orbison checks out for Australia-New Zealand, and Hank Snow for Japan, in mid-January.

Pianist Del Wood and husband adopted baby boy and named him Wesley Carson Hazelwood, which is her family tag.

Date of RCA Victor's artists tour of Europe has been shifted to April 1. Chet Atkins, Bobby Bare, Jim Reeves and the Anita Kerr Singers comprise the group which'll promote country music in larger cities overseas.

SHORT SHOTS — Hubie Long's Moss Rose music pubbery opening offices in England, Germany, France and Italy next year . . . Hank Williams Jr. beat a strep throat rap . . . Nugget label team of Lonzo & Oscar on tour of Germany; their second within past six weeks. Duo is accomped by emcee-bass-player Danny Marcus, singer Billy Hanson . . . South African film director Tommie Mayer in to firm American premiere plans of "Kimberly Jim" with the pic's star Jim Reeves. Tentatively set March 2 in Nashville.

Ex-Dot contractee Tommy Jackson tapped to head up United Artists' recently opened local office.

Wesley Rose and wife Margaret check out for tour of England Jan. 22, to be followed three days later by Roy Acuff and spouse Mildred.

Top Singles Of The Week

(The 'Best Bets' of This Week's 100-Plus Releases)

JOHNNY MATHIS . . . BYE BYE BARBARA
(Mercury) . . . . . A Great Night For Crying
Johnny Mathis' "Bye Bye Barbara" (Fred Fisher-Elm Drive) is an attractive ballad with a folk quality which should put this singer back on the bestseller beam. "A Great Night For Crying" (Cathryl*) is another classy vocal of an okay teenage ballad.*

* * *

JOHN GARY . . . . . THAT'S LIFE
(RCA Victor) . . . . . Ciumachella
John Gary's "That's Life" (Dymar) makes an impressive getaway in the singles market for this standout tenor stylist. It's a swinging, literate ballad duo for across-the-board spins. "Ciumachella" (Harms*) is a pretty Italian ballad, also handled very effectively.*

* * *

HANK WILLIAMS JR. . . . LONG GONE LONESOME BLUES
(MGM) . . . . . Doesn't Anybody Know My Name
Hank Williams Jr.'s "Long Gone Lonesome Blues" (Acuff-Rose†) continues the tradition of backwoods vocalizing represented by the late Hank Williams. This is a firstrate standard country ballad handled in flavorsome style. "Doesn't Anyone Know My Name" (In) is a good folk item.*

* * *

BOBBY VEE . . . . . STRANGER IN YOUR ARMS
(Liberty) 1963
Bobby Vee's "Stranger In Your Arms" (Savilene-Saimat†) drives along as a fast-moving ballad belted in an expert rocking groove by this youngster. "1963" (Glo-Mac†) is a fair romantic kissoff to the year just past.

* * *

PATTI PAGE . . . . . I WONDER, I WONDER, I WONDER
(Columbia) . . . . . I Adore You
Patti Page's "I Wonder, I Wonder, I Wonder" (Robbins) is a smoothly executed ballad with a well-written lyric with strong appeal for teenagers and adults. "I Adore You" (Lear*) is another firstrate ballad with a pounding beat and some tricky rhymes.*

* * *

BEN E. KING . . . . . WHAT NOW MY LOVE
(Atco) . . . . . Groovin'
Ben E. King's "What Now My Love" (Remick) impresses as an arresting bluesy interpretation of this excellent French ballad. This version could be very big. "Groovin'" (Milky Way†) is a twisting entry right down this singer's alley.*

* * *

DEAN MARTIN . . . . . GRAZIE, PREGO, SCUSI
(Reprise) . . . . . La Giostra
Dean Martin's "Grazie, Prego, Scusi" (B.F. Wood) impresses as a swinging Italo-flavored concoction which this savvy performer belts for maximum results. "Le Giostra" (Bourne*) is another lilting Italianized melody in a groove closely associated with Martin.*

* * *

DON COSTA . . . . . THE LOVE SONG OF TOM JONES
(DCP) . . . . . Off Broadway
Don Costa's "The Love Song of Tom Jones" (United Artists), from the click "Tom Jones" film, is a lilting instrumental in a rich orchestra framework with good potential to hitchhike on the picture's acceptance. "Off Broadway" (South Mountain†) is a lightly textured instrumental that makes for easy listening.*

* * *

ANN-MARGRET . . . . . HEY, LITTLE STAR
(RCA Victor) . . . . . Man's Favorite Sport
Ann-Margaret's "Hey, Little Star" (Dragonwyck†) shapes up as a nifty teen-angled ballad with a simple romantic lyric which this songstress handles in a neat arrangement. "Man's Favorite Sport" (Southdale-Northern), from the pic, "Man's Favorite Sport," is a cleverly written ballad also with chances.*

* * *

DEBBIE ROLLINS . . . . . HE REALLY LOVES ME
(Ascot) . . . . . Someone
Debbie Rollins' "He Really Loves Me" (What's Happening†) has impact because of the striking blues vocal by the songstress who gives this teenage lyric a solid chance. "Someone" (Rittenhouse†) is fair material, also handled with an interesting sound.

* * *

ROOFTOP SINGERS . . . . . SAIL AWAY LADIES
(Vanguard) . . . . . Twelve String
Rooftop Singers' "Sail Away Ladies" (Egypt†) is a colorful, uptempo folk number delivered in zestful style by this artful combo which could make a big dent in the pop arena. "Twelve String" (Egypt†) is a good guitar-strumming instrumental.

* * *

THE BEATLES . . . . . SHE LOVES YOU
(Swan) . . . . . I'll Get You
The Beatles' "She Loves You" (Gil†) showcases this phenomenal combo in a typical rocking ballad and they work it over with all the vocal cliches in the book. This disk, released originally in the U. S. about four months ago, should now stir up lots of noise. "I'll Get You" (Northern) is an okay ballad handled the same way.*

* * *

DEMETRISS TAPP . IS THIS THE BEGINNING OF THE END
(Brunswick) . . . . . Let Go Of My Heart
Demetriss Tapp's "Is This The Beginning of the End" (Valley†) registers as a solid slow rocking ballad with a torch message which the songstress handles with a sharp edge. "Let Go Of My Heart" (Hill & Range†) changes pace with an okay rhythm number.

* * *

MARY TAYLOR . . . . . HE'S COMIN' HOME
(Capitol) . . . . . Little Bobby Bear
Mary Taylor's "He's Comin' Home" (Central Songs†) is a simple, but gripping ballad which this country-styled songstress projects in touching style. "Little Bobby Bear" (Central Songs†) is a cute swinging rhythm item based on a traditional folk tune.
Herm.

*ASCAP. †BMI.

C-In-Circle: All-Vital Copyright Basic

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

The article "Worldwide Copyright Protection," which I submitted for VARIETY Anniversary Issue, referred to the appropriate Universal Copyright Convention copyright notice as follows: "© 1963 David Joshua." In your publication the notice incorrectly appears as "Copyright 1963 David Joshua," the use of which could cause a serious loss of property rights.

Accordingly, I would appreciate your bringing to the attention of your readers that insofar as the Universal Copyright Conventions is concerned, the word "copyright" and the symbol "©" are not interchangeable and the failure to use the correct U.C.C. copyright notice will result in the failure to secure copyright by means of the U.C.C. in those member countries of U.C.C. which require the observance of formalities as a condition of securing copyright unless said formalities are observed.

Stanley Rothenberg
(Margulies, Heit & Rothenberg).

RCA May Sweep Italo Mkt. Winter Disk Sales—Other Via Veneto Music Notes

By ROBERT F. HAWKINS

Rome, Jan. 14.

RCA Italiana looks headed for a major sweep of winter platter sales, according to recent figures released here by various Italo market raters.

At least two major ratings agree that RCA has placed five of top 10 sellers, to wit: Eduoardo Viannello's "O Mio Signore", easily No. one; Michele's "Ridi", Jimmy Fontana's "Non te ne Andare", Neil Sedaka's "Adesso No" and Rita Pavone's "Non e Facile Avere 18 Anni". Five other RCA disks are moving up fast in the also-ran categories to give company a not unexpected near-monopoly of the ratings.

Among strongest contenders from other diskeries are Adriano Celentano with his spiritual, "Sabato Triste" (Clan); French chanteuse Francoise Hardy with "L'Eta dell'-Amore" (Vogue); Peppino di Capri with "Baby" (Carish), and others.

Meanwhile, RCA has launched its "Festival in Casa" (Festival at Home) LP, with a tiein travel contest and an unusual 100,000 advance pressing, very high for here, for this LP which includes most of company's winter hits and prospects. Not included is Paul Anka's latest Italo duo, "Il Tuo Compleanno" and "Gli Amici e Tu" and, naturally, song which Anka sings at the upcoming San Remo songfest, "Ogni Volta", penned by 19-year-old Robby Ferrante, who joins Anka in warbling the tune at San Remo.

Charles Aznavour, whose first all-Italian LP has just been issued by Barclay (for RCA release in Italy), stopped off in Rome over the New Year to set plans for a March tour of Italy. He also tapes a tv special here for RAI-TV in January, and is mulling a Cinerama-sized musical to be shot in the U.S. for Metro.

Other disk news from Italy:

(Continued on page 51)

Austrian Disk Best Sellers

Vienna, Jan. 14.

Rote Lippen Soll ... Richard (Columbia)
Buona Notte ... Granata (Columbia)
Tausend Traeume .. Juergens (Centrocord)
Stadtpark die Laternen . Gildos (Electrola)
Ich Geh Noch Schule . Manuela (Telefunken)
Winnetous Freund .. Silbersee (CBC/Amadeo) Trio
Wenn der Mondschein . Fritsch (Polydor)
Nachts hoer ich Uhren (Polydor) Alexander
Jim and Joe ... Lauer (Polydor)
Mein Schiff Faehrt .. Francis (MGM)

Nashville Scene Gets SESAC Org

SESAC is the latest performing rights society to move in on the Nashville scene. Last year, the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers opened offices in Nashville and now SESAC has set up shop there with Roy Drusky in charge.

The opening of the Nashville office is another step in the licensing organization's continuing effort to expand its activity in all fields of music. Among the SESAC-affiliated publishers in the country field are: Sage & Sand, Hollywood; John Lair, Renfro Valley, Ky.; John Bava's Music, Davis, West Va.; Hank Keene Inc., Jupiter, Fla.; Albert E. Brumley & Sons, Powell, Mo.; Western Swing Music Co., Rogers, Ark.; Ozark Music Publications, Jennings, Mo.; Musicountry Tunes Inc., L.A.; Chart Music Publishing House, Evanston, Ill.; National Music Co., Chicago, and Country Gentlemen Music, Powell, Mo.

SESAC has also used country & western singers for its SESAC Recordings, an LP service designed and produced especially for broadcasters. Such names as Johnny Horton, Faron Young, Webb Pierce, The Anita Kerr Singers, The Jordonaires, Leon McAuliff, Chet Atkins and Darrell McCall have already been featured on the label and it is expected that the roster will be expanded in future weeks.

Drusky, who'll head a fulltime staff in Nashville, is a c&w disker, songwriter, regular member of the "Grand Ole Opry" and a member of the board of directors of the Country Music Assn.

Epic Names Victor Linn Merchandising Manager

Victor Linn has been upped at Epic Records to the post of merchandising and administration manager. He'll be responsible to Len Levy, Epic's general manager, for recommending and carrying out merchandising programs which will help the label in the marketing of its product.

In addition, Linn will be responsible for sales administration functions, sales statistics and administration of sales policies and budgets. He'll work with all Epic distributors, salesmen and fieldmen.

Newport Folk Foundation Awards Varying Grants To Schools, Groups, Etc.

The Newport Folk Foundation has awarded the first of a series of financial grants to individuals, organizations and publications who have distinguished themselves to the world of folk arts.

The following are recipients of awards ranging from $200 to $500: Council of Southern Mountains, Berea, Ky., $500; Cooperative Recreation Service, Delaware, O., $250; Broadside Magazine, New York, $250; Settlement School, Hindman, Ky., $250; Settlement School, Pine Mountain, Ky., $250; John C. Campbell Folk School, Brasstown, N.C., $250; Institute of American Indian Arts, Sante Fe, N.M., $200; WGBH, Educational Foundation, Boston, $500; Little Sandy Revue, U. of Minnesota, $250; Old Town School of Folk Music, Wilmette, Ill., $500.

The Foundation has made two grants of $500 each to Guy Carawan, Johns Island, N.C., to help finance two Folk Song Festivals held on Johns Island. A guitar was purchased and given to Mississippi John Hurt. A tape recorder was purchased for Dorsey Dixon and in the near future other tape recorders will be available to folk artists for field recordings. Additional grants are presently under consideration and further awards are expected to be announced by Feb. 1.

N.Y. Court Tosses Out Cleffer's 'Tumbleweeds' Suit Vs. Fox, Williamson

A suit filed in N.Y. Federal Court by songwriter Robert Nolan against Williamson Music and Sam Fox Publishing over the renewal rights to "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" was dismissed last week by Judge Sylvester Ryan. The court also ordered the plaintiff pay all legal expenses.

It was a complex hassle in which Nolan sought declaratory judgment that the Fox agreement and the renewal assignment had been rescinded by the plaintiff and that the defendants had no rights to the song.

The complaint stated that Nolan wrote the tune prior to May, 1934, and assigned it to Sunset Publishing. The Sunset agreement was rescinded by mutual consent and Nolan, Harry Walker (doing business as Sunset) and Harry Hall, all designated as composers (although Nolan was the sole composer) entered into a publishing agreement with Fox and assigned the tune. Under the Fox agreement, Sunset assigned the copyright to Fox.

The suit also alleged that in 1946, Fox assigned the tune, in a partnership deal, to Williamson and latter agreed to pay certain royalties. Nolan claimed that the Williamson agreement was made without his consent and only learned of the terms late in 1962.

The action charged that the defendants had breached the agreement by a) their failure to account and pay an amount exceeding $200,000 for use and publication from all sources, and b) their failure to account and pay royalties since 1960 despite demand by plaintiff, and c) their refusal to permit inspection and audit of the accounts.

The second cause of action claimed that for the purpose of inducing Nolan to execute the renewal assignment, Fox falsely and fraudulently represented that it would exploit the tune and increase royalties and that Fox concealed the fact that the original had been assigned to Williamson.

Nolan also claimed that the renewal assignment was secured through fraud and collusion and that Fox paid Edward M. Gray, Nolan's personal manager, an undisclosed sum and that Nolan new had sole ownership of the rights.

Colpix Ties in With UPI for LP on JFK Assassination; Kennedy Fdn. to Benefit

British Disk Best Sellers

London, Jan. 14.

Want Hold Hand ... Beatles (Parlophone)
Glad All Over ... Clark Five (Columbia)
She Loves You ... Beatles (Parlophone)
Were Made For Me .. Dreamers (Columbia)
Only Want Be With You (Philips) Springfield
Dominique ... Singing Nun (Philips)
24 Hours From Tulsa .. Pitney (United Artists)
Secret Love ... Kirby (Decca)
Hippy Hippy Shake . Blue Jeans (HMV)
Swinging On A Star ... Irwin (Colpix)

San Remo Fest's Beaucoup Talent

San Remo, Jan. 14.

The San Remo songfest will have an impressive talent lineup, despite a few last-minute defections. Latter include Dalida and Petula Clark, long regarded as definites, both of whom bowed out last week.

Local music circles also hint of a French "plot" to undermine the fest as being one of the reasons behind the generally thumbs-down attitude regarding San Remo adopted by French singers who had originally expressed interest in coming. It's pointed out here that French attitude may have been prompted by rivalry of San Remo with nearby French Riviera resorts.

Large number of Yank performers are now slated to sing selection of the 24 competing songs at the event. List announced here this week includes Paul Anka, Ben E. King, Frankie Laine, Gene Pitney, Frankie Avalon, Fraternity Bros., Bobby Rydell, Nino Tempo, April Stevens, Little Peggy March, with other imports including Bob Azzam, Hermanos Rigual, Peter Kraus, Antonio Prieto. Azzam is a last-minute replacement for Lou Monte, who bowed out because of illness in family.

Colpix Records has tied in with United Press International for an LP on the John F. Kennedy assassination. A portion of the proceeds from the sale of the album, which is titled "Four Days That Shook The World," will be donated by Colpix to the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation for research on mental retardation.

UPI made available to Colpix 85 hours of tapes and hundreds of exclusive black and white and color photos for the album. In addition, the wire service had supplied Colpix with exclusive copies of "The Murder of the Young President" written by Merriman Smith, dean of White House correspondents and an eye-witness to the tragedy.

Smith has been a White House correspondent for the past 22 years and is one of the two members of the press who was on the plane when Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson took the oath of office as President. A copy is included with each LP.

The album was produced by Herbert Sussan, an exec producer for Screen Gems TV. Sussan was senior producer of the tv series, "Wide World," and was formerly national director of special programs for NBC-TV. Reid Collins, of WNEW Radio News, in New York, acts as narrator throughout the album and scripted the Washington sequence.

Mims Thomason, president of UPI, said a special staff of news and audio experts worked with Sussan under the direction of Harry Ferguson, national reporter, in the selection of audio material, photographs and design.

Among the news events included in "Four Days That Shocked The World" is the actual swearing in ceremony of Johnson by Judge Sarah Hughes aboard Air Force 1," the official Presidential jet, recorded on a dictograph machine by the Army Signal Corps.

Merriman Smith describes the scene inside the plane as Mrs. Kennedy returned to Washington with her husband's body. Additional on-the-spot coverage includes the Presidential motorcade at the moment it was fired upon, the slaying of Lee Oswald by Jack Ruby, as reported by Ike Pappas, WNEW Radio News, and the events in Washington from the arrival at Andrews Air Force base to the sounding of taps at Arlington.

Inside Stuff—Music

Columbia Records' artists are being spotlighted at the CBS "talking fence" located at the site of the new CBS building going up on the Ave. of the Americas. Featured along panels fronting the construction are illuminated black and white photographs and small color frames of the latest albums of some of the Col diskers.

Included are Andy Williams, Tony Bennett, Barbra Streisand, Dion Di Muci, Mahalia Jackson, Dave Brubeck, and Miles Davis, as well as Vladimir Horowitz, Igor Stravinsky, Glenn Gould, Eugene Ormandy and the late Bruno Walter. Panels also spotlight such original Broadway cast LPs as "Here's Love" and "West Side Story." Other panels focus on Col's "Legacy" series and spoken word recordings.

Attached to each panel and directly beneath each photograph is a red telephone from which passers-by can hear the artist greeting the listener and introducing a selection from the LP shown on the panel. The album frames are removable and after Christmas those which are specifically geared to the holiday season will be replaced by more general product.

Fate of the usual Christmas card—a few days on display and then into the wastebasket—was forestalled in the case of retired USAF Col. Barney Oldfield, now with Litton Industries, in Beverly Hills, Calif., and by a major music publisher. Card carried a recording disk of the Carnegie Hall, N.Y., premiere (last May 17) of the "Col. Barney Oldfield March," authored by North American Air Defense Command maestro, Lt. Col. Mark Azzolina and Howard Cable, music director of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

Musical tribute at the 57th Street shrine was occasioned by the fact that Oldfield had been asked to form a 90-piece military musical outfit which would have the best muscle the U.S. Army, Navy, and Air Force, as well as the Royal Canadian Air Force could provide. In four years it made tours covering 500,000 miles, and apexed by making the old Steve Allen network seg, twice with Dinah Shore, once on Bell Telephone Hour, and twice in Carnegie Hall. Robert Silverman, director of publications, E. B. Marks Music Corp., has just informed Col. Azzolina that his company is taking the march and will publish it shortly. "Trouble with all this," says Azzolina, "it came so late in life, Barney is retired and rich and never will march again."

Guidepost, the interfaith magazine, has gone into the disk business with an album series to spread its interfaith message. The LPs are sent cuffo to radio stations around the country and are not for sale. The recording project is under supervision of Sidney Fields, who writes the "Only Human" column in the N. Y. Daily News. The first album in the series used Mary Martin and Norman Vincent Peale in reading inspirational stories culled from the magazine. It was called "Guidepost For Living." The second LP, tagged "Guidepost For Christmas," featured Patty Duke with Peale. Fields, who is producer-writer of the album, says more will be on the way with other top names.

Philips Gets Injunction Vs. Buckingham Label On 'Singing Nun' Cover

Ruling that "the similarity is too marked to be the result of coincidence," New York Federal Judge Edward C. McLean last week granted an injunction enjoining Buckingham Records from using a cover for a record album similar to the one used by Philips Records for its LP, "The Singing Nun."

Philips issued the LP last August and a single featuring songs by Soeur Sourire, "The Singing Nun." Among them was the song titled "Dominique," which became a top seller. Since Oct. 24, Philips has shipped 225,000 copies of the "Dominique" single alone.

In its complaint, Philips charged that on Nov. 9 Buckingham placed on the market a record containing a number of songs, one of which is "Dominique." Philips presented its disk in a cover depicting a nun playing a guitar while a group of children listen to her. The scene also includes a tree, flowers and a number of large birds.

Philips claimed that the cover for the Buckingham record was almost identically decorated and that, therefore Buckingham was engaging in unfair competition in the sale of its records through the use of its cover.

Judge McLean pointed out that "we are not concerned in this case with the song itself but with the jacket or cover in which the respective songs are enclosed." The songs on Philips' records are sung by the Belgian nun, while those on the Buckingham platter are sung by a children's choir. "Le Choeur Des Enfants de Montmartre."

VARIETY

ALBUM BESTSELLERS

(A National Survey of Key Outlets)

This Wk.	Last Wk.	No. Wks. On Chart
1	1	9	THE SINGING NUN (Philips) Soeur Sourire (PCC 203)
2	2	13	PETER, PAUL & MARY (Warner Bros.) In the Wind (W 1507)
3	3	17	BARBRA STREISAND (Columbia) Volume II (CL 2054)
4	19	5	ELVIS PRESLEY (Victor) Fun in Acapulco (LSP 2756)
5	14	114	WEST SIDE STORY (Columbia) Soundtrack (OL 5670)
6	4	9	VILLAGE STOMPERS (Epic) Washington Square (LN 24078)
7	7	14	AL MARTINO (Capitol) Painted Tainted Rose (T 1975)
8	8	23	JOAN BAEZ (Vanguard) Vol. II (URS 9094)
9	9	8	LOS INDIOS TABAJAREZ (Victor) Maria Elena (LPM 2822)
10	6	14	FRANK SINATRA (Reprise) Sinatra's Sinatra (R 1010)
11	10	11	SWINGLE SINGERS (Philips) Bach's Greatest Hits (PHM 200-097)
12	12	52	PETER, PAUL & MARY (Warner Bros.) Moving (W 1473)
13	5	5	ANDY WILLIAMS (Columbia) Xmas Album (CL 2087)
14	15	38	BARBRA STREISAND (Columbia) Barbra Streisand Album (CL 2007)
15	18	85	PETER, PAUL & MARY (Warner Bros.) Peter, Paul & Mary (W 1449)
16	16	17	ELVIS PRESLEY (Victor) Golden Records, Vol. III (LPM 2765)
17	22	5	SMOTHERS BROS. (Mercury) Curb Your Tongue, Knave (MG 20862)
18	11	40	ANDY WILLIAMS (Columbia) Days of Wine & Roses (CL 2015)
19	17	15	BOBBY VINTON (Epic) Blue Velvet (LN 24068)
20	20	22	TRINI LOPEZ (Reprise) Trini Lopez at PJ'S (6093)
21	23	37	BYE BYE BIRDIE (Victor) Soundtrack (LOC 1081)
22	24	9	JOHN GARY (Victor) Catch a Rising Star (LPM 2745)
23	13	10	ROBERT GOULET (Columbia) In Person (CL 2088)
24	27	7	BEACH BOYS (Capitol) Little Deuce Coupe (T 1998)
25	30	13	BEACH BOYS (Capitol) Surfer Girl (T 1981)
26	21	21	NEW CHRISTY MINSTRELS (Columbia) Ramblin' (CL 2055)
27	—	1	JFK-PRESIDENTIAL YEARS (20th-Fox) 1960-63 (TFM 3127)
28	28	4	HENRY MANCINI (Victor) Charade (LPM 2755)
29	25	17	RAY CHARLES (ABC-Par) Recipe for a Soul (465)
30	31	2	THE WEEK THAT WAS (Decca) Original Sound Track (DL 9116)
31	26	44	JOAN BAEZ (Vanguard) Baez in Concert (VRS 9112)
32	33	9	PERCY FAITH (Columbia) Shangri-La (CL 2024)
33	32	41	HOW THE WEST WAS WON (MGM) Soundtrack (1E5)
34	34	3	ERNIE HECKSCHER (Columbia) That S. F. Beat (CL 2085)
35	29	41	ROY ORBISON (Monument) Greatest Hits (MLP 8000)
36	35	22	ALLAN SHERMAN (Warner Bros.) My Son the Nut (WB 1501)
37	36	9	HERE'S LOVE (Columbia) Original Cast (KOL 6000)
38	—	1	RICK NELSON (Decca) For You (DL 4479)
39	38	10	AL HIRT (Victor) Honey in the Horn (LPM 2733)
40	41	15	BOB DYLAN (Columbia) Freewheelin (CL 1986)
41	37	16	JOAN BAEZ (Vanguard) Vol. I (URS 9078)
42	39	19	MONDO CANE (United Artists) Soundtrack (UAL 4105)
43	43	4	JIMMY SMITH (Verve) Any Number Can Win (V 8552)
44	40	32	SMOTHERS BROS. (Mercury) Think Ethnic (MG 30777)
45	47	45	LAWRENCE OF ARABIA (Colpix) Soundtrack (CP 514)
46	42	20	NANCY WILSON (Capitol) Hollywood My Way (T 1934)
47	46	11	CHAD MITCHELL TRIO (Mercury) Singing Our Minds (MG 20838)
48	—	1	JOHNNY MATHIS (Columbia) Romantically (CL 2098)
49	45	28	JAMES BROWN (King) James Brown Show (826)
50	50	5	TRINI LOPEZ (Reprise) More at P.J.'s (6103)

Jeff Chandler's Estate To Share in Chandler Music Profits, Ct. Rules

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Estate of the late Jeff Chandler is recognized as a partner in Chandler Music Co. and Loring Music and will participate in profits, under an agreement approved by Superior Judge Clark E. Stephens.

This compromise disposes if a suit by estate against Michael Connors as a purported partner. Estate, according to agreement, will receive $1,500 in cash after which the late actor's heirs and Connors will share equally.

Chandler, who died June 17, 1962, was survived by two daughters, Jamie, 16, and Dana, 13. Estate at time of death was estimated at $600,000 before taxes, liabilities and administrative expenses.

Morris Buys

Continued from page 47

bins Music group, where he was No. 2 man under the late J. J. (Jack) Robbins. Conn was both a songwriter and music man who worked for many years as an associate of Vocco in the old Feist operation.

Founded in 1938

BVC went into business in 1938 with the purchase of the Donaldson, Douglas & Gumble catalog which included "Winter Wonderland," at that time an obscure number written by the late Dick Smith and Felix Bernard. BVC was off and flying shortly after its formation with a succession of hits including "Little Sir Echo," "And the Angels Sing" and "Scatterbrain."

Over the years, it set up numerous subsidiaries such as Triangle Music, Vernon Music, Chatham Music, Supreme, Lombardo Music and Rosemeadow Music. Supreme is a partnership deal with Decca while Lombardo Music was set up with Guy Lombardo and Rosemeadow with Steve Allen.

Bregman, incidentally, is still the only remaining private stockholder in the Big Three, having resisted overtures from the major owners of the company, MGM and 20th-Century Fox, to buy out his share, which is under 10%.

Elvis Hits

Continued from page 47

for Elvis and wouldn't we do it for less money. I told him pay us our regular fee and if Elvis gets the Oscar we'll give him his money back. We never saw him again.

"So maybe we never win an Oscar—but we're going to win a few boxoffice awards. Check the list of the 10 top boxoffice stars—Elvis is right there. And here's a guy who carries his pictures by himself—the rest of the guys on the list have three or four stars to back them up."

The Presley-Parker tandem is one of the few star-powered forces in Hollywood which limits its demands to cash. Once a deal is made, the studio takes complete control of a film, the Presley camp having no say—so on cast, script or production costs.

"We don't have approval on scripts—only money," says Parker. "Anyway what's Elvis need? A couple of songs, a little story and some nice people with him.

"We start telling people what to do and they blame us if the picture doesn't go. As it is, we both take bows and if it doesn't hit maybe they get more blame than us. Anyway, what do I know about production?—nothing." He says the average Presley pic costs between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 "and if the studio lets it—maybe a little more."

Only activity aside from Presley in which Parker dabbles is arranging an occasional p.a. for country-western singer Eddy Arnold, and that only because their association goes back many years.

And he's not exactly looking for a new berth at present. Nor is he the least bit nervous about possibility that Presley's film popularity may one day mine dry, philosophizing that this would finally give them the chance to pursue several lucrative avenues for which they presently have no time.

"For one," he says, "we can do some of the personal appearances we haven't been able to. Anytime we want—$75-100,000 a week."

VARIETY

SINGLE RECORD T.I.P.S.

(Tune Index of Performance & Sales)

This Wk.	Last Wk.	No. Wks. On Chart		Label
1	2	7	THERE, I'VE SAID IT AGAIN Bobby Vinton	Epic
2	1	9	DOMINIQUE Singing Nun	Philips
3	3	8	LOUIE LOUIE Kingsmen	Wand
4	4	6	POPSICLES & ICICLES Murmaids	Chatahoochee
5	11	5	FORGET HIM Bobby Rydell	Cameo
6	36	4	SURFIN BIRD Trashmen	Garrett
7	21	6	NITTY GRITTY Shirley Ellis	Congress
8	22	4	OUTER LIMITS Marketts	Warner Bros.
9	43	5	DRAG CITY Jan & Dean	Liberty
10	5	8	YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE A BABY Caravelles	Smash
11	6	7	DRIP DROP Dion	Columbia
12	8	9	SINCE I FELL FOR YOU Lenny Welch	Cadence
13	12	6	MIDNIGHT MARY Joey Powers	Amy
14	7	14	I'M LEAVING IT ALL UP TO YOU Dale & Grace	Michelle
15	10	9	TALK BACK TREMBLING LIPS Johnny Tillotson	MGM
16	16	6	WIVES & LOVERS Jack Jones	Kapp
17	14	13	SHE'S A FOOL Leslie Gore	Mercury
18	13	10	LODDY LO Chubby Checker	Parkway
19	20	7	HAVE YOU HEARD Duprees	Coed
20	9	11	EVERYBODY Tommy Roe	ABC-Par
21	15	6	QUICKSAND Martha & The Vandellas	Gordy
22	30	2	HEY LITTLE COBRA Ripchords	Columbia
23	18	5	KANSAS CITY Trini Lopez	Reprise
24	17	10	WONDERFUL SUMMER Robin Ward	Dot
25	26	4	TURN AROUND Dick & DeeDee	Warner Bros.
26	19	10	CAN I GET A WITNESS Marvin Gaye	Tamla
27	23	16	SUGAR SHACK James Gilmer	Dot
28	—	—	FOR YOU Rick Nelson	Decca
29	31	4	WHEN LOVE LIGHT SHINES Supremes	Motown
30	38	2	AS USUAL Brenda Lee	Decca
31	29	10	LITTLE RED ROOSTER Sam Cooke	Victor
32	33	2	CHEER LEADER Paul Peterson	Colpix
33	24	14	MARIA ELENA Los Indios Tabajaias	Victor
34	32	4	AS LONG AS HE KNOWS Marvelette	Tamla
35	35	6	BABY DON'T YOU WEEP Garnett Mimms	UA
36	—	1	YOU DON'T OWN ME Leslie Gore	Mercury
37	25	8	THE BOY NEXT DOOR Secrets	Philips
38	28	7	IN MY ROOM Beach Boys	Capitol
39	34	3	STEWBALL Peter, Paul & Mary	Warner Bros.
40	37	4	PRETTY PAPER Roy Orbison	Monument
41	27	9	BE TRUE TO YOUR SCHOOL Beach Boys	Capitol
42	39	13	IT'S ALL RIGHT Impressions	ABC-Par
43	—	1	DAISY PETAL PICKIN' Jimmy Gilmer & Fireballs	Dot
44	40	12	BOSSA NOVA BABY Elvis Presley	Victor
45	42	11	WALKING THE DOG Rufus Thomas	Stax
46	45	16	DEEP PURPLE April Stevens & Nino Tempo	Atco
47	41	12	DOWN AT PAPA JOE'S Dixie Belles	S.S.7
48	46	5	YOU'RE GOOD FOR ME Solomon Burke	Atlantic
49	47	10	HEY LITTLE GIRL Major Lance	Okeh
50	44	10	LIVING A LIE Al Martino	Capitol

Via Veneto Notes

Continued from page 49

Carish has exclusivity on The Beatles via its Parlophon label here, and has just issued a new Peppino di Capri pressing, "Baby", which is hitting top ratings in a three-for-one package with two other songs on same 45.

Triple disk pattern has also been adopted by fast-selling Adriano Celentano, whose latest Clan release also has three tunes on one 45: "Ciao Ragazzi".

Celentano, Rita Pavone and Francoise Hardy also drew holiday crowds in Milan stands to SRO over Christmas and New Year.

Biggest news in music circles, however, has been defection of one of country's top singers of recent years, Mina, who has left Italdisc for Ri-Fi. Italdisc has hit her with a $160,000 suit for breach of contract, but Ri-Fi meanwhile has already issued its first Mina recording: another three-fer which includes "Citta Vuota", "E Inutile", and "Valentino Vale" on a sole 45er.

In the classical field, V.C.M. copped plenty of local attention for its popular classics series (selling at some $3.50 per LP) thanks to a handout of some 200 platters to members of a Rome Opera House youngster society over the holiday season. Company has also reinforced its Rome setup by hiring pub-ad staffer Antonino Buratti away from C.A.M. Records and assigning him with p.r. work for V.C.M. (Voce del Padrone-Columbia-Marconiphone) in Eternal City.

New releases: V.C.M. has been particularly active in this sector as well.

Tony Renis has a popular duo in "Ti Guardero nel Cuore", based on popular "Mondo Cane" score, and "8-1/2", both from pix by same name. Frank Porcel has two easy-listening items also on Voce del Padrone in "Diggedle Boeing" and "Laissez-Moi Chanter", while Bruno Martino confirms his slot as provider of top terp tunes with "I Ladri" and "C'Icontreremo a Modena", the latter a slight but humorous spoof.

On the Liberty label, Timi Yuro comes through with a solid local rendition of "I'm Confessin", while a newcomer, 15-year-old Gianna Forretti is too reminiscent of Rita Pavone in her otherwise solid renderings of "Non Sparlare di Me" and "Twist Sotto L'Albero" (Pathe).

On Stateside, Larry Moon takes an okay Italianized ride on coattails of former hit in "Speedy . . . Torna al Bar", backed by English-lingoe'd "She Lied".

Sprint has another pleasant Nini Rosso trumpet composition in "Ninna Nanna della Tromba", which should travel in depth, while company is currently prepping release of a Nini Rossi LP, with fast-rising Italo trumpeteer's first series of successes.

Milva looks to have a solid seller in "L'Unica Ragione", her latest Cetra-Fonit release, thanks also to repeated TV exposure she's recently earned on RAI-TV.

On the Upbeat

NEW YORK

Charlie Mingus will be recording the soundtracks for two films for the National Film Board of Canada. He'll also go to Europe in March on a concert tour to be arranged by George Wein . . . The name of the Orion Development Corp. has been changed to Metronome Records. The first complete Friday Night Service by Israeli composer Amitai Ne'eman will be performed Jan. 24 at the Metropolitan Synagog. It will feature baritone Norman Atkins assisted by choir and orch under the baton of Maurice Levine. After a March fortnight at Guy Lombardo's Port o' Call nightclub in Tierra Verde, Fla., Canadian thrush Betty Robertson does a two-week repeat nightclub date in Aruba, where she first sang last July.

Premier Wins Writ Vs. Crown's JFK Cover

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Crown Records Inc., of L.A., is restrained from using its present cover on a memorial album containing speeches of the late President John F. Kennedy, under a temporary injunction handed down by Superior Judge Macklin Fleming in favor of Premier Albums Inc., of New York.

Premier asked injunction because it claimed that Crown's cover was almost identical to one on its own memorial album of President Kennedy's speeches, put on the market Nov. 28, 1963. Crown, according to suit, came out with its album two weeks later, thus creating unfair competition. Contents of Crown's album, however, are not affected by the injunction.

Australia's Cafes Saved by Yanks

By ERIC GORRICK

Sydney, Jan. 14.

American talent has made all the difference to midnight-to-dawn operators. Aussie nightclub patrons are not unpatriotic as citizens; they will not pay out heavy coin to view local talent. The major nightclub operators found this out about 18 months ago.

Local jazz combos, singers, acrobats and leftovers from vaude then did a fade. Today Anzac acts get bread-and-butter mainly from teevee. Nor could Actors' Equity here force the nightclub operators to play local talent. Biz just dropped to zero. Waiters, hatcheck and cigarette gals sat around nights with nothing to do. It was as bad as that.

Chequers, Chevron-Hilton, Andres and the Latin Quarter, sent out an urgent S.O.S. to New York and Las Vegas for class name talent. Figures offered were solid, conditions good, with a guaranteed coin takeaway. Talent was also reminded this territory was now only 13 hours' flying time away from New York; that only two shows nightly were played with no Sabbath shows and that additional coin was available via video engagements. Stopovers could range from two to four weeks, longer if biz was okay.

It wasn't long before U.S. talent moved in.

They put gold back into the nightclubs. One was Nat King Cole, another was Eartha Kitt (a sensation and copped around $50,000 on four weeks' run). Nelson Eddy and Gale Sherwood played to capacity on a six weeks' stopover. Carmen Cavallaro, Patti Page, Mills Bros., Ruth Wallis (click on third visit); Shirley Bassey, Frances Faye, Shelley Berman, Damita Jo, Della Reese, Earl Grant were others that made the difference.

Col Taps Ken Raine As Recording Operations V.P.

Kenneth E. Raine has been set as veepee for recording operations at Columbia Records. He's responsible to Goddard Lieberson, Columbia president, for the diskery's domestic recording studios and recording engineering. In addition, he'll continue to represent Columbia in all labor relations activities.

Prior to his new appointment, Raine was general manager of Columbia Recording Studios as well as director of personnel and industrial relations and general manager of April-Blackwood, Col's music publishing subsids.

He joined Col in 1942 as general attorney and secretary.

The HOT! OF THE WEEK

GINNY ARNELL

Sings

DUMB HEAD

K-13177

M-G-M Records

JACK JONES

Sings

LOVE WITH THE PROPER STRANGER

on Kapp Records

From the Paramount Picture

"LOVE WITH THE PROPER STRANGER"

PARAMOUNT MUSIC CORPORATION

Announcing Two Great Songs...

CIUMACHELLA &

THE LIGHTS OF ROMA

From the [illegible] Catalog

PUGANTINO

MILAN FLORENCE ROME

MUSIC PUBLISHERS HOLDING CORP

PETE SEEGER

CURRENTLY ON WORLD WIDE CONCERT TOUR

JANUARY

NIGERIA

GHANA

EGYPT

ISRAEL

Columbia Records/Folkways Records

REPRESENTED BY

HAROLD LEVENTHAL Management, Inc.

200 W. 57th St. New York 19, N.Y.

Heading for the Charts!

The French Hit

SARA DARLING

(Elle Etat, Si Jolie)

GEORGE MAHARIS

(Epic)

•

The Italian Novelty

GRAZIE, PREGO, SCUSI

DEAN MARTIN

(Reprise)

B. F. WOOD MUSIC CO. INC.

1619 B'way, New York, N. Y.

THE TOMMY DORSEY ORCHESTRA

Directed by

SAM DONAHUE

with

JEANNIE THOMAS and LARRY O'BRIEN

Starring

HELEN FORREST

THE PIED PIPERS

CHARLIE SHAVERS

and

FRANK SINATRA, JR.

January 18th - February 9th—ENGLAND

February 11th - 16th—GERMANY

February 17th, 18th—BELGIUM

Feb. 19th, 20th—SAARBRUCKEN, GERMANY

February 21st, 22nd, 23rd—MADRID

February 24th, 25th—BARCELONA

February 26th—PARIS

Exclusive Management

TINO BARZIE

Foreign Tour Booked by

ASSOCIATED BOOKING CORPORATION

JOE GLASER, President

50 WEST 57 STREET, NEW YORK 19 JUdson 2-7700

CHICAGO • MIAMI • BEVERLY HILLS • LAS VEGAS • DALLAS • LONDON

Ringling Rail-Borne for 94th; 412 in Troupe, 18 New Acts; Advance Group Ticket Sale Up

Venice, Fla., Jan. 14.

Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey quit winter quarters here Monday and travelled in 22 double-length cars for its season opener tonight (Tues.) at Miami. John Ringling North is absent in Europe and brother Henry is representing the clan. It's expected that circus will top the 52 dates of 1963, which topped 46 of year before. Show now confines itself to indoor stands. Since Dec. 18 when rehearsals began under Dick Barstow, the circus has drawn 125,000 visitors in winter quarters, where it uses a prime Florida tourist draw.

All the signs auger good season according to Rudy Bundy, Treasurer and Assistant to the President who has been a circus executive since 1954. Ticket sales to groups and organizations are up from 30 to 40% in all the nine towns to be played prior to the March 24-May 10 date in Madison Square Garden. He noted that a considerable resurgence of interest in the circus could be felt last year and seemed to progress as the season wore on. He attributes this at least in part to the importance being attached to circus acts on television, per Ed Sullivan and Don Ameche, and the new ABC series "The Greatest Show on Earth." Cause was further aided by the 1963 tour of the Moscow Circus, and by publicity emanating from overseas relevant to the appearance of The American Circus in Russia, as well as Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey own new three - ringer, currently touring Europe.

Bundy said that the talent and production budget has been greatly expanded each year for the last three years and the show is now trouping 412 people, 22 elephants, and more live stock and animal acts than it has for the past 10 years.

Tab for the 1,200 new costumes, which were made in the Ringling workshop ran to $250,000 this year. Max Weldy, who dates to

(Continued on page 56)

Satevepost Yarn Libeled Her, Lil Reis Contends In $2,050,000 Damage Action

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Lillian Reis, alleged key figure in the Pottsville (Pa.) $475,000 heist and former owner of the midtown Celebrity Club, has filed suit in Common Pleas Court here asking $2,050,000 damages from the Saturday Evening Post for an article published last October, "They Call Me Tiger Lil."

Miss Reis' complaint charges that the author, Alfred G. Aronowitz, plagiarized material from her forthcoming autobiography, and that the article injured her mental complexes.

The action was entered under her married name, Mrs. Michael Corabi, and listed five counts, each for $410,000 damages. The former chorine asserted she had appeared in films, had a big name accepted by the public and that the Post took pictures without her consent, published them, thereby damaging her property (herself). Suit further averred that the Post made remarks about her, "damaging her prestige and reputation."

A third count charged the Post advertisements for the article were "unflattering, violted ordinary decencies of the community and cheapened, humiliated and subjected her to shame, ridicule and loss of self respect."

Scheduled to go on trial soon in Schpylkill County Court as the mistress of ceremonies in the burglary at the home of John B. Rich, Pottsville coal magnate, Miss Reis drew a hung jury when first tried. Three of her associates, however, were found guilty and are awaiting decisions on new trials, and the aftermath of the Big Heist was marked by a pair of gangland murders.

One participant, Vincent Blaney, was shot and dumped in the Atlantic Ocean. His brother Richard was killed by a planted dynamite explosion in his automobile.

Elkort, Pangrazio Ink Mutual Rep Agrement

Agent Eddie Elkort has made a mutual representation deal with Johnny Pangrazio who is partnered in a Milan talent agency with Luigi Ivaldi. Pangrazio was in New York last week looking over talent for dates in Italy and elsewhere on the Continent.

Pangrazio at one time was with the Andrea Trio, a dance turn, which was dissolved when Pangrazio went in for agenting.

Soviet Circus At 263G, Vancouver

Vancouver, Jan. 14.

Biggest gross in Vancouver vaude history was registered by touring Moscow State Circus company with phenomenal $263,000 for 14 performances at Pacific National Exhibition's Agrodome arena which seats 3,944.

Opening Christmas Day to hefty advance of $220,000, circus ran until Jan. 5. Co-sponsored here by the P.N.E. and Vancouver International Festival, Russian circus was presented via Montreal impresario Nicholas Koudriavtzeff's Canadian Concerts & Artists manager..ent as part of Canada-U.S.S.R. cultural exchange after completion of the show's U.S. portion of North American tour.

Local deal called for circus to keep 65% of gross, with PNE-VIF splitting remaining 35%. After paying expenses of the stand the two city groups should share about $30,000 profit from their $92,000. Apart from the financial benefits accruing all parties, the circus was an unqualified artistic success.

Puerto Rico Press Hits Miami 'Distortions' On Island's Dengue Fever

San Juan, Jan. 14.

Recent reports on dengue fever in Puerto Rico—which have been putting a damper on nitery business—are "to a great degree misleading," a U. S. Public Health Service spokesman stated here. Dr. Marvin Cashion, medical officer in charge of the U. S. Health Service, San Juan Office, pointed to the steady downward trend in the number of cases reported since the fever reached its peak in mid-September, and said, "There is no doubt that, in the San Juan area, at least, the fever is on the wane".

The figures being quoted out of context in recent mainland reports, referring to "thousands" of cases, merely state the cumulative number since the fever first appeared last August. Latest reports, however, definitely show a steady downward trend. Dengue, a mosquito-borne fever, is not fatal, but produces a flu-like discomfort for a few days.

A signed editorial in the San Juan Star, by editor-publisher William J. Durvillier, stated in part:

" . . Some Miami operators have been playing what we call 'dirty pool' in their anxiety over the loss of visitors to hotels here. A story in the stateside papers about the dengue fever we've experienced here in a steadily diminishing rate since last August has been distorted ridiculously in the Miami Beach area.

"Some guests arriving here from Florida report they were 'warned' by Miami hotel people that dengue is 'dangerous' and that it is 'sweeping the island.' One woman said a Miami Beach Hotel executive told here that 'people are dying like flies' from dengue here.

"First, there hasn't been a single fatality from dengue, since the outbreak last August. Secondly, dengue is a three to four day indisposition that is easily treated with aspirin and rest. Thirdly, there have been less than 100 new cases in the San Juan metropolitan area of more than 600,000 population in the last two weeks."

NELSON EDDY

Happy to be back in Boston—at the Statler-Hilton, for three weeks. First date of a completely booked 1964. With beautiful GALE SHERWOOD, soprano and comedienne, and Theodore Paxson, pianist. "The prolonged ovation which followed was sufficient testimony to his act."—Melbourne Age.
A. P. A., Inc., Handles

B'ham Aud Dates Shows As Racial Tensions Ease

Birmingham, Jan. 14.

Birmingham's modern 5,200-seat Municipal Auditorium, which has been darkened for nearly two years because of racial taboos, should have brighter days during 1964. Since the city has relaxed its policy, integrated performances here have been virtually commonplace. This has paved the way for touring companies.

The first Broadway musical will be the national company of "Camelot" March 4-6, first legit show since "Music Man" in February 1961.

Also booked for the Auditorium is "Holiday on Ice" Feb. 14-16.

Originally "Stop The World" was set for Jan. 18-19, but canceled when the road company failed to do business on tour.

Auditorium manager E. A. Jones Jr. also declared that he was hopeful that possibly Ringling would be back in Birmingham next fall. The circus hasn't played indoors here since February 1962 because of racial tensions here. The last time that Ringling Bros. was in Alabama it was at the giant Coliseum in Montgomery. Birmingham fans of the circus had to travel 100 miles to see the show.

Brody Corp. Takes Over Rainbow Room in R.C., N.Y., Mulling New Talent Policy

A third restaurant chain is to make its bow in Rockefeller Center, N.Y. Long a monopoly of the Union News Co., Restaurant Assocates broke in a few years ago with the Forum, and now the Brody Corp., a new eatery chain, helmed by former officers of Restaurant Associates, has made headway into the Rockefeller complex with its takover of the Rainbow Room. The 65-story high eatery is now operated by Union News with the Rockefeller Center Luncheon Club a prime user of the Rainbow Room's facilities. Jerome Brody, the former prez of RA, will continue at the rooftop restaurant.

At the same time, the Brody Corp. is considering the restoration of the Rainbow Room as a talent showcase, such as it was before the war, when under the John Roy aegis, it presented some of the posh entertainment of that era. Necessity to save power plus the inability to light up this vast area caused its shuttering at that time.

This is the second midtown acquisition of the new firm. It previously acquired Gallagher's from the Jack Solomon estate.

Philip Miles, who was veepee in charge of public relations and advertising for Restaurant Associates, has gone over to Brody in a similar capacity. He was succeeded at RA by Roger Martin, who had been Miles' aide.

Chi's Chez Paree Folds Again After 6-Wk. Run; May End Gaudy Cafe Era

Chicago, Jan. 14.

The Chez Paree folded—again—last week after six weeks at its new north Wabash Ave. location. It's the second death for the nitery since it began its reign as the No. one Chi cafe when Sophie Tucker cracked a bottle of champagne on its nameplate Nov. 30, 1932, at its old Fairbanks Court site, a position it held until the Internal Revenue Service padlocked it about three years ago.

The foldo of the new club came sooner than the even the pessimists predicted. The unexpectedness of the demise has set nitery observers to musing about the future for the sort of gaudily expensive clubs that both the old and new Chez Paree represented.

Although it is cold comfort for the departed club, most agents and performers are convinced that Chi nitery biz is basically sound and there is substantial evidence that it is in the midst of a long-term upswing. They feel that the Chez Paree concept was an anachronism before it died at the old location and more so when it opened at the new spot.

Diagnoses take into account that a similarly costly experiment in lavish show rooms—the Club Gigi in the Sahara Inn—came crashing down around owner Manny Skar's ears not too long ago after only a year's operation. The motel is now owned by Gene Autry and is using lesser names in its Sultan's Table dining room.

The brief return of the Chez Paree occurred at a time when the new centre of small boites on Wells St. were just reaching their stride. Despite some predictions that the upsurge in that area (the neighborhood is called Old Town) was too fast and would burn out,

(Continued on page 56)

'Chaser' to Anti-Booze Ads Irks Mpls. Church

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

Some church groups here are miffed by the city's two leading billboard companies, General Outdoors and Naegele (the latter now has acquired the former), for their refusal to accept billboard advertising aimed at discouraging liquor drinking. The ads were submitted by the Methodist church which wanted them displayed throughout the state.

The state's nine billboard companies also have incurred church circles' disfavor for refusing to agree to a request that they decline billboard liquor ads.

Riviera Hotel, L.V., Sets Legit 'Forum'

The Riviera Hotel, Las Vegas, will forsake its variety format starting in March for a legit policy with a specially staged production of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." It'll be a new edition with names still to be set. This longrunning legiter has been at the Alvin, N.Y., and already has one company on the road.

The Riviera weaves in and out of the legit policy, having been among the first of the Las Vegas hotels to go in for the Broadway musicals. The other Las Vegas inn now with a legiter is the Thunderbird which has a doubleheader, "High Button Shoes" and "Anything Goes."

The Riviera edition of "Forum" will be directed by Ruth Mitchell and choreographed by George Martin. Sammy Lewis made the deal for "Forum" with the hotel.

The installation of a legit show in any of the Vegas hotels is generally an unhappy occasion for the talent agencies. Not only do they lose an outlet for their nitery acts in the Vegas belt where salaries are highest, but it also decreases competition for names among the various hotels.

At the same time, the agencies are prepared to lose more act installations since most Las Vegas hostels are looking about for formats that will take them off the name standard successfully. Most of the hotel stages in that city are already equipped to handle legiters as well as large revues.

Aside from the Thunderbird Las Vegas hotels which have dropped name policies now include the Stardust, with "Le Lido de Paris"; Tropicana, with the "Folies Bergere"; and the Dunes, with "Casino de Paris." Latter three are all Parisian imports.

NLRB Denies Appeal Of Bartenders Unit to Void Vote at Harrah's, Reno

Washington, Jan. 14.

The National Labor Relations Board last week denied an appeal by the Reno local of the Bartenders & Culinary Workers Union to upset a 1962 election at Harrah's, Reno, in which the majority of employees voted against joining the union.

In dismissing the union's objections to the election, the NLRB stated that the union had not received a majority of valid votes cast in the election and the challenged ballots were insufficient to affect the results. Of the 446 votes cast, 331 were against joining the union, 97 were in favor and 18 votes were challenged.

Earlier last year, the NLRB held a hearing in Lake Tahoe before hearing officer Wesley N. Wilson who subsequently issued a report sustaining four objections listed by the union. Harrah's immediately appealed to the NLRB which made the decision regarded as ending the squabble. NLRB stated that its consideration of the entire record in this case indicated the merit of the employer's pleas.

Twin-Cities Terp Studio Defendants Deny Waltzing Widows Out of Losta $$

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

The nine defendants involved in the operation of two presently defunct Twin Cities' dance studios denied on the witness stand in Federal Court here last week that the studios perptrated fraud and mulcted widows and unmarried women pupils out of thousands of dollars, as charged by the Justice Department.

With resumption of the long drawn-out trial after a holiday adjournment, Arvin Mueschke, one of the defendants, testified that the studio was a bona fide operation. As a senior interviewer of prospective students, he said he never had instructed any employe to hold the hand or chair of such potential pupils during contact discussions. The prosecution had introduced evidence to that effect.

Mueschke also told the jury he had married one of the pupils and his wife, too, took the witness stand to testify for the defense.

In his opening address to the jury, Harold Field Jr., attorney for Stanley Friedman, 33, of Long Island, N.Y., who owned the studios and also is a defendant, declared that studio personnel had operated in "good faith" and that their operations were similar to those of other nationwide dance studios.

The alleged dance lessons racket

(Continued on page 56)

'Low' Bids for New Muni Hall 'Shock' Mpls. Execs

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

City officials here are "shocked" because low bids for a new municipal auditorium exhibition hall total $1,259,533 more than the architects' estimate. Bids submitted by the eight lowest bidders aggregated $7,275,138, which is 20.94% higher than anticipated.

The hall is only one part of the entire project to enlarge and improve the auditorium to make it more suitable for touring and other shows of every sort. It was expected the entire cost wouldn't exceed $10,000,000. The exhibition hall development may endanger or delay the project. Work had been expected to start this year and to be completed by Oct., 1965.

FRANCE'S FOREMOST SINGING STAR

"PATACHOU SINGS—VIVE LA DIFFERENCE!"

New York World-Telegram & Sun

VARIETY

Americana, N. Y.

Patachou, with Jo Basile; Lester Lanin Orch, Al Conte Trio; $3 couvert.

Patachou, since her last appearance in New York, has changed her place d'emploi, but not her mode. She's had a metamorphosis. She is no longer the severe shirt-waisted and fairly light-hearted chanteuse de France who sang her Gallic tunes no matter what. She is now a more sophisticated and mature operator in more formal gown. She still retains that Gallic flavor, but in more than the normal varieties. She has but one theme and numerous and flavorful variations thereof. She sings of sex—dramatic sex, lighthearted sex and all the shades in between. But yet, it's not a Johnny-one-note recital.

Patachou makes it all sound intriguing and vivid, almost like a participant, but yet with sufficient detachment to re-cite its more colorful and exciting as-pects without becoming too involved. Patachou keeps her wits about her—just enough to communicate the excite-ment and the glamour. She rarely loses her firm control and her mission of re-vital during this process. She does a comparatively brief turn, less than 40 minutes, but yet long enough to tell what has to be said on the subject, and still short enough to wonder where the time went.

She makes the trek from the St. Regis to the Americana's Royal Box seem like a short distance, but yet it might have been a sleeper jump without her sense of universality. Patachou takes this trip with grace and charm. She should make her engagement one of the bright spots of the hotel's season, despite the fact that it's the time of year when one debates whether to put that extra buck to other uses.

Jose.

VARIETY

Drake Hotel, Chicago

In an era when the term chanteuse has been diluted to mean any singer who has spent the weekend at the George V, Patachou stands alone as the peerless interpreter of the sad and happy songs of the City of Light.

Songstress, at her top form, punches her numbers over with a dramatic in-tensity that hushes the room.

VARIETY

Queen Elizabeth, Mont'l

What's new to say about Patachou except that she's boffo? Just how socko is perhaps best measured in the plush uppercrust of the French-Canadian car-riage trade who, if anybody, knows the score with the French chanteusey.

New York Journal-American:

"PATACHOU A DELIGHT! A DOUBLE BLOCK-BUSTER!"

New Yorker:

"DOES A SINATRA BALLAD JUST ABOUT AS WELL AS HE DOES, AND THROWS IN A BIT OF ACUTE COMEDY, TOO!"

Montreal Star:

"PATACHOU ENCHANTS!"

Houston Chronicle:

"A SENSATION! DELIGHTFUL!"

Exclusive Management: WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY, INC. EST. 1898

Conventions & Trade Shows Lifting Catskills Into Top Talent Showcase

By JOE COHEN

The convention and trade show business is changing the nature of the Catskill Mt. area in New York State. The new demands of the business meeting trade not only has altered the area from a summer resort to a year-round operation, but it has also increased the need for name talent and eliminated much of the do-it-yourself entertainment that was formerly a vital part of the mountain inn programs.

According to Phil Greenwald, booker for the Concord Hotel, Kiamesha Lake, the largest in the Catskill belt, new requirements call for three acts every night of the year. It is no longer feasible to have such former standbys as champagne nights, game nights and other concoctions of a social staff. Standard and recognized entertainment must be provided every evening. What's more, it has to be up to metropolitan levels, since most of those attending the confabs are affluent enough to have patronized top nightclubs.

The new setup, Greenwald said, will soon make it mandatory for every hotel to go after top names. As of now, he added, the Concord is the only inn to use top talent as a lure. Last Saturday (11) the Concord had the Tommy Dorsey unit with Frank Sinatra Jr., Pied Pipers and Helen Forrest. It has played such performers as Tony Martin, Judy Garland, and it recently recreated the Harry Richman, Sophie Tucker and Joe E. Lewis parlay which appeared at the old Ben Marden's Riviera, Ft. Lee, N.J., during the early 1940s.

In former years, it was inconceivable for names to go into the Catskills once they attained recognition, said Greenwald. However, all this has been changed by the convention business, which makes it essential for the hotels to lure headliners. Salary hikes, plus the feasibility of testing new acts in that area, are aids in getting them there, Greenwald noted.

What's more, convention managers are seeking to have the type of entertainment available at the hotel at meeting time, written into the contract. Greenwald said this isn't possible at this time, but with the elevation of standards at the hotel, the conventionaires can be made to recognize that a performer of stature will be on hand.

For example, the Living Garden Industries convention and trade show held last week at the Concord wanted the comedy team of Allen & Rossi for their meet the next time. Although the act couldn't be guaranteed, the hotel promised that it would extend its best efforts to get them providing they are available and in the eastern part of the country.

Meanwhile, according to Greenwald, the Catskill area remains the biggest talent incubator in the country. There is still room for beginners in the smaller hotels that abound in the area. The Concord, he pointed out, can still help acts by putting them on the bill with headliners.

It needs three turns nightly every day of the year, making it necessary to provide 21 acts weekly, the largest allotment of any inn. Even when a top name such as Milton Berle or Jimmy Durante is used, he has to come up with acts to start off the layout.

Until the Catskill area hit on the convention business, most hotels closed shortly after Labor Day, and many of the operators went to Florida, where some had companion hotels. Today the Catskills require fulltime attention of the owners.

Yusem Exits Wm. Morris

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Gene Yusem resigned from the William Morris Agency last Friday (10), after being with firm for 13 years.

During this tenure, he was active in all phases of show biz, with emphasis upon live and tv film packaging, repping actors, producers and directors.

Stuarti's Waldorf Date

Enzo Stuarti has been shifted from the Town & Country Club, Brooklyn, to the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. Singer originally was to have started at the Brooklyn spot Feb. 21, but operator Ben Maksik permitted him to leave for the Waldorf stand which begins Feb. 3 for three weeks. Stuarti will be succeeded at the Waldorf by Jack Carter who goes in Feb. 25.

No substitute has yet been lined up for the Town & Country.

Feds' Surprise Raids Shut B'ham Clubs: Stamp Tax

Birmingham, Jan. 14.

Revenue agents in Jefferson County (the greater Birmingham area) have cracked down on local niteries. A wave of surprise raids have closed a number of clubs, at the same time causing others to curtail operations.

Raids were for non-payment of a county stamp tax which must be pasted on each bottle. The proceeds of the tax go to pay for hospital indigent care.

Clubs closed up here include Brothur's Club on the Montgomery Highway where the Archers were appearing; and the Miami Supper Club, strictly for exotics, and was being operated at the time by ex-stripper "Nudema."

The hardest hit club though was the swank $200,000 C'Est Si Bon which only opened recently with "name" entertainment. This private club's liquor license was revoked, to the policy now is for the membership to BOB ("bring own bottle").

Joe E. Lewis, who had just finished a date at the Roosevelt, New Orleans, was playing here when it was raided this past month. According to the management, Joe E. didn't bat an eye but went on with the show as if nothing had happened. "I've been in clubs which have been raided before," said the comedian.

The C'Est Si Bon plans continuing acts; Marie Wilson is set and Molly Bee, also scheduled, had to back out when she was signed as a "regular" on Jimmy Dean's weekly ABC-TV show.

Shift Rivoli, Chi, Into Ethnic Cafe

Chicago, Jan. 14.

A group of investors has purchased the long-shuttered Rivoli Theatre on Chi's northwest side and is converting it into a German-American nitery.

Purchase price was not disclosed, but Dieter Seyferth and Eugene Haegele, representing the buyers, said they would spend $40,000 in converting the former 1,600-seat film house into a club which can accommodate up to 1,200 persons. It will be the largest ethnically-oriented night spot in Chicago.

The nitery will retain the Rivoli name, and is expected to be ready by May 1. It is located on the edge of a predominantly German-American neighborhood, and will feature record, cafe, film and tv performers imported from Germany and also those U.S. acts with appeal to German-American audiences.

Sinatra Jr. On His Show Biz Career: 'Just Trying to Develop on My Own'

By ART LONG

Reno, Nev., Jan. 14.

"There are a lot of kids who sing better than I do but don't have the opportunity to be singing with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra. I am very grateful for my position.

"I would like to stay with the band for two or three more years. I feel that one day I will be singing pretty well."

Frank Sinatra Jr., recently appearing at Harrah's in Reno, candidly appraised his brief show biz career with no hesitancy, with no attempt to gloss or impress.

"If I left the band now . . . I'm not strong enough to be on my own. I'd be dead without the people I'm working with. I'm a novice in this business. I'm just another guy in the band, not the star of the show. I'm merely just one person in the organization. The majority of the personnel is in the same position as I am. They're all young men close to my age. We're growing up together just like my father grew with the original Tommy Dorsey band. There's so much talent in this organization that a lot of people don't see it all."

Sinatra Jr. has been criticized by many writers for lack of an individual style, for displaying the same mannerisms and phrasing attributed to his father.

Longtime Music Student

The young singer explains:

"I have been studying music since I was five, and I was a musician before I was a singer. I'm trying to develop on my own. As far as copying my father, there is no mimic expressed or implied. I feel I have a style different from my father's. If I'm like him physically, well . . . he's my father. Sure, I study his phrasing, but I also study Nat Cole's, Ella Fitzgerald's, and Norman Kaye's. I think my father is the greatest singer around at the moment, but I've seen him come off stage angry because something didn't go right. There's always room for improvement.

"I try to sing the way it is written, the way the composer put it on the manuscript."

Young Sinatra is generous in giving credit to others assisting him to develop a style.

"One of the greatest influences has been Helen Forrest. The way she can handle a lyric!"

(Miss Forrest has been with the Tommy Dorsey band, under the baton of Sam Donahue, since Sinatra Jr. joined the organization last May and played his first big nitery date at Harvey's Resort-Hotel on the South Shore of Lake Tahoe.)

Norman Kaye's Pointers

"Norman Kaye (of the Mary Kaye Trio) has also helped me. At Harrah's Tahoe he would catch every show and then come back and give me pointers."

The value of the Sinatra name?

"It helps commercially. The public is familiar with the name, and they will come in out of curiosity to see the show. In another way it's a hindrance. The public expects certain things, and they will either like you or be disappointed. They will compare notes."

Albeit his kidnapping at Lake Tahoe on Dec. 8 was not discussed, the attendant publicity has unquestionably added to the marque value of the singer's name. In the case of Harrah's at Tahoe, Sinatra Jr. was listed on the bottom of the marquee when the TD band first opened. But after the kidnapping his name was moved to the top, just under the Tommy Dorsey Orch listing.

Sinatra fils is skedded to leave the U.S. Jan. 18 for a series of one-nighters in England, followed by a tour of Army bases in Europe.

Advance Bookings
for a BANNER '64
BILL HALEY
and His COMETS
International Variety Kings
Stars of
"ROCK AROUND the CLOCK"
"BLACKBOARD JUNGLE"
"DON'T KNOCK THE ROCK"
Decca, Warner Bros. Records
Return to Canada, Late Feb.
European Tour in April

KEN - CURTIS
Now Starring
CBS-TV "GUNSMOKE"
as Festus Haggen
Starting Sat., Jan. 18
Also as Jim Buckley of "RIPCORD"
With Comedy Duo
CURTIS and FISHER

SISTER
ROSETTA
THARPE
Starred at hungry i, San F.
Four Weeks, Jan. 27
COPACABANA, Honolulu
Starting Feb. 25
European Tour, May

5 CALLICOATS
Vocal Harmony Stars
Now 7 Week Tour
U.S. BASES, Greenland
GERMANY and FRANCE
8 Weeks, Starting Feb. 7

LENNY HERMAN
And His MIGHTIEST
LITTLE BAND IN LAND
WAGON WHEEL, Lake Tahoe
Four Weeks, Jan. 17

Exclusive Bookings
JOLLY JOYCE AGENCY
58 West 48th Street
New York City
PLaza 7-1786 COlumbus 5-9847
Affiliated Offices
Phila. — Las Vegas — Europe

BOSTON
SMASH HIT
THE GLAMOROUS NEW HOTEL
AVERY
Show folks are raving about the all new Hotel Avery. All new, large, beautifully furnished deluxe rooms with private bath, television & radio. Air conditioning.
AVERY & WASHINGTON STS.

"THE COMEDIAN"
The Only Real Monthly
PROFESSIONAL GAG SERVICE
THE LATEST — THE GREATEST —
THE MOST-UP-TO-DATEST
Now in its 157th issue, containing stories one-liners, poemettes, song titles, hecklers, audience stuff, monologs, parodies, double gags, bits ideas, intros, impressions and impersonations, political, interruptions, Thoughts of the Day, Humorous Views of the News, Vignettes, etc. (20 Pages).
$25 YR.—SINGLE ISSUES $3
Foreign
$35 YR.—SINGLE ISSUES $4
No C.O.D.'s
BILLY GLASON, 200 W. 54th St.
New York City 10019, CO 5-1316

RICKI
DUNN
IS A THIEF!
Dir.: Harry Greben, 203 N. Wabash Av.
DEarborn 2-0996, Chicago, Illinois

WANTED
AUDIENCES TO WATCH FUNNY, HILARIOUS, COMEDY WAITER
ARTIE ROBERTS
PERFORM
He made these audiences happy:
STEVE ALLEN, CANDID CAMERA, G.M., XEROX, I.B.M. Now let him do the same for you.
FREE Brochures and prices on request.
Contact: ROBERT REXER
1674 Broadway, New York City
CI 5-3660

Thank you SHELLY BERMAN for everything

Sincerely,

VAUGHN MEADER

SOPHISTICATED SISTERS

HELD OVER 6 WEEKS

THE BARRY SISTERS

CARILLON HOTEL
Miami Beach
Florida

In the many years of producing top quality entertainment, we have never had as pleasant an experience as counting the house during the Barry Sisters current performance. We have, because of the best business in our history, held them over for 6 weeks. They are vivacious, charming, showstoppers full of grace, zip and sparkle. Unlike some other producers and owners, we don't cry on the way to the bank, we smile at the Barry Sisters.

The Management of the Carillon Hotel
Miami Beach

In the six years in which I have been producing the shows at the Carillon, no act has pleased our audiences more, nor has any done such phenomenal business as we enjoyed during your stay, this in spite of the tough competition of Sammy Davis, Jr. at an adjoining hotel.

Sincerely,
Lou Walters
LOU WALTERS

"BARRY SISTERS SENSATIONAL"

"We have known and enjoyed the Barry Sisters' singing for a long time. For the record, the show we enjoyed most of all those we have caught, was at the premiere of the new Lou Walters' revue in the Carillon hotel, titled "Oui Oui Paree." The Barry Sisters, always the mostest in the wardrobe department, have completely streamlined their act until it is absolutely nothing like it has ever been before. How two already popular entertainers managed to do this we don't exactly know, but it is a fact, and for the better entertainment of the patrons. A crowded house greeted their premiere. Their new musical arrangements, their handling of the microphone and their completely new staging is magnificent to behold. They began with the popular "Without A Song," then "All Of Me," then "Fly Me To The Moon" with a gigantic mirrored waltz ball revolving and casting reflections throughout the big Cafe Can Can.

"They sang Calypso and they sang the Gypsy tune, 'Dark Eyes.' They sang a medley of songs garnered from their recent tour in Israel and the same from their month's appearance in Russia behind the Iron Curtain with Ed Sullivan. They sang the hit Italian song 'For The First Time I'm In Love' and they sang 'When Somebody Breaks Your Heart,' each song in a style and a way that was different from anything that we had ever before experienced. And the magnificent setting in which they are presented, the Lou Walters new revue, it was a most exciting Barry Sisters and complete revue that we enjoyed."

PAUL M. BRUUN, REPORTER

THE MIAMI HERALD,
By GEORGE BOURKE
Herald Amusement Editor

"As usual the svelte sisters stop the show—from ballad to novelty and involving four languages."

THE MIAMI NEWS,

"The language of music is universal. The girls, Myrna and Claire are almost the same height, they're brunette and they dress alike. Their voices blend perfectly and every move they make is in unison, whether it's lifting a hand, taking a step or turning the head."

HERB KELLY

MIAMI BEACH DAILY SUN,
By BERNIE BRENNAN

"The Barry Sisters came on in their own inimitable style. To attempt to put into words how the sophisticated sisters held their audience can only be summed up by adding that the time element was too short."

COLPIX RECORDS • WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY • HENRY O. DORMANN, PUBLIC RELATIONS

AGVA Shifts Williams From St. Loo To Replace Alton Sharp as Chi Mgr.

Chicago, Jan. 14.

The new broom currently kicking up dust in the American Guild of Variety Artists has swept a new branch manager into the Chi office of that union. He's Chuck Williams, who had the same job in the St. Louis office of AGVA for 14 months, and was with the Air Force for 14 years before that. He replaces Alton Sharp.

Williams told VARIETY that he had only had time to make a summary appraisal of the Chi office, but that he didn't think that a major overhaul or housecleaning was in order.

Asked if he felt if the office still operated under a cloud as a result of the McClellan Crime Subcommittee hearings which bore down heavily on "B-girl" operations in the Windy City, Wililams said that like any other criminal activity it was something that would have to be watched by both the Chi police and the AGVA office.

"I think that stripping has been an honorable profession since the time of Salome, "Wililams said. "It's only when the girl steps out of their roles as performers that there is trouble. In most cases these are violations of existing city laws, which should be enforced by the local police."

Hub Nitery Ops Crying the Blues As Biz Hits Skids

Boston, Jan. 14.

Nightclub biz is rough in Hub with club owners all crying the blues since the year's end. Monticello, Framingham, went to a policy of local acts which holds until the middle of February when Juliet Prowse is booked in. Frolic, Revere, currently has a revue, produced by Buddy Thomas, with Dory Sinclair and Jan Marvis headlined. Spot has also instituted a policy of no cover, no minimum as a "January special," and shutters on Monday nights.

Several clubs are reported planning to stay open weekends only during the business falloff. Sami Coe, formerly of Steuben's Cave, opened a Saturday and Sunday night only entertainment room in the Surrey Room of Hotel Touraine. Blinstrub's, 1,700-seater in South Boston, is playing seminames until Jan. 30 when Teresa Brewer arrives.

Statler Terrace Room, which has run flesh for the past five years, exits the policy with Nelson Eddy & Gale Sherwood, current. Room will operate with house orch, Sammy Dale, and band singer Priscilla Howe.

Shuttering of the Statler's flesh policy cuts the number of supper clubs in downtown Boston now to only two, Steuben's, which stays on its consistent policy of three acts, two week shows, with acts doubling in the Cave, and Blinstrub's. The Hub, incidentally, once had 11 supper clubs going.

The bad biz prevalent in the niteries is blamed on factors ranging from JFK assassination to market declines.

LOVENBERGS' NAME UNIV. OF BRIDGEPORT

Bridgeport, Jan. 21.

University of Bridgeport has been named residual heir to the estate of the late Adelaide and Estelle Lovenberg, dancers and circus performers who after retirement ran a dancing school in Bridgeport. Estate includes property and the sisters' costumes.

Lovenbergs were third generation of a theatre family.

Instant Hotel

Continued from page 1

ments on the Grand Bahamas, which will have the Lucayan Beach Hotel which will include a gambling casino, scheduled to open shortly. CIC has a 20-year deal with the Grand Bahama Port Authority, a privately leased company which controls a 408 sq. mile entertainment preserve. The Italia, to be rechristened the Imperial Bahama hotel, will have the sole floating hostel rights in the area.

CIC has figured that the conversion of a ship into a hotel is considerably cheaper and faster to put into service than to erect a structure from scratch. Not only will it have luxury as well as lesser room accomodations, but the ship is completely air conditioned, has a multitude of niteries, a Cinemascope theatre (which for the time being will be the only one in the entertainment resort complex), as well as cocktail lounges, well appointed public rooms and other accoutrements vital to a luxury cruise operation.

The Italia will remain ip the Nassau-New York service until May when it is turned over to CIC for added refurbishing. The ship was originally built in Hamburg in 1928 as the Kungsholm. During World War II it was the John Erickson, a troop carrier, and was obtained by the Home Lines for operation between Europe and Argentina. However, the line was not able to take its earned pesos out of that country, and suspended service to that point. Instead, it went into the Mediterranean service and finally to the Caribe area with an occasional trans-Atlantic crossing.

The Italia is one of the ships with a full complement of entertainers on every cruise. It was booked by Eph Abramson of the Bramson Entertainment Service. Although the Italia is expected to retain some entertainment after its conversion to the Imperial Bahama Hotel, its new status will be a loss to American acts inasmuch as there were three or four turns on every weekly cruise of this ship.

The use of ships as floating hotels is not new. The old Nassau, which also plied the Caribe area for the Incres Lines, and which later became the Acapulco under ownership of the Mexican government, was tried as a hotel at the Seattle World's Fair. This didn't work out because landlubber hotels were sufficient to accommodate the tourist influx for that display.

Ringling Circus

Continued from page 52

the Ziegfeld days on Broadway made three trips to France, Italy and Germany to assemble costume fabrics and unusual props.

For the Miami date there will be 18 new acts in the rings including chimp acts, seal acts, and dog acts that have not been included in the roster for a number of years. Other acts personally signed in Europe by John Ringling North will be arriving along the route. For the Garden three of the world's greatest flying acts, The Gibsons, The Waynes and the Alexanders will perform simultaneously. Joining the show from Germany and highly touted by John Ringling North will be Charly Bauman's Tigers, who will be given a spot of honor in the second half of the show instead of in the opening where such attractions are traditionally used. The specs, dreamed up by Max Weldy and Pat Valdo will be entitled "Fiesta," "Hannibal's Elephant Menage," and of course "Welcome to the Fair."

Naturally Richard Barstow has been the busiest man on the grounds. Once a protege of the late John Murray Anderson, Barstow is now staging and directing for his 14th year. One of the few men left in show business accustomed to drilling a whole tent full of people and animals, it is an experience to watch him stand mike in hand in the center ring hour after hour and bring order out of chaos. Saturday morning with a packed arena and 350 performers on the floor he was having trouble separating the out-of-costume actors from the spectators. At one point he was busy trying to direct a matronly type through the paces of the finale.

"Excuse me," he said, "but aren't you Mother Goose?"

"Oh, no," she replied, "My name is Mrs. Hastings from St. Petersburg and I only came to watch."

AL LORBER EXITS GAC FOR CMA EXEC POST

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Alfred Lorber has resigned from the Coast office of General Artists Corp. to join Creative Management Associates, where he will be in the agency's administrative echelon. CMA prexy Freddie Fields explained that the move was taken to free agents of executive duties so they could devote more time to other aspects of the business.

Before joining GAC, Lorber was a veepee of Columbia Records and chairman of its finance committee.

GAC Woos Other Agencies; Biz Up, Co. Now in Black

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Larry Barnett, board chairman and chief exec officer of General Artists Corp., has arrived from his New York headquarters for local staff parleys. It is no secret—and Barnett does not deny—he is wooing other, smaller agencies to come in under the GAC banner—as did United Talent Managements Inc. some months ago, bringing flock of talent lock, stock and barrel.

Just what agencies he is wooing Barnett will not reveal. He reports GAC tv representation is especially up, what with agenting three packaging outfits which have shows which started or start on webs this month: ABC-TV "Saturday At The Palace," "This Was The Week That Was" on NBC, and "Say When."

Barnett also states, "we are in the black, a fact which will be amply attested when our financial statement is issued in February for the year past. The rosiest aspect, I think, is that our booking commissions have risen so much in recent months."

Vaude, Cafe Dates

New York

Joey Forman pacted for the Copacabana April 2 for two weeks . . . Allan Drake inked for the Playboy, Chicago, starting Feb. 17 . . . Wences goes into the Vapors, Hot Springs, April 16 . . . Barbara McNair set for La Fiesta, Juarez, Mex., July 27 . . . Bill Cosby tapped for the Diplomat, Miami Beach, March 4 and Totie Fields into same hotel Feb. 4 . . . Julius La Rosa set for the Palm Shore, Brooklyn, May 27.

Carol Simpson, who had been on vacation in England, rejoined "The Establishment" at the Strollers, Saturday (11) . . . The Joan St. James Trio new at the Playbill of the Hotel Manhattan . . . Name of Sol Saffian inadvertently omitted from the Associated Booking Corp. list of staffers in the firm's ad in VARIETY's anniversary issue . . . Los Astarias joined the Viennese Lantern show last night (Tues.) . . . Jack Benny repacted for Harrah's, Lake Tahoe, starting in August . . . Barry Sisters set for Sutmiller's Dayton, starting Feb. 3.

Chez Paree Folds

Continued from page 52

the congerie of little clubs has held fast and several new ones have sprung up in recent months.

The year 1963 was probably one of the best in recent history for the flossier hotel supper clubs, and they were still doing healthy biz when the new Chez Paree opened and closed. The Empire Room in the Palmer House, the Drake Hotel's Camellia House, and the Cafe Bonaparte in the Sheraton-Blackstone all had a banner year. The same period saw the debut of the Chateau Continental

Owner Donjo Medlevine was not available for his interpretation of what happened to the Chez Paree, but it's recalled that Manny Skar once said of the Club Gigi when he owned it: "It costs $1,000 a night to open the doors of a club like this, not including talent costs. It's like being on a treadmill. When the price of the talent goes up, the treadmill speeds up and you are going nowhere faster."

Twin Cities Terps

Continued from page 52

found a 61-year-old St. Paul widow testifying she signed contracts with one of the now closed studios for 900 hours of private lessons and group parties for about $6,000. She testified she agreed to pay that sum while a studio salesman held her hand and told her how much fun she'd have.

With the studios now closed it has been brought out that a number of the students, some of whom are elderly widows, are left with thousands of dollars worth of lessons coming and no dancing partners.

In addition to the two Twin Cities' dance studios, one in Minneapolis and the other in St. Paul, Friedman also operated them in Kansas City and Denver.

CHICAGO'S NEW
allerton HOTEL
. . . and you will enter the world of the luxury hotel. Tastefully decorated rooms and suites, elegant dining facilities, convenient parking and transportation, attentive service—all are yours and at a surprisingly modest price.
PHONE SU 7-4200
allerton HOTEL
Michigan Ave. at Huron St.
Home of Don McNeill's BREAKFAST CLUB Radio Program

TONY LAVELLI
EMCEE - MUSICAL ACT
WILCOX HOTEL, Hollywood, Calif. (Jan. 13 thru Jan. 17)

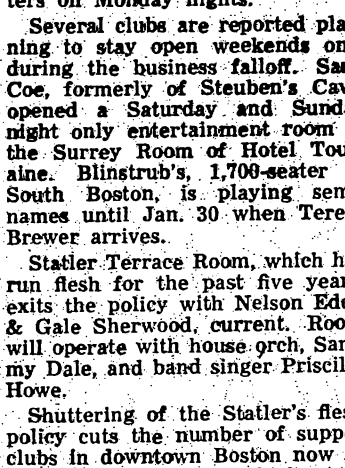
Mike Guen, op.: Park Hotel; Great Falls, Mont.: "One of the strongest musical acts to work my hotel. Lavelli also sings, does comedy, dances and is an all-around performer."

DONNA LYNN
CAPITOL RECORDING ARTIST
Newest Release
"RONNIE"
b/w
"THAT'S ME I'M THE BROTHER"
McCLENDON AGENCY TN 7-2287

BILLY GLASON'S FUN-MASTER
PROFESSIONAL COMEDY MATERIAL
For every branch of theatricals
"WE SERVICE THE STARS!"
35 Gag files $15, plus $1 postage
FOREIGN: 35 for $30
• 3 Parody Books, per Bk. . . . $10 •
• 5 Blackout Books 1-2-3 Each $25 •
No. 4 for $35—No. 5 for $30
• Minstrel (white face) Budget $25 •
• "How to Master the Ceremonies" •
$3 PER COPY . . . NO C.O.D.'s
BILLY GLASON
200 W. 54th St., N.Y.C. 10019 CO 5-1316
(We TEACH M.C'ing and COMEDY)
(Let a real Professional train you)

BUCK BUCKLEY
QUARTER WIT
Currently
DORAL COUNTRY CLUB Miami

Opening with VEGAS VARIETIES REVUE
Touring Western States Jan. 10-March 22
Direction: CARLSON ARTISTS CORP.

'ANGEL'
8 Years


ANGELA MARTIN
18 Years
SEE HOW SHE'S GROWN
SNIFFEN COURT INN
Third Ave. and 36th St., New York, N. Y.
January 20-25

RAT FINKS REJOICE
YOU HAVE A NEW HOME
"Jackie Kannon's Rat Fink Room is an idea operation for a sophisticated New York . . . Kannon oozes personality . . . Throws barbs with disarming grin to ringsiders like Ray Bolger, David Susskind, Buddy Hackett, McGuire Sisters, Robert Young, etc. . . ."
—Bill Smith, Backstage
JACKIE KANNON'S RAT FINK ROOM
Atop The Roundtable
151 East 50th St., New York, N. Y.

DORIS DUPUIS
HELD OVER
ONE FIFTH AVENUE
New York
Contact: MIRIAM LOVE
CHARLES V. RYAN AGENCY
35 W. 53rd St., New York CI 5-2225

"Sergio Franchi was the evening's major hit. The Italian tenor's strong voice and personal magnetism suggests he will not have trouble writing his own ticket..."

— Jack Gould, New York Times

"...Sergio Franchi particularly registered as a personality. His commanding presence, keen sense of comedy and marvelous voice bespeak a great future..."

— John Horn, N. Y. Herald-Tribune

"Sergio Franchi was the hit of the Victor Borge special. Franchi has rare combination of excellent vocalistics and personal magnetism."

— Daku, Variety

"Sergio Franchi, the big, handsome hunk of Italian tenor, revealed a fine flair for humor on the Victor Borge special. The offers must be rolling in."

— Bob Williams, New York Post

"Sergio Franchi has a powerful voice... and is blessed with a rare sense of humor and an out-giving manner. He could easily become one of the most popular upper-echelon performers..."

— Ben Gross, N. Y. Daily News

"Victor Borge's ABC-TV special was indeed very special... with pianist Leonid Hambro and tenor Sergio Franchi, he kept the TV air alive and kicking."

— Jack O'Brian, N. Y. Journal-American

With gratitude to VICTOR BORGE and producer-director William Hobin.

Sergio Franchi

The BOB HOPE Special / NBC-TV
FEB. 14

PALMER HOUSE
Chicago
FEB. 1-13

SAHARA HOTEL
Las Vegas
FEB. 17-MAR. 15

COPACABANA
New York
APR. 2-15

NUGGET CASINO
Sparks, Nevada
APR. 23-MAY 6

MONTICELLO INN
Framingham, Mass.
JUNE 4-14

Personal Management
VICTOR H. POTAMKIN

Accompanist - Conductor
NEIL WARNER

RCA VICTOR RECORDS

WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY, INC.

Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y.

Oscar Brown Jr., Nancy Wilson, Meyer Davis Orch conducted by Emery Davis, Horace Diaz Orch; $4 cover.

The Hotel Waldorf-Astoria's Empire Room, which reopened last week after a four-week holiday hiatus, seemingly has some new ideas and is trying to tap audiences that so far have shied from the posh hotel circuit. The current bill is, frankly, experimental, with Oscar Brown Jr. and Nancy Wilson on view, and constitutes a layout from which some valuable lessons can be derived.

The parlay of these two Negro singers provides audiences with a choice and tends to indicate that the Waldorf can be a room of opportunity in which talent is recognized and at the same time a goal in the visions of a performer.

In this instance it's both. Brown, whose last appearance locally was at the Blue Angel a couple of years ago, demonstrates that he is a performer of depth and perception, qualities which were recognized in his earlier forays. What's more, he's an articulate and sincere writer. He opened the show, working only with a piano, bass and drum behind him.

The background enabled him to make more of an impress with his own attributes. He charmed a hushed audience with tunes of his own composition, which included a highly introspective song based on a hawker's chant, "Rags and Old Iron."

In his too brief floorstand, Brown made it known that an urban boyhood can be as rich in recollection and lore as that of his country counterparts. His writing is seemingly autobiographical, based on themes collected from his Chicago background. But much of it is based on Negro themes from other sources. He makes his indent easily and with charm and sincerity. He'll probably wind up with headline status as a result of his work here.

Miss Wilson's work is in a different genre than that of Brown and the contrast when presented on the same bill is inescapable. On her show, she appeared more concerned with surface manifestations, mainly sound and effects. Her work has gloss and sheen but is basically artificial and lacking depth. Yet Miss Wilson shows signs to grow on.

She has a good ear and a good projection. She may be listening too intently to the ideas of arrangers and managers and subjugating her own thoughts on the subject. Certainly, she needs direction, but Miss Wilson has to be the one to determine her own vocal destiny.

Of added interest to the Waldorf bill is the Meyer Davis music helmed by the head maestro's son, Emery. He evidently has his own ideas on how a dance and show band should be led. He provides a strong beat and bounce that permit dancers easy locomotion and an incentive to hum along at the same time. The relief music is by Horace Diaz. Jose.

Palmer House, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 9.

Xavier Cugat & Abbe Lane, Michael & Paula, Ben Arden Orch; $2.50-$3.50 cover.

There are two schools of thought in Chi nitery biz as to what to do when a really big business convention comes into town. One group books the lesser-known and less expensive acts on the assumption that the conveners will be out on the town anyway.

Others, and among them is the Palmer House, assume that a name act will bring in the trade that counts—those cafe benefactors who ignore prices but never ignore the maitre d', captains, waiters and even the bus boys.

The Empire Room has apparently accepted the latter premise, and the 40,000 spenders in for the annual home furnishings confab will probably distribute a lot of their fun money at this spot. Xavier Cugat, although he is mostly an onlooker in this show, is still a marquee name to reckon with, and Abbe Lane is restful to the eyes and ears if not to the libido. She's an accomplished thrush with an orb-filling frame, handles her tunes intelligently and meaningfully, and, in a couple of Latino numbers, shimmies like sister Kate never did.

The entr'acte during Miss Lane's costume change is one of the fresher and more exciting young dance teams to have played the Windy City in some time. Michael & Paula Smuin are a youthful jazz-ballet team who apply their classical training to pop themes in a seldom-seen combination of showmanly razzle-dazzle and terp discipline.

Their dance interpretation of "My Favorite Things" has a feather-light grace to it, "Maria" captures both the innocence and sensuality of its "West Side Story" origin, and "Room 43" is a pulsing "hard jazz" number.

Next up is Louis Prima Jan. 22-31. Mor.

Sands, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Jan. 7.

George Gobel, Tommy Sands, Roy Castle, Harry Nofal, Copa Girls (12), Antonio Morelli Orch (21); produced and staged by Jack Entratter; choreography, Renne Stuart; stage direction, Harold Dobrow; $5 minimum.

Possibly because he expected a lull after the record-breaking holiday season, Jack Entratter booked three potent acts into the Copa Room; fortunately there is no lull, and fortunately Las Vegas has an outstanding triple bill.

Show closer George Gobel is 100% billed with Tommy Sands, and newcomer Roy Castle is highly impressive in his Vegas debut (see New Acts).

Gobel reprises many of his classic word pictures, and adds freshies to his remarkable low-pressure comedy routine. He pulls top yocks with his impresh of the sorrowful singing guitar-plunker on a country radio station at 5 a.m., and the turn ends on a lofty note as he vocalizes a very funny ballad called "Here Are My Arms."

Sands is a charmer from the time he welcomes his audience to "my hotel," and in a most pleasant voice offers such numbers as "I Concentrate On You," "Walking My Baby Back Home," "Sinner Man" and "Nancy With The Laughing Face." Latter was particularly effective for first-nighters, since his wife Nancy Sinatra Jr. was ringsiding.

Antonio Morelli's orch (21) backs the entire show, including a fancy Renne Stuart production number featuring the fine voice of Harry Nofal and the dozen Copa lovelies.

This triple header is in until Jan. 22 when Dean Martin returns. Duke.

Establishment, London

London, Jan. 7.

Annie Ross, Jonathan Routh, Arthur Atkins; staged by Steven Vinaver; $3.50 minimum.

Satire's sun has set over this proclaimed satirical nitery, and the new management seems to have no policy to take its place. British-born Annie Ross has now returned to the London jazz beat, which is pretty limited. She makes a so-so impact in this locale, and would make even less elsewhere.

Generally considered the best of local thrushes in a modernist idiom, Miss Ross has an act that sticks to the wayout numbers, never coming to rest with a familiar standard. Cool and detached, she delivers them crisply, looks assured in tinted chiffon, and has an individual way with the tortuous lyric that crowds more syllables to the minute than a spieler.

A little of this goes a long way, and it has to. Miss Ross brings in a reminiscense of her part in the old Lambert, Hendricks & Ross trio with Horace Silver's "Doodlin'," and seems more at home in this context. When she essays a torchy ballad, her voice lacks the touch of velvet to make it cling, and her program adheres to a general mood of disenchantment that is somewhat weakening.

The act also fails to display her other skill as a revue artist, although she closes with something akin to parody of the Charleston era of boop-be-do routines, which is not pointed enough. She is backed by an anonymous quartet, which is inclined to swamp her.

Miss Ross shares the billing with Jonathan Routh, who won some fame in the British version of "Candid Camera" on tv. He dissipates it here in a disastrous set of sketches, one of which has him reading out a catalog of nauseating practical jokes provided by some manufacturer.

He also has a dim bit about a birdman, reads from the "Kama Sutra," and closes with a lecture about a Japanese pillow-fight, not before time. He gets a yock or two by wrapping a parcel of blown-up balloons, but that's about the strength of it. Routh's act is interrupted by Arthur Atkins, but too infrequently. Otta.

Hotel Plaza, N. Y.

Juliet Prowse with Lance Avant, Bradford Craig, David Nagy, Nick Novarro, Andy Thomas, Dick Sternberg, Emil Coleman Orch, Mark Monte Continentals; $4 cover.

Since the decline of the ballroom dance act, the class hotels have eschewed the pop terp turns and only occasionally go in for ballet. In the old days, there were such duos as the DeMarcos, Mario & Floria, Gower & Champion who were regulars on the posh hotel circuits. But since that era, a dance turn has been a rarity in these environs.

Thus Juliet Prowse's engagement at the Persian Room of the Plaza carries more than the usual amount of interest. She almost appears to be a prototype for dancers seeking to return to the field in which they once were eminent.

As far as Miss Prowse is concerned, with the aid of four boys accompanying her, she proves that she is not only a fine dancer and a comedienne but also a utilitarian type singer. In the first two categories she is highly entertaining and catches the imagination of the crowd.

There is one major catch in the construction of her act. By necessity, a girl has to take breathing respites once in a while to catch up with herself. After all Miss Prowse provides a vigorous turn at dancing. She is therefore by the nature of her act forced to spend a lot of time in a secondary skill—singing. She's acceptable in this department, but the Persian room standards are much higher than mere acceptability. However, it does aid in a stamping Miss Prowse as a more complete entertainer rather than only a dancer.

Miss Prowse's choreography by Tony Charmoli is well done. Her four cohorts, Lance Avant, Bradford Craig, David Nagy and Nick Novarro, are skilled, disciplined and respond to the premiere danseuse's requirements instantaneously. The writing that has gone into her act is also imaginative and the comedic concepts have a good theatrical quality.

Unfortunately, several of her numbers are not up to Persian Room tastes, such as the Camille and Cleopatra bits. Their inclusion in this situation is questionable. It's recalled that these items were criticized when she appeared last year at the Winter Garden on the Eddie Fisher show. Their transfer to cafe environs hasn't made these pieces any more suitable.

Miss Prowse's production elements are topnotch. Costumes by Ray Aghayan are colorful and reflect the sense of humor needed for many of her numbers. The music by Andy Thomas conducting Emil Coleman's band, with Dick Sternberg at the drums, provides a background with assurance. These attributes, plus Miss Prowse's innate ability, give her performance an aspect of confidence and smoothness. The relief music is by Mark Monte's Continentals and the usual John Fosatti touch is evident at the tape. Jose.

Castaways, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Jan. 9.

Woody Herman Orch (16), Don Sherman, Renee Roberts; produced by Garwood Van; no Cover, no Minimum.

Woody Herman's 16-man gang of solid post-graduate musicians is stirring up things at the Castaways these nights. The enthusiastic preem audience heard the group zoom off with "Muskrat Ramble," then ease into "Lonesome Old Town," featuring Phil Wilson, a fantastic high note 'bone man.

Tenor saxman Sal Nistico impresses with "Sister Sadie," and Herman himself gets warm mitting for his "Rose Room" clarinet solo. Band also wails on "Don't Get Around Much Anymore," "Watermelon Man," and "Days Of Wine and Roses," latter with Herman on alto sax joining his other saxers.

The maestro goes vocal on an interesting delivery of "Don't Go To Strangers," and there's a good bit of drum clowning and impreshes by Jake Hanna. At one point, Herman intros his trademark with "For all you early Americans out there, here's 'Woodchopper's Ball'."

Songstress Renee Roberts fits the mood with "Chicago," "Let Me Love You," "'Deed I Do," and "You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You," but it probably would be wise for her to get rid of the Barbra Streisand look.

Don Sherman, a hip standup comic making his Las Vegas debut, is a real find. He writes his own material, and comes up with very far out—and very funny—material, making him a welcome addition to the fraternity of Strip comedians, none of whom has stolen any of his gags (so far).

This bill, produced by Garwood Van, is in for four frames. Duke.

Fairmont Hotel, S. F.

San Francisco, Jan. 8.

Gaylord & Holiday, Ernie Heckscher Orch; $3.50-$4 cover.

The elegant Venetian Room of this Nob Hill hostelry is currently housing Ronnie Gaylord & Bert Holiday, a slick song and comedy duo. Part of the w.k. Gaylords of a decade ago, they have assembled an act that has a little of everything, in just the right amounts. The singing is primarily handled by Gaylord, the mugging by Holiday, and they both double as the occasion demands.

Gaylord, a fine tenor, kicks off the show with a swinging "Over and Over." Duo also does some clever carbons of such names as Frankie Laine, Billy Eckstien, Tony Bennett and Dean Martin. The crowd called 'em back for a trio of Al Jolson tunes.

One of the most memorable aspects of the act is the relaxed good humor and mutual admiration of the two which comes over very effectively to the audience. They work beautifully as a duo.

Ernie Hecksher's band, when it is not playing insipid arrangements for dancing, is a solid aggregation and has been clicking here with its records of a "San Francisco Beat."

Next: Kay Starr on Thursday (16). Joaq.

Golden, Reno

Reno, Jan. 6.

Davis & Reese, Jacques Kayal, Golden Girls (10), John Carleton Orch (10); no cover, no minimum.

Davis & Reese, who played this room earlier this year, are back with much new material but have wisely retained many of their trademarked routines that are consistently big winners. And, in this intimate Carnival Room, they come across to full advantage.

Noting the season, two keep it timely with some hilarious lines re Yule shopping, then switch to takeoffs on western vidshows, carbons of old vaude acts complete with straws and canes, and an audience participation bit to "Jingle Bells," with tablers keeping the tempo by tapping glasses with coins.

All-new routine, with high risibility values, is a "Win Your Freedom" quiz show for prison inmates, with Pepper Davis as the prisoner contestant, Tony Reese as the emcee. It's loaded with good lines and inventiveness. Davis, to win freedom, names the 50 states in 30 seconds while singing to "Holiday for Strings." Exit is their familiar tap session atop drums.

Throughout duo's turn, Davis proves himself the perfect foil, works with apparent abundance of energy and uses his mobile face for top effect. Reese, as the straight man, also shows much talent in the vocal department and feeds lines to partner with unerring accuracy.

Production numbers by the Golden Girls (six dancers, four nudes) are holdovers from the preivous show. The John Carleton Orch backs in the usual capable fashion.

Jacques Kayal, who handles the production singer chores, also shows his talent midway in the show in a 15-minute solo turn Long.

Stork, Shreveport

Shreveport, Jan. 8.

Dick Smith, Angel Wilde, Jack Nelson Trio; $2.50 minimum.

Dick Smith, a veteran of the bistro circuit, is an extremely resourceful monologist. He's able to bend his act to suit the situation, a bit all too rare at this Bossier City spot.

His takeoffs (Winston Churchill, Eleanor Roosevelt, Peter Lorre, and Jerry Colonna the best of two dozen or so) are carefully arranged physically as well as vocally and he neither courts nor condescends to his audience.

If Smith has a fault, it's in his basic routines which are becoming a bit dated. However, he uses them only as springboards for whatever the audience picks up.

He's ably assisted by Angel Wilde, one of the most statuesque and fetching exotics around. Backing and dance beat are provided by the Nelson group, thinly but adequately. Weljo.

Americana, N. Y.

Pearl Bailey (with Nick DiMaio), Lester Lanin Orch, Al Conte Trio; $5 cover.

Pearl Bailey has been a unique entertainer for many years. It's more evident than ever in her current foray in the Royal Box of the Americana Hotel. She has brought in a batch of new songs over which she seems to have worked especially hard in order to make her particular type of lazy delivery more pronounced.

She essays a stand that is longer than usual for her, mainly because the audience insisted. Miss Bailey, at the conclusion of a turn lasting about an hour, came out merely for a bow but was trapped into singing her perennial "Tired."

Her current stint has its share of her saucy asides. She is the mistress of the rambling discourse and a few eyebrow lifting images that maintain a constant flow of laughter.

Miss Bailey's catalog has some new items such as "35 Years Ago," related to a former item in her repertoire in which she dwells on the prowess of her youth. It's sufficiently sapolioed for the family type rooms. The laughs in this instance are the more innocent type. She goes serioso a few times in her act, and it provides a breathing space for both artist and audience. She has no trouble picking up her former pace when the placid session is over.

Other items that maintain her status as a comedienne are the bits with her conductor, Nick DiMaio, and band's flautist. In all, the Negro songstress is one of the more robust items in the current nitery roster, both entertainment and boxofficewise.

DiMaio, helming the Lester Lanin crew during the show, and the Al Conte Trio are the musical components on this layout. Jose.

Talk of Town, London

London, Jan. 7.

Alma Cogan, with musical direction by Stan Foster. Robert Nesbitt's "High Life," with Peter Regan, Tricia Money, Christine Craig. Trotter Bros. (2); Line (29); choreography, Billy Petch; decor, Tod Kingman; costumes, R. St. John Roper; orchestrations, Burt Rhodes; Sydney Simone and Frank Deniz Orchs; $7.75 minimum.

Booked in for a six-week stint in the star spot at this roomy nitery, Alma Cogan produces the right earthy and forthright attack for the spot and clicks with an act that does not stray beyond the conventional gimmicks but is adequate for its purpose. Plushly billowing in white sequins, she doffs it for a chain-mail outfit which dazzles the eye and is tailor-made to pick up changes in lighting, affording visual variety.

Miss Cogan sticks to the finger-snapping uptempos, and maybe that's the correct decision for this room, which responds more to gustly personality than to subtlety. After an introductory verse, she launches into "The Man I Love" in quick time, and sets a brisk mood which nevertheless has little to do with the sentiment of the lyric.

She soon sneaks in a participation routine with "Hava Nagila," with the customers clapping out the rhythm, or something approaching it. But it might have been wiser for the band to maintain the same tempo, instead of switching it just as the audience had got its palms warm.

Mild mimicry of such thrushes as Vera Lynn and Shirley Bassey is pleasing, but probably loses its edge here. Chorus songs are encouraged and wind up a professional and amiable display.

Miss Cogan, who may play Las Vegas in the spring, is the kind of gal who clinches attention. Her regular music director, Stan Foster, valuably assists with clean and brisk arrangements, conducting Sydney Simone's well-knit outfit from the piano.

Chief trouble with her material at this showing is that it is too predictable and lacks surprise. Miss Cogan does not chance her luck with a slow ballad, which would vary the steady flow of cheerfulness.

Tab-settlers get two shows for the price of one, and "High Life" continues as a midevening appetizer in the same format as previously noticed. The bands of Sydney Simone and Frank Deniz suavely entertain the dancers and the sitters-out. Otta.

Plaza 9-Room, N. Y.

Julius Monk's "Baker's Dozen" with Gerry Mathews, Jamie Ross, Nagle Jackson, Ruth Buzzi, Barbara Cason, Delphi Harrington, Richard Blair, Jan Templeton; pianists William Roy, Robert Colston, Paul Trueblood; staged and choreographed by Frank Wagner; costumes, Bill Belew; $6-7.50 minimum.

There aren't many people around these days who have Julius Monk's know-how in shaping a revue. The fact is spotlighted anew in Monk's latest production, "Baker's Dozen," which seems headed for a good run in the cellar of the Hotel Plaza.

It's Monk's second production for his Plaza bosses since leaving the Upstairs at the Downstairs. His first at the Plaza, "Demi-Dozen," ran 14 months, a formidable debut.

The Monk mastery is especially evident in this new outing because even though several of the 24 numbers presented in the two-act framework miss their mark the overall impression is satisfactory and the good things stand out so strongly that the show can be chalked up as a pleasing romp.

Under Frank Wagner's brisk direction, the cast plays with free-wheeling abandon and moves swiftly from one sketch and/or song to another in high style. The work load falls on Gerry Mathews, a veteran of many of Monk's nitery excursions and he takes it in his stride. He's a first-rate funnyman and an okay singer and none of his varied chores ever seems to be to much for him.

The supporting players, Jamie Ross, Nagle Jackson and Richard Blair on the male end, and Ruth Buzzi, Barbara Cason, Delphi Harrington and Jan Templeton in the femme division, are in the Monk tradition—bright, crisp and multi-talented.

The targets, when the writers are on the beam, are also in the Monk tradition—pegged on big city living and dying and branching out into politics, the Common Market and space. Among the contributing authors rating special mention are William F. Brown for a sketch on buying a coffin and James Bond, John Simon (music) and Louis Botto (lyric) for a wild "Mescaline Hat Dance," William Dyer (music) and Don Parks (lyric) for their sly poke at Mary McCarthy's "Group," Leslie Davison for his song on shopping-bagsmanship, Stan Lebowsky (music) Fred Tobias (lyric) for their salute to Joseph E. Levine in "A New Italian Folk Song," Rod Warren for his "Discotheque," Clark Geshner for his piece on spacemanship and G. Wood for a charming ballad called "Merry-GoRound."

And happily brought back for another run is "Barry's Boys," June Reizner's devastating slap at the Goldwater cult. It works even better now that Sen. Goldwater is an announced candidate and very much in the news.

The accompaniment by William Roy and Robert Colston on the plural pianos, and Paul Trueblood at the singular piano is brisk and easy and in keeping with the general happy mood. Gros.

Edgewater Beach, Chi.

Chicago, Jan. 7.

"Juan Carlos Copes Revue" with Copes, Maria Nieves and Roberto Florio, Clair Perreau Orch; $2-$2.50 cover.

The Polynesian Village has returned to its most successful format for what may be its last show amid its present decor. New g.m. Ken White is seriously considering taking the bamboo and palm trees out of this room and returning to a more formal supper club style. It's a move which would be applauded by the many performers who have seen their acts dissipated by a setting more appropriate for a takeoff on Tondeleyo doing soliloquies from "White Cargo".

The format that has consistently succeeded in this room is a revue from somewhere near the Equator—Spain, Mexico, South Seas, Hawaii or South America. The current show, Juan Carlos Copes Revue, is of that genre, and is superior to most in that it does not confuse format with formula.

The troupe is from Argentina, and Copes, who is the producer, director and leading dancer, has fashioned a fast-moving and disciplined 45-minute show that is long on color and seeming authenticity and void of that Latino hokum which is sometimes offered as ethnic.

Copes is an impressive terpster with a whip-like agility, and his dance duets with Maria Nieves make their dramatic point strikingly with the language of legs (and hers are worth watching).

Solo singer Roberto Florio has a big voice to fit his muscular frame, and while his style may sound a little florid in a northern clime, it's apparently the Argentine McCoy. The three male and three femme choristers are first-rate in their interpretations of a variety of city and country dances. The girls are attractive, and their shapeliness is well-displayed in their colorful costumes.

Arrangements and musical direction are skillfully handled by Hector Garrido, and Enrique Mendez's bandonexon solo is intriguing. Mor.

The Mint, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Jan. 7.

"Hong Kong Scandals," Bob Ling, Tzu Li, Jay Lee & The Princess, Changs (2), Linda Lee, Girl Dancers (8), Jimmy Cook Orch (4); presented by Sammy Lichter; staged by Joy Healey; no cover or minimum.

Entertainment director Sammy Lichter has brought something new to the downtown area — an Oriental nudie revue called "Hong Kong Scandals." The fast-moving show features eight Far East dolls in various stages of undress, plus a generous portion of music, magic, dancing, feats of skill and comedy.

Handsome Bob Ling tosses the vocals with a rich, pleasant voice, getting warm applause for his impreshes of Bobby Darin, Perry Como, Johnny Raye, Al Jolson and Louis Prima.

Miss Tzu Li, billed as "The Cantonese Beauty," is a shapely stripper who has learned the proper undulations from her American sister exotics. Jay Lee & The Princess, a delightful act of comedy magic, is outstanding. Linda Lee is the personable production chirp, and the two Changs offer an exciting turn of balancing, plate spinning and assorted eye-opening displays climaxed by the male partner's blindfolded leap through a flaming hoop of knife blades. Duke.

Bimbo's 365, S.F.

San Francisco, Jan. 7.

Szony & Claire, Danielle Darvour, Roy Palmer Orch, "Spectacular III" (15); $2-$2.50 entertainment charge.

Owner-producer Agostino "Bimbo" Giuntoli has assembled a top offering to get the new year underway at his posh theatre-restaurant, featuring two strong acts and three lavish song-dance production numbers.

Szony & Claire—Hungarian Francois Szony and Bay area girl Nancy Claire—are a dance team likely unsurpassed in the biz for sheer elegance and grace. Their three numbers have an excellent pace, varying from dream-like ballet sequences to fiery dynamics in a Spanish bull-fight pantomime. Brevity of their act guarantees an unsated audience.

There is no attempt to chat with the patrons, adding to the aura of professionalism and dignity. Szony handles the leaps and whirls of his lovely partner with the classic control of the difficult made to appear simple, and Miss Claire moves with an ease that seems weightless. The choreography is imaginative and varied. The customers repeatedly interrupted with applause.

Danielle Darvour is a diverting and attractive thrush making her second appearance at the club in less than a year. Her seven numbers are presented in both French and English and cover a wide range of styles and topics—perhaps her greatest fault.

The young singer is vocally and personally quite pleasant but extends herself too far. She opens with a sharp and enjoyable "Under Paris Skies" but follows with a contrived "My Heart Belongs To Daddy." Then come a nice "I Wish You Love" and another overdone effort, "Perhaps."

Miss Darvour's relaxed work with French tunes is far superior to her gimmicky English numbers and she might well emphasize them more, while including some more carefully selected American ballads.

The show's three production numbers—a Chinese theme, "Austrian Waltz" and "Voodoo Spell"—are colorful, easy on the orbs and fast moving. Lead dancer Patrice Michaels and her 11 succulent cohorts are an attractive group while the numbers, choreographed by Rene de Haven, are smoothly executed. Joaq.

N.Y. Drake's Shepheard's Goes Discotheque In Posh Bistro Teeoff

The jet set seems to be undergoing a metamorphosis. Some of the old established rooms that were patronized by this segment of the social register have fallen into disuse. For they now appear to be leaning toward discotheques. Le Club, privy to a comparatively few members of this segment of society, may be setting the trend.

Meanwhile, the Drake Hotel, under the management of Max Blouet, is making an attempt to fill the vacuum with its new room, Shepheard's, patterned after the famous Cairo Hotel, long a symbol of the white man's burden in a foreign land. Shepheard's is probably one of the smarter designed rooms, capturing not only the influence of imperial Egypt but also the flavor of the mode of living indulged in by the upper crust.

However, it's one of the more subtle discotheques. Those not hip to the trend have the feeling that an orchestra is in the room. Three

Drake Hotel, N. Y.

Otto Schmidt Trio; $2, $3 cover.

But the record spins on in the background and the trio, comprising drum, bass and marimba, merely stamp out a stronger beat which impels a dancing mood. musicians are constantly on hand.

The constant presence of live musicians retains the illusion for many. Of course, there are times when a vocalist or a chorus startles the auditors into realizing what the gimmick is. But generally, by that time, the mood is established and the realization does no harm.

Shepheard's is probably one of the most elegant uppercrust dine and dance spot to come about in sometime. Its Sunday (29) opening, a strictly white or black tie affair, was attended by a select list of socialites and opinion-moulders who seemed impressed not only with the entertainment but the groceries as well.

The room is the successor to Mon Plaisir, which was sans entertainment. At Shepheard's, aside from the combination of live and recorded music, the top entertainment is likely to be provided by an audience that comes to see and be seen.

The Zeckendorf Hotel chain, helmed by William Zeckendorf Jr., appears to be constantly in the market for an expanded nightlife as an aide to the hotel industry generally, and this chain particularly. Thus, when designer Jeff Leeds came up with the idea of this kind of poshery, Zeckendorf got Peter Larkin to design the spot pronto. It seems to have a major chance of being the season's bright new room. Jose.

Latin Quarter, N. Y.

"Diamond Fair" revue with the Novelites (3), Bobby Breen, Giselle Szony & Kossi, the Rebertes (3), Eddy Seifert & Co. (3), Jeanne Michelle, Marion Conrad, Hill Roberts, Dancing Diamonds (14), Escorts (4); Showgirls (12); Jo Lombardi Orch; Sammy Bidner Trio; $7.50 minimum.

E. M. Loew and Ed Risman have come up with three new acts for their current revue which opened at this midtown nitery about a month ago. Launching of the Novelites, Bobby Breen and dance team of Giselle Szony & Kossi makes the layout seem like a new show. And there's not a second's lull in its 90-minute running time.

The instrumental comedy trio, the Novelites, is costarred with Breen. This group, cleans up here

Frankie Carr, who paces the fun with his antics, plays the accordion; Joe Mayer, straightman of the group, plays a mean bass viol, and Chuck Leonard, guitarist and hefty warbler, are all musicians in their own right. After establishing this fact with several tunes and songs, the three boys are off and rolling with series of panto gags, mimicing and knockabout antics introed so rapidly that there's no chance for a letdown.

Leonard has the singing of Sinatra, Dean Martin and chatter of Cagney down pat and a fine tiein for the clowning of Carr. Latter then alternates with Leonard in a series of sight routines that reach a peak of hilarity. The Hootenany Trio is offered for a whopping bowoff. A wow hit here.

Breen, whose voice after some 35 years is amazingly strong and well controlled, is a happy addition to this lineup. Recently signed by Motown Records, the onetime child film star leans on his well-selected lineup of songs to make a solid impression.

After his introductory tunes, such as "Mine and Mine Alone," "Blue Heaven" and "Granada," he uses a strawhat to indicate he's going back to oldies. Among these are "Baby Face," "If You Knew Susie," Melancholy Baby" and "Tootsie Goodbye." Breen's handling of "Laugh Clown" allows him to segue into "Pagliacci" to bring his song stint to a stirring climax.

Making their Broadway bow, Gizelle Szony & Kossi (New Acts) scored with their classical dance turn. Remainder of show is the same as when first launched, with the Rebertes' comedy acro feats perhaps standout. Jo Lombardi cuts a sharp show per usual, and it's a real tough one because of the numerous songs used currently. Wear.

Basin St. East, N. Y.

Duke Ellington Orch (14), Ahmad Jamal Trio, Sylvia deSayles; $3.50 cover.

The Duke Ellington Orch seems to be hanging together despite the scarcity of big-band booking. This date at Basin Street East holds till Jan. 18, and comes after the band played the east side club for a weekend recently.

Unlike most of the big bands left around today (such as Woody Herman's umpteenth swinging Herd) which feature young sidemen, the Ellington 14-man ensemble is a strong argument against the old age pension.

Still blasting from the Basin Street stand with great skill and enthusiasm are such august jazz performers as Harry Carney on baritone sax, Lawrence Brown on trombone, Johnny Hodges on alto sax, Cootie Williams, trumpet, Jimmy Hamilton, clarinet. The waists may have softened and spread a bit, but the pipes and lips are the same. It is unusual to see a sideman get a solo encore. Johnny Hodges did. Driving, swinging section work is a foregone conclusion. These men have played together before.

Ellington, as usual, is not only a distinguished jazz composer, but also an accomplished front man, suave and wittily hip in the segue matter. Repertoire naturally includes many of his own compositions along with other jumping standards identified with the band and soloists for decades.

A dramatic-styled belter, Sylvia de Sayles takes a vocal turn with the band, but on opening night caught she was working without her own arrangements and could not be properly accounted.

Ahmad Jamal fills the bill in his vari-tempoed, fully melodic jazz piano style. Excellent in support are Chuck Lampkin on drums and Richard Evans on bass. The trio scores particularly with an extended rendition of the theme from the tv show, "Naked City." The arrangement doesn't have quite 8,000,0000 variations on a theme, but more than most anyone but Jahmal could imagine. Bill.

King Edward, Toronto

Toronto, Jan. 7.

Deep River Boys (4), Bobby Gimby Orch (8); $2 cover.

With Harry Douglass sparking the group and Ray Durant its longtime arranger and piano accompanist the Deep River Boys also comprise Ronnie Bright as lead bass and Harold Johnson as tenor. Back at the Oak Room of the King Edward unit of the Sheraton Hotel chain, Douglass is taking an increasing part in the harmony quartet, with more stepout solos.

Boys are in for three weeks at the 210-capacity Oak Room and after their King Edward tenure (ending Jan. 18) move to a fortnight's engagement at The Embers at Fort Wayne, commencing Jan. 20. Meantime, the singers are consistently turning them away during their Toronto twice-nightly appearances.

Request dance seshes, to singing accompaniment of the group, include "Moon River" and "I Left My Heart in San Francisco." Bobby Gimby's eight-piece orch lends solid backing to the boys' request dance numbers, ditto a rollicking "When the Saints Go Marching In." Headliner's were on 35 minutes when caught. McStay.

Roosevelt Grill, N. Y.

Joan Fairfax All-Girl Orch (14), Bob Kasha Trio; $2-$2.50 cover.

Having tried two other policies, including names, the Roosevelt Grill has switched back to bands for which it has been best known. Teeing off the "fresh" format is an all-girl combo which not only plays the sort of music terpers enjoy but also presents a complete show somewhat reminiscent of what Guy Lombardo and other larger bands did to keep the room's non-dancing partons happy. Joan Fairfax's orch scored here opening night with the most spontaneous applause heard in the Grill for months.

Miss Fairfax, who has excellent pipes, has been a vocalist on the Ed Sullivan, Lawrence Welk and Guy Lombardo tv shows, and her singing attests to this showcasing. Her batoning of the femme band prior to the formal shows seems a bit routine, but she knows her gals and keeps them well in hand.

It's understandable that the Canadian-born Miss Fairfax follows the Lombardo (another Canadian) pattern somewhat in pointing up her top instrumentalists since she just wound up eight weeks at Port-O-Call in Tierra Verde, Fla., where Lombardo is now playing, being his winter show base. This is her band's initial date after the Florida engagement.

The Fairfax crew has six brass, bass viol, four saxophones, traps and pianist plus the comely, curvaceous leader. Band is reminiscent of the old time Ina Ray Hutton all-femme orch. The gal who blows a sweet trombone is standout in an combo that boasts horn, sax and drum specialists. Miss Fairfax, at show caught, did not sing once while her outfit was playing for the dancers.

But with the start of the full presentation, she not only is emcee and batoner but warbler of virtually every tune. This show, besides offering varied soloists, has several gimmicks such as that done by four musicians for Miss Fairfax's chirping of "If I Had a Hammer," with a five-girl vocal group in the background.

There's also the stunt of playing old songs, and permitting the aud to guess in what year they were introed. Payoff on this series is a bottle of champagne as a prize to the male guessing the year of "Red Sails in Sunset."

Bob Kasha Trio provides relief on patron dancing. Gene should be well occupied at the velvet ropes here in ensuing weeks. Wear.

Dino's Lodge, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan 8.

Karen Dolin, Jack Elton, Steve La Fever; no cover, no minimum.

Opening a day late because of a cold, singer Karen Dolin's voice still showed signs of it at Tuesday's (7) opener, at least in her more strenuous routines. The "graduate nurse" of the Vince Edwards nitery act, returning to Dino's after three years, shows best in the moodier ballads.

Special lyrics for "Without a Song" and a weak item about the joys of Paris could be reworked or dropped, along with attempts to interpolate jokes (mostly old) into the act. Canary's chief assets are very good looks and an ear for torchants, in which she might specialize. She does a good "Old-Fashioned Girl" but even keeps the Eartha Kitt drawl. Borrow the songs, but not the style.

That even better than usual good sound heard in Dino's the past few weeks is due to the long-overdue return of bassist Steve La Fever, out for some months due to an accident. He ably complements Jack Elton's pianistics. Robe.

Duvernay, Hull, Que.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.

Patti Lewis, Brian Browne Trio. $1 cover.

Patti Lewis, a tall, lissom blond thrush, scored easily when caught in Duvernay Hotel's Executive Penthouse. Encased in a slightly spangled peacock-blue gown, she displays a distinctive style and a winning smile.

Opening well, Miss Lewis follows with five well-paced, superbly sung numbers. Among them are "Street Where You Live," "Hadn't Anyone Till You" and "C'est Magnifique" in excellent French. This gal should be on disks. Backing from Brian Browne Trio is sensitive and solid. Gard.

New Acts

GLENN YARBROUGH
Folksongs
35 Mins.
hungry i, Frisco

Glenn Yarbrough, who has split from the Limeliters and returned to his original role as a solo singer, looks like he will make it solid. He has put together a nicely paced show which is almost totally new even to veteran folksters in the audience.

He has dropped the guitar and appears in dark suit, open necked shirt with good lighting and accompanied by another guitarist, John Stalber, who is first class.

Yarbrough's act consists of romantic folk songs interspersed with some tongue-in-cheekers. An audience participating number, "When the Honey Winds Blow," is a strong tune and so is the laugh provoking "Mermaid." Either of these could score for him.

Act, if anything, needs a little slimming on the part of Yarbrough whose rotundity does not lend itself too well to the romantic role he takes up in the love songs.

His voice—a clear, sentimental tenor—is first rate for projection of the lyrics and the emotions of the songs and he handles the whole show like a veteran. It is difficult to break in new material but Yarbrough handles that deftly. His own ability and the buildup offered via his new RCA Victor LP should make him a good bet for solo bookings in any folk oriented club. Rafe.

RAY SHAW & JOE COSTA
Songs
35 Mins.
Sheraton-Blackstone, Chicago

Although Ray Shaw and Joe Costa have several frontrank nitery bookings to their credit, they have somehow escaped appraisal under New Acts. Sheraton-Blackstone g.m. Doug Boone's offbeat New Year's week booking for his posh little Cafe Bonaparte (which usually features chesty chanteuses) makes a projection of the pair's potential in other types of spots a tough task, since the Bonaparte milieu is the essence of intime swank.

For the record, they commanded the attention of a light pre-Auld Lang Syne Eve crowd handily, and would provide an interesting change of diet for rooms similarly interrupting a parade of international canaries.

They are in their early 30s, have lotsa experience in the full range of variety show biz and display much polished showmanship in a generally well-organized turn. Shaw has a big, rich legituner baritone voice, and Costa is more of a crooner.

In a less strategically structured act, the vocal contrasts could mix like oil and water, but the duo cleverly mixes solos that suit their individual styles with duets that don't require a good deal of musical togetherness.

In tandem, the pair do "Trouble In River City," "Gonna Build A Mountain" and "Oh Marie." Shaw is at his big-voice best in "I'll Know" and "I've Never Been In Love Before" while Costa does engaging pop versions of "I Left My Heart In San Francisco" and "Bill Bailey." Mor.

ROY CASTLE
Songs, Dances, Comedy, Instrumentals
25 Mins.
Sands, Las Vegas

Roy Castle is highly impressive in his Vegas debut. A British comic with a winningly appropriate accent, he has an act which is difficult to describe — which of course is good because it will whet curiosities and make more people want to see him. He has an accurate way of summing it up: "If someone asks you what I did here tonight — you try telling them!"

Castle has a humor pattern of his own design, never before displayed here; he's a singer ("Get Happy," "Blue Moon"), a dancer (with hoofing a specialty), an acrobat, a pianist, a trumpet player, and he does all of them well. And he also contribs a hilarious bit of hand motions and designs.

Castle is more than an unpredictable comedian; he's a versatile entertainer. Duke.

GISELLE SZONY & KOSSI Dancers
15 Mins.
Latin Quarter, N. Y.

Giselle Szony, sister and former partner of Francois Szony, is making her initial appearance on Broadway with this new terp act. She has a new partner in Enrico Kossi, personable and stalwart as well as an excellent dancer. It adds up to a winning combination at the Latin Quarter, N. Y.

Miss Szony perhaps follows part of the pattern of her former dancing act, with the usual lifts, tossing about and other semi-acrobatic feats. Her daring splits from an elevated position are as startling as they are perfectly executed. Kossi at one time holds her in midair with one arm. Entire turn is aud-pleasing.

But if anything, the act is a bit too long because Szony & Kossi have their auditors with them right from the outset. So why not conserve a bit of that energy and superb dancing? Wear.

CLAIBORNE CARY
Songs
20 Mins.
Mister Kelly's, Chicago

Legituner and tab revue experiences seems invaluable for a performer aiming for a solo spot in the cafes. However, it is not surefire insurance for success and in some cases, such as Claiborne Cary, can provide problems. At present she lacks a specific stage identity.

Miss Cary, who has just completed nine months in "Put It In Writing" at the Happy Medium cabaret theatre here, has also played on Broadway in "Silk Stockings," "New Girl In Town" and "Beg, Borrow or Steal." She has much vitality and an ingratiating freshness about her. However, at this point she is figuratively holding fast to her Equity ticket when in the niteries the individuality implied by an AGVA card is high trump. The question to be asked of her present turn is: "Will the real Claiborne Cary stand up?"

Flashes of her onstage identity comes into focus sporadically, and when this occurs she is capable of generating sparks of excitement. The two numbers where she comes through the strongest are "Ten Cents A Dance" and "Bye Bye Blackbird," the first of which is dramatically pungent and the second builds to a fine peak of free-swinging abandon.

Her ballads are occasionally impaired by a voice that is consistently smooth in the middle ranges, but gets harsh in the upper ranges. This is true of "Doodling Song," "That's Wonderful To Know" and "Simple Little Things," although the latter has some sections that are velvety smooth and both emotionally and musically effective. Finally, her stage business and patter is strained and seemingly not natural to her.

Miss Cary has a good deal of charm and offbeat beauty, and the fragments of savvy that she displays bode well for her future. At this point she needs a turn with more homogeneity, one that creates a more specific personality onstage. Mor.

MANDRELL SINGERS
Songs
25 Mins.
Unicorn Coffee House, Boston

A switch from the ordinary, these three Negro boys, accompanied by a lone guitar, awaken a brand new respect for the much overdone combo of folk and gospel music. Out for a very short time, the new group, all from Boston, require much work to gain the pro status necessary for proper channelling. In spite of need for staging and showmanship, the Mandrells give with an authentic and yet commercial portrayal of the many variations of folklore that, for awhile, have been lost to hootenanny popularity. With subtle hint towards jazz, the group intros a diversified program that includes "Work Song," "Black Girl."

Highlighting and further enhancing group's sound is rich bass voice ringing out to create the all important extra something, making them individualized with a high potential for success. Once the boys lose their stage insecurities and smooth over the rough spots, they should be a good bet for intimate rooms, clubs, tv, as well as the coffee house circuit. Guy.

Daisy Weichel's Sendoff

Boston, Jan. 4.

Daisy Weichel, longtime press agent at the Statler Hilton here, was feted at the hotel by press, radio-tv reps, politicos and hotel execs prior to her departure for San Francisco, where she will flack for San Francisco Hilton.

Miss Weichel formerly was press rep for the Hotel Touraine and had handled group sales for road show films. She had pressagented for the Statler Hilton Terrace Room.

House Review

Astoria, Finsbury Park

London, Jan. 7.

Brian Epstein presentation of the Beatles (4), Billy J. Kramer with the Dakotas (4), the Fourmost (4), The Barron Knights (5) with Duke D'Mond, Rolf Harris, Cilla Black and Tommy Quickly; $2.15 top.

The Beatles, the show biz phenomenon of 1963, played their first London season for a three-weeks' stand at the suburban Finsbury Park Astoria over the Christmas and New Year holidays, to turnaway biz at every performance.

Crowds besieged the theatre before every show and extra police were on duty. The scenes outside the house gave only the vaguest clue of what was to happen inside.

Not in living memory had there been such an uninhibited display of mass hysteria. The squealing and yelling, from an audience largely composed of girl teenagers, started as the safety curtain rose before the start of the performance. The noise appeared to reach its peak when a spotlight was thrown onto a cutout of the quartet, but subsequent events proved that was only the overture.

The four youngsters—they are all in their early 20s—closed the two hour show with a 25-minute appearance, and it is fair to say that it was impossible to hear either a single note from the three guitars and drums or follow a single word of any of the lyrics.

Not even the most modern sound amplification gave them a chance to top the hysterical, passionate and emotional screams that came from the 3,000-strong audience. Only the introductions could be partially heard.

For the record it should be stated that among the numbers that aroused such frenzy were "All My Loving," "I Want to be Your Man," "She Loves You," 'I Want To Hold Your Hand," "Money" and "Twist and Shout."

Rest of the show also comes from the Brian Epstein Liverpool stable, with the exception of comedian Rolf Harris, who hails from Australia. For the most part, the other acts provide a noisy prelude, with the emphasis mainly on swinging beat numbers. When Billy J. Kramer tried his hand with a restrained ballad there was obvious resistance from a small section of the audience.

Kramer, who appears with the Dakotas (also three guitars and drums), is frequently drowned by the accompanying combo, but his rhythmic songs are rapturously received. His best numbers are "Bad To Me" and "That Girl Ain't Anywhere."

The Fourmost provide their own backing—also three guitars and drums—and have the familiar lineup of beat numbers such as "I Am In Love," "Almost Gone" and "Baby Sitter."

Tommy Quickly, who is backed by the Barron Knights, has a pleasant voice and a standout number in "Walking in the Winter Land." Cilla Black, a striking redhead, has two lively items in "Frankie and Johnnie" and "Love of the Loved"; while Duke D'Mond, who appears with the Barron Knights, has a few good songs, including a newcomer, "I'm Coming Home Baby."

The one change of pace comes from Rolf Harris, who has a solid, offbeat item in "Tie Me Kangaroo Down, Sport."

The Beatles, who will be making their U.S. debut on the Ed Sullivan show in February, are the wonder boys of the British show biz scene. They have collected a host of silver disks, had all the top spots on the best seller charts and their latest single topped 1,000,000 sales before it went on the market.

A year ago they were hardly known, but in the last few months they have smashed one record after another. Today, they are riding high as no group has ever ridden before. How long their star will shine as brightly is a question impossible to answer. Myro.

Ice Show Review

Ice Follies of 1964

Eddie & Roy Shipstad and Oscar Johnson production. Stars Donald Jackson, Richard Dwyer, Istvan Szenes, Ina Bauer, Jill Shipstad, Mr. Frick, The Beattys (2), The Schillings (2), Wall & Dova, Dorothyann Nelson, Scarecrows (3), Clark & Carroll, Judi & Vicki Denton, Lee Carroll, Kermond Bros. (2), Jean Wrigley; features Ice Folliettes (32); choreography, Fran Claudet; dance direction, Stanley Kahn; costumes, Mary Wills; music director, George Hackett; original music, Larry Morey; lighting director, Michael McGiveney; emcee, Paul Gannon. At Madison Sq. Garden, N.Y., opening Jan. 7, '64; $6.50 top.

Gliding into the halfway point of its '63-64 tour, the Shipstads & Johnson Ice Follies of 1964 opened a 19-performance stand last Tuesday (7) at Madison Sq. Garden, N. Y., before a crowd of some 11,000 payees. Show's 28th annual edition is replete with colorful pageantry, eyefilling spectacle and scintillating bladework.

Accent, per usual, is on family entertainment and the dean of professional traveling ice shows has a frappe format that can lure not only the youngsters but their elders as well. The two and one-half hour layout mirrors the talents of some of the rink's top stars. Their artistry has been blended into a slick arena presentation by the skillful direction of Fran Claudet and Stanley Kahn.

Long noted for their lavish production numbers, producers Eddie & Roy Shipstad and Oscar Johnson have come up with some fresh dazzlers this year including a lavish sequence tagged "Ballet in Blue." It's a sumptuous showcase for the gifted Ice Folliettes as well as Lee Carroll who delicately pirouettes as Spirit of the Danube.

Similarly, "Tropical Splendour" is an opulent scene in which the Folliettes depict varied birds. Particularly striking is Jill Shipstad who puts lotsa frosty animation into her version of the bird of paradise. "Ice Cream Land" is a gossamer-like concoction of chocolate dolls, bunnies, etc. Micheline Jacques is a wistful Inky-Dinky (a black bear) while Judi & Vicki Denton are a delightful, winsome duo who score as the Peppermint Twins.

Providing sock individual blade displays are world's figure skating champ Donald Jackson, German champ Ina Bauer and Hungarian champ Istvan Szenes. The lean, lithe Jackson contribs some masterful spins. Miss Bauer is the acme of grace in sexily undulating a variety of spins. Szenes likewise comes up with some slick feats to prove himself a superb craftsman.

Richard Dwyer and Dorothyann Nelson are cast in a nostalgic oldtime vaude "hoofing" rountine which they put over with precision and perfect timing. Betty Jean Clark and Frank Carroll are spotlighted in a bit tagged "Precise Patterns" and their synchonized skating is all of that.

Sandwiched between the half-dozen odd production numbers is ample comedy relief. Doug Sears & Dick Cooper are the fore and aft sections of the sad-faced Hillbilly Hound and they delight the moppets in the aud with their antics. The Beattys (Molly and Colin) have a novel comedy routine that has a pathetic, Chaplinesque quality.

The Kermond Bros., two Australian lads, supply a hilarious bit as a couple of drunks. Their acro routines are especially eyecatching. The perennial Mr. Frick, now in his 25th year with the show, wins laffs with a slapstick African "safari." The Scarecrows (3) pour on even more slapstick to rack up heavy guffaws.

"Parisian Potpourri" has the shapely Folliettes in precision formations that are almost too difficult for the eye to follow. Number's Gallic motif also weaves in the comedy duo of Wall & Dova who dish up lotsa levity. Another colorful spec is "Candlelight in Acapulco," billed as a swing dance in which couples glide to the strains of such Latino tunes as "Cielito Lindo."

Jean Wrigley gives "Highland Swing" an extra lift as a trim lassie in this tartan 'n' plaid se-quence while Dorothyann Nelson is an effortless "Belle of Edinburgh" as she spins and glides on one foot. The Schillings, Willi and Inge, are a talented import from Germany who win a solid reception.

Costumes, designed by Mary Wills, are an integral part of the overall production but their opulence and striking originality stand out particularly in the "Fashions-Inspired by Great Music" number. Six Folliettes, in appropriate garb, depict such operatic femmes as Carmen and Tosca.

Fran Claudet's slick choreography and Stanley Kahn's dance direction are evident throughout this elegant frappe frolic. Perhaps the most notable number of the show is New Year's Eve," which spotlights the 32 Ice Folliettes in in a breathtaking display of precision skating. It's a fitting next-to-finale sequence.

George Hackett's music direction is deft while Larry Morey's score adds to the production lustre of such numbers as "Ice Cream Land" and "Highland Swing." Among other assets are the imaginative lighting of Michael McGiveney and Paul Gannon's unobtrusive emceeing. Gilb.

Unit Review

Zizi Jeanmaire Show
(PALAIS DE CHAILLOT, PARIS)

Paris, Jan. 6.

This is the second year that Roland Petit has been commissioned to do a show for the state-subsidized Theatre National Populaire. Last year he tried classical ballet mixed with ambitious modern aspects. It did not work with a pickup company. Now he's wisely built a song and dance show around Zizi Jeanmaire that comes off very well.

Production has a series of short inventive ballets, with Miss Jeanmaire in many. Second half is devoted to her songalog that still gets terp backing. Layout has pace, style, grace and adds up to a darn good show.

It is hard to pin down the genre. Offering is somewhat like a revue of cabaret proportions, but with much more accent on terping, like a music hall revue or one-woman singing show with dance and production aids on a massive scale. Petit, who choreographed, staged and produced, has provided dynamic, lithe terping with a definite classical background apparent.

Some 24 girls and boys do a boisterous number followed by a contortion act of a girl in a box unfolded by a male dancer. Then Miss Jeanmaire does her first zesty song and terp bit. Her next routine is a Hispano number with the star playing a young shoeshine boy dreaming of bullfighting.

First part winds with a witty series of short ballets with dancers interpreting aspects of a big banquet. They are lobsters swimming, or pheasants, ending with Miss Jeanmaire as the dessert. She does her songs garbed in a black sweater with her sparkling gams, encased in black, twinkling as fine props for her warbling.

Hers is a reedy, puckish voice that allows her to get suggestive without leering and sentimental without being mawkish. Her voice has more polish and control than heretofore. She is now an accomplished singer-dancer who can easily go from the classics to musical comedy timbre in proper stride.

Costumes by Yves St. Laurent are a delight with stunning colors, flair and sweep. Michel Mention emerges a new composer with a fine jazz and modern bent who also conducts his own musical arrangements well. Corps de Ballet is good with Felix Blaszka standout as the lead male terper.

Show looks expensive and government handout does not cover its cost for the six-week stay at the TNP. But it is a tryout spot for this finely balanced show which will later go on a European tour. It has the poise, content and showmanship for a Broadway run as is. At a $2 top it is one of the better show bargains in town. Mosk.

OBITUARIES

RALPH DUMKE

Ralph Dumke, 64, former vaude entertainer and radio pioneer in Chicago and New York before going to Hollywood as a screen actor, died Jan. 4 in Sherman Oaks, Cal. He career encompassed virtually every phase of show biz, which he entered as a vaudevillian after leaving Notre Dame to become a song-and-dance man.

Dumke appeared in such films as "All the King's Men" and "Solid Gold Cadillac." On the stage he had roles in the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera productions of "The Chocolate Soldier," "Merry Widow" and "Rosalinda." Later he appeared in numerous telefilms.

During the late 1920s and early '30s, he and Ed East had a radio show tabbed "Sisters of the Skillet." In 1946 he played role of Cap'n Andy in the Broadway revival of "Show Boat."

Surviving are his wife and two sons.

JOHN L. COURCIER

John L. Courcier, 63, general manager of Eastman Kodak's West Coast Division, Motion Picture Sales Dept., died of a heart attack in Hollywood Jan. 6, less than a week after his appointment. He had been in the industry since 1917, when he started as a lab technician with Famous Players-Lasky.

After jobs with Fox Films, Goldwyn Studios and Rothacker-Aller Labs as technician and cameraman, Courcier went to France and North Africa in 1924 to supervise film processing for First National's Edwin Carewe. Later he joined Rex Ingram in Nice, where he built, equipped and operated a motion picture lab.

Returning to the U.S., he joined the J. E. Brulatour Co. in 1928 as salesman and technician, being upped to veepee in early 1940s. He remained with W. J. German when that company took over and in 1961 became general manager of company in Hollywood, where he remained until swingover to Eastman.

His wife, son, daughter and mother survive.

BUSTER BURNELL

Buster Burnell, 41, dancer and choreographer, died of a heart attack Jan. 2 in New York. He was putting a line together at a rehearsal studio when he collapsed. He died later in the day.

Burnell originally was part of a dance team billed as Billie & Buster Burnell and later went in for choreography. He staged the lines at the Town & Country Club, Brooklyn, once had a line at the Flamingo, Las Vegas, and staged special shows for the Concord Hotel, Kiamesha Lake, N.Y. He also staged and choreographed various acts.

Survived by wife and son.

THELMA RYAN

Thelma Ryan, 60, head fitter in Metro studio costume dept. and member of dept. for 28 years, was killed in Argentine plane crash Jan. 9 which took the lives of 28 persons, including four Americans. Her stepdaughter-in-law, Mrs. Goldier Ryan, died with her.

Mrs. Ryan was returning to Hollywood from a vacation spent with her stepson, Jack Ryan, in Rosario, Argentina, when crash occurred outside the city of Zarate, 50 miles west of Buenos Aires. She had left Hollywood two weeks previously, and was to have reported back to studio Monday (13).

Starting as a finisher in Metro costume dept., Mrs. Ryan was in charge of executing all costume sketches and had worked with all Metro femme players while at studio.

Stepson survives.

FRED L. SPEAR

Fred L. Spear, 82, longtime theatre manager and publicist, died Jan. 9 in Kansas City. His career reached from legit to vaude and burlesque.

He was semi-retired at the time of his death, but from 1923 until the house went to motion pictures in post World War II days he was pressagent for the Orpheum Theatre, since removed from the downtown K.C. scene to make room for a parking lot. He was associated either as manager or pressagent with more than a dozen of Kansas City's theatres at one time or another.

In more recent years he had been an independent publicist, among other accounts representing Ararat Shrine Temple, of which he was a member. He was a member of the billposters union for years. His wife died in 1954. Tney had no children. He was born in Leavenworth, Kans.

Survived by a sister, nephew and a sister-in-law.

KALANAG

Dr. Helmut Schrieber, 60, known professionally as Kalanag, and West Germany's most celebrated magician, died of a stroke Dec. 25 in Gaildorf, West Germany. A doctor of philosophy who turned to the stage first as an actor and then as a playwright, introduced his magic act in 1947.

He subsequently appeared in 180 films and travelled throughout the world with his magic show. He specialized in the Indian rope trick, and made an elephant disappear from the stage.

His wife survives.

ARTHUR BERNSTEIN

Arthur Bernstein, 54, bassist with Benny Goodman's original sextet and one of the topflight white jazzmen of the swing era, died of cancer Jan. 2 in Los Angeles. He recently had worked as a staff man on the Warner Bros. lot.

Bernstein played with Ben Pollack, Red Nichols, and other bands before joining the Goodman organization in the mid-1930s. He was also a member of the bar.

Surviving are his wife, two children and a brother, Martin Bernstein, professor of music at New York U.

LAURA SMITHSON

Laura Smithson, 85, actress, died Dec. 20 in Barnet, Eng. She first appeared as a walkon in "Midsummer Night's Dream" for the Frank Benson Company and made her London debut in 1918 at the Old Vic.

Miss Smithson subsequently appeared in many West End successes, notably "Outward Bound," "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "Tovarich" and as the Yorkshire Cook in Noel Coward's "Cavalcade." Failing health ended her career.

MAURICE MILLER

Maurice Miller, 67, retired president of I. Miller & Sons, Inc., shoe manufacturer and retailer, died Dec. 13 in New York. He was one of six sons of Israel Miller, who founded the firm in 1893. The Miller company started as a manufacturer of theatrical footwear. The shoe was lighter and more attractive than the high boots customarily worn at the time and the "show" shoe caught on.

His wife, daughter, son, and two sisters survive.

BERNARD HERZBRUN

Bernard Herzbrun, 72, art director who entered the film industry at Paramount's Long Island studio in 1926, died of a heart attack Jan. 7 in Hollywood. He subsequently was sent to the Coast as an art director first with Paramount and later at 20th-Fox. For many years he was supervising art director at Universal. He also helped design the industry's Motion Picture Country Home.

Surviving are his wife, son and a brother.

NORMAN ARNOLD

Norman Arnold, 69, art director, died recently in London. He was a pioneer in designing sets for British films, starting in 1920 with Famous Players Lasky at Islington. He worked extensively with producer Herbert Wilcox.

Arnold, who participated in the opening of the British National Studios (now Associated British Pictures) in 1927, became British National's first supervising art director. He was responsible for over 200 films during his career.

RIKA HOPPER

Rika Hopper, 86, Dutch actress who retired in 1935 following a tour in Marcel Maurette's play, "Anastasia," died recently in Amsterdam. After making her professional debut in 1894, she appeared with the companies of Herman Heijermans, Roayaards and Eduard Verkade.

Miss Hopper trouped in modern repertory as well as in Shakespearean works. From 1927 until 1938 she operated a theatre in Amsterdam which bore her name.

There are no survivors.

ROWLAND PACK

Rowland Pack, 36, first cellist of both the Toronto Symphony and the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. symphony orchestra, died Jan. 3 in that city.

He joined the Toronto Symphony at 21 after being graduated in cello from the Royal Conservatory of Music, U. of Toronto. He later formed the Rowland Pack Chamber Singers and subsequently worked in a group that specialized in antique instruments.

Survived by wife, son and three daughters.

WILLIAM SPRAY

William Spray, 87, retired actor, died Dec. 18 in London. He began his career as understudy to Edmund Payne at London's Old Gaiety. Then he played comedy roles with Gertie Millar and Jose Collins at Daly's.

Spray toured in most of the w.k. musicomedies, such as "Maid of the Mountains" and "Southern Maid," always in comedy roles. His career ended some years ago when he began to lose his eyesight.

GABRIEL TOYNE

Gabriel Toyne, 58, actor-producer, died Dec. 29 in Ibiza, Spain, where he was working on tv scripts.

He made his stage debut in 1927 with Charles Macdona's Players.

Toyne toured the U.S., Canada and Australia, and later acted in and directed many West End successes. He also was considered an expert in staging stage duels.

Survived by his wife, actress Diana Beaumont, now appearing in "Sound of Music."

WILLIAM H. TAUNTON

William H. Taunton, 83, musician and arranger for Victor Herbert, Florence Ziegfeld and Gertrude Hoffman, died Jan. 5 in Marblehead, Mass. He played with the Philadelphia Orch under Arturo

(Continued on page 71)

COLIN McPHEE

The staff, officers and directors of Broadcast Music, Inc. note with deep sorrow the passing, on Tuesday, January 7, 1964, of Colin McPhee, distinguished composer, musicologist and scholar.

1901 - 1964

In Loving Memory

Allen Sparrow

Jimie — Wife
Allyn — Daughter

IN LOVING MEMORY

DOROTHY and DAVID GOODMAN POWELL

Mother Died Jan. 16th, 1956
Father Died Jan. 19th, 1923

Loving ones from us have gone
Voices we loved are stilled;
Places are vacant in our hearts
Which never can be filled.

JACK POWELL and FAMILY

CURRENT BILLS

WEEK OF JANUARY 15

NEW YORK CITY

MUSIC HALL — Rockettes, Corps de Ballet, Raymond Paige Symphony Orc., "The Nativity."

AUSTRALIA

MELBOURNE (Tivoli Theatre)—"The Wizard of Oz" featuring: Bob Hornery, Kevin Miles, Joan Harris, Jon Dennis, Patti McGrath, Reg Dell, Frank Lloyd, Peter Dease, Nola Finn, Don McManus.

SYDNEY (Tivoli)—Penny Nicholls, Bob Andrews, The D'Angolys, The 2 Pirates, The Balcombes, Eddie Mendoza, Eric Whitley, Jeff Hudson, Harry Currie, Keith Leggett, Jackie Griffiths, Maureen Wilson, Wendy Faulkener.

BRITAIN

BRIGHTON HIPPODROME — Charlie Cairoli, Freddie Frinton, Billy Dainty, Nico Ferry, Henry Lytton, Astra Blair, The Derek Taverner Singers, Full Corps de Ballet.

NEW THEATRE, CARDIFF—Nat Jackley, Ken Roberts, Susan Lane, Dailey & Wayne, Diana Day, Barry Kent, Roy Jefferies, Michael Kilgarriff, Derek Taverner Singers.

COVENTRY THEATRE—Arthur Askey, Mike & Bernie Winters, Mark Wynter, Anton Dolin, Manetti Twins, Patricia Kilgarriff, Terry Callahan, Frank Lawless, John Pearn, Derek Taverner Singers.

THE ALHAMBRA, BRADFORD—Reg Varney, Freddie Sales, Joe Church, Terry Fearis, Sandra Michaels, Ernest Bale, Bronwen Williams, Morlidor Trio, Derek Taverner Singers, Laidler Sunbeams.

BIRMINGHAM HIPPODROME — The Three Monarchs, George Moon, Pamela Charles, Ken Jonnart, Stanley Platts, Dorothy Dampier, Herbert Hare, Caroline Haig, Mougli, Bryn Bartlett, Les Henry, Eric Yorke, The Betty Fox Babes, Bill Shepherd Singers, The Hippodrome Dancers.

LIVERPOOL EMPIRE — Norman Wisdom, Morton Fraser's Harmonica Gang, Eddie Leslie, Billy Whittaker, Patricia Stark, Patricia Lambert, Terry Kendall, Harold Holness, Mary Redfern, Jack Escott, Dennis Castle, Daphne Lungaro, Johnny Winter, The Leon Bartell Dancers, The Derek Taverner Singers, The Empire Boys.

MORECAMBE WINTER GARDENS — "Dick Whittington & His Cat"

NOTTINGHAM THEATRE ROYAL — Pat Lancaster, Sonny Jenks, Tudor Evans, Janette Miller, Cox Twins, Munks Twins, Humphrey Kent, Nicholas Brent, Lynda Reynolds, Pat Lonsdale, George Barnes, Arch Taylor, The Royal Dancers, Bill Shepherd Singers, The Royal Babes.

VICTORIA PALACE — The George Mitchell Minstrels, John Boulter, Tony Mercer and Dai Francis, Leslie Crowther, Margo Henderson, George Chisholm & The Jazzers, Schaller Brothers, The T. V. Toppers, Pat Ellis.

LONDON PALLADIUM — Barbara Evans, The Baker Twins, Anna Dawson, Eric Flynn, Vicki Mitchell, Elizabeth Beim, David Davenport, Andrew Laurence, Michael Hawkins, Geoffrey Wincott, Reed de Rouen, Sidney Vivian, Tom Gill, Jack Francois, The Bill Shepherd Singers, James Ottaway, Joss Clewes, Barry Shawzin.

BRISTOL HIPPODROME—Eddie Molloy, Erica Yorke, Elizabeth Alys, Betty Emery, Nicholas Smith, James Hinson, The Bristol Babes, The Hippodrome Dancers, The Derek Taverner Singers.

Cabaret Bills

NEW YORK CITY

AFRICAN ROOM — Tad Truesdale, Ritchie Haven 3, Johnny Barracuda

BARBERRY ROOM—Conrad Monjoy.

BASIN ST. EAST — Duke Ellington, Ahmad Jamal.

BITTER END—Jake Holmes, Fred Smoot, Serendipity Singers.

BON SOIR—Anders & Hadley, Three Flames.

BLUE ANGEL—Vaughn Meader.

CHARDAS—Bela Babal Orc., Elemar Horvath, Tibor Rakossy, Dick Marta, Janos Hozzsu.

CHATEAU MADRID—Los Chavales de Espana, Emilio Reyes Orc., Carbia Orc.

COPACABANA—Kay Stevens, Eddie Schaeffer, Cally Dodd, Rene Martell, Joseph Mele Orc., Frank Marti Orc.

CRYSTAL ROOM—Larry Storch, Jay Lawrence.

FABERS—Jonah Jones.

GRINZING — Kalman Banyak, Henry Butz.

HAWAIIAN ROOM — Dee Marquez, Keolu Beamer, Auletta Orc.

HOTEL AMERICANA—Pearl Bailey, Lester Lanin Orc., Al Conte Trio.

HOTEL NEW YORKER—Alfredo Munar, Milt Saunders Orc.

HOTEL PARK SHERATON — Irving Fields 3.

HOTEL PLAZA—Juliet Prowse, Emil Coleman Orc., Mark Monte Orc. Plaza-9 Room: Julius Monk, Carol Morley, Gerry Matthews, Rex Robbins, Lovelady Powell, Susan Browning, Gordon Connell, William Roy, Robert Colston.

HOTEL ST. REGIS—Peter Duchin Orc, Nancy Manning, Quintero Orc, Walter Kay, Jani Sarkozi.

HOTEL SAVOY-HILTON—Arturo Arturos Orc.

HOTEL WALDORF ASTORIA — Oscar Brown Jr., Nancy Wilson.

INTERNATIONAL — George White's Scandals, Mike Durso Orc.

LATIN QUARTER—Novelites, Bobby Breen, Szony & Kossi, Robertes, Marion Conrad, Jeanne Michelle, Jo Lombardo Orc., Sammy Bidner Orc.

LIBORIO—Olga Guillot, Candido, Elena Del Cueto, Gloria Ochoa & Nestor, Herman Le Batard Orc., Pancho Cardenas Orc.

LIVING ROOM—Jack Jones, Emily Yancey, David Fisher, Bob Ferro Orc.

NO. 1 FIFTH AVENUE—Hankinson & De Maio.

RAT FINK ROOM—Jackie Kannon, Ken Colman, Marge Dodson, Norm Geller 3.

RED GARTER—G-String Strugglers.

RED ONION—Banjokers.

SAHBRA—"Hora Hootenany" Menasha Bahorav Orc., Gavri Ders., Margolit Ankory, Potsheva Baron & Ezra Zahavi, Leo Fuld.

SQUARE EAST—"When The Owl Screams," Bob Dishy, Severn Darden, Dick Schall, Dana Elcar, Barbara Harris.

THE MOST—Joe Mooney, Carol Sloane, Matt & Ginny Dennis.

TOWN & COUNTRY—Jan Murray, Ned Harvey's Orc., Rod Rodriguez Orc.

UPSTAIRS & DOWNSTAIRS—"Twice Over Nightly," Jane Alexander, MacIntyre Dixon, Paul D'Ivy, Richard Libertini, Mary Louise Wilson

VIENNESE LANTERN—Yaffa Yarkoni, Ernest Schoen Orc.

VILLAGE BARN — Charlie Slavin, Jeanne Napoleon, Barn Stompers, Lou Harold Orc.

VILLAGE GATE—Judy Henske, Lambert, Hendricks & Bavan Sabicas.

VILLAGE VANGUARD—Herbie Mann Orc.

CHICAGO

BLUE ANGEL—"Calypso Limbo," Susie Ellis, Pascual Olivera, Byl Couser, Lady Limbo, Emperor Kelo, Lord Carlton, Lord Smiley, Al D'Lacey Orc.

CONRAD HILTON — "Ladies First" George Carl & Arlene, Gus Augspurg & His Jungle Wonders, Manuel Del Toro, Marel Langenbein, Ernie McLean & Caroline Paul, Boulevar-Dears (5) & Boulevar-Dons (5), Jimmy Palmer Orc.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL—Eileen Barton, Franz Benteler Orc.

DEL PRADO HOTEL—"Hits of Broadway" revue.

DRAKE HOTEL—Pat Suzuki, Jimmy Blade Orc.

EDGEWATER BEACH — Juan Carlos Copes Revue, Don Davis Orc.

GATE OF HORN—Ron Eliran, Billy Mitchell Quintet & Al Grey, Mort & Lynda.

LONDON HOUSE—Cy Coleman Trio, Larry Novak Trio, Jose Bethan-ourt Trio.

MISTER KELLY'S — Ray Hastings, Elaine McKenna, Marty Rubenstein Trio, John Frigo Trio.

PALMER HOUSE—Xavier Cugat & Abbe Lane, Ben Arden Orc.

PLAYBOY — Erin O'Brien, Angela Drake, Dick Porter, Howard Beder, Tom Melody, Stu Allen.

SECOND CITY—"New York City Is Missing," John Brent, Jack Burns, Ann Elder, Sally Hart, Gene Kadish, Omar Shapli, David Steinberg, Bill Mathieu.

SHERATON BLACKSTONE — Caroline Richter, Frank York Orc.

LOS ANGELES

COCONUT GROVE—Johnny Mathis.

CRESCENDO—Judy Henske, Mike Clifford, Lou Alexander.

DINO'S—Jack Elton, Karen Dolin, Steve LaFever.

ICE HOUSE—Don Paulin, Rene Herodia, The Villagers.

INTERLUDE—Pat Collins

JERRY LEWIS—Lionel Ames.

MELODY ROOM—Rita Moss.

SLATE BROS. — Don Rickles, Eileen Burton.

STATLER HOTEL—George Liberace

TOWN HOUSE—Red Nichols & Five Pennies

TROUBADOR — Brock Peters, Chico Hamilton.

YE LITTLE CLUB—Lou Alexander, Jan Ames.

MIAMI-MIAMI BEACH

AMERICANA—"Ecstacy on Ice."

CARILLON—"Ooh La La," Barry Sis., Lynda Gloria, Arnaut Bros., Steve Danik, Les Stevens, Line (12), Jacques Donnet Orc., Bill Jordan & Lee Coby, Sammy Morris, McCormick's 3.

CASABLANCA—Buck Buckley, Mario & Flora, Bob Regent Orc.

CASTAWAYS—Ring-A-Ding Six, Peridots, Preacher Rollo Orc., M. B. Symphony Orc.

DEAUVILLE—Julie London, Jack Carter, Ingan & Rolf, Les Rhode Orc.

DIPLOMAT—Anita Ray & Diane Hall, Chico Orc.

DORAL BEACH—Ruth Wallis, Allegro 4, Stan Hayman & Johnny Music, Mal Malkin Orc., Chester Nennett Dancers.

EDEN ROC—Lenny Kent, Morry King, Sonny Kendis Orc., Monroe Kasse Orc., Herb George Marguerite Baxter.

FONTAINEBLEAU—"Vive Les Girls."

MURRAY FRANKLIN'S — Murray Franklin, Paula Page, Guy Rennic, Pepe Miller, Eddie Bernard, Dick Havilland.

RONEY PLAZA—Barbara Velasco (3), LaRosa Phillips, Vincent Scott.

THUNDERBIRD—Richie Bros., Berj Vaughn 4, Jimmy Holmes, Phyllis Branch.

LAS VEGAS

BOURBON STREET—Lyn Keath.

CASTAWAYS—Woody Herman Orc., Don Sherman, Rene Roberts, Lounge: Don Randi Trio.

DESERT INN—Eddie Fisher. Lounge: Buddy Lester, Ben Blue, Mafalda Trio.

DUNES—Frederic Apcar's "Casino de Paris." Lounge: Rusty Warren, "Vive Les Girls!" Sultan's Table: Arturo Romero Strings (11), Jacques Foti.

FLAMINGO—Carol Lawrence, Jackie Mason, Russ Black Orc. Lounge: Harry James, Billy Eckstine, Nita Cruz, Bob Sims.

FREMONT—Joe King Zaniacs, 4 Fables E[illegible] Bill Britton.

GOLDEN NUGGET—Judy Lynn, Cut Ups, Herb Remington, Tommy Strange.

HACIENDA—"Les Poupees de Paris," Grover Shore Trio, Johnny Olenn, Four Tunes, Kay Houston.

MINT—"Hong Kong Scandals."

NEVADA—"Harem Nights," Royal Tahitians, Singers Three.

RIVIERA—Tony Martin, Cyd Charisse, Half Bros., Jack Cathcart Orc. Lounge: Shecky Greene, Bobby Sherwood, Phyllis Dorne.

SAHARA — Buddy Hackett, Buddy Greco, Louis Basil Orc. Lounge: Louis Prima, Gia Malone, Sam Butera, Witnesses, Characters, George Rock.

SANDS—Joey Bishop, L.A. Dodgers, Antonio Morelli. Lounge: Sonny King, Vido Musso, Yacoubian Co., Dave Burton, Ernie Stewart.

SHOWBOAT—Rusty Isabel, Johnny Paul.

SILVER SLIPPER—Bo Belinsky, Taffy O'Neill, Donna Theodore, Sparky Kaye, Danny Jacobs, Eddie Innes, Viennas, Slipperettes, Geo Redman Orc. Lounge: Fantastics, Beverly Marshal, Skeets Minton, Johnny La Monte.

STARDUST — 'Lido de Paris.' Eddie O'Neal Orc. Lounge: Novelites, Bernard Bros., Nalani Kele, Esquivel, Andrini Bros.

THUNDERBIRD—Dick Shawn, Patricia Marand, Eileen Rogers, Pat Finley, Victor Rogers, Benny Baker in "Anything Goes" and "High Button Shoes," Nat Brandwynne Orc. Lounge: Billy Daniels, Dukes of Dixieland, Buddy Rich, Big Beats, Kitty Kover.

RENO-TAHOE

GOLDEN—Jay Nemeth, Les Girls Revue, John Carlton Orc.

HAROLDS — New Christy Minstrels, Francis Brunn, Steiner Bros., Don Conn Orc.

HARRAH'S (Reno)—Earl Grant, Braman & Leonard, Judy Lynn, Tony Lovello, Red Coty.

HARRAH'S (Tahoe)—Mickey Rooney, Bobby Van, Moro-Landis Dancers, Leighton Noble Orc. Lounge: Harry James, Jack Ross, Hi Lads, Jimmy Wakely, Victorians.

HOLIDAY—Jo Ann Jordan Trio, Suzie & Night Owls, Cousins, Charles Gould.

HAPES—Frankie Fanelli, Diplomats, Jack Melick, Joe Karnes.

NEVADA LODGE (Tahoe)—Esquires.

NEW CHINA CLUB—Skip O'Connell.

RIVERSIDE—Russ Morgan Orc., Maze & O'Conlon, Harry Stevens.

WAGON WHEEL (Tahoe)—Lionel Hampton Orc., Naji Baba's Turkish Revue, Bobby Page, Senators, Nita Cruz, Don Rose.

Shows Out of Town

Funny Girl

Boston, Jan. 13.

Ray Stark (in association with Seven Arts Productions) presentation of two-act (31 scenes) musical comedy, with book by Isobel Lennart based on her own original story, with music by Jule Styne, lyrics by Bob Merrill. Staged by Garson Kanin; choreography, Carol Haney; musical director, Milton Rosenstock; orchestrations, Ralph Burns; vocal arranger, Buster Davis; dance orchestrations, Luther Henderson; decor and lighting, Robert Randolph; costumes, Irene Sharaff; associate producer, Al Goldin; associate director, Lawrence Kasha; production supervisor, David Pardoll. Stars Barbra Streisand. Sydney Chaplin; features Danny Meehan, Kay Medford, Jean Stapleton, Roger De Koven, Joseph Macaulay, Buzz Miller, George Reeder, Royce Wallace. Opened Jan. 13, '64, at the Shubert Theatre, Boston; $6.50 top weeknights, $7.50 Friday-Saturday nights.

Fanny Brice	Barbra Streisand
Florenz Ziegfeld Jr.	Roger De Koven
Emma	Royce Wallace
Mrs. Brice	Kay Medford
Mrs. Strakosh	Jean Stapleton
Mrs. Meeker	Lydia S. Fredericks
Mrs. O'Malley	Joyce O'Neil
Eddie Ryan	Danny Meehan
Tom Keeney	Joseph Macaulay
Herkie	Victor R. Helou
Billbooster	Robert Henson
Snub Taylor	Buzz Miller
Trombone Smitty	George Reeder
Five Finger Finney	Alan E. Weeks
Polly	Joan Lowe
Bubbles	Shellie Farrell
Maude	Ellen Halpin
Nick Arnstein	Sydney Chaplin
Bellhop	Buzz Miller
Director	Marc Jordan
Mrs. Nadler	Rose Randolf
Vera	Lainie Kazan
Jenny	Diane Coupe
Kathy	Joan Cory
Lilly	Prudence Adams
Ellen	Diana Lee Nielsen
Maggie	Rosemarie Yellen
Mimsie	Sharon Vaughn
Cigar Clerk	John Nola
Tom Blackton	Rufus Smith
Patsy	George Reeder
Croupier	Joseph Macaulay
Mrs. Vance	Jeanne McLaren
Joseph Renaldi	Marc Jordan
Mr. O'Malley	Robert Howard

Singers: Lydia S. Fredericks, Mary Louise, Jeanne McLaren, Joyce O'Neil, Rose Randolf, Stephanie Reynolds, Victor R. Helou, Robert Henson, Robert Howard, Marc Jordan, John Langston, Albert Zimmerman.

Dancers: Edie Cowan, Shellie Farrell, Ellen Halpin, Rosemary Jolincic, Karen Kristen, Joan Lowe, Jose Ahumada, Bud Fleming, Larry Fuller, John Nola, Alan Peterson, Alan E. Weeks.

Musical numbers: "If a Girl Isn't Pretty," "Cornet Man," "A Temporary Arrangement," "Who Taught Her Everything?" "His Love Makes Me Beautiful," "A Helluva Group," "People," "You Are Woman," "Don't Rain on My Parade," "It's Home," "Who Are You Now?" "Rat-Tat-Tat-Tat," "Took Me a Little Time," "Sleep Now, Baby Bunting," "The Music That Makes Me Dance."

Boston, Jan. 14.

"Funny Girl" is a gem of a show which took off at the Shubert and shows considerable boxoffice strength. Barbra Streisand provides brilliance in every scene—singing, dancing, clowning, mugging. She has a wonderful voice and the right phiz to carry the Fanny Brice role in high musical comedy style.

Show, however, needs polishing and work in its second act. But there's little doubt that "Girl" will rock joyously on Broadway. Jule Styne is perky and tuneful, with some songs like the numbers Miss Brice sang, but not one of her trademarks is included.

It's a literate musical story, practically a film treatment, which deals with Miss Brice's early show biz days and her romance with Nicky Arnstein. Involved are her singing in saloons, music halls and the "Ziegfeld Follies" as well as her romance ups and downs with Arnstein and their breakup.

Musical needs more punch in second act where it tends toward melodrama. But as is, it's a tour de force for Miss Streisand who cuts up in yesteryear costumes with sock showstopping numbers: "Music That Makes Me Dance," "Don't Rain On My Parade," "People" and "You Are Woman."

The Styne score is well integrated in the story. "Don't Rain" and other tunes are part of key scenes. Some will say the show cries for a real Brice number. As this is a shakedwon cruise it could happen, but the question is would the present generation identify with her hits.

Picture potential looms lofty, with action charted by a Greek chorus led by Kay Medford, playing Miss Brice's mother. Group sets stage and introes scenes of backstage clubs, "Follies," music halls and out of town openings. There's a wide panorama for cameras.

Story line is now a natural for films for it's designed for closeups and intimate scenes. However, it may need changes for the stage, especially the second act. With some 30 minutes already cut from show following a Saturday (12) benefit, "Girl" can gain by some more editing.

Sidney Chaplin acquits self well as a charming Arnstein, playing the role with poignancy, considerable appeal and nice flair. Garson Kanin's smooth and confident direction is matched by persuasive performances.

Roger Dekoven is slick as Florenz Ziegfeld; Danny Meehan shows a neat comedy sense for introing amusing dialog. The "Greek" foursome, captained by scene stealer Miss Medford, and including Jean Stapleton, Lydia S. Fredericks, Joyce O'Neil, provides fine cameos.

"Follies" showgirls and pony ballet are eyefulls. Carol Haney's choreography is a beguiling authoritive brand of dance flippancy. Sliding sets and lighting by Robert Randolph are ingenious with backstage views.

The show biz behind scenes idiom qualifies fully as early footlight Americana to supply frame for story. Costumes by Irene Sharaff are bright.

Opening scene and first act are amusing and interesting, and show hums through the first act curtain. But then the musical lapses into some slow, redundant talk in second half getting schmaltzy in scenes betwixt Miss Brice and Arnstein. However, this fault can be fixed. All that's necessary is to match the excitement of the first act. Guy.

Foxy

Cleveland, Jan. 7.

David Merrick presentation of musical comedy in two acts (14 scenes, 20 numbers), with book by Ian McLellan Hunter and Ring Lardner Jr., lyrics by Johnny Mercer and music by Robert Emmett, based on the Ben Jonson play, "Volpone." Staged by Robert Lewis; choreography and musical staging, Jack Cole; scenery and lighting, Robert Randolph; costumes, Robert Fletcher; musical direction and choral arrangements, Donald Pippin; orchestrations, Edward Sauter and Hal Schaefer; dance music arrangements, Hal Schaefer. Stars Bert Lahr, Larry Blyden, Julienne Marie; features Cathryn Damon, Robert T. Harris, Anthony Kemble Cooper, John Davidson, Gerald Hiken. Opened Jan. 6, '64, at the Hanna Theatre, Cleveland; $3.50 weeknights, $6.95 Friday-Saturday nights.

Shortcut	Gerald Hiken
Foxy	Bert Lahr
Buzzard	Ted Greenhalgh
Brandy	Cathryn Damon
Bedrock	Robert T. Harris
Mountie	Bill Becker
Doc	Larry Blyden
Oliver	Will Parkins
Celia	Julienne Marie
Prospectors	Newt Sullivan, Eddie James, Herb Fields
Drunk	Tony Kraber
Stirling	John Hallow
Eskimos	John Waller, John Aristedes
Lord Rottingham	Anthony Kemble Cooper
Clergyman	Lee Howard
Ben	John Davidson
Laurette	Mary Ann Corrigan
Marie	Constance Mens
Bellboy	John Taliaferro

Musical numbers: "Respectability," "Many Ways to Skin a Cat," "Rollin' in Gold," "Celia's Essay," "Money Isn't Everything," "Larceny and Love," "Many Ways to Skin a Cat" (reprise), "Ebenezer," "Talk to Me Baby," "This Is My Night to Howl," "Bon Vivant," Act One Finale, "Shivaree," "It's Easy When You Know How," "Run, Run, Run, Cinderella," "Talk to Me, Baby" (reprise), "I'm Way Ahead of the Game," "Celia's Dilemma," "In Loving Memory," "Way Ahead of the Game" (reprise).

Heading for a Broadway opening in mid-February, David Merrick's production of "Foxy" gives Bert Lahr a funny, gag-packed romp in his return to the musical comedy stage.

First done by the star in tryout during the summer of 1962 in Dawson City, the Yukon, the remodeled show apparently has been strengthened considerably since then. It becomes a rollicking, rowdy, tuneful burlesque on Ben Jonson's classic satire, "Volpone," with a new setting against Klondike gold rush days.

Clevelanders expressed their guffaw-filled approval of this version at the opening, although there are some rough spots to be buffed out.

Lahr again proves in the title role of a gold-mining, revengful old fox that there's no substitute for genius in pantomimic horseplay and inspired timing. It's pleasurable to see this veteran imbue a huge, satiric hoax with wonderful rubber-faced mugging, delicious bits of slapstick clowning and bellowing indignation.

Very loosely, the musical follows outline of "Volpone" as Lahr, helped by a slick con-man, gets even with three prospectors who bear-trapped him out of a gold-strike. By appealing to their cupidity, and pretending to be dying, he wheedles rich gifts from the rogues who hope to inherit his alleged fortune.

Lahr kids the britches off his

(Continued on page 66)

Vienna 'Lady' Reprieved; Advance Sale Going Up

Vienna, Jan. 14.

"My Fair Lady," which was to have folded last Saturday (11), has been reprieved until next Saturday (18) at the Theatre an der Wien. Although receipts were slipping, the advance sale of tickets is now growing.

Meanwhile, Carola Ebeling has taken over the leading role from Karin Huebner. The newcomer appeared in the musical in Berlin and Munich. Miss Huebner and her husband, Franco Duval, joined the Swiss Tournee Theatre (touring legit) to star in "Irma, la Douce."

The total attendance of "Lady" in Vienna should come close to 90,000 for the run.

Show on B'way

The Chinese Prime Minister

Roger L. Stevens presentation of comedy in three acts (four scenes), by Enid Bagnold. Staged by Joseph Anthony; setting, Oliver Smith; costumes, Valentina; lighting, Jean Rosenthal; associate producers, Lyn Austin, Victor Samrock. Stars Margaret Leighton, Alan Webb, John Williams; features Douglas Watson, Peter Donat, James Olson, Diane Kagan, Joanna Pettet. Opened Jan. 2, '64, at the Royale Theatre, N. Y.; $6.90 top weeknights, $7.50 Friday-Saturday nights.

Bent	Alan Webb
Oliver	Peter Donat
She	Margaret Leighton
Roxane	Joanna Pettet
Alice	Diane Kagan
Tarver	Douglas Watson
Red Gus Risko	James Olson
Sir Gregory	John Williams

It's curious how a play can be civilized, witty and even sagacious, and yet not dramatic or satisfying. "The Chinese Prime Minister," which opened Jan. 2 at the Royale Theatre, has fine qualities, but it's a show to be admired rather than enjoyed very much.

Enid Bagnold, the English novelist-playwright who had an interesting near-success on Broadway in 1955-56, called "The Chalk Garden," has written a penatrating and moderately diverting comedy in this new piece about a London actress who retires from the stage on the eve of her 70th birthday in order to take time to get to know herself. It's smoothly staged by Joseph Anthony and deftly played by an engaging cast headed by Margaret Leighton, Alan Webb and John Williams.

But somehow, "The Chinese Prime Minister" does not have enough vitality or immediacy. The Roger L. Stevens production is therefore a dubious bet for Broadway and questionable for pictures, but may have limited appeal for the script-starved stock field.

Plays like this were quality items for stage-minded audiences of a quarter-century or more ago. But suave drawing room conversation among articulate individualists can sound uncomfortably like mere chit-chat today. If that's a reflection on modern manners rather than an older generation's realism or wisdom, no matter. The point is that "The Chinese Prime Minister" seems anachronistic.

Miss Leighton, though visibly no septuagenarian, gives a deceptively effortless performance as the intelligent and assured but sensitive actress who gracefully extricates herself from professional and domestic entanglements so as to have time for reflection. Costars Webb and Williams provide expert portrayals of the two principal men in her life, the former a loyal but crochety butler on the brink of death and the latter as her long-exiled but still imperious husband.

Diane Kagan, a young actress with an expressive face and an attractively direct manner, gives a vibrant performace as a strong-willed daughter-in-law, the sort of egocentric who combines assertiveness, confusion and a conviction of being in the right. Joanna Pettet is decorative as the other daughter-in-law, an inexplicably motivated character and therefore a baffling part.

Douglas Watson and Peter Donat are plausible as slightly thin blooded sons, one trying to be a dominant male and the other a willing doormat for a pretty, nymphomaniac wife. James Olson completes the cast with a believable portrayal of a bearlike prizefighter who isn't sure what he's doing there.

The handsome scenery, costumes and lighting are, respectively, designed by Oliver Smith, Valentina and Jean Rosenthal. It all adds up to a creditable but unexciting show. Hobe.

Legit Followups

Beyond the Fringe 1964

(GOLDEN THEATRE, N. Y.)

After more than 14 months of spoofing contemporary English life, "Beyond the Fringe" offers what's billed as a new edition, which opened last Wednesday night (8) at the John Golden Theatre. It consists of about a half-dozen new skits, a dozen or so holdovers, one cast replacement and the figure 1964 after the title. Also, the revue is now on twofers.

The opening number is now "Home Thoughts from Abroad," and it seems to promise that the show is to shift sights in order to direct some of its hoots of derision at today's Americana. The jibe at life in the U.S. is limited to a few amusing but affectionate observations, however, and thereafter all the darts are aimed at English ways and institutions.

Some of the new numbers seem an improvement, perhaps because the remaining sketches have lost their original cutting edge through long repetition or possibly on account of familiarity. The better additions include a witty bit about a morbid Yorkshireman's preoccupation with funerals, a jape about effeminate performers of a he-man cigaret commercial, a lampoon interview with a Scotland Yard official about the recent "great train robbery," a lethal parody of a Kurt Weill-Bertolt Brecht song and a daffy skit in which one-legged actor applies for the role of Tarzan in a television series.

The old numbers have apparently been expanded and elaborated, and they lack the original brevity and satirical bite. The Shakespeare travesty is a case in point, now missing the wild but concentrated clowning that made it so convulsing when "Fringe" opened in October of 1962. In one instance, the text has been edited to exclude a Jewish reference that some playgoers may have found objectionable.

The newcomer to the show is Paxton Whitehead, a tall, slim young English actor with a hawk-like nose, an expressive Adam's apple and a look of amused bewilderment. He succeeded Jonathan Miller a couple of months ago and now seems thoroughly at home with the remaining originals, Alan Bennett, Peter Cook and Dudley Moore.

In general, this revised "Beyond the Fringe" has lost some of the impact of the original, but it's still an entertaining revue and should do moderately well for a few more months, particularly with the help of two-for-ones. Meanwhile, the touring edition of the show is currently in St. Louis. A replacement company is continuing the original engagement in London. Hobe.

A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum

(FORREST THEATRE, PHILADELPHIA)

Philadelphia, Jan. 6.

Taking a four-week break-in at the Forrest, the touring company of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" looks like a sure-fire duplication of its Broadway success. Philly audiences laugh uproariously as a choice coterie of comics, under George Abbott's smart direction, prove that Joe Miller's real name was Plautus.

Jerry Lester, in the role created by Zero Mostel, uses the double-take and mugging techniques refined—if that's the word for it—during his long sessions on tv and the cabaret circuit. He makes every line count and, in spite of the breadth and bawdiness of the piece, he gives the role of Pseudolus, the conniver, a surprising amount of appeal.

Paul Hartman has the role of Senex, the antiquated romantic, and scores heavily when he sings (with the help of virtually everyone in the cast) "Everybody Ought to Have a Maid."

Arnold Stang as the woebogone chief slave in Hartmen's household, Erik Rhodes as Lycus the procurer, and veteran Edward Everett Horton who wanders seven times around the seven hills of Rome, complete the array of topnotch zanies.

As the returning warrior, clamoring for his bride, Adair McGowen shakes the rafters with his bass-baritone, and the young romantics are played attractively by Bert Stratford and Donna McKechnie.

As the agile Proteans, David Neuman, Scott Hunter and Eric Kelly, spread out their trio to make it look like a big act and Justine Johnson is impressive as Senex's spouting spouse.

Producer Martin Tashe, sponsoring the road version, has filled the famous courtesan corps with a handsome set of girls. Gagh.

The Hollow Crown

(McCarter Theatre, Princeton)

Princeton, N.J., Dec. 30.

"The Hollow Crown," is the opening engagement of its tour, proves to be an interesting historical study but less than stirring theatre. Billed as a "royal revue," the series of dramatic readings "by and about the Kings and Queens of England" has a first-rate cast of members of the Royal Shakespeare Co., of Great Britain.

The format is similar to that of last season's Broadway limited engagement, which took place during the newspaper strike. The cast of four is seated at one side of the stage, and four singers and musicians are on the left.

The strength of the vehicle is the manner in which it presents royalty as genuine human beings, sometimes in their own words. The most entertaining part of the production concerns itself with the love lives of royalty from the 11th century William I to Queen Victoria.

The excellent cast, headed by Ann Firbank and including Michael Gough, John Nettleton and John Warner, has almost as much fun as the audience. But the presentation provides chuckles, sometimes forced, rather than really meaningful theatre.

The production was devised and staged by John Barton. Brian Priestman heads the musicians and arranged and adapted the music with James Walker. Although "The Hollow Crown" is commendable fare, it may be somewhat special for general audiences on the road. Bitt.

London Shows

(Figures denote opening dates)

Angels Fear Tread, St. Martins (6-6-63).
At Drop Hat, Haymarket (10-2-63).
Bed Sitting Room, Comedy (3-20-63).
Beyond Fringe, Fortune (5-10-61).
Boeing-Boeing, Apollo (2-20-63).
Boys Syracuse, Drury Lane (11-8-63).
Cindy-Ella, Arts (12-23-63).
Difference of Opinion, Garrick (11-21-63).
Diplomats, Westminster (12-31-63).
D'Oyly Carte, Savoy (12-16-63).
Funny Thing Happened, Strand (10-3-63).
Gentle Jack, Queen's (11-28-63).
Ginger Man, Royal Court (11-20-63).
Half a Sixpence, Cambridge (3-21-63).
Happy Days, Theatre Royal (12-9-63).
How to Succeed, Shaftesbury (3-28-63).
John Borkman, Duchess (12-4-63).
Man in the Moon, Palladium (12-23-63).
Mary, Mary, Queens (2-27-63).
Masters, Piccadilly (5-9-63).
Minstrels, Vic. Palace (5-25-62).
Mousetrap, Ambassador (11-25-52).
Never Too Late, Prince Wales (9-24-63).
No Strings, Her Majesty's (12-30-63).
Oh, What Lovely, Wyndham's (3-19-63).
Oliver, New (6-30-60).
One for the Pot, Whitehall (8-2-61).
Out of Croccodile, Phoenix (10-29-63).
Pickwick, Saville (7-4-63).
Portrait of Murder, Vaudeville (10-24-63).
Private Lives, Duke York's (7-3-63).
Repertory, Aldwych (12-15-60).
Repertory, National Theatre (10-22-63).
Severed Head, Criterion (6-27-63).
Six Characters, May Fair (6-17-63).
Six of One, Adelphi (9-26-63).
Sound of Music, Palace (3-18-61).
Treasure Island, Mermaid (12-18-63).
Wings of the Dove, Lyric (12-3-63).

SCHEDULED OPENINGS

Poor Bitos, Duke York's (1-6-64).

OFF-BROADWAY SHOWS

(Figures denote opening dates)

Blacks, St. Marks (5-4-61).
Boys Syracuse, Theatre 4 (4-15-63).
Brig, Midway (12-19-63).
Fantasticks, Sullivan St. (5-3-60).
Immoralist, Bouwerie Lane (11-7-63).
In White America, Sher. Sq. (10-31-63).
Mail Train, New Bowery (1-9-64).
Play-Lover, Cherry Lane (1-4-64).
Pinter Plays, Pocket (11-26-62).
Six Characters, Martinique (3-8-63).
Streets of N. Y., Maidman (10-29-63).
Telemachus Clay, Writers (11-15-63).
Theatre of Peretz, Gate (11-5-63).
Trojan Woman, Circle in Sq. (12-23-63).
Trumpets of Lord, Astor Pl. (12-21-63).

CLOSED

Brontes, Phoenix (12-20-63); closed Jan. 5 after 20 performances.
Corruption, Village South (10-8-63); closed Jan. 5 after 103 performances.
Ginger Man, Orpheum (11-21-63); closed Jan. 5 after 52 performances.
Maids, 1 Sher. Sq. (11-14-63); closed Jan. 5 after 62 performances.
Riverwind, Actors Playhouse (12-12-62); closed Jan. 5 after 443 performances.
Pimpernel, Gramercy (1-6-64); closed last Wednesday (8) after three performances.

SCHEDULED OPENINGS

Athenian Touch, Jan Hus (1-14-64).
House of Negro, East End (1-14-64).
Too Much Johnson, Phoenix (1-15-64).
Lovely Light Mayfair (1-20-64).
Cabin in Sky, Mews (1-21-64).
Once in a Lifetime, York (1-27-64).
Riverside Drive, de Lys (1-28-64).
Caretaker, Players (1-30-64).
Jo, Orpheum (2-6-64).
Amorous Flea, E. 78th St. (2-13-64).
Betty-Sponge, East End (2-25-64).
Salad Mad Cafe, Wash. sq. (3-10-64).

Author Defends, Explains 'Deputy'

Hochhuth Insists Pope Should Have Protested Nazi Genocide; Denies Trying to Shift Guilt

Paris, Jan. 14.

Rolf Hochhuth, author of the controversial play "The Deputy," presented here as "Le Vicaire," says he has been surprised at the public uproar over the play. In interviews during a three-day visit to Paris, he offered explanations of what the drama is intended to say.

The author emphasizes that "The Deputy" is meant as a religious work, and that he is a Christian. Although the play is regarded as anti-Catholic or at least anti-Vatican, the dramatist claims that his only stand is against the late Pope Pius XII because of the latter's failure to protest publicly against the extermination of the Jews by the Nazis during the last war.

Hochhuth argues that anyone who represented 500,000,000 believers and was looked up to by others as an outstanding moral leader had no right to keep silent in the face of genocide. The playwright contends the Pontiff might have exerted great psychological influence by speaking out, even if it was not clear if it would have stopped the Nazis or helped those already in concentration camps.

The German dramatist believes that a Papal protest against the Nazi persecutions might also have warned those who did not know what awaited them, and alerted Christians to help Jews when they knew what was going on. Hochhuth points out that in the original German, the play is called "Der Stellvertreter" ("The Representative"), which carries the connotation that the Pope represents everyone, and in that sense everyone shares the guilt of not having done enough to oppose the Nazi slaughter of the Jews.

The playwright denies suggestions that the drama was written to try to shift German guilt to the Pope. Any such assertion could be made only by people who have not read or seen it, he asserts. The Germans were primarily guilty, Hochhuth declares, and adds that he has been attacked in Germany by neo-Nazi papers and ex-service men's magazines, allegedly as a "parlor pink."

The dramatist says that only people with distorted outlooks or with axes to grind wold accuse him of trying to soft pedal German guilt in "The Deputy." Although the Nazis were primarily guilty of the crimes against the Jews, many other German people shared the blame or knew of the situation but did nothing, he claims.

Hochhuth says he is surprised that nobody else ever treated the subject of the Pope's failure to protest against Nazi genocide on the stage before. Many writers have dealt with it, but none wrote a novel or play about it. The subject was treated mostly in essay form. Hochhuth reveals that he spent years looking up archives and records on the affair before writing his play.

The author indicates that maybe a Catholic should have written such such a drama. He is a Protestant,

(Continued on page 68)

COAST PRODUCERS WANT UNION DEPOSIT INTEREST

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Stan Seiden has demanded that Actors Equity deposit all monies on deposit with the union as bonds for various legit companies be placed with a savings and loan association with instructions for interest therefrom to be turned over to him and his partner, Zev Bufman.

The producer says that his deposits amount to approximately $35,000 in cash, and he claims he has repeatedy requested over a period of more than two years that the funds be invested at interest and that he and his firm receive the revenue therefrom.

Lee Harris, Equity's Coast representative, asserts that all requests had been given to the New York Council for advisement. He says that at present all bond money is on deposit with the Bank of America. Seiden's demand will be referred to the union's legal department, Harris indicates.

Olympia, Dublin Legiter To Be Dance, Dining Hall

Dublin, Jan. 14.

Around $224,000 was paid for Bublin's oldest theatre, the Olympia, by a London-Irish group headed by Tom Gorman. The takeover will be made this spring and the building will be converted to a dance and banquet hall.

Until the takeover, joint managing directors Leo McCabe and Stanley Illsley will continue to operate the theatre and are currently staging a pantomime, "Cinderella, starring comedian Jack Cruise. The McCabe-Illsley partnership of IMP Productions is to be continued after the theatre closes.

J. J. Shubert Left Specific Bequests Of Over $4,000,000

The worth of the Shubert holdings, a speculative factor in litigation involving the estate of the late Lee Shubert, hasn't been cleared up by the filing for probate of the will of his recently deceased brother, Jacob J. Shubert. The will, filed last week in N.Y. Surrogate's Court by attorney James N. Vaughan, provides for most of the estate to go to the Sam S. Shubert Foundation, a philanthropic entity established by Lee and J. J. (short of Jacob J.) in memory of their older brother.

J. J., the last of the three brothers who founded the Shubert theatre empire, died at the age of 86 in his Manhattan apartment Dec. 26. His estate is listed in his will as worth "more than $1,000,000." There were specific bequests totaling more than $4,000,000 in trust funds which will eventually go to the foundation, as will whatever else is left.

J. J., who because of ill health had never been told of the death over a year ago of his only child, John, had left $300,000, plus the income from a $2,000,000 trust, to his son. That was his largest specific bequest, and the revenue will now go to the foundation. The will provides for J. J.'s widow, Muriel, to get $300,000, plus the life income from an $800,000 trust fund, as well as whatever she chooses of his art collection and furniture.

The will, signed May 27, 1958, superseded a 1952 agreement by

(Continued on page 66)

RE-ASSEMBLED 'SOUND' CLICKS IN VANCOUVER

Vancouver, Jan. 14.

How to succeed in show business by really trying was exemplified by the boxoffice click of "The Sound of Music" here. Zollie Volchok, of Seattle's Northwest Releasing Corp., and Hugh Pickett, impresario for Vancouver's Famous Artists Ltd., presented the tuner for a single week, and grossed $74,000 for eight performances Dec. 30-Jan. 4 at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre. The potential capacity for the 2,800 seat auditorium at $5.95 evening and $4.40 matinee top is $80,000.

The Henry Guettel touring company of the musical had been slated to fold Nov. 23 in Toronto. However, advance commitments to potential ticket buyers here and in Seattle and Portland persuaded Volchok and Pickett to ante up the estimated $250,000 required to remount the production.

Guettel put together a cast from the closed road company and the original New York production. The troupe, starring Barbara Meister, John van Dreelen and Katherine Hilgenberg, with Jen Nelson and Wally Griffin, was directed by John Fearnley.

The production is currently in its second and final week in Seattle, with one week in Portland and seven weeks between San Francisco and Los Angeles to follow for the revived 11-week Coast tour.

City of Edinburgh Will Operate Lyceum Theatre

Edinburgh, Jan. 14.

Edinburgh civic authorities are going into show biz. They plan to take over the Royal Lyceum Theatre, a local legit house, and present shows.

The move follows the breakdown of an agreement between the city and Meyer Oppenheim, a local business man to develop the Lyceum area at a cost of $6,000,000. Under the terms of this agreement, the city council are bound to take over the theatre.

Assurances have been given to theatrical unions that their professional and technical advice will be welcomed.

N.Y. League Audit Refutes Times Tale

Broadway legit earned minimum profit of $336,000 on its operations for the 1962-63 season ending last June 30. That's the determination of an audited survey of legit activity for that period conducted under the sponsorship of the League of N. Y. Theatres.

The accounting takes in all shows produced on the Main Stem during the 1962-63 season, holdovers still on the boards during the semester, road companies, film income and revenue from the sale of stock, amateur and foreign rights. It's the first such survey ever made public by the League, which is the organization of Broadway producers and theatre owners.

The League is publicizing its findings in rebuttal to a frontpage article in the N. Y. Times last May which headlined, "Stage Investors Lost $5.5 Million in Disastrous Broadway Season." Herman Shumlin, acting president of the league, said, "The report covers the finances of the entire legitimate theatre in the 1962-63 season. What the Times report did was to mention only plays produced in that season which failed or which if successful were just beginning to show profits which with many of these shows are still mounting." Shumlin also explained that the league's report follows the methods employed by other businesses.

The $336,000 is a minimum profit figure since some shows that were operational during the '62-'63 season are still active and therefore in a position to earn additional income from performances, possible belated film sales and the prospect of other subsidiary revenue. Incidentally, the report was prepared for the league by the accounting firm of Pinto, Winokur & Pagano, long active in the legit field.

The manner in which the accounting firm reached its conclusions is as follows:

On 17 holdover productions there were profits of $4,569,200 and losses of $410,400.

On 10 entries which opened during the '62-'63 season and were still running this semester there were profits of $1,387,700 and losses of $861,100.

On 43 productions which opened and closed during the season there were profits of $176,200 and losses of $5,458,600.

Film royalties totaled $533,300 and amateur rights came to $400,000.

The profit total was $7,066,400 and the loss total $6,730,100, leaving a net profit of $336,300.

Royal Winnipeg Leggers Okay With Added Danes

Winnipeg, Jan. 14.

Royal Winnipeg Ballet grossed a solid $4,700 for two performances at the 1,465-seat Playhouse here recently. Company was bolstered by guest artists Kirsten Simone and Henning Kronstam of the Royal Danish Ballet.

Company returned a week earlier from a six city eastern Canadian tour, which according to manager George Coroneos "realized a small profit."

The 22-member group has two performances scheduled here at the end of January before departing on a tour of the West Indies and the midwest United States.

'Rugantino' Costs 250G to Import; Italian Film Names Tout Tuner

By JESSE GROSS

The cost of importing "Rugantino" from Italy for its scheduled Feb. 6 opening at the Hellinger Theatre, N.Y., is expected to run about $250,000, exclusive of bonds. That's the estimate of Alexander H. Cohen who's acquired the musical for a worldwide tour, in particular, in partnership with British impresario Jack Hylton.

The $250,000, the producer explains, is completely separate from an original Italian investment in the tuner of about $500,000. That stake, he says, has been recovered by the production which, he asserts, has earned a healthy profit on its Italian operations. The presentation is said to hold the record as the longest running and most successful musical in the history of Italian legit.

Following the involved logistics for its overseas move, "Rugantino," which closed Jan. 6 at the Teatro Alfieri in Turin, makes its North American debut with the use of English subtitles tonight (Wed.) at the O'Keefe Centre, Toronto. Air transport of scenery and company luggage began Jan. 7 and the cast and others connected with the production departed by plane from Rome last Saturday (11). The musical will play the O'Keefe for two-and-a-half weeks prior to moving to Broadway.

An unusual radio campaign, in keeping with the show's Italian derivation, has been instituted by Cohen to promote its upcoming New York engagement. Spots, plugging the musical, have been recorded by such names as Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroianni, Rosanno Brazzi, Pier Angeli, Vittorio Gassman and Federico Fellini. These endorsements, 10 seconds, 20 seconds, 30 seconds running and 60 seconds, are being carried over radio stations WQXR, WPAT, WINS, WCBS and WNBC, and are to be continued until the production's opening at the Hellinger.

There's also a Manhattan television campaign which includes spots made by the tuner's three stars, Nino Manfredi, Ornella Vanoni and Aldo Fabrizi. Some of these are in English, while others are in Italian with English subtitles. Toronto has also had a pre-

(Continued on page 66)

Guthrie Theatre Troupe May Make Overseas Tour

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

An overseas tour is under consideration for the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre repertory company. Oliver Rea, the company's managing director, says that the tour's idea has been broached informally by the U.S. State Dept. He revealed he was contacted after returning from a European trip recently.

Rea expects that the matter will come to a head this month. Thus far, he said, no specific overseas area for the tour has been mentioned and it likely wouldn't be held until next year. The company starts its second season here next May.

Dist. Atty Hogan Enters Probe Of Graft on B'way

The office of N.Y. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan has moved its investigation of business irregularities in legit into the area of kickbacks by scenery builders to theatrical production managers. The probe will also cover advertising rebates to producers and diversion of investors' funds by producers for their personal use. Information relating to such activities was turned over last week to Hogan by N.Y. State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz, whose office has been conducting a nine-month investigation of legit operations on Broadway.

Asst. Attorney General David Clurman, who's been conducting the probe for Lefkowitz, previously passed on information to Hogan's office concerning scalping and the under-the-table "ice" payoff to those who supply tickets for the black market. Asst. D.A. Jerome Kidder, who heads the Frauds, Bureau, is studying all the data submitted by the Attorney General's office for possible criminal indictments by a grand jury.

The Attorney General, who has civil jurisdiction, launched his investigation into alleged malpractices in legit for the stated purpose of mapping corrective legislation. His probe, however, has also prompted an investigation by the N.Y. State Tax Commission into possible violations in the tax returns of numerous individuals connected with the theatre. Included are producers, theatre owners, boxoffice treasurers, ticket brokers and company managers.

Information gathered by Lefkowitz's office has also been turned

(Continued on page 64)

20TH TAKES 'PRETZEL' RIGHTS FOR 80-300G

20th-Fox has purchased the film rights to Jerry Devine's "Never Live Over a Pretzel Factory" which Paul Vroom, Buff Cobb and Albert Marre are producing for a March 25 opening at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre, N. Y. The picture company, which acquired the rights for a down payment of $80,000, could shell out up to $300,000 for the comedy under an arrangement whereby it pays a percentage of the legit production's gross on profitable weeks.

Besides its pre-production acquisition of the pic rights, 20th is also putting up $55,000 of the total $135,000 backing for the legit production. The show, starring Dennis O'Keefe, goes into rehearsal Jan. 27 under Marre's direction. It's slated to begin a pre-Broadway tryout tour with a Feb. 18-March 1 stand at the Playhouse on the Mall, Paramus, N. J., then plays an engagement March 5-14 at the Colonial Theatre, Boston.

The $80,000 down payment split 60-40 between the author and the production gives the latter $28,800 as its cut, less 10% agents commissions and 4% fee to the Dramatists Guild. If the entire $300,000 is paid by 20th, the production's share, after the deduction of 10% commissions, will come to $108,000.

TOURING CO. 'SYRACUSE' ON BUS-TRUCK ROUTE

A touring production of "The Boys From Syracuse" began a 20-week road trek last Wednesday (8) at the Lyric Theatre, Allentown, Pa. This is the second major production of the 25-year-old musical since the debut last April of the successful off-Broadway revival at Theatre Four, N.Y.

An initial British production of the musical, adapted by George Abbott from Shakespeare's "A Comedy of Errors," with music by Richard Rodgers and lyrics by the late Lorenz Hart, opened last Nov. 7 at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, London. The off-Broadway presentation was produced by Richard York and the London edition by Rodgers' firm, Williamson Music.

The road venture, capitalized at $60,000 as compared to $35,000 for the off-Broadway presentation, has been co-produced by National Performing Arts with Hal Grossman and Len Bedsow. NPA, a booking outfit, is substituting "Syracuse" for the cancelled bus-and-truck production of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," which was to have played its circuit of split-week stands, including Broadway Theatre League dates.

Grossman and Bedsow were represented on Broadway last season as co-producers of "Sophie." Christopher Hewett and Bob Herget, director and choreographer, respectively, of the off-Broadway and London productions of "Syracuse," performed the same jobs for the motorized presentation. Joseph Klein is musical director for the touring vehicle, which uses a cast of 24 and an orchestra of 12. The full company, traveling by bus and truck, totals about 50.

"Syracuse" was originally presented in 1938-39 at the Alvin Theatre, N.Y., for a run of 235 performances.

Legit Bits

Liza Minnelli will star in "Carnival" at the Mineola (L. I.) Playhouse, starting Jan. 28. The presentation goes from there to the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, N. J., beginning Feb. 9, and then The Yonkers (N. Y.) Playhouse, commencing March 10.

John Payne will star in "Calculated Risk" at the Mineola (L. I.) Playhouse, starting March 10, and the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, N. J., beginning March 31.

Anders Meyer is set and lighting designer for "A Lovely Light," the Dorothy Stickney one-woman show opening next Monday night (20) at the Mayfair Theatre, N. Y. Miss Stickney's gowns have been designed by Helen Pons.

Jacques Urbont, who composed the music for "All In Love," will supervise the British production of the tuner, scheduled to open March 27 at the Mayfair Theatre, London.

Philip Rose's upcoming Broadway production of a musical version of "Cafe Crown" is slated to give four weeks of previews at the Martin Beck Theatre, N. Y., in lieu of an out-of-town tryout, prior to an official April 7 opening at the house. Jerry Eskow is director and Lee Sherman choreographer for the tuner, which has a book by Hy Kraft, music by Albert Hague and lyrics by Martin Brill.

The American National Theatre & Academy and Abraham & Straus, the Brooklyn department store, launched their second annual collaborative Theatre Appreciation Series last week with a seminar in the store's fourth floor restaurant on subscription plays and the concept of the new Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre. The session was conducted by Hugh Southern, manager of the Repertory Theatre's Audience Dept., and William Goyen, playwright in residence.

Broadway producer Alexander H. Cohen and London impressario Jack Hylton will be partnered in the presentation of Patrick Paterson's "The Roses Are Real," opening next Wednesday night (22) at the Vaudeville Theatre, London, with Michael MacLiammoir heading a company of five. The other cast members are Rachel Herbert, Mary Kerridge, Thorley Walters and Hilton Edwards, who's also stager.

The British production of "Oh What a Lovely War" is to be presented on Broadway next September by David Merrick and Gerry Raffles.

Veteran actor Thomas W. Mosley has retired as administrative secretary of the Negro Actors Guild.

Carmen Capalbo will direct "The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window."

Beverlee McKinsey will play Honey in the London production of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" opening Feb. 6 at the Piccadilly Theatre.

Theoni V. Aldredge is costume designer for "Any Wednesday."

The Musicarnival, Cleveland, will begin its 11th season June 8 with "The Sound of Music." It'll run three weeks instead of the fortnight usually allotted to shows at that spot.

Howard Bay is set and lighting designer for "Never Live over a Pretzel Factory."

"Jo," a musical version of "Little Women," with book and lyrics by Donald Parks and music by William Dyer, is being produced by Victoria Crandall, operator of the Brunswick (Me.) Summer Playhouse, for a Feb. 6 opening at the Orpheum Theatre, N. Y., under the direction of John Bishop, with Chele Abel as choreographer.

A Broadway edition of the London production of the George Ross-Campbell Singer play, "Difference of Opinion," is scheduled for presentation next season by the Theatre Guild and British producer, Peter Bridge.

Diana Krasny has joined Kermit Bloomgarden and the producing firm of Robert Fryer, Laurence Carr and John Herman as coproducer of "Anyone Can Whistle."

The Meadowbrook Dinner Theatre, Cedar Grove, N. J., which closed New Year's Eve for its annual vacation, reopens Jan. 23 with Gloria DeHaven in "Gypsy."

The Habimah company from Israel, which opens a U. S. tour Feb. 1 at the Little Theatre, N. Y., will give Sunday afternoon and evening performances in lieu of Friday and Saturday afternoon performances.

The American Shakespeare Festival, Stratford, Conn., begins a nine-week student season March 30 with "Hamlet" and "Much Ado About Nothing." The regular 15-week season, which will also include "Richard III," will start May 30.

Jean Rosenthal is lighting designer for the Alexander H. Cohen production of "Hamlet."

Equity Library Theatre is presenting "Cyrano de Bergerac" at the Master Theatre, N. Y., this week.

Ben Segal, Jack Lenny Tent Casting on Coast

Tent theatre operator Ben Segal and New York talent agent Jack Lenny, of the Lenny-Debin office, are at the Beverly Hills Hotel screening name talent for the 1964 season at canvastops run by Segal independently or in partnership with others. They arrived on the Coast yesterday (Tues.) after a Monday stopoff in Phoenix for the debut of the Star Theatre, a 2,300-seat in-the-round structure there.

The Phoenix spot, with Betsy Palmer in "South Pacific," as its preem entry, is a Buster Bonoff operation. Bonoff also runs the Warwick (R. I.) Musical Theatre in partnership with Segal. "Pacific" will run for two weeks at the Star Theatre and will be followed by fortnight engagements of Gordon and Sheila MacRae in "Guys and Dolls," Jan. 27; Anna Maria Alberghetti in "Naughty Marietta," Feb. 10; John Raitt in "Carousel," Feb. 24, and Gisele MacKenzie in "Gypsy," March 9.

There'll be a Holy Week layoff March 23-28 and for the final frame of the season, starting March 30, the Phoenix theatre will spotlight Nat King Cole in his own show. Besides his involvement with Bonoff in the Warwick teepee, Segal operates the Oakdale Musical Theatre, Wallingford, Conn.; the Carousel Theatre, Framingham, Mass., and, in association with Lewis T. Fisher, the Melody Fair, North Tonawanda, N. Y.

The Lenny-Debin agency acts as casting director for all the above spots except the one in Phoenix, which does its casting on the Coast.

Hogan

Continued from page 63

over to the Tax Commission, which is concerned with whether persons who allegedly received "ice" or kickbacks reported the money as income. It's also been reported that Congressman Robert N. Giaimo, Connecticut Democrat, has requested an investigation of the situation by the Internal Revenue Service. A Federal law, dealing with scalping, says that such income is subject to a 50% tax.

In another development, the League of N.Y. Theatres has formed two committees to draw up precise codes and rules to be followed in future activities by its membership of Broadway producers and theatre owners. One of the committees is to draft a "code of practices" and the other is to explore the possibilities of ticket control and distribution.

Cooperation between the league and the Attorney General's office in connection with the rules to be drawn up by the committees was discussed last week at a meeting between Clurman and Herman Shumlin, acting president of the league; Irving Cheskin, the organization's executive director, and Lester Osterman, a member of the league's board of governors.

Shumlin, Cheskin and Osterman are members of the committee to develop the Code of Practices, along with Alfred de Liagre, Kermit Bloomgarden, Harold Prince and Ernest Martin. The committee on ticket control and distribution is headed by Leland Hayward.

Lefkowitz will hold a press conference tomorrow morning (Thurs.) in the downtown Manhattan State Office Building to discuss proposed recommendations to the State Legislature as a result of his public hearings and investigation of legit's theatrical financing practices and sale and distribution of tickets.

The theatrical advisory committee appointed by Lefkowitz to assist him in the investigation will present at the conference.

Touring Shows

(Figures cover Jan. 13-25)

Any Wednesday (tryout)—Shubert, New Haven (Jan. 21-25).
Beyond the Fringe (2d Co.)—American St. L. (Jan. 13-18); Brown, L'ville (Jan. 20-22); Clowes, Indpls. (Jan. 23-25).
Boys From Syracuse (bus-truck)—Split-weeks (Jan. 13-25).
Camelot—Opera House, Chi (Jan. 13-25).
Camelot (bus-truck)—Split-weeks (Jan. 13-25).
Foxy (tryout)—Fisher, Det. (Jan. 13-25).
Funny Girl (tryout)—Shubert, Boston (Jan. 13-25).
Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum (2d Co.)—Forrest, Philly (Jan. 13-18); Ford's, Balto (Jan. 20-25).
Hollow Crown (bus-truck)—Split-weeks (Jan. 13-25).
How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying (2d Co.)—Shubert, Chi (Jan. 13-25).
How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying (3d Co.)—Music Hall, K. C. (Jan. 13-18); Orpheum, Mpls. (Jan. 20-25).
Man for All Seasons—Colonial, Boston (Jan. 13-25).
Man for All Seasons (bus-truck)—Split-weeks (Jan. 13-25).
National Repertory Theatre—Shubert, New Haven (Jan. 13-18); Shubert, Cincy (Jan. 20-25).
Never Too Late (3d Co.)—Pabst, Milwaukee (Jan. 13-18); Auditorium, St. Paul (Jan. 20-25).
Pajama Tops—Civic, N. O. (Jan. 13-25).
Rugantino (tryout)—O'Keefe, Toronto (Jan. 15-25).
Seidman and Son—Hartford, L. A. (Jan. 13-25).
Sound of Music—Opera House, Seattle (Jan. 13-18); Auditorium, Portland (Jan. 20-25).
Thousand Clowns — Studebaker, Chi (Jan. 13-25).
Thousand Clowns (bus-truck)—Split-weeks (Jan. 13-25).
What Makes Sammy Run? (tryout)—Erlanger, Philly (Jan. 13-25).
Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?—Orpheum, Mpls. (Jan. 13-18); Orpheum, Madison (Jan. 20); Pabst, Milwaukee (Jan. 21-25).

Actors to Get Day's Pay For 2 Cancelled Shows After JFK Tragedy

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Following several weeks of meetings with company deputies, the Council of Actors Equity has passed a resolution requiring full salary payments for all companies that lost only one performance during the tragic weekend of Nov. 22-25 after the assassination of President Kennedy. The same ruling applies to Broadway and the road.

West Coast Equity rep Lee Harris last Thursday (9) informed local legit producers of the action, noting that the Council's resolution specifies that full salaries must be paid to companies which lost one performance. In cases of two performances cancelled during the weekend, the resolution waives the contractual salary for one of the performances. Companies who rehearsed on the day of the assassination or day of mourning are to be paid.

Virtually every theatre in the country was shuttered Nov. 22, the night of the assassination. At that time, the League of N.Y. Theatres wired many theatre operators with a "recommendation" for closing down, but responsibility was left to individual theatres and producers.

The hardest hit locally by the resolution have been producers Stan Seiden and Zev Bufman, who shuttered the Ivar, LeGrand and Civic here, the Geary in San Francisco and their Cocoanut Grove operation in Miami Beach. Two performances of "Pajama Tops" at Geary were cancelled, although the producers must pay salaries on only one performance.

Seiden says that salaries for all operations will come to about $1,800. The producer also notes that the cancellation of shows required approximately $14,000 in refunds in various operations, including $7,800 in San Francisco alone. He says that regular business did not pick up for several weeks following the assassination.

Seiden & Bufman will pay the required coin. They have no choice, Seidman says, and he adds, "We will pay it this week, so as not to justify the disgraceful action of Equity." The producer remarks, however, "Is the mourning period limited only to employers and not to employees?" However, he asserts, "We would have closed the theatres in any case."

In reply to Seiden's comments, Harris voiced Equity's position as follows, "People who wanted to see the show will go, anyway. Therefore, producers did not lose any money."

Other theatres closed locally on Nov. 22 included the Huntington Hartford, playing "Time of the Barracudas"; the Orpheum, with "No Strings"; the Biltmore, with "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," and the Players Ring theatres. The Hartford opening of the "Lott The Hartford opening of the "Lotte Goslar Show" was delayed one night.

GOP Wants JFK Center Be 'Sole' Salute to Him; Roosevelt Sans Shrine

Washington, Jan. 14.

One word holds up final Congressional passage of legislation renaming the National Cultural Center for the late President John F. Kennedy. After some Republican opposition, the House passed by voice vote the bill to designate the Cultural Center the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

The House-passed version stipulates the center shall be the "sole" memorial to the late President in the Washington area. The measure passed earlier by the Senate did not include this provision.

The Senate is expected soon to accept the House wording and dispatch the bill to President Johnson for signing into law.

The legislation besides renaming the Center authorizes the Federal government to match public contributions up to $15,500,000. Also called for is an authorization for a loan up to $15,400,000 for building a parking garage under the Center. Before passing the bill, the House slapped down several Republican amendments to cut Federal funds for the Center.

Defeated by a 148-100 teller vote on partisan lines was a G.O.P. amendment to drop provisions for Federal financing of the Center.

Another 129-92 vote rejected an amendment prohibiting the Treasury loan for the garage.

Also turned aside were Republican amendments to establish a memorial commission to chose a "fitting memorial," to the late President and another to withhold Federal coin from the project until the national budget was balanced.

Right before final passage of the bill, Rep. James Auchincloss of New Jersey, the Republican manager for the measure, chided his party colleagues for quibbling over the memorial.

Leaning on his cane, Rep. Auchincloss said "the people of the United States are back of this idea 100 percent."

Calling the Center "a natural and perfect memorial to the President," Auchincloss advised, "Don't let's be penny-wise and pound foolish.

"Let the world know what we think of him," said Auchincloss.

The Republican's speech was hailed by House Speaker John McCormack, "as one of the finest speeches I've ever heard in the Congress of the United States."

In answer to some of his colleagues charges, Auchincloss said that since President Kennedy's assassination contributions have poured into the Center and that the private funds needed to match the Federal coin had been raised.

Auchincloss did get some Republican support from Reps. John Baldwin of California, Seymour Halpern and Frank Horton of New York and Paul Schenk of Ohio, who praised the memorial plan.

Democrats lauding the bill were led by Reps. Frank Thompson of New Jersey and Jim Wright of Texas. The party's contention for the measure was pitched to the theme that the late President supported the performing and the drive to complete the Cultural Center and that he realized the importance of the arts as a measure of American society and values.

One Republican argument against the bill was that a memorial has yet to be built for President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Rep. James Roosevelt (D-Calif.) answered these protestations saying the failure to build a memorial to his father was not a valid reason for not building one for Kennedy.

Rep. Ben Jensen (R-Iowa) complained there was no Washington memorial for President William McKinley. He was rebutted by Rep. Torbert Macdonald (D-Mass.), a close friend of the late President, who said, "There is one whenever the words come out of you mouth."

Australian Shows

(Week Ending Jan. 11)

ADELAIDE
Camelot, Her Majesty's.

BRISBANE
King and I, Her Majesty's.

MELBOURNE
Fledermaus, Princess.
Hay Fever, St. Martin's.
How to Succeed, Her Majesty's.
Wizard of Oz, Tivoli.

SYDNEY
J. B., Independent.
Mary, Mary, Royal
Minstrels, Tivoli.
Once Upon a Surfie, Palace.
Physicists, Ensemble.
Private Ear, Public Eye, Phillip.
Sound of Music, Elizabetnan.

Literati

New Trade Book House

Western Pub. Co.'s Odyssey Press is launching its first trade catalog next spring with a dozen titles, one of which, "Stepchild in the Family", by Anne W. Simon, will be serialized in McCall's. Dr. Richard Berczeller's "Displaced Doctor" also has had three excerpts from that upcoming Odyssey book published in The New Yorker.

In addition, a pocketsized series called the Odyssey Library is on the agenda.

Star Changes

Giles M. Fowler, motion picture editor of the Kansas City Star, also has been appointed drama critic, suceeding Landon Laird. Latter henceforth will devote full time to his morning column About Town. John W. Colt, paper's executive editor, also disclosed these other changes, Sandor Kallai becomes music editor and Claude Neibarger will be music commentator.

Richard L. Brown, sometime film critic, is named art editor. Thorpe Menn, book editor, will supervise preparation of a Sunday section devoted to the arts and entertainment under the overall direction of Henry C. Haskell, Star's associate editor.

'Fanny's' a Classic Now

"Fanny Hill" might well be obscene under the Criminal Code, but as "a significant part of English literature and important from an historic as well as a literary point of view" it will not be banned from sale in Ontario. So the attorney-general's committee of indecent literature—whose edict is not law but usually followed—has decided after studying the sexy classic (already on sale in Ontario) on request by Richmond Hill, Ont., police chief R. P. Robbins. The committee, consisting of a prof, a librarian, a psychiatric expert and a lawyer, recommended no restriction on "Fanny Hill's" freedom unless "the book be found obscene by a legally constituted court of law."

Foreign Press Officers

Edwin Tetlow of the London Daily Telegraph has been elected president of the Foreign Press Association of the U.S. Association has membership of about 200 journalists representing 51 foreign countries. Tetlow is based as a special correspondent of his newspaper in New York.

Other officers elected to serve the organization for 1964 were Max Tak, Elseviers, Amsterdam, and P. G. Krishnayya, KNS, India, vicepresidents: David Horowitz, Herut, Tel Aviv, secretary-general: John Capelli, Paese Sera, Rome, assistant secrettary-general; Horacio Estol, Clarin, Buenos Aires, treasurer.

Elected to executive committee are Jeffrey Blyth, London Daily Mail; George Fenin, La Nazione, Florence; Keith Mackriell, Australian Broadcasting Commission; Elena Nielsen, Featurepress, Copenhagen; Fred Vaz Dias, Amsterdam; and Richard Yaffe, Al Hamishmar, of Tel Aviv; and Rene Gesmar, Le Monde, Paris.

CHATTER

La Presna Inc., New York corporation, merged with El Diario Publishing Co., Inc. as El Diario Publishing Co., Inc. Certificate to this effect was filed in Albany by Rogers & Rogers.

Athens Associated Newspapers Inc., Loudon News Service Inc., and Galaxy Newspaper Syndicate Inc., all New York corporations, have been dissolved. Harry Geist filed the certificates at Albany.

Menorah Journal Inc., has been dissolved, according to a certificate filed by the corporation.

Mishnah Brurah Inc., has been authorized to conduct a publishing and printing business in New York. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par value. Kenneth H. Resnik was filing attorney at Albany.

$1600 CONTEST for WRITERS
OF UNPUBLISHED MANUSCRIPTS.
Send for contest rules and free Brochure on publishing your book.
In case of tie, duplicate prizes awarded.
Dept. VA
Pageant Press, 101 Fifth Ave. N. Y. 3

B'way in Post-New Year Cave-In, But 'Barefoot' SRO, 'Supper' $75,286; 'Chinese' $23,311, 'Marathon' $16,929

Business caved in for most Broadway shows last week following a New Year's Eve frame which saw receipts—after the bullish Christmas week session—continuing on the upswing for a number of entries and declining for others. For some presentations the drops registered last week were brutal and it appears likely that there will be several closings within the next few weeks unless there's a sharp reversal of this season's apparent slowdown in boxoffice activity.

The blah b.o. situation is illustrated by a comparison of last week to the corresponding stanza a year ago. The total gross for 23 shows last week was $672,224 compared to $915,048 for 23 offerings in 1963. That's a difference of $242,824. Of the 23 productions on tap last week, 10 grossed under $20,000 with four taking in between $10,000-$15,000 and six between $15,000-$20,000. In '63, only two shows grossed under $20,000, one less than $3,000 and the other nearly $13,000. There was only one entry which grossed over $60,000 last week as compared to five the corresponding frame last year.

The only sellout the last fortnight was "Barefoot in the Park." There were three closings during the two-week period, as detailed below. On the basis of the established pattern, business this week should improve, but Monday's blizzard could upset that prospect.

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), MC (Musical-Comedy), MD (Musical-Drama), O (Opera), OP (Operetta), Rep. (Repertory), DR (Dramatic Reading).

Other parenthetic designations refer, respectively, to weeks played, number of performances through last Saturday, top prices (where two prices are given, the higher is for Friday-Saturday nights and the lower for weeknights), number of seats, capacity gross and stars. Price includes 10% Federal and 5% repealed City tax (diverted to an industry-wide pension and welfare fund), but grosses are net: i.e., exclusive of taxes.

Asterisk denotes show had cut-rate tickets in circulation.

Grosses normally have been reduced by commissions where theatre parties are mentioned.

Ballad of the Sad Cafe, Beck (D) (11th wk; 83 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,280; $50,898) (Coleen Dewhurst, William Prince). Previous week, $18,990 with $7.50 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $14,232.

Barefoot in the Park, Biltmore (C) (12th wk; 91 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 994; $38,692) (Elizabeth Ashley, Robert Redford, Mildred Natwick, Kurt Kasznar). Previous week, $40,437 with parties and a $10 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $38,356 with parties.

Beyond the Fringe, Golden (R) (64th wk; 507 p) ($7.50; 799; $34,874). Previous week, $22,182 with regular top New Year's Eve.

A revised version of the British revue, comprising old and new material, opened last Wednesday night (8) to unanimous approval (Chapman, News; Kerr, Herald Tribune; McClain, Journal-American; Nadel, World-Telegram; Taubman, Times; Watts, Post).

Last week, $16,744.

Case of Libel, Longacre (D) (14th wk; 106 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,101; $40,986) (Van Heflin, Sidney Blackmer, Larry Gates). Previous week, $21,533 with $8.05 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $22,053 with parties.

Chinese Prime Minister, Royale (D) (2d wk; 12 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,050; $43,908) (Margaret Leighton, Alan Webb, John Williams). Previous week, $21,003 for four performances and two previews.

Opened Jan. 2 to one endorsement (Taubman, Times), three qualified approvals (Kerr, Herald Tribune; McClain, Journal-American; Nadel, World-Telegram), one "undramatic, but graceful" appraisal (Watts, Post) and one yes-no notice (Chapman, News).

Last week, $23,311.

Chips With Everything, Booth (D) (15th wk; 117 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 766; $34,207). Previous week, $19,678 with $7.50 top New Year's Eve at the Plymouth Theatre. Moved Jan. 6 to the Booth.

Last week, $11,513.

Enter Laughing, Miller's (C) (44th wk; 347 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 940; $30,200) (Vivian Blaine, Alan Mowbray, Irving Jacobson, Alan Arkin). Previous week, $20,189 with $7.50 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $13,760.

Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, Alvin (MC) (88th wk; 701 p) ($8.60-$9.40; 1,334; $65,096) (Zero Mostel). Previous week, $53,017 with $12 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $35,988.

Girl Who Came to Supper, Broadway (MC) (5th wk; 41 p) ($9.90; 1,785; $97,000) (Jose Ferrer, Florence Henderson). Previous week, $68,532 with parties and $11.90 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $75,286 with parties.

Here's Love, Shubert (MC) (15th wk; 114 p) ($9.60; 1,453; $71,205). Previous week, $65,909 with $11.90 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $44,615.

How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, 46th St. (MC) (118th wk; 935 p) ($9.60; 1,342; $66,615). Previous week, $64,772 with $12 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $56,000.

Luther, St. James (D) (16th wk; 123 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,609; $61,095) (Albert Finney, Kenneth J. Warren, John Moffat, Peter Bull, Glyn Owen, Frank Shelley). Previous week, $58,549 with $8.60 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $46,105. Moved Last Monday (13) to the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre. John Hefferman, who pinchhit the first half of last week for Finney who was unable to go on because of an impacted wisdom tooth, will take over the title role when Finney withdraws from that assignment Jan. 23.

Marathon '33, ANTA (D) (3d wk; 24 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,174; $45,650) (Julie Harris). Previous week, $14,940 with $8.60 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $16,929.

Mary, Mary, Hayes (C) (149th wk; 1,186 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,164; $43,380) (Patricia Smith, Murray Hamilton, Michael Evans). Previous week, $18,912 with $8.05 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $10,681.

Never Too Late, Playhouse (C) (59th wk; 469 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 994; $37,000) (Paul Ford, Maureen O'Sullivan, Orson Bean). Previous week, $33,937 with $9.60 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $33,250.

Nobody Loves An Albatross, Lyceum (C) (4th wk; 28 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 995; $33,000) (Robert Preston). Previous week, $27,515 with $9.60 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $27,838.

Oliver, Imperial (MD) (53d wk; 423 p) ($9.30; 1,450; $71,977) (Clive Revill, Georgia Brown). Previous week, $61,970 with $10 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $37,641.

One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Cort (D) (9th wk; 66 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,100; $41,482) (Kirk Douglas). Previous week, $18,605 with $8.60 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $16,090.

110 in the Shade, Broadhurst (MC) (12th wk; 90 p) ($8.60-$9.40; 1,186; $58,000) (Robert Horton, Inga Swenson, Stephen Douglass). Previous week, $54,583 with parties and $10 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $53,523 with parties.

Private Ear and Public Eye, Morosco (D) (14th wk; 107 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,009; $41,827) (Geraldine McEwan, Barry Foster, Brian Bedford, Moray Watson). Previous week, $20,964 with $8.05 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $19,914 with parties.

Stop the World—I Want to Get Off, Ambassador (MC) (67th wk; 531 p) ($8.60; 1,121; $51,795) (Joel Grey). Previous week, $27,762 with $9.60 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $19,558.

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? Rose (D) (66th wk; 520 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,162; $46,485) (Halla Stoddard, Donald Davis, Ben Piazza). Previous week, $28,466 with $8.05 top New Year's Eve. Miss Stoddard and Davis, who had been the matinee company headliners, played both evening and afternoon performances last week. They handled the nighttime assignments relinquished Jan. 4 by Uta Hagen and Arthur Hill who will costar in the London production. Davis is continuing as Hill's successor opposite Mercedes McCambridge who joined the cast last Monday night (13). Miss Stoddard resumes matinee performances only today (Wed.) with Henderson Forsythe as male lead.

Last week, $16,078.

Closed Last Fortnight

Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore, Atkinson (D) (1st wk; 5 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,088; $44,300) (Tallulah Bankhead, Tab Hunter, Ruth Ford).

Revised version of Tennessee Williams' play opened Jan. 1 to a unanimous thumb-down (Chapman, News; Kerr, Herald Tribune; McClain, Journal-American; Nadel, World-Telegram; Taubman, Times; Watts, Post).

Grossed $30,436 for five performances, plus two previews and closed Jan. 4 at an estimated $75,000 loss.

She Loves Me, O'Neill (MC) (38th wk; 301 p) ($8.60; 1,047; $53,700) (Barbara Cook, Daniel Massey, Barbara Baxley). Previous week, $32,598 with $12 top New Year's Eve.

Last week, $22,759. Closed Saturday (11) with an estimated $270,000 deficit a $300,000 investment. The musical is scheduled for Civic Light Opera Assn. presentation later this year in Los Angeles and San Francisco. A London edition is also in the works.

Spoon River, Belasco (DR) (14th wk; 111 p) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,008; $34,277) (Betty Garrett, Robert Elston, Joyce Van Patten, Charles Aidman).

Grossed $24,003 with Play of the Month Guild patronage and $7.50 top New Year's Eve for its final frame ending Jan. 4. Closed at an estimated $15,000 profit on a $30,000 investment (including 20% overcall). A bus-and-truck tour of colleges and universities is scheduled to get underway next September. The cast for that company is still to be set.

OPENING THIS WEEK

Hello, Dolly, St. James (MC) ($8.80-$9.40; 1,609; $71,331) (Carol Channing). David Merrick presentation of musical version of Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker" with book by Michael Stewart and music and lyrics by Jerry Herman; opens tomorrow night (Thurs.). Last week, $63,570, National, Washington.

Dylan, Plymouth (D) ($6.90-$7.50; 1,084; $48,369) (Alec Guinness). George W. George and Frank Granat presentation of play by Sidney Michaels, based on material from two books, "Dylan Thomas," by John Brinnin, and "Leftover Life to Kill," by Caitlin Thomas; opens Saturday night (18). Last week, $78,811 with Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society and O'Keefe Centre subscription, O'Keefe, Toronto.

OTHER THEATRES

Barrymore, 54th St., Hellinger, Hudson, Little, Lunt-Fontanne, Majestic, Music Box, Winter Garden, Ziegfeld.

Schedule 2 New Plays At Citizens, in Glasgow

Glasgow, Jan. 14.

Two plays, "Battle Royal," by Bruce E. Baillie, and "Armstrong's Last Goodnight," by John Arden, are set for world preems at Citizens' Theatre here, respectively, March 2 and May 5. The spring resident company in "The Relapse," by Sir John Vanbrugh. It will be followed Feb. 17 by Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author," currently running in London.

Harold Brighouse's north-of-England comedy "Hobson's Choice," a favorite with British audiences, opens March 16 and "The Pinedus Affair," by Paolo Levi, translated by Robert Rietty, opens March 30. The latter play has been performed only once before on the U.K. stage, but has been seen on tv.

The Citizens' Theatre company celebrates the 400th birthday of Shakespeare with "Much Ado About Nothing" due April 14.

'Dylan' $78,811 for 3d Toronto Wk.; New 'Sound' Co. $67,300 in Seattle; 'Dolly' 63½G, D.C., 'Foxy' 39G, Cleve.

The heftiest grosser on the road last week in its third and final frame in Toronto was "Dylan," which opens next Saturday (18) at the Plymouth Theatre, N.Y. Top money the previous frame was taken by the Chicago-berthed "Camelot." Also big that New Year's Eve session were "Dylan," "Dolly" in Washington, "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" in Chi and a new touring edition of "Sound of Music" in its getaway stanza in Vancouver.

"Dolly," which opens at the St. James Theatre, N.Y. tomorrow night (Thurs.), continued strong in Washington last week with business SRO for the two frames. The Broadway - bound "What Makes Sammy Run?" has been doing okay in Philadelphia where it's extended its tryout an additional week. Last week's hot tickets, besides "Dylan" and "Dolly," included "Sound" in Seattle and the Chicago companies of "Camelot" and "Succeed."

There were four closings on the road during the last fortnight, three having shuttered Jan. 4 and the other last Sunday night (12). The three that faded Jan. 4 were "No Strings" in San Francisco, "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" in Louisville and the Broadway-bound "Conversations in the Dark" in Philadelphia. Last Sunday's closing was "Black Nativity" in Chicago.

Estimates for Last Week

Parenthetic designations for out-of-town shows are the same as for Broadway, except that hyphenated T with show classification indicates tryout, RS indicates road show and BT indicates bus-and-truck production. Also, prices on touring shows include 10% Federal tax and local tax, if any, but as on Broadway grosses are net; i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

Where subscription is mentioned, the gross is the net after the deductions of commissions. Grosses for split weeks are projected when shows play guaranteed dates.

BOSTON

Man for All Seasons, Colonial (D-RS) (2d wk) ($5.40-$6; 1,685; $55,085) (William Roderick, Bruce Gordon). Previous week, $36,049 with Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society subscription. Opened here Dec. 30 to unanimous raves (Adams, Globe; Guidry, Monitor; Hughes, Herald; Maloney, Traveler; Norton, Record American).

Last week, $38,244 with TG-ATS subscription.

National Repertory Theatre, Wilbur (Rep-RS) (4th wk) ($5.50-$6; 1,241; $40,601) (Eva Le Gallienne, Farley Granger, Denholm Elliott, Anne Meacham). Previous week, $17,918 for repertory of "The Seagull," "Ring Round the Moon" and "The Crucible."

Last week, about $21,000 for same repertory.

CHICAGO

Black Nativity, Civic (MD-RS) (6th wk) ($5.50-$6; 904; $27,500). Previous week, $21,206.

Last week, $21,634 for nine performances. Folded here Sunday (12).

Camelot, Opera House (MC-RS) (6th wk) ($6-$6.75; 3,600; $120,000) (Kathryn Grayson, Louis Hayward, Arthur Treacher). Previous week, $94,987.

Last week, $65,827.

How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, Shubert (MC-RS) (9th wk) ($5.95-$6.95; 2,100; $74,000). Previous week, $70,963.

Last week, $61,408.

CINCINNATI

Beyond the Fringe, Shubert (R-RS) (2d wk) ($4-$5.50; 2,028; $63,570). Previous week, $15,920. Opened here Dec. 30 to two raves (Radcliffe, Enquirer; Stevens, Post & Times Star).

Last week, $7,593. Had originally booked one-week here, but stretched it to two when a Dayton date was cancelled.

CLEVELAND

Foxy, Hanna (MC-RS) ($6.95; 1,515; $50,000) (Bert Lahr). Opened tryout tour here Jan. 6.

Last week, $39,263.

DETROIT

Thousand Clowns, Fisher (C-RS) (4th wk) ($4.85-$5.50; 1,606; $39,000) (Dane Clark, Margaret O'Brien). Previous week, $38,297 with Fisher Playgoer subscription.

Last week, $28,110 with Fisher Playgoer subscription.

LOS ANGELES

Seidman and Son, Hartford (C-RS) (1st wk) ($4.95-$6; 1,032; $36,800) (Sam Levene). Previous week, $25,261 with TG-ATS subscription for five performances, Auditorium, Denver.

Last week, $20,058 for seven performances with TG-ATS subscription.

MILWAUKEE

Camelot, Oriental (MC-BT) (2d wk) (Biff McGuire, Jeannie Carson, Melville Cooper). Previous week, about $45,000 for seven performances.

Last week, around $40,000 for six performances.

MINNEAPOLIS

Never Too Late, Academy (C-RS) ($5.50; 1,050; $36,000) (William Bendix, Nancy Carroll, Will Hutchins). Previous week, $15,698 Blackstone, Chicago.

Last week, $13,847.

PHILADELPHIA

Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, Forrest (C-RS) (3d wk) ($6.60-$7.50; 1,760; $65,000). Previous week, $48,814 with TG-ATS subscription.

Last week, $44,741 with some TG-ATS subscription.

What Makes Sammy Run? Erlanger (MC-T) (3d wk) ($6-$7.50; 1,894; $54,000) (Steve Lawrence, Sally Anne Howes, Robert Alda). Previous week, $47,171.

Last week, $50,426. Abe Burrows is directing the musical, having succeeded Arthur Storch. Tryout here has been extended an additional week to Feb. 1 and the opening at the 54th St. Theatre, N.Y., has been pushed back from Feb. 4 to Feb. 8.

SEATTLE

Sound of Music, Opera House (MD-RS) (1st wk) (Barbara Meister, John van Dreelen). Previous week, about $73,300, Queen Elizabeth, Vancouver, where began touring Dec. 30.

Last week, around $67,300.

TORONTO

Dylan, O'Keefe (CD-T) (3d wk) ($5.50; 3,211; $82,094) (Alec Guinness). Previous week, $65,878 with TG-ATS and O'Keefe subscription.

Last week, $78,811 with TG-ATS and O'Keefe subscription.

TULSA

How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, Municipal (MC-RS-3d Co.). Previous week, $47,529 for eight performances split between Auditorium, Houston, and Municipal, Oklahoma City.

Last week, $43,304.

WASHINGTON

Hello, Dolly, National (MC-T) (4th wk) ($5.50-$7.90; 1,673; $62,502) (Carol Channing). Previous week, $66,768.

Last week, $63,570.

SPLIT-WEEK

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (D-RS) (Nancy Kelly, Sheppard Strudwick) (matinee company costars Michaele Myers, Kendall Clark). Previous week, $30,032, Geary, San Francisco, with Clark playing matinees and subbing evenings for Strudwick.

Last week, $34,762 for seven performances split between Geary, San Francisco, and Auditorium, Denver. Strudwick resumed his role in Denver.

UNREPORTED

(Included below are productions with guaranteed dates on which grosses cannot be accurately figured.)

Boys From Syracuse (MC-BT), split-week, began touring last Wednesday (8).

Hollow Crown (DR-BT), split-weeks, began touring Dec. 30.

Man for All Seasons (D-BT)

(Continued on page 68)

Plenty U.S. Hits on Paris Stage

'Clowns,' Schisgal Plays, 'Rose Marie' Join 'Mary,' 'Dad,' 'Sunday' and 'Arsenic'

Paris, Jan. 14.

"Des Clowns par Milliers," the Jean Cosmos adaptation of Herb Gardner's comedy, "A Thousand Clowns," looks set to repeat the success of the Broadway original. Yves Montand is starred in the show, which Raymond Rouleau staged and Marie Bell & Montand are presenting. The play drew enthusiastic reviews and has settled down for a run at the Theatre Gymnase.

Montand received critical praise for his performance as the nonconformist television writer, while Marlene Jobert scores as the social worker, especially in her comedy crying scene. Didier Hauchemin is engagingly unprecocious as the nephew the hero wants to adopt.

Also apparently due for Paris click is the off-Broadway doublebill, "The Typists" and "The Tiger." The Murray Schisgal oneacters have been adapted by Laurent Terzieff, who has also produced and is the costar with Pascale de Boysson. The show is at the Theatre Lutece.

Another American show, the old standby operetta, "Rose Marie," also seems due for a profitable run at the Mogador Theatre. The tuner, with score by Rudolf Friml and Herbert P. Stothart and book and lyrics by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, has been adapted by Saint Granier and R. Ferriol, and staged by Henri Varna.

Scheduled for production later this season are French adaptations of "My Fair Lady," "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." With the continuing Broadway imports, "Mary, Mary," "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sad," the holdover "Sunday in New York" and the revival of "Arsenic and Old Lace" going strong, American shows are a major factor in the current Paris theatre.

J. J. Shubert

Continued from page 63

Mrs. Shubert to accept $150,000, plus $12,000 a year for life. A life income of $10,000 annually was left by J.J. to his first wife, Catherine. His nephew Lawrence Shubert Lawrence Sr. and daughter-in-law Kerttu Shubert were left $50,000 each. Lawrence Shubert Lawrence Jr., who now manages the Shubert enterprises, was left $25,000, as was J. J.'s longtime secretary, Isabelle Jeffers Porte.

About 50 other employees and friends were left smaller bequests. There was nothing, however, for Milton Shubert, a nephew, and Mrs. Sylvia Wolf Golde, a niece, both of whom were favored by the childless Lee, rather than by J. J. Lee's will, filed after his death 10 years ago, put Milton in charge of the Shubert theatres as general manager, but J. J. replaced him with his son John.

A claim, filed last month by the Government against Lee's still unsettled estate, for $15,705,387 in taxes, is based on the contention that his share of the Shubert partnership represented more than $25,000,000. In another action the Government has claimed the partnership was worth $50,000,000. (J. J. had contended the partnership was worth between $7,000,000 and $15,000,000.)

The touring National Repertory Theatre will scale ticket prices to a $3 top for its two-week engagement at the Shubert Theatre, Cincinnati, beginning next Monday (20).

Bits of London

London, Jan. 14.

Having had to bow out of his projected presentation of "A Thousand Clowns" in the West End, Lou Wilson is making a deal with Michael Codron to stage the show next spring.

In its first 100 performances at the Adelphi Theatre, Peter Bridge's production of "Six of One" had been seen by 102,547 paying customers, to a total gross of $221,956.

The original $84,000 library (ticket agency) deal for "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" has been amended to $224,000, extending over 40 weeks. Apart from this guarantee from the Combined Theatre Libraries, independent ticket agencies have made their own deal, worth $56,000, covering the same period.

Rugantino

Continued from page 63

opening radio-tv buildup for the tuner.

An original cast album of the Pietro Garinei-Sandro Giovannini creation is being released by Warner Bros. Records. Garinei and Giovannini, who are co-authors of the book, in collaboration with P. F. Campanile and Massimo Franciosa, are also the lyricists, directors and producers. The score is by Armando Trovajoli. Dania Krupska choreographed and Giulio Coltellacci designed the scenery and costumes.

Alfred Drake supervised the translation of the show for the subtitling, which is being handled by Telesync Corp., in association with Ralph Alswang who's supervisor of the physical production. Eldon Elder has relighted the presentation with American equipment and Anton Coppola is musical director.

Cohen figures the production will be able to break even at about $50,000 weekly at the Hellinger, where the weekly potential capacity will be over $80,000.

SHUBERT THEATRE

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Birthplace of the Nation's Greatest Hits

December 30, 1963

Messrs. George W. George and Frank Granat
18 West 55th Street
New York, New York

Gentlemen:

Please accept our thanks for presenting at the Shubert Theatre the World Premiere of "DYLAN" starring Sir Alec Guinness. Playing the pre-Christmas week to SRO for each performance, "DYLAN" grossed $56,361, setting a new house record. The play was exceptionally well-received by our patrons; word of mouth was uniformly excellent.

Sir Alec's portrayal of the title role was incredibly brilliant and superbly supported by Kate Reid and the entire cast.

I wish also to express my appreciation to Sidney Michaels, the author; to Peter Glenville for his excellent direction; and to Oliver Smith for designing a most ingenious and utilitarian set.

We are happy that we will have the further pleasure of presenting your next new play "ANY WEDNESDAY" at the Shubert Theatre, January 21 thru 25.

Once again, thanks to both of you and the best of wishes to "DYLAN" and yourselves on Broadway for all of 1964.

Yours cordially,

SHUBERT THEATRE

Maurice H. Bailey

M. H. Bailey

Shows Out of Town

Continued from page 62

Foxy

victims as well as the preposterous situations with an irresistible brand of corn-shucking mockery.

It all gets pretty wild in a double masquerade when he attends what are supposed to be his funeral provides a springboard for the star's hilarious talent.

It would be absurdly slapsticky without Lahr and good support. Robert Emmet Dolan's rousing score is nearly as colorful as the Yukon settings and Johnny Mercer's lyrics are clever and racy. They also have sophistication.

The biggest pop possibilities may be found in "Talk to Me Baby," sung effectively by John Davidson to Julienne Marie in a boy-meets-girl subplot. Miss Marie is an attractive, provocative singing comedienne.

Larry Blyden surcharges his part of a con-man fixer with vocal vitality and ingenious tongue-in-cheek acting. He boosts the action in gusty singing of "Many Ways to Skin a Cat," and "Money Isn't Everything" with Lahr, in addition to his soloing of "It's Easy When You Know How." Cathryn Damon scores as dancehall denizen for whom Blyden has a big yen.

Gerald Hiken, Robert H. Harris and Edward Greenhalgh form the trio of genial bewhiskered rogues, who are double-crossed. Jack Cole's picturesque choreography has as much dash as dancehall girls. Robert Lewis' brisk direction helps to fortify the fanciful book by Ian McLelland Hunter and Ring Lardner Jr.

Three Cheers for The Tired Businessman

Chicago, Dec. 27.

Arthur Cantor & George Marienthal presentation of a two-act (21 scenes) musical revue by Jay Thompson, David Axelrod, Portia Nelson and others. Staged by Bill Penn; choreography, Joyce Trisler; musical supervision and arrangements, Jay Thompson; production design, Boyd Dumrose; costumes, Andre. Features Tom Williams, Joanne Beretta, Linda Harris, Mary Jay, Jack Mette, Bob Shaver, Bill Starr, Matthew Tobin, Ellen Travolta. Opened Dec. 26, '63, at Happy Medium Theatre, Chicago; $4.95 top.

Logically, "Three Cheers for the Tired Businessman" should be a disaster, and on most stages it probably would be. But the Happy Medium Theatre, which started with nobler aspirations, has coasted nicely for three years with lavish presentations of college humor and probably will sustain itself six months or more on this tedious exercise in sophomorism. Unless, of course, time finally catches up with the formula, as some day it must.

The current revue is so imitative of its precedessors ("Medium Rare" and "Put It in Writing") that it hardly has a right to call itself a new show. If it differs in any way it is only in that the sketches are more childish, the comedy lower and more desperate, the sex less subtle and the cast less distinguished. On the other hand, the Happy Medium stage has never been so grandly or ingeniously outfitted with sets, nor the cast so dapperly costumed.

No less than 14 writers contributed material, all but three or four without either inspiration or wit. A bit of whimsical choreography called "Automation" by Bill Penn, a fetching song by Phil Springer called "What Became of Love", and a vaudeville sort of number, "Death of the Traveling Salesman," by David Axelrod and Sam Pottle, are about the only items that producers Arthur Cantor and George Marienthal might justifiably have used.

As for the rest, practically all has a familiar ring, and one sketch is an outright steal from an earlier show, with the lines revised and the setting changed from a coffee shop to an elevator stop in an office building. Although the skits and songs get some unity from a vague connection with the world of business and white collar culture, the main gambits haven't really changed. They're still psychiatry, sex for fun, sex for profit, modern living and, this time to only a slight extent, television.

Of the cast, the only effective performer is Tom Williams, who has been with the theatre since its inception. He's a thorough professional, with a genuinely funny way of making his lines sound better than they are. Matthew Tobin, Ellen Trovolta and Joanne Beretta show possibilities but are limited by the material. Bill Penn has staged it with a slick hand, but it's the same hand that staged the two previous shows, and this also contributes to the staleness. Les.

Doulens

Continued from page 2

cuses, of which he often wrote. His personal popularity was evident in the size of the throng that gathered in Norwalk. Two busloads of colleagues from CAMI made the journey. Personal friends recognized at the church included Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Edna Ferber, Eileen Heckart, Doria Seria, Heidi Krall, Romney Brent, Armina Marshall Langner, Paul Lavalle, Mary Hunter Wolf, Tossy Spikavosky, F. C. Coppicus, Gus Haenschen, Szymon Goldberg, Licia Albanese, Philip Dunning, Conrad Thibault, Leo Miller, Paula Landry.

Others showings were Constance Hope, Mary Curtis-Verna, Richard Skinner, Kurt Weinhold, Fred Schang who flew in from Barbados, Chris Schang and nearly all the CAMI echelon.

Friends are organizing a special Memorial Service for Doulens tomorrow (Thurs.) in Manhattan. Time: 5:30 p.m. Place: St. Clement's, 423 W. 46 St. Rev. Sidney M. Lanier.

Doulens, who was 56, had handled a series of opera divas on concert tours. One of these, Lily Pons, sent a blanket of red carnations, denying Doulens his wish that flowers be omitted and instead contributions be given the Musicians Emergency Relief Fund.

Interestingly, just a year ago in the 57th Anniversary Edition of VARIETY Doulens listed the "great women" of opera, musical comedy, legit and circus he had known and, in his word, again, "adored."

His farewell Christmas card was couched in the terms of circus. It read: "It has been almost eventide for me the past few months but with God's love and my friend's intercessions my own white top is almost gleaming again in the sunlight and my pennants flying in the breeze."

Scheduled B'way Preems

Hello, Dolly, St. James (1-16-64).
Dylan, Plymouth (1-18-64).
After Fall, ANTA-Wash. Sq. (1-23-64).
Man All Seasons, Center (1-27-64).
Habimah, Little Theatre (2-3-64).
Abraham Cochrane, Belasco (2-5-64).
Rugantino, Hellinger (2-6-64).
What Makes Sammy, 54th St. (2-8-64).
Fair Game, Cort (2-10-64).
Passion Josef, Barrymore (2-11-64).
Any Wednesday, Music Box (2-12-64).
Foxy, Ziegfeld (2-15-64).
Marco, ANTA-Wash Sq. (2-20-64).
Deputy, Atkinson (2-19-64).
Funny Girl, Winter Garden (2-27-64).
Charlie, ANTA-Wash. Sq. (3-12-64).
Pretzel Factory, O'Neill (3-25-64).
Anyone Whistle, Majestic (3-26-64).
High Spirits, Alvin (3-31-64).
Hamlet, Lunt-Fontanne (4-2-64).
Cafe Crown, Beck (4-7-64).
Royal Shakespeare, State (5-18-64).
Girl to Remember, Hellinger (5-26-64).
King and I, State (7-6-64).
Merry Widow, State (8-17-64).

WANTED
MODEL OR ACTRESS WITH BILLIARD EXPERIENCE
Attractive model or actress with definite ability to demonstrate and play billiards, as well as to talk to the public, required by national company for personal appearance in the New York area for nine days late February. Job pays $40 per [illegible]. Send photo, resume, and indication of billiard skill to Box V-3550, Variety, 154 W. 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10036.

BUSINESS CONFLICTS FORCE SALE
Completely equipped 200 seat Cinemascope Movie (winter). Stock Theatre (summer). Fly gallery, oil heat-air cooled, in New York State, 140 miles from NYC. Hot proposition, terms.
Box V-3552, VARIETY
154 W. 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10036

PRODUCTION ASSISTANT
Experienced Broadway production, playreading, publicity. Seek POSITION in theatre, TV, films or agency. Write Box V-3551, Variety, 154 West 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10036.

WILLIAMSON MUSIC, LTD.

Proudly Present Three American Successes In London's West End

RODGERS AND HAMMERSTEIN'S

SOUND OF MUSIC

Book by LINDSEY & CROUSE

Opened Palace Theatre, March 18, 1961

•

RODGERS AND HART'S

BOYS FROM SYRACUSE

Book by GEORGE ABBOTT

Opened Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, Nov. 7, 1963

•

RICHARD RODGERS'

NO STRINGS

Book by SAMUEL TAYLOR

Opened Her Majesty's Theatre, Dec. 30, 1963

WILLIAMSON MUSIC, LTD. 14, St. George Street, London, W.1, England

CASTING NEWS

Following are available parts in upcoming Broadway, off-Broadway, and touring shows, as well as ballet, films, industrial and television shows. All information has been obtained directly by the VARIETY Casting Department by telephone calls, and has been rechecked as of noon yesterday (Tues.).

The available roles will be repeated weekly until filled, and additions to the list will be made only when information is secured from responsible parties. The intention is to service performers with leads provided by the managements of the shows involved rather than to run a wild goose marathon. (This information is published without charge).

Parenthetical designations are as follows: (C) Comedy, (D) Drama, (MC) Musical Comedy, (MD) Musical Drama, (R) Revue, (Rep) Repertory, (DR) Dramatic Reading, (DB) Double Bill.

Legit

BROADWAY

"Baker Street" (M). Producer, Alexander H. Cohen (c/o Casting Consultants, 444 Madison Ave., N.Y.). Available parts: femme lead, 26-36, glamorous, intelligent, soprano, must sing well; male, middle-age, Dr. Watson; male, villain, Professor Moriarty; male, 26-36, handsome, light baritone or tenor; boys, 8-17, sing and dance, be able to do cockney accent. Mail photos and resumes c/o above address.

"Easy Does It." (C). Producers, Laurence Feldman & Jack Rollins (c/o Laurence Henry Company, 1545 Broadway, N.Y.). Available parts: femme lead, 30, attractive, flippant sense of humor; male, 30, zany, uninhibited writer; male, 35, alcoholic artist; male, 23, bright college grad; femme, 20, pretty, bright; femme, 25-30, office busy-body, comic; male; 28, pompous, efficient P.R. man; male, 55, blustering boss; male, 35, authoritative but nice army officer; male, type, no sense of humor; femmes, 40-60, comedy members of women's breakfast club. Mail photos and resumes to Michael Parver (c/o above address). Do not phone or visit.

"In One Bed (And Out the Other)" (F). Producers, Zev Bufman & Stan Seiden (234 W. 44th St., N.Y.). Available parts: Male, 25-30; femme, 36-39, attractive; male, 40, a philanderer; femme, 25, seductive, attractive; femme, 20, sexy;! femme, 55-59, comic character actress. All actors should have background in playing farce. Mail photo& resume to Kip Cohen, suite 900 c/o above address. Do not phone or visit.

OFF-BROADWAY

"Clerembard" (C). Producer, Equity Library Theatre (226 W. 47th St., N.Y.). All roles open. Sign up for readings Jan. 23-Feb. 3, on the ninth floor c/o above address.

"Jo" (M). Producer, Victoria Crandall (162 W. 54th St., N.Y.). Available parts: lead male, 20s, singer-dancer; male, 25-30, lyric baritone, tutor type; femme, 20s, beautiful, dark-haired, lyric soprano; mezzo, 35-40, lovely; character man, 40-45; character woman, 40-50. Mail photos & resumes c/o above address.

"Lady Be Good" (MC). Producers, Keith Holzman, Robert Kreis & Richard Pohlers (161 W. 54th St., N. Y.). Available parts: male, juvenile Astaire type; male leading man 20-30, singer; male, 30-40, comedia must sing; male, middle-aged; femme, 20s, must sing and dance; femme dancer-singer; chorus boys, girls, 20s. Mail photo and resume to Jack Levin c/o above address. Do not phone or visit.

"The Salad of the Mad Cafe" (R). Producers, Fred Martin, Ned Hendrickson & Danny Logan (145 Bleeker St., N. Y.). Available parts: Negro femme, young, singer-comedienne; male actor-singer; femme, singer-dancer-actress. Mail photo and resume to Danny Logan c/o above address. Do not phone or visit.

STOCK

Coconut Grove Playhouse (3500 Main Highway, Miami, Fla.). Accepting photos and resumes through agents only, for winter season of star package productions. Mail to Kip Cohen (234 W. 44th St., N.Y.).

TOURING

"Camelot" (M). Auditions tomorrow (Thurs.) for Equity soprano and tenor replacements for the Chicago National Co. Femmes at 12 noon and men at 1 p.m. Open call soprano and tenor at 2 p.m.—all at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre (205 W. 46th St., N.Y.).

Television

"Camera Three" (educational-dramatic series). Producer, CBS (524 W. 57th St., N. Y.; JU 6-6000); casting director, Paula Hindlin. Accepting photos and resumes of general male and female dramatic talent, c/o above address. No duplicates.

"Lamp Unto My Feet" (religious-dramatic series). Producer, CBS (524 W. 57th St., N. Y.; JU 6-6000); casting director, Paula Hindlin. Accepting photos and resumes of general male and female dramatic talent, c/o above address. No duplicates.

Ballet

Radio City Music Hall Ballet. Director, Marc Platt (c/o Radio City Music Hall, Rockefeller Center, N.Y.) Open call auditions for femme ballet dancers will be held Tuesdays at 2:30 p.m. at the Music Hall stage entrance (44 W. 51st St., N.Y.).

Cabaret

Riviera Hotel, Las Vegas. Auditions next Mon. (20) from 2-6 p.m. for showgirls, 5'5" tall at the Alvin Theatre (250 W. 52d St., N.Y.).

'Hamlet' in Today's Idiom A Hit at Eliseo, Rome; Re-do Still Runs 4 Hrs.

By WOLFE KAUFMAN

Rome, Jan. 10.

Shakespeare gets a double Roman salute for his 400th anni year, staged by Franco Zefferelli, designer-director who built himself an international rep without ever, previously, doing his stuff in Rome. The play "Hamlet" is at the Eliseo Theatre. The Verdi opera "Falstaff" at the Rome Opera House. Both are hopped-up stagecraft. Both drew mixed critical reaction. Both are doing good biz.

Rome is not much of a legit town. There are half a dozen houses for legit, but it is rare when a show goes more than a week or two here. Plays in Italy, usually, are figured for touring, with Rome no more than a one or two week stand enroute. But "Hamlet" was produced in big-time fashion, with what seems to be a difficult set (from a touring standpoint) and is in for a run. Caught in its fourth week, it is still getting a big ducat call. Which means it is, in Roman terms, a smash.

Gerardo Guerrieri wrote this new version of the play, sticking to the integral base, but switching the language to modern idiom. It is not slang, but current Italiano. At first blush it seems as though he has thus divested the play of its poetry. But this may not be true. He has divested it simply of its difficult linguistics. Famed speech comes out, "To be or not to be—what's the difference? Who cares?" The adaptor's view here was that, in this way, he brought the show more comfortably to audience level, so that they do not have to struggle with language subleties. As for the poetry, he left that to the actors and director.

Director Zeferelli, too, tries some tricks. His cast is all youthful, or youthful-appearing. Even the King is a handsome virile-seeming viking. (Although Polonius, of course, is older pot-bellied gent.) Zefferelli's actors are energetic, human; there is virtually no teeth-grinding and very few visual calisthenics. The costumes by Danilo Donati help on this. They are cleverly tricky. The are court costumes, but so made that the seem to be today's, or rather what youths today seem to favor. Thus Hamlet, for instance, wears a royal prince's togues . . . but if you don't look too closely, it could be blue jeans and a turtleneck sweater.

Cast is mostly good. Georgio Albertazzi is a fine Hamlet; he seems to know what he is saying and doing; he seems to understand the role; he makes it all believable. Mario Scaccia is an old-line Polonius; he gets his laughs Annamaria Guarnieri is a lovely Ophelia, though her mad scene is a bit on the rough side; throwing up her dress to show herself to the populace must have been the director's idea. Carlo Hintermann as Claudius, Allesandro Ninchi as Laertes, Massimo Francovich as Horatio, Adolfo Lastretti as Gildenstern, Davide Montemurri as Rosenkrantz, Gianni Galvotti as Osric are all good actors, while Anna Proclemer is lovely and real as the Queen. The Ghost is E. M. Salerno's voice on tape, unseen, a neat notion which works well.

It's a good show, but the four hours seem too long.

Levine's Establishment Sets Scholarship Fund

In connection with the Establishment Theatre Co., the off-Broadway project in which Joseph E. Levine is principal backer and a partner in its operation, the Embassy Pictures prez is also establishing a scholarship fund at a presently unidentified university.

Like the Establishment Co. itself, the scholarship will be aimed at the development of new talent for legit and pictures. It will finance the education of students of the performing arts and, following graduation, the students will be given the opportunity of taking part in productions staged by the operation, possibly leading to work in pictures.

The Establishment Co. has been formed by Levine, producer Ivor David Balding and writer-actor-producer Peter Cook. The latter two are responsible for the cabaret revue called "The Establishment," currently playing at the Strollers Theatre Club, N.Y. It will be over the Strollers that Levine and his partners plan to build a 199-seat theatre to house the operation, which is completely separate from the Strollers.

The new theatre, which is scheduled to open in March, will establish a subscription program which will attempt to develop and present writing, acting and directing talent. Levine's Embassy Pictures has first call on the properties which develop for use in films. Optioned plays under consideration for production in the house are "A Subject of Scandal and Concern," a three-act play by John Osborne; "A Resounding Tinkle," by N. F. Simpson, and some one-actors comprising Osborne's "Under Plain Cover" and Jules Feiffer's "Crawling Arnold."

Major emphasis will be placed on the optioning of properties from overseas as well as the U.S. Both the properties and acting talent developed by the project could find their way into Embassy films. Sybil Burton will serve as advisor

Road Grosses

Continued from page 65

(Robert Harris, Jeff Morrow, Robert Donley, Dick O'Neil), split-weeks.

Pajama Tops (C-RS) (June Wilkinson, Richard Vath), split-weeks.

Thousand Clowns (C-BT) (John Ireland), split-weeks.

CLOSED PREVIOUS WEEK

PHILADELPHIA

Conversations in the Dark, Walnut (D-T) (2d wk) ($4.80-$5.40; 1,349; $41,000) (Jack Warden, Sandra Church). Closed Jan. 4. Gross for week ending that date was $20,028 with TG-ATS subscription. A booking in Washington and a scheduled Jan. 30 opening in New York were cancelled so that the Theatre Guild production could be recast for a Sept. 28 Broadway bow. Jon Cypher and Barbara Barrie had appeared in the four-character presentation with Warden and Miss Church. Capitalization for the venture was $80,000, of which about $62,000 has thus far been spent.

SAN FRANCISCO

No Strings, Curran (MC-RS) (6th wk) ($6.50-$7.05; 1,758; $60,000) (Howard Keel, Barbara McNair). Ended tour here Jan. 4. Gross for week ending that date was about $32,075.

SPLIT-WEEK

Stop the World—I Want to Get Off (MC-RS) (Kenneth Nelson, Lesley Stewart). Ended tour Jan. 4 in Louisville. Gross for week ending that date was $47,760 for eight performaces split between Clowes, Indianapolis, and Brown, Louisville (TG-ATS).

Deputy

Continued from page 63

but he explains that his main aim was to make a statement about German responsibility in this terrible episode in human history. If German guilt did not really start till the killings began in 1941, it was still an awful crime, since most people just tried to ignore it.

Hochhuth declares that German youth today bears enoromus shame. The playwright was only 14 when the war ended, but he says that he feels deeply about what his elders did in the name of Germany.

YANK LEADS APPROVED; WORK OUT 'WOOLF' CUTS

London, Jan. 14.

With the blessing of British Actors' Equity Uta Hagen and Arthur Hill will play the leads in the London production of ""Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" which goes into the Piccadilly Theatre on Feb. 6.

Stars of the Edward Albee Broadway production are expected to do a 13 week season in London where Donald Albery will present the play in association with Richard Barr and Clinton Wilder.

Firm date for the domestic production of the Broadway show follows a nine month wrangle between Albery and the Lord Chamberlain's office.

Latter initially insisted on 67 cuts in the production. Producer Wilder, however, made some headway with the censor and author Albee later won a concession that if he submitted cuts to the Lord Chamberlain's office he was prepared to accept, they would receive "favorable consideration."

Clinching the affair, Albery again met the censor in November and finally got him to agree to allow the play to go on with two minor dialog changes.

New Cultural Exchange Program with Romania

Washington, Jan. 14.

The U.S. and Romania have signed a cultural exchange program to continue the agreement worked out last April. The setup will be based on the earlier plan, which among other things, opened the way for a commercial film exchange between the countries.

Besides films, the program will provide for visits by performing artists, both in groups and as individuals, with details to be worked out later.

'Pajama Tops' for Chi

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Zev Bufman and Stan Seiden have booked the Blackstone, Chicago, a minimum of five weeks for June Wilkinson in "Pajama Tops." The farce opens Jan. 28, on twofers.

BILLY DE WOLFE
Co-Starring in
"HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS WITHOUT REALLY TRYING"
Shaftesbury Theatre
London W.C.2, England

THE RACQUET CLUB OF WESTPORT

America's newest, largest (206' x 120' capable of seating 1500-2000 comfortably), most beautiful and most luxurious private indoor tennis club offers its complete physical facilities for theatrical use this summer.
Will entertain sound propositions from responsible parties. Write, wire, phone in strict confidence.

The Racquet Club of Westport, Inc.
1696 E. Main St., Westport, Conn.
In the heart of affluent Fairfield County
Phone in N.Y.C.: 212 PLaza 3-1305

Tuesday Evening
January 21, 1964—9 P.M.
WRVR - Radio - 106.7 F.M.
George Bernard Shaw's
"MAN OF DESTINY"
The Actors:
EDWARD CLAYMORE RENA VARON
HARVEY JASON DAVID ZIRLIN
Dir. and Narration by WAYNE CROFT

WANTED: SUMMER THEATRE
Rent or Sale—300 to 500 seats for resident Equity company.
ROY FRANKLYN
29 W. 65th St., New York 23
SC 4-9051

WILL SHARE PRODUCER'S OFFICE
Beautifully furnished three rooms with private bath, kitchen, piano. West 54th St. near 5th. $500 month. One year sub-lease. Immediate occupancy.
Phone LT 1-8880
New York

I AM LOOKING FOR YOU
If you have an interesting job in TV or Theatre for a creative young lady, 24, BA Eng, cultured, well-traveled, writing ability, type, fast-longhand, abundant sense of humor. Gal Fri type.
Box V-3556, VARIETY
154 W. 46th St., New York 10036

FOR SALE OR RENT
Outstanding property designed for Academy of Performing Arts — only 75 miles from New York in vacation area with weekly turnover 100,000 vacationers, in summer season. Contains 23 buildings—excellent 500 seat theatre, accommodation for over 100 students, all professional, vacation facilities.
WRITE FOR PARTICULARS
Box V-3555, Variety, 154 W. 46 St., New York 10036

WANTED SUMMER THEATRE
TO BUY OR RENT
Please Give Full Particulars
Box V-3557, VARIETY
154 W. 46th St., New York 10036

Thank you!

Life Magazine
"Lee Allen is certainly the season's new star find."

Jack Gaver— U.P.I.
"Lee Allen, a newcomer to Broadway, is the clown, and he gives a wonderful performance. Any producer who needs a leading comic for his next big musical should latch onto Allen right away. He has been on the nightclub circuit for more than decade, and he has all the moves and knowledge that only long experience in that field can give. Allen is a real find."

Bert Bacharach—
New York Journal-American
"B.B.'s best bet: GREAT newcomer Lee Allen, in 'Marathon 33'."

George Oppenheimer— Newsday
"Lee Allen, a young comedian who makes his debut as an actor and reveals a prodigious talent. Not since Ray Bolger has there been a more nimble comic dancer. His impersonations of anything from a baby to a chimpanzee are hilarious and faithful. What's more, he acts with an assurance that makes him worthy to play opposite Miss Harris."

J. H.— Cue Magazine
"Lee Allen who was discovered by June Havoc is superb. Broadway's most EXCITING NEW TALENT."

Leonard Probst— NBC-TV News
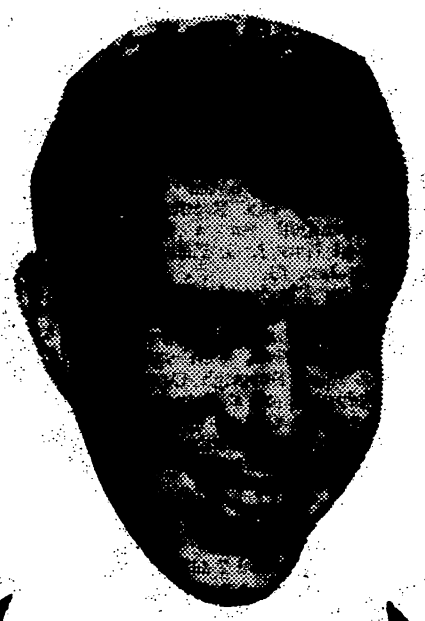
"Lee Allen is excellent as a clown."

Richard Watts, Jr.—
New York Post
"As the brash, clownish and self-centered partner, nightclub performer Lee Allen is EXCELLENT."



John McClain—
New York Journal-American
"Lee Allen is a skilled comedian of the rubber-faced variety and an EXCELLENT DANCER."

Whitney Bolton— Morning Telegraph
"Lee Allen, heretofore, a comic of the clubs, and the supper floors, makes his STUNNING stage debut as Patsy."

Taubman— New York Times
"He has an armory of funny faces and voices. Moves slickly as a hoofer and does a dazzling funny dance turn on roller skates."

John Chapman—
New York Daily News
"A ventriloquist, a mimic, a rubber-faced man, a jolly CLOWN and above all, an ABLE ACTOR."

William Glover— Associated Press
"Julie Harris' main rival for attention in the 37 member cast is Lee Allen making his legit debut. As the top banana of this travelling circus, Allen puts over a difficult part with conviction and emotional impact."

Norman Nadel—
New York World Telegram
"This is Lee Allen's first acting job— IT WON'T BE HIS LAST."

VARIETY
"VIVID portrayal by Lee Allen."
Hobe.

Ethel Colby—
Journal of Commerce
"A truly exciting performer with talent PLUS."

Tom Dash— Showbusiness
"Lee Allen is simply ENORMOUS and should win every acting award this season. He can MUG, he can do IMITATIONS, and he is a REMARKABLE dancer."

A Special THANK YOU to JUNE HAVOC
CHERYL CRAWFORD, LEE STRASBURG, JULIE HARRIS and THE ACTOR'S STUDIO

LEE ALLEN

Currently Appearing "MARATHON 33" ANTA THEATRE, New York

BUDDY ALLEN MANAGEMENT, INC.
65 West 55 St., New York 19, N. Y.
LT 1-8988

Broadway

Vaude agent Bernard Burke marked his 53d wedding anniversary Thursday (9).

Cathy Wyler, daughter of film director William Wyler who has lately been employed by Irwin Shaw, has joined the N.Y. retinue of Robbie Lantz, Ltd.

Hearst Corp., a Delaware company, has merged Willson Realty Corp., New York concern. McCauley, Henry & Brennan were the attorneys filing the certificate at Albany.

Harriet and Charles Ballon Foundation Inc. has been chartered as a non-profit membership corporation, with offices in New York, Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin, Krim & Ballon are attorneys.

Harold V. Varr promoted from Hotel Commodore director of sales to veepee and general manager of the Hotel Manhattan. He succeeds Erwin O. Schel recently appointed executive vicepresident of the Zeckendorf chain.

U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce this week disclosed its selections as "America's Ten Outstanding Young Men of 1963." Among them are George Stevens Jr., 31, director of the United States Information Service, and Ted Yates, 33, television producer.

Al Rosen, company manager of the second company of "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," was stricken with a heart attack last Friday night (10) in Tulsa, where the musical was playing a week's stand. He's in St. John's Hospital there. Milton Pollock is subbing as the show's manager.

Hollywood

William Dieterle back from three years in Europe.

Suzanne Pleshette and Troy Donahue on Jamaica honeymoon.

James Waters named veepee of Sammy Davis Jr.'s Tracemark Prods.

I. H. Prinzmetal, show biz attorney, staging one-man show of his oil paintings.

Rex Harrison and wife, Rachel Roberts, returned to their home in Portofino, Italy.

Edmund Hartmann set for third year as producer of Fred MacMurray "My Three Sons" teleseries.

Seymour Poe, in town for 20th-Fox studio huddles, accompanied by Joseph M. Sugar and Jonas Rosenfield Jr.

Ned Washington and Jimmy McHugh composing "Wonderful World of Beverly Hills" as official tune for city's 50th anni pragram.

Fred Hayman, formerly general manager of Beverly Hilton Hotel, succeeded William Ebersol as general manager of Ambassador Hotel.

Liberace, recuping for past month from kidney ailment, returns to activity with week stand at Royal Poinciana Playhouse, Palm Beach opening Feb. 3.

Ralph Wonders, operational aide to L.A. legit producer James A. Doolittle, surprise-partied by 100 friends on occasion of his 50th year in how biz and 68th birthday.

Rome

By Robert F. Hawkins
(Via Sardegna, 43; Tel. 479 316)

Robert Mitchum left after brief local o.o.

Sophia Loren to Switzerland for brief vacation.

Ty Hardin to Madrid after winding pic role here.

Pierre Bescaves of France's RTF-TV net, in town with wife.

Pier Angeli to Paris, then goes to Hong Kong for pic with Robert Hossein.

Pete Seeger in for program of American Folk Songs at Teatro Olimpico.

Andre Kostelauetz due back after recent local visit for television series.

Charlie Beal initiated new policy at Carpano Tavern on Via Veneto; plays nightly.

Samuel Bronston back to Madrid to resume chores on "The Circus." Ditto Claudia Cardinale.

Hugo Fregonese back in Rome after winding "Last Battle of the Apaches" (Serena-CCC) in Yugoslavia.

Richard Harris Monica Vitti, Michelangelo Antonioni due in from Ravenna for interiors on their "Red Desert" (Cineriz).

Rome's Experimental F i l m School inaugurated by Italo President Antonio Segni, first time country's prexy has done this.

Rita Pavone in guestint for RAI-TV, later does series of shows for Italo telenet, which celebrates its 10th year of videocasts this year.

Princess Soraya expected end of January to start work on "The Secret" for producer Dino DeLaurentiis and director Alberto Lattuada.

Jerome J. Berger here to invite leading Italo designers to appear at April Las Vegas International Fashion Festival. About 22 countries will be repped.

Bermuda

By Chummy Zuill
(P. O. Box 601, Hamilton)

The 40 Thieves Club is closed for January renovations. Final offering was Joe Louis' show with Joan Shaw.

Louis Armstrong two-nights-stand at the Rosebank theatre sellout. Terry Brannon & Co., who took the adventure jubilant.

Rudy Vallee's latest recording (Jubilee) titled "The Funny Side of Rudy Vallee," has been heard here by some of the folks who were on the tape as laughers in the audience. The recording is all of the "Vagabond Lover's" show of the night of July 26, 1963, given at the N.C.O. Club on Kindley Air Base.

Princeton Tigertones have appeared at Belmont Manor every College Week in Bermuda for a decade. Unfortunately when this year's spring vacation rolls around the Belmont still will be closed for renovations. Happily the continuity of Tigertones' appearances in Bermuda has been saved, come what may. Major Dick Plant, last manager of the Belmont, thought ahead and booked the Tigertones at Coral Beach Club this past Yuletide, and they were a big hit.

Johnny McAteer closed his Inverurie Hotel's "Showcase" on Saturday night (Jan. 4) won't open again until Feb. 11. Wally Dean was the last act to appear at Inverurie this season, and he gave superlative performances in spite of a painful jaw infection. McAteer stated, "This is the kind of man you're proud to work with." Inverurie is building extra public space. Important addition is the Salt Kettle Lounge, but the president and general manager of the resort, Conrad Engelhardt, says, "We now have the most luxuriously appointed lavatories on the Island."

Mpls.-St. Paul

By Bob Rees
(2208 Kenwood Parkway; 374-4015)

Firehouse Theatre has "The Immoralist," running it through to Feb. 2.

Theatre-in-Round Players' next production is "Drink to Me Only," opening Jan. 23.

John Harris "Ice Capades" opens annual St. Paul stand Feb. 3, remaining six nights.

Cornelia Otis Skinner in town last session for program of character sketches at Macalester (St. Paul) College.

Minneapolis Star's vet drama critic John K. Sherman, preparing to undergo surgery, will be away from his desk for two months.

Belgian Ambassador Baron Louis Scheyven to serve as grand marshal of the St. Paul Winter Carnival Grand Parade on Jan. 25.

Mazowske Dance Co., an entry in the U. of Minnesota Artists Course Series, to give recital at Northrop Auditorium on Jan. 21.

Pianist Andre Previn drew turnaway crowd of nearly 5,000 for his concert with Minneapolis Symphony at Northrop Auditorium last week.

Old Log Theatre, suburban Equity stock company, will follow current production of "Harvey" with Tennessee Williams' "You Touched Me," Jan. 23-Feb 2.

Theatre St. Paul offering doubleheader of one-act plays, Barry Pritchard's "Poor Butterfly" and Warren Winden's "One Whole Million," on next two weekends.

Joining John Raitt, Helen Gallagher and Jack Goode in St. Paul Civic Opera's current production of "Pajama Game" are Marguerite Shaw who was in the Broadway cast and Jane Johnston.

Thomas Nee named director of Center Opera Company of Minneapolis. New group will stage John Bow's "Venus and Adonis" and Dominick Argento's "Masque of Angels" at the Guthrie Theatre.

Oliver Rea, managing director of Minnesota Theatre Co. and member of U.S State Department's advisory committee on the arts back in Minneapolis after completing tour of European theatrical centres.

London

(HYDe Park 4561/2/3)

Broadway's Julie Tate made debut in London cabaret at the Society and is in for a threeweek stay.

Trevor Howard back into the West End as lead in Strindberg's "The Father" set for the Piccadilly.

Ted Lloyd and Smedley Aston acquired film rights to "Wrong Side Of The Sky," a Gavin Lyall bestseller.

Sir William Coldstream appointed chairman of board of governors at the British Film Institute in succession to Sylvester Gates.

Jack Hylton returns to the London theatrical scene by presenting "The Roses Are Real" at the Vaudeville opening Jan. 22. Michael MacLiammoir stars.

"Tom Jones" added "longest running pic at the London Pavillion" honor to its growing list of citations. Film has nearly $300,000 at the Picadilly venue in over six months.

Anthony Quinn signed for lead in 20th-Fox' "A High Wind In Jamaica," which is skedded to roll in June. Nunnally Johnson did the scripting chores and Sandy McKendrick is to direct.

Margaret Webster's solo presentation of "The Brontes" (dramatic portrayal of the Bronte sisters) being readied for a threeweek season at New Arts Theatre Club, starting Jan. 21.

Camden Playhouse Productions, new experimental theatre group headed by Charles Marowitz and Jonathan Clowes, won agreement from a local Borough Council for establishment of a Camden Playhouse on the site of an old music hall. Group now needs $23,000 to convert the building.

Chicago

(DElaware 7-4984)

The refurbished Buttery of the Ambassador West Hotel returned to a dance policy with the Don Davis Trio.

Goodman Theatre booked the Royal Shakespeare Theatre production of "The Hollow Crown" for Feb. 3-9.

Irv Tombach, former midwest adpub director for MGM, opened his own ad shop, Amusement Advertising Agency.

Palmer House last week preemed a new ground-floor restaurant, Palmer's Pub, with a turn-of-century decor.

"Calculated Risk," with John Payne making his Chi legit debut in starring role, opens night of Jan. 15 at Drury Lane Theatre for threeweek run.

Joe Cavalier now directing audience-participation twist show at Tony Paris' Show Lounge while Paris puts on an all-Latin show at New Living Room.

Carl Foreman currently in town to stir up interest in "The Victors," which opens Feb. 5 at the State-Lake. Joan Crawford is also making press rounds for "Strait-Jacket."

Allied Artists exchange chief Vic Bernstein will be installed as Chief Barker at a Variety Club dinner this week at Pick-Congress Hotel. Occasion will also mark presentation of a Variety Club check for $38,000 to its favorite charity, La Rabida Sanitarium.

Paris

By Gene Moskowitz
(80 Ave. Neuilly, SAB 07-12)

John Saxon, in town, mainly is seeking shows and pix.

New radio and tv building has five film projection rooms with over 50 studios.

More than 18,000 spectators already have seen the controversial play, "The Deputy" here. Last few shows have had no disturbances at all.

A. M. Julien will continue as head of municipally-owned Sarah Bernhardt Theatre. His Theatre of Nations Drama Fest will continue to headquarter there.

It appears the governmental Film Aid of 14% on internal grosses will go on after next July 1 despite any Common Mart headquarter ideas to the contrary.

Culture Minister Andre Malraux, with films under him, and Information Minister Alain Peyrefitte, with tv, confabing on tele and pix modus vivendi possibilities.

Playwrights Marcel Achard, Gabriel Arout and Andre Roussin have each written a one-acter to be performed during the next cruise to sunny climes of the passenger ship France.

Film players Pascale Petit and Giani Esposito, married in real life, doing their first play together via the revival of Gabriel Arout's "Le Bal Du Lieutenant Helt" which will tour Franee, Belgium and Switzerland.

Yves Ciampi prepping a pic that will be made partially on an aircraft carrier "Le Ciel Sur La Tete" (The Sky on One's Head). The French government has purportedly given him access to the carrier Clemenceau for the production.

Las Vegas

By Forrest Duke
(DUdley 4-4141)

Morris Lansburgh hosted 1,000 travel agents at the Flamingo.

Johnny Prophet now in Sands lounge, backed by Vido Musso.

Strip stars trekking to see "Hong Kong Scandals" at The Mint.

Roger Smith and personal rep Harold Hildebrand touring the Strip spots.

Harry Richman signed to join Pearl Bailey when she opens Feb. 20 at the Flamingo.

Jan Murray ringsided at the Joey Bishop-L.A. Dodgers Sands show with Rita (Mrs. Dick) Shawn, and Sherry (Mrs. Buddy) Hackett.

Monica Lind, the Liz Taylor lookalike who was the leading nude in Barry Ashton's Castaways revue, joined Tropicana's Folies Bergere.

Singer-impressionist Jack Larson, a solid click in his first appearance here, returned to Silver Slipper show with Hank Henry and Lili St. Cyr.

Producer Frederic Apcar of the Dunes' "Casino de Paris" reveals that his assistant, Audrey Napolitani, must speak nine languages to communicate with all members of cast.

Frankfurt

By Hazel Guild
(Fuerstenbergerstrasse 2; 59 57 51)

Film scripter Jimmy Henaghan in Germany to research two scripts he's sold concerning The Berlin Wall.

Erich Maria Remarque reported seriously ill with a circulatory ailment at his home in the village of Ronco, southern Switzerland.

For the 10th West German Cultural Film Week at Oberhausen from Feb. 3-8, 43 countries from East and West have provided 210 short films.

Wiesbaden production of the opera "The Crucible," brought to Europe by Eva Maze, invited to the International Opera Festival next fall in Paris.

Frankfurt television outlet has succeeded, for the first time, in sending a tv team to East Germany to do a documentary for its upcoming Third Channel, to start May 5.

German Institute for Film Friends in nearby Wiesbaden sending outstanding German film placards to Moscow for the June 1964 International Association of Film Archives' exhibition.

Top local jazz quintet, the Albert Mangelsdorff group, set for a three-month concert tour of Turkey, Iraq, Iran, India, Pakistan, Burma, Ceylon, Malaysia, Singapore, Hong Kong and Vietnam.

Wolf Citron, producer of the German tv series "The Television Court," setting his own tv film production firm, to shoot, among others, the televersion of the Dodererer novel "The Murderer Who Accompanies Us All" and a German-Indian coproduction.

Portland, Ore.

By Ray Feves

Jane Powell and her children spent a holiday vacation with her folks in nearby Longview, Wash.

Tom O'Loughlin has the Ames Bros. to head his 1964 Home Show in the Memorial Coliseum this month.

Last year, the city had six first-run hardtop theatres. This year, 11 hard tops are showing first run product.

"Sound of Music" set for a week at the Auditorium the middle of January. Northwest Releasing Corp. in association, with the Paramount Theatre is promoting.

MARRIAGES

Barbara Sherry to Jeremy Hyman, Dec. 31, Hollywood. Bride is the daughter of actress Bette Davis and the third of her four husbands, William Grant Sherry; groom is a veepee at Seven Arts Production.

Sandra Hadley to Dave Andre, Jan. 4 in Chicago. He's with WGN News there.

Judith Chalmers to Neil Durden-Smith, London, Jan. 3. Bride is a BBC announcer; he's a BBC outside broadcasts producer.

Denise Combe to Desmond Kelly, London, Jan. 4. Both are members of the London Festival Ballet Company.

Sandra Butlin to Harvey Riscoe, London, Jan. 3. Bride is a daughter of holiday camp king Billy Butlin; he's the son of ex-vaude comedians Johnny & Vi Riscoe, and works in his father's legit agency.

Sandra Craig to Peter Curtis, London, Dec. 24. Both are dancers with Ballet Rambert.

Anna Kutzko to Anthony Mann, London, Dec. 21. Bride is a dancer; he's a film director.

Grace A. Fenton to Allen V. Hamelin, Burlington, Vt., Dec. 28. He's a photographer for WCAX-TV in that city.

Suzanne Pleshette to Troy Donahue, Beverly Hills, Jan. 4. Bride's an actress; he's an actor.

Lynn Gail Drown to Bruce P. Buckley, Barre, Vt., Dec. 28. He's on sales staff of radio station WSNO in that city.

Claire Foran to Mike Kobluk, Corpus Christi, Tex., Jan. 7. He's a member of Chad Mitchell Trio.

Elizabeth W. Pope to Morton Frank, New York, Dec. 31. Bride is features editor of Good Housekeeping mag; he's v.p., publishers relations, for Family Weekly and Suburbia Today.

Leni Epstein to Howard Landorf, New York, Dec. 27. Bride is Goodson-Todman's casting director.

Ella Kramer to Lee Morgenlander, Queens, N. Y., Dec. 25. He's supervisor of marketing studios at NBC.

Norma Penny to David Mann, New York, Dec. 31. Bride is with Shapiro, Bernstein publishing firm; he's a songwriter.

Judith Foster to Frank Granat, New York, Nov. 15. He's coproducer of "Dylan" and "Any Wednesday."

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Erichs, daughter, Jan. 14, Mobile, Ala. Grandfather is VARIETY Sec.-Treas.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Procopia, son, Hollywood, Dec. 27. Mother, Marilyn, is a dancer; father's an actor.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Haskell, son, Burbank, Cal., Dec. 26. Father is a conductor-arranger.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brinegar, son, Hollywood, Jan. 3. Father's an actor, costar in "Rawhide" teleseries.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Cooper, son, Hollywood, Jan. 5. Father is staffer and son of head of Frank Cooper Agency.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Stone, son, Jan. 6, New York. Father is film writer-director.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Nelson, daughter, Jan. 6, New York. Mother is singer Betty Norman; father is a ventriloquist.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Weitsman, son, Hollywood, Jan. 6. Father is a Desilu veepee.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Weinrib, son, New York, Dec. 27. Father works in VARIETY composing room.

Mr. and Mrs. Rex Allen, daughter, Hollywood, Dec. 28. Father's the actor-singer.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Rosenberg, daughter, Dec. 22, New York. Mother is former model Avril Levy; father is a film editor at NBC.

Mr. and Mrs. Tim Gayle, daughter, Dec. 31, New York. Father is a personal manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Roberts, son, Chicago, Dec. 26. Father is sports director of WBBM-TV there.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Cooper, son, Jan. 5 in Chicago. Father is exec producer at WGN-TV there.

Mr. and Mrs. Donal Stanley, son, Dublin, Dec. 14. Father's chief of sponsored radio division at Radio Eireann.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Lewis, son, Hollywood, Jan. 7. Father's the comedian.

Mr. and Mrs. Ron Riordan, son, Hollywood, Jan. 7. Mother is Sherri Mattison, "Miss Wisconsin" in 1963 Miss Universe Contest; father's an actor-dancer.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kingston, son, Jan. 9, Staten Island. Father is in composing room at Rogowski, the VARIETY press.

Obituaries

Continued from page 61

Toscanini and in the Seventh Regiment Band of New York.

Born in Somerville, Mass., Taunton lived in Weston, Mass., for the last 30 years and was supervisor of music in the Weston school system.

HARRY MAYO

Harry Mayo, 65, leading man in silent pix, died Jan. 6 at Motion Picture Country Home, Woodland Hills, Calif, following a lingering heart illness.

Mayo, a film actor for over 40 years, began his career in 1914, appearing in "Birth of a Nation." He helped organize extra players into the Screen Players Union, repping extra, stunt and bit players, and was prexy of it in 1945.

Surviving is a brother.

CLAUDE MOORE

Claude O. Moore, 54, film booker in Commonwealth Theatres homeoffice, died Jan. 4 in Kansas City. He had undergone major surgery about a week before his death. Before joining Commonwealth in 1957, he had been in Fox Midwest Theatres regional office in Kansas City for 11 years. His wife, Virginia, also a member of the Commonwealth staff, survives, as does a foster son.

JAMES PERRY

James Perry, 78, a director of the Golden Green (Eng.) Hippodrome, until his retirement in November, was among the victims of the Lakonia disaster on Dec. 23. His body was landed at Gibraltar from a British aircraft carrier.

Perry had spent a lifetime in theatrical management, including a long association in cinema exhibition.

ROSE C. WALLACE

Mrs. Rose Crispano Wallace, 80, retired wardrobe mistress, died Jan. 5 in Bridgeport, Conn. Before retiring six years ago, she was wardrobe mistress with Rodgers & Hammerstein productions. Prior to that she was with the Shubert organization and the Ringling Bros. circus in a similar capacity.

Surviving are a daughter, brother and two sisters.

JESS ARNOLD

Jess Arnold, 46, author and former newsman, was found dead of a gunshot wound Jan. 2 on a ranch near Austin, Tex. He authored a novel, "Reunion in Barcelona," based on his experiences as a correspondent during the Spanish civil war.

Arnold also wrote the screenplay for "The Eagle and the Hawk."

JOHN J. FRANKLIN

John J. Franklin, 74, retired exhibitor who was associated with Paramount in New York in the mid-1920s, died Jan. 1, in Hollywood. He went to the Coast in 1928 as Fox West Coast division manager. Between 1934-43 he operated theatres in San Francisco and Hawaii.

Two daughters survive.

MAX COHEN

Max Cohen, longtime exhibitor in Liberty, Monticello and White Lake, N. Y., died recently in New York City. He operated the Liberty and Academy Theatres in Liberty, the Rialto and Broadway in Monticello, and the Ritz in White Lake.

His wife and a daughter, who is associated with the circuit, survive.

GRACE WEBER

Mrs. William (Grace) Moser, 70, formerly of the Three Weber Sisters vaudeville act, died Dec. 30 in Chicago.

Survivors include the other two members of the team, Laura and Carrie, and her husband, who worked with Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey circus for years.

FRANK HENRY

Frank Henry, 79, actor who trouped nearly 60 years, died Nov. 30 in London. He started with musicomedy tsurs for George Wilson's Gaieties.

Henry later had roles in shows for George Dance and George Edwardes. His last apearance of note was in "The Pick Up Girl."

MABEL ARNOLD

Mrs. Mabel Arnold, 75, onetime actress with D. W. Griffith's Fine Arts Co., died Jan. 7 in Hollywood. As a pioneer performer, she also worked with Dustin Farnum, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. She had been in retirement many years.

Son survives.

DONALD A. ROBB

Donald A. Robb, 61 Paramount production manager and assistant director for past 30 years, died Jan. 4 in Hollywood. He was a member of both the Directors Guild of America and Unit Production Managers Guild.

His wife, two sons and two daughters survive.

BOB BLAIR

Bob Blair, 69, field rep for Paramount on the Coast for years prior to his retirement about five years ago, died Jan. 8 at his Ojai, Calif., home. He was with Saenger Circuit in New Orleans before joining Par.

Surviving are his wife, son and daughter.

DOUGLAS W. PARADISE

Douglas (Dick) William Paradise, 81, onetime pianist for silent films and later a projectionist, died Dec. 24 in Calgary, Alta. His early film jobs had been at the Strathmore, Cascade and Coronation theatres in Alberta.

Five adopted grandchildren survive.

SOPHIA B. ENGSTRAND

Sophia B. Engstrand, 55, former Columbia Pictures script analyst and novelist, died of cancer Dec. 31 in Hollywood. She was the widow of novelist Stuart Engstrand.

Parents, son, daughter and four sisters survive.

ALAN MITCHELL

Alan Mitchell, 58, company secretary of British Lion, died recently in London. He joined British Lion in 1931, became chief accountant and then moved to the BLC appointment.

Survived by wife and two daughters.

ROSE WALLACE

Mrs. Rose Wallace, 80, wardrobe mistress for many years, died Jan. 5 in Bridgeport, Conn. She had worked with Barnum & Bailey circus, Shubert and Rodgers & Hammerstein shows until her retirement six years ago.

She was widow of Bert Wallace.

JOHN HOLLINGSWORTH

John Hollingsworth, 47, musical director, died Dec. 29 in London. Since 1950 he had, until recently, been orchestral conductor for the Covent Garden Opera and the Sadler's Wells Ballet companies.

He directed the music for the war film, "Target for Tonight."

OSCAR KOCH

Oscar Koch, 80, former Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra cellist, died Dec. 30 in Minneapolis. Prior to his retirement in 1953, he had been a member of other orchestras including the St. Louis Symphony.

Three sons survive.

ELISHA C. CLAYTON

Elisha C. Clayton, 81, cinema pioneer, died recently in Sheffield, Eng. He started Clayton's Bioscope 60 years ago, then entered the cinema trade.

He was a past chairman of Sheffield Cinematograph Exhibitors' Assn.

AGNES BLAIR

Mrs. Agnes Blair, 61, wife of retired film tradepaper editor-publisher Joe Blair and former film reviewer, died of cancer Jan. 3 in Hollywood.

Widower, to whom she was married 36 years, survives.

KEN COOK

Ken Cook, 49, stage and screen actor, died of a heart attack Dec. 28 in Hollywood. His last film was Alexander Productions' unreleased "Tell Me In the Sunlight."

His wife, former dancer Ginger Lou, survives.

ALYCE CANFIELD

Alyce Canfield, 45, longtime Hollywood fan mag writer, jumped to her death Dec. 28 on the Ventura Freeway in Encino, Cal.

Widower, William R. Jerome, survives.

L. E. (LOU) HEAD

Lewis E. (Lou) Head, 56, former Long Beach, Calif., and Hawaii newsman, died Jan. 1 at his Wailuku, Maui Island, home.

Wife and three children survive.

DENIS KESTER

Denis Kester, film executive with Harry Adler's setup for 18 years, died recently in London.

Survived by wife, two sons and two brothers.

HERMAN BEIERSDORF

Herman Beiersdorf, 68, southern division manager for American International Pictures, died of a heart attack in Dallas Jan. 9.

Wife and two daughters survive.

Wife, 77, of retired Paramount Pictures district manager Ralph C. LiBeau Sr. died Jan. 5 in Kansas City. Before retiring in 1954, LiBeau was in charge of the Kansas City, Minneapolis, Omaha and Des Moines territories. Son also survives.

Mother, 91, of Bing and Bob Crosby, died Jan. 7 in Santa Monica, Calif., after a long illness. She was also the mother of Everett, Larry and Ted Crosby, and two daughters, Mrs. Catherine Mullin and Mrs. Mary Rose Pool.

Frank Prior, 75, film publicist and manager, died Dec. 27 in London. For a time he was publicity manager of Associated British Pictures and later managed personal appearances.

Frank Williams, 61, booker for Benton Theatres for some 30 years, died Jan. 3 in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., after a long illness. Wife, two sons and two daughters survive.

Reg Waddoups, concert artiste magician known mainly in the Midlands with an act called Electrickery, died in a car crash recently in The Midlands, England.

John Hollingsworth, 47, conductor with the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden and Sadler's Wells ballet company, was found dead Dec. 29 in his London home.

Horace ("Bertie") Saunders, 78, with Metro since 1922 and a commissionaire at London's Empire Theatre since it opened in 1928, died Dec. 27 in London.

Wife, of longtime film editor Harry D. Gerstad, died Dec. 28 in Hollywood. He's supervising editor on "Breaking Point" teleseries.

Wife, 39, of Paul Hunter, producer at WBKB-TV in Chicago, died Dec. 21 in that city. Two daughters and mother also survive.

Josip Gostic, 63, tenor with the Vienna State Opera, died Dec. 29 in Ljubljana, Yugoslavia. He guested at many Salzburg festivals.

Bill Wilmot, 21, guitarist and leader of The Southern Gentlemen group, was killed in an auto crash Dec. 21 at Raynes Park, England.

Jean Aylwin, 78, veteran actress, died Jan. 2 in Birchington, England. She played lead roles prior to World War I and in the '20s.

Husband, 66, of Barbara Cartland, novelist and playwright, died Dec. 29 in Hatfield, Eng. Survived by wife and two sons.

Father, 83, of Eva Langbord, casting director of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp, died Jan. 8 in Toronto.

Mother, 79, of Edward P. Morgan, ABC News commentator, died Dec. 29 in Walla Walla, Wash.

Father, 65, of comedian Dick Gregory, died Jan. 4 in San Francisco after a long illness.

Abdul Rahman ("The Great Rahman"), Royal Indian magician, died recently in England.

Son, 8, of actor Brian Keith, died of pneumonia Dec. 20 in Santa Monica, Cal.

Father, of actor Bryan O'Bryne, died of cancer Dec. 23 in Plattsburg, N. Y.

Bridger Lewis, 82, magician and "Punch" man, died Dec. 19 in England.

Mother, of actress Jean Willes, died in Hollywood Dec. 29.

Sister, of actor Sammy Smith, died Jan. 10 in Brooklyn.

Palm Beach & Classless Society

Continued from page 2

theatre, a one-time top-billed hoofer of Keith-Albee days.

The industrialist, ex-hoofer-headliner, is Frank J. Hale, president of the National Yeast Corp., whose activities on Broadway—as producer and talent discoverer (Geraldine Page)—philanthropist and patron of the arts—has projected him front-and-centre as the man who is giving a second wind to this posh resort which, for decades, lay victim of its own inertia.

What Hale did for Palm Beach, was to establish only a few years ago, the Academy Royale Theatre, a non-profit educational institution with the objective to develop a program for the performing arts, which would supply events of outstanding artistic quality to the Royal Poinciana Playhouse—also a Hale enterprise.

The Playhouse, a sparklingly beautiful intimate theatre, also developed a loyal following by members of the Palm Beach set, who SRO'd the house when attractions featuring such as Helen Hayes, Walter Slezak and other top names, were played.

Completing the "culture complex," is the Celebrity Room which adjoins the Playhouse, and which has become THE watering spot for the after-theatre crowd who have witnessed the biggest nitery names as the attractions, and the patrons at almost every next table as extra-added.

All this, of course, is the work of Frank Hale, but there's more by others complementing the former's efforts, which is still moving dramatically to change the face and pace of Palm Beach.

In order of importance, this is what has happened:

(1) The presence of the Joseph P. Kennedy clan at the ex-ambassador's estate, since the presidency of John F. Kennedy began and until his assassination, brought the White House's dynamic verve and style of the Kennedy era to Worth Avenue and on Coconut Drive.

(2) On the latter thoroughfare, the $10,000,000 Palm Beach Towers, the luxurious apartment hotel built on the site—on the shore of Lake Worth—of Henry Flagler's legendary Royal Poinciana Hotel, has become the headquarters of celebs and VIP's from the ranks of showbiz, politics, the arts and industry. Name 'em, and they've stayed at the Palm Beach Towers at one time or another.

(3) The decision by the Professional Golfers Association to move to the Palm Beach area, with two top-quality 18-holers completed in recent weeks, and certain to draw the putting crowd from all parts of the continent.

(4) The opening of the new, posh Lucayan Beach Hotel in Grand Bahama, approximately 20 minutes by air from PB. This new hostelry is a jewel in itself, but undoubtedly its main glitter is the casino which is bound to attract gambling customers by the thousands.

Unquestionably the well-heeled set will stay in great numbers at a poshery like the Palm Beach Towers, where they can sun, swim, golf and kibbitz during the day; take in a top Broadway show with a top Broadway name at the Playhouse next door; wind up the evening in the Celebrity Room, and on the next day or the one following, commute to the chemin de fer or other tables in Grand Bahama, in the same way as thousands commuted to the Havana tables from Miami, before Castro and Dade County made it tough to make a betting buck.

In a sense, Frank Hale's contribution to the culture and entertainment life of Palm Beach, is a complementary contribution to that of the Palm Beach Towers, whose president is Alfred N. Miller, one of Montreal's important contractors and a top-level figure of the philanthropic community of Canada's biggest city.

(Canadians, apparently, are leading the development parade in the sunny south and the Caribbean: The main figures behind the financing and Grand Bahama operation, are also Canadians, both originally from Toronto: Al Manus, and Lou Chesler, who's w.k. in the film and general showbiz fraternity.)

The Towers has its own Keyboard Room with excellent cuisine and after-hours music and cocktailing, and for anyone still bitten with the romantic theatre bug, all he has to do is walk into the hotel's coffee shop during the day, and he'll be living in the Wonderful World of Young Talent, with the bright guys and gals of the Academy Royale next door, trading trade talk on the ballet, theatre and general art fraternity.

So again it all boils down to what Frank Hale has done for showbiz, generally, and the creative arts, specifically, by establishing the Academy Royale, the Playhouse, and contributing to such philanthropies as cancer and geriatrics, which won this ex-hoofer (remember his theme song, "Chinatown, My Chinatown"?) honorary degrees.

It can also be taken for granted that the changes in Palm Beach will be largely centered in the Palm Beach Towers sector, because of its prominence as a winter headquarters for the White House staff when the late President visited, and the scene of famous news conferences datelined Palm Beach.

Groundbreaking

Continued from page 1

stars will make their U.S. "finales" there before jetting to foreign capitals for performances.

4. If some extra money becomes available, a program for artists in residence will be undertaken.

Roger L. Stevens, trustee chairman, said it would serve a vital national need that is recognized both by Congress and the country at large.

"The arts are one of our greatest national resources," Stevens said.

"The Center will encourage and foster the growth of the arts in our time and conserve the arts of the past.

"The Center will be dedicated to the performance of the best from classical and contemporary arts throughout the world; the enlargement of a national audience and its appreciation of these arts; the provision for a continuing and sustained climate in which the creative arts are fostered and recognized."

The new-look in the Center's future followed the quick action by Congress to pinpoint it as a memorial in honor of the man who gave it the greatest push.

In the same generous vein, Congress earmarked $15,000,000 to be matched by another $15,000,000 in private funds — to construct the Potomac River Bank Center.

And with an eye toward alleviating un-entertaining traffic jams, Congress coughed up another $15,400,000 in a Federal bond issue for a 1,600 car subway garage.

On paper, it would seem that trustees need only raise another $1,500,000 to qualify for the Congressional offer. But included in the $13,500,000 they have is the $5,000,000 promised by the Ford Foundation only on condition that $15,000,000 be raised in private funds. "In other words," said Stevens, "we must raise $15,000,000 ourselves to get Ford's $5,000,000.

But the added funds will be a welcomed nest egg to the building committee which already fears that construction costs will balloon upward before the Center opens.

Stevens said the U.S General Services Administration is already preparing contracts to permit architect Edward Durrell Stone to work up preliminary blueprints for contractor's bidding.

Buyers & Snow

Continued from page 1

received quite a few cancellations. However, as is the case in severe snowstorms exurbanites staying in New York generally compensate to some degree for the bowouts.

The New York Times on Monday carried nearly two full pages of buyer registrations. To many cafes and restaurants this indicates a better business potential than some conventions. However, the snowstorm ruined that bonanza.

THE TELEGOONS

IT'S CRAZY. OF COURSE

THIS IS BRITISH

NEW READERS BEGIN HERE

Featuring the many voices of

Mr Peter Sellers

Mr Spike Milligan

Mr Harry Secombe

in 26 enthralling episodes of 15 minutes each, including such incredible adventures—as

"The Booted Gorilla" — "The Terrible Revenge of Fred Fu Manchu" — "The Fear of Wages" — "The Whistling Spy Enigma"—"Tales of Old Dartmoor" etc., etc., etc.

RECD FEB 10 1964

Any persons concerned with the whereabouts of the Telegoons may hear of something to their advantage by communicating at once with—

BBC tv enterprises

LONDON / NEW YORK
OTTAWA / TORONTO and, of course, down under
SYDNEY

BBC tv enterprises

BUT THIS IS THE END

FILMS | VIDEO | TV FILMS | RADIO | MUSIC | STAGE

VARIETY

PRICE 35¢

Published Weekly at 154 West 46th Street, New York, N. Y. 10036, by Variety, Inc. Annual subscription, $15. Single copies, 35 cents.
Second Class Postage Paid at New York, N.Y.
© COPYRIGHT, 1964, BY VARIETY, INC., ALL RIGHTS RESERVED
Vol. 233 No. 9 NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1964 96 PAGES

B'WAY LEGIT'S AGE OF ANXIETY

N. Y. Fair's '64 Skidoo for Top Talent; Accent Novelties, 'Music Hall' Layouts

The New York talent agencies are on the verge of writing off the New York World's Fair as an outlet for top names. According to all indications, say the percenters, the various Fair shows will be populated by either scale performers in the principal roles, or by acts who are not getting too much above scale. The novelty acts will probably be the highest paid performers in the expo.

As of now, the agencies point out, the only spot in the Fair which will have names will be the Spanish Pavilion, where concert talent will prevail.

The datediggers claim that up to now they have done very little business with the various Fair shows. It's true that various acts have been auditioned, but generally the Fair impresarios are holding off in the pacting of names that would make the Flushing show an interesting matter for the agencies.

The producers are investing heavily in production. Most shows will be of the spectacle variety and accent will be on mass performers rather than on individuals.

In short, every variety or musical show at the Fair hopes to have a policy similar to that of the Radio City Music Hall, N.Y., where stage names are not the attraction. The producers assert that staging and building costs are so high at the Fair it would be impossible to splurge for talent.

The major names to be marqueed at the Fair, according to the agencies, will be behind-the-scenes talent. Thus Walt Disney will get billing at three shows, General Electric, Ford and Pepsi Cola; director Morton Da Costa will be billed at "To Broadway with Love" while Leon Leonidoff & Meyer Davis will be uppermost on the

(Continued on page 80)

Straight-C's for BB

Brigitte Bardot remains undisputed Queen of The C's, with the Legion of Decency's condemnation last week of her newest import this side, "Love On A Pillow"

That gives the French star a total of seven features on the Legion's C-list.

N. Y. Central As Act Buyer With Inn Takeovers

Act buying could be part of running a railroad in the near future. According to present indications, the New York Central may become one of the largest hotel operators in New York. Several inns which the line will take over are now important talent users.

The railroad's policy is to operate the hotels it now owns as the present leases expire. It will retrieve the Roosevelt Hotel on May 1, with expiration of the lease held by Hotel Corp. of America.

It will get the Commodore Hotel back from HCA in 1967, but it will have to wait "quite a while"

(Continued on page 74)

Casting 'The Bible' With Famous Faces

Rome, Jan. 21.

Peter O'Toole, Richard Burton, Marlon Brando, Paul Newman, Maria Callas, Francoise Prevost, Annie Girardot, Jeanne Moreau —these are some of the first names mentioned in connection with the upcoming "The Bible" project by John Huston and producer Dino DeLaurentiis at a press confab called here this week to officially launch the oft-announced project.

Huston and DeLaurentiis, pausing between location surveys in Yugoslavia and (upcoming) Sicily, Naples, Lebanon, Egypt, and Morocco, confirmed to a crowded assembly at the new DeLaurentiis Studio, a half-hour drive from Rome, that pic would roll in late April in single-negative Cinerama and color, would cost about $11,000,000, would in a little over three hours running time cover "area" from Genesis to and including Abraham ("myth to legend, to pre-history"), and would be completed by the end of 1964 on various Mediterranean area locations as well as the DeLaurentiis Studio here.

Besides Christopher Fry's script, there are so far no definite names

(Continued on page 74)

Rudolph Friml, 84, Bows New Chi Diskery With LP Of His Tunes Self-Played

Chicago, Jan. 21.

A new record label, Nan, headquartering in Chi, is bowing with five releases including an album by 84-year-old composer Rudolph Friml playing 12 of his own compositions on the piano. It's the first such disk for the composer of "The Firefly," "Rose Marie" and "Vagabond King," operettas which date back as far as 1912.

Other releases on the new label include two singles, "Winter Sun" by Tony Martin b/w "Bellisima," an organ instrumental, and "What's Your Hurry, Beatrice?" b/w "News Beat" by the Ben Oakland orch.

Oakland, who is also a&r man for the label, has put together an album of tunes associated with baseball. It's called "Baseball's Best" and is recorded by Bob Mitchell at the organ.

PROBES, CURBS, AND BLAH B.O.

By JESSE GROSS

Broadway legit is going through one of the most traumatic periods in its history.

Not only has Broadway legit been suffering this season from acute boxoffice anemia, but there's also been the added pressure of widespread investigation into alleged irregular business practices in the theatre, as well as the introduction last Monday (20) in the N. Y. State Legislature of three bills proposed by N. Y. Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz to "eradicate" abuses uncovered by his office in an 11-month probe of legit operations on and off Broadway.

Lefkowitz, who launched his investigation for the stated purpose of mapping corrective legislation of any malpractices that might be found by his office, has also turned over what could be incriminating information in connection with his findings to Asst. District Attorney

(Continued on page 88)

More Giddyap Films in 1964

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

A slight upsurge in the number of westerns going into distribution and/or production this year seems in prospect. Compared to 1963, when only two big-budget westerns ("How The West Was Won" and "McLintock") went into release, the 1964 lineup is fat indeed.

Already completed and awaiting release are Stanley Kramer's "Invitation to A Gunfighter," Yul Brynner starrer (United Artists), and John Ford's "Cheyenne Autumn," which has James Stewart toplined (Warners). Due to start production this month is Columbia's "Major Dundee," with Charlton Heston. Being pencilled in by 20th for a summer start is "The Day Custer Fell," mentioned as one of the six roadshow pix which that company will film this year.

In addition to these, there are seven more western titles listed by the majors as "probables" for 1964 production: "The Undefeated" (Warners), "Guns of Rio Conchos" (20th), "The Circle" (20th), "The Last Hill" (Metro), "Bent's Fort" (Col), and "Hallelujah Train" and "The Law and Tombstone," both on John Sturgis' slate for the Mirisch Co. and UA release.

Meanwhile, Metro has "Mail Order Bride" going into release right now, and "The Gunfighters at Casa Grande" for release this spring. Paramount is readying release of "The Law and The Lawless" and Universal "Renegade Posse," an Audie Murphy western and Par also will make "Nevada Smith."

Rowan, Negro Envoy, Named As New USIA Chief Succeeding Murrow

By LES CARPENTER

Washington, Jan. 21.

Carl Rowan was named director of the U. S. Information Agency yesterday (Tues.) by President Johnson.

Rowan, a Negro and a former award-winning newspaperman, is currently U.S. Ambassador to Finland, although he has been in Washington since last weekend.

Edward R. Murrow has resigned as USIA chief for health reasons. Murrow recently underwent a serious lung cancer operation.

As Deputy Undersecretary of State for Public Affairs before he was named to his ambassadorship a year ago, Rowan made several trips abroad with Johnson while he was Vice President. On one of these trips, they circled the globe. Rowan handled the Johnson press briefings during the traveling, and it was an open secret that Johnson was extremely impressed with Rowan.

Last summer, Johnson visited Finland while Rowan was the Ambassador there. Rowan flew back to Washington for a conference with the new President only 48 hours after President Kennedy's assassination.

At that time there was widespread speculation that Rowan would be named White House

(Continued on page 58)

No Commercials

A sign posted in the Atlanta Public Library admonishes: "Books do not pause to deliver a message from their sponsors."

It is credited to Martha Anne Kendrick.

$283,000,000 In U. S. Tax From Show Biz 'Items'

Washington, Jan. 21.

To the Government's top economists, the 12 months between July 1, 1964, and June 30, 1965, look like the biggest yet for sales of radio and television sets, phonographs, disks and musical instruments.

The period is the new Federal fiscal year, and President Johnson's new budget, unveiled today (Tues.), estimated the tax take on the group of show biz items will reach $283,000,000. In the current fiscal year, extending until June 30, the tax yield is expected to reach $248,000,000. Between mid-1962 and mid-1963, it was $232,000,000.

The budget contains no breakdown between the group of items, but lists them in a lump sum.

Admission taxes to all events, including entertainment, sports, etc., but excluding night club cover charge, are anticipated to reach $53,000,000 in the next Federal fiscal year, compared with expected tax earnings of $47,000,000 in this fiscal year and actual collections of $43,000,000 the fiscal year previously. The budget doesn't break down admission taxes by specific categories.

Same Ghost for Jack Ruby & Mrs. Oswald's Memoirs

Berlin, Jan. 21.

James Wakefield Burke, U. S. author ("The Big Rape," "Lill Marleen") residing in Berlin, says he has been contracted (by telephone) with the lawyers of Jack Ruby and Marina (Mrs. Lee Harvey) Oswald to go to Dallas and write the memoirs of "those two notable people." He expects to stay in Dallas at least until March. Burke's family lives here. [Ruby, of course, is the nitery owner, now on trial, who killed Oswald, named assassin of President Kennedy.]

Burke's last writing job was the script for Artur Brauner's CCC production, "Old Shatterhand," which stars Lex Barker and Guy Madison. He also has recently finished another novel, "The Last Southerner," which Fountainhead may publish.

Godfrey, Ex-Lung Cancer Patient, Feels the Public, Not Govt., Should Decide

Arthur Godfrey, who has had a personal bout with lung cancer, an ex-cigaret smoker, a former touter for Chesterfields, feels that the U.S. Government, after rendering its cigaret-cancer report as it did, should now step back and let the people decide whether they do or don't want to smoke.

"I am not in favor of Government legislation against smoking. I feel the same way about anti-alcohol legislation." Godfrey went on to explain that he belongs to the body of opinion which holds the less government the better.

"The Government did its job of educating. I think that the athlete on television who now inhales deeply praising the cigaret will be laughed at." They'll be laughed off the air, he opines.

Godfrey recalled way back in '53, while recovering from a hip injury, he was found to be allergic to the inhalation of smoke of any sort, cigarets, cigars, pipe. At the time, he added, he had the Chesterfield account. "I had to give up cigaret smoking and I told the then president of Liggett & Myers, Ben Few, that I couldn't stand before the cameras inhaling Chesterfields. I was willing to say Chesterfields

(Continued on page 60)

Copyright Nearly Ready for Congress, Doubtful If It Will Please Anybody

Washington, Jan. 21.

A copyright revision bill is expected to be in the hands of Congress this Spring following last week's final meet of the blue-ribbon revision panel. Advisory group of the nation's copyright experts have been hashing out revision proposals since 1955 with its work culminating in eight meetings from last January to now.

Even though a draft bill is headed for Congress, the revision panel still has some problems and must reach a meeting of minds with or without formal conferences.

Despite the panel's overall success in reaching compromises on revision, sharp differences remain on the crucial issue of whether ownership rights in copyright should revert back to authors after a certain period of being held by film companies or book publishers.

Authors League of America and user group reps such as publishers and film companies have threatened to oppose a revision bill in Congress unless the reversion of copyright to creator is tailored to their concepts of justice.

Members from the panel have been negotiating privately since last summer but have barely begun to stake out any areas of agreement on the issue. The danger, as seen by the U.S. Copyright Office, is that a revision bill will go to Congress lacking united backing on this

(Continued on page 93)

Reversing the Seasons

Not to be taken as a flat reversal of former show biz, but still it's partially true that non-name performers and musicians of late years find that the warmer period, June to October, is their best. Conversely, it is much harder to make out in winter, once the main season.

Explanation lies in spread of summer theatres, growth of touring industrial revues and the rise of airconditioned entertainment generally.

NEGRO HEADS ALBANY'S CORRESPONDENTS ASSN.

Albany, Jan. 21.

The Legislative Correspondents Assn., at its annual meeting (8) in Albany, elected Layhmond Robinson, of New York Times, as president. He is the first Negro to hold that office in Association's 64-year history.

Robinson succeeded Robert T. Gray, of the Associated Press, who was named to the board of directors.

Other officers chosen are: William M. Ringle, Gannett News Service first vice president; Stanley J. Hinden, News Day, second vice president; Charles Dumas, Associated Press, third vice president; Edward W. Bates, Troy Record Papers, secretary; Raymond I. Borst, Buffalo Evening News, treasurer. Bates and Borst were re-elected.

Michael F. Keating, formerly of AP and now of New York Herald Tribune, was also made a director.

March 14 was tentatively set as the date for the annual dinner-show sponsored by LCA.

Illness Forces Russo Ballet to Delay Its Israeli Date 24 Hrs.

Tel Aviv, Jan. 21.

No matter how successful the performers of the Russian ballet and folk artists Berioska are, they could never top the drama and suspense surrounding their tour of Israel and performance schedule. Preceding their arrival in Israel, for a 10-day tour, five hours before curtain-time, their visit had been 'on,' 'off' and 'on' again, three times within three days. The Berioska dancers had been performing in Athens, Greece, when Israeli impresarios Bogatyr and Ori, responsible for most of the Russian and eastern-European artists arriving in Israel, contacted them to negotiate a quick tour upon completion of their trip to Greece.

The company agreed, and while contracts were cabled to Moscow for ratification by the central Russian government agency, announcements had been made in Israel and ads went out, undating performances but announcing sale of tickets. Two days later, dates had been set and within two days 13,500 tickets, for three initial performances at the Mann Auditorium here, had been sold to

(Continued on page 89)

Indonesian Crisis Hits New Singapore Hotel

Singapore, Jan. 21.

The Indonesian confrontation against the formation of Malaysia has affected the occupancy of the September-opened Hotel Singapore Intercontinental by "at least 15%" as per annual report of the hotel's board of directors presented to the hotel company's second annual meeting. Same report states that since it began to function this September, the hotel has run on an average of 48% occupancy.

The board, however, is optimistic that occupancy will improve considerably in 1964. The hotel's Four Lions Restaurant, pebble bar, raya cocktail lounge and coffee house have been well patronized by locals and tourists. Meanwhile the Hilton Hotel enterprises will be building a hotel here and one in Kuala Lumpur later this year.

JUDGE
ROBERT J. BURTON

Newly elected President of BMI, says:

"PAUL ANKA, an affiliated writer of BMI, is doing a great job introducing American Music around the World making our American music an International language.

"PAUL ANKA quite an asset to BMI a great talent and an affable personality coupled with genuine modesty."

Kluxers Parade But Racism Off

Altanta, Jan. 21.

Mayor Ivan Allen Jr, stated last week that 14 Atlanta hotels and motels will "honor all (room) reservations" including those made by Negroes. This desegregation step marked the first time that public accommodations facilities involved in such a move have agreed to the public disclosure of their names.

In making the names of these places public, the mayor declared in a statement that a number of the establishments "have been following this practice for several months without publicity."

Hotels and motels accepting all citizens' money:

Air Host Inn, Atlanta Americana Motor Hotel, Atlantan Hotel, Atlanta Cabana Motel, Dinkler Plaza Hotel, Hilton Inn, Peachtree Manor Hotel, Piedmont Hotel, Riviera Motel.

Howard Johnson's South Expressway Motel, Howard Johnson's North Expressway Hotel, Howard Johnson's Northwest Expressway

(Continued on page 95)

Mpls. Niteries Find Sure Hypo for Male Biz: Bikini & Lingerie Fashion Shows

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Trend of the tonier niteries here toward exhibition of scantily clad glamor gals as an added lure for patronage, especially that of the male sex, is growing. The policy began last year as a means of trying to offset a biz dropoff after the Internal Revenue Bureau imposed its entertainment income tax deduction restrictions. Bonifaces believe the partially draped

(Continued on page 82)

Robert Ryan's Spiel

Hanover, N.H., Jan. 21.

House Un-American Activities Committee was denounced by Robert Ryan, the film actor, in a lecture at Dartmouth College recently under sponsorship of the Hanover Committee for SANE, an organization advocating total nuclear disarmament. Ryan, graduated from Dartmouth in 1932. He told his Dartmouth audience:

"I'm not a Communist, or a historian, but only trying to tell you that my own experiences and involvement lead me to think the way I do."

Ryan heads the United Federalists of Southern California, and together with Steve Allen, founded the SANE committee in Hollywood.

DUKE TO O.O. FOX PIC

London, Jan. 21.

20th-Fox's "Move Over Darling" selected for the February 24 Royal Film Performance at the Odeon, Leicester Square.

Duke of Edinburgh is due to attend.

'Yes, Stars More Sinful'

"Mirrors of Your Mind" syndicated column recently posed the "true" or "false" question on "Movie Stars Are More Immoral." "True" stated the column. Explanation: "There are three reasons why movie stars are more morally vulnerable than others. First, men and women who go into motion pictures tend to need and want a great deal of personal adulation. This can lead to extreme conduct that the ordinary person is not tempted to indulge in. Secondly, a movie star's publicity agents balloon up his life so that he loses a sense of personal integrity. Third, the nature of the movie community makes it easier to step over lines of behaviour that would not be allowed in your neighborhood and mine."

Interrogation was illustrated with the sketch of a long-tressed blond, resting on one elbow, a cigarette in a long lighter and a lei-like wreath draped diagonally over her bare shoulder.

Mandy & Jack Ruby Stripper Help Sink W. German Cafes to Alltime Low

By HAZEL GUILD

Frankfurt, Jan. 21.

It's being pondered this week how show business in West Germany could have hit such an alltime low, what with alleged crooked contracts that were to have brought top international entertainers like Maurice Chevalier and Vicô Torriani to Germany. Authorities are also concerned with the contracts that did bring several dubious personalities here.

First, a striptease dancer who is advertised as an "intimate friend" of American cafe owner Jack Ruby, the killer of President Kennedy's assassin, Lee Oswald, is appearing at a Berlin nightclub. She is 30-year-old Magdalena Marty, who was born in Lucerne, Switzerland, and who is being paid $50 a night—a high fee in Germany—to work at the Berlin night spot, Remde's St. Pauli.

Under the stage name of Syra, she is doing her nightly strip rou-

(Continued on page 93)

Chow for Wiz-Gals

Washington, Jan. 21.

Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson has started something new: a series of White House luncheons for women active in various fields. She calls them "women doers."

The guest list numbers about a dozen for the luncheons which will be held at no fixed intervals, although she has said she will hold "a number" of them.

Included on the first guest list were Helen Hayes and Mrs. Robert E. Kintner, wife of the NBC president.

VAN JOHNSON EXPECTS TO FULFILL BOOKINGS

Van Johnson is expected to keep his March 3 date at Harrah's, Lake Tahoe, despite surgery last Thursday (16) at the Memorial Hospital, N.Y. A "routine elective operation known as a groin dissection" was performed on Johnson, and, according to a spokesman for the actor-singer, all findings were negative.

Johnson is expected to be out of the hospital in about 10 days. He's also expected to keep his date on the Ed Sullivan show in late March.

Govt. Sees '64-'65 Nitery Tax Yielding $50,000,000

Washington, Jan. 21.

Uncle Sam's official opinion is that nightclub business will be upbeat in the next Government fiscal year, starting July 1.

President Johnson's new budget, spanning that year, forecasts that cabaret taxes will yield $50,000,000 in those 12 months, compared with an estimated $44,000,000 in the current fiscal year running until June 30. The nitery tax take between mid-1962 and mid-1963 was $40,000,000.

N.Y. Cops Collar Punks And Subway Hoodlums; Pre-'64 Fair Cleanup

New York's police are reprising a periodic cleanup job. This time, however, it's indicated that it means business—at least as far as roaming bands of hoods are concerned. The gendarmes are putting heat on the young punks who prey on or annoy subway riders. The cleanup is keyed to the N.Y. World's Fair influx opening April 22.

The police are ferreting out the underground miscreants in a series of surprise forays. On Sunday (19) night and early Monday morning, police picked up 45 suspects. Two were collared on a subway car as they were preparing to roll a sleeping passenger. One policeman nabbed 22 in a subway arcade in the Times Square section.

The police also nabbed a pair of femme impersonators on disorder-

(Continued on page 81)

1/22

VARIETY

Subscription Order Form

Enclosed find check for $.....

Please send VARIETY for ☐ One Year ☐ Two Years ☐ Three Years

To .....
(Please Print Name)

Street

City..... Zone.... State.....

Regular Subscription Rates

One Year—$15.00 Two Years—$28.00

Three Years—$39.00

Canada and Foreign—$1 Additional Per Year

VARIETY Inc.

154 West 46th Street New York, N. Y. 10036

VARIETY

Trade Mark Registered

FOUNDED 1905 by SIME SILVERMAN; Published Weekly by VARIETY, INC.

Syd Silverman, President
154 West 46th St., New York, N. Y. 10036 JUdson 2-2700

Hollywood, Calif. 90028
6404 Sunset Boulevard, HOllywood 9-1141

Washington, D. C. 20004
784 National Press Building, STerling 3-5445

Chicago, Ill. 60611
400 No. Michigan Ave., DElaware 7-4984

London, S.W.1
49 St. James's Street, Piccadilly, HYde Park 4561-2-3

SUBSCRIPTION Annual, $15; Foreign, $16; Single Copies, 35 Cents

ABEL GREEN, Editor

Volume 233 120 Number 9

INDEX

Bills	86	New Acts	83
Casting	90	Night Club Reviews	84
Chatter	94	Obituaries	86
Film Reviews	6	Pictures	3
House Reviews	82	Radio	32
Inside Pictures	28	Record Reviews	70
Inside Radio-TV	64	Television	32
Inside Vaudeville	82	Television Reviews	52
International	30	Tollvision	29
Legitimate	87	TV Film	43
Literati	93	Vaudeville	76
Music	69	Wall Street	23

DAILY VARIETY
(Published in Hollywood by Daily Variety, Ltd.)
$20 a year. $25 Foreign.

LOTSA EGGS BUT NO OMELETTE?

Gets Bigger in the Blueprinting, Haymes' New York 'Film City' To Include 57 Chilled Studios

Plans for the development of a "Film City" in New York by real-estater Allan Haymes are taking shape with the project now calling for an expenditure of $15,000,000 in the construction of a 20-story tower and a two-level coliseum-like structure on 11th Avenue between 44th and 45th St. Haymes recently contracted to purchase the 70,000-sq. ft. site at a price listed as over $2,000,000.

Plan is for a complete film production centre, equipped with 57 air conditioned sound stages and an acre of roof-top space for outdoor filming. Some of these stages are being touted as among the largest ever built in the east for pic and tv production. Haymes claims that negotiations are already in progress for about half of the project's 492,000 sq. ft. of space.

Development, to be called Film City, is being designed by architects Herbst & Rusciano. It will also contain office space, a 270-seat theatre, private club facilities including swimming pool and steam rooms, cafeteria and rooftop supper club. There will also be a 150-car garage and soundproof observation corridors for visitor viewing. Accommodations will also be available for overnight stays.

Stages will be soundproofed so as to allow construction on stages adjacent to shooting, without disturbing the lensing. Stages will range in size from 200' x 90' to smaller 36' x 26'. Ceiling heights will be 40 ft. in the large stages and 15 ft. on the smaller units. These facilities will be equipped with dressing and makeup rooms, insert stages, remote telecasting, film processing and storage, carpentry shops, storage, rehearsal, broadcasting and screening facilities.

Construction will begin about Oct. 1, with completion scheduled to be completed by the summer of 1966. Haymes some years ago developed the Filmways Studios in Gotham. He chose the location because of its access to transportation and the Broadway agency beat, among other reasons. It is his belief that filmmaking, both tv and feature, is on the rise in the east and feels the need for a centralized plant in which pix can be shot, processed, edited and the rest without jumping all over town as is the present situation. Hence the multi-million dollar project.

A Lean-To For Sinatra

Warner Bros. is erecting a $500,000 building at its Burbank Studios to be called the Frank Sinatra Building.

The new structure will serve as headquarters for all of the singer-actor-producer's business activities, including his Sinatra Enterprises. The building will reflect the variety of his interests, Warners says, including production as well as performing. In addition to offices and such regular space, the new Sinatra headquarters will also have dressing rooms, conference and rehearsal rooms. It will stand adjacent to the studio's main administration building on Warner Blvd.

Who Say U.S. Pix Still Best? None But French Buffs

Paris, Jan. 21.

Monthly highbrow sleek paper magazine Cahiers Du Cinema, that helped spawn the short lived New Wave, and which always remained faithful to American films, now comes up with a well documented, absorbing bow to Yank pix via a special number called "Cinema Americain."

Periodical called information from American directors, both old and new, and compiled various lists. An outline of Yank pic history is included with boxoffice receipts (culled from VARIETY with credit).

It comes at a good time when too many people, including American filmmakers, contend that the best films are being made abroad. Not so to Caheirs editors.

Republic of Columbia Lines Up Nine Countries For Fifth Annual Fest

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Fifth International Festival of Film, held in Cartagena, Colombia will open Feb. 28 and run through March 5. Nine countries already are set to participate, including the U. S., Britain, France, Greece, Norway, Netherlands, Czechoslovakia, Mexico, Spain, with others also expected to enter.

First feature entry is Britain's "Life for Ruth," directed by Basil Dearden and starring Paul Rogers, Janet Munro, Michael Craig and Patrick McGoogan, and first short entries Holland's "Life of Karel Appel" and "Agua di Roma."

One of the features of festival, according to director general Victor Nieto Nunez, will be a repeat of a retrospective showing of an outstanding director's works, name still to be announced. Last year, Nunez reported, screening of films by Josef von Sternberg was one of the event's most popular attractions.

Foresee 'Irma La Douce' Gross at $18,000,000; Second Biggest Comedy

Arnold M. Picker United Artists exec v.p., is projecting a worldwide film rental of over $18,000,000 for "Irma La Douce," which would make it the largest grossing comedy ever with the exception of "Around the World in 80 Days," per his data.

Domestic film rental of the Mirisch-Edward L. Alperson presentation has now exceeded the $9,500,000 mark, Picker says, a sum he notes is particularly strong in that it has been amassed in only 27 weeks of playtime in less than 4,400 engagements. Long runs in many dates and several house records were responsible for this performance, he commented, estimating that "Irma" will eventually play 20,000 engagements in the U.S. and Canada, with additional dates expected to yield a total domestic rental of $12,000,000.

Among the more remarkable aspects of "Irma's" record is its $1,006,911 accumulation on "golden showcase" in New York. Also, it is still playing in the Music Box Theatre, Seattle, now in its 26th week, where the 25th frame it grossed $8,502, actually exceeding its opening week intake.

Verneuil Heads 'Caravans' In Afghanistan for MGM

Henri Verneuil, French director, has been signed by Metro to direct "Caravans," from the James Michener novel. Verneuil has directed 25 shorts and 18 features most recent of the latter for MGM being "Any Number Can Win," starring Alain Delon and Jean Gabin.

Lensing is to be in Afghanistan.

LEVINE HATCHES MORE PARAMOUNT

By EDDIE KALISH

Joseph E. Levine and Paramount Pictures have done it again. They have made another coproduction-distribution deal, this time involving four pictures with an aggregate budget estimated at around $15,000,000. New pact brings to eight the number of Levine-Par projects, committed for production and/or release in 1964, with a total budget figured at about $30,000,000, probably the largest number of pix committed by a single producer to a major in any 15-month period.

Latest deal, which includes Levine's first roadshow picture and the third such project Par has become involved with in recent months, makes that Levine-Paramount engagement ring sparkle all the brighter, adding more fire to the romance the two have been carrying on since mid-1963. Banns or an agreement leading to them are still uncommitted as yet, however.

Producer Fees

Fresh contract runs much the same as previous agreement between the two parties, involving "Carpetbaggers," "Where Love Has Gone," "Nevada Smith" and "Zulu." In the case of the first three, Par distributes world-wide, while Levine's Embassy Pictures will distribute "Zulu" in the U.S. and Canada. In this case, as with the latest pact, Levine owns 50% of each pic and Embassy controls advertising and publicity. In addition, Levine gets approximately $250,000 as a fee with each picture for being its producer.

The four new Par-Embassy pix include confirmation of the deal for "Imperial Woman," based on the Pearl Buck novel. This is the roadshow project, to be made at Far East locations on a budget of about $10,000,000 in widescreen and color. Sophia Loren is presently being dickered with to play the title role. Another is "Sands of Kalahari," to be produced in Africa probably involving Stanley Baker as an actor and Cy Endfield as director. This duo made "Zulu" for Levine via their Diamond Films. Pic, based on a novel by William Mulvihill, will be an Eady Plan venture. Both "Woman" and "Sands" will be distributed world-wide by Par.

The other two pic include "A House Is Not a Home," to be distributed in the U.S. and Canada by Embassy and in the rest of the world by Par, as reported earlier. It is being produced by Clarence Greene and Russell Rouse with

(Continued on page 29)

Par Will Syndicate Post-1948 Pix; Mull Outside Bids But Company Logic Trends Toward Do-It-Yourself

Paramount will definitely send its library of post-1948 features to television syndication this year. The only thing in question at present is how the move will be accomplished, one probability being that Paramount will handle the selloff itself. Alternately it may "lease" the library to a tv distrib.

One thing is clear and that is that Par will not sell its post-'48s outright as it did its pre-48 library to Music Corp. of America. This deal is close to making the $35,000,000 guarantee of MCA at the time. Calculation at Paramount now is that MCA may ultimately hit the $50,000,000 mark before saturation. Par would like to keep this kind of rental income undivided as to the post-48s, if possible.

The Paramount block of over 200 features is the last remaining batch of post-48s being held by a major distributor, some companies having drained themselves almost entirely of any pix to sell or lease to tv. This puts Par in an increasingly strong position as the months go by, a fact which the company is not unmindful of.

Paramount has entertained lots of proposals by syndicators. The biggest problem is the tax nut and this is what makes it practically impossible for Par to sell its post-48 package outright, even if it wanted to.

20th's 'Pope Paul' Reel

"Pope Paul in The Holy Land—A Modern Pilgrimage," Movietonews' 15-minute documentary in DeLuxe color, goes into worldwide release this week by 20th-Fox.

Film, which covers Pope Paul's recent tour of the Holy Land, was filmed by a team of eight Yank and European cameramen. Short is part of Movietonews expanded program of topical featurettes.

Brazil Exchange Woe; Inflation, Dictates Pact

Motion Picture Export Assn. member companies have signed new labor contracts with Brazilian distribution office unions repping employees in Rio de Janeiro, Belo Horizonte, Porto Alegre and Curitiba. Covered by the new contracts are 654 employees.

Primary goal of the unions was to maintain the real worth of employee wages in the face of the inflation which has been rampant in Brazil in the last year. Negotiations were conducted by MPEA reps in Brazil under the director of the MPEA foreign labor committee in New York.

Other foreign labor negotiations are presently going on in Malaysia and Argentina.

'Unsinkable Molly' Film Borrows Titanic Stuff From Earlier Features

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has borrowed stock black-and-white footage from "A Night To Remember," Rank, 1959, and "Titanic," Twentieth Century-Fox, 1953, for the sinking of the Titanic scenes in "The Unsinkable Molly Brown."

Director Chuck Walters, in the midst of dubbing on "Molly," said

(Continued on page 8)

Old Yearning Returns, Time-Life May Start Exposing Special Celluloid

Time-Life, which hasn't been in theatrical film production since it disbanded the March of Time series some years ago, may shortly get back in the business—all as a result of the interest stirred up by its 20-minute short, "The Directors," now playing theatrical dates in New York and Los Angeles.

"The Directors," produced by Nat Goldblatt of Life's special projects department, actually started out as a piece of Life Mag promotion. The documentary was conceived as a report on how Life reporter Robert Coughlin set about doing his piece on 31 top film directors for the Life yearend issue. Idea was to show the film at various sales meetings, etc. around the country to stir interest in that Life issue devoted entirely to films.

Pic, however, was deemed worthy of theatrical showing and was subsequently turned over to Lester A. Schoenfeld for both 35 and 16m distribution.

Now Life's special projects people, for whom this was their first use of film, are contemplating a program of a minimum of four more shorts, connected with special issues of Life, though not necessarily tied in with their advance promotion. Among the possible subjects are Shakespeare's England, World War One, Michaelangelo, Greece and New York. Special issues on the first three are upcoming, while Greece and New York were treated in special issues last year.

As Goldblatt sees it, when Life prepares such special issues they usually have enough photographic and text material to make a number of quality film shorts, utilizing various new techniques whereby stills are photographed with a motion picture camera, etc. Goldblatt hopes to get an okay shortly for a budget of between $50,000 and $100,000 with which to pursue the film program.

The upcoming pix, he says, would be Life promotion only in that the mag and its photographers would receive end credits. That is, they won't be loaded with the kind of not-so-invisible "messages" with which so many industrial pix are weighted. Pix would be designed for artie and educational outlets, particularly for those more sophisticated audiences whom Life is trying to woo back to the subscription fold. Presumably such sophisticated audiences will get the message that Life is worth reading from the quality of the shorts themselves.

Ishihara, an Indie, Cops Festival of Arts Prize For 'Best Dramatic' Pic

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Ishihara International Productions, newly-formed Japanese indie film company, won the "Best Dramatic Feature Film" of 1963 at the recently concluded Festival of Arts in Japan with its first production, Kon Ichikawa's "My Enemy, The Sea." Pic, which was shown at the Frisco Film Fest last November, may put Ishihara International into position of competing successfully with Japan's five majors—Toho, Daiei, Toei, Shochiku and Nikkatsu.

Ishihara International was formed by two Nikkatsu insurgents—actor Yujiro Ishihara, who had starred in 58 pix, and producer Akira Nakai, with 42 films to his credit. Company was first Japanese indie to be started by an actor. Ishihara has position in Japanese films that late James Dean had in U.S.—symbol of rebellion of young Japanese against traditional convention. When he and Nakai announced formation of company and intention to seek co-production deals with American producers, directors and actors, it stirred considerable controversy but not much worry among the "big five." Success of pic will undoubtedly call for reappraisal of newly-formed competition.

Ishihara used to make as many as eight features a year. With his own company he and Nakai plan no more than two or three, stressing artistic as well as commercial appeal. Signing of Ichikawa, one of top Japanese directors, was along this line. Ishihara International spent about $1,500,000 on "My Enemy, The Sea," as compared to the average $100,000 budget of most Japanese pix. Film was shot in Cinemascope and Eastmancolor in Japan, Hawaii with some location work in San Francisco.

Production of company's second feature begins in spring, with first skedded, "Stein Dodge," a Japanese legend, and "Two on a Battlefield," dramatic modern war story. Both films require American directors and co-stars with location work in Japan and Thailand. Also on boards are "The Honorable Picnic," script by Harold Medford for co-producer Henry Blanke, and a property owned by producer-partners Douglas Laurence-Delbert Mann-Dale Wasserman.

Naify Seeks a Simpler UATC Structure; Already Diversified But Door Open

United Artists Theatre Circuit, which lost approximately $100,000 last year, expects to be back in the black in 1964, president Marshall Naify stated in New York on Friday (17) in his first meeting with the film trade press since succeeding George Skouras as UATC chief.

According to Naify, one of the principal aims of his administration will be to continue the policy of consolidating all of UATC's various subsidiary and affiliated theatre companies, thus simplifying a quite complicated corporate structure. Longrange UATC plans include the construction of some new theatres, (though how many, he wouldn't predict), with driveins being favored on the Coast and conventional hardtops in the east.

Questioned re diversification plans, prez noted that the company is already quite diversified, principally via various holdings of United California Theatres, which has large real estate holdings, and interests in bowling alleys, drivein restaurants, a janitor supply firm, with other subsids being interested in community antenna systems in the southwest.

Circuit will continue to study other diversification moves, he said, giving the impression that the company, however, isn't about to make any sudden or spectacular moves just for the sake of diversification.

Hoosick: Four-Day Policy

Albany, Jan. 21.

Harte Theatre, in Hoosick Falls, dark since 1961, was relighted Friday (17) by Joseph Sherman, of Fair Haven, Vt. Sherman, who had a new roof installed, will operate the house on weekends (four days).

He now conducts the Capitol in Whitehall and the State in Mechanicville—both owned by Benton Theatres, of Saratoga.

'Roman Empire' Into 22 Hard Ticket Bookings

"Fall of the Roman Empire" will make its Western Hemisphere debut March 26 at the DeMille Theatre, N. Y. This opening will be followed by regional preems starting the following day, 22-reserved-seat engagements around the U.S. and Canada starting at that time. Paramount distributes in the west.

An oddity in the DeMille opening is that it may well turn out to be the world premiere, not just the western hemisphere opening. This is because no foreign opening has been set as yet and if the Rank Organization doesn't get one scheduled in London before the March 26 date, Par will inherit the world debut for the Samuel Bronston epic.

"Empire" is the second hard-ticket pic Par will preem in March. On the 11th of the month it opens Hal Wallis' "Becket" at Loew's State, N. Y.

Warners Musters Part Of Its Guest List for 'Limpet' At Weeki Wachee, Fla.

By GENE ARNEEL

Weeki Wachee, Fla., Jan. 21.

Weeki Wachee which, as everyone knows, is very close to Homosassa, was the site elected by Warners for the press showing of "The Incredible Mr. Limpet." Herons, egrets and others on the wing find the place easily accessible by air. A chartered American Airlines DC7 carrying human newspaper people and a variety of radio and television delegates from New York were delayed an hour or so because of a missing battery.

A contingent from Dallas did

(Continued on page 23)

The best things in air travel are on TWA

Sparkling wine, a connoisseur's menu, and a fine first-run movie. What more could you ask for when you're going places? You get them all... at no extra charge.... when you're a TWA First Class Royal Ambassador. In fact, only TWA treats you so royally on nonstop coast-to-coast and overseas flights to ten of Europe's favorite cities. Live it up next time you travel. Call your travel agent or Trans World Airlines.

Nationwide Worldwide depend on TWA

COL WILL DISTRIB CHURCHILL BIOPIC

London, Jan. 21.

"The Finest Hours," the two-hour color film on the life of Sir Winston Churchill, produced by Jack Le Vien, is to be released worldwide through Columbia. The pic, which has its world preem under the sponsorship of the English Speaking Union at the Royal Festival Hall on April 29, will open for an indefinite run at the Columbia Theatre the following day.

The deal was closed in London last week by Le Vien with Mike Frankowich, Columbia's first veepee. Le Vien, who produced "The Valiant Years" vidpix series, was also exec producer of "Black Fox," the documentary on the life of Adolf Hitler, which collared an Oscar last year.

Beyond 'Bounty,' MG's Fair Horizon

Metro has bailed itself out of the fiscal pit in which it floundered with "H.M.S. Bounty" not long ago. The company has revealed a return to profitable operations with a profit of $685,000 or 26c a share for the 12 weeks ended Nov. 21, the first quarter of the current fiscal year. This compares with a loss of $2,366,000 or 92c per share for the same period the year before.

President Robert H. O'Brien told stockholders in a letter that "these earnings reflect a highly favorable turnaround in our operations. All divisions of the company operated at a profit and ran well ahead of last year in revenues and earnings." O'Brien reported that Metro's financial condition was strengthened through the reduction of short term loans by $15,841,000, a reduction provided principally by a refund of prior year's income taxes because of the loss suffered in the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1963.

On the production-distribution side, O'Brien pointed to "The V.I.P.'s" "The Wheeler Dealers" and "The Haunting" as being successful attractions contributing to the first quarter totals. "V.I.P.s" proved to be one of the company's best performers in recent years, he said, and "Dealers" is continuing to show strength.

O'Brien termed prospects for the second quarter as "encouraging," citing such upcoming releases as "The Prize," "Sunday in New York," "Children of the Damned," "A Global Affair," "Mail Order Bride" and "Any Number Can Win." As far as production goes, O'Brien pointed out that "Night of the Iguana" has just been completed as has "The Unsinkable Molly Brown."

He also noted that Metro began the fall tv season with an all-time company high of six series, representing five-and-a-half hours of programming on the networks. Six pilots for the upcoming season have already been completed or are finishing, he said.

Accompanying the president's letter was a quarterly divvy check for 37½c per share.

L.A. to N.Y.

Edie Adams
Lauren Bacall
Larry Barnett
Steve Broidy
George Burroughs
Audrey Cochran
John F. Dugan
L. Wolfe Gilbert
Frank Glicksman
Abel Green
George Jessel
Robert I. Kronenberg
Beverly Lunsford
Quinn Martin
Ethel Merman
Robert B. Morin
Arthur Penn
Milton Pickman
Tom Sheils
Herbert Sussan

U.S. to Europe

Saul Chaplin
Ellen Corby
Philip Dunne
Mel Ferrer
Ben E. King
Robert I. Kreiman
Robert F. Macleod
Roddy McDowall
Carol Reed
David Resnik
Al Wilde
Dan Willis

Kevin McClory's the Man Behind Bond

British Court Puts Him in Saddle—Now Preps No. 3 in Sexy Shamus Series

Rome, Jan. 21.

Plans are moving ahead on the next James Bond filmization, "Thunderball," according to producer Kevin McClory, who expects to make third pic in sexy Shamus series starting in few months. McClory was in Rome last week to o.o. local talent for one of female leads in pic, leaving immediately afterwards for Britain.

McClory only recently won screen rights to property from Bond author Ian Fleming in a London court. Also to be selected is star, who may or may not be Sean Connery, who played Bond in first two pix.

Choice will also depend on whether or not McClory makes a deal with Salzman and Broccoli, producers of "Dr. No" and "To Russia with Love," who have Connery under exclusive contract as far as the Bond character is concerned. They are meanwhile prepping still another Bond pic, "Goldfinger," slated to roll this spring. McClory did not exclude the possibility of an arrangement with Salzman and Broccoli for "Thunderball," but admitted situation was somewhat involved.

Court suit awarded McClory all screen and dramatic rights to property (which he developed some years ago, before Bond became an international screen hero). Also, all future editions of book must bear wording: "This story is based on a screen treatment by Kevin McClory, Jack Whittingham, and Ian Fleming."

McClory revealed also that he was awarded £17,500 in court expenses, plus £35,000 damages, later payable by Fleming directly. McClory's title to property stems from proven claims that he wrote and developed an original screen treatment around the F nd character with Fleming's o.ay, with story later incorporated into the Fleming-signed tome ostensibly without McClory's consent, thus resulting in the unusual decision against the author.

Producer says "Thunderball" will be "costliest" of Bond pix to date, with 2½ months of underwater lensing planned in the Bahamas. For this reason too, pic should "ideally" roll in May-June-July period. Story deals with theft of an atom bomb and its caching in an underwater hideaway by an international gang. McClory has set up Branwell Film Productions Ltd., a Bahama Corporation, to produce pic.

Proposes Kid Shutdown From Adult-Rated Pix

Albany, Jan. 21.

First bill of 1964 legislative session to affect motion picture theatres is a proposed amendment to Section 484 of Penal Law, by Assemblyman Noah Goldstein, Brooklyn Democrat. It would prohibit any film house "in which the viewing of the film exhibited therein is advertised as being limited to adults only" from admitting or permitting to remain any child "actually or apparently under the age of 18 years."

Ban would be in effect, whether or not child were accompanied by its parent or guardian or by an adult person authorized by child's parent or guardian.

Proposed measure, goes beyond the Board of Regents' recommendation for legislation authorizing classification of motion pictures as to "suitability" for school children, but allowing youngsters to view an "unsuitable" film, if accompanied by parents or guardian. Were child unaccompanied, theatres would be prohibited from admitting them to a picture rated "unsuitable."

Assemblyman Luigi R. Marano is scheduled to introduce, on recommendation of Joint Legislative Committee on Obscenity, a bill carrying out Regents plan.

Politicians Favor $1.50 Minimum Hourly Rate; Theatremen Grimace

Albany, Jan. 21.

A bill providing that New York State minimum wage be increased on April 1 to $1.25 an hour, instead of Oct. 15, and (2) the scheduled appointment by Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of a Special Committee "to review the effect of an increase of the state minimum wage to $1.50 per hour' confront operators of film theatres in New York State.

Joint Committee of Industrial and Labor Conditions recommended presentation of the first measure, which bears the names of Senator Joseph R. Marro, Bronx Democrat, and Assemblyman Josepf H. Egan, Schenectady Republican. It was assumed the Governor knew about the planned move, when he was preparing his annual message to the Legislature —delivered (8).

By pledging the naming of a special committee, Rockefeller may have sought to prevent the minimum wage question from becoming a major issue at the 1964 session. The Democrats officially advocate a $1.50 minimum hourly rate. That party's members on Joint Committee emphasized this, in approving the proposed six months' advance of effective date for the hike to $1.25.

Joint Committee members seem to think Marro-Egan act will pass, regardless.

After Committee announced its plan, N.Y. State National Association for Advancement of Colored People (with 58 chapters in State) threatened a march on Capitol, if Legislature did not vote a $1.50 minimum.

Europe to U. S.

Arthur Allighan
Louis Barriere
Christopher Booker
Caryl Brahms
Michael Bromhead
Kenneth Cope
Cyril Edgar
David Kiernan
Roy Kinnear
Herbert Kretzmen
Kumar
Mitchell R. Leiser
Bernard Levin
Al Mancini
Millicent Martin
Lance Percival
William Rushton
Ned Sherrin

N.Y. to L.A.

Allan Bregman
Sol A. Schwartz
Bobby Vinton
Eddie Wolpin

Stanley Warner Profit Jumps to 55c Per Share In General Growth Era

Wilmington, Jan. 21.

Stanley Warner had consolidated net profit of $1,127,200, equal to 55c per share, for the quarter ended Nov. 30, president S. H. Fabian informed stockholders at the annual meeting here last Thursday (9). This compares with a net of $629.800, or 31c per share, for the November quarter of 1962.

This is the fourth successive quarter in which earnings were larger than the corresponding quarter of the preceding year.

Fabian spoke of growth in various corporate areas and underlined that the expansion has not resulted in any dilution of stockholders interests.

MEDALLION ACQUIRES OVERSEAS PRODUCT

Medallion Pictures is in an expansion mood, with this distributor picking up more product from Europe for U.S. release to the extent that the company has the strongest release schedule of new theatrical product in its history.

Arthur Sachson, v.p.-general sales manager, detailed such acquisitions as "Invasion 1700," starring Jeanne Craine and John Drew Barrymore; "Duel of the Champions," Alan Ladd, "The Avenger" with Steve Reeves, and "The Wastrel" with Van Heflin.

ANY CAN PLAY 'SHOWCASE'

National Boxoffice Survey

Trade in Comeback; 'Charade' Again on Top, 'Jones' 2d, 'World' 3d, 'Cardinal' 4th, 'Darling' 5th

As many key cities covered by VARIETY dug out from the record snow of the previous week, and more normal weather returned, firstrun biz snapped back to normal. Keys in the eastern section of the country were hit a body blow by the record snowfall and cold weather. However, despite a dearth of new pix, trade is climbing this round.

"Charade" (U) (4th wk) again is finishing on top with better than $350,000 total gross and dates in some 22 key spots. "Tom Jones" (UA) (8th wk) is climbing to second position by dint of additional engagements and amazingly smash trade in all keys.

"It's a Mad World" (UA) (9th wk) is finishing third as compared with second place a week ago. "The Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk), third last session, is finishing fourth.

"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk) continues in fifth position, same as last stanza. "Strait-Jacket" (Col) (2d wk), is copping sixth place although the first week out in distrib to any extent.

"The Prize" (MGM) (4th wk) is winding up with seventh money. "Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk) will be eighth. "Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk) is copping ninth spot.

"How West Was Won" (MGM) (56th wk) rounds out the Top 10, staging something in the nature of a comeback. "Four For Texas" (WB) and "Love on a Pillow" (Col) are the two runnerup films.

"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) is just getting around extensively, showing up lofty in Chi, Minneapolis and Philly. It's rated good in N.Y. and okay in Portland. "Soldier in Rain" (AA), also fairly new, looks lively in Boston.

Any Number Can Win" (MGM), another newie, is socko in Washington but mild in Detroit. "Billy Liar" (Cont), also a fresh entrant, shapes trim in Pitt, good in Philly and solid in N.Y.

"Knife in Water" (Kana), big in Frisco, looms trim in Philly. "Easy Life" (Emb), also new, still is socko in N.Y.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

(Complete Boxoffice Reports on pages 13-15-17).

Loew's Books United Artists Re-Runs But Neither Side Likes to Confirm

Although United Artists seems reluctant to confirm, the company has been selling to Loew's Theatres again. The circuit had been a major customer of UA's before the distrib began its "premiere showcase" plan over a year-and-a-half ago.

Not long ago a UA spokesman called photos and other in-theatre advertising for "Lilies of the Field" at Loew's 83d St. "a mistake." Later, when it was established that the picture had, in reality, played there, the same exec replied to the effect that "oh yes, I heard about it."

Now an ad has appeared in the papers proclaiming that "The Manchurian Candidate," "Dr. No," "Toys in the Attic" and "The Caretakers" are all playing a Loew's date or two as re-issues. Confronted with this, the same spokesman spoke of "a matter of bidding." However, UA's reluctance to say outright it is selling to Loew's was seemingly underlined by wording of news release about "Candidate" and "Dr. No" reissue. It spoke of films playing Cinema II in Manhattan but neglected to mention the Loew's Metropolitan booking in Brooklyn.

The UA exec termed it a "spot booking," admitted that the company hasn't sold to the circuit for a while but added that it has "always tried to." A Loew's spokesman said that the bookings were made out of "hunger" in order to fill a hole in the schedule. He pointed out that "Wheeler Dealers" is due shortly at the Metropolitan, the first "showcase" picture Loew's or Metro have run, and the "Manchurian"-"Dr. No" bill is just being used to fill in.

United Artists is presently in negotiations with RKO to increase its "premiere showcase" plan.

Bob Rhodes Exits AA

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Bob Rhodes left publicity dept., at Allied Artists Friday (17) to freelance, with first account Ronald Lubin, indie producer who has released through AA. Rhodes was with company for 17 years, the last 13 in dual capacity of pub manager-foreign exploitation director.

It's understood he won't be replaced, his duties being absorbed by AA ad-pub chief Sandy Abrahams and aide Marty Weiser.

'Forum' Set for Screen

Norman Panama and Melvin Frank will indie produce the Broadway musical, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," for UA release as part of their multiple film deal with distrib.

Top N.Y. Judges See Danish Pic Denied License

Albany, Jan. 21.

New York Court of Appeals will hear arguments Wed. (22) in the State Regents' appeal from a 4-1 decision by Appellate Division annulling the Regents' earlier ruling that Denmark's "A Stranger Knocks" could not be licensed in New York with the inclusion of two scenes showing sexual relations. Appeals justices will, earlier in the day, view a private screening of film, at Stanley Warner Strand Theatre (four blocks from the courthouse).

If Court of Appeals holds against the Regents, it means the end of the case, and would compel issuance of a license. This is assuming the court did not pass judgment on a constitutional issue i.e., validity of prior consorship.

Should Regents win, Trans-Lux Distributing Corp., holder of the American distribution rights to the prize-winning film, could then appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court. This, because Harry I. Rand, counsel for Trans-Lux, contends "Section 122 of the Education Law and related provisions requiring the issuance of a license before exhibition of a film, and imposing criminal sanctions for exhibition without a license, violate Article 1, Sections 6 and 8, of the New York Constitution, and the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

Rand successfully argued before Appellate Division that the Regents' ruling was invalid, because the Board did not consider the film as a whole.

UNIVERSAL IN, OTHERS COMING

Universal Pictures has now crystalized its "premiere showcase" operations for New York. As previously revealed, the company will begin a new playoff scheme next Wednesday (29) with "Charade," to be followed on Feb. 19 by "Man's Favorite Sport?". The way it stacks up now, 23 theatres will be involved, including the "showcase" debut of RKO Theatres and also figuring in Skouras, Randforce, Brandt, E. B. Moss and Redstone houses.

Absent is the Century circuit of Long Island which has been playing "showcase" pictures with United Artists, which started the plan, and 20th Century-Fox, which picked it up shortly thereafter. The major difference between U and UA's plans is that, following the 23-theatre "showcase" spread, the Universal product will be moved into the more than 60 theatres in the N.Y. area which generally play U pix subsequently, including RKO.

The Universal "showcase" spread includes four theatres in Manhattan, three in the Bronx, four in Brooklyn, three in Queens, two in Westchester and seven in Nassau county. Of these, six are RKO Theatres, which confirms the projected method RKO would follow in "showcase" participation—pulling a few houses for "showcase" and leaving the rest of the circuit for followup. Skouras is also in with several theatres and then the rest have a couple each. In many ways it is much the same as UA's plan, except for the all-important circuit mopup.

Meanwhile, Warners has been talking a "showcase" plan with RKO for some time now as well. It isn't ready to talk yet, a company spokesman said, but word would be forthcoming soon. Apparently, Warners is definitely planning a "showcase" and RKO is definitely in that plan.

Also, and quite arresting, it was learned last week from a source not connected with UA, that the distrib was virtually set with RKO to expand its "showcase" thinking. This is something UA has wanted from the start but RKO, or Loew's for that matter, weren't ready then. What form the UA and/or Warners plans will eventually be in isn't made clear but it will most likely be very much like what Universal has worked out.

Loew's, meanwhile, is also working on a "showcase" plan, the first picture for which will be "Sunday in New York," a Metro release. Here again, further details weren't available last week but some word is expected shortly. Metro for a while now has been saying that it will go "showcase" in the near future but hasn't said exactly how. The Loew's "Sunday" arrangement will presumably show the way.

This leaves Paramount, known to be working on its own "showcase", also Columbia, and some lesser distribs to work themselves in or out as self-interest dictates. Allied Artists and Buena Vista have been associated with RKO in the past and Col with Loew's so whatever pilot programs these circuits work out could eventually be the systems these holdouts will use. Par could be a maverick, however, because it has never liked the UA "showcase" houses.

The Broadway theatre situation inspires much speculation as a result of the swing to "showcase." It is believed that many more houses besides the Astor, which has been "showcase" from the start and the Criterion, which went that way once, will join the party. Likely candidates include the Palace, the Forum, the Victoria and even maybe the Paramount. Such has been the trade talk, at any rate. Much more will be solidified within the next few weeks, as several plans are about to move into action.

Par Votes 50c Quarterly

Paramount Pictures last week voted a quarterly divvy of 50c. per share on the company's common stock.

It's payable March 9 to holders of record as of Feb. 24.

Distribs Look for Loew's-RKO N.Y. Market Amalgam as Showcase Gains

The showcase idea of major film presentation in the New York exchange area this week gained new momentum with the wrap-up of a deal whereby Warners, Universal and the Walt Disney-owned Buena Vista distribution company intend to market their productions in Manhattan and environs via RKO Theatres, Century Theatres, Skouras Theatres and certain independents. The pictures from each of these three companies are now to be blanket-booked in New York around these circuit outlets, rather than opening a single production on a single firstrun basis.

Perhaps of particular significance is the fact that while the distributors, such as Warners, U and BV, along with the prior-aligned MGM, United Artists and 20th-Fox, have signed allegiance to either RKO or Loew's chains in N.Y., there's now some inner-working agitation for an amalgam of key showcase market places which would include both RKO and Loew's, along with others.

The v.p. of a major company said it's a matter of "economic necessity that we get more money out of New York" and he wants to press for a new kind of boxoffice outing. The approach would be to open a picture simultaneously in the key houses of RKO, Loew's, Century, Skouras and others. The marketing would include Loew's State on Broadway, and RKO's Palace, also a firstrun, and then take in the top borough and county runs—all going at the same time.

RKO Theatres participation in the blanket-booking plan is regarded as an important step toward more multiple showcasing. This circuit, along with Century and Skouras and independents, is set to play WB's "Dead Ringer" and Universal's "Man's Favorite Sport" shortly. The Easter Week whirl is to be given to WB's "Incredible Mr. Limpet."

Deal with RKO Theatres encompasses both a "Premiere Showcase," this being the title initiated by UA, and a "Hollywood Showcase," both of which are the modern-way of saying firstruns in N.Y. are more and more becoming multiple runs. The film companies are out to cater to the neighborhoods and suburbia, all at the same time, and with all areas covered by the same ad-publicity splurges.

Metro Culls 8 Oldies

Winnipeg, Jan. 21.

Banking on success with two previous eight-film series of Vintage operettas from the MGM film library, Famous Players' 1,963-seat Capitol Theatre has scheduled a new series of non-operetta reviews entitled "World Heritage Pictures."

Set for two showings every Wednesday, running through March 4, current series has "David Copperfield," "Little Women," "Captain's Courageous," "Pride and Prejudice," "Julius Caesar," "Kim," "The Good Earth" and "A Tale of Two Cities."

Magnetic Tape As Possible Trouble For Dick Walsh

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

A number of Hollywood IATSE locals are circulating decertification petitions prior to their biz agents attending quarterly exec board meeting of IA in Frisco starting Jan. 27. It's not yet clear whether the intent is to provide self protection "in case" or merely to convince international chief Dick Walsh that they mean business.

One source, which believes petitions are being instigated by business agents to arm themselves for the meeting, said that petitions use approach that "information available on the contracts regarding the handling of magnetic tape which might clash with charter rights of members, has compelled many employees to review whether preparations should be initiated in event decertification may become advisable.

"In accordance with rights granted in Section 9 of the Labor-Management Relations Act of 1947, as amended by public law 86-257 of 1959, request is made that decertification petition be exhibited in locals, offices so members wishing to sign document might have an opportunity to do so. In event the decision or agreements made do not adversely affect the employment conditions of membership, the petition will be withdrawn. On the other hand, should circumstances develop which make it advisable to arrange for a change of exclusive bargaining representation, it is suggested that the petition may be kept open for additional signatures."

It has also been reported that some locals have made overtures to Ralph Clare, biz agent for studio transportation drivers, Local 399, AFL, as possible future representative. He reps other non-IATSE crafts such as Teamsters, Plasterers, etc. at the negotiations. However, feeling is that main object is to get something to support demands to be made to Walsh at meet that bargaining rights not be taken away.

IATSE LEADERSHIP HITS SAN FRANCISCO

International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will hold its mid-winter exec board meeting next Monday (27) at Del Webb's Towne House, San Francisco. It is expected that the session will run through the remainder of the week.

This meeting is one of two such sessions held each year by the IA brass. The next such get-together, the mid-summer board meeting, will be held July 13 at the Sheraton Hotel, Louisville, Ky. This immediately preceeds the IA national convention to be held beginning July 20 at Louisville Convention Center.

'CLEO' ENDS IN OTTAWA; 'SHOULDA CUT SOONER'

Ottawa, Jan. 21.

"Cleopatra" wound its 12-week run at the Nelson here last Wednesday (15), for an estimated total theatre gross of $85,000, only about $10,000 less than the "Ben-Hur" gross which, however, was registered in a six-month run. "Cleo" played the Nelson at a $3 top, compared with $2.50 for "Ben-Hur." It's felt the "adults only" tag somewhat cut into the "Cleo" grosses.

Otto Preminger's "The Cardinal" opened at the house Thursday (16) with a $1.50 top.

Ernie Warren, district manager of N. A. Taylor's 20th Century Theatres, reported the circuit "happy" with the "Cleo" run, adding, however, that "we'd have been happier" had the 20 minutes been chopped from the film earlier in the run, instead of halfway through it. "It would have improved word of mouth," he said.

Japan's Film Exports Lagging in Fiscal Yr.

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Income from Japan's exports in the fiscal 1963 year, which began in April, is falling far behind the targeted total of $4,550,000. The hopeful figure is same as for previous year, which also was not met. Current year, however, looms likely to see even lesser earnings from overseas. During first six months of the period, income was $1,574,000, or about 35% of the sought amount.

Dr. Strangelove: Or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love The Bomb

Despite grim theme a funny comedy. Good b.o. prospect if properly exploited.

Hollywood, Jan. 13.

Columbia Pictures release of Stanley Kubrick production. Stars Peter Sellers, George C. Scott; costars Sterling Hayden, Keenan Wynn, Slim Pickens; features Peter Bull, James Earl Jones, Tracy Reed. Directed by Kubrick. Screenplay, Kubrick, Terry Southern, Peter George, based on book, "Red Alert," by George; camera, Gilbert Taylor; editor, Anthony Harvey; music, Laurie Johnson. Reviewed at Directors Guild Theatre, Jan. 12, '64. Running time, 102 MINS.

Group Capt. Lionel Mandrake
President Muffley	Peter Sellers
Dr. Strangelove
General "Buck" Turgidson	George C. Scott
General Jack D. Ripper	Sterling Hayden
Colonel "Bat" Guano	Keenan Wynn
Major T. J. "King" Kong	Slim Pickens
Ambassador de Sadesky	Peter Bull
Miss "Foreign Affairs"	Tracy Reed
Lt. Lothar Zogg (Bombardier)	James Earl Jones
Mr. Staines	Jack Creley
Lt. H. R. Dietrich	Frank Berry
Lt. W. D. Kivel	Glenn Beck
Capt. G. A. "Ace" Owens	Shane Rimmer
Lt. B. Goldberg	Paul Tamarin
General Faceman	Gordon Tanner
Admiral Randolph	Robert O'Neil
Frank	Roy Stephens
On Defense Team	Laurence Herder
On Defense Team	John McCarthy
On Defense Team	Hal Galili

Producer - director Stanley Kubrick has with skill and daring fashioned a sharply satirical comedy on a subject as sensitive as Top Security—a nuclear holocaust—in the Columbia Pictures release, "Dr. Strangelove: Or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb." This is an ideal vehicle for exploitation, and should do very well at the b.o.

Nothing would seem to be farther apart than nuclear war and comedy, yet Kubrick's caper eloquently tackles a "Fail-Safe" subject with a light touch. While there are times when it hurts to laugh because somehow there is a feeling that the mad events in "Strangelove" could happen, it emerges as a most unusual combination of comedy and suspense.

Screenplay by Kubrick, Peter George and Terry Southern, based on the book, "Red Alert," by George, is imaginative and contains many an offbeat touch. Some of the characters have a broad brush in their depiction, but this is the very nature of satire. Kubrick also directed the film by his own production company, and successfully captured the incongruous elements of "Strangelove" with a deft, professional touch.

It all begins when a Strategic Air Command general, a right-winger whose similarity to persons still living is more than passing, who on his own initiative orders bomb-carrying planes under his command to attack Russia. He immediately seals in the base, so that there is no way for the President or anyone else to contact him, nor to countermand his orders, since he has given them in a top-secret code only he knows. From here on it's a hectic, exciting series of events, alternating between the General who has started it all, the planes enroute to the USSR, and the Pentagon's war room, where the Chief Executive is trying his best to head off the nuclear war.

Again it would seem no setting for comedy or satire, but the writers have accomplished this with biting, piercing dialogue and through characterizations. The climax is one with a grim postscript, as the Pentagon begins worrying about the mineshaft-gap in the post-nuclear era, while the Red envoy sneaks some pictures of the War Room. The moral is obvious.

Peter Sellers is excellent, essaying a trio of roles — a British R.A.F. captain assigned to the U.S. base where it all begins, the President and the title character, Dr. Strangelove, a German scientist aiding the U.S. whose Nazi mannerisms overcome him

George C. Scott as the fiery Pentagon General who seizes on the crisis as a means to argue for total annhilation of the Russia offers a top performance, one of the best in the film. Odd as it may seem in this backdrop, he displays a fine comedy touch. Sterling Hayden is grimly realistic as the General who takes it on his own to send our nuclear bomb-carrying planes to attack Russia. He is a man who blames the Communists for flouridation of water, and just about everything else. As the cigar-chomping General, Hayden emerges a tragi-comic figure.

There are uniformly fine supporting performances from Slim Pickens, Keenan Wynn, Peter Bull, James Earl Jones, Shane Rimmer, Paul Tamarin and Tracy Reed, latter the only femme in the cast, very good in a bit role, as the Pentagon General's mistress.

Production is handsomely mounted, with fine work by art director Peter Murton; Wally Veevers, special effects; Laurie Johnson's music, and excellent photography by Gilbert Taylor.

Daku.

The Incredible Mr. Limpet
(COLOR)

Fantasy of a man with a successful yen to be a fish. Outlook okay.

Weeki Wachi, Fla., Jan. 19.

Warner Bros. release of John Rose production. Stars Don Knotts, Carole Cook, Jack Weston, Andrew Duggan, Larry Keating. Directed by Arthur Lubin. Screenplay, Jameson Brewer and Rose, from novel by Theodore Pratt; camera (Technicolor), Harold Stine; editor, Donald Tait; music, Frank Perkins; songs, Sammy Fain and Harold Adamson. At Weeki Wachee, Fla., Jan. 18, '64. Running time, 102 MINS.

Henry Limpet	Don Knotts
Bessie Limpet	Carole Cook
George Stickle	Jack Weston
Admiral Harlock	Andrew Duggan
Admiral Spencer	Larry Keating

The seemingly unlikely area of Weeki Wachee, Florida, came to be the locale of a worldwide press premiere of Warners' "The Incredible Mr. Limpet." But actually it was not so unlikely at all.

Film itself if far out in nuttiness, theme-wise. You might even say insane. It has to do with a man who wishes so hard to become a fish that he indeed turns into one. And then, after the piscatorial metamorphosis, he guides the U.S. Navy into the best ways of destroying Nazi submarines during World War II. Henry Limpet, as the man, is Don Knotts and Henry Limpet, as the fish, is man-made animation. It was presented via an underwater screening in Weeki Wache Springs, with a glass-enclosed audience 20 feet under the surface of the water looking on to a specially-engineered, submerged screen. So it was fitting.

This kind of presentation obviously was gimmick. The important factor is that the picture is fun, and the WB junket surely should help a bit in the saleability—what with about 250 reporters from the press and radio—television presumably, at least, spelling the title right.

Producer John Rose is a former longtime production associate of Walt Disney, and his work is mightily suggestive of Disney. It's one of those basic fantasy items which could emerge as a powerhouse at the boxoffice. This reviewer pegs it as an imaginative cinemative outing that has got to be at least agreeable, and then there's the possibility it might register so soundly as to be particularly meaningful commercially.

The important thing is that the audience adjusted to accept the fantastic notion about a milquetoast citizen, with an envy for the apparently tranquilized life of a fish, who just transforms. And Arthur Lubin, as the director, working from a screenplay by Jameson Brewer and producer Rose, which in turn was from the original by Theodore Pratt has worked it in amusingly.

Music backgrounding by Frank Perkins is on the beam and several songs by Sammy Fain and Harold Adamson make for a positive asset.

Harold Styne's photography, in Technicolor, is sharp and the animation effects are fair enough, being a little short of the Disney standards.

Don Knotts is married to Carole Cook and he has more of an eye for the denizens of a fishbowl than he had for her. An interloper is Jack Weston, as a sailor with an eye for Miss Cook. Andrew Duggan and Larry Keating are admiralty brass who become parties to the situation involving the incredible man who has turned into fish and helps knock the windpipes out of those Nazi U-boats.

The screenplay by Brewer and Rose provides a good number of clever and lively lines, including one by Lady Fish who invited Henry Limpet, in fish form, off to the spawning grounds.

Particularly captivating in the yock role is Weston, who for some reason, just has difficulty in believing that his friend, Knotts, has spouted gills. Knotts measures in ideally. Others all fine. Gene.

Man's Favorite Sport
(COLOR)

Hot and cold running fish story about an incomplete angler. With Rock Hudson could do fairly well at b.o.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Universal release of Howard Hawks production. Stars Rock Hudson, Paula Prentiss; features Maria Perschy, Charlene Holt. Directed by Hawks. Screenplay, John Fenton Murray, Steve McNeil, from Pat Frank's story, "The Girl Who Almost Got Away"; camera (Technicolor), Russell Harlan; editor, Stuart Gilmore; music, Henry Mancini; assistant director, Tom Connors Jr. Reviewed at Grauman's Chinese, Jan. 14, '64. Running time, 120 MINS.

Roger Willoughby	Rock Hudson
Abigail	Paula Prentiss
Easy	Maria Perschy
Cadwalader	John McGiver
Tex	Charlene Holt
Major Phipps	Roscoe Karns
Policeman	James Westerfield
Screaming Eagle	Norman Alden
Fisherman Skaggs	Forrest Lewis
Program Chairman	Regis Toomey
Customer Bush	Tyler McVey
Marcia	Kathie Browne

At its best, "Man's Favorite Sport?" generates some uncommonly adroit visual comedy, principally of the slapstick variety. But the picture is only spasmodically scintillating, for producer-director Howard Hawks apparently has forgotten that brevity is the soul of wit and that two hours is too long a stretch for one witty but limited gag premise. The Universal release doesn't look like a boxoffice worldbeater but, if cleverly and appealingly marketed, could turn into a moderate moneymaker. Rock Hudson's name will be a main value.

The comically ripe premise of the John Fenton Murray-Steve McNeil scenario from a story by Pat Frank, is what happens when a celebrated but fraudulent piscatorial authority and fishing equipment salesman for Abercrombie & Fitch who doesn't know how to fish is suddenly ordered by his unaware boss to compete in a fishing tournament? For a while, the adventures of this angler (Hudson) romps along with a kind of breezy Field & Stream charm, bolstered by some inventive slapstick ideas, cleverly devised characters and occasionally sharp dialog. But then, poof, the fish story begins to sag under the weight of its bulky romantic midsection and lumbers along tediously and repetitiously to a long overdue conclusion.

Matters are helped along somewhat by an attractive and spirited cast, but not enough to keep the film consistently amusing. Hudson gives what must undoubtedly be the most watered-down performance of modern times. Not since Esther Williams hung up her bathing suit has a screen thespian been so thoroughly drenched. It's a game performance, and an ingratiating one.

Paula Prentiss, looking more attractive than in any of her previous pictures, continues to blossom as a film actress and gives evidence that she may be able to successfully incorporate her comedic skills into the romantic image necessary for premium leading lady assignments. At the moment she's about halfway between Carol Burnett and the Rosalind Russell of about two decades ago. A few more outings and PP could conceivably join the celebrated alliterate sorority of the screen, whose charter members include the late MM, BB, CC and DD.

In Maria Perschy and Charlene Holt, Hawks has come up with a couple of very decorative new dolls, especially the former, brought over from Austria. Hawks also benefits from some first-class comedy support chipped in by John McGiver as Hudson's toupee-domed employer, Roscoe Karns as a dedicated angler who worships Hudson, James Westerfield as a sympathetic but duty-bound policeman and Norman Alden, who is particularly outstanding and memorable as a quasi-Indian con man with an unmanageable yen for wampum. There's additionally support from Forrest Lewis, Regis Toomey and Tyler McVey.

Hawks purportedly utilized unorthodox directorial techniques, such as filming in sequence a day at a time in order to capture an air of comic spontaneity. Since some of the sight gag passages are uproarious, there is a lot to be said for this technique. But it appears that the main trouble with Hawks' day-at-a-time approach to comedy is that there were too many days or not enough comedy or a combination of both. Editor Stuart Gilmore could still do a lot of good

(Continued on page 19)

Belgium Experimental Fest

Guns of the Trees

Anguish in the "beat" milieu of Manhattan. Life is harrowing. Suicide is heroine's answer. Limited playoff probable.

Knokke, Jan. 14.

NACG release and production. With Adolfas Mekas, Frances Stillman, Ben Carruthers, Argus Carruthers. Written, directed, edited and photographed by Jonas Mekas with additional photography by Sheldon Rochlin; poetry read by Allan Ginsberg and Stuart Perkoff. At Belgian Experimental Film Fest. Running time, 85 MINS.

Gregory	Adolfas Mekas
Barbara	Francis Stillman
Ben	Ben Carruthers
Argus	Argus Carruthers

Greenwich Village's Jonas Mekas has made a film in the modern vein with a series of scenes rather than a narrative style, plus inserted poetry read on the sound track. It takes a look at a certain American anxiety which is stated more in a surface style than with any depth. It is thus mainly an arty entry and limited, at best, to specialized showings.

Item reflects the so-called beatnik philosophy of hatred of, and anguish over, convention, American materialism and the ugliness of life there, at least from view of such characters. Some rant. Some join protest marches. Some accept things. Others opt for suicide.

Basically film concerns a girl who feels that everything is worthless and horrible. She finally kills herself when nobody can help her, including a priest, a tormented intellectual and two life-esteeming friends. The film poses the problem about who is guilty but remains somewhat too romantic and sentimental in its accusations and intimations.

Everybody may be guilty it seems to say, or that life is just harrowing and one must live it aware of its failings. Failings of the pic itself are to show these characters in a convincing perspective within their society or environment. It is true many have no direct contact with it and evolve in their own clicks and groups.

Film sometimes waxes grandiloquent. Characters seem sterile and self-pitying rather than tragic. But, at moments some insight and feeling of plight comes through. Frances Stillman is properly intense and lost as the girl while Adolfas Mekas has a tormented gauntness as the intellectual who can not help her.

It is Ben and Argus Carruthers who give a poetic fillup to the pic in their dignified, quiet attachment and genuine care for each other. They are a married couple. She works. He tries but usually fails. She is a pert Negro actress with refreshing looks and presence while he has sharp projection and the ability to create a mood.

Footage is technically good with some fine imagery on New York's lower East Side life. Mekas displays filmic knowhow, though a tendency to obvious symbols and overindulges in breast beating.

Mosk.

Die Parallelstrasse
(Parallel Streets)
(GERMAN-COLOR)

Knokke, Jan. 7.

Gesellschaft Film production and release. Directed by Ferdinand Khittl. Screenplay, Bodo Bluthner, Khittl; camera (Eastmancolor), Ronald Martini; editor, Irmgard Henrici. At Belgian Experimental Film Fest. Running time, 95 MINS.

Pic is a canny gimmick rather than a regular film in its own right. It works some good diverse color documentary scenes, in various parts of world, into a sort of suspense, search film in which a group of men are trying to resolve the meaning of these apparently unrelated scenes. It makes for a strangely absorbing pic if somewhat too arch in treatment. This has arty and playoff possibilities if well handled.

A group of men sit alongside another who instructs them that they must find out who the man is hinted about in a series of scenes. They are lensed in black and white and the documents in color. They see, as does the audience, the scenes and comment on them.

Also rung in are the facts that they can not leave till they solve the riddle. They discuss and analyze to seemingly no avail as the scenes are shown to them. There is a man in South America of Germanic origin who has built a life for himself but must move on, another man who died in some exotic South Sea Isle, lost cities and useless new ones.

The documentary scenes are good in their own right and do get some edge from the discussions. If nothing is really proved, the far-out approach makes this a clever new wrinkle on travel documentaries. It won the top prize at this recent Belgian Experimental Film Fest where the jury felt it added a new dimension to travel aspects and created its own form and outlook.

Anyway, it has enough color and entertainment, in spite of its tricky and talky cementing aspects, to have this something that could pay off with regular audiences as well as more selective ones. It is a gimmick that has worked. Color is good and editing sharp with a solid counterpointed musical score.

Mosk.

Futari
(Couple) (JAPANESE)

Knokke, Jan. 7.

Richie production and release. Written and directed and edited by Donald Richie. Camera, Clifford Harrington. With Smila Stefanovitch, Kiyoshi Hosoya. At Belgian Experimental Film Fest. Running time, 40 MINS.

Woman	Smila Stefanovitch
Man	Kiyoshi Hosoya

Donald Richie, an American, has written a definitive book on the Japanese cinema. And now he has made a film there which shows a feeling for the architecture, mood and atmosphere of that country where he has lived for many years. However, it is somewhat too mannered and literary and, along with its length, looks like primarily only for specialized and arty situations abroad, preferably supported by another medium length film.

This deals with the affair between a pretty thirtyish American woman and a handsome 26-year-old Japanese boy. The film rocks back and forth in time, makes its points in slow, posed scenes with commentary by both the man and woman on the incidents. She speaks in English and he in Japanese, so it would need no subtitles in the U.S.

Neither can speak to the other but theirs is a more than physical love and Richie manages to catch this in well-observed scenes. The woman is waiting for the boy and relives their affair in a series of scenes that have no chronological order but convey their first love, the boy's anger when he feels just a sort of object and humiliation and their finally deciding to try again in spite of the many things that separate them.

Obviously influenced by "Hiroshima Mon Amour," this has the same intermingling of time and events. Richie also uses sound adroitly if sometimes he forces up the sound level to give a feeling of anger rather than letting it emulate from the characters.

Playing is graceful and easy. This is more a muted series of incidents than a richly narrative pic. It sometimes overdoes symbols and effects. Film's slowness and repetitions often get in the way of its theme and characterizations. But both players respond nicely. Richie shows some definite filmic flair and can be promising when he assimilates his obvious influences and learns how to integrate his characters more fully into life rather than posing them.

It has a good technical polish and is a promising, if somewhat arty start. Mosk.

SUES FOR SLIPPERY FLOOR

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 21.

A $15,000 negligence suit has been filed against Cody Enterprises Inc., owner of the Paramount theatre in Barre, by a Barre woman who claims she was permanently injured when she slipped and fell on newly washed floors there.

Mrs. Virginia Perojo charges an usher failed to show her to her seat and that she was not warned of the condition of the floors prior to her "teeth shattering" fall in the aisle of the theatre, Sept. 2, 1961.

MANHATTAN'S OWN VAULTIES

Who Cared If Eve Was Blonde?

Rome, Jan. 21.

Glib and always tongue-in-cheek, John Huston got off a number of risible remarks in parrying queries by the Rome press corps, anent "The Bible." Film would "take us longer than it did God" to create the Earth.

Would film have pro-Catholic or pro-Protestant outlook? he was asked—"No, we're only being pious and sanctimonious."

What was his religion, Huston was asked? "Well, I believe in the Ecumenical Council."

Was Eve a blonde or brunete? Well, probably neither; it didn't seem very relevant at the time.

What position would "The Bible" have in the progression and style of his past work? "I hope there'll be no display of intellectuality."

As for the ambitious project itself, what were his personal feelings? "Well, I feel like an easel painter asked to decorate a Vatican ceiling."

Italy's Many Features on Holy Text

Huston Readying for DeLaurentiis — Baldi Shooting Two or More Biblicals—New Studios

Rome, Jan. 21.

John Huston has arrived in Rome for final pre-production talks with Dino DeLaurentiis anent "The Bible." Hope to begin shooting, probably in Italy, Yugoslavia, and perhaps other areas, by April, with Huston in sole command. Script is by Cristopher Fry. Interiors will be shot at DeLaurentiis gigantic new studio complex which became operative this week. All company offices and officers have taken up residence there.

On the heels of the DeLaurentiis timetable comes one from San Paolo Film of Rome, which reveals a series of features based on Biblical events to be made starting Feb. 10. Company has already made one such pic, called "I Patriarchi" (The Patriarchs), whcih is said to cover territory (Genesis, Noah's Arc, Isaac, Jacob, etc.,) which will partly be covered by the Huston pic. DeLaurentiis has bought out rights to this initial San Paolo effort.

Marcello Baldi, who directed first San Paolo pic, will also direct follow-up. He starts work Feb. 10 at Cinecitta Studios on "I Giudici" (The Justices), which will comprise stories of Joshua, Gideon, Jefte, and others. After Cinecitta interiors, pic will continue on locations in Sahara, Morocco, and in Spain, near Almeria and Avila. Script, as in first part, is by Ottavio Jemma and Flavio Nicolini.

After this second item, Baldi tackles "Saul and David" in same locations. Total shooting sked calls for about eight months' work.

Subseqûently, company plans "Paulus," pic based on life of the Apostle, and leading up to his decapitation at hands of Nero. Script for this segment, which will likely be followed by other Biblical items on San Paolo's sked, is by Giorgio Prosperi, Tullio Pinelli, and Riccardo Bacchelli, with Ottavio Jemma consultant on definitive script.

PAIR SUE EMBASSY

Charge Damages From 'Women of World' Footage

Joseph E. Levine and Embassy Pictures, of which he is prez, and RKO Theatres are being sued for $1,000,000 in a damage action filed last week in N.Y. Federal Court by Mary Timmerman and James E. Timmerman. Suit involves the film "Women of the World" and also names as a defendant Cineriz, Italo producer of the pic.

Complaint seeks to enjoin defendants from using any portraits or other pictures of the Timmermans, items they claim have been used without their consent. RKO exhibited the film last September. Plaintiffs contend that unauthorized pix of them were used in the picture in sequences lensed in Hamburg by Italo Gualtero Jacopetti, who also made "Mondo Cane." "Women" depicts bizarre behavior of women in various parts of the globe and the Hamburg scenes deal with that city's bordellos.

Andrew Stone set Ernest Gann to script Stone's treatment, "The Winning of the Skies," latter's upcoming indie for Metro release.

Dan Mann Scouts Sites

Tel Aviv, Jan. 21

Yank director Daniel Mann was in last week to scout locations for his upcoming Sophia Loren starrer, "Judith," a modern love story due to be lensed here in 1964.

Pic will have a script by J. P. Miller, based on a story by Laurence Durell, author of "Justine."

$6-Million Debt Erasure a Cheery Item at Magna

With the help of Todd-AO royalties from 20th-Fox's "Cleopatra," Magna Pictures hopes to pay off in full an old $6,000,000 debt "which has been a real problem" to the company, veep and treasurer A. E. Bollengier told the annual meeting of Magna stockholders in New York last week. Bollengier conducted the meeting in the absence of prez George Skouras, who is still recuperating from a recent illness.

Veep reported that Magna's income for the nine months ended Oct. 31, 1963, was $653,890. Expenses were $653,368, leaving a net before taxes of $522. Net results for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1964 will be close to the "break-even point," he said. Estimates for 1964 are about the same.

According to Bollengier, Magna already has collected to date about $300,000 in Todd-AO royalties on the release of "Cleopatra" in the U. S. and Canada. Relief from its debt burden, via the "Cleo" royalties, said the veep, will allow Magna to pursue further production plans in the Todd-AO process. It's understood, however, that plans to make a spectacle film based on the life of Constantine The Great, long a favorite project of George Skouras, have been set aside.

Another possible source of income for the coming in 1964 is a reissue of "South Pacific." Test dates on this will be launched within the next 60 days, the veep reported.

Magna stockholders elected seven incumbent directors and two new ones, Jesse Chinich, Magna's general sales manager, and N. R. Caine, tax columnist for the World Telegram & Sun and senior partner in N. R. Caine & Co., certified public accountants. They succeed Macmerrill Birnbaum and Joseph M. Seider.

Ribintzki, Class of '28, Departs Stanley Warner

Washington, Jan. 21.

Louis "Rip" Ribintzki has retired as Washington area buyer for the Stanley Warner Theatres.

He started with the organization in 1928 as a booker and in 1948 became a head buyer.

100 SHOESTRING FEATURES UNSOLD

By VINCENT CANBY

What does a young indie filmmaker do in the long, long months between pictures? Merrill S. Brody, one of the more active members of New York's film production community, runs a school for would-be filmmakers.

The producer-writer, who, with partner Allan Baron, made "Blast of Silence" several years ago and has just completed a new feature, "Pie in The Sky," estimated last week that there are at least 100 independently made features lying "unsold" in various film vaults around the city. Noting that this repped an accumulation of perhaps 10 years, Brody still thinks it's an unnecessarily large stock of "remaindered" features.

With this in mind, he last year started his School of Motion Picture Production. His idea was to earn some money, perhaps learn from his pupils, and to channel some of the "tremendous" creative energy of other young filmmakers into productive pursuits. Sincerity of intention isn't enough for a man in a field as technical as filmmaking. He must also learn the craft.

At the Brody school, which he says started out as a sort of informal discussion group, four classes are now taught: basic film production, which covers the creative, technical and business aspects of filmmaking; photography; editing, and an advanced workshop, which concentrates on the writing and directing of films.

Although he considers himself principally a "creator," Brody does not underestimate the business side of film production, and thus the stress on it in his "basic film production" course. That would include not only how to put a production together, but also how to realize the most money from the completed product.

He and Baron made their first feature, "Blast of Silence," for $100,000 and, says Brody, "everyone else has gotten their money out of it except Baron and me." Domestic theatrical and tv rights were sold to Universal for $60,000 flat. Another $25,000 has been earned in several countries abroad to date, but he and his partner will not have recouped all their deferrments until pic has brought in about $150,000. He doesn't doubt that it will hit that figure, but he thinks it's an upside down business when the people who initiated and created the project, are the last ones to realize any of the profits.

(That experience with "Blast" has obviously wised up the Baron-Brody team on the selling of their new "Pie in The Sky." They now have a knowledgeable film man as agent on the pic, vet indie distrib Irvin Shapiro, and they are out to make a global deal, if at all possible.)

In addition to supervising his school, which now has about 35 students, Brody is prepping for his third indie feature, "Two Weeks As A Tiger," which is do to go into production in March or April. This will mark his debut as a director (Baron directed both "Blast" and "Pie"), as well as his first feature away from Baron, who is committed to producer Allan Fromkess for a new Allied Artists pic. Raymond Jacobs, another New York indie, will act as producer for Brody on "Tiger."

Says Sam Spiegel

London, Jan. 21.

"Just one of the bidders," Sam Spiegel described himself yesterday, when asked about his bid for British Lion Studios. And Government has set a fixed price of 1,600,000 British pounds (about $4,480,000 at the going exchange rate) for the studios and has received bids from Spiegel, Sydney Box, Sir Michael Balcon, Leslie Grade, and Ronald Lyon.

Spiegel said that he was bidding for a group of British associates. He declined to name them but said they are prominent people in the motion picture industry here.

That Old Volcano at Par Erupting With Varied Fare, Many Showmen

The "come-alive" at Paramount Pictures which became marked some time ago makes that company's Times Square headquarters a natural magnet at the present time for those showmen seeking a market for properties and a patron for projects.

Figuring prominently in deals at Paramount are Joseph E. Levine, Samuel Bronston and Otto Preminger. (See separate story on Levine).

Bronston will have four for Par, including the soon-to-be-roadshowed "Fall of the Roman Empire" and "Circus World" which is now being completed in Spain, also a possible roadshow. "Nightrunners of Bengal" will also be made this year by Bronston for Par. Preminger will make the Naval novel "Harm's Way" as the first of three.

Separately, Par is talking with the Kirk Douglas-Eddie Lewis owned Joel Productions, which did "Seven Days in May," about further projects. Also dickers are on with Philip Yordan and others.

All of this more or less fresh activity augment a variety of prior commitments. Among these is one with Hal Wallis, whose "Becket" begins as roadshow March 11 in New York, giving Par two hard-ticket pix going, counting "Roman Empire": Wallis also has more Elvis Presley romps upcoming. Then there's Martin Ritt who did "Hud" this past year, Jerry Lewis who's now making "The Patsy," Aubrey Schenk, Melville Shavelson, Daniel Mann and others. Among these men are such projects as "Boeing, Boeing," "Dear and Glorious Physician," "Judith," "Greatest Job in the World," "The Spy Who Came In From the Cold" and others.

The company's schedule for the next few months looks something like this. In release is "Love With the Proper Stranger" and the reissued "Hud." For February there's "Seven Days in May," in March there'll be "Roman Empire," "Becket" and "Paris When It Sizzles," in April will be "Son of Captain Blood," May will have some reissues and June through August will have "Carpetbaggers," "Robinson Crusoe on Mars," "Lady in a Cage" and "The Patsy" to be followed by "Where Love Has Gone" in the fall.

In addition to all of this, Par will soon begin to market its post-1948 film library to tv, either by doing it itself or by leasing them to a tv distrib. Also, news is expected shortly on the company's color tv tube project and there will also be developments shortly regarding Telemeter, Par's tollvision subsid. This collection of factors, plus statements by Paramount execs about their great expectations for 1964, plus various other aspects has made the company a very popular item among producers, investors and other related parties in recent months. And the pace is accelerating.

Nick Ray as Boniface

Madrid, Jan. 21.

Nicholas Ray stepped away from cameras last week and played host to a roster of filmland celebs at the opening of the new saloon-eatery, El Nicca's. Ray, principal investor in a Yank-Spanish combine, opened what he considers to be a long standing need for an entertainment world oasis in the Spanish Capital City.

Gathering included John Wayne, Jean Negulesco, Claudia Cardinale, Ty Hardin, John Smith, Richard Conte, Donna Anderson, and film executives Samuel Bronston, Michael Waszynski, Jaime Prades and Summer Williams. Spanish film contingent was headed by Vicente Salgado, Joaquin Agosti, Juan Perez and Antonio Roman, Yvonne Bastien, Alfredo Mayo and Jose Nieto.

Roses in the Leis; Hawaii Show Biz Sees Dandy 1964

Honolulu, Jan. 21.

Nobody's crying the blues along the entertainment rialto. Films are holding up notably. Most niteries also in the black. Virtually all touring attractions making money on one-nighter or multi-night stands.

A new four-wall motion picture theatre will open this summer and the Consolidated circuit is prepping a new drive-in, first of its type on the windward side of Honolulu. Still pending is the prospect of another four-wall deluxer for Waikiki; this, if and when it materializes, will be Waikiki's third first-run outlet.

Generally, there is an optimistic outlook for all aspects of show biz, based on several economic facts.

For one thing, tourism is thriving, with all signs pointing to the coming summer as being the biggest ever, by far. (You can thank the new thrift class jet service for this; fare from Los Angeles or San Francisco via scheduled carrier is only $100 on these no-food, no-drinks, no frills flights.

Second significant fact is that Hawaii's median family income is about $1,000 a year higher than the nation's median famly figure. Although housing costs are high, by comparison, the hometowners are entertainment-minded and, more important, have the wherewithal.

Additionally, children under 18 years of age now represent a whopping 40 percent of the state's population. They're hep and hot to go for the touring shows, including the rock 'n' roll gigs.

State's population, too, is growing. Estimated at 632,770 in the 1960 census. Hawaii now has an estimated nosecount of 715,000, not counting military personnel living on the various bases. A good portion of the servicemen's collective cash goes for entertainment, natch, most logically in the case of the young unmarried servicemen who are footloose and fancy free when "making" the town on a liberty or overnight pass.

There's some grumbling in Waikiki that the really rich tourists, in many instances, have had it and are either overflying Hawaii (figuratively) on vacation flights or confining themselves to the luxury resorts on Maui, Kauai and Hawaii islands. And, in truth, Waikiki is adjusting to this new look.

The few deluxe niteries and eateries are catering more and more to home-based trade and an impressive number of once-while luxury restaurants are now on a $2.95 dinner kick.

EDMOND CHEVIE'S CLAIM

Wants His Sole Sales Rep Status With 150 Confirmed

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Enforcement of a contract which he claims makes him exclusive sales rep for the new Dimension 150 widescreen process and which would bring him 25% of all sales, is sought by Edmond Chevie, film-tv producer-director, is a suit for declaratory relief filed in Superior Court against Richard H. Vetter and Carl Williams, developers of process, Louis de Rochemont and Dimension 150 Inc.

Chevie alleged he guided the two inventors of process and advised them in production of process' test film. Complaint charged that after signing him to an exclusive representation pact, defendants interfered with his sales program and allegedly conspired to breach their agreement with Chevie before selling out to Todd-AO.

Carroll Baker, who recently finished in "The Carpetbaggers" for Paramount, inked by studio to a new three-pix pact, starting in 1965.

Disenchanted With Bookkeepers

Mel Shavelson Passes Some Tart Comments on Being 'In On The Profit'

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Mel Shavelson, once partnered with Jack Rose in a program of indies for Paramount but for past few years operating his own company under exclusive pact to Paramount, will ankle studio when he completes his current commitment of two remaining films and enter indie production instead of linking with one company.

Next for Shavelson, who produces, writes and directs, will be "The Greatest Job in the World," slated to roll in late Spring. His outfit is tabbed Llenroc.

Producer's Paramount deal calls for a participation in profits, but he said, in reporting future plans, "I don't think I would let participation in profits blind me," when he makes future deals. He elaborated that while such deals give a creator more freedom and consequently are more satisfying creatively, financially the story is something else.

"Participation deals don't pay off as well as I had hoped they would," he related. "You're at the mercy of some form of bookkeeping which nobody knows about. The studio tells me they do well on a picture which breaks even.

"The minute they let the writer have a piece of the picture, we should all have become suspiquipped, adding "I long for the old son-in-law days of the studios, but all that changed the minute they found out you can get a writer to work by holding a carrot out in front of him."

While he didn't preclude participation deals in his post-Par future, he said he would not take part in them unless there was some form of protection."

A few years ago Shavelson and Jack Rose were partnered in Scribe Productions, which produced pix for Par, and they sold the company's five pix to the studio in a stock swap deal.

"Working on a participation in today's market is a very chancy thing, but certainly that shouldn't be the primary consideration," he asserted. Overhead figures at a major studio dent film's possibility of making coin, but if a film could be done at low overhead, the creator would have a chance to earn some coin, he averred.

Shavelson struck it rich some years ago when he and Rose partnered with Bob Hope in "The Seven Little Foys" for Par. That film cost $1,300,000 because Shavelson, Rose and Hope deferred their take—("the first time Hope ever worked for nothing")—but it was a b.o. hit and all concerned profited.

Elvis to United Artists

Elvis Presley will be back with United Artists come 1965. The swivel-hipped singer-actor has been inked to a two-picture deal with the company, the first of which will be made by Edward Small Productions and the second of which is as yet unsettled.

The Small production will be based on the story of "Frankie and Johnny" as depicted in the famous song. Small has acquired the rights to the tune and pre-production on the picture will begin later in 1964 with principal photography to be lensed the following year after Presley's commitment to Hal Wallis and Paramount.

"Frankie and Johnny" will be the third pic Presley will have released via UA. The other two were "Follow That Dream" and Kid Galahad." He has made a string of pix for Par.

'Unsinkable Molly'

Continued from page 3

borrowed footage has had color added through use of filters, making it look like a complete part of the picture, which, of course, was shot in color.

Walters and Roger Edens, associate producer and also in charge of music for "Molly," said they will complete picture by March 1 to prep for Fourth of July release. Film, to date, has cost $5,400,000, good deal of the cost going for Morton Haack's costumes (Debbie Reynolds has 32 changes) and Preston Ames' sets.

Sets include $500,000 worth of antique furniture borrowed from Warner Bros., including a piano that once belonged to Harry Payne Whitney valued at $250,000 alone. Conversely, the brass bed which figures highly in the story, was bought for a mere $10.45.

Edens has signed Calvin Jackson, Alexander Courage, Leo Shuken, Jack Hayes and Leo Arnaud to underscore Meredith Willson's music for the picture. Five musicians are now writing tie-in themes and incidental backgrounds.

Walters and Edens earlier were paired on "Jumbo" for Metro. "Molly" marks Walters' 20th picture in 20 years of exclusive contracts at Metro. Director's first film was "Good News," which Edens produced.

Walters said he has two years left on his current pact, will not resign. Director said "It is about time I try the other side of the fence instead of staying here."

Reade Postpones 'Wonderama' Bow

Hartford, Jan. 21.

American premiere of "Wonderama" process of projection and screening was postponed here last week when discovery was made that special German lens was of wrong calibre and did not respond to mathematical computations for the process. Quickly obtained American-made optic could have served the purpose but didn't fill out the curved screen and it was decided to postpone until proper lens was secured.

Radio and tv time as well as newspaper ads informed public of the cancellation of the showcasing. Press preview was also cancelled. Film scheduled to be shown in color was "Mediterranean Holiday," a travelog.

Wonderama is owned by Walter Reade-Sterling Inc. It's another version of the wide screen, in-depth optic type of screening. It's expected Wonderama will be packaged and franchised on an exclusive basis to film houses across the nation. Film special lens to be adapted to projectors, and screen will be furnished by Reade.

It's expectedly a low cost factor to theatres in so far as there is no investment, no structural changes, no special operators needed by theatres. Reade will get a percentage of house take. Understood also that it will allow film houses to compete with Cinerama and other "x x ama" type of showings.

Understood that almost any print of any make and size is compatible to the process and a minimum of cost is required to adapt a print to Wonderama.

Wonderama was tried out last year in England and in Argentina. A showing this week in Trenton, N.J., has been postponed, pending the Hartford showcasing.

Inventor of the system is Leon W. Wells, New York physicist and designer of motion picture equipment. He was granted the International Motion Picture Award for outstanding scientific contribution to the motion picture field during the year 1960. Leon K. Bronesky started the development of the new film projection in 1955. Latter is a vet legit and film producer.

DOWNTOWN AUGUSTA SELLS TO COLORED

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 21.

This burg's three downtown theatres opened their doors Wed. (15) on an integrated basis. Some 18 Negroes bought tickets and attended shows in former all-white patronage houses without incident.

One theatre manager reported integration was agreed upon by theatres, city and military officials and leaders of the Negro community.

HOMETOWNER'S DEDICATION

Beard Plaza Honors South High, Class of 1936

Youngstown, O., Jan. 21.

The 800-seat Boardman Plaza and Lincoln Knolls Plaza theatres were opened recently by Broumas Theatres Inc., which will soon be joined by another theatre, in the Liberty Plaza Shopping Center. This, in addition to the downtown State Theatre, will give the chain four houses in this city, where John G. Broumas lived as a youth.

G. N. Limbert, Youngstown, is vice president in charge of construction of Broumas Theatres in the Ohio-New York-Pennsylvania area for the 43-theatre chain. He will have his headquarters at the Boardman Plaza Theatre here. William Petrych, manager of the State, will be city manager of the four houses.

750 Rally for Gotham Banquet of Importers; Reade Only Speaker

Approximately 750 persons were on hand last night (Tues.) for the annual awards dinner-dance sponsored by the Independent Film Importers & Distributors of America at the Americana Hotel in New York. Highlight of the evening was the presentation of the IFIDA awards, including (as previously reported) the Joseph Burstyn award to Federico Fellini's "8½" as best foreign language film, with "Tom Jones" cited as best foreign film in the English language.

The only formal speaker of the evening was Walter Reade Jr., chairman of Walter Reade-Sterling, who was presented with IFIDA's service award in recognition of his efforts to promote the specialized film in the U.S. Reade told the audience that specialized films, both foreign and domestic have become "the greatest vital growth element" in the motion picture business today.

In addition to those awards which had been announced earlier, special citations were presented the Museum of Modern Art, for its promotion of foreign films here; and to the French Film Office, for its promotion of French pix in this country. Joseph Maternati, director of the FFO, received the latter award. In an unusual move, IFIDA asked attorney Ephraim London, who has successfully fought some of the industry's most important censorship cases, to present the Burstyn award to "8½." London was attorney for the late Joseph Burstyn in his precedent-setting "Miracle" case.

Theodore Bikel was the evening's master of ceremonies and Daniel Frankel dinner chairman.

'GONE ARE THE DAYS' AS BENEFIT UNREELING

Schenectady, Jan. 21.

Area premiere of "Gone Are the Days," the screen version of the Broadway play, "Purlie Victorious," will be held in the auditorium of Linton High School, Feb. 2 at 4 p.m., for the benefit of Everest Club's scholarship fund for Negro students. Picture, recently shown in New York, stars Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee in their original roles.

Satire in segregation and bigotry attitudes, film's Schenectady exhibition will be at $1.50 for adults and 75c for children. Linton auditorium is one of the finest for a school, in this section of the state.

Chums Cheer Corbett

Scranton, Jan. 21.

More than 100 friends and business associates of John G. Corbett hailed the showman at a testimonial dinner here (17) on his promotion to the dual posts of district manager and director of promotion and publicity for Penn-Paramount Theatres.

The promotion for Corbett, formerly manager of the Strand and Center here, became effective Jan. 1. It puts him in charge of eight Northeastern Pennsylvania playhouses.

Corbett has won several awards for his showmanship and promotional stunts, since coming here from his native Boston area in 1956. He succeeds Ben Rosenberg, who resigned to devote his attention to private interests which reportedly include a drive-in in the Harrisburg area.

Sarcasm For Those Visiting Tokyo

By DAVE JAMPEL

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

Who will be the first in 1964?

—to protest when his promoter asks him to sing numbers popular in Japan?
—to research a World War II scenario in Tokyo night clubs?
—to say that Korea's troubled Walker Hill resort will soon install gambling?
—to announce productions on three continents and then restrict activities to local saloons?
—to unilaterally cast Toshiro Mifune in his next picture?
—to tell reporters how much he wants to elevate Japanese performers and then try to sign some of them to contracts that Oliver Twist would have rejected?
—to ask for discounts in department stores because he's the manager of Joe Star?
—to collect fat, weekly under-the-counter payoffs in excess of an act's known salary from a Japanese promoter and then holler when the promoter asks for an extra show from the same clobbered act?
—to become elusive for business appointments so his schedule of bathhouse visits would not be disturbed?
—to become petulant because his promotional visit is not marked by crowds?
—to grab jet tickets as the manager of an imported act and then duck managerial responsibilities once on the scene?
—to claim he took the Kim Sisters to the United States?
—to state how vital it is for a picture to be filmed here, in its natural setting, and then shoot 85% in a Kyoto studio?
—to remark that although he understands Japanese audiences don't applaud, they did for his act?
—to talk deals here and then rush back to the U.S. to try to acquire rights to the properties under negotiation?
—to fight payment of overseas phone calls and then blow thousands of bucks having expensive talent sit around making belated preparations for the picture to roll?

Market Prospects for Dimension 150

Perhaps 10-15 Theatres In U. S.—Trade Hears Film May Present Mike Todd-Type Showman-Hero

Turning to the new Dimension 150 process, which is controlled by a company owned 50% by United Artists Theatre Circuit and 50% by its inventors, Marshall Naify, the new UATC chief declared last week in N. Y. that he expected the first feature in the process to get underway this year. Magna Pictures, in which UATC holds the largest single interest, will probably participate in the production with Louis de Rochemont Associates.

As Naify envisions it, no more than 10 to 15 theatres in the U.S. —in as many key cities—will be equipped to show D-150 pix. Pix would be roadshown in these houses for extended runs, then be made available for "conventional" 70m exhibition, after which they would go out in 35m. Of the 10 to 15 U.S. theatres to be equipped for D-150, he thinks that maybe four or five could well be UATC houses.

Naify declined to reveal the royalty basis on which D-150 will be made available to producers, or whether the equipment will be sold or leased to exhibs. These details now are being worked out, he said, adding that he expected the policy to be somewhat different from that by which Todd-AO is made available to outside producers (straight royalty) or the Todd-AO projection equipment is sold to exhibs.

Overseas D-150 will be franchised to local concerns which will service both producers and exhibs.

Naify declined to say what the first D-150 pic would be, except to describe it as a modern narrative type of film—as opposed to travelog. (From other sources, there are reports—unconfirmed—that DeRochemont has been working on a script dealing with a Mike Todd type of showman making a spec pic somewhat resembling "Around The World in 80 Days.")

Magna, said Naify, in addition to pursuing its own production plans, will also continue to pick up outside product for distribution from time to time.

Naify will be in New York several more weeks before returning to his San Francisco home, and plans t return regularly to N.Y. on extended visits to oversee the various UATC interests.

Under University Age

Honolulu, Jan. 21.

Royal circuit has switched its "for adult only" ad tag line during the run of "A Stranger Knocks" (Trans-Lux) at its Queen Theatre, not far from the U. of Hawaii and Chaminade College campuses.

Display ads now read: "No one under university age will be admitted."

Embassy Contract Five Pix for Japan

Embassy Pictures has set a deal for distribution of five of its releases in Japan, the first major agreement for that country the company has set. Deal involves a sizable guarantee. Could be worth over $1,000,000 to the participants, according to Embassy estimates. Principal is Nippon-Herald Motion Picture Co., cohelmed by ex-Columbia man Mike Bergher and Tokyo impresario Katzumi Furukawa.

Involved in the pact is the distribution of the four coproductions of Embassy prez Joseph E. Levine and Italo producer Carlo Ponti: "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," "Empty Canvas," "Ghost at Noon" and "Casanova," as well as the recently-purchased "Ape Woman." The first three Levine-Ponti pix are already playing in Italy and will soon preem in the U. S. "Casanova" will soon be filmed and "Woman" is due for U. S. preeming shortly, having already opened abroad.

Along with Japan itself, the agreement also will service Okinawa and Korea. It will be the pilot for a further association between Embassy and the Japanese distrib which is planned for Nippon-Herald to eventually handle all Embassy product in that territory. Holding that overall deal from completion is a limitation on licenses which presently exists.

The Oriental market is one which Embassy has never been in with the exception of the release of "Boccaccio '70" in Japan via Metro a while back. It is an area the company has been quite interested in because of the picture resources which exist there and because of Embassy's tv production plans, Japan being a substantial source of tv as well as picture playing time.

Robert Aldrich set I. A. Bezzerides to script "The Greatest Mother of 'Em All," which producer-director launches in summer.

Off From Buffalo

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Charles Mancuso, in 20th-Fox sales dept. in Buffalo for 16 years before coming to L.A. five years ago, succeeds Santiago Magdaleno as booker in Allied Artists' L.A. exchange. He also had been with 20th and Paramount in L.A. as a booker.

Magdaleno, who held his post for six years, is now a salesman for AA in local territory.

THE DOORS
OPEN ON NEW MAGNIFICENCE...

RICHARD BURTON

as Becket

HAL WALLIS'

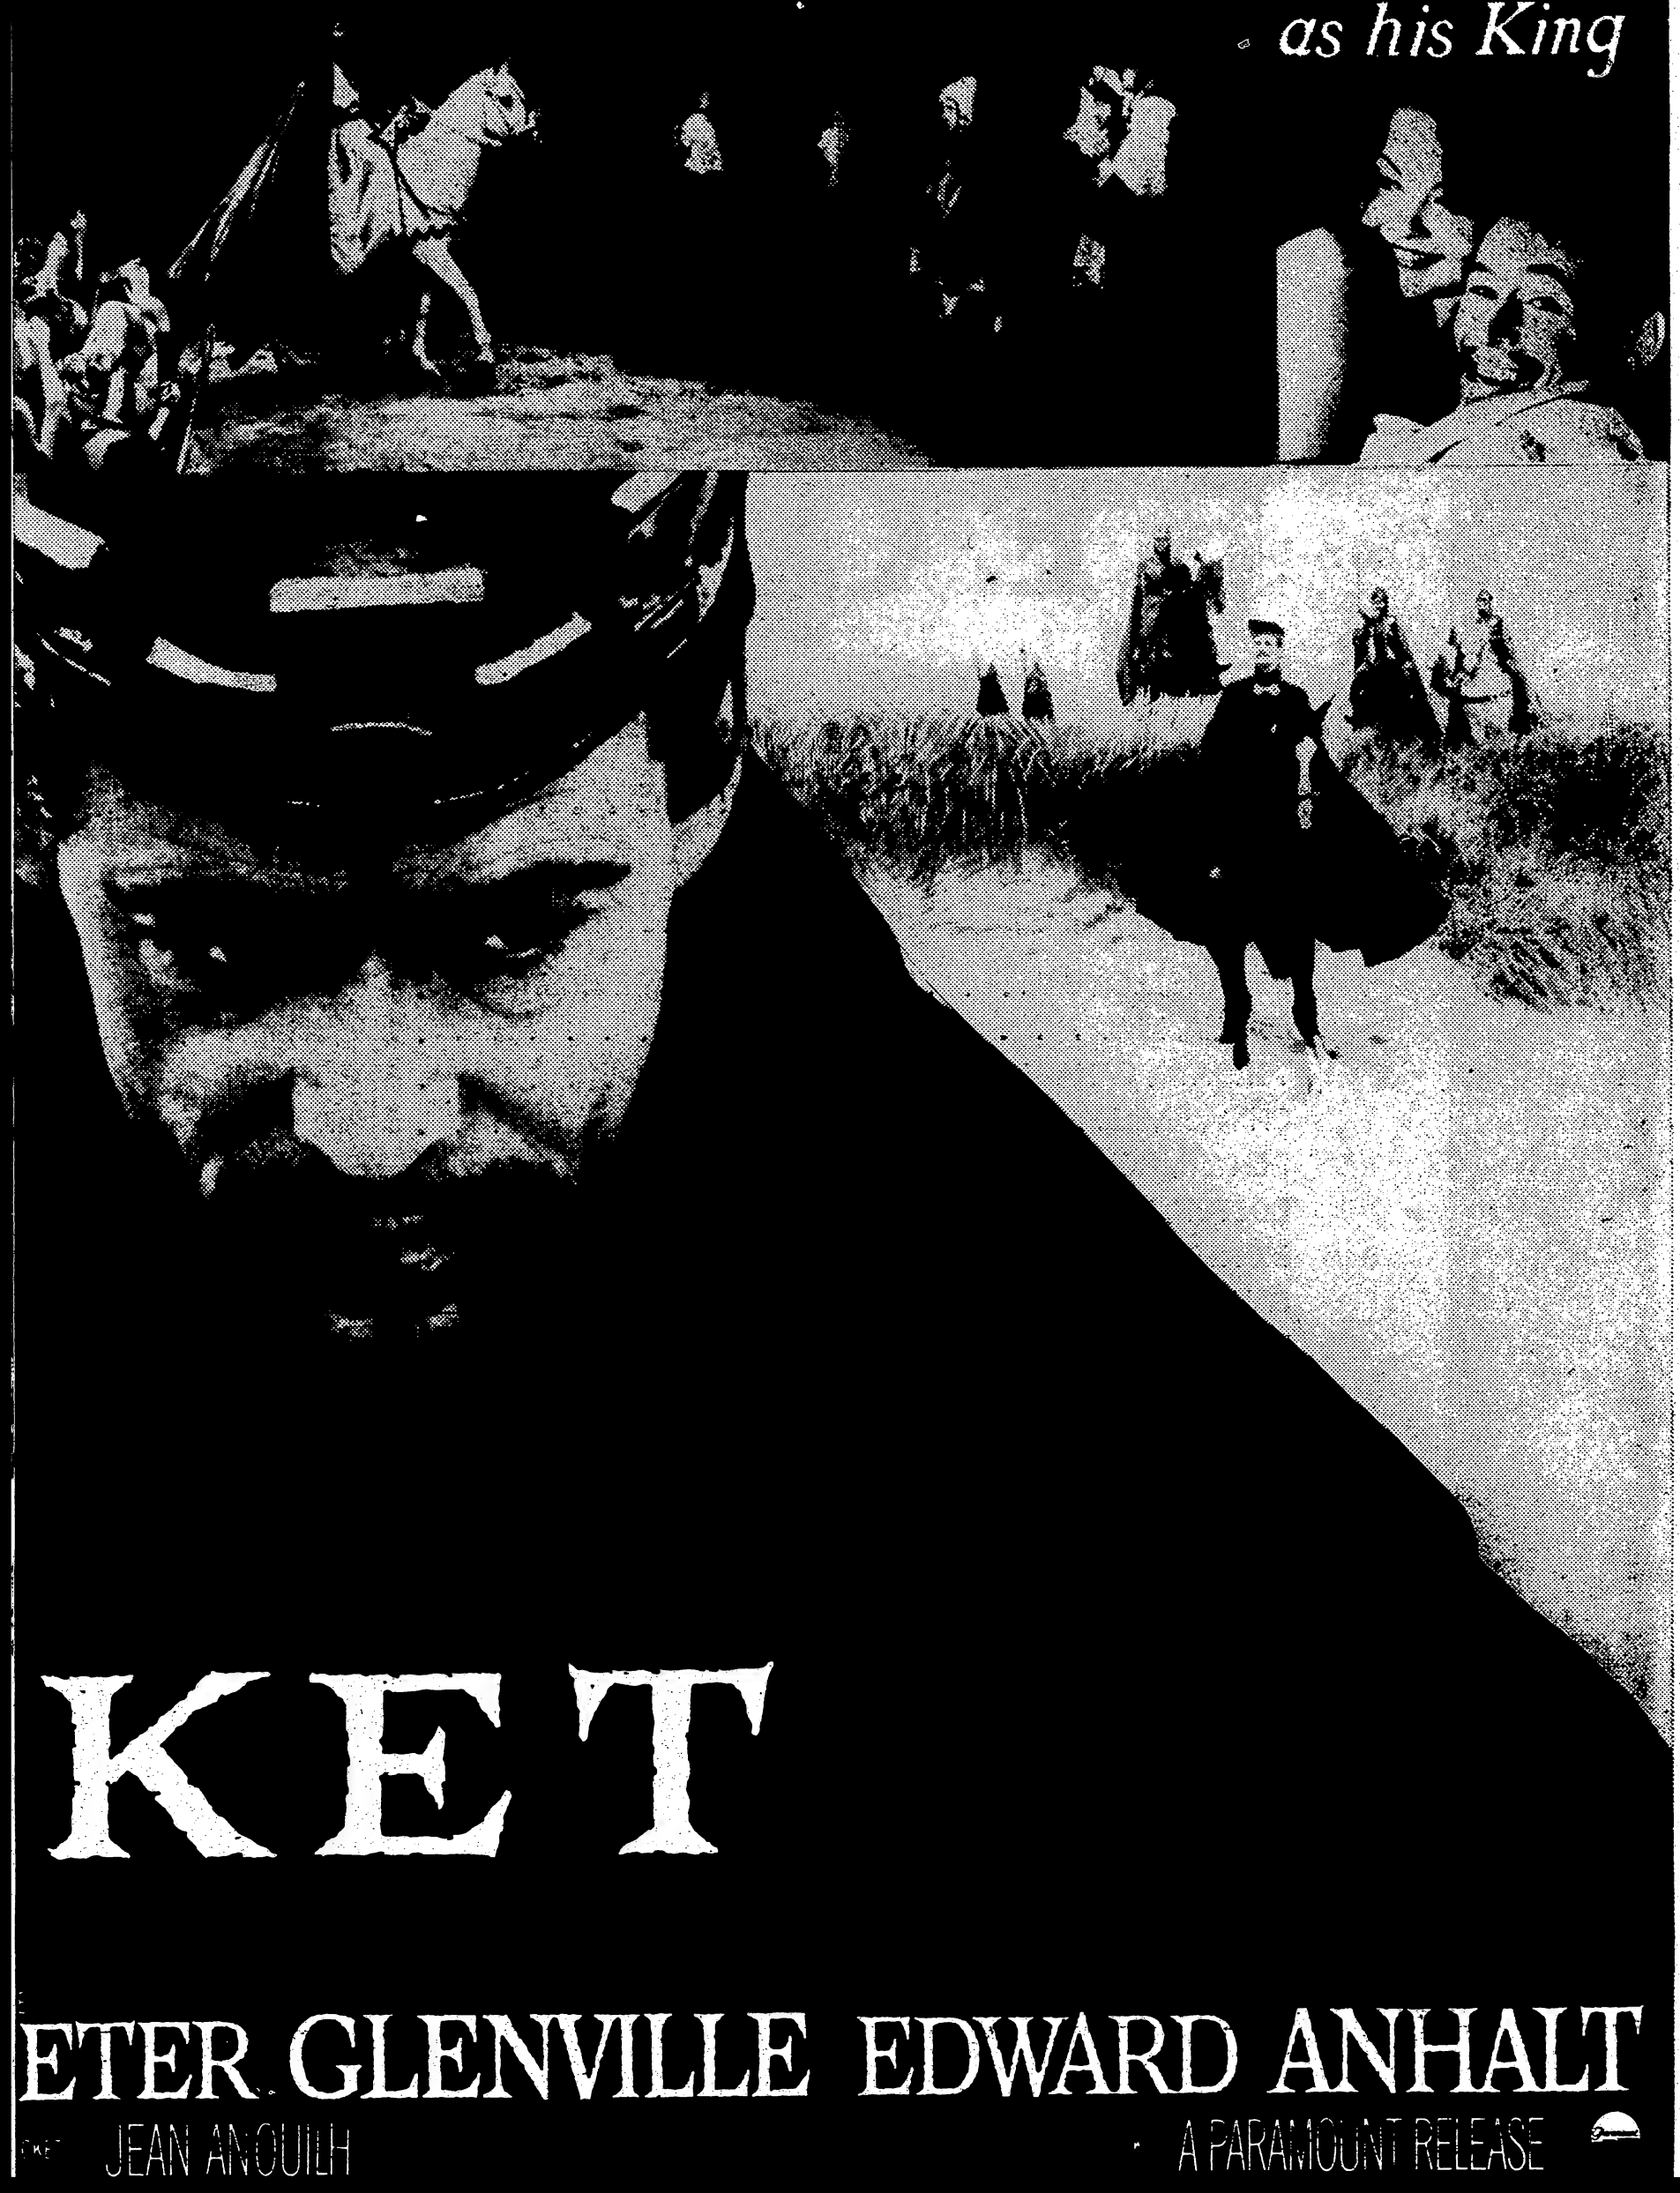
BECKET

JOHN GIELGUD · WALD · GOETZ · MARTELLI · PETERSON · P

PANAVISION · TECHNICOLOR · 70 MM

PETER O'TOOLE

as his King

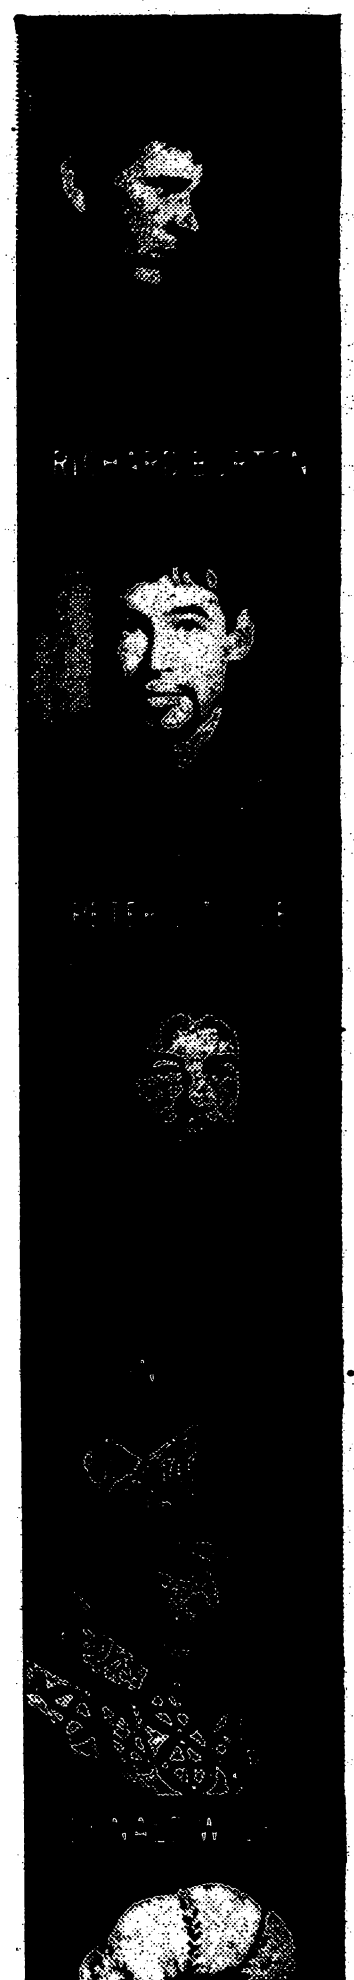


KET

ETER GLENVILLE EDWARD ANHALT

KET JEAN ANOUILH

A PARAMOUNT RELEASE



EXCLUSIVE
70 MM RESERVED SEAT
ENGAGEMENTS FOR...

BECKET

WORLD PREMIERE

NEW YORK CITY . . LOEW'S STATE . . . . . MARCH 11th

TO BE FOLLOWED IN...

LOS ANGELES, CAL. . .	STANLEY-WARNER BEVERLY HILLS	MARCH 18th
OMAHA, NEB.	COOPER	MARCH 18th
TORONTO, CANADA. . .	EGLINTON	MARCH 18th
CHICAGO, ILL.	CINESTAGE	MARCH 19th
DENVER, COLO.	RKO INTERNATIONAL 70 . . .	APRIL 22nd
BOSTON, MASS.	GARY	THIS SPRING
MONTREAL, CANADA . .	SEVILLE	NEXT ATTRACTION
SAN FRANCISCO CAL. . .	UNITED ARTISTS . .	NEXT ATTRACTION
WASHINGTON, D.C. . . .	ONTARIO	NEXT ATTRACTION

INTERNATIONAL ENGAGEMENTS IN....

LONDON
PARIS
ROME
MILAN

Rising Mercury Lifts Chi Biz; 'Prize' Smash $40,000, 'Cardinal' Lofty 21G, 'Home' Sweet 9G, 'Charade' Stout 24G

Chicago, Jan. 21.

June in January weather over the weekend has firstrun biz perking. Most outstanding take is the big $40,000 on preem of "The Prize" at the Oriental. "All Way Home" looks nice at Esquire on opener.

Theatre version of Hallmark-sponsored tv rendering of "Macbeth" is teeing off to a brisk take at World. "Purlie Victorious" is fast on Surf bow. Monroe pair of "Prelude To Ecstasy" and "Violent Years" shapes fast.

"Three Fables of Love" is posting a hardy second Carnegie week. "Young Love" is trim on its Town second round.

The holiday preemers, now all in their fourth rounds, are tapering. "Cardinal" is still tall at the Woods while "Charade" is dandy at the Chicago. "Sword In Stone" is nailing a fine fourth Roosevelt session. "Four For Texas" looks nice in its United Artists fourth. "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" is rated sharp fourth Loop round.

"Tom Jones" continued to register weekend holdouts, and shapes sockeroo in fifth Todd stanza. "Lord of Flies" is nabbing a good 17th Cinema frame.

On hardticket, "It's A Mad World" is sighting a big seventh McVickers canto while "Cleopatra" is rated firm at State-Lake in 29th frame.

Estimates for This Week

Carnegie (Brotman) (495; $1.25-$1.80) — "Three Fables of Love" (Indie) (2d wk). Good $5,000. Last week, $5,500.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 90-$1.80) —"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Hefty $24,000. Last week, $24,500.

Cinema (Stern) (500; $1.50) — "Lord of Flies" (Cont) (17th wk). Good $3,600. Last week, $3,600.

Esquire (H&E Balaban) (1,236; $1.25-$1.80) — "All Way Home" (Par). Nice $9,000 or near. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) (3d wk), $6,000.

Loop (Brotman) (606; 90-$1.80)— "Who's Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) (4th wk). Sharp $9,000. Last week, $11,000.

McVickers (Beacon) (1,100; $2.20-

(Continued on page 17)

'Darling' Smash $17,000, Pitt; 'Journey' Oke 13G; 'Charade' Big 12G, 4th

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

"Move Over, Darling" looms boff in first round at the Penn. Other newcomer, "Incredible Journey," shapes good at the Stanley. "Lilies of Field" continues its marvelous pace in 11th session at the Forum.

"It's A Mad World" remains torrid in fifth at Warner. "Cardinal" shapes lofty in fifth session at Fulton. "Charade" shows little sign of letup in fourth at the Gateway, being boffo. "Prize" in nine days at Nixon is tall for final round. "Billy Liar" looms trim in second at Squirrel Hill.

Estimates for This Week

Forum (Assoc.) (380; $1.75) — "Lilies of Field" (UA) (11th wk). Wham $3,200. Last week, $3,500.

Fulton (Assoc.) (1,900; $1-$1.75) —"Cardinal" (5th wk). Lofty $11,000 or near. Last week, $13,000.

Gateway (Assoc.) (1,900; $1-$1.75) — "Charade" (U) (4th wk). Slick $13,000 and just about maintaining pace of last week's $13,500.

Nixon (Rubin) (1,760; $1.25-$1.75)—"Prize" (MGM) (3d wk-9 days). Neat $9,000. Last week, $7,000.

Penn (UATC) (3,742; $1-$1.50)— "Move Over, Darling" (20th). Wow $17,000 or over. Last week, "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk), $6,200.

Shadyside (MOTC) (623; $1.75) —"Suitor" (Atl) (4th wk). Fairish $2,200. Last week, $2,800.

Squirrel Hill (SW) (800; $1.75)— "Billy Liar" (Cont) (2d wk). Trim $3,300. Last week, $3,500.

Stanley (SW) (3,700; $1-$1.75)— "Incredible Journey" (BV). Good $13,000. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par), $7,500.

Warner (SW) (1,260; $1.50-$3)— "It's A Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Hotsy $11,000. Last week, $11,500.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i.e., without usual tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include U. S. amusement tax.

'Charade' Pacing Cleve. at $20,000

Cleveland, Jan. 21.

Big news here this session is the launching of "Charade," which is heading for socko take on initial week at the Hipp. Biz is on upswing after bliz of last week. "Cardinal" is okay in second Allen round. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" shapes barely fair on opener at State.

"It's a Mad World" is perking to a smash take in fifth round at Palace. "The Prize" looks fine in first week of moveover at the Ohio.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (Stanley-Warner) (2,866; $1.25-$1.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (2d wk). Stout $13,000. Last week, $13,500.

Colony Art (Stanley-Warner) (1,354; $1.50)—"All Way Home" (Par) (4th wk). Modest $2,800. Last week, $3,200.

Continental Art (Art Theatre Guild) (925; $1.50)—"Mondo Cane" (Times) (2d wk). Nice $2,900. Last week, $2,700.

Heights Art (Art Theatre Guild) (925; $1.50) — "Knife in Water" (Kana) (2d wk). Okay $2,100. Last week, $2,200.

Hippodrome (Hipp Bldg. Co.) (3,500; $1.25-$1.50) — "Charade" (U). Boffo $20,000. Last week, "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk), $8,000.

Ohio (Loew) (1,020; $1.25-$1.65) — "Prize" (MGM) (m.o.). Fine $7,500 or over. Last week, "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk), $6,500.

Palace (F&A Theatres) (1,263; $1.50-$3)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Smash $15,000. Last week, $11,000.

State (Loew) (3,450; $1.50) — "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par). Fair $9,000. Last week, "Prize" (MGM) (2d wk), $11,000 for nine days.

Westwood Art (Art Theatre Guild) (955; $1.50) — "Knife in Water" (Kana) (2d wk). Average $2,200. Last week, $2,300.

'Jacket' Smart 10G, Buff; 'Charade' 8G, 4th

Buffalo, Jan. 21.

Firstrun biz is holding up nicely here currently although getting small help from "The Ceremony," lone newcomer. "Strait-Jacket" is rated solid in second round at Paramount. "Charade" looks hefty in fourth at the Buffalo. "The Cardinal" is great in fourth, being better than third, at the Century.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Loew) (3,500; 70-$1.49)— "Charade" (U) (4th wk). Hefty $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Center (AB-PT) (2,500; 90-$1.49) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Big 9,000 or near. Last week, $9,200.

Century (UATC) (2,700; 90-$1.49) —"The Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Up to great $13,000. Last week, $11,500.

Paramount (AB-PT) (3,000; 90-$1.49)—"Strait-Jacket" ,Col) (2d wk). Solid $10,000. Last week, $13,000.

Cinema (Martina) (450; 90-$1.49) —"The Ceremony" (UA). Tepid $1,500. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par) (3d wk), $2,600.

Amherst (Dipson) (1,000; 90-$1.49) — "The Ceremony" (UA). Soft $1,500. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par) (3d wk), $3,200.

Granada (Schine) (1,000; 90-$1.25)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Fair $5,000 or less. Last week, $6,000.

'Number' Smash $14,000, D.C.; 'Jones' Wham 25G

Washington, Jan. 21.

Trade is on forward move this session, after a slight dip last week. "Any Number Can Win" looms sock in opener at Apex. "Ceremony" shapes fair in same at Dupont. "Tom Jones" figures wow in fourth round at Ontario. "Strait-Jacket" looks okay in second in two houses. "Charade" looms lofty in fourth at Town.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador - Metropolitan (SW) (1,480; $1-$1.49) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col) (2d wk). Okay $12,000 or close. Last week, $9,500.

Apex (KB) (940; $1.25-$1.40)— "Any Number Can Win" (MGM). Sock $14,000 or near. Last week, "Suitor" (Indie) (3d wk), $3,500.

Dupont (Mann) (400; 90-$1.55)— "Ceremony" (UA). Fair $3,000 or over. Last week, "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) (subrun), $4,000.

Embassy (Loew) (567; $1.25-$2)— "Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Trim $8,000. Last week, $11,000.

Keith's (RKO) (1,838; $1-$1.49)— "Kings of Sun" (UA) (5th wk). Oke $6,500. Last week, $8,000.

McArthur (KB) (900; $1.25-$1.40) —"Murder at Gallop" (MGM) (10th wk). Okay $4,000. Last week, $4,500.

Ontario (KB) (1,240; $1-$2) — "Tom Jones" (UA) (4th wk). Wow $25,000. Last week, $24,500.

Palace (Loew) (2,360; $1.25-$1.80) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Fairish $8,000. Last week, $14,000.

Playhouse (TL) (459; $1.25-$1.80) —"Lord of Flies" (Cont) (5th wk). Fast $5,300. Last week, $6,000.

Plaza (TL) (278; $1.25-$1.80)— "At Lil's Place" (Indie) (4th wk). Busy $6,000. Last week, $6,500.

Town (King) (800; $1.25-$1.80)— "Charade" (U) (4th wk). Lofty $12,000. Last week, $15,000.

Trans-Lux (TL) (899; $1.49-$2)— "Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Brisk $8,000. Last week, $8,500.

Warner (SW) (1,250; $1.50-$2.75) —"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Okay $10,000. Last week, $8,500.

'World' Sock 13G, K.C.; 'Jacket' 9G

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

Though the recent bliz here didn't match the one in the East, it served to drag down grosses at most firstruns. Only new pic is "Love on a Pillow" at the Kimo, which looks strong in this midtown arty house.

"Cardinal" still is solid at Brookside in fourth. "Strait-Jacket" is rated slick at Paramount in second. "The Prize" shapes solid at the Roxy in fourth. "It's a Mad World" is socko at Empire in fifth. The mercury has done a fast reverse back to not-so-cold levels.

Estimates for This Week

Brookside (Fox Midwest-Nat. Gen. Corp.) (800; $1.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Okay $4,500. Last week, $5,000.

Capri (Durwood) (1,260; $1.80-$3)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (10th wk). Good $11,000. Last week, $12,000.

Empire (Durwood) (886; $1.50-$2.50)—"It's a Mad World" (5th wk). Sock $13,00. Last week, $14,000.

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; $1.50)— "Love on Pillow" (Col). Hep $2,500. Last week, "Devil and 10 Commandments" (Indie) (3d wk), $1,000.

Paramount (Blank-UP) (1,900; $1.25-$1.50)—"Strait-Jacket" (Col) 2d wk). Stout $9,000 or less depending on weather. Last week, $8,000.

Plaza (FMW) (1,630; $1.25-$1.50) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk-4 days). Okay $5,000. Last week, $6,500.

Rockhill (Art Theatre Guild) (821; $1-$1.50)—"The Trial" (Indie) plus "Black Orpheus" (Indie) (reissue) (2d wk). Nice $2,200. Last week, "Trial" alone was $2,000.

Roxy (Durwood) (664; 75-$1.50) —"The Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Slick $7,000. Last week, $8,000.

Uptown (FMW) (2,043; $1.50) — "Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Slow $5,000 or near. Last week, disappointing $6,500 in wake of bliz.

Additional Picture Grosses On Pages 15 & 17

Warmer Weather Boosting B'way Biz; 'Doll' Amazing $19,700; 'Charade' Hep 114G, 7th; 'Stranger' Boff 40G, 4th

Much milder weather, without any snow, and clear skies until the rain hit Monday (20) afternoon will give Broadway firstruns a firmer tone this round. However, the cinemas which have weeks ending last Sunday and Monday were handicapped by snow-clogged streets until Wednesday and Thursday of last week. While all theatre managers figured the blizzard to hurt for two or three days but few anticipated the drastic drop that occurred in trade until last Thursday.

Standout newcomer in a week heavy with extended-runs is "The Doll," which soared to wow $19,700 opening week at the Embassy finished last Sunday (19). Pic opened in the blinding snowstorm of Monday (13) but showed strength right from start. Unusual lobby display and bally that pic was banned in England all contributed to rousing preem week.

Biggest coin still is going to "Charade" with holiday stageshow at the Music Hall, with a nice $114,000 likely in the current (7th) and final week. Sixth week suffered a loss of more than $15,000 in the three-day storm period. "The Prize" with new stageshow opens tomorrow (Thurs.).

"Love With the Proper Stranger" held with boffo $40,000 in fourth round, daydating the State and Murray Hill.

"The Cardinal" looks big $36,000 in sixth session at the DeMille. "Sword in Stone" shapes passable $14,000 or close in fifth-final week at the Palace, with "Comedy of Terrors" replacing today (Wed.) "Four For Texas" wound its fourth session with fair $22,500, daydating the Paramount and Trans-Lux 52d Street.

"It's a Mad World" held with smash $33,000 in ninth session ended last Saturday (18) at the Warner. "The Victors" continued big with $14,600 in fifth round for three days at the Criterion. "Tom Jones" was smash $35,711 in 15th Cinema One week.

"Move Over, Darling" was fine $17,500 in fourth stanza, daydating the Astor and Trans-Lux 85th Street. Playing in 19 houses on preem showcase, pic hit $87,000 in first five days of current week.

"Lawrence of Arabia," playing its initial popscale engagement on blanket booking, looks to hit better than $600,000 on initial round in 50 theatres of the N.Y. Metropolitan area, including many Loew houses.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,094; $1.25-$2)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (5th-final wk). Fourth week ended yesterday (Tues.) was fine $11,500 after $13,000 in third. "Charade" (U) (m.o.) opens Jan. 29.

Cinerama (Loew) (1,552; $1.50-$3)—"Best of Cinerama" (Cinerama) (5th wk). The fourth round finished yesterday (Tues.) was okay $15,000 after $17,000 for third.

Criterion (Moss) (1,520; $1.50-$2.50)—"Victors" (Col) (5th wk). Three days of this week ended Sunday (19) was big $14,600 after $25,000 in fourth week. Stays on.

DeMille (Reade) (1,463; $1.50-$3.50)—"The Cardinal" (Col) (6th wk). This session ending today (Wed.) is heading for a big $36,000 or near after $35,000 in fifth. Continues indef.

Embassy (Guild Enterprises) (500; $1.50-$2.50) — "The Doll" (Kana) (2d wk). Initial round completed Sunday (19) soared to wow $19,700, amazing in view of having to open in Monday's (13) snowstorm.

Forum (Norel) (813; $1.25-$1.80) —"Wheeler Dealers" (MGM) (m.o.) Opens today (Wed.), daydating with Trans-Lux 85th Street. Last week, "Love on Pillow" (Col) (5th wk-9 days), very good $7,000, and nice for run.

Palace (RKO) (1,642; $1.25-$2) —"Comedy of Terrors" (AA). Opens today (Wed.). Last week, "Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk), passable $14,000 or near, after three big sessions previously.

Paramount (AB-PT) (3,665; $1-$2)—"Four For Texas" (WB) (5th-final wk). Fourth week ended yesterday (Tues.) was fair $18,000 or close after $18,500 for third.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (6,200; 95-$2.75) — "Charade" (U) and annual holiday stageshow (7th-final wk). This session ending today (Wed.) is heading for fine $114,000 after $115,000, way below hopes, being sloughed by bliz for three days, in sixth week. "The Prize" (MGM) and new stageshow open tomorrow (Thurs.).

Rivoli (UAT) (1,545; $2.50-$5.50) —"Cleopatra" (20th) (33d wk). The 32d round completed yesterday (Tues.) was good $18,000 after $17,000 for 31st week when hurt by bliz.

State (Loew) (1,850; $1.50-$2.50) —"Love With Proper Stranger" (Par) (5th wk). Fourth stanza finished yesterday (Tues.) was great $29,000 after $28,000 for third, over hopes. Now set to stay on until "Becket" (Par) opens March 8.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,003; $1.25-$2)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (5th-final wk). Fourth frame ended yesterday (Tues.) was nice $10,000 after $9,000 in third. "Dr. Strangelove" (Col) opens Jan. 29.

Warner (SW) (1,504; $2.50-$4.80) —"It's a Mad World" (UA) (10th wk). Ninth round finished Saturday (18) was socko $33,000 after $34,000 for eighth. Ninth week was hurt some by the storm, of course.

First-Run Arties

Baronet (Reade) (430; $1.25-$2) — "Billy Liar" (Cont) (5th-final wk). Fourth stanza completed Sunday (19) was nice $9,500 after $11,000 in third. "Dr. Strangelove" (Col) opens Jan. 29, daydating with Victoria.

Beekman (Rugoff Th.) (590; $1.50-$2)—"Point of Order" (Indie) (2d wk). First round ended Monday (20) was sock $15,000.

Carnegie Hall Cinema (F&A)

(Continued on page 17)

'Sword' Socko $17,000, Det.; 'Charade' Boff 14G; 'Cardinal' Wow 22G, 5th

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Biz continues great among the downtown firstruns currently, with oldies doing best. Only newcomer, "Any Number Can Win" at the Michigan, shapes thin. "Cardinal" stays wham in fifth session at the Madison.

"Sword in Stone" continues smash in fourth at the Grand Circus. "Charade" looks hotsy in fourth round at the Mercury. "Love on Pillow" is rated great in second week at Trans-Lux Krim. "Prize" is big for fourth at Adams.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Downtown Fox Corp.) (5,041; $1.25-$1.49)—"Children of Damned" (MGM) and "Gladiators Seven" (MGM) (2d wk). Big $16,000. Last week, $35,000.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,926; $1.25-$1.49)—"Any Number Can Win" (MGM). Dull $8,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (2d wk-4 days), $7,000.

Palms (UD) (2,995; $1.25-$1.49) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Socko $17,000. Last week, $19,000.

Madison (UD) (1,408; $1.25-$1.49) —"The Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Wow $22,000. Last week, same.

Grand Circus (UD) (1,400; $1.25-$1.49)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) and "Disneyland After Dark" (BV) (4th wk). Smash $17,000 or near. Last week, $18,000.

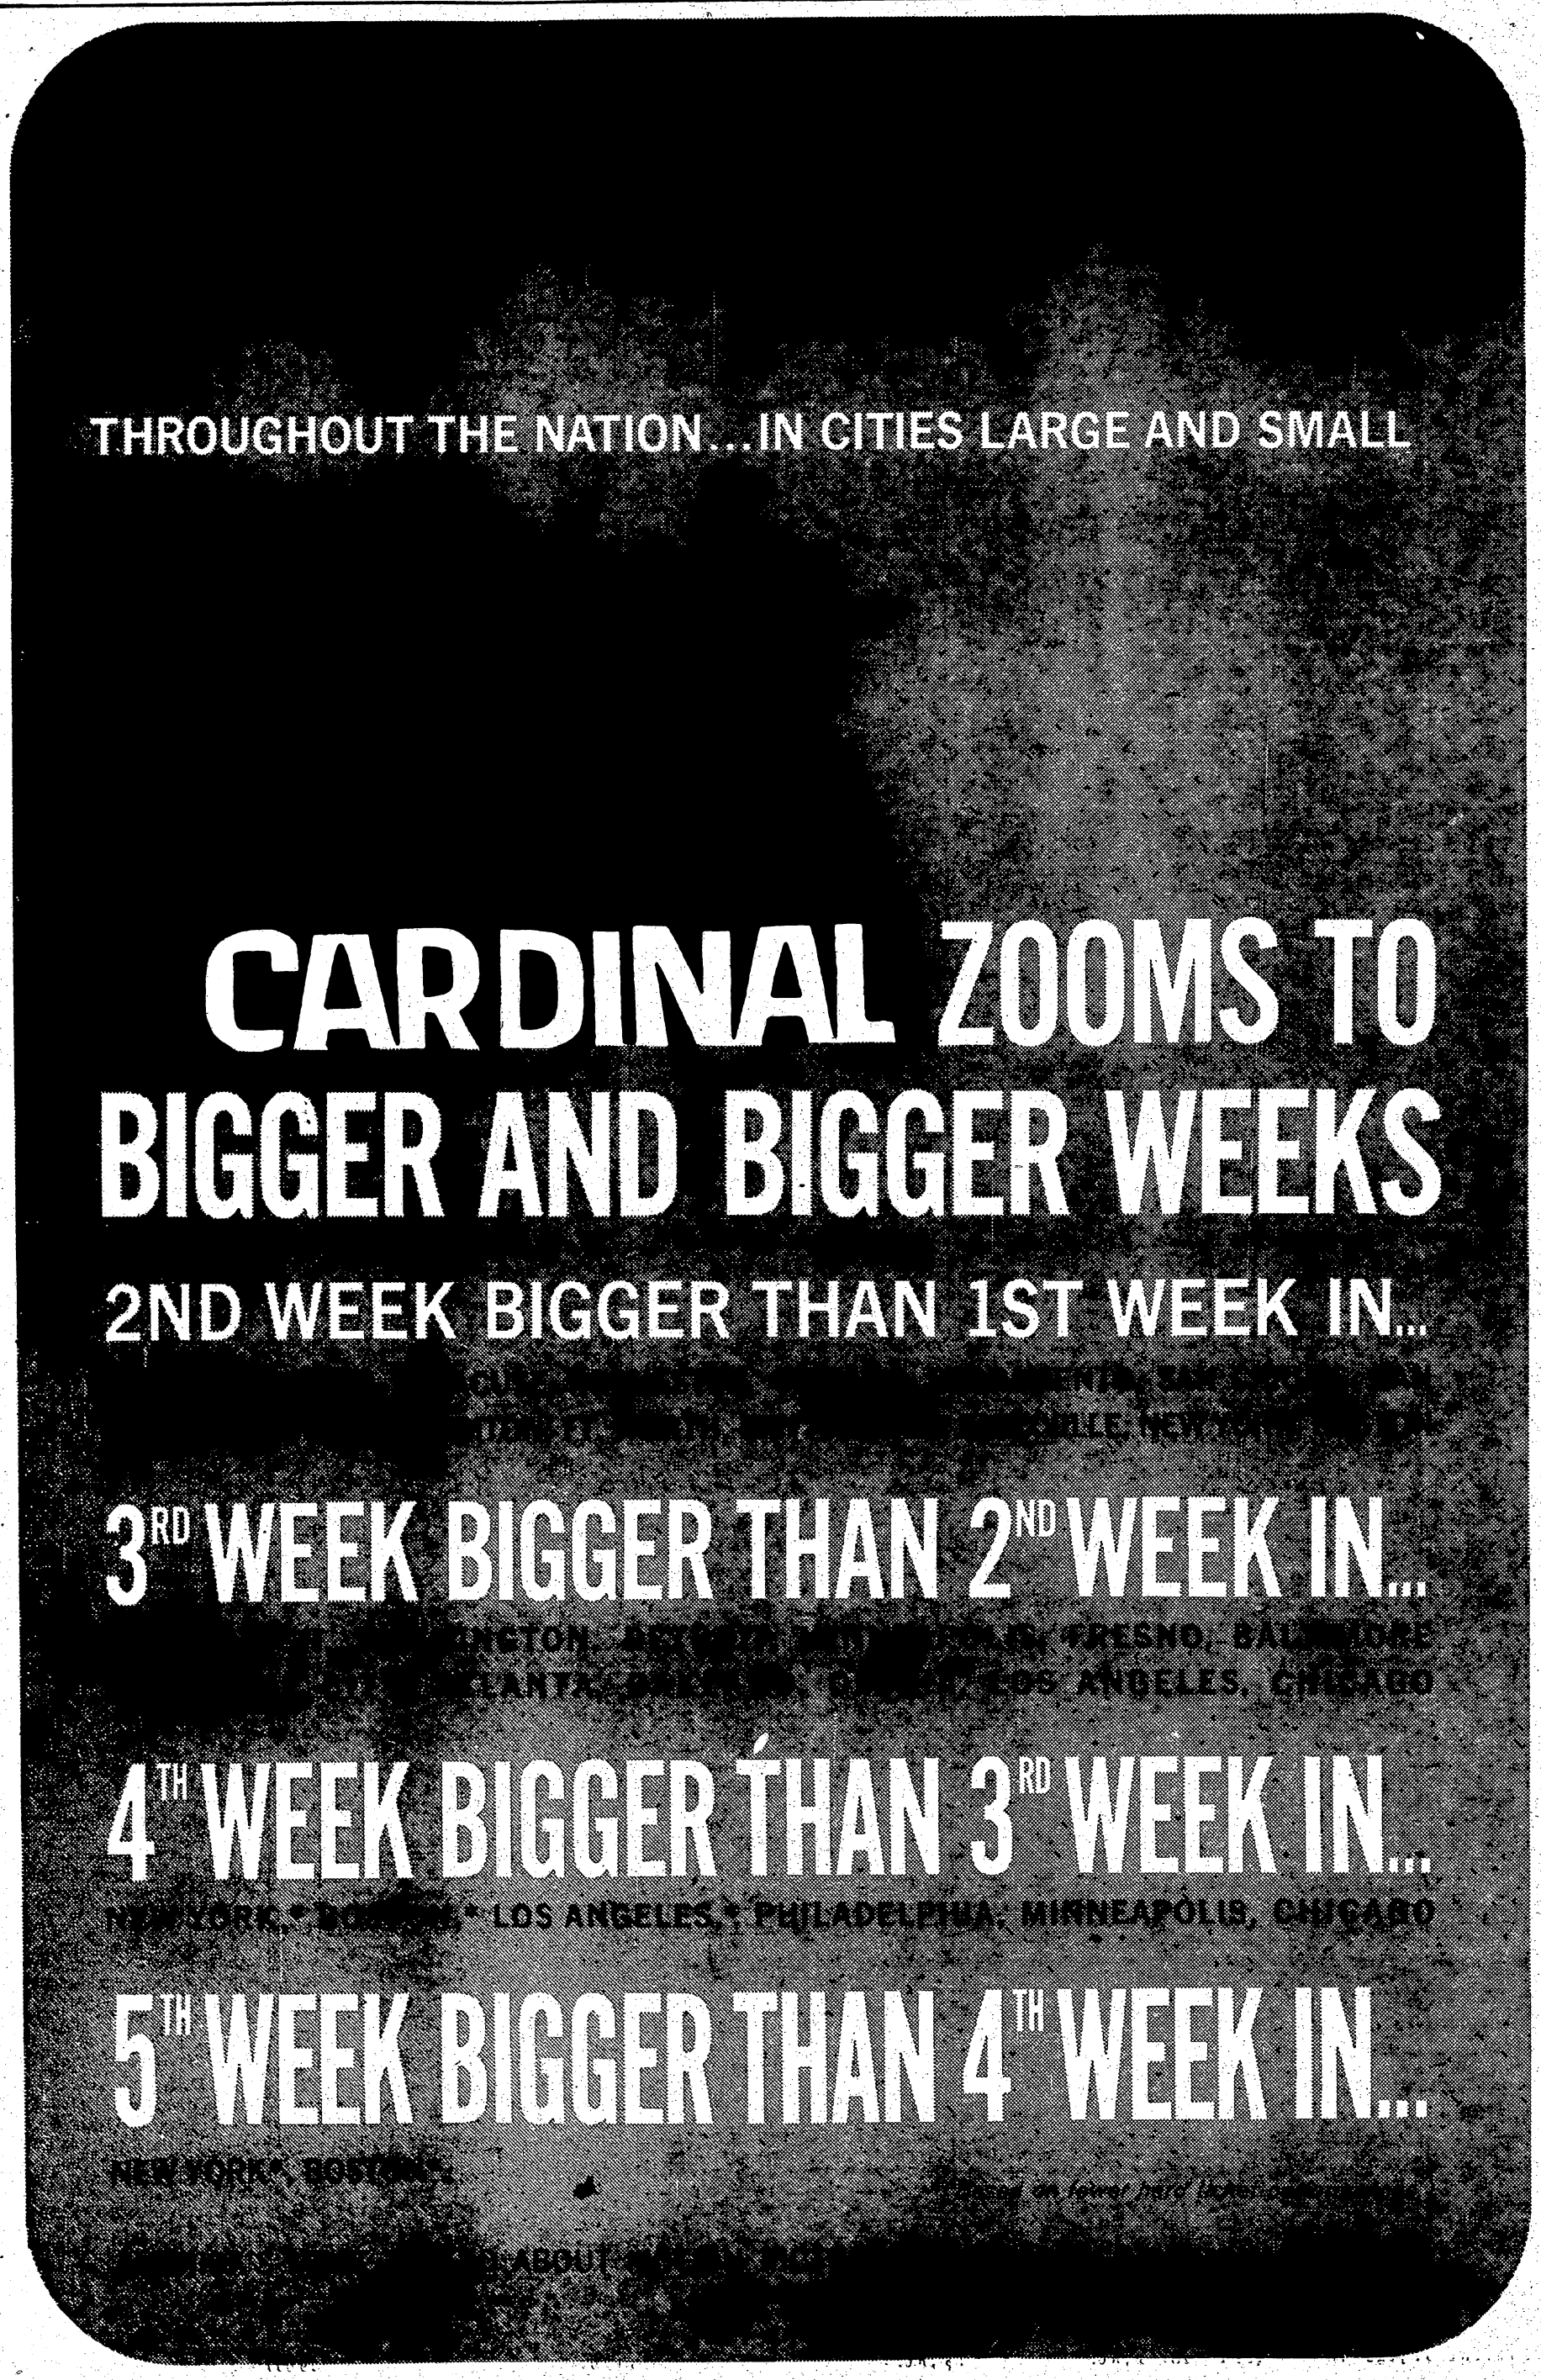
Adams (Community) (1,450; $1.23-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Big $9,000. Last week, $10,000.

United Artists (UA) (1,667; $1.50-$3.50) — "Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Good $7,500. Last week, $7,800.

Music Hall (Beacon Enterprises) (1,213; $1.25-$2.80)—"How West Was Won" (MGM) (47th wk). Swell $17,000. Last week, $17,500.

Mercury (Suburban Detroit) (1,468; $1-$1.80)—"Charade" (U), (4th wk). Hotsy $14,000. Last week, $14,600.

Trans-Lux Krim (T-L) (980; $1.49-$1.65)—"Love on Pillow" (Col) (2d wk). Great $9,000. Last week, $11,200.



THROUGHOUT THE NATION...IN CITIES LARGE AND SMALL CARDINAL ZOOMS TO BIGGER AND BIGGER WEEKS
2ND WEEK BIGGER THAN 1ST WEEK IN..
3RD WEEK BIGGER THAN 2ND WEEK IN..
4TH WEEK BIGGER THAN 3RD WEEK IN..
LOS ANGELES, PHILADELPHIA, MINNEAPOLIS, CHICAGO
5TH WEEK BIGGER THAN 4TH WEEK IN...

Philly Climbs; 'Bed' Sturdy $11,000, 'Jacket' Boffo 21G; 'Charade' 15G, 4

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Helped by some strong newcomers, trade at firstruns this session is looking up after the snows of last week. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" looms bright on opener at the Goldman. "Strait-Jacket" is rated sockeroo for initial round at Stanton.

"Charade" still is lively in fourth stanza at the 500-seat Trans-Lux. "The Cardinal" looks loud in fifth session at the Midtown. "It's a Mad World" shapes torrid in fifth at the Boyd. "Move Over, Darling" is rated rugged in fourth stanza at the Fox.

Estimates for This Week

Arcadia (S&S) (823; $1.20-$1.80) —"Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Fancy $12,000. Last week, $7,500.

Boyd (SW) (1,536; $2-$2.75) — "It's a Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Fat $15,000 or over. Last week, $17,000.

Bryn Mawr (Goldman) (630; $1.49)—"Knife in Water" (Kana) (2d wk). Okay $2,600. Last week, $4,000.

Fox (Milgram) (2,400; 95-$1.80)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Lusty $12,000. Last week, $14,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,000; 95-$1.80)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par). Bright $11,000. Last week, "Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk), $7,000.

Lane (SW) (1,000; $1.49)—"Billy Liar" (Cont) (2d wk). Good $3,900. Last week, $3,800.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,200; 95-$2.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Loud $17,000. Last week, $15,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,200; 95-$1.80) — "Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Trim $6,000. Last week, $7,000.

Stanley (SW) (1,450; $2-$2.50)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Hep $13,000. Last week, $12,000.

Stanton (SW) (1,483; 95-$1.80)—"Strait-Jacket" (Col). Socko $21,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (4th wk), $10,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 95-$2) — "Charade" (U) (4th wk). Brisk $15,000 or close. Last week, $14,000.

World (Rugoff) (499; 95-$1.80)—"Knife in Water" (Kana) (2d wk). Trim $3,600. Last week, $4,500.

Yorktown (SW) (1,000; $1.49)—"Affair of Skin" (Indie) (2d wk). Thin $1,800. Last week, $3,000.

'Jacket' Great $20,000, Hub; 'Store' Bright 14G, 'Soldier' Oke $10,000

Boston, Jan. 21.

There's a slight lull in the Hub film biz this week with big new musical, "Funny Girl" at the Shubert, and "Man for All Seasons" at Colonial, both selling out. But openers are doing well despite this. "Strait-Jacket" is rolling up a smash take at Astor on opener. "Who's Minding Store" is a winner on first at Paramount.

"Soldier in Rain" shapes okay opening round at Music Hall. Entrenched big ones getting coin are "Charade," still sock at Memorial in fourth round; "Cardinal," sturdy at Saxon in sixth, "Mad World," forging ahead in its 10th round at the Boston; and "Tom Jones," still wow at Beacon Hill in fifth stanza.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,117; 90-$1.50)—"Strait-Jacket" (Col). Hotsy $20,000, helped by Joan Crawford's presence for press, radio, tv bally. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par) (3d wk), $7,000.

Beacon Hill (Sack) (900; $1-$1.80)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (5th wk). Sock $21,000. Last week, $23,000.

Boston (Beacon Ent) (1,354; $1.20-$3.95)—"Mad World" (UA) (10th wk). Ninth week ended Jan. 20 was smash $17,000 or over. Last week, $18,000.

Capri (Sack) (850; 90-$1.50) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Oke $6,500. Last week, $7,500.

Center (E. M. Loew) (1,250; 90-$1.25) — "Summer Holiday" (AI) and "Calvary Command", (Indie). Oke $6,500. Last week, "Tales of Terror" (AI), "House of Usher" (AI) and "Raven" (AI), $6,000.

Cinema, Kenmore Square (Indie) (320; $1.40-$1.90) — "To Bed or Not to Bed" (Cont) (4th

(Continued on page 17)

Key City Grosses

Estimated Total Gross

Last Year $2,607,730
(Based on 22 cities and 271 theatres).

This Week $2,526,700
(Based on 23 cities and 276 theatres, chiefly first runs including N. Y.)

'Jacket' Big 13G, Mpls.; 'Charade' 8G

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

With the bulk of loop films continuing to hang on, downtown firstruns are devoted to a mass of holdovers. This week there's one newcomer. This fresh entry, "Strait-Jacket" is huge on opener at the State. "The Cardinal" has moved over to the Lyric for an extension of its downtown firstrun, making this its fifth Loop week.

The Park, leading uptown firstrun, has the reissued "Fantasia" for healthy returns. "Charade" still is smash in fourth round at the Mann. "Move Over, Darling" shapes socko, also in fourth, at the Gopher.

Estimates for This Week

Academy (Mann) (1,050; $1.25-$1.50)—"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par) (3d wk) (m.o.). Neat $4,500. Last week, touring legit show.

Century (Par) (1,300; $2.10-$3.50) —"Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Nice $5,000. Last week, $6,000.

Cooper (CF) (905; $1.25-$2.50)—"How West Was Won" (MGM) (46th wk). Great $10,200. Last week, $9,500.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Hefty $8,000. Last week, same.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (m.o.). Modest $4,500 for fifth week downtown. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (4th wk), $5,000.

Mann (Mann) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50) —"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Smash $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Park (Mann) (1,000; $1.50)—"Fantasia" (BV) (reissue). Fine $4,000. Last week, "To Catch Thief" (Par) and "Vertigo" (Par) (reissues) $2,500.

State (Par) (2,200; $1-$1.25)—"Strait-Jacket" (Col). Huge $13,000. Last week, "Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk), $7,000 at $1.25-$1.50 scale.

Suburban World (Mann) (800; $1.25)—"Pair of Briefs" (Davis). Mild $1,800. Last week, "Eclipse" (Times), $1,500.

World (Mann) (400; $1.25-$1.50) —"Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Solid $5,000. Last week, $6,000.

'Charade' Crisp $7,000, Omaha; 'Irma' Trim 9½G

Omaha, Jan. 21.

Firstrun biz slipped here as temperatures plunged below zero for several days. However, "Charade" shapes solid in first at Orpheum "All the Way Home" looks sad on opener at the Omaha. "Irma La Douce" is lusty in three openers.

Estimates for This Week

Orpheum (Tri-States) (2,870; $1.25) — "Charade" (U). Solid $7,000 for opener. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $5,000.

Omaha (Tri-States) (2,066; $1.25) —"All Way Home" (Par). Sad $3,000. Last week, "The Cardinal" (Col) (3d wk), $4,500.

Cooper (Cooper) (687; $1.25)—"The Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Fair $4,000. Last week, $3,000.

State (Cooper (752; $1.25) — "Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Okay $4,500 but off from $6,000 of third week.

Indian Hills (Cooper) (804; $2.20) —"How West Was Won" (MGM) (35th wk). Fine $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Admiral, Chief, Skyview (Ralph Blank) (1,000-1,234-1,122 cars; $1.25)—"Irma La Douce" (UA). Lusty $9,500 for subrun. Last week, "Goliath and Sins of Babylon" (AI) and "Samson and Slave Queen" (AI), $6,000.

Terrors' Lusty $16,000, Frisco; 'Jacket' 18G

San Francisco, Jan. 21.

A couple of newcomers plus sustained strength by extended-runs makes the firstrun picture shape well currently. "Comedy of Terrors" looks fine on opener, daydating the Warfield and Geneva Drive-In. "Strait-Jacket" shapes socko in first round at Paramount. "Tom Jones" still is wow in fifth session at United Artists. "Charade" looms big for fourth at Golden Gate.

Estimates for This Week

Alexandria (United Calif.) (1,444; $5) — "Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Brisk $15,500. Last week, $15,000.

Clay (Ros) (370; $1.49)—"Nurse on Wheels" (Janus) (2d wk). Nice $3,200. Last week, $4,200.

Embassy (Dibble - McLean) (1,400; $1.75)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Big $8,500. Last week, $8,000.

Esquire (No. Coast) (846; $1.25-$1.50)—"Who's Minding the Store" (Para) (4th wk). Fair $3,600. Last week, $4,800.

Geneva Drive-In (Syufy) (910 cars; $1.25 person)—"Comedy of Terrors" (AI). Fair $4,000. Last week, "Four For Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $5,000.

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; $1.25-$1.50) — "Charade" (U) (4th wk). Big $14,000 or near. Last week, $17,000.

Larkin (Ros) (384; $1.49)—"The Suitor" (Wilshire) (5th wk). Okay $2,200. Last week, $2,600.

Metro (United Calif.) (1,000; $1.75-$2)—"8½" (Emb) (10th wk). Bright $4,500. Last week, $5,000.

Music Hall (Ros) (364; $1.49-$1.75) — "Love on Pillow" (Col) (4th wk). Fair $2,100. Last week, $2,400.

Orpheum (Cinedome) (1,439; $2.50-$3.50)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Great $33,000 or close. Last week, $32,000.

Paramount (Par) (2,646; $1.50-

(Continued on page 17)

'Terrors' Big $12,000 In St. Loo; 'Jacket' Hot 15G; 'Darling' Dandy 21G, 2d

St. Louis, Jan. 21.

Balmy weather is booming firstrun biz currently, aided by two important newcomers. "Comedy of Terrors" at the St. Louis and "Strait-Jacket" at Ambassador shape big on their opening rounds. "Move Over, Darling" looks lofty in second, running ahead of initial week, at the Fox.

"The Prize" is pushing ahead of second stanza for stout returns in third at State. "Sword in Stone" shapes neat in fourth at Mid-City to top its third session. "Charade" looms hep in fourth at Esquire.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (Arthur) (2,970; 90-$1.25)—"Strait-Jacket" (Col). Fine $15,000. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par) (2d wk), $10,000.

Apollo Art (Grace) (700; 90-$1.25)—"My Life to Live" (Indie) and "Therese" (Indie). Good $2,000. Last week, "David and Lisa" (Cont) and "Sporting Life" (Cont) (2d wk), $1,000.

Esquire (Jablonow-Komm) (1,800; 90-$1.25) — "Charade" (U) (4th wk). Hep $9,000. Last week, $9,400.

Fox (Arthur) (5,000; 90-$1.25)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (2d wk). Big $21,000. Last week, $17,000.

Loew's Mid-City (Loew) (1,160; 60-90)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Neat $9,000. Last week, $8,000.

State (Loew) (3,600; 60-90) — "Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Solid $12,000. Last week, $10,000.

Martin Cinerama (Martin) (913; $1.25-$2.50) — "How West Was Won" (MGM) (41st wk). Big $7,500. Last week, $7,000.

Pageant (Arthur) (1,000; 90-$1.25)—"Cardinal" (Col) (3d wk). Nice $2,500. Last week, $2,000.

Paris Art (Chernoff) (800; $1.50) —"Eclipse" (Indie). Good $1,800. Last week, "Love and Frenchwoman" (Indie) and "Kitchen" (Indie), $1,200.

St. Louis (Arthur) (3,800; 75-90) —"Comedy of Terrors" (AI). Big $12,000. Last week, "Who's Minding Store" (Par) (3d wk), $6,000.

Shady Oak (Arthur) (760; 90-$1.25) — "Lord of Flies" (Cont) (7th wk). Okay $1,500. Last week, $1,000.

L.A. Solid; 'Tree' Rousing $31,000; 'Jones' Boffo 35G, 'Charade' Solid 21G, 'Newman' 17G; 'World' 24G, 11th

Broadway Grosses

Estimated Total Gross

This Week $527,600
(Based on 32 theatres)

Last Year $563,300
(Based on 31 theatres)

'Sword' Sharp 12G, Denver; 'West' 13G

Denver, Jan. 21.

Although only one new picture is in the lineup here currently, nearly all houses are doing fine. Two films, "Sword in Stone" at the Denver in fourth round, and "How West Was Won," in 46th session at Cooper, are running ahead of their last weeks.

"Charade" shapes big in fourth at the Aladdin while "Move Over, Darling" still is strong at Centre, also playing fourth week. "Four For Texas" is rated trim in fourth at Paramount.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Fox) (900; $1.45) — "Charade" (U) (4th wk). Big $10,000. Last week, $10,500.

Centre (Fox) (1,270; $1.25-$1.45) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Strong $11,000 or close. Last week, $12,500.

Cooper (Cooper) (814; $1.65-$2.50) — "How West Was Won" (MGM) (46th wk). Big $13,000 or better. Last week, $10,500.

Denham (Indie) (800; $1.45-$3)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Nice $5,200. Last week, $5,000.

Denver (Fox) (2,432; $1.25) — "Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Great $12,000 or over. Last week, $11,000.

Esquire (Fox) (600; $1.25) — "Fourth Sex" (Indie). Fine $3,100. Last week, "Conjugal Bed" (Embassy) (2d wk), $1,900.

Paramount (Wolfberg) (90-$1.25) —"Four For Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Trim $10,000. Last week, $12,000.

RKO International 70 (RKO) (1,380; $1.25-$1.80) — "Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Good $7,500. Last week, $8,500.

Towne (Indie) (600; $1.25-$1.45) —"The Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Dandy $5,000. Last week, $4,500.

Vogue (Art Theatre Guild) (450; $1.25)—"Lord of Flies" (Cont) (4th wk). Fine $2,700. Last week, $3,000.

'Prize' Boffola 12G, L'ville; 'World' 9G, 5

Louisville, Jan. 21.

"The Prize" at the United Artists is showing the way at downtown houses this week as snow has about disappeared after the recent heavy (seven inches) deposit of the white stuff last round. Penthouse is doing well with "Fantasia" on reissue. "Charade" continues strong in fourth at the Kentucky. "It's Mad World" playing fifth at the Rialto is hotsy. "Move Over, Darling" in third at the Ohio is brisk.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (900; 75-$1.25)—"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Hot $5,000. Third was $5,400.

Mary Ann (People's) (1,100; 75-$1.25)—"Cry of Battle" (AA) and "Lieutenant Wore Skirts" (WB) (reissue). Fair $4,500. Last week, "Four For Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $3,500.

Ohio (Settos) (900; 75-$1.25) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (3d wk). Bright $5,000. Second was $5,600.

Penthouse (Fourth Avenue) (900; 75-$1.25) — "Fantasia" (BV) (reissue). Strong $8,000. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) (3d wk), $6,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (1,100; $1.50-$2.50) — "It's Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Hotsy $9,000. Fourth was $10,000.

United Artists (Fourth Avenue) (1,700; 75-$1.25) — "The Prize" (MGM). Sock $12,000. Last week, "Sword In Stone" (BV) (3d wk), $10,000.

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

L.A. firstrun biz still is on the impressive side this week, with "Under Yum Yum Tree," in first general release, heading for a sockeroo $31,000 in four theatres. "New Kind of Love," also on first general release, is slender $11,000 or close in trio of site.

Much of strength is coming from several potent holdovers, topped by "Tom Jones," which is aiming for a boffo $35,000 in eighth Orpheum week, fourth frame at Vogue, Picfair. "Charade" is shaping to solid $21,000 at the Chinese in fourth week.

"Capt. Newman" shapes bright $17,000 or better in fourth at Hollywood Par while "America, America" is rated breezy $12,000 at Beverly, also fourth. "The Prize" is handsome $13,000 or near in fourth at Warner Bev.

On hardticket front, "It's a Mad World" looks socko $24,000 in 11th week at Cinerama and "Cardinal" is fatso $18,000 in fifth at Egyptian.

Estimates for This Week

Fine Arts (FWC) (631; $2-$2.40) "Billy Liar" (Cont). Slim $3,000. Last week, "Thomasina" (BV) (4th wk), $2,700.

Warren's, Pix, Wiltern, Baldwin (Metropolitan-Prin-SW-State) (1,757; 756; 2,344; 1,800; $1-$1.49)—"Under Yum Yum Tree" (Col) and "French Style" (Col) (1st general release). Socko $31,000 or near. Last week, Warren's, "Who's Minding Store" (Par), "Under 10 Flags" (Par) (reissue) (2d wk), $3,500. Pix with Hillstreet, Four Star, "V.I.P.s" (MGM) (1st general release), "Man Who Couldn't Walk" (Indie), $14,900. Wiltern, Baldwin with Los Angeles, "Strait-Jacket" (Col), "Siege of Saxons" (Col), $20,100.

Hillstreet, Iris, El Rey (Metropolitan-FWC) (2,752; 825; 856; $1-$1.49)—"New Kind of Love" (Par)

(Continued on page 17)

'World' Wow $18,000 In Toronto; 'Jones' Capac. 28G, 'Charade' Huge 16G

Toronto, Jan. 21.

With the exception of dualed "Pyro" and "Vampire," nice daydating six Taylor hardtops, biz is confined to holdovers and extended-runs. "Charade" is still wham in fourth stanza at Uptown. "Four for Texas" looks nice.

"Move Over, Darling" shapes big in four spots. "It's A Mad World" looms wow in fifth at Carlton. "Tom Jones" shapes capacity in fourth Hyland round.

Estimates for This Week

Carlton (Rank) (2,058; $2-$3)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Wow $18,000. Last week, $18,500.

Coronet, Danforth, Humber, Fairlawn (Rank) (779; 1,324; 1,165; 1,203; $1-$1.75)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Big $30,000 or near. Last week, $36,000.

Downtown, Glendale, Metro, Prince of Wales, Scarboro, State (Taylor) (1,059; 995; 696; 1,197; 682; 696; 50-$1)—"Pyro" (Astral) and "Vampire" (Astral). Swell $20,000. Last week, "Cry of Battle" (IFD) and "War is Hell" (IFD), $17,500.

Hollywood (FP) (1,080; $1.25-$1.50)—"Take Her, She's Mine" (20th) (5th wk). Neat $6,500. Last week, $8,000.

Hyland (Rank) (1,357; $1.25-$1.50) — "Tom Jones" (UA) (4th wk). Capacity $28,000, with turnaways. Last week, record $28,300.

Imperial (FP) (3,216; $1-$1.75)—"Four for Texas" (WB) (3d wk). Nice $8,000 or close. Last week, $10,000.

Loew's (Loew) (1,641; $1-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Fine $10,000 or over. Last week, $13,000.

Tivoli (FP) (935; $1.50-$2.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Big $12,000. Last week, $14,000.

Towne (Taylor) (693; $1-$1.50)—"Conjugal Bed" (IFD) (5th wk). For five days, satisfactory $3,500. Last week, $4,500.

University (FP) (1,344; $2-$3.50) —"Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Staunch $11,000 or close. Last week, $12,000.

Uptown (Loew) (2,245; $1.25-$1.75)—"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Mighty $16,000 or near. Last week, $19,000.

"STRAIT-JACKET" SENSATIONAL!

SLASHES TO SMASH OPENINGS IN

Baltimore • Boston • Bridgeport • Buffalo • Charlotte • Cincinnati
Columbus, Ohio • Dallas • Ft. Worth • Houston • Indianapolis
Jacksonville • Kansas City • Los Angeles • Milwaukee
Minneapolis • New Haven • New Orleans • Oklahoma City
Pittsburgh • Philadelphia • Portland, Ore. • Providence
Rochester • Salt Lake City • San Antonio • San Francisco
St. Louis • St. Paul • Syracuse • Washington, D.C.

NOW WATCH THE WHOLE COUNTRY GO MAD OVER... STRAIT-JACKET

starring
JOAN CRAWFORD

A WILLIAM CASTLE PRODUCTION..... ..... FROM COLUMBIA!

Cincy OK After Snow; 'Jacket' Boff 10G, 'World' Big $12,500, 'Charade' 8G

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

A snug film biz session is in prospect here in the wake of last week's traffic crippling snowfall which closed ozoners and cancelled showing one night of "Cleopatra." "Strait-Jacket," only downtown entry currently, looms smash at Keith's. "It's a Mad World" rates boffo in fifth frame at Capitol.

Other potent holdovers are "Charade" at Albee, "Kings of Sun" at Palace and "Move Over, Darling" at Valley. "Cleopatra" looks fairish in 30th round at Grand. Easy breathing shapes for the arties, including "A Family Diary" at Guild and "Viridiana" at Plazza.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; $1.25-$1.50) —"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Okay $8,000 or near after $9,000 for third week.

Capitol (SW-Cinerama) (1,329; $1.25-$2.75)—"It's a Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Socko $12,500 or better. Last week, $12,000. Consistent Saturday night sellouts.

Esquire Art (Cin-T-Co) (500; $1.25)—"Two Women" (Indie) and "Sky Above" (Indie). Fair $1,200. Last week, "Conjugal Bed" (Embassy) (2d wk), $1,600.

Grand (RKO) (1,396; $1.80-$3)—"Cleopatra" (30th wk). Fairish $5,000. Last week, $4,500.

Guild (Kilgore) (272; $1.25)—"A Family Diary" (MGM). Good $1,600. Last week, "Small World Sammy Lee" (Indie) (3d wk), $1,200.

Hyde Park Art (Cin-T-Co) (700; $1.25)—"Two Women" (Indie) and "Sky Above" (Indie). So-so $1,100. Daydating with Esquire. Last week, "Conjugal Bed" (Embassy) (2d wk), $1,000.

Keith's (Cin-T-Co) (1,500; $1.25-$1.50) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col). Smash $10,000 or near. Last week, "Sword In Stone" (BV) (3d wk), $7,500.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; $1.25-$1.50) —"Kings of Sun" (UA) (4th wk). Nice $6,000. Last week, $6,500.

Plaza (Fine Arts) (600; $1.50) — "Viridiana" (Indie) (2d wk). Fair $1,200 after $1,500 preem.

Twin Drive-In (Cin-T-Co) (West side only. 800 cars; $1)—"Palm Springs Weekend" (WB) and "Rampage" (WB) (subruns). Fair $3,500. Last week, ozoner was snowed out.

Valley (Cin-T-Co) (1,275; $1.50) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). No complaint at $5,000. Last week, $6,500.

LOS ANGELES

(Continued from page 15)

(1st general release) and various second feature pix. Slender $11,000. Last week, Iris with Lido, "Mary, Mary" (WB) (1st general release), and second feature pix, $7,200. El Rey with Hollywood, Loyola, "Move Over, Darling" (20th), "Bachelor Flat" (20th) (reissue) (3d wk), $13,400.

Lido (FWC) (876; $1-$1.49)—"Mondo Cane" (Emer) and "Women of the World" (Emb) (reissues). Dull $2,500.

Los Angeles (Metropolitan) (2,049; $1-$1.49) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col) and "Siege of Saxons" (Col) (2d wk). Okay $7,000.

Music Hall (Ros) (720; $2-$2.40) —"Devil and 10 Commandments" (Indie) (2d wk). Soft $4,000. Last week, $4,400.

Four Star (UATC) (868; $1.49-$2)—"C.I.P.s" (MGM) and "Man Who Couldn't Walk" (Indie) (2d wk). Drab $1,500.

Loyola (FWC) (1,298; $1-$1.49)—"Mary, Mary" (WB) (m.o.) and "Bye, Bye Birdie" (Col) (repeat). Slow $4,500.

Crest (State) (740; $1-$2)—"Sword in Stone" (BV) (4th wk) and "Wheeler Dealers" (MGM) (repeat). Thin $2,500. Last week, $3,000.

Hollywood (FWC) (856; $1-$1.49) —"Move Over, Darling" (20th) and "Bachelor Flat" (20th) (reissue) (4th wk). Mild $3,500.

Fox Wilshire (FWC) (1,990; $2-$2.40)—"The Victors" (Col) (4th wk). Brisk $10,000. Last week, $14,000.

Chinese (FWC) (1,403; $2-$2.40) —"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Solid $21,000. Last week, $24,600.

Beverly (State) (1,150; $2-$2.40) —"America, America" (WB) (4th wk). Breezy $12,000. Last week, $12,500.

Hollywood Paramount (State) (1,468; $1.55 - $2.40) — "Captain Newman, M.D." (U) (4th wk). Bright $17,000 or near. Last week, $17,500.

Warner Beverly (SW) (1,316; $2-$2.40)—"The Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Handsome $13,000 or close. Last week, $14,600.

Village (FWC) (1,535; $1.49-$2.40) — "Love With Proper Stranger" (Par) (4th wk). Rosy $12,000 or thereabouts. Last week, $14,800.

Egyptian (UATC) (1,392; $1.25-$3.50)—"The Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Fatso $18,000. Last week, $20,000.

Orpheum, Vogue, Picfair (Metropolitan-FWC-State) (2,213; 810; 750; $1-$2.40)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (8th wk. Orpheum 4th wk, Vogue, Picfair). Boffo $35,000. Last week, $41,600.

Cinerama (Pac) (915; $1.49-$3.50) —"Mad World" (UA) (11th wk). Socko $24,000. Last week, $24,300.

Pantages (RKO) (1,512; $2.50-$5.50) — "Cleopatra" (20th) (31st wk). Bustling $26,500. Last week, $26,000.

Warner Hollywood (SW) (1,291; $1.25-$2.80) — "How West Was Won" (MGM) (48th wk). Beefy $20,000. Last week, $19,000.

'Darling' Sockeroo 9G, Prov.; 'Jacket' $7,000

Providence, Jan. 21.

With only two new shows in town, Majestic currently is riding high with "Move Over, Darling." Strand is also on the happy side with initial round of "Strait-Jacket." Rated nifty is RKO Albee's 4th week of "Charade." State is neat in third of "The Prize."

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; $1-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Groovy $6,500. Third was $7,500.

Elmwood (Snider) (2,200; $2.50-$3)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (25th wk). Happy $6,800. The 24th week was $7,200.

Majestic (SW) (2,300; 90-$1.25)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th). Very heavy weekend biz helping to sock $9,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (20th) (4th wk), $4,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 90-$1.25)—"The Price" (MGM) (3d wk). Neat $6,000. Last week was $9,000.

Strand (National Realty) (2,200; 90-$1.25) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col). Shapes nice $7,000. Last week "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par) (2d wk), $3,500.

BOSTON

(Continued from page 15)

wk). Neat $4,000. Last week, same.

Exeter (Indie) (1,276; 90-$1.49) —"Any Number Can Win" (MGM) (4th wk). Slick $7,000. Last week, $7,700.

Fenway (Indie) (1,276; 90-$1.49) —"As Nature Intended" (Indie) and "Nature Girl and Slave" (Indie). Dull $2,200. Last week, "Playgirls and Bellboy" (Indie) and "Geisha Playmates" (Indie) (reissues) (2d wk), $1,900.

Gary (Sack) (1,277; $2-$3.90)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (m.o.) (10th wk). Oke $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Mayflower (ATC) (689; 90-$1.50)—"Lilies of Field" (UA) (subrun) and "Birdman of Alcatraz" (UA) (reissue). Oke $4,000. Last week, "West Side Story" (UA) (rerun), $3,100.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 90-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Smash $20,000 or close. Last week, $22,000.

Music Hall (Sack) (4,300; 90-$1.80) — "Soldier in Rain" (AA). Okay $10,000 or near. Last week, "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk), $8,000.

Orpheum (Loew) (2,900; 90-$1.65)—"Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Third week was neat $12,000.

Paramount (NET) (2,357; 90-$1.65) — "Who's Minding Store" (Par) and "No Trees in Street" (Indie). Bright $14,000. Last week, "Four for Texas" (WB) (4th wk), $8,500.

Pilgrim (ATC) (1,909; 75-$1.25) —"Fourth Sex" (Davis) "Lust to Kill" (Indie). Fat $10,000. Last week, "Mr. Peter's Pets" (Indie) and "European Nights" (Indie) (reruns), $5,500.

Park Square (Indie) (300; $1.80) —"Lord of Flies" (Cont) (subrun). Nice $4,200. Last week, "Ladies Who Do" (Cont) (3d wk), $2,800.

Saxon (Sack) (1,100; $2-$3.90) — "Cardinal" (Col) (6th wk). Solid $20,000 with advance booked groups. Last week, $23,000.

State (Trans-Lux) (730; $1-$1.50) — "Orgy at Lil's Place" (Mishkin) (4th wk). Still wham with $10,000. Last week, $12,000.

West End Cinema (E. M. Loew) (500; 75-$1.50)—"Pair of Briefs" (Davis) (3d wk). Bright $5,000. Last week, $5,700.

'CHARADE' LOFTY 8G, COL.; 'West' 5½G, 40th

Columbus, O., Jan. 21.

Steady business is anticipated at all firstruns this round where holdovers continue at all spots. "Charade" moved into a fourth week at RKO Palace and is sturdy. "The Prize" is holding well in third session at Loew's Ohio. "How West Was Won," in 10th month at RKO Grand, is rated okay.

Estimates for This Week

Grand (RKO) (860; $1.50-$2.75)—"How West Was Won" (MGM) (40th wk). Okay $5,500. Last week, $4,500.

Ohio (Loew) (3,079; 50-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (3d wk). Good $8,000 or near. Last week, $9,500.

Palace (RKO) (2,845; 50-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Sturdy $8,000. Last week, $9,500.

BROADWAY

(Continued from page 13)

(330; $1.50-$2)—"Der Rosenkavalier" (Show) (5th wk). Fourth week ended yesterday (Tues.) great $9,000 for 10 performances after $9,400 for third. This week pic will go to 11 shows to meet public demand.

Cinema One (Rugoff Th.) (700; $1.50-$2)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (16th wk). The 15th week ended Sunday (19) was smash $35,711 after $37,000 for 14th round.

Coronet (Reade) (590; $1.50-$2) —"To Bed or Not To Bed" (Cont) (5th wk). Fourth stanza finished Saturday (18) was sturdy $13,000 after $16,000 for third.

Festival (Embassy) (546; $2-$2.50)—"Easy Life" (Embassy) (5th wk). Fourth round ended Saturday (18) was big $16,200. Third week was $18,000.

Fifth Ave. Cinema (Rugoff Th.) (250; $1.25-$2) — "Hallelujah the Hills" (Indie) (6th wk). Fifth round ended Sunday (19) was okay $3,200 after $3,000 in fourth.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; $1.80-$2) — "Moderato Cantabile" (Royal) (3d wk). Second round finished Sunday (19) was fair $6,000 after $8,000 opener. Won't be here much longer.

Guild (Guild) (450; $1-$1.75)—"The Guest" (Janus). Opened Monday (20). In ahead, "Thomasina" (BV) (6th wk-6 days), fair $5,000.

Murray Hill (Rugoff Th.) (565; $1.50-$2) — "Love With Proper Stranger" (Par) (5th wk). Fourth round ended yesterday (Tues.) was big $11,000 or near after $10,000 for third week.

Paris (Pathe Cinema) (568; $1.50-$2) — "America, America" (WB) (5th wk). Fourth round finished Thursday (16) was big $10,700 after $10,600 for third.

Plaza (Lopert) (525; $1.50-$2)—"City Lights" (Indie) (reissue) (9th-final wk). Eighth round ended Monday (20) was solid $8,500 after $8,400 for seventh week. Charles Chaplin Revue, consisting of three reissued Chaplin featurettes and shorts, opens Jan. 28.

Sutton (Rugoff Th.) (561; $1.50-$2)—"The Victors" (Col) (5th wk). This round ending tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for big $8,000 after $8,500 for fourth.

Toho Cinema (Toho) (299; $1.50-$2)—"Bandits on Wind" (2d wk). First session completed Monday (21) was good $6,500.

Tower East (Loew) (588; $1.50-$2)—"Hud" (Par) (subrun). First week ended yesterday (Tues.) was fine $8,000 or near. In ahead, "Fantasia" (BV) (reissue) (10th wk), was $5,000, below expectancy.

Trans-Lux East (T-L) (600; $1.25-$2)—"Act One" (WB) (4th wk). This week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like okay $6,000 after $5,000 for third. "The Silence" (Janus) opens Feb. 3.

Trans-Lux 52d St. (T-L) (540; $1.25-$2)—"Four For Texas" (WB) (5th-final wk). Fourth round ended yesterday (Tues.) was passable $4,500 after $5,000 for third "Seventh Juror" (T-L) opens Jan. 27.

Trans-Lux 85th St. (T-L) (550; $1.25-$2) — "Wheeler Dealers" (MGM) (m.o.). Opens today (Wed.), daydating with Forum. Last week, "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk), was nice $6,000 after same in third.

World (Perfecto) (390; 90-$1.50) —"Traveling Light" (Vic) and "Amorous Sex" (Mishkin) (13th wk). The 12th stanza finished Monday (20) was solid $6,000 after $4,800 in 11th week.

'Jacket' Snappy $7,000, Port.; 'Charade' 9G, 4th

Portland, Ore., Jan. 21.

Strong holdovers are keeping mainstem biz on upbeat here this stanza. Top newcomer is "Strait-Jacket," rated snappy at the Fox. "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" shapes okay on opener at Music Box. "Charade" romps into a fourth session at Broadway where it's socko. "Sword in Stone" looms brisk in fourth at Orpheum. "It's a Mad World" looks wow in fifth round at the Hollywood.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (1,890; $1-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Socko $9,000 or near. Last week, $11,100.

Cinema 21 (Foster) (648; $1.50)—"Yum Yum Tree" (Col) (9th wk). Solid $4,000. Last week, $4,500.

Esquire (Cruikshank) (476; $1.25) —"McLintock" (UA) (m.o.) (4th wk). Five $3,000. Last week, $3,200.

Fine Arts (Foster) (421; $1.50)—"Irma La Douce" (UA) (m.o.) and "Mary, Mary" (WB) (reissue). Nifty $3,500. Last week, "L-Shaped Room" (Col) and "French Style" (Col) (m.o.) (5th wk), $2,600.

Fox (Evergreen) (1,600; $1-$1.49) —"Strait-Jacket" (Col) and "Siege of Saxons" (Col.). Snappy $7,000 or close. Last week, "Four For Texas" (WB) and "Man From Galveston" (WB) (4th wk), $5,000.

Hollywood (Evergreen) (1,890; $1.49-$2.75)—"It's A Mad World" (UA) (5th wk). Wow $14,000. Last week, $13,200.

Irvington (Smith) (650; $1.50)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Hotsy $6,000. Last week, $7,200.

Laurelhurst (Cruikshank) (650; $1.25)—"Kings Of Sun" (UA) and "Summer Holiday" (UA) (4th wk). Okay $3,000. Last week, $4,500.

Music Box (Hamrick) (640; $1-$1.50)—"Who's Been Sleeping In My Bed" (Par) and "Paris Pick-Up" (Par). Okay $5,000. Last week, "Who Minding Store" (Par) and "Last Train From Gun Hill" (Par) (reissue) (3d wk), $3,400.

Orpheum (Evergreen) (1,536; $1-$1.49) — "Sword In Stone" (BV) (4th wk). Brisk $5,000. Last week, $7,100.

Paramount (Port-Par) (1,406; $2-$3.50) — "Cleopatra" (20th) (30th wk). Mild $4,500 or near. Last week, $5,100.

U. S. Experts to Help British Marineland

London, Jan. 21.

American expertise is to be made available for Britain's first Marineland, a joint project by Associated British Picture Corp., Smart's New World Circus and Butlins, the holiday camp experts. The three outfits have formed a joint company, and, subject to approval, hope to complete their first phase of the project early in 1965.

The British company has signed with Marineland of the Pacific, Cal., for a 10-year deal.

SAN FRANCISCO

(Continued from page 15)

$1.75) — "Strait - Jacket" (Col). Boffo $18,000 or over. Last week, "Sword in Stone" (BV) (3d wk), $9,000.

St. Francis (Par) (1,400; $2) — "The Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Smash $17,000 or near. Last week, $21,000.

United Artists (No. Coast) (1,148; $2-$2.40)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (5th wk). Wow $22,000 or better. Last week, $23,500.

Vogue (S.F. Thtrs) (365; $2) — "Knife in Water" (Kana) (5th wk). Big $4,500. Last week, $5,000.

Warfield (FWC) (2,656; $1.25-$1.50)—"Comedy of Terrors" (AI). Fine $12,000. Last week, "Four For Texas" (WB) (3d wk), $7,700.

'Jacket' Boffo $10,000, Balto; 'Prize' 8G, 'McLintock' 10G, 'Charade' 12G, 4

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

The New Theatre is having a big week with the opening of "Strait - Jacket." Others that look good are "The Prize," healthy in fourth week at the Charles; "McLintock," big in fourth at the Senator and "Charade" fine in same at the Stanton. "Four for Texas" is still hot in fifth round at the Town, "Ladies Who Do" is oke in second week at the Playhouse.

"The Cardinal" is holding nicely in fifth session at Mayfair. "Move Over, Darling" is pleasing in fourth round, daydating the Little and suburban Uptown. "Cleopatra" is okay in 30th week at the Hippo.

Estimates for This Week

Charles (Fruchtman) (500; 50-$1.50)—"The Prize" (MGM) (4th wk). Nice $8,000 or close. Last week, $8,000.

Five West (Schwaber) (435; 90-$1.50) — "Murder at Gallop" (MGM) (5th wk). Oke $1,800. Last week, $2,000.

Hippodrome (T-L) (2,200; $1.50-$2)—"Cleopatra" (20th). (30th wk). Fair $9,000. Last week, same.

Little (T-L) (300; 50-$1.65)—"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (4th wk). Nice $4,900. Last week, $5,000.

New (Fruchtman) (1,600; 50-$1.50) — "Strait-Jacket" (Col.). Smash $10,000 or near. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par) (4th wk), $7,000.

Mayfair (Fruchtman) (700; 50-$1.50)—"The Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk). Pleasing $10,000 or over. Last week, same.

Playhouse (Schwaber) (265; 90-$1.50)—"Ladies Who Do" (Cont) (2d wk). Oke $1,800. Last week, $2,300.

Rex (Freedman) (500; $1.50)—"On Lovers' Island" (Indie). Fair $2,000. Last week, "House Bare Mountain" (Indie) (3d wk), $1,500.

Senator (Durkee) (960; 65-$1.65) —"McLintock" (UA) (4th wk). Big $10,000. Last week, $12,000.

Stanton (Fruchtman) (2,800; 50-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (4th wk). Fine $12,000. Last week, same.

Town (T-L) (1,125; 50-$1.50)—"Four for Texas" (WB) (5th wk). Warm $6,800. Last week, $7,000.

Arcades Escape Rap

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Charges of showing obscene films have been dropped against the operators of eight South State Street amusement arcades on the basis of the decision in a trial against one of them. The operators were indicted after raids on "peep shows" Sept. 24 at which time 22 films were seized.

CHICAGO

(Continued from page 13)

$3.80)—"It's A Mad World" (UA) (7th wk). Big $22,000. Last week, $20,000.

Monroe (Jovan) (1,000; 65-90)—"Prelude To Ecstasy" (Indie) and "Violent Years" (Indie). Fast $6,000. Last week, "2 Nights With Cleopatra" (Indie) and "Fatal Desire" (Indie) (2d wk), $4,000.

Oriental (Indie) (3,400; 90-$1.80) —"The Prize" (MGM). Sock $40,000. Last week, "Kings of Sun" (UA) (4th wk), $13,000.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,400; 90-$1.80) —"Sword In Stone" (BV) and "Disneyland After Dark" (BV) (4th wk). Fine $12,000. Last week, $13,000.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,400; $1.50-$4)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (29th wk). Firm $19,000. Last week, $17,500.

Surf (H&E Balaban) (684; $1.50-$1.80) — "Purlie Victorious" (Indie). Slick $7,750. Last week, "No, My Darling Daughter" (Cont) (2d wk), $3,000.

Todd (Todd) (1,089; 90-$1.80)—"Tom Jones" (UA) (5th wk). Torrid $24,000 or close. Last week, $22,500.

Town (Teitel) (640; $1.25-$1.50) —"Young Love" (Teitel) (2d wk). Nice $1,700. Last week, $2,200.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 90-$1.80)——"Four For Texas" (WB) (4th wk). Nice $11,000. Last week, $13,000.

Woods (Essaness) (1,200; 90-$1.80)—"Cardinal" (Col) (4th wk). Socko $21,000. Last week, $26,000.

World (Teitel) (608; 90-$1.80)—"Macbeth" (Indie). Brisk $5,000. Last week, "My Life To Live" (Pathe) (4th wk), $4,000.

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX FILM CORPORATION
HEAD OFFICE 444 WEST 56TH STREET, NEW YORK 19, N.Y.
BRANCHES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD
TELEPHONE COLUMBUS 5-3320 CABLE ADDRESS, CENTFOX NEWYORK

SEYMOUR POE
EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

January 16, 1964

TO: ALL TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX OFFICES WORLD-WIDE

I am sure all of you know of our forthcoming picture WHAT A WAY TO GO! with its great cast of Shirley MacLaine, Paul Newman, Robert Mitchum, Dean Martin, Gene Kelly, Bob Cummings and Dick Van Dyke.

Richard Zanuck has just shown me a first rough cut of this film.

I have never seen a picture like WHAT A WAY TO GO! It cannot be compared to any other film. If I had to describe it, I would call it a $5,000,000 female "Tom Jones".

Without music or sound effects, the rough cut was a delight. We sat in the Studio screening room and laughed our heads off. J. Lee Thompson has fashioned a towering successor to "The Guns Of Navarone" which he also directed, demonstrating unbelievable change of pace and an enormous talent for comedy. He has made not only a great film, he has created "an entertainment."

Shirley MacLaine who was signed by producer Arthur Jacobs for her first picture since "Irma La Douce", is more beautiful than she has ever appeared before and, in addition, is charming and amusing with plenty of sex which is displayed in a wardrobe that will absolutely stun women everywhere.

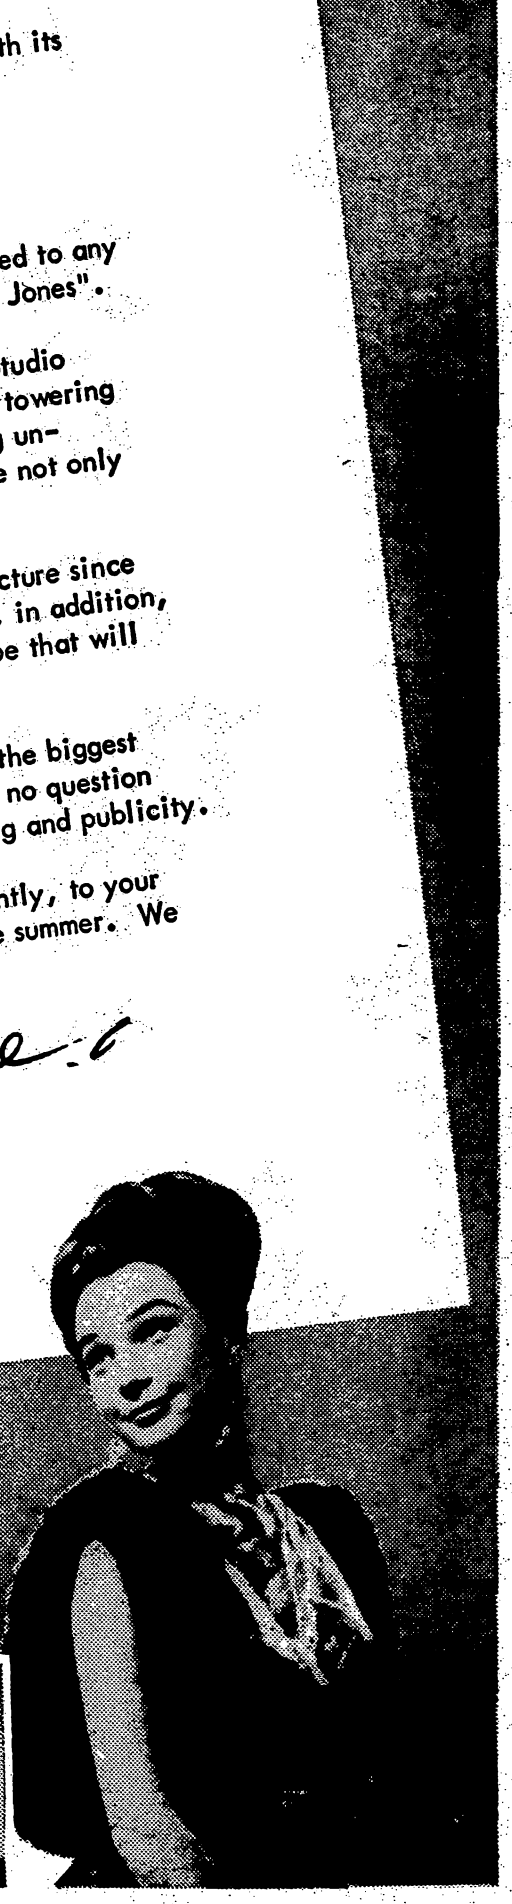
I don't think there is any question that WHAT A WAY TO GO! is one of the biggest and most important pictures our company has ever handled. There is also no question that it will receive top treatment in every phase of its selling, advertising and publicity.

Please pass the word along to your organization, and even more importantly, to your customers that WHAT A WAY TO GO! will be 20th's big release for the summer. We are all in for a tremendous experience.

Sincerely,

Seymour

SP/dm



Film Reviews

Continued from page 6

Man's Favorite Sport

for this film with a snip here and there.

Handsomely photographed by Russell Harlan, the picture boasts some colorful rustic settings by art directors Alexander Golitzen and Tambi Larsen and a characteristically novel, infectiously effervescent musical score by Henry Mancini, along with a springhtly title tune he wrote in partnership with lyricist Johnny Mercer. Tube.

This is My Street

(BRITISH)

Seamy tale of the back streets, with novelettish ingredients in a modishly realistic setting; favorable b.o. prospects.

London, Jan. 15.

Warner-Pathe release of a Peter Rogers production. Stars Ian Hendry, June Ritchie. Directed by Sidney Hayers. Screenplay by Bill McIlwraith from Nan Maynard's novel; music, Eric Rogers; camera, Alan Hume; editor, Roger Cherrill. Reviewed at Warner-Pathe Private Theatre, London. Running time, 94 MINS.

Harry	Ian Hendry
Margery	June Ritchie
Lily	Avice Landon
Steve	Meredith Edwards
Kitty	Madge Ryan
Charlie	John Hurt
Jinny	Annette Andre
Maureen	Philippa Gail
Sid	Mike Pratt
Paul	Tom Adams
Doris	Hilda Fenemore
Phyllis	Susan Burnet
Mark	Robert Bruce
Joe	John Bluthal
Conny	Margaret Boyd
Fred	Carl Bernard
Ransome	Patrick Cargill
Isabel	Margo Johns
Fingus	Derek Francis
Molly	Ursula Hirst
Gindy	Sheraton Blount

"Live Now, Pay Later" in 1962 was the film that registered Ian Hendry as a highly watchable personality. And now "This is My Street" gives him a similar role as a fast-talking and feckless womanizer and hitches him again to his partner in the earlier film, June Ritchie. If comparisons have to be made, this successor lacks the cunning and the veracity of the earlier pic, but much of the crudity in the plotting is disguised by the crisp direction of Sidney Hayers and by the excellent performances of both Hendry and Miss Ritchie. Only those with vivid memories of the past will be disappointed in this one.

Ian Hendry is the flashy Harry, lodger in a mean London street close to the railroad tracks. His eyes rove constantly over the worthy contours of Margery (June Ritchie), who lives next door with her chunky and dreary husband. Not daunted by her marital status, Harry makes an insolent play for her, and, she haughtily rebuffs him. Togetherness is achieved when her little girl gets lost, and Harry does a Galahad routine in finding her.

Margery is ripe for romance, being churned up with her sordid surroundings, her unimaginative and clumsy spouse, and the general lack of purpose. So they torridly bed down in the backroom of a drinking club in which Harry has an interest. He's also a peddler of fake jewellery.

So far, so illicitly sexy — until Margery's educated sister returns for a visit. She has an upper-crust suitor in tow but this again does not frighten Harry. He is tiring of Margery's jealousy and possessive grip, and chases her sister with added zest. Margery is brusquely discarded, and doesn't like it. When Harry succeeds to the extent of planning marriage with sister Jinny, Margery settles for suicide. She doesn't succeed, but the notes she leaves behind enlightens everyone about Harry's lack of scruples, and it ends in boy-leaves-girls bit.

Not content with this meaty, but more or less adequate, storyline, scripter Bill McIlwraith indulges in a sub-plot that topples into unconvincing melodrama. It also connects little with the main proceedings, and it is couched in such corny and contrived terms that it rouses unwanted yocks. The flighty Maureen (Phillipa Gail) picks up a rich dentist and milks him for money without much finesse.

But while Hendry and Miss Ritchie are around, the film keeps up interest. Hendry, in particular, is exactly right, filling out the conventional character of the guy who won't settle for as much as the material allows. He also scores with some glib dialog allotted him.

Miss Ritchie is also fine as the embittered Margery, and gives her best pic portrayal to date. She effectively translates Margery's frustration, and makes her credible and moving. Avice Landon is also quietly correct as her mother. Newcomer Annette Andree registers as Jinny, with a capacity for fun.

Phillipa Gail overplays the grasping Maureen, turning her to caricature, but admittedly she has little chance in the part. Other performances are often stiff and exaggerated, though John Hurt makes an impression as a highly irrelevant barman who privately dotes on Maureen. Mike Pratt is well suited as the coarse Sid, Margery's husband.

Sidney Hayer's direction never loiters, and makes fine use of the seedy London settings. Editor Roger Cherrill also knows when to stop. Alan Hume's photography is sharp. An appropriately jazzy musical soundtrack come from Eric Rogers, and it tends to sum up the whole hectic affair. It looks like a promising contender at local firstruns, and marks a further step in the progress of Hendry, who has international potential outside of this type pic. Otta.

Children of The Damned

(BRITISH-PANAVISION)

Unsatisfactory followup to 1960 British sci-fi shocker. Approached too pretentiously.

Hollywood, Jan. 9.

Metro release of Lawrence P. Bachmann production. No star credits. Directed by Anton Leader. Screenplay, Jack Briley; camera, David Boulton; editor, Ernie Walter; assistant director, Ted Sturgis. Reviewed at the studio, Jan. 9, '64. Running time, 90 MINS.

Col. Tom Lewellin	Ian Hendry
Dr. David Neville	Alan Badel
Susan Eliot	Barbara Ferris
Colin Webster	Alfred Burke
Diana Looran	Sheila Allen
Paul	Clive Powell
Mark	Frank Summerscales
Rashid	Mahdu Mathen
Aga Nagalo	Gerald Delsol
Nina	Roberta Rex
Mi-Ling	Franchesca Lee
Harib	Harold Goldblatt
Mr. Davidson	Patrick Whyte
General Miller	Tom Bowman
Professor Gruber	Martin Miller
Russian Official	Andre Mikhelson

Like most sequels, "Children Of The Damned" isn't nearly as good as its predecessor — Metro's 1960 release, "Village Of The Damned," nor is it likely to be as successful at the boxoffice. What weakens this sequel is the fact that, unlike the original, it is burdened with a "message." The attempt at endowing it with moral significance is heavyhanded, unnecessary and too pretentious an aim for so relatively modest a production venture.

The Lawrence P. Bachmann production, filmed in England by Englishmen, is apt to rely commercially on the same exploitation angles that helped sell the earlier production. The same customers, recalling the above average quality of the original, figure to be attracted back, but they will be disappointed. The new but unsatisfactory approach to the same basic situation will confuse and irritate them. As for those who weren't there the first time around, they should be completely mystified by the events of this film.

Jack Briley's screenplay broadens the scope to an international scale of what was originally a taut little sci-fi shocker. This time those strange, handsome, parthenogenetic children with the genius IQ's, destructive dispositions and raygun eyes are not mere invaders from the outer limits bent on occupying earth, but are actually premature samplings of man as he will be in, say, a million years. And they have arrived for a curious purpose—to be destroyed, presumably to enable the silly, warlike contemporary man to learn some sort of lesson. The only lesson to emerge clearly from all of this, however, is—if you're going to get eyeball to eyeball with modern man, you'd better blink because if you don't he'll just blow you to bits.

There are one or two genuinely funny lines in Briley's scenario and they are inherited by the character of a geneticist played engagingly by Alan Badel. A few of Badel's scenes with Ian Hendry, who plays an idealistic psychologist, are the best in the picture. Otherwise it's tedious going, and Anton Leader's lethargic direction doesn't help any. Barbara Ferris has a key role, as do Alfred Burke, Sheila Allen and moppet Clive Powell. Memorable they aren't. Technical credits are generally capable, but not especially distinguished. Tube.

491

(SWEDISH)

Stockholm, Jan. 14.

Svensk Filmindustri production and release. Stars Lars Lind, Leif Nymark, Stig Tornblom, Lars Hansson, Sven Algotsson, Torleif Cederstrand, Bo Andersson, Lena Nyman; features Frank Sundstrom, Ake Gronberg, Mona Andersson. Directed by Vilgot Sjoman. Screenplay by Lars Goerling after his best selling novel; camera, Gunnar Fischer; music, Georg Riedel. Reviewed at Svensk Filmindustri, Stockholm. Running time, 105 MINS.

Krister	Lars Lind
Nisse	Leif Nymark
Egon	Stig Tornblom
"Pyret"	Lars Hansson
"Jingis"	Sven Algotsson
"The Butcher"	Torleif Cederstrand
"The Fish"	Bo Andersson
Steva	Lena Nyman
The Inspector	Frank Sundstrom
The Preacher	Ake Gronberg
Kajsa	Mona Andersson
The Examiner	Jan Blomberg
German sailor	Siegfried Wald
German sailor	Wilhelm Fricks
Policeman	Erik Hell
Policeman	Leif Liljeroth

This is the most-discussed film in Sweden at the present time. The State Censorship Board voted to ban it, giving as a reason for the action that the pic was against the law of pornography. The producer has appealed to the government, and chances are that it will allow the film to be shown eventually, after certain cuts.

The title, "491," was taken from the Bible, where one of the disciples asked Jesus: "How many times shall I forgive my enemies, will seven times be enough" and Jesus answered: "Not seven times, but 70 times seven times . . ." the preacher in the film saying this means that we have promised the forgiveness for 490 sins, but the Lord has said nothing about the 491st sin.

This is a so-called social drama about six criminal teenagers, who are chosen by the authorities for an experiment. Together with a teenage social worker and student, they live in a house where they are free to do almost anything they like. But every morning they must report to the authorities and describe how they have spent their day.

However, not everything is as it should be. The Inspector to whom they report every day shows homosexual tendencies and gets involved with two of the teenagers. When they ask him for payment, he refuses saying: "People in my position are accused so often that the authorities pay no attention to it any longer; you are welcome to go to the police with your complaints."

One night the teenagers sneak aboard a German ship in the harbor, looking for alcohol. There they meet the teenage girl Steva (Lena Nyman) who has been raped by one of the sailors. They take her along back to where they live. And later on, they use her as a prostitute when they need money.

The film ends tragically. In their desire to hurt everybody around them, the teenagers force Steva to have unnatural sexual contact, a scene well described in the novel. This is not actually shown in the film except that certain noises together with the dialog give a very good idea of what's happening.

The film is said to have been made as a social drama in order to describe that not everything is as wonderful as it could be in a welfare country. If the idea has been to shock, the producer has been very successful.

Nudity does not exist in the picture except for a few, and compared with other films, innocent scenes. The girl, Steva, is seen nude backside a couple of times, and that is about all. In other cases, as when she is raped, the camera shows the faces of the people around and just about how they feel.

This film presents no happy ending, and there is no "crime does not pay" angle.

Most of the actors are non-pros. Lars Lind, as Krister, a social worker who lives with the boys, is a widely known actor here. Same applies to Frank Sundstrom as the homo Inspector. The six teenagers are all new faces, who have never appeared in films before, but all contribute fine performances. Lena Nyman, as Steva, has been seen in pix and tele, playing minor roles. She does very well in an unsympathetic role. Direction and screenplay is tops.

However, this still is a dark, cruel film. The teenagers speak an obscene language. The most surprising thing is that the censors banned this under the law against pornography. Since Swedish censors are very careful about films showing violence, this film could have been banned for this alone.

This is the second pic made by director Vilgot Sjoman, a disciple of Ingmar Bergman. His first film, "Alskarinnan," has been picked as a foreign production for the next Oscar race.

"491" seems very dubious for export, except in countries where "Swedish sin" has a market. Since the Swedish censors are known as one of the most liberal regarding sex, the question is what censorship in other countries will say.

Overlooking the dark, brutal story this tells, the film is artistically a masterpiece as far as acting, direction, camerawork and music are concerned. Wing.

Mondo Cane No. 2

(ITALIAN—COLOR)

Rome, Jan. 15.

Cineriz production and release. A film by Gualtiero Jacopetti and Franco Prosperi. Directed by Mario Maffei and Giorgio Cecchini. Camera (Technicolor), Benito Frattari; music, Nino Oliviero; editor, Mario Morra; commentary, Gualtiero Jacopetti. At Modernissimo, Rome. Running time, 97 MINS.

Followup film to the much-discussed and successful "Mondo Cane" may have the same bite and controversiality as its prototype. But it in no way measures up to the No. 1 pic. Its returns, though very promising, are likely to pay the consequences of this.

Subject is naturally exploitable. It's once again a discussion piece, has many unusual facets to it. But somehow, this lacks the sweep, the feeling for humanity (sick and controversial though it may have been) which contributed to the wide success of the first one.

Once again, here we have the justaxposition by contrast of beast and man, and their treatment in distant corners of the earth. Once again, one is made to ponder on the follies of civilization and the sanity of the native. Once again, the sacred is closely matched to the profane, allowing the audience to draw its own conclusions. But here more than before, there is a feeling of construction, of following a pre-set pattern rather than happening on to the unusual by chance.

The sequence showing cranes dying out because of a lake polluted by a man-made factory, for one obvious example, closely resembles the one in "M.C. No. 1" showing the extermination of tortoises on a Bikini atoll, both in montage and theme. Other sequences border on the revolting, though it's unfortunately known that there's an audience for such footage somewhere.

In every way, the picture is faithful to its predecessor (lush lensing and music score, etc.), but only rarely measures up to it—though, often topping other similar local efforts of the recent past. Gualtiero Jacopetti's commentary is incisive and outspokenly characteristic. But one again has the feeling that pic is less his personal effort than that of a team attempting to get the "feel" of his previous hits ("Women of the World" was the other) into material which he himself did not shot. Hawk.

Batmanova, Singing Slave

(RUSSIAN-COLOR-SONGS)

(Kinopanorama)

Paris, Jan. 12.

Mosfilm production and release. With Tamara Semina, Dimitri Smirnov, Evgueni Leonov, Sergue Filippov. Directed by Roman Tikhomirov. Screenplay, L. Zakharov, E. Guerken, S. Vogelsohn; music, Nicolai Strelnikov; camera (Sovcolor), E. Chapiri; editor, M. Pen. At Kinopanorama, Paris. Running time, 92 MINS.

Batmanova	Tamara Semina
Andrei	Dimitri Smirnov
Nikita	Evgueni Leonov
Prince	Sergue Filippov

Russia now comes up with a one-projector Kinpanorama (akin to the Yank one-camera Cinerama) process and uses it for an operetta pic. It is set in an old style sort of Graustarkian Russia of old, with a wicked Prince and two lovers. Not the sort of pic for arty houses abroad but with enough general entertainment aspects for lingo spots.

Batmanova is an ex-Russian serf who comes back to the Court of a ruthless selfish 19th Century Prince as his lead singer after conquering Paris. The Prince wants her but she loves a young nobleman who is technically still a serf to the Prince since his papers have been lost.

All the obvious plotting finally leads to the happy ending. There is the comic sidekick and his girl, ballroom scenes, some nice terp bits, and rhythmic songs and pleasant voices. Playing and song dubbing is good. This also makes its social points about classes if it is disguised in the usual operetta shenanigans.

Players have the right larger than life-stances, and, if pic sometimes repeats itself, this has movement and lightness not usually seen in Russo musical pic. Sovcolor seems less washed out than usual. Mosk.

La Pupa

(The Doll)

(ITALIAN)

Rome, Jan. 15.

Cineriz release of a Guido Giambartolomei production for Royal Films. Stars Michele Mercier; features Ettore Manni, Riccardo Garrone, Lia Zoppelli, Francesco Mule, Rossella Como. Directed by Giuseppe Orlandini. Screenplay, Ugo Guerra, Luciano Martino, Roberto Gianviti, from story by Martino and Guerra; camera, Raffaele Masciocchi; music, Nino Oliviero. At Mazzini, Rome. Running time, 107 MINS.

Pupa	Michele Mercier
Barone	Riccardo Garrone
Gianni	Ettore Manni
Elena	Lia Zoppelli

Exploitable item which could overcome basically local story approach via adroit selling for foreign market possibilities.

Rather confused story line has several people in a small north Italian town trying to buy what formerly was the local call house from its onetime madam, who refuses to sell out. When she eventually dies, a series of intrigues finally winds place in hands of a onetime employee, the "Pupa" of the title.

Humor is frequently gross and lowdown, and the situations overelaborated and obvious. But here and there, between leers, there's a genuine laugh or two. Most of acting honors go to Michele Mercier, as the enterprising fille-de-joie. A colorful cast with Francesco Mule, Riccardo Garrone, and Ettore Manni gives okay backstopping. Other credits are consistent. Hawk.

Aussie Film Biz as Hot as Torrid Weather; Yank Pix Pace Field

Sydney, Jan. 21.

Despite blistering mid-summer heat, cinema biz started off the New Year with a powerful boxoffice intake which should continue buoyant for some months.

The product lineup presently is very strong, with U.S. pix topping the marquees coast-to-coast. Youngsters on vacation until the end of this month have boosted matinee biz to a new high.

Blockbuster biz is holding up strongly in the key cities with "How West Was Won" (MGM) swinging into its second year. "Cleopatra" (20th) is finding buyers on two-a-day and should record a solid run. Big coiners include: "55 Days at Peking" (BEF), 23d week. "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col), 10th week; "Great Escape" (UA), third week; "Charade" (U), second week; "Fun in Acapulco" (Par) 3rd week; "Irma La Douce" (UA), third week; plus "In Search of Castaways" (MGM) and "Flipper" (MGM), both in third weeks.

Also doing well are "Spencer's Mountain" (WB), "Sammy Going South" (BEF), "Jason and Argonauts" (Col), "Beach Party" (Blake) and "Queen Bee" (Blake).

Suburban biz is tops with general release of "Guns of Navarone" (Col), "Longest Day" (20th), "West Side Story" (UA) and "Bye, Bye Birdie" (Col).

Aussie showmen now believe that a continuous flow of quality product, currently in evidence on marquees in this territory, will finally beat hot opposition coming from nightclubs, hotels spotting floor shows and clubs playing 16m pix as a biz come-on to boost slot machines and other gambling setups.

THERE'S GOLD IN THEM THAR HILLBILLIES!

Ain't nothin' you need for an old-fashioned hillbilly wedding but a mail order catalogue and a shotgun !!

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER presents

IN PANAVISION® AND METROCOLOR

MAIL ORDER BRIDE

Starring BUDDY EBSEN · KEIR DULLEA · Co-Starring LOIS NETTLETON

Warren OATES Screen Play by Burt KENNEDY Directed by Burt KENNEDY

Produced by Richard E. LYONS

Hear Buddy Ebsen Sing "Mail Order Bride" on MGM Records

VERY SPECIAL DELIVERY FOR FEBRUARY

M-G-M IS ON THE MOVE!

Hollywood Production Pulse

ALLIED ARTISTS
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year 0

AMERICAN INT'L
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year .. 0

COLUMBIA
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year 0

"HEY THERE, IT'S YOGI BEAR"
(Hanna-Barbera Prods.)
Prod.-Dirs.—William Hanna, Joseph Barbera
Voices: Daws Butler, Mel Blanc, Don Messick, Julie Bennett, Hal Smith, J. Pat O'Malley (Started June 24)

"LORD JIM"
(Richard Brooks Production)
(Shooting in Hong Kong)
Prod.-Dir.—Richard Brooks
Peter O'Toole, James Mason, Curt Jurgens, Eli Wallach, Jack Hawkins, Paul Lukas, Daliah Lavi
(Started Dec. 9)

WALT DISNEY
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year 0

METRO
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year 1

"JUDGMENT IN THE SUN"
(Harvest-February-Ritt-Kayos Prod.)
(Shooting in Arizona)
Prod.—Ronald Lubin
Dir.—Martin Ritt
Paul Newman, Claire Bloom, Laurence Harvey, Edward G. Robinson, William Shatner, Howard Da Silva, Albert Salmi, Thomas Chalmers, Paul Fix
(Started Dec. 9)

PARAMOUNT
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year 0

"CIRCUS WORLD"
(Samuel Bronston Prods.)
(Shooting in Barcelona)
Prod.—Samuel Bronston
Dir.—Henry Hathaway
John Wayne, Claudia Cardinale, Rod Taylor, Rita Hayworth, Lloyd Nolan (Started Sept. 23)

"ROBINSON CRUSO ON MARS"
(Schenck-Zabel Prod.)
Prod.—Aubrey Schenck
Dir.—Byron Haskin
Paul Mantee, Vic Ludin, Adam West
(Started Dec. 2)

"WHERE LOVE HAS GONE"
(Joseph E. Levine Prod.)
Prod.—Joseph E. Levine
Dir.—Edward Dmytryk
Susan Hayward, Bette Davis, Michael Connors, Joey Heatherton, George Macready, Jane Greer, Anne Seymour, DeForest Kelley (Started Dec. 10).

"THE PATSY"
(Jerry Lewis Prod.)
Prod.—Ernest D. Glucksman
Dir.—erry Lewis
Jerry Lewis, Ina Balin, Keenan Wynn, Peter Lorre, Phil Harris, John Carradine, Everett Sloane
(Started Jan. 6)

20th CENTURY-FOX
Starts, This Year 1
This Date, Last Year 0

"FATE IS A HUNTER"
(Arcola-20th-Fox)
Prod.—Aaron Rosenberg
Dir.—Ralph Nelson
Glen Ford, Rod Taylor, Nancy Kwan, Suzanne Pleshette
(Started Jan. 5)

UNITED ARTISTS
Starts, This Year 2
This Date, Last Year 1

"THE TRAIN"
(Les Productions Artists-Ariane-DEAR Film)
(Shooting in France)
Prod.—Jules Bricken
Dir.—John Frankenheimer
Burt Lancaster, Jeanne Moreau, Paul Scofield, Claude Dauphin, Michele Gordon, Suzanne Flon, Albert Remy (Started Aug. 5)

"TOPKAPI"
(Filmways, Inc.)
(Shooting in Istanbul, Greece and Paris)
Prod.—Martin Ransohoff
Dir.—Jules Dassin
Melina Mercouri, Maximillian Schell, Peter Ustinov, Robert Morley, Akim Tamiroff, Gilles Segal, Jess Hahn
(Started Aug. 12)

"MR. MOSES"
(Frank Ross-Talbot Prod.)
(Shooting in Kenya)
Prod.—Frank Ross
Dir.—Ronald Neame
Robert Mitchum, Carroll Baker, Alexander Knox, Ian Bannen
(Started Jan. 9)

"THE SATAN BUG"
(Mirisch-Kappa Prod.)
(Shooting in Palm Springs)
Prod.-Dir.—John Sturges
George Maharis, Richard Basehart, Joan Hackett, Dana Andrews
(Started Jan. 6)

UNIVERSAL
Starts, This Year 1
This Date, Last Year 1

"MARNIE"
(Alfred Hitchcock Prod.)
Prod.-Dir.—Alfred Hitchcock
Tippi Hedren, Sean Connery, Diane Baker, Mariette Hartley, S. John Launer
(Started Nov. 25)

"SEND ME NO FLOWERS"
(Universal-Martin Melcher Prod.)
Prod.—Harry Keller
Dir.—Norman Jewison
Rock Hudson, Doris Day, Tony Randall, Clint Walker, Edward Andrews
(Started Dec. 19)

"I'D RATHER BE RICH"
(Ross Hunter Prod.)
Prod.—Ross Hunter
Dir.—Jack Smight
Sandra Dee, Robert Goulet, Andy Williams, Maurice Chevalier, Gene Raymond, Charles Ruggles, Hayden Rorke
(Started Dec. 27)

"KITTEN WITH A WHIP"
Prod.—Harry Keller
Dir.—Douglas Heyes
Ann-Margret, John Forsythe, James Ward, Peter Brown, Patricia Barry
(Started Jan. 8)

WARNER BROS.
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year 0

"SEX AND THE SINGLE GIRL"
Prod.—William T. Orr
Dir.—Richard Quine
Tony Curtis, Natalie Wood, Henry Fonda, Lauren Bacall, Diane McBain, Otto Kruger, Fran Jeffries, Edward Everett Horton, Count Basis, Leslie Parrish
(Started Nov. 1)

INDEPENDENT
Starts, This Year 0
This Date, Last Year..... 2

Resume Stage Title Of Ossie Davis' 'Victorious,' New Sales Strategist

"Purlie Victorious" is now the official title of the film based on Ossie Davis' Broadway play of that name which had been called "Gone Are the Days" originally. Ben Gladstone has been signed by the Hammer Film Corp. as general manager in charge of world-wide distribution of the film.

The satire on the racial situation in the south met with strong critical approval but weak attendance during a few-week premiere run in New York last fall. Since then it has played several cities, some in the south and opened last Friday (17) in Chicago, where hopes for the film's eventual bail out are pinned. In several of its other dates the picture is reported as having done satisfactorily in both Negro and ofay situations.

Nonetheless, "Purlie" is still without a distributor, save the Hammer outfit which produced it. The picture continues to encounter resistance from distribs, Milt Hammer reports, but good results in Chicago could help that situation. The New York showing frightened most off originally. There are still plans for the continued distribution of the pic, come what may, the overseas market still a possibility if dubbing can be straightened out.

Meanwhile, it will be Gladstone's job to keep the film in circulation and earning. While handling "Purlie," he will continue his present position of buying and booking for Town and Country Theatres.

Twins for Toledo Mart

Toledo, O., Jan. 21.

Construction permit has been obtained for the new theatre to be built by the National Amusement Co. on Secor Road, near the Westgate Shopping Center, in suburban Toledo. This will be the first indoor theatre to be built here since 1941. Value of the building project was listed at $400,000, which represent about half the cost of the entire investment.

National Amusement Co., Boston (of the Redstone Circuit), is building the theatre, with plans calling for the construction of two separate auditoriums, to be known as Cinema I and Cinema II. Both auditoriums, sharing a common lobby, will offer first-run films. The project is on a six-acre site. Construction is expected to be completed some time this summer.

'Children of the World': Morris Engel to Roll The American Segment

New York indie filmmaker Morris Engel, who is credited by many young French directors for having served as the inspiration for France's short-lived nouvelle vague, has been signed by Walter Reade-Sterling to produce and direct the U.S. section of a multi-seg feature to be titled "Children of The World." Fred Orain, French producer-director, will serve as exec producer for the overall pic, which will also include segs made in France, Russia, Japan and, possibly, Africa.

Engel's feature pix include "The Little Fugitive," "Lovers and Lollipops" and "Weddings and Babies." Latter won the Venice fest's Critics' Prize in 1958. In addition to producing, directing and writing, Engel has also developed his own, specially designed camera and sound equipment, keyed to the problems of location shooting and portability. It's expected that his seg of the R-F feature will be done entirely on New York locations.

Deal with Engel was negotiated by Irving Wormser, prez of R-S' Continental Division, and Saul J. Turell, R-S prez. Latter will go to Paris this spring for talks with Orain about the French and Japanese segs of the pic.

U May Have 26 Features for 1964

Universal Pictures, which released 22 films in 1963, will probably put as many as 26 pictures into release this year, v.p.-general sales manager Henry H. (Hi) Martin reported at a trade press conference last Thursday (9) to discuss past performances and future plans.

Reflecting management's policy to realize the U studio's maximum potential, he said, is the fact that of this year's total releases, 75% will be studio-made and only 25% acquired outside, compared with an estimated 55% studio-made and 45% acquired outside in 1963.

Without revealing any figures, the exec described 1963, in terms of domestic sales, as "a damned successful year — the best since 1956," the company's previous high. This year will be the best, he predicted. All of this year's releases, he noted, are either finished, being edited or now shooting. There'll be no "wet prints" being released by U.

As part of the company's efforts to alert exhibs to its upcoming product, the veep announced that it is reviving a series of special regional screenings of two specific pix, a plan first tried out two years ago under the heading of "A Day With Universal." This year the company is plugging "The Chalk Garden," which will be a Radio City Music Hall feature the date for which hasn't been set, and "Bedtime Story," to be shown "back to back" separated by a luncheon at which U prez Milton R. Rackmil and Martin will be hosts.

First such "day" will be Jan. 30 in Dallas, to be followed by similar affairs Feb. 4 in Chicago, Feb. 6 in Atlanta and Feb. 20 in Toronto. At each affair, exhibs from neighboring states will come in at their own expense to see the films, with between 400 and 600 expected to attend.

Governor Films Spreads To 1964 Total of 7

Governor Films, indie distrib which released four pix in 1963, will send out seven in 1964.

Sked includes:

"Serious Charge," starring Anthony Quayle, Sarah Churchill and Cliff Richard, directed by Terrence Young; "Tomorrow at Ten," suspense pic, with John Gregson and Robert Shaw; "Carry On Cabby," with Sidney James and Liz Fraser, produced by Peter Rogers and directed by Gerald Thomas; "Carry On Cruising," with James, Miss Fraser, produced by Rogers and directed by Thomas; "Doctor in Distress," starring Dirk Bogarde, produced by Betty Box; "Carry on Venus," with Cecil Parker and Kenneth Williams, and "The Lady Doctor," starring Vittorio De Sica, Abbe Lane and Toto.

Unionists Eye Govt. Intervention As Sole Solution for British Woes

London, Jan. 21.

Amid the political wrangling, the toing and froing of intra-industry pressures, and the issuing of various modus operandi which portend a way out of the current film industry crisis here, the Assn. of Cinematograph, Television and Allied Technicians has now put forth its ideas.

In a pamphlet "A Policy For British Films", the union asserts: "The trade will not or cannot (because of the monopoly situation) effectively tackle its problems." Union believes the Government must intervene by increased participation in the industry and with "advice" which, if ignored, "must become an instruction".

According to the union: "One should not underestimate the value of Government participation. Without it, British film production would not have been re-established after the first world war . . . and subsequently it has been the sheet anchor against the complete extinction of independent film production."

Revoicing the old cry for one or more additional outlets for local pix which would give producers equivalent fiscal returns to those garnered from the Rank and ABC chains, ACTT suggests that the Government-backed film bank, National Film Finance Corporation, should be empowered—and given sufficient coin for the purpose—to set up with British Lion and Shepperton studios a third circuit equal in size, booking power and financial take to the two big loops.

Further, the union urges that local authorities should exercise their power under the Local Government Act to acquire cinemas (as advocated by the Trades Union Council). Such "municipal theatres" might be a part of the proposed NFFC/British Lion/Shepperton group to form a third release to form a new circuit on their own.

Union also urges that "outworn booking policies and restrictive practices of cinemas" must be abolished, as must barring policies. Major distribs should have less influence over films which are made and he suggested standard fair contracts might be drawn up to give producers a fairer deal (particularly for second feature producers, whose pix are being driven out of the market "because of the uneconomic prices which distributors are prepared to offer for them.").

The 30% British quota, the ACTT maintains, is "far too low" particularly bearing in mind the ever increasing popularity of local films and the heavy decline in American production. Quota level should be geared to offset the decline in theatres so that producers' revenue is at least maintained and the number of films made is no fewer than at present. ACTT wants a 50% quota.

Earlier in its pamplet the technicians union blasts the report of the Structure and Training Practices Sub-Committee of the Cinematograph Films Council, published in the fall. While the union feels its analysis of the present difficulties of the film biz is "faultless," the union says, its conclusions "ran away from the case it had made."

"Report should have faced up frankly to (a) the harmful nature of duopoly and (b) the outmoded trading practices and policies.

"The former means that Rank and ABC virtually control film production. Two people decide as to the success or failure of a film, or in effect whether it gets made. As a result film production is stifled and the independent producer is gradually being squeezed out of existence," the union's pamphlet concludes.

New Stock Option Plan on Agenda Of Nat'l General Meet

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

In a proxy statement issued yesterday, advising stockholders of the annual meeting here on Feb. 18, National General Corp. reveals salaries of its top executives who earn over $30,000 yearly, for fiscal annum ended Sept. 24. The officers and remuneration follow:

Prexy-board chairman Eugene Klein, $90,000; exec veepee Irving H. Levin, $57,200; veepee-treasurer Alan May, $46,000; theatre operations veep Robert W. Selig, $46,100; senior veepee (and mobile subsid chief) M. E. Hersh, $34,346.

Salaries of all officers and directors totalled $347,961. Klein May & Selig are down for estimated annual remuneration of $25,000 each upon retirement, at this point.

At the meeting, stockholders will vote on an amended stock option plan, updating the one shareholders originally approved in 1955 and the two amended versions, in 1959 and 1960. Basically, new amendment extends termination date on plan from 1965 to 1970. Option proposal is that salaried execs (maximum of 70 be granted stock option not to exceed 100,000 shares) may exercise at a price not to be less than 85% of closing price of stock on the day it is picked up. To date Klein is down for most share options, a total of 78,000. Levin is up for 36,400.

At the session, stockholders also will elect 10 directors. The only known entries in field are the incumbent 10.

'Valley of the Fallen' Short to Paramount

Madrid, Jan. 21.

Paramount Pictures will be the distributor in the U.S. of "The Valley of the Fallen," documentary film made by Samuel Bronston about the national shrine erected to honor the dead of both sides in Spain's 1930's civil war.

The short subject has enjoyed considerable playoff in several parts of the world, being distributed in Britain by the Rank Organization. Film was directed by Andrew Martan and the cameraman was Jack Hilliard, who is currently lensing Bronston's "Circus World" in Madrid. Paramount, coincidentally, is also distributing the feature. In addition to Britain, the film has been shown to solid response in Spain and throughout many parts of Latin America.

Bronston makes these shorts from time to time to maintain goodwill with the Spanish government and, also, to fill the growing need for short subject material for exhibitors, less and less shorts being made these days. In the case of the "Valley" pic, any profits go to the maintenance of the shrine, another goodwill gesture.

The producer also made a short film about the life of Juniperio Serra, founder of Mission Trail in California. This trail contains the original Spanish missions in the U.S. and is also a source of great pride to the Spanish people. This film has also done well in its showings.

Bronston is now planning to make another such film, this one to be about Spanish festivals. It will be filmed at all the important festival cities and all the principal fests themselves will be lensed. Other such pix will also be made as time goes by, as Bronston is keenly aware of the role of public relations in his operations in Spain.

McGLONE SIDESTEPS CHAIR

Lucinda N. Madden, Columbus attorney, was elected to a one-year term as chairman of the Columbus film review board.

Ed McGlone, sole film industry members of the review board, declined to accept a nomination for the chairmanship.

'Sword' In the Bank

Denver, Jan. 21.

"Sword in the Stone," Disney's color cartoon feature which opened at the Denver Theatre here on Christmas Day, topped records for that house, according to Marvin Goldfarb, Buena Vista district manager.

The 31,800 first week gross exceeded the previous top gross of $31,100 set by the 2,432 seater on another Disney product, "101 Dalmations," according to Goldfarb.

Second week of "Stone" was reported as $22,000 which gives promise of a very healthy and extensive run.

VIET-NAM IS HOT AND ALLIED ARTISTS
HAS IT!
A FIGHTING U.S. MARINE IN THE . . .
TIME BOMB OF THE WORLD!
The FIRST searing story of the VIET-NAM WAR!
actually filmed under gun-fire!
a YANK in VIET-NAM
. . . where the next bullet may start World War III
Starring MARSHALL THOMPSON ENRIQUE MAGALONA Introducing KIEU CHINH An ALLIED ARTISTS Release
Screenplay by JANE WARDELL and JACK LEWIS • Produced by WRAY DAVIS • Directed by MARSHALL THOMPSON
LOOK
WHAT PRESIDENT JOHNSON FACES IN VIETNAM
Vietnam Attack on Reds

Insider Stock Buys & Sells

Oct. 11 - Nov. 10

Washington, Jan. 14.

Insiders' dealings in show business stock were light in the Oct. 11-Nov. 10 period, as reported by Securities & Exchange Commission.

CBS—William S. Paley sold 4,100 personal shares in CBS but picked up 890 in trust shares. He personally holds 717,380 plus 144,383 through a holding company and another 3,810 in trusts.

Columbia Pictures Corp.—Abraham Schneider sold 1,088 leaving him 63,931.

Desilu Productions—Edwin Holly disposed of 1,700 leaving him 1,000.

Loew's Theatres Inc.—Herbert Hofman picked up 100 boosting holdings to 2,400 plus 707 held in trust.

MCA Inc.—Continued buying into Decca Records Inc, with 4,765 shares purchased this round. MCA's total is now 1,382,812.

Radio Corp. of America—Walter Bain bought 1,248 for total 4,227. Exercising options were John Cannon for 624 uping total to 1,883; Howard Letts for 432 boosting holdings to 2,648; Delbert Mills, his first 2,000 and Theodore Smith for 3,118 for total 11,732. Ernest Gorin sold 215 leaving him 2,554 and Frank Sleeter let go of 1,000 with 2,823 remaining.

Reeves Broadcasting — Morris Schechter bought 500 for 800 total.

Stanley Warner Corp. — David Fogelson purchased 500 for total 1,000. Picking up the same amount and having the same total was Stewart McDonald.

Storer Broadcasting Co.—Harry Lipson picked up 1,000 upping total to 2,000.

Taft Broadcasting Co.—Donald Chapin and Roger Read exercised options on 1,157. Chapin's total is 1,914 and Read's is 1,510. Charles P. Taft disposed of 100 leaving him 16,054.

Walt Disney Prods.—Joseph Fowler sold 300, picked up option on 446 for total 780.

Warner Bros. Pictures—Herman Starr sold 900 with 3,000 remaining. Charles Allen Jr. and Allen & Co. disposed of 20,000 with 80,000 remaining.

Nov. 11 - Dec. 10

Washington, Jan. 21.

Dealings in film stocks highlighted insider transactions for Nov. 11-Dec. 10 round. Securities & Exchange Commission also reported MCA Inc. continued buying capital holdings in Decca Records Inc. This round MCA purchased 7,763 capital shares boosting total to 1,390,575. Transactions reported (common unless otherwise noted) were:

Allied Artists—Roger Hurlock in a private purchase picked up 400 upping total to 40,700.

American Broadcasting—Paramount Theatres—Edward Hyman exercised option on 663 raising total holdings to 6,787.

Columbia Broadcasting System—Eight officers took options and Board Chairman William S. Paley sold 6,600. His personal total is 732,103 plus 148,714 through a holding company and another 3,923 he holds as a trustee. Exercising options were (new totals in parenthesis): Peter Abel 453 (782), Julius Brauner 2,386 (2,590), Ralph Briscoe 349 (433), R.A. Forsling 1,054 (1,085), Peter Goldmark 4,276 (4,419), Lewis Gordon 2,858 (5,123), Walter Rozett 1,021 (1,051) and Geraldine B. Zorbaugh 639 (658).

Also purchasing 127 for new total of 19,779 was J.A.W. Inglehart.

Movielab Inc.—Saul Jaffe picked up 400 for total 228,890.

Paramount Pictures—Jacob Karp took option on his first 3,000.

Screen Gems Inc.—Alfred Hart disposed of 900 held through foundations. His personal total is 901 plus 100 remaining from foundation shares.

Storer Broadcasting Co.—George Haggarty sold 3,600 leaving him 1,000.

Taft Broadcasting Co.—Charles P. Taft dropped 100 with 15,954 remaining.

Trans Lux Corp.—Harry Brandt picked up 900 upping his personal holdings to 129,250. Through corporations he purchased 2,300 raising that total to 19,368. Through foundations he bought 300 and sold 1,900 leaving him 50,727 in that slot. Through his wife, Brandt holds another 22,765 shares.

Twentieth Century-Fox—Francis S. Levien disposed of 10,000 leaving him 17,000.

Warner Bros.—Charles Allen Jr., through Allen & Co. sold 10,000 leaving him 70,000. Stephen Trilling purchased 1,900 for total 22,100.

So What's New In Weeki Wachee?

Continued from page 4

not make it as scheduled because of a snowstorm which was not pre-aranged. The Texans just couldn't get off the ground, no herons or egrets they.

WB nonetheless collected a covey of about 250 in all, and all to the good. The rain fell with almost masterful consistency, and this of course is a blessing to anyone who dislikes dry weather. TV's blurb impresario, who invites northerners to "come on down," might ought to be spoken to privately.

The film, a John Rose production, was actually shown underwater. A screen was engineered in the Weeki Wachee spring for the audience housed in a submerged theatre constructed for a presentation of prettily stacked girls who go by the name of mermaids. A visitor from Manhattan was heard to describe the young things as "picturesque."

The projection was surprisingly good, winding water and all, and indeed superior to the screen quality sometimes available in Jackson Heights. No kidding, the onlookers looked through a vast amount of water and could see the picture with unimpaired quality—or almost. More amusing than disconcerting was the appearance of fish in their natural Weeki Wachee habitat swimming around in front of the screen. The John Rose film is done underwater in many scenes and three fish in living color might have appeared to blend in except that they were terribly much off cue.

Junketeers included, along with Rose, director Arthur Lubin, WB ad-pub v.p. Richard Lederer, players Don Knotts, Carole Cook, Jack Weston and Andrew Duggan, author Theodore Pratt and musicmen Sammy Fain and Harold Adamson.

Also on hand was a greyhound canine who, like everyone else, was forced to endure a stage wait when a bus taking the visitors from Crystal River to Weeki Wachee broke down. To repeat, the dog was a greyhound, and figures in transportation promotion.

While weather conditions were short of ideal, the fact remains that the WB masterminds handled the "dive-in" exposure of a provocative picture with a strong amount of on-the-ballness. Cost to the film company was about $75,000 and for this they received a vast amount of space in key dailies around the country and tapes galore via local radio and television stations. This is good kind of showmanship buying, if undertaken with the right kind of savvy.

The guys from press and electronics clearly were impressed with the aforementioned WB savvy, apparently seeming to think it was unusual. The facts of life are that picture company personnel are called to be so on the beam—and they just were delivering.

Alden Corp's Treasurer

Bert K. Bergenfield, certified public accountant who has been doing liaison work for Glen Alden Corp., mostly with the coal company division, has been appointed treasurer for the company.

Derek Draycott, who has been associated with Glen Alden and its subsidiaries for the last eight years, has been named assistant compiroller.

RALPH NELSON PAIR VIA UNITED ARTISTS

United Artists is working on a deal with director Ralph Nelson whereby he will make two features. One of these will probably be a followup to "Lilies of the Field," the Sidney Poitier starrer which has performed nicely for UA.

Nelson has a few projects of his own which he has been working on for some time now. One of these may be included in the UA deal. The "Lilies" followup is the one UA is most interested in, however, the picture having met with considerable artistic favor and being a modest success for the company.

Nelson, meanwhile, has been working on various directorial assignments since "Lilies," having lensed "Soldier In the Rain" for Allied Artists and presently working on an assignment for 20th-Fox.

Elsewhere on UA's deal horizon is a pact with Italo composer Riz Ortolani. He's been inked to score "The Seventh Dawn" for producer Charles K. Feldman and there is also a pact with UA Records involved in the deal. The Italian, who scored in 1963 with his music for "Mondo Cane" and also composed the backgrounds for "Women of the World," will be giving a concert in Carnegie Hall with his wife, singer Katyna Raniere, Feb. 8.

Amusement Stock Quotations

Week Ended Tues. (21)

N. Y. Stock Exchange

1963-'64 High	1963-'64 Low		*Weekly Vol. in 100s	Weekly High	Weekly Low	Tues. Close	Net Change for wk.
15⅜	11⅞	ABC Vending	142	14	13	13⅜	+ ⅛
38¼	27⅞	Am Br-Par Th	253	30¼	28⅝	29	— ⅝
22¼	14½	Ampex	730	16¾	15⅞	16¼	— ⅜
84¾	42½	CBS	667	79¼	73⅝	78	+5½
18¾	12⅛	Chris Craft	136	13⅝	12⅞	13⅜	— ¼
29½	21⅛	Col Pix	110	21⅞	21⅛	21⅝
46	45⅛	Decca	14	45¾	45¾	45¾	..
46⅜	27¾	Disney	87	39¾	38⅜	39⅜	+ ⅜
122⅜	106⅛	Eastman Kdk	336	116½	114⅝	115⅛	— ⅝
6⅜	5¼	EMI	137	6⅛	5⅞	5⅞	— ⅛
27⅞	20⅝	General Tire	711	22¾	22	22¼	+ ⅛
16½	9⅝	Glen Alden	290	13⅜	12⅞	12⅞	— ½
23¾	15¾	Loew's Thea.	122	18⅜	17¾	18⅛	— ⅛
68¾	48	MCA Inc.	50	59	56⅝	59	+3½
38⅜	15	Metromedia	314	31¾	29	30⅞	— ⅛
37¼	26½	MGM	310	31	29⅛	29⅞	+ ⅞
24¾	20½	Outlet	†460	22⅛	22	22⅛	..
12¾	7⅞	Nat. G'l Corp.	359	9¾	8¾	9⅝	+ ⅝
58¼	35¼	Paramount	99	57⅜	54⅞	54⅞	—2
211½	120½	Polaroid	607	178¼	157	163⅜	—13⅛
111¼	56	RCA	3070	109⅞	105⅛	107¼	—3
10¼	6¾	Republic	38	8⅞	8½	8⅝	— ¼
16¾	14	Rep., pfd.	5	15½	15⅛	15⅛	— ⅛
27⅞	20½	Stanley War.	69	27⅝	26¼	26¼	—1⅜
45⅜	31	Storer	99	39¾	38⅝	39	+ ½
28¼	17⅞	Taft Bdcst.	56	23¾	22⅝	23	— ¾
37	20	20th-Fox	359	24⅜	22⅝	23¼	+ ¾
32	17¾	United Artists	136	20⅞	19½	19¾	—1⅛
16¼	12⅞	Warner Bros.	113	14⅛	13⅝	13¾	— ⅜
84¼	51	Zenith	1047	80½	73⅛	79½	+5

American Stock Exchange

4	2⅛	Allied Artists	25	2⅜	2¼	2¼	..
11¼	5	BalM'nt GAC	65	11⅜	10	11⅜	+1⅛
12¼	6¾	Cam-P'kway	21	7¾	7½	7½	— ¼
24⅞	16⅞	Cap. Cit. Bdc.	169	22½	21¾	21¼	— ⅞
17½	10⅝	Cin'rama Inc.	900	11⅝	10	11⅛	..
9	6½	Desilu Prods.	60	7	6¾	6⅞	— ⅛
9⅞	4¾	Filmways	44	9⅛	8¼	9	+ ⅝
11⅞	8½	Movielab	16	10¼	9¾	9⅞	— ⅛
13⅞	5¾	MPO Vid.	32	11¾	10½	11	+ ¼
3⅝	2⅛	Reeves Bdcst.	60	3	2⅝	2¾	+ ¼
5⅛	2½	Reeves Ind.	85	2⅝	2½	2⅝
17¾	13¼	Rollins Bdcst.	13	15¾	13⅜	14⅜	—1¼
25⅜	16¾	Screen Gems	14	22⅛	20⅝	20⅝	— ⅜
22	8⅝	Technicolor	816	19½	18⅛	19½	+ ½
6¾	4⅛	Teleprompter	22	5	4¾	4¾	— ¼
2¾	⅝	Tele-Indus.	20	⅞	⅞	⅞	+ ⅛
14½	10½	Trans-Lux	20	11½	10	10¾	— ⅞

*Week Ended Mon. (20).

†Actual Volume.

(Courtesy of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc.)

Over-the-Counter Securities

	Bid	Ask
Commonwealth Theatres of Puerto Rico	5¾	6⅞	+ ⅛
Four Star Television	6⅞	7⅝	— ⅛
Gen. Aniline & Film	320	347	..
General Artists Corp.	7¾	8⅛	— ¼
General Drive-in	9⅞	10⅝	— ⅛
Magna Pictures	1½	1⅞	— ⅛
Medallion Pictures	20½	22	+ ½
Pickwick International	4⅝	5⅛	+ ¼
Premier Albums	7¾	8⅝	+ ¾
Rust Craft Greeting Cards	11	12	+ ⅛
Seven Arts Productions	9½	10½	+1⅛
Transcontinent Television	19¾	21
U. A. Theatres	7	8⅜	—1½
Universal Pictures	68	70	..
Walter Reade-Sterling Inc.	2¾	3¼	+ ⅛
Wometco Enterprises	33¼	35½	+ ¼
Wrather Corp.	4⅛	4¾	+ ⅛

(Source: National Assn. of Securities Dealers Inc.)

Manhattan's Fear of Hollywood

Screen Directors of N.Y. 'Favor' Merger But Have To Think a Lot More About It

Proposed merger of the Hollywood-based Directors Guild of America and the New York-based Screen Director International which is in abeyance involves more than disagreement between the two coasts. There was a division additionally within the ranks of the New Yorkers.

A majority of 11-5 of the SDIG board voted in favor of merger but not on the terms presently proposed by the Hollywood unit. The minority also favors merger but it does so on what is charged an "at all costs" premise and accepts the terms as offered by the DGA at present.

These two points of view will be presented to the SDIG membership at a meeting this Saturday (25) in the Henry Hudson Hotel, N.Y., along with the actual propositions as finally existed at the time DGA stopped talking. The majority is led by Jack Glenn, who is also chairman of the SDIG merger negotiating committee, and includes such as Robert Braveman, Peter H. Cooper and Leo Hurwitz. The minority is led by ex-exec secretary George L. George and includes such as prez Don Hershey, ex-prez Willard Van Dyke, v.p. Kingsley and others.

The majority claims that merger as proposed by the DGA has several major points of weakness, primarily in the area of broad representation and the making of constitutional amendments. As far as representation is concerned, it is proposed that there be one board member for each 100 SDIG members. It was agreed that dual card holders, of which the SDIG has 47 and 48 honorable withdrawals would be counted out. DGA also wanted to count out SDIG's non-resident members, who number 58. The result of all this, the majority claims, is that whereas the SDIG's 452 members should be represented with four votes on the merged board, according to the DGA's way, they would get only three.

The minority points out that this situation would only exist for a two-year period of assimilation following merger, or until the DGA 1965 bi-annual convention. It also notes that, in the matter of excluding non-resident members, the DGA proposed an alternate instead of a permanent board member. The minority accepts this proposal.

In the matter of making constitutional amendments, the majority rejects DGA's proposal that 200 membership signatures be necessary to effect such changes. The minority accepts this idea because the SDIG counter proposal was for 150 signatures instead of the 200 and feels that 50 John Hancocks should not be an issue large enough to cripple a merger.

Overriding these issues is the SDIG majority's fear that the guild would be swallowed up by DGA rather than amalgamated with it. The feeling is that DGA is looking for a way to find work for the growing Coast labor surplus and sees it in the growing eastern commercial-industrial market. It also feels that more features wouldn't necessarily go to easterners with the merger beause the name is the thing in features and also fears that the Hollywood "names" would soon begin to dominate eastern commercial filming as well.

Those fearful of merger on present terms are also weary that the alleged DGA system of board domination of membership will be carried forth on the merged body. SDIG, it is claimed, is run by the membership and not the board and would like to see this policy retained. The midwest is also a bone of contention in that DGA wants such members to pay an additional initiation fee starting the third year after merger, in order to direct in the east. The minority supports this plan whereas the majority opposes it.

These and other points, like services of counsel and election of exec secretary, divide the SDIG. Should the membership vote "yes" on Saturday to merger proposals as they presently stand, the matter would then go to referendum for final approval. Should the vote be "no," the majority views it as supporting its position that merger is good but not on present terms. The minority is quick to point out that DGA is finished bargaining and claims that it is these terms or nothing, adding that the opposition doesn't really want merger in the first place. Counter charges are levied that merger is definitely wanted but that it would be a sell-out to have it according to DGA proposals as they stand.

Gasparini New Chief Of New Mexico's Operators

Albuquerque, Jan. 21.

Lou Gasparini, longtime Albuquerque theatreman, has been named president of the New Mexico Theatre Assn. He fills the term of the late Elmo Courtney of Clovis, who died last month.

Gasparini, currently manager of the Fox Winrock Theatre here, has been a vice-president of the NMTA for several years.

Board of the 150-member association also voted to change the site of the 1964 state convention from Santa Fe to the Hilton Hotel in Albuquerque. Annual session will be June 16-17.

Scoreboard On '63 Acad Awards: 18 Pictures in April Derby With United Artists in Fanciest Silks

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

A total of 18 pictures appear taking the major edge in the race for the upcoming 36th Annual Academy Awards, which will be held at Santa Monica Civic Auditorium April 13. This is based upon a poll conducted by VARIETY, which revealed that probable entrants this year are down slightly from the 22 films mentioned as possible competitors at this same time last year.

Breakdown of the list shows United Artists with its hopes on eight films, while Columbia, Metro and Universal each listed two. Warner Bros. and 20th-Fox have one each and Allied Artists and Walt Disney disclose nothing in the feature category.

All figures are from official sources, with the exception of Paramount which indicated hopes are high on two films, but took the position that every picture released by the company is eligible for awards and declined to name specifics.

Eight United Artists hopefuls, of 29 released during the year, are "Tom Jones," "Lilies of the Field," "The Caretakers," "The Ceremony," "The Great Escape," "Irma La Douce," "It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" and "Ladybug, Ladybug." Columbia is up with "The Cardinal" and "The Victors," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with "How the West Was Won" and "The Prize," and Universal for "Captain Newman M.D." and "Charade." Twentieth appears to place its eggs in the "Cleopatra" basket, while Warner Bros. looks to "America, America." Total releases for the year, were Allied Artists, 9; Columbia, 18; MGM, 35; Paramount, 16; Disney, 7; 20th-Fox, 11; Universal, 15, and Warner Bros., 14. Two pix that seem most likely at Paramount are "Hud" and "Love With A Prooer Stranger."

In the various top level categories, the following were estimated by studio reps:

Best Actor

Tom Tryon, "The Cardinal"; George Peppard and George Hamilton, "The Victors"; Paul Newman, "The Prize"; Rex Harrison, Richard Burton, "Cleopatra"; Albert Finney, "Tom Jones"; Sidney Poitier, "Lilies of the Field"; Steve McQueen, Richard Attenborough, "The Great Escape"; Jack Lemmon, "Irma La Douce"; Gregory Peck, "Captain Newman M.D."; Cary Grant, "Charade"; Marlon Brando, "The Ugly American"; Stathis Giallelis, "America, America."

Best Actress

Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, "Cardinal"; Leslie Caron, "L-Shaped Room"; Debbie Reynolds, "How the West Was Won"; Elizabeth Taylor, "Cleopatra"; Polly Bergen, "The Caretakers"; Shirley MacLaine, "Irma La Douce"; Geraldine Page, "Toys in the Attic"; Susannah York, "Tom Jones"; Doris Day, "The Thrill of It All"; Audrey Hepburn, "Charade."

Best Supporting Actor

John Huston, "Cardinal"; Eli Wallach, "Victors"; Nick Adams, "Twilight of Honor"; Ronny Howard, "Courtship of Eddie's Father"; Donald Pleasance, "The Great Escape"; Hugh Griffith, "Tom Jones"; Lou Jacobi, "Irma La Douce"; Jonathan Winters, "Mad World"; Bobby Darin, Eddie Albert, "Captain Newman"; Edward Andrews, "Thrill of It All."

Best Supporting Actress:

Margaret Rutherford, Maggie Smith, "The V.I.P.s"; Janis Paige, "Caretakers"; Joyce Redman, Joan Greenwood, Dame Edith Evans, "Tom Jones"; Lilia Skala, "Lilies of the Field"; Margaret Rutherford, "Mouse on the Moon."

Best Director:

Otto Preminger, "Cardinal"; Carl Foreman, "Victors"; Bryan Forbes, "L-Shaped Room"; Henry Hathaway, John Ford, George Marshall, "How the West Was Won"; Joseph L. Mankiewicz, "Cleopatra"; Tony Richardson, "Tom Jones"; Ralph Nelson, "Lilies"; John Sturges, "Great Escape"; Billy Wilder, "Irma La Douce"; Stanley Kramer, "Mad World"; Frank Perry, "Ladybug"; Laurence Harvey, "Ceremony"; David Miller, "Captain Newman"; Stanley Donen, "Charade"; Elia Kazan, "America America."

Best Screenplay (adaptation):

Carl Foreman, "Victors"; Robert Dozier, "Cardinal"; Bryan Forbes, "L-Shaped Room"; Ernest Lehman, "The Prize"; James R. Webb, "How West Was Won"; Abby Mann, "Condemned of Altona"; Richard Breen, Phoebe and Henry Ephron, "Captain Newman"; Stewart Stern, "Ugly American"; John Osborne, "Tom Jones"; James Poe, "Lilies of the Field," Eleanor Perry, "Ladybug," James Clavell and W. R. Burnett, "The Great Escape," and Billy Wilder and I. A. L. Diamond, "Irma La Douce."

Best Screenplay (original):

Joseph L. Mankiewicz, Ranald MacDougall, Sidney Buchman, "Cleopatra"; William and Tania Rose, "Mad World"; Peter Stone, "Charade"; Carl Reiner, "The Thrill of It All"; Elia Kazan, "America America."

Best Art Direction (Black & White):

"The Victors," Geoffrey Drake; "The Stripper," Travilla; "The Caretakers," Rolland M. Brooks and Claudio Guzman; "Five Miles to Midnight," Alexander Trauner; "America America," Gene Callahan.

Best Art Direction (Color):

"55 Days at Peking," Ventero Colasanti, John Moore; "Cardinal," Lyle Wheeler; "The Wheeler Dealers," George W. Davis and Addison Hehr; "The Prize," Davis and Urie McCleary; "Courtship of Eddie's Father," Davis and McCleary; "How West Was Won," Davis, William Ferrari and Addison Hehr; "Cleopatra," Jack Martin Smith, Hillard Brown, Herman Blumenthal, Elven Webb, Maurice Polling, Boris Juraga, with production design by John DeCuir; "Tom Jones," Jocelyn Herbert, Ralph Brinton, Ted Marshall; "Dr. No," Syd Cain; "Great Escape," Fernando Carrere; "Irma La Douce," Alexander Trauner; "I Could Go on Singing," Wilfred Shingleton; "Mad World," Rudy Sternad; "Kings of the Sun," Alfred Ybarra; "Love Is a Ball," Jean D'Eaubonne and Fernand Bernardi; "McLintock," Hal Pereira and Eddie Inazu; "Stolen Hours," Wilfred Shingleton; "Thrill of it All," Alexander Golitzen and Robert Boyle; "PT 109," Leo Kuter; "Four For Texas," William Glasgow.

Best Cinematography (Black & White):

"Victors," Christopher Challis; "The Haunting," Davis Boulton; "Lilies," Ernest Haller; "Ladybug," Leonard Hirschfield; "Toys in the Attic," Joseph F. Biroc; "Caretakers," Lucien Ballard; "Five Miles to Midnight," Henri Alekan; "America America," Haskell Wexler; "Wall of Noise," Lucien Ballard.

Best Cinematography (Color):

"Peking," Jack Hildyard; "Cardinal," Leon Shamroy; "How West Was Won," William H. Daniels, Joseph Lashelle, Milton Krasne, Charles Lang Jr.; "Flipper," Lamarr Boren, James Bran; "Cleopatra," Leon Shamroy; "Tom Jones," Walter Lassally; "Dr. No," Ted Moore; "Great Escape," Daniel Fapp; "I Could Go on Singing," Arthur Ibbetson; "Irma La Douce," Joseph LaShelle; "Mad World," Ernest Laszlo; "Kings of the Sun," Joseph Macdonald; "Love Is a Ball,' Edmond Sechan; McLintock," William H. Clothier; "Stolen Hours," Harry Waxman; "Charade," Charles Lang Jr.; "PT 109," Robert Surtees; Rampage," Harold Lipstein; "Spencer's Mountain," Charles Lawton; "Critic's Choice," Charles Lang.

Best Costumes (Black & White):

"The Stripper," Travilla; "Five Miles to Midnight," Guy Laroche; "Toys in the Attic," Bill Thomas; "America," Anna Hill Johnstone.

Best Costumes (Color)

"Cardinal," Donald Brooks; "Courtship of Eddie's Father," Helen Rose; "How West Was Won," Walter Plunkett; "Cleopatra," Irene Sharaff, Vittoria Nino Novarese, Renie; "Tom Jones," Jocelyn Herbert; "Irma La Douce," Orry-Kelly; "Love Is A Ball," Frank L. Thompson; "Kings of the Sun," Norma Koch; "Stolen Hours," Beatrice Dawson; "Thrill of It All," Jean Louis; "Charade," Givenchy; "Critic's Choice," Edith Head; "Four For Texas," Norma Koch.

Best Editing

"Peking," Robert Lawrence; "Cardinal," Louis R. Loeffler; "Victors," Alan Osbiston; "L-Shaped Room," Anthony Harvey; "How West Was Won," Harold F. Kress; "Cleopatra," Dorothy Spencer; "Tom Jones," Tony Gibbs; "Lilies," John McCafferty; "Great Escape," Ferris Webster; "Irma La Douce," Daniel Mandell; "Mad World," Fred Knudtson; "Caretakers," William B. Murphy; "Dr. No," Peter Hunt; "Ladybug," Armand Lebowitz; "Toys in the Attic," Stuart Gilmore; "Captain Newman," Alma Macrorie; "Thrill of It All," Milton Carruth; "PT 109," Folmar Blangstead; "America, America," Dede Allen.

Best Music Scoring (Drama or Comedy)

"Cardinal," Jerome Moross; "Victors," Sol Kaplan; "How West Was Won," Alfred Newman; "V.I.P.s," Miklos Rozsa; "Prize," Jerry Goldsmith; "Cleopatra," Alex North; "Tom Jones," John Addison; "Great Escape," Elmer Bernstein; "Irma La Douce," Andre Previn; "Mad World," Ernest Gold; "Lilies," Jerry Goldsmith; "Caretakers," Elmer Bernstein; "Dr. No," Monte Norman; "Love Is a Ball," Michel Legrand; "Toys in the Attic," George Duning; "McLintock!," Frank Devol; "Johnny Cool," Billy May; "Charade," Henry Mancini; "Spencer's Mountain," Max Steiner; "Peking," Dimitri Tiomkin; "Of Love and Desire," Ronald Stein.

Best Song

"So Little Time," from "Peking," Tiomkin and Paul Francis Webster; "Bye Bye Birdie," Charles Strouse and Lee Adams; "Flipper," By Dunham and Henry Vars; "How West Was Won," Alfred Newman and Ken Darby; "Wheeler Dealers," Randy Sparks; "Move Over Darling," Joe Lubin, Hal Kanter, Terry Melcher; "I Could Go On Singing," Harold Arlen and E. Y. Harburg; "Mad World," Ernest Gold and Mack David; "McLintock's Theme," Frank Devol and By Dunham; "Underneath the Mango Tree," from "Dr. No," Monte Norman; "Charade," Henry Mancini, Johnny Mercer; "America America," Manos Hadjidakis.

Best Sound

"Cardinal," Harold Lewis; "Victors," Buster Ambler; "Birdie," James Z. Flaster; "How West Was Won," Franklin Milton; "Cleopatra," Fred Hynes and James Corcoran; "Tom Jones," Peter Handford; "Great Escape," Harold Lewis; "Irma La Douce," Robert Martin; "Mad World," John Kean; "Lilies," C. W. Faulker; "Kings of the Sun," Bert Hallberg; "Ladybug," Stanley Kasper; "McLintock!," Jack Solomon; "The Birds," Waldon O. Watson and William Russell.

Best Special Effects

"Victors," Cliff Richardson and Wally Veever; "Captain Sindbad," Tom Howard; "How West Was Won," A. Arnold Gillespie, Robert R. Hoag; "Cleopatra," L. B. Abbott, Emil Kosa Jr.; "Great Escape," Paul Pollard; "Dr. No," Frank George; "Mad World," Danny Lee; "Kings of the Sun," Roscoe Cline; "Birds," Lawrence A. Hampton; "PT 109."

While no official listings have been shown for Paramount, there have been numerous reports voiced in the past indicating nomination possibilities for Paul Newman, as best actor for "Hud" and Patricia Neal, best actress for "Hud." Miss Neal won New York Drama Critic's Award for the picture, which also won the screenplay award for writers Irving Ravetch and Harriet Frank Jr. Considerable attention also has been aimed toward director Martin Ritt.

Coursey Heads Tent 20

Memphis, Jan. 21.

Dan Coursey, 20th Fox branch manager, was elected chief barker of Memphis Variety Club, Tent No. 20 in annual election. He succeeds Richard Lightman, veepee of the Malco theatre chain.

The balance of the new 1964 slate includes: Bailey Prichard, first assistant chief barker; Fordyce Kaiser, second assistant; Watson Davis, Malco exploitation chief now doing a terrif weekly stint as emcee of tv "chiller" on WHBQ-TV, property master and George Overton, dough boy. The Memphis Tent's major charity project is maintenance of the Variety Children's Health Institute here.

New York Sound Track

Sophia Loren gifted Joe Levine with a one-of-a-kind Rolls Royce convertible as a belated Christmas present recently. Among her upcoming pix will be "Imperial Woman" for Levine and Paramount . . . that newspaperwoman's ball which finally was held recently at the N. Y. Hilton had quite a history: it was originally to be held at the Astor late in November but assassination postponed it, then it was rescheduled for the Astor again but a fire in the ballroom postponed it again, then it was to be in the Plaza Hotel ballroom but that didn't work out and it finally ended up at the Hilton.

UA decided to pull a switch and play a gag on its pressagents around the country last week as part of a promotion for "From Russia, With Love" by sending them to various newspaper offices handcuffed to attache cases which contained material on the film. The entertainment editors had the keys to the cuffs but UA had pulled a fast one by giving the scribes the wrong ones, meaning that the cuffs would have to be cut off the pressagents, thereby getting news space. In most cases, however, the scribes got so involved helping the touters out of their jams, they neglected to write about the incident.

The AIP ad boys obviously had fun with their "Comedy of Terrors" campaign. Sample ad lines: (re Peter Lorre) "a fiend in need is a fiend indeed", and (re Joyce Jamieson) "a pretty ghoul is like a melody" . . . Nat Mirsky, assistant traffic manager for Columbia International, got his gold watch last week for his 25 years with the company . . . Tony Curtis has acquired film rights to "Summer Music," a comedy based on a John Collier short story, with script by Richard and Evelyn Condon.

Jean Goldwurm, prez of Times Film, and Mrs. Goldwurm leave tomorrow (Thurs.) for a six-to seven-week stay on the Continent . . . Paul Sandars Jr., associated with Titra Sound & Dubbing Co. here for the last 17 years, has been named veep. He also retains his post as general manager of the Titra labs . . . East coasters have been invited to a demonstration of the new big screen process, Dimension-150, at the Skouras Syosset Theatre Jan. 30 . . . Sholom Secunda, composer ("Bei Mir Bist du Schoen") and conductor, has been appointed consultant on liturgical music by 20th-Fox Records. His son Gene, meanwhile, is national mag contact in the h.o. of the parent picture company.

The Rialto on Times Square, longtime home of nudies and various types of sex-exploitation pix, may not be going as "legit" as first press handouts indicated, with its upcoming booking of the new Ingmar Bergman pic, "The Silence," day-date with the Trans-Lux East. The pic, though undoubtedly a prestige item, is figured (from overseas reviews) to contain enough erotica to keep Rialto regulars awake. Janus Films reports, incidentally, that it had no problems in getting the film past the U.S. Customs.

It will be "Razz Goldstein Week" Feb. 22-29 at Warners, this winding up the company's sales drive with a salute to the sales boss . . . "Move Over, Darling," 20th-Fox, set for a Royal Film Performance Feb. 24 at London's Odeon Leicester Square . . . Adolph Zukor on annual safari to Hollywood . . . Nicolas Reisini trekked to Europe . . . Sig Schwartz, manager of Loew's Paradise Theatre, the Bronx, joined MGM International as administrator of theatres, replacing Harold Goldgraben, who became booker . . . MGM picked up global distribution rights (except Italy) to the Italian-made "Hercules, Samson & Ulysses" . . . Col's "Lawrence of Arabia" set to open today (Wed.) in 62 metropolitan N.Y. houses, including Loew's.

Committee of the Motion Picture Industry will hold its 14th annual corporate communion breakfast Feb. 9 with members attending mass as St. Patrick's Cathedral, thence to Waldorf-Astoria . . . Dell Books is publishing a paperback novelization of Par's "Paris When It Sizzles," with a cover tieing in with the pic and ad promotions in its fan mags . . . "Kitten With a Whip" now rolling at Universal, bringing the number of pix in action there to four . . . UA setting up a special booth as part of its participation in the Texas Drive-In Theatre Owners Convention at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, Dallas, Feb. 11-13.

Federico Fellini cabled Joe Levine from Rome asking him to accept his N. Y. Film Critics award for "8-1/2," giving praise to the Gotham scribes for their work on behalf of foreign films throughout the years. Fellini's next, incidentally, an untitled project now being written, will be distributed by Levine's Embassy Pictures, which handled "8-1/2."

Harold Salemson back at his Embassy pub desk after a prolonged illness . . . Arlene Herson has departed her post as secretary to UA v.p. David Picker planning to do only parttime work, having recently gotten married . . . the Beatles are now skedded to arrive in New York Feb. 7 . . . with all the phenom success of "Tom Jones" at Cinema I, N. Y., UA is not issuing any passes . . . Don Murray planed to Puerto Rico for a short vacation over the weekend, to be followed by a month of promotional activities for "One Man's Way" starting early in February.

Jack L. Warner presented with W. Germany's Cross of Merit, First Class in ceremonies at the Burbank studios participated in by Hans Rolf Kiderlen, German Consul General of Los Angeles . . . Signet Books will publish a film edition of Alberto Moravia's "The Empty Canvas," keyed to the Embassy Pictures release, skedded for February issue . . . UA's "Pink Panther" has opened big in London with a first-week gross of $28,512 at the Odeon Theatre . . . mail orders are being accepted for "Becket" which world preems March 11 at Loew's State Theatre, N. Y.

Al Steen succeeds Herman Silver as pubrel director for TOA, Silver having joined the Landau Co. . . . joining the "Satan Bug" cast are John Bull, Simon Oakland, John Larkin and Edward Asner . . . Look mag features a spread on Peter Sellers in its current edition . . . Embassy Pictures has won a Certificate of Merit from the Printing Industries of Metropolitan N. Y. for its Channel Selector, a merchandising brochure prepared for its array of pix for tv . . . Charles Crichton to direct "The Major and the Private," which Hal Mason will produce for Embassy.

Leslie Winik, International Telemeter prez, in London conferring with British Telemeter Home Viewing execs . . . Embassy's "Ghost at Noon" Brigitte Bardot-Jack Palance starrer has been retitled "Contempt" for showing in the U.S., the handle under which it is playing in France . . . Clayton Pantages, Cinema Distributors of America general sales manager, back in Gotham after Mobile huddles with prez M. A. Ripps . . . "Seven Days In May" lauded in the Feb issue of Seventeen mag . . . Laurence Rosenthal's soundtrack music for "Becket" will be released by Decca Records.

Patricia Neal in New York over the weekend to accept her N. Y. Film Critics best actress award for her performance in "Hud" . . . Steve Landers into "Where Love Has Gone" . . . Paramount and the New American Library have set a book promotion for "Becket," in which the latter will issue a special paperback of the Jean Anouilh play, complete with a section of stills from the pic . . . Embassy Pictures has acquired the U.S.-Canada distrib rights to the Italo comedy-drama "Crazy Desire," Ugo Tognazzi-Catherine Spaak starrer.

George Englund back at Metro for final editing of "Signpost to Murder" following a two-week vacation in Mexico . . . tenor John Guarniere to sing "Santa Lucia" in a fantasy sequence of AA's "Naked Kiss" . . . UA and Fawcett Publications have worked out a cross promotion to plug the various tomes of Norman Vincent Peale and UA's biofilm "One Man's Way" . . . "Irma La Douce" is being teamed with "Some Like It Hot" for a special Billy Wilder program at the Fox Theatre, Bklyn., starting next Wednesday (29) . . . U's "Captain Newman, M.D." awarded Parent's Magazine's "special merit award."

Harry Saltzman, coproducer with Albert R. Broccoli of the James Bond series for UA, in Gotham huddling with the company on release plans for "From Russia, With Love" . . . Cooper Theatre, Omaha, the tenth house set for Par's roadshowing of "Becket" . . . "Hud" playing a special return engagement at Loew's Tower East, N. Y. . . . "The

(Continued on page 26)

A Picture Like You've Never Seen Before...

...and grosses in its two pre-release engagements like you've rarely seen either!

from VARIETY, Jan. 15, 1964

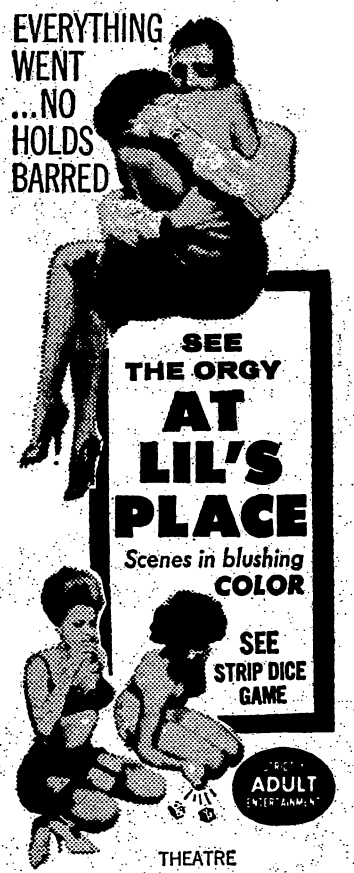
Boston, Jan. 14.
"Orgy at Lil's Place," which opened at the State during the holidays broke house records for two weeks, and may hit a new third round high.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 14.
Plaza (TL) (278; $1.25-$1.80)—"At Lil's Place" (Indie) (3d wk). Wow $7,000. Last week, $7,900.

State (Trans-Lux) (730; $1-$1.50)—"Orgy at Lil's Place" (Mishkin) (3d wk). Torrid $12,000, breaking record. Last week $14,000, also record.

No Other Engagements
Accepted Until Picture
Goes Into General Release March 28, 1964

The film can be advertised with emphasis on either "The Orgy" or emphasis on "At Lil's Place"



Full and exciting line of accessories including trailer in black and white and color, full color one sheets, ad-mats, pressbooks and a large selection of stills.

Despite the bold and intimate scenes, because of the good taste of its presentation, "The Orgy at Lil's Place" has been passed without any cuts whatsoever by the Censor Board of the State of New York.

For More Information Get In Touch with

WILLIAM MISHKIN
1564 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY 36
JUdson 2-2928

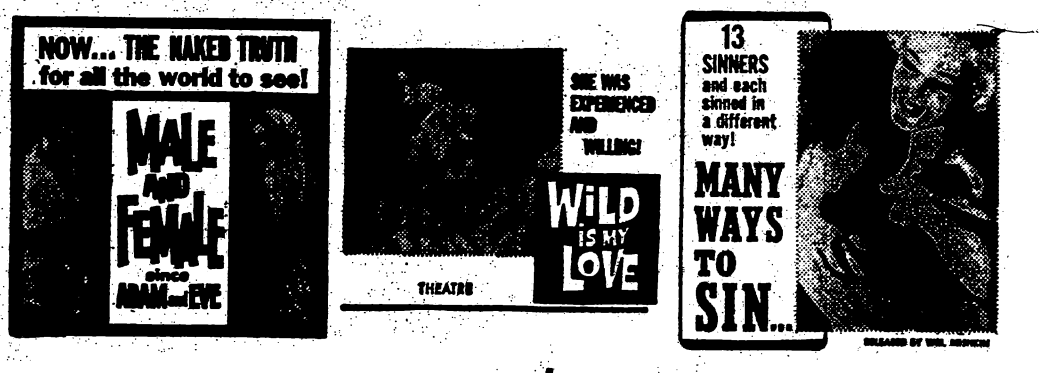
Special Screenings

Special screenings in New York the week of February 3rd for exhibitors, sub distributors and people interested in foreign markets.

If you wish to attend write, phone or wire for invitation.

WILLIAM MISHKIN
WORLD DISTRIBUTOR
1564 BROADWAY
NEW YORK 36, N. Y.
JUdson 2-2928

AMONG OTHER MISHKIN BOX OFFICE HITS
NOW IN RELEASE



and many, many more

Press Agents Must Create Own Color When Tout-Touring Sans Players

The trend toward use by film companies of advance men for pix, and not just the roadshow variety, may be gaining wider acceptance at least there's an upsurge. Touters replace stars and directors, often unavailable for or unwilling to travel. Some advance "specialists" are becoming stars of a sort themselves.

One company which does a lot of this type of thing is United Artists. It dates back to Mori Krushen's long reign. In recent times, the company has sent out pub Jim Denton, sans stars or other "name" assistants, to trumpet the virtues of "Taras Bulba" and, more recently, "Kings of the Sun" which is now playing off. The company is also continuing the practice of sending out performers as well, as it did with Chill Wills for "McLintock" and is currently doing in Europe with George Chakiris for "Kings."

One of UA's potentially hot ones of 1964 is "From Russia With Love," calculated from b.o. performance in England and the success of the first James Bond picture, "Dr. No." For "Russia," UA is sending Tom Carlile, unit touter on the Bond pix, on an extensive road trip. Not going are topliner Sean Connery or other players. The tour begins Jan. 12 and will run for about a month, covering 17 cities.

Billed as "possibly the world's tallest press agent" (he's six feet, six inches tall), Carlile will be visiting newspaper editors, radio-tv commentators and exhibitors during the cross-country swing. In addition to his own patter about the film, he'll be carrying an "intrigue and excitement" bally kit full of all kinds of promotional goodies, including photos, a threatical trailer, special filmed supplements, recordings of the film's score, advance stories, photo layouts and other accessories.

Although the idea isn't a new one, it is one which is gaining in popularity with companies like UA. Aside from the effectiveness it has demonstrated on behalf of the pix it has plugged, the plan is making local celebs out of the traveling pubs. Some feel that this is a potentially tricky business though, giving these pubs too much limelight. The star system is tough enough as it is, is the tongue in cheek comment, without involving publicity men as well.

PRESS AGENT HIMSELF AS VISITING 'STAR'

Atlanta, Jan. 21.

Tom Carlile, traveling touter for United Artists-Eon Productions Ltd., now based in London, spent Friday (17) in Atlanta after having made Toronto, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Pittsburgh plugging Eon's "To Russia With Love."

Carlile worked with Leonard Allen, UA's Atlanta rep.

First appointment was to appear on WSB-TV's morning show, Today in Georgia, followed by a pair of interview sessions on WAII-TV, with spieler Freddy Miller and film show host Snooky Lanson.

Then came a taping session on WSB Radio's Night Beat with Tommy Thompson, followed by an appearance on same station's Key Word Game, a portion of Mill's Family Fare afternoon program.

Hustling over to WGST, Georgia Tech's radio station, Carlile was interviewed by Bill Conover.

After that came sessions with motion picture editors and critics of Atlanta Journal and Constitution.

And topping off his day, Carlile met with a group of Atlanta and out-of-town exhibitors in Columbia Pictures' screening room, talked to them about the film and the campaign and showed them trailers prepared for "To Russia."

Aubrey Schenck & Edwin Zabel, prepping "Robinson Crusoe on Mars" for Paramount release, talking expansion of deal with studio, under discussion both a film and teleseries based on Frank Buck's adventure tome, "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

270 In Producers Guild

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Screen Producers Guild has hit a record high in membership, according to prexy Lawrence A. Weingarten, figure now reaching to 270 with additional of three new members.

Trio includes Lawrence Turman, Leonard J. Ackerman and James B. Dogerty.

CHART ALLIED ARTISTS OPERATING POLICIES

Allied Artists exec board met in Hollywood last week to discuss the company's business prospects for the new year and to chart operating policy for the term. Session has been described as being rather routine, with no startling developments forthcoming.

Participating in the meeting were board chairman Claude Giroux, president Steve Broidy, exec v.p. George Burrows, veep Roger Hurlock and board member Sherrill Corwin. The session takes on significance primarily because AA is quitely undergoing a transitional period in its thinking presently, moving toward a policy of dealing more on the outside for properties, pix and filmmakers.

This "UA approach," as it has been termed, is known to be the theory of operation favored by Giroux and speculation has existed for some time that the chairman would be taking a more active part in Allied's activities. In light of this, exec committee meetings of the kind held last week take on significance beyond the routine.

Exactly what was actually accomplished at the session along these or other lines isn't revealed but it is known that Allied has already begun to deal on the outside for some properties. Two such completed indie pix are known to have been picked up, although details are presently unavailable. More along these lines is expected as AA attempts to chart a new course for itself along more open and aggressive lines.

Horne of AIP Building Overseas Sales Staff

Dave Horne, American International Pictures' new foreign distribution veep, plans to spend between six to 10 months a year travelling around his overseas territory, he told the trade press in New York yesterday (Tues.).

Noting that AIP does not now have any overseas offices, Horne said that within the near future he expects to appoint an AIP rep in Rio de Janeiro who will cover all of Latin America. Similarly, he expects to name a rep in Singapore or Hong Kong to cover Asia, and three or four other men in key spots to give AIP coverage on almost every continent. Company already is repped by Bill Levy in London.

Horne reported AIP is now closing a deal for the acquisition of 17 foreign pix, some of which will be released worldwide by AIP and some in just overseas markets.

Exec plans to leave New York on his first overseas hop within the month. He'll be going to Far East where, he says, AIP product is not yet fully exploited.

Texas Ozoners Rallying

Dallas, Jan. 21.

Texas Drive-Theatre Owners Assn. has set its 12th annual convention here Feb. 11-13, again at the Statler-Hilton Hotel. President Albert H. Reynolds of Dallas, zone manager of Stanley Warner Texas Inc., expects attendance of over 500 from Texas and neighboring states.

Keynote speaker at opening business session Feb. 12 will be James H. Nicholson, president of American International Pictures. Other speakers at the conclave will be John Rowley of Dallas, head of Rowley United Theatres and prexy of Theatre Owners of America, and Edward S. Redstone of Boston, prexy of the National Assn. of Concessionaires.

AS TEXAS RATED FILMS

Volunteer Group Put 257 Under Scrutiny In 1963

Ft. Worth, Jan. 21.

A total of 257 feature films were rated by the Texas Motion Picture Board of Review in 1963. Results of such ratings are published twice monthly and distributed by the Texas Council of Motion Picture Organizations to newspapers, magazines, church groups, civic groups and other interested parties.

Largest recommended audience category screened was that rated for General Audience with 121 pix or 47% of the total number of films released for commercial showing in Texas. Next largest category was the Adult-Mature Young People slot, into which 92 pix or 36% of the total fell. The least number of films fell into the "recommended for adults" category, where 44 or 17% qualified. Within this last category, 20 features bore the MPAA code seal while the other 24 did not have Code approval.

The review board is composed of a voluntary group of 12 women repping various church denominations.

Crucial Tests Of Memphis Censors

Memphis, Jan. 21.

Memphis film censorship, long celebrated, faces two court test cases. These just might "break the censors back."

The first case is centered around the French made film—"I Spit on Your Grave" and is skedded for hearing Jan. 27. "Spit" was screened by the censor board on Dec. 1962 and opened on Christmas Day of the same year at the Studio Theatre. Less than three days later, the Memphis Vice-Squad shuttered the theatre, arrested manager Bill Kendall and literally took the negative to police headquarters. Kendall was indicted pronto and has been freed since under $500 bail waiting the action which starts next week.

U. S. District Judge Bailey Brown (long time supporter of the late Estes Kefauver) is expected to sit in on the other case involving "Women of the World," which was cut and later banned by the Memphis censor board last July.

Memphis barrister George Grider and Michael Cody, repping Embassy films of "Women" have already filed suits against the Censor board, the City Commission and Police Chief Jim MacDonald. The Embassy legalites are asking a "declaratory judgment" giving them the Right (their client) to show the film in Memphis and at the same seek to show that the Memphis censorship laws declared "unconstitutional." Grider is a member of the Civil Rights Liberties Union.

Lewis Partly Involved On Judge's View a Producer Talks Plot at Own Risk

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Jerry Lewis was granted summary judgment on charge of plagiarism brought by Lor-Ann Land in $1,500,000 damage suit, but was denied summary judgment on breach of contract charge, in ruling handed down yesterday (Mon) by Superior Judge Macklin Fleming, who had taken case under submission. Comedian thus faces trial on Miss Land's allegation that comedian failed to compensate her for material submitted at his request.

In written opinion, Judge Fleming noted a relationship between Lewis and Land, described as a secretary, had started in Blum's soda fountain, where, he said, Land spoke to Lewis after he sat down beside her and she told him she'd written a script with him in mind and asked him to consider it.

"In this state," Fleming wrote, "producers who discuss plots with would-be script writers, even at cocktail parties or soda fountains, do so at their peril. The contractual relationship between the parties can only be untangled by a resolution of the conversations, promises, events and disclosures which took place at Blum's."

New York Soundtrack

Continued from page 24

Prize" bows tomorrow (Thurs.) at Radio City Music Hall . . . Lindsley Parsons Jr. appointed assistant to Ed Morey, exec production manager at Metro Studios . . . "Kings of the Sun" posted a nifty $343,731 in three weeks on "premiere showcase" in Gotham.

Murray Kaplan, national sales supervisor for Bronston Distributions' "War of the Buttons," Chicago conferring with exhibs about the film . . . "Mister Moses" has begun filming in Nairobi, Kenya, starring Robert Mitchum and Carroll Baker, directed by Ronald Neame . . . Ivan Tors in Nassau prepping "Flipper's New Adventures" for Metro" . . . Martin Ritt and Ronald Lubin spotlighted in the Jan. 25 Saturday Review.

MGM brass, including Robert H. O'Brien, Robert Weitman, Maurice Silverstein, Ben Melniker and Frank Rosenfeld in Rome for confabs . . . "Mad World" will have seven regional preems in February, bringing its total of playdates at the end of that month to 28 . . . Globe Photos will make a special five-minute featurette on "Judgment in the Sun" . . . Joseph A. Jackson, longtime standin for Sammy Davis Jr., inked for "Sex and the Single Girl" . . . Annette Funicello touring presently on behalf of Walt Disney's "The Misadventures of Merlin Jones" . . . William Pearlberg and George Seaton will produce "The Claim Check," based on an original story by columnist Art Buchwald, for Metro.

Samuel Cohen, UA foreign pub manager, going on an extended leave of absence for health reasons, during which period Ashley Boone, who has been administrative assistant in UA ad-pub departments, will fill in with Cohen acting as a consultant . . . Andrew L. Stone has completed his treatment for Metro's "Winning of the Skies" and Ernest Gann is now scripting . . . Par has set 400 dates during the Lincoln-Washington birthday period in February for "Seven Days in May."

Don Kopaloff, an exec at William Morris, and Phyllis Sandra Liverman will be married here Feb. 23 . . . "Galina Ulanova," documentary featurette about the great Russ ballerina, will be on the bill with "Dimka" when latter opens at the Carnegie Hall Cinema next month . . . Col is tubthumping its "Dr. Strangelove: or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love The Bomb" via a 45-rpm disc called "Love That Bomb," recorded by Dr. Strangelove and the Fallouts . . . Omar Sharif in town.

Col veeps Stanley Schneider and S. H. Malamed to the Coast for studio talks . . . Oops! Walter Reade-Sterling had to call off the U.S. preem of its new Wonderama process at Hartford when it was discovered that Zeiss-Ikon in Germany had sent over the wrong lenses.

Pathe-Contemporary has added two more imports to its 1964 release sked, Vittorio De Seta's "The Bandits of Orgosolo" (Italo), and "14-18", a French feature documentary on World War One . . . Elsa Lanchester, who recently wound Metro's "Honeymoon Hotel," planning to go on the road again with her one-woman show, "Elsa Lanchester Herself." She's cover the Caribbean, Florida and London . . . 20th is signing big names for its "Agony and Ecstacy," with director Sir Carol Reed and stars Charlton Heston and Rex Harrison.

Ben Gladstone has been engaged by Hammer Film to act as general manager for worldwide sales on "Gone Are The Days" ("Purlie Victorious"). He continues his buying and booking activities for the Town and Country Theatres . . . Harold L. Spero, formerly general sales manager for Richard Davis' UMPO, has joined Lionex Films as national sales director . . . Sigma III, now indie distribbery, has joined IFIDA, with Leonard Gruenberg repping his firm on the IFIDA board . . . Former New Yorker Henry F. Ehrlich has joined John F. Dugan Enterprises in Hollywood as exec veep. For the last 18 years, Ehrlich has been in production and distribution in Mexico.

Saul Jeffee, chairman of the board and prez of Movielab, and John Kowalak, veep, are on a biz swing through Paris and Rome . . . San Francisco fest topper Irving Levin and wife Irma, in town for the IFIDA dinner last (Tues.) night, cocktailed industry friends Monday (20) night at the Park Sheraton.

Martin Rackin, Par production exec, in Madrid to confer with Samuel Bronston re "Circus World," which is finishing filming presently, and "Nightrunners of Bengal," which will begin in a few months. Paul Lazarus exec v.p. of the Bronston operation, also arrived in Madrid from New York over the weekend . . . Pamela Tiffin and Doug McClure set for Universal's "The Lively Set" . . . Charles Mancuso has succeeded Santiago Magdaleno as Allied Artists Los Angeles exchange booker, Magdaleno becoming a salesman in the territory for the distrib.

Charles Ruggles and Gene Raymond signed for Ross Hunter's "I'd Rather Be Rich" . . . the Museum of Modern Art, N.Y., is presenting a series of programs of documentary and avant garde films on consecutive Thursdays through Feb. 13, the first of which was screened last week . . . Edward Andrews inked for Universal's "Send Me No Flowers" . . . singer Jack Jones in Gotham for a nitery date at the Living Room, some tv appearances and to do some press work for Paramount on behalf of "Love With the Proper Stranger" in which he sings the title song . . . Robert Sweeney inked for a featured role in Alfred Hitchcock's "Marnie."

Par has retitled "Stagecoach to Hell" "Stage to Thunder Rock" . . . Adam West inked for "Robinson Crusoe On Mars" . . . Chicago's Festival of Leadership Committee gave native son Tom Bosley its "actor's award" in ceremonies held recently . . . An $100,000 collection of contemporary art is being filmed in scenes for "Where Love Has Gone."

Joseph E. Levine will bow "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" in the U.S. in New York in February, no theatre or date having yet been set. The Marcello Mastroianni-Sophia Loren starrer is currently cleaning up in opening dates in Rome, Milan and Naples . . . U's "The Brass Bottle" will have a series of territorial openings starting with its world preem at Loew's Theatre, Houston, Feb. 12. with a group from the film including Tony Randall, Barbara Eden and Lulu Porter participating in advance work for the film . . . Bantam Books conducting a contest in connection with "Seven Days in May," asking readers to write in why they want to see the film version (Par) and offering two Saab cars, two Honda motor bikes and a Lambert home tractor as prizes.

Producer-director Stanley Kramer considers Spencer Tracy not only the world's greatest actor but also "an institution even over and beyond many of the big stars of today." Kramer, interviewed by Honolulu columnist Eddie Sherman, added that Cary Grant approaches that category. Marlon Brando, he opined, "is a big star, but his vehicles have not been in recent years the kind which give credence to the position of so-called super-star." Kramer, readying "Ship of Fools," said he's not planning to use stars, as such, but is hunting for "the best cross-section of actors and actresses I can find."

Metro execs went into huddles with exhibitors and radio-tv people —the first meeting was in Boston—on more saturation bookings with electronics hypo . . . "8½" won the Joseph Burstyn Award as best foreign-language feature and "Tom Jones" was best English-language film, decided the Independent Importers & Distributors of America.

Rex Harrison will portray role of Pope Julius in 20th-Fox' production of "The Agony and the Ecstacy," in which Charlton Heston plays Michelangelo, and Carol Reed has been set to direct. Filming is slated for about June 15 in Rome.

"The trouble with hanging around this town is that it's filled with yes-men. You can't find anyone who'll tell you the truth. The flattery is sickening." Thus film star Shirley MacLaine is quoted from Hollywood by Lloyd Shearer in Canada's Weekend Magazine (11). She then excepts her agent Herman Citron, who "tells me the truth. But you should hear the agents who try to steal me away. Honestly, they make me sick. And the pressagents—they're even worse!"

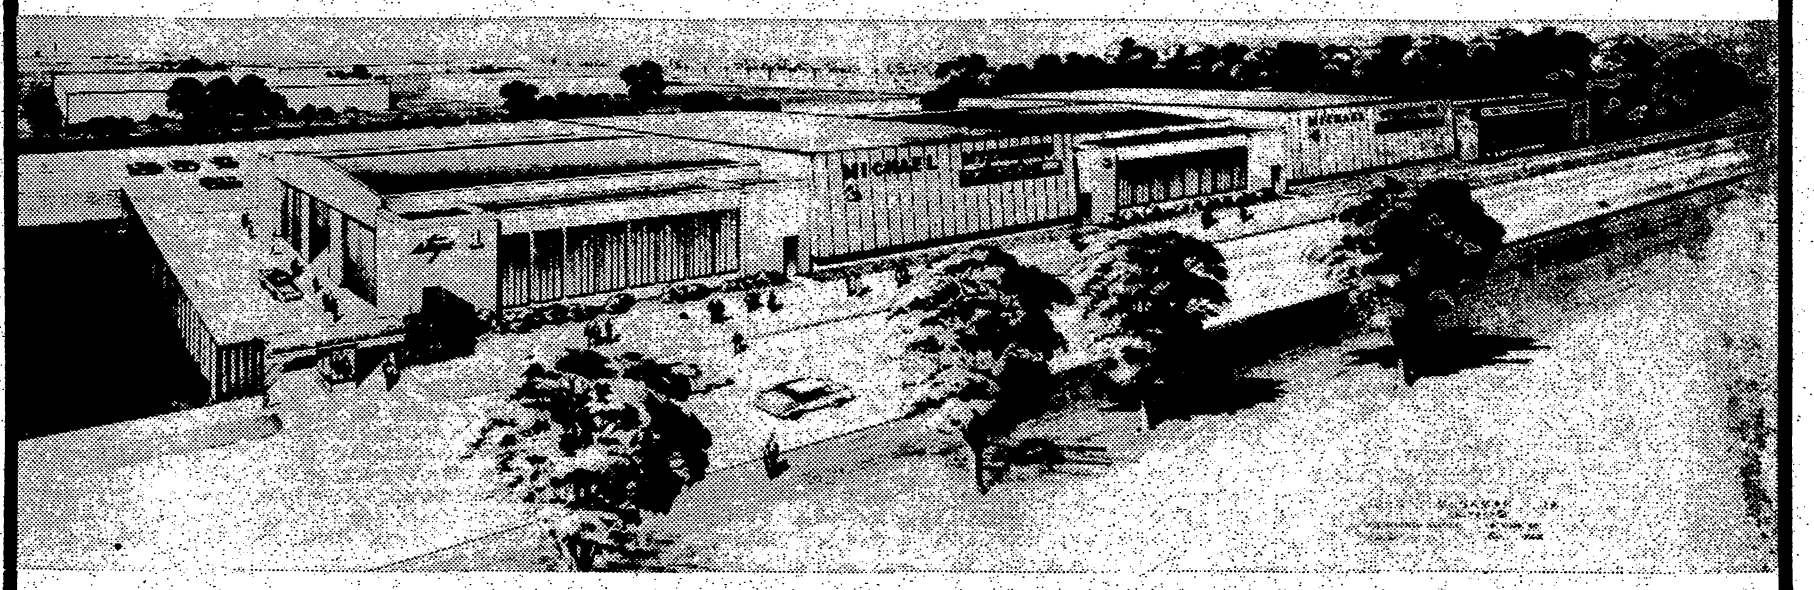
Council of Motion Picture Organizations set Feb. 4 as kickoff date for its annual dues collection campaign, with exhibitor contributions to be matched dollar for dollar by the MPAA companies . . . Stanley

(Continued on page 28)

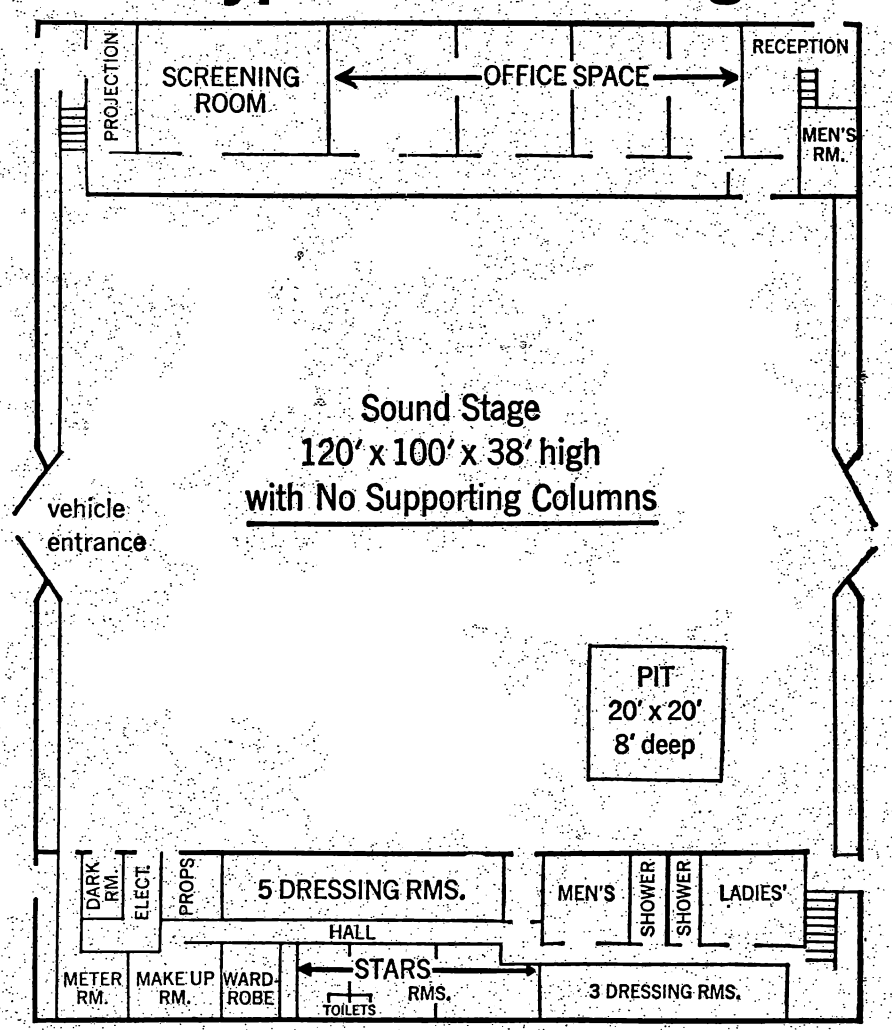
THE MICHAEL MYERBERG STUDIOS

MM STUDIOS

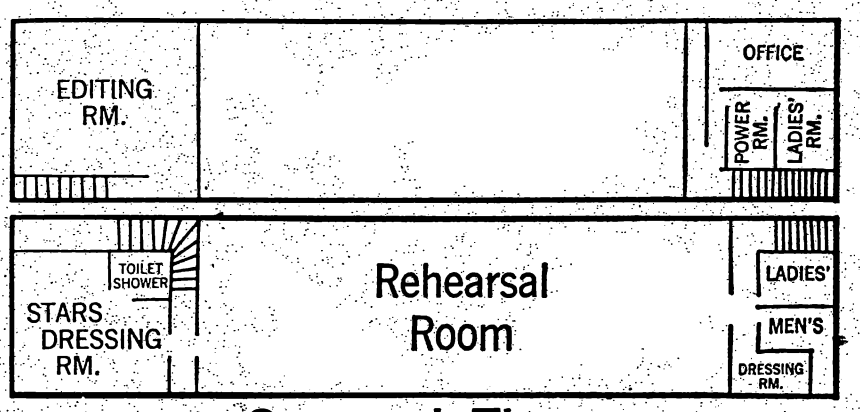
ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y.
"less than 45 minutes from BROADWAY"



A Typical Sound Stage



Ground Floor



Second Floor

THE BIG ONES ARE BEING MADE AT THE MM STUDIOS

"The World of Henry Orient"—Jerome Hellman—George Roy Hill U-A, complete. Biggest motion picture ever produced in the New York area—Color—Panavision—over 45 large sets—3 full New York City street scenes built inside studio—production value second to none—will be screening soon.

"Thank you Michael Myerberg for the wonderful cooperation and help of yourself and studio staff in the making of 'The World of Henry Orient'."
—Jerome Hellman

"Lilith"—Robert Rossen Columbia—completed—will be screening soon.

"I am gratified to be the first to use this fine new facility."
—Robert Rossen

"Kibee Hates Fitch"—Stanley Prager Television series for CBS—U-A—completed. Neil Simon's great comedy series—100% studio controlled—house exteriors, fire engine scenes all shot inside studio, offering maximum control for comedy value.

★ Our no-draft, no-noise air conditioning/heating system works perfectly.
★ No one uses more than 50% of our electric capacity.
★ 3 large stages completed and equipped.
★ Large stock of building components.
★ Sound is excellent—even for music scoring.
★ 5 more stages planned for Spring.
★ Full New York City street scene standing at studio.

SPACE AVAILABLE—RESERVE NOW

FOR INFORMATION CONTACT / ANTHONY MYERBERG / 234 W. 44th St. N.Y.C. CH. 4-4846

Ohio Keeps Swearing Off Bingo, Then Going Back On the Habit

Dayton, O., Jan. 21.

Bingo is back in Dayton, after an absence of four months, but attendance is down. The central figure in a bingo renaissance after the county-wide crackdown late last fall, Charles A. Pfeiffer, 65, who is also Montgomery County treasurer, has resigned as promotion manager for the Dayton Gymnastic Club after 37 years in that post.

He said he was resigning because of his health and the press of duties. As to the bingo operation, which offered free play but high prices for refreshments, for "members" only, he reported the club was breaking even, but not making any money. Game is being played Sunday and Wednesday nights at the club.

The Immaculate Conception Catholic Church also resumed bingo on Friday nights, with money going to the church school, but Rev. James E. Sherman said the crowds are not up to what they were before the crackdown. At St. Helen's Catholic Church, which had three games before Christmas, one was unprofitable, one made $18, and the third broke even.

Dayton Variety Club decided to resume bingo games at Lakeside Park on Jan. 4, after the four month shutdown, with the money to benefit the club's camp for crippled and handicapped children. A spokesman said games will be played on Saturday and Monday nights, with no fee for bingo cards, but donations accepted. More than 100 children used the Variety Camp last summer, its second year of operation.

Some Stay Warm

Calgary, Alta., Jan. 21.

A 1,000-car drive-in theatre is being built in the Southwood district of Calgary, with completion set for April.

It will have heaters for 500 cars.

Giles Fowler's '10 Best'

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

A list of "10 best" motion pictures of 1963 made by Giles M. Fowler of the Kansas City Star, is heavily flavored with foreign films and notably runs to black and white. Films had to play here during the calendar year to qualify, and he listed them in order of appearance.

His list: "Divorce, Italian Style," "Loneliness of a Long Distance Runner," "Billy Budd," "To Kill a Mockingbird," "David and Lisa," "Hud," "Electra," "8½," "The Leopard" and "Four Days of Naples."

Fowler put a number of films in special categories apart from the list, including "Long Days Journey Into Night," "Macbeth," and "Lawrence of Arabia." Admittedly "Cleopatra" dominated 1963, but "lavender clouds generated by that super spectacle came close to obscuring some far better motion pictures from the public consciousness," he wrote.

POLICY CHANGES AT CINCY SUBSEQUENTS

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

Policy changes for two longtime subsequent-run operations here have the Plaza, in suburban Norwood, inaugurating art films Christmas Day with "Counterfeiters of Paris," and the downtown Times becoming firstrun Feb. 6 with "Tom Jones" for a run.

The 55-year-old Plaza started off with vaudefilm, including Gus Sun bookings. Recently it was grinding only weekends. It is owned by Saul Schaengold and leased to a corporation managed by Ron Prewitt. Seating is 600. House was recently redecorated.

The Times, 660-seater at Sixth and Walnut, opened in 1940, is in the area chain of Mid-States Theatres headed by Roy White. It has recently undergone a $25,000 redecoration inside and out.

Mid-States changes the policy of its 615-seat Ashland Theatre, plush nabe in Lexington, Ky., Dec. 25 from subsequent to firstrun, taking off with "Four For Texas."

Cincy's major Albee or Palace is to undergo extensive modernization in the RKO International 70 Theatres improvement program. Harry Mandel, head of the chain, so informed Joe Alexander, district manager here last week. The refurbishment of either the Albee or Palace will follow that of the Orpheum in Denver, completed for Christmas reopening. Charles Horstman, RKO Theatres construction and maintenance chief, is due for an early visit to confer with contractors.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Richard Condon, former United Artists publicist who has since written some half dozen novels, was queried on NBC-TV respecting "The Manchurian Candidate," which was made into a film with Laurence Harvey and Frank Sinatra. Film's climatic incident is of a brainwashed G.I. who is supposed to murder the President of the United States but picks off the Vice President instead, when he partially breaks "control." Condon was queried as to whether "Manchurian" (UA) had been taken out of circulation after the assassination of President Kennedy by a Dallas sniper using the same sort of telescopic sight rifle described in book and film. His reply was inconclusive. So was his reaction to the challenge as to his sense of guilt. Condon pointed out that out of "the cancer of the psyche" in present times comes such characters as the real Oswald and the fictional one he wrote. Americans, argued Condon, get a daily dose of "the law of violence."

(United Artists has since put "Manchurian Candidate" back into release. It is currently in playoff.)

According to the so-called Starometer, a regular checkup on the popularity of foreign film stars with German exhibitors, 15 Americans, three Italian stars plus one French and one Swedish-born star belong to the lineup of the current 20 most popular screen players with the German moviegoers. While in the female category, the 10 most popular stars are composed of five American and five non-American actresses, the male category offers a full victory for America—all 10 actors are mainly associated with the U.S. film.

Italy's Sophia Loren is on top of the females, followed by Doris Day, Shirley MacLaine, Audrey Hepburn, Elizabeth Taylor, Italian Gina Lollobrigida, Swedish Ingrid Bergman, French Brigitte Bardot, Deborah Kerr and Claudia Cardinale. Rock Hudson is still winner among the males. Runners-up are Burt Lancaster, Cary Grant, Charlton Heston, Tony Perkins, John Wayne, Gregory Peck, James Stewart, Tony Curtis and Kirk Douglas.

Chuck Teitel, owner of the World, Town and Globe art theatres in Chicago, points out that a Jan. 1 VARIETY rundown of Windy City houses switching to firstruns in the past decade erroneously included the World in that comparatively recent vintage. Theatre was opened in 1933 during the Chicago Worlds Fair as the first art and import house in Chicago and one of the earliest in the country. First picture was "Be Mine Tonight," and second was "A Nous La Liberte," the first subtitled import to be shown in the U.S. Owner of the theatre was Teitel's father, Abe Teitel, pioneer importer, distributor and exhibitor of foreign films now in retirement.

Indie film producer Larry Moyer, who is under fire from the East Coast Motion Picture Council for making a non-union film called "The Moving Finger," faced his accusers recently but, predictably, couldn't get them to drop the recommendation that he be expelled from International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employers Editors Local 771. The Council, it seems, is basing most of its objections on a newspaper interview given by Moyer in which he supposedly glorified the making of non-union pix by describing various tactics he used in filming "Moving Finger."

Six of Maclean's mag's "Outstanding Canadians of 1963" are in show business. They are: Claude Jutra, Montreal indie filmmaker ("A Tout Prendre," to be subtitled for English-language showings in '64); Leon Major, artistic director of Neptune Theatre, Halifax; "Honest Ed" Mirvish, Toronto discount magnate who saved Royal Alexandra Theatre from becoming a parking lot by paying $215,000 for it to continue with legit; Ian (Tyson) and Sylvia (Fricker), Toronto folksingers; Pat Watson, Ottawa producer of CBC's weekly network "Inquiry."

St. Paul evening Dispatch critic Bill Diehl called renewed attention to the challenge he made to a 1950 Robert Coughlin Life article opining that, because of television, films in theatres were on the way out and forecasting the end of Hollywood and its studios and swimming pools. Diehl's reply in his column to Coughlin and others who prophesied dire things then was a prediction that, tv or not, pictures in theatres would survive, and prosper.

Richard L. Demmerle has been appointed ad-pub corporate director of General Aniline & Film Corp. He was formerly director of public relations and advertising for the Chemical Product Group of the Martin Marietta Corp. Talk persists about General Aniline being divested as a Government-owned property, after having been seized as an alien enterprise, but so far nothing concrete yet.

New York Soundtrack

Continued from page 26

Warner buyers and bookers, along with president Si Fabian and v.p.-general manager Harry Kalmine, closeted themselves to analyze boxoffice prospects for the New Year and consider local problems in each zone of operations.

Josef von Sternberg, Fritz Lang, King Vidor, Jean Renoir, John Ford and Henry King will be singled out by U. of Cal.-L.A., film series—"The American Film and Its Creators." Program will correlate pix showings with lectures by subject directors . . . Technicolor Corp. of America, a Maine corporation, has merged Alab Film Corp., Town Photolab Inc., Just Rit Film Co. Inc., Pac-Rite Film Corp. and Handi Photos, New York concerns. Fulton, Walter & Duncombe were filing attorneys at Albany.

Ross Hunter picked up "The Public Eye," one-acter by Britisher Peter Shaffer currently paired on Broadway legit with "The Private Ear," for his Universal production slate. Broadway's Mike Nichols set to direct and collab with author on screen script.

Metro put Ed Hinchy Jr. into the job of head booker in Seattle, succeeding Kenneth Snyder, who left . . . Ivan Tors to Florida over the past weekend on the preliminaries for his "Flipper" followup production. Director Leon Benson went ahead . . . Columbia had ex-middleweight boxer Izzie Grove at work on the exploitation of "The Victors" around the five local boroughs, directing such things as store displays and handbill distribution . . . Lee Minoff back to London after an 11-city U.S. publicity tour in behalf of "Dr. Strangelove." He's Stanley Kubrick's production and publicity associate . . . David McGrath is talking it up with Michigan exhibs this week about MGM's "Mail Order Bride."

Six drive-ins are located within New York City, a "Dimension" report on the annual "New York Statistical Guide" stated recently over CBS radio. The 123-page publication also lists 57 foreign-language daily and weekly newspapers, in 26 tongues, within the metropolis, Kenneth Banghart continued. "Guide" tabbed the licensing of "one organ-grinder," but this reminder of a colorful street past is no longer printed—the lone "musician" is not replaced. The Big Town has farms in every county except Manhattan, according to "Guide." Brooklyn's population is largest within the City; Manhattan's, the densest.

Sidney Poitier planed to Jamaica over the weekend to attend the funeral of his mother . . . Maxwell Hamilton, who last month completed his second year as coordinator of advertising and public relations for "Greatest Story Ever Told," is resigning as of Feb. 7 after which time he plans penning a book for Random House . . . Carol Lawrence will make a "guest" appearance in "I'd Rather Be Rich" . . . Alexander Knox, Orlando Martins, Ian Bannen and Raymond St. Jacques set for "Mister Moses" . . . Peter Mann will make his pic debut for Universal in "The Lively Set."

Kirk Douglas will make a five-week world tour in connection with global openings of "Seven Days in May," following the close of his current legit effort "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" this Saturday (25) . . . Bill Smith signed for a role in "Marnie" . . . Variety Club of Illinois has contributed $38,000 to LaRabida Sanitarium Peter Brown signed for U's "Kitten With a Whip."

Sam Rosen, exec v.p. of Stanley Warner, a granddad for the eighth time, as his son, Arthur, and latter's wife, Lilianne Rose, parented their third daughter. Arthur Rosen is an exec at Stanley Warner.

Robert Morse first star signed for Filmways' screen version of Evelyn Waugh's "Loved One" . . . Universal Pictures' prez Milton R. Rackmil and veep-foreign general manager Americo Aboaf back from U's Latin American sales meet in Mexico City . . . Vincente Minnelli to direct 20th's "Goodbye, Charlie" . . . "Von Ryan's Express," David Westheimer novel purchased sometime ago by 20th prior to publication, has been named the Book of the Month Club selection for February.

NATIONAL SCREEN PLOTS A DRIVE IN FEBRUARY

National Screen Service will conduct a Burton E. Robbins President's Sales Drive for three months beginning Feb. 2. The opening date of the push is timed to coincide with the birthday of the company topper.

In conjunction with the sales drive, the company will develop a program of expanded services to exhibitors, according to NSS general sales manager Melvin L. Gold. A variety of displays have been developed in this connection, some to be offered on a rental basis, some on a lease plan and others for outright purchase. The new materials have been designed for both drive-in and conventional theatres, Gold pointed out.

Besides the new accessories line the NSS special trailer department is also prepping a new line of special products to coincide with the sales drive, he added.

Ladies Journal Ribbons Warners 'My Fair Lady'

Ladies Home Journal, circulation 6,677,000, devotes 100 pages of its January-February issue, plus the cover on Audrey Hepburn, to Warners' "My Fair Lady." Press reception last week on stage of New York's Mark Hellinger Theatre, where the stage original opened eight years ago, marked the WB-Journal tiein.

Mag covers the "Fair Lady" theme from standpoints of food, fashion, beauty and decorating. Photographs and a diary by production designer Cecil Beaton make for the highlight.

Six of Beaton's original costumes were displayed by mannequins at the Hellinger outing.

Richard Lederer, WB's ad-pub v.p., said "in all modesty" that the Journal special issue was "a fitting tribute to the greatest film in Warner Bros. history."

Ranking It, Asiatic

London, Jan. 21.

Rank's World Film Distribution Overseas Division, under the Managing Director Colin MacArthur, has sparked an exec switcharound involving four offshore staffers.

They are Michael Boxhall, who returns from Malaysia to the London Theatre division; Arthur Greaves, who temporarily replaces Boxhall in Malaysia before taking over as branch manager in the Philippines; Digby Davidson, currently in charge in the Philippines, who now takes over as Branch manager of Thailand.

LEGAL NOTICE

CIVIL COURT OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK COUNTY OF NEW YORK

PHILLIP FEWSMITH, Plaintiff, —against—
FRED FELDKAMP, Defendant.

SIRS:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that I have obtained a judgment against FRED FELDKAMP of 59 East 78th Street, New York City, temporarily residing at 5 Rue Belleville, Neuilly-sur-Seine, Paris, France, for the sum of $2,063.50. Should anyone have knowledge of the debtor's assets, please notify the creditor or his attorney.

Dated: New York, N. Y.
January 16, 1964

Yours, etc.,
PHILLIP FEWSMITH
435 East 79th Street
New York, N. Y.
KENNETH HELLER, ESQ.
277 Broadway
New York 7, N. Y.

Hear . . .
Hollywood
Commentator
DICK STROUT
ON over 800 Stations in Americal
Suite 404
1717 N. Highland Av.
Hollywood 28, Cal.
469-8834

New York's largest specialists in motion picture & TV insurance
(cast, film, weather, liability, cameras, props, plagiarism...)
WINKLER ASSOCIATES, LTD.
120 W. 57 St., New York 19, Circle 7-3366

MODERN FILM STORAGE PLANT FOR SALE!
Fully equipped 25,000 sq. ft. cold film storage plant, in Bronx, near subway and expressway. Call
CY 9-8888

FM WIRELESS MIKE
Use With Any FM Set
• Broadcast Quality • 200' Range
• Cigarette Pack Size
• Tunable 88-108mc.
• 90 Day Warranty
Complete with built-in microphone—49.95ppd. Mercury battery 1.25—Less microphone 39.95

GPL-AMPRO JAN 16mm Projector. Sprocket intermittent, no claw. Excellent condition. Complete with amplifier, speaker, spare intermittent, lamps, arm and service manual. Current dealer used price: $1000. One only—$495.
LARRY RACIES
Audio Visual Consultant
201 E. 15th Street, New York 10003
SP 7-4477

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of friends or relatives of Marion Davies, please write:
G. E. SULLIVAN
74 Douglas Dr., Towaco, N. J.

New York Theatres

RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL
Rockefeller Center • PL 7-3100
PAUL NEWMAN
"THE PRIZE"
Co-starring
ELKE SOMMER • EDWARD G. ROBINSON
A Pandro S. Berman Production.
An M-G-M Picture in MetroCOLOR
ON GREAT STAGE "MUSICANA"

Roth Heading Sternberg's Pay-See

Previously with Associated Television—Britain's Tolvision Ltd. Uses California System

London, Jan. 21.

Edward J. Roth, who resigned his post as deputy managing director of Associated TeleVision towards the end of last year, has been appointed managing director of Tolvision Ltd., one of the five pay tv outfits awarded a franchise by the Postmaster-General. The company will be operating in the fall in the Home Counties area of Luton and Bedford and in the London suburb of Woolwich.

Chairman of Tolvision is Rudi Sternberg, who developed the company as a result of conversations with Matty Fox some seven years back. Other directors are Lord Boothby, Charles Gordon, Dr. J. Pomeraniec, C.E.B.L. Carr and Wilfred King.

Tolvision system is a wired one, incorporating a monitoring system and was first developed in conjunction with the Bell Telephone Company and IBM. It is similar to that about to be used in Los Angeles and San Francisco by the Pat Weaver group.

Taking the view that pay tv is not competitive with either the BBC or commercial tv services, Roth says great efforts will be made to explore new fields of programming. Newly released feature films will be a vital part of the experiment, but by no means its sum total. Coproduction deals are being sought within Britain and America and present plans include the presentation of two-hour and even longer dramatic entertainments, full and complete ballets, shows direct from West End theatres and a heavy schedule of top sporting fixtures. He envisages the company's role as supplementing the existing tv services.

Apart from the fact that payvision will provide an impetus to the electronics and manufacturing industries, Roth also believes it will increase activity in the British film industry and provide additional work for artists and other creative workers.

(A substantial stake in the company is held by the News of the World group, and it is likely that another press combine will also be among the participants. Mark Chapman-Walker will be the NoW spokesman.)

ROWLEY BLAST AT TOLL MARKS MEMPHIS MEET

Memphis, Jan. 21.

Ed Doherty, theatre exec hereabouts for nearly 20 years and co-owner of Exhibitor Services, was elected prexy of the Tri-State Theatre Owners Assn. at the annual conclave held at the Chisca-Plaza Hotel. Some 250 delegates attended the two-day session. It was occasion of "blast attack" at tollvision by John Rowley, here from Dallas, to address the group as president of Theatre Owners of America.

Rowley told the exhibs from Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, abo t Pat Weaver's Subscription TV Inc., with big aspiration in California, starting next July.

"If they're successful with sports and first run movies, they will move into other parts of the country. They are requesting a referendum to let the people of California decide whether or not they want pay television. It will cost a half million dollars and TOA is raising funds to help the California group," Rowley stated.

Officers elected at meeting of the regional TOA were: R. B. Cox, Batesville, Miss., sec-treas.; Bruce Young, Pine Bluff, Ark., elevated to chairman of board; vice-presidents: Leon Roundtree, Holly Springs, Miss.; Nona White, Little Rock, Ark.; Norman Fair, Somerville, Tenn. and Dick Lightman and E. O. Cullen, Memphis TOA reps.

Honor awards were made for the first time this year by the tri-state group which comprised: Bailey Richard, Allied Artists branch manager, named "branch manager of the year," James Pope, Columbia, Tenn., "salesman of the year," and Fred Curd, Universal office manager "booker of the year," Variety Club, Tent No. 20 also entertained the delegates in their club rooms in the Gayoso Goldsmith building.

Humorous Slants

St. Paul, Jan. 21.

With West Coast promoters sanguine over the profit possibilities of big league baseball on tollvision and a fear from at least one quarter that this sort of thing will throw sports into the entertainment-only category, Don Riley, local morning Pioneer Press sports columnist, foresees possible "cataclysmic" repercussions from the development. Tongue in cheek, he listed these in his column. Some were:

"Chorus girls will eliminate greasy kids stuff and Arlene Francis will extoll the benefits of staying sharp. Tv ratings will be devoted to locker room chatter. Our tv critic Pat Clepper will become sports editor. Our sports editor's column will be titled 'Show Biz Blurps'."

Concluded Riley: "But if the Dodgers earn that 100 grand per game they're anticipating from the flicker square, they will not give a damn about the repercussions."

Levine's Par Eggs

Continued from page 3

Greene directing. The fourth pic is "The Idol," based on an original story by Ugo Liberatore. It too will be released in the U.S. and Canada by Embassy and in the rest of the world by Par.

As a producer, Levine's cash intake from these eight pix is in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. As 50% owner, his distribution return is unestimable. "Zulu" opens in London today (Wed.) and will debut in the U.S. in June. "Carpetbaggers" goes into release in June as well and "Where Love Has Gone" is presently lensing. "House Is Not a Home" is slated to begin lensing in about three weeks, with "Nevada Smith" to go in June under the direction of Henry Hathaway and "The Idol" later this summer. When "Sands" will begin isn't set yet but Levine is now in London for the "Zulu" opening and will also look into this. "Imperial" isn't slated yet either but will be ready for '65 release.

Timetable

In fact, at least seven of the eight will be either filming or completed and in release by the end of 1964. For Levine, it makes his coproduction and release schedule the biggest of any indie going, with four Italo coproductions with Carlo Ponti, several imports and some others like "Three Penny Opera" which don't fit either category, all on the schedule along with the Par projects. For Paramount, the deal marks a further involvement with Levine and another move in its program to hot up its independent dealings, a plan which has seen many major deals transpire in recent months.

As far as a Levine-Paramount marriage, as has been broadly hinted at by Par prez Barney Balaban and others, Levine remains in the familiar role of Mr. Dubious. One important contingency is that Levine and Embassy retain almost an autonomous operation with complete freedom to wheel and deal on the international market without having to check every move with the new partner. This buying freedom has enabled Embassy to make some of its best deals, while others were involved in the red tape of cabling back and forth to Gotham headquarters.

Also, there is Levine's understandable fear of bureaucracy, something he doesn't have to contend with at present. This, despite his known respect for the Paramount upper echelon, especially exec v.p. George Weltner.

One thing is fairly clear, however, and that is that Levine will almost have to take some kind of step soon because his operation is growing like an over-fertilized tree, if that's an analogy, whose branches are beginning to overburden the trunk.

Pathecolor Inc., a Delaware company, has changed its name to Pathe Laboratories, Inc. Pathe Laboratories Inc., in turn, merged Television Realty Inc., a New York company. Fisher, Okin, Gleiberman & Ezrine were the attorneys.

Toll Debate Mostly Tired Partisanship; Freberg's Jabs at TV Sell an Enlivener

By DAVE KAUFMAN

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

With all the fervor of a tired rerun, the pro's and con's of pay tv were debated last week under auspices of the Hollywood TV Academy, at the Moulin Rouge, a site which had more excitement when it played its last seal act.

Through all the verbal bombast from three spokesmen on each side of the issue emerged a few fragments which were unusual if not earthshaking. A commercials producer blasted tv commercials; a pay tv company prexy described televiewers as "idiot people," and later said he would present his arguments anent feevee next month; a pay tv spoksman conceded that after 15 years of trying to sell feevee, they hadn't done a very good job; an exhib spokesman commented that production for free tv enabled major studios to survive.

Panelists on the pro-pay tv side were Stan Freberg, prexy of Freberg Ltd., a last-minute sub for Screen Actors Guild prexy Dana Andrews; Paul MacNamara, veepee of American Pay-TV; Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver Jr., prexy of Subscription Television Inc. Anti-feevee spokesman where Robert W. Selig, veepee and general manager, National General Corp.; Fred Stein, prexy Amusement Corp. of America and chairman, the Southern California Crusade for Free TV; William Ross, prexy, Baus & Ross. Co., ad-p.r. firm.

Hit 'Liver Bile'

Freberg tore into tv commercials, drawing a lot of laughs with his jabs at the "liver bile commercials, the hairspray models with their cavalcade of teeth," and asserted "tv has become a vast scene of advertising trivia. Perhaps trivia isn't the proper word—perhaps garbage is the proper word." Freberg went on beyond the time allocated each speaker, and when moderator Gene Barry tired to halt him, argued and insisted he be allowed to finish his prepared speech. He did, and among his other contributions were the assertion that "tv is a disaster area. Pay tv is the only Red Cross truck in sight."

Weaver, in answer to a question from Selig, attributed previous failures of feevee experimental tests to the fact some used the coin box system, and the fact they were experimental. He said feevee is not to be like freevee, where some idiot group of people are watching five hours a day" with each of the three webs competing for this audience.

Weaver also said his firm would disclose its arguments next month, a statement which prompted Selig to retort "I am puzzled because Weaver says we will have to wait until next month for his arguments. I thought the purpose of this meeting was to present the arguments on each side." He termed Weaver's talk about bringing cultural events to feevee "so much nonsense," and said the only deals lined up yet by the firm were for the L.A. Dodger and S.F. Giants baseball games. Weaver replied those deals had been set before he joined the company.

Can Afford Big Ones?

MacNamara contributed the allegation that "the way to guage the success of a picture is the amount of money spent on it," although conceding some expensive pix have been flops. His point was that feevee, with all kinds of coin, will be able to turn out top first-run pix. He also said pix now going to free tv do so after recovering their negative costs, a statement sharply refuted by Stein who termed it "misleading," and said many pix never recoup their negative cost.

Freberg assailed the "greed of NBC, CBS, P&G and Alberto-Culver," asserting this "greed knows no bounds." Asked about the possible loss of jobs to actors if feevee comes sans commercials, he replied: "Too bad. There is a great deal more at stake here than residuals. I'm sorry for the actors put out of work—but they can do other things."

Stein declared feevee will "force" larg segments of the population to pay for what they now see free. It would impose a hardship on such groups as senior citizens and shutins, he added. Stein averred feevee will "destroy" freevee," a statement sharply denied by the pay tv spokesmen.

He asked the audience not to be "fooled" into the idea pay tv would provide more jobs in the industry, saying instead it would undermine film production. It has taken 15 years, since the advent of tv, to find a new level, a new renaissance in the industry, and this "monster" pay tv would hurt "all of us," he avowed. Most major studios today couldn't exist without the benefits of their production for free tv, he added.

The Carriage Trade

Ross said the anti-toll forces seek to have a public vote on this issue in next November's voting. Of feevee, he said "it narrows down to those who can afford it—the carriage trade."

Selig commented that free tv and exhibs today have a growing compatibility "where we live together and use each other." Tv enables an exhib to get into the livingroom to plug pix via trailers, etc., he added.

MacNamara observed that "for 15 years, I've been trying to sell pay tv. If we had done a good job, our opponents wouldn't be against us."

Stein said exhibs today have a great deal of confidence in future pix production in the industry, and that is why they have spent much money in refurbishing of theatres, and building new ones. Feevee threatens this entire structure, he warned.

In answer to a query, Weaver estimated his firm needs 50,000 installations to make the system economically feasible. He said his company expects to begin operations in July.

Weaver declared that feevee is compatible with freevee, and denied it would force the public to pay for what it is now seeing free.

Michigan Pledges $20,000

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Michigan film exhibtors agreed to raise $20,000 to fight tollvision following a meeting attended by Arnold C. Childhouse, chairman of the Crusade for Free TV being waged in California. "Put out the fire in their house before our house is on fire," was the rallying cry of Milton H. London, executive director of National Allied States.

Many of the 75 exhibs, who represent about 90 per cent of the theatres in the state, wrote checks payable to the Joint Committee Against Pay TV. The plan was the raise 25% of the total sum immediately, with the balance being payed as the need arises.

Childhouse is on a swing around the country to gain support for the "crusade" on West Coast.

Music Distrib Dave Rosen Philly's New Chief Barker

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

David Rosen, president of David Rosen, Inc., large distributor of phonograph records, music and vending machines in this area, became first music and coin machine operator to head the Philadelphia Variety Club, Tent 13, when he was installed as Chief Barker at ceremonies in Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. Spotlight was centered on the recording industry with Eydie Gorme called up to receive the Philadelphia Tent's annual Heart Award as "entertainer of year." The Variety's Gold Heart Award, given annually to a member of the medical fraternity and others who have made contributions to aid handicapped children, went to Dr. Helen B. Taussig, physician-in-charge of cardiac clinic at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

Sylvan H. Cohen, film industry attorney and a former chief barker of Tent 13, chairmaned the meeting and installation dinner. The event was marred by the tragic death of the outgoing Chief Barker, film man Charles Zagrans, in December. It marked the second straight year that the incumbent head of Tent 13 had died in office. The late Lester Wurtele was the Chief Barker in 1962.

Drumfire Versus Toll

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Theatre owners in Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati were apprised of the dangers of tollvision in a series of meetings here.

A caravan of speakers against "Crusade for Free TV" included Arnold C. Childhouse, chairman of the California toll-fighters; Jack Armstrong, National Allied prexy; Marshall H. Fine, National Allied board chairman, and Milton London, National Allied's exec director.

David Weisbart added romantic comedy by Bill Gulick, tabbed "Conquest," to his 20th-Fox production slate and assigned William Ludwig to script.

Hartford's 3-Year Toll Loss: $10-Mil

John Pinto Raps Alliance of Exhibs and Broadcasters To Thwart Tollvision

Boston, Jan. 21.

Hartford's tollvision will drop $10,000,000 in losses in its three-year experiment, which started in June, 1962, and ends in 1965. So said John H. Pinto, vice president of RKO General Phonevision Co., speaking before the Broadcasting Executives Club of New England at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel here.

"We are engaged in a fascinating and possibly futile attempt to prove whether a new entertainment concept can become a profitable business serving an expressed need and breaking no natural or man-made law," he said. Pinto, who said the bulwark of his programming is motion pictures, then lashed out at exhibitors and commercial television leaders stating:

"It is interesting to observe that today some commercial television leaders who are critically prejudging pay-tv are in effect joining forces with theatre exhibitors, long their mortal enemies. These broadcasters are thus following the unimaginative lead of the people who opposed sound in motion pictures because it would disturb patrons; the same enlightened folk who opposed radio because it would keep people off the streets and out of the theatre, who opposed television but did nothing to increase their own appeal; the same gentlemen who could not see until too late that people were moving to the suburbs and were not going to come back to town for entertainment; the same businessmen who failed to provide parking space—modern theatres—lower prices—fought drive-in theatres and who were appaled when free dish night didn't make the grade."

Pinto explained that pay-tv in Hartford is on the air 30 hours a week and 85% of the time is motion pictures. "We got a 68% rating for the film 'What Ever Happened to Baby Jane' and we ran it day and date with Hartford theatres," he said. The subscription price for "Baby Jane" was $1.50. Fees for motion pictures on toll are $1, $1.25, $1.50.

Pinto said that he believes that "pay-tv will succeed if it can supplement commercial tv, as do the motion picture theatres, concert halls, supper clubs, legitimate stage and sports arena today. We do and will compete with those outside boxoffice locations far more than we will compete commercial television," he declared. "Furthermore, I believe that this can help to expand the entire television industry commercial as well as pay."

"The stage has its problems too but its leaders see pay-tv as a possible solution. During the last 12 seasons only 25% of Broadway productions made back their costs." He said "80% of the people who now go to New York theatres live in and around that city. Of the other 20%, most of them come to town principally on other business."

Hard Going in Dollar-Shy Chile Market; Film Imports Decline, U.S. in Front

By HANS EHRMANN

Santiago, Jan. 21.

Trend of film exhibition economics here triggers some alarm. There were 522 new films exhibited here in 1961; total for 1962 was 418; but last year barely 349 were unreeled.

This situation reflects Chile's chronic U. S. dollar shortage. Television is only a minor adverse factor for the theatres. Attendance has not diminished appreciably. Admissions have remained stationary. Higher ticket prices were only authorized for films running more than 135 minutes. Maximum admissions up to date: 66c for Metro's "How the West was Won" and Fox's "Cleopatra," 50c for Columbia's "Lawrence of Arabia," Metro's "Mutiny on the Bounty" and others.

Some 42% of the money paid at the wickets is drained off in taxes. There is a countrywide exhibitor to distributor rental delay debt of well over $400,000.

Independent distributors have all but disappeared from the local market and most European films now reach Chile via the established U. S. distributors such as Columbia and MGM. These American exchanges are less keyed to the artier European pix than the independents and apparently often do not quite know how to handle them.

A good example is Columbia's handling of "Sundays and Cybele," a boxoffice flop, though it received the "best picture of the year" award from the Critics Circle. It was launched as "Sibila" (Sybil) wasting all the publicity garnered by this film under its original title when awarded its Oscar.

The 10 Moneymakers

The year's 10 biggest moneymakers in Chile were these:

1)	"How the West was Won". (Cinerama)	$95,220
2)	"Lawrence of Arabia" (Col)	59,128
3)	"The Longest Day" (MGM)	38,119
4)	"Il Sorpasso" (Select)	34,000
5)	"El Extra" (Col)	33,329
6)	"Counterfeit Traitor" (Par)	29,374
7)	"Cleopatra" (MGM)	29,200
8)	"Mutiny on the Bounty" (MGM)	24,887
9)	"Barrabas" (Col)	22,359
10)	"Boccaccio '70" (Alo Films)	22,305

The above figures are firstrun and net, i.e. without usual taxes. Fox product is distributed by MGM in Chile. "How West was Won," "Il Sorpasso" and "Cleopatra" are still running. "Cleo" started off strongly at the boxoffice, but began to deflate during its second week, hit by unfavorable reviews and word-of-mouth comment plus the unfavorable pre Christmas period. At present outlook "Cleo" will be pushing plenty to recoup its guarantee.

Actual success of the year's films is better measured by attendance figures than Santiago grosses, due to the differing scales of admissions. From this point of view Cantinflas' "El Extra" from Mexico was the big hit of 1963. Below, films with more than 100,000 audience in Santiago firstrun houses:

1)	"El Extra" (Col)	274,843
2)	"How the West was Won" (Cinerama)	264,047
3)	"Lawrence of Arabia" (Col)	220,293
4)	"Il Sorpasso" (Select)	213,000
5)	"The Longest Day" (MGM)	162,416
6)	"Hatari" (Par)	143,000
7)	"Asi era mi Madre" (Pel-Mex)	139,388
8)	"To Kill a Mockingbird" (Universal)	131,379
9)	"The V.I.P.s" (MGM)	127,000
10)	"Counterfeit Traitor" (Par)	126,000
11)	"Baby Jane" (Warner)	100,941

American product again topped the Chilean market with 40.7% (comparable with its 42.8% in 1962 and 36% in 1961). The following countries were represented by more than 10 releases. Figures in brackets show totals in 1962:

U.S.A.	142	(179)
England	43	(51)
Italy	41	(37)
Mexico	38	(37)
France	35	(40)
Spain	14	(10)

In 1963 the distrib-exhib outlets established by Argentina and Soviet Russia had to admit failure and close shop. Main reason was the simple fact that audience did not take to these pictures. On the other hand, Spanish films have settled down with reasonable success under a similar arrangement.

5 German Films Win $50,000 Each

Frankfurt, Jan. 14.

Five West German films are due to receive $50,000 each in special premiums from the West German Ministry of the Interior, to aid the troubled film industry here.

The films picked as deserving the special award include "An Almost Perfect Girl," produced by Fono Films and Chamartin of Madrid; "Eleven Years and a Day," produced by Roxy Film; "The House in Montevideo" from Domnickfilm; "My Uncle the Gangster," produced by Corona Films of Germany along with Societe Nouvelle des Establissements Gaumont of Paris and Sicilia Cinematografica of Rome; and "Castle Gripsholm," produced by Independent Films.

In addition, the Ministry is promising another $50,000 to nine other German films when they are completed, giving an initial $3,750 of the sum to each of the nine authors of the film scripts. This is the same controversial system that was utilized last year—the dramatists received the payment for the scripts, but almost none of the productions due these special awards were actually made, so the government saved its money and the planned "outstanding" films were never made.

Dublin's 2d Largest House Sold; May Close

Dublin, Jan. 14.

The 1,400-seat Olympia here has been sold to an unidentified buyer for an undisclosed sum. How house would be used in the future is not known. Theatre has been on the market for some months, following decision of majority shareholders to retire from theatre operation.

New owners will take over next spring, and the staff of the theatre have been told the managerial responsibility of the joint managing directors, Stanley Illsley and Leo McCabe, will end at that time. In the meantime, house continues to operate. Olympia, second largest theatre here, fomerly was the Empire Palace of Varieties. Since Illsley and McCabe became joint managing directors in 1951, policy has been concentrated mainly on legit. House was used for a number of pre-London runs.

Richard Burton and Joseph Sirola are partnered in coproduction of "A Separate Place," from novel by John Knowles, actor holding coproducer reins only and not to star.

Hoyts' Chain Shows $36,000 Profit Hike

Sydney, Jan. 14.

Hoyt's film circuit turned in a profit of $632,000 in the year ended last June 30, an increase of $36,000 over the previous year. on "A" and "B" preference stocks will take $110,000. Ordinary dividend is set at $286,000, 20th-Fox is a major stockholder in this claim, with Darryl Zanuck and Seymour Poe on the board of directors.

Ernest Turnbull, former chairman of the Loop for years and also for 20th-Fox, is to be paid a lump sum of $96,000 as retirement pay. Turnbull joined Hoyts' 21 years ago when the late Charles Munro quit. Turnbull's son Dale is now general manager of the loop and also 20th-Fox.

During a visit here last year, Seymour Poe, veepee 20th, drastically slashed manpower in both the circuit and distribution setups. Poe also shuttered non-paying suburban cinemas.

French Pix Trade Still Off in '63

Paris, Jan. 14.

The film industry here is taking stock of 1963 as the new year gets under way. The last 12 months saw a continued fall in filmgoing but it was less than in other recent years, which was some consolation. Production was about par. However, coproductions grew, and generally it was considered a fair year if still underlining the generally shaky fiscal film setup.

French foreign income was also below hoped-for levels but felt above previous seasons. American pix held their own at about 30% of the market and the number of pix released. French films kept the usual 50% of the home market.

French production was about 88% less than last year, with 42 completely French and 46 majority coproductions. There were fewer German pix released and more Italian ones, with a slight falling off of dubbed Yank pix because bigger specs had longer runs.

A check on firstrun Paris takes shows that 44 pix had more than 100,000 admissions to the 55 of 1962. Twelve of these were U.S. items, 23 French, three British, one Russian and five Italian.

'Great Escape' U.S. Topper

Audiences seemed to go for spectacle, suspense, exploitation and comedy pix generally. Topper was the American film, "Great Escape" (UA) which had over 550,000 patrons. Other U.S. pix included "55 Days at Peking" (AA), "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col), "Cleopatra" (20th), late starter; "Nutty Professor" (Par), "The Birds" (U), "List of Adrian Messenger" (U), "Donovan's Reef" (Par), "The Interns" (Col), "Hud" (Par), "The Lion" (20th), "Irma La Douce" (UA), plus the longrunning "West Side Story" (UA) and "How the West Was Won" (MGM).

Other French takers included "Le Soupirant" (The Suitor), newcomer Marcel Ophuls' "Peau De Banane" (Banana Skin), Claude Chabrol's "Landru," Roger Vadim's "Vice Et Virtue," "Les Bonnes Causes" (The Good Causes) and "Mourir a Madrid."

Chile's Film Rejects of 1963

Santiago, Jan. 21.

Chilean Censorship Board axed over 15 films in 1963, but only 10 of these rejections were upheld by the Court of Appeals. Over 100 films received the severe classification tag of "for viewers over 21 years."

The films definitely rejected were the following:

1) "Los Atracadores" (Spanish)
2) "Il Mondo Sexy de Notte (Italian) (Lido Films)
3) "Rata de Puerto" (Argentine) (Baires Films)
4) "Seven Seas to Calais" (U.S.) (MGM)
5) "Douce Violence" (French) (MGM)
6) "Reach for Glory" (English) (Columbia)
7) "Los Llaneros," (Mexican) (Pel-Mex)
8) "Alias Gardelito" (Argentine) (Baires Films)
9) "Setenta Veces Siete" (Argentine) (Baires Films)
10) "Leoni al Sole" (Italian) (Europa Films)

These 10 rejections amount to 2.63% of the 380 features viewed by censors in 1963 and, added to severe classifications of other pix, explain why censors are considered a serious problem in Chile, both by those involved in the commercial aspects of films as by those interested in cinema as an art.

International Sound Track

London

Abbey Theatre of Liverpool, is to become the 10th Cinerama showcase in Britain. It is now closed for refurbishing, and will reopen on March 16 with "This Is Cinerama". . . Pathe Technicolor report on the Pope Paul's pilgrimage to the Holy Land was released through Warner-Pathe in the U.K. last week . . . Theo Cowan on British publicity for Robert Aldrich's "What Ever Happened to Cousin Charlotte?" Robert L. Lippert is filming several supporting features at Shepperton for 20th-Fox and British Lion. Currently, he is making "Witch and Warlock," starring Lon Chaney Jr. . . . Principal photography on Walt Disney's "The Moon-Spinners" is due to be completed tomorrow (Thurs.). The pic, which had 10 weeks locations in Crete, has Hayley Mills, Eli Wallach, Peter McEnery, Joan Greenwood and Irene Papas. Studio interiors were lensed at Pinewood . . . Associated British Cinemas is equipping many of its theatres with monaural magnetic sound.

Paris

Jacques and Pierre Prevert are prepping a film together with the former scripting and the latter directing. Based on a book by Gottfried Keller, "Between Heaven and Earth," it will deal with a young monk in medieval times. They want Lebanese-Egyptian Omar Sharif for the role. Jacques is a poet and pre-war film writer and Pierre made some pix before the war that have become pic museum classics. This is their first project in some time . . . Eddie Constantine, the Yank who became a film star here in parody on private eye and G-Man pix, is a grandfather at 46 . . . Henri Decoin prepping a pic on Hitler . . . Orson Welles into Raoul Levy's "L'Echiquier De Dieu" (God's Chessboard) is producing in Yugoslavia. This is his old "Marco Polo" pic with a new title. It is finally on the road again after being bogged down for over two years . . . Jean-Pierre Melville claims he will give up directing pix after his next three chores and concentrate on writing. He just thinks that films have gradually lost their public pull and he wants to turn to other things.

Rome

Shirley MacLaine in town for chats with local film folk anent future productions, then flew to Japan . . . Virna Lisi poured for press before heading for Coast and role in "How to Murder Your Wife" opposite Jack Lemmon . . . John Houston suggested Maria Callas in the (non-singing) role of Sarah for his upcoming Dino de Laurentiis pic, "The Bible," over a RAI-TV program . . . "Charade" (U) made plenty of headlines here when a spectator seeing pic at New Year's eve show was robbed at 12:30 a.m., making it first theft of New Year . . . Technicolor labs here on strike.

Dino DeLaurentiis hosted press at newly opened Pontina studios to present John Huston and discuss locations and other pre-production details after their joint trip to Yugoslavia; almost entire DeLaurentiis production-distrib operation has moved out to producer's mammoth new hq south of Rome . . . Franz de Biase, current Director General of Entertainment, named Chief of Cabinet to new Entertainment Minister Corona.

Some 165 features (Italian and coproductions in which Italy has a majority investment) were made here during 1963, as against 175 for previous year; 43 other features, with Italy as minority partner, were made abroad in same period (vs. 51 in 1962); total of films expressly made for youthful audiences totaled 14 in 1963, vs. 13 in 1962.

Abbe Lane, sez local report, has sued producer Giuseppe Amato for damages, claiming producer failed to meet commitment for $7,500, later upped to $25,600, for pic to me made in 1954.

Tokyo

Columbia's Japan billings climbed over 1,000,000 yen ($2,778,000) for the first time in calendar 1963. The figure will likely put the company in third place, behind UA and 20th-Fox, in Japan receipts for the year . . . Akira Kurosawa launched his latest production "Aka-Hige". (Red Beard) on a especially built $55,000 hospital set near Toho Studios. Film, which stars Toshiro Mifune, involves a devoted doctor who cared for the luckless of Tokyo's slums in the last century . . . Scala-za, one of Tokyo's choice theatres, will be converted to a 70m house in March with equipment moved from Imperial Theatre, which shutters at end of January. First big-screen entry at Scala-za will be "La Tulipe Noire," starring Alain Delon, a hot fave here . . . Yank film offices in Japan will be plagued anew with union problems come spring. The recently-formed National Foreign Film Labor Union has lined up a list of increased demands for March . . . Of 369 Japanese features and 271 foreign features screen by the self-censorship EIRIN in 1963, 37 domestic pictures and 25 imports were designated For Adults Only . . . Shochiku's recently restored president Shiro Kido will take over the filmery's production with managing director Masao Shirai in charge of sales . . . Usual post-New Year holiday season sluggish biz has set in . . . Japan Producers Assn. named Shochiku's "Ktoto" (Twin Sisters) as Japan's Academy Award entry this year . . . Toho and Daiei expected to open theatres in Honolulu this year . . . On strength of "Cleopatra" and "55 Days at Peking," 20th-Fox and Allied Artists topped U.S. company Japan earnings for December. Next in line were Columbia, Warner Bros., RKO (including Disney), United Artists, MGM, Universal and Paramount.

Check of '63 Festival Winners Shows Fest Exposure Helped Films' B.O.

Paris, Jan. 21.

Now that the film festival season is nearing, the usual film circle talk has started about whether a fest can help a picture's actual boxoffice or just its so-called arty prestige. A check on last year's fest winners and participants at the two leading festivals, Cannes and Venice, indicates that prize pix can do biz, and that fest exposure is helping those getting no kudos.

Using the firstrun Paris results as a guage, since it usually sets the overall b.o. tone, it appears that Cannes spawned six prize films and that four hit over 100,000 admissions which puts them in the hit category, while others did from good to poorly.

Italian-made "Conjugal Bed" was topper with more than 280,000 admissions followed by the Italo "Leopard." Former won the femme acting award and the latter the Grand Prize at Cannes. Alfred Hitchcock's "The Birds" (U), which kicked off the fest pix out of competition, also scored as well as the non-competing "8½." Also in the running, but no prize winner was the French commercial opus, "Carambolages" (Carom Shot).

The specially-prized Russo pic, "The Optimistic Tragedy," just about got into this group while the Yank "To Kill a Mockingbird" (U) and the British "This Sporting Life," though getting awards, did not fare too well. An offbeater like "The Depths," a French pic, did well for a film of this kind and the Japanese "Hara Kiri," with 98,914 entries, also was helped by its Cannes prize.

At Venice, a non-competer, the French "Sweet and Sour," got good press and did solid biz here as did "Hud" (Par), with no prize as did the kudosed French pic, "Le Feu Follet" (Will-O'-The-Wisp). "Tom Jones" (UA) has started out big here. It won a thesp prize for Albert Finney. Others have not done as well but okay for more specialized pix via the French "Muriel" and the Italo grand prize-winner, "The Hand on the City."

It appears that prizes can help offbeaters and perhaps give an extra nudge to an already commercially-slanted pic as well as sometimes help non-prize winners by the big press coverage. This past year's figures give a good average to fest film boxoffice potential.

Final Round of Negotiations For Outright British Lion Films Sale Begun; 8 Offers Being Considered

London, Jan. 21.

Final round of negotiations for the outright sale of British Lion Films to private investors started yesterday at the Soho Square offices of the National Film Finance Corp. Interviews with all bidders will be carried on during the next week or two, and a final decision is expected within a few weeks. That will be in accord with the declaration by the Minister for Industry, Edward Heath, who told the House of Commons that it was essential that the negotiations be brought to a rapid conclusion if the business of the company was not to be seriously damaged.

The Ministerial decision favoring outright sale, and turning down all representations in favor of government retention of a substantial interest in the company, has been attacked on a widespread industry and political scale. Heath's statement to the House shocked trade and Parliamentary opinion, as it was generally believed that he had been receptive to representations favoring a continuance of public ownership of the company.

All told, there are reported to be eight offers under consideration for the purchase of British Lion. There will be no competitive bidding so far as price is concerned, as the government has decided that it will be offered at a valuation of $4,450,000, and that includes all the assets but excludes past tax losses. Among the assets, apart from a valuable backlog of pictures, are Shepperton studios, a holding in British Telemeter Ltd. (one of the companies awarded a pay tv franchise) and a 50% investment in Regal Films International.

Sydney Box 1st Among Bidders

First in the field among the bidders was a group headed by Sydney Box, and the industry viewpoint is that he is a staunch favorite. But he must face substantial opposition, particularly from an imposing group allied with Sir Michael Balcon. There is, however, some element of doubt about the status of the Balcon bid, in view of the governmental sellout policy. Balcon and his associates had made continued NFFC participation a condition of the offer, but there is a feeling that a compromise formula may be agreed in view of the latest developments.

Another major bid, from Leslie Grade, will also merit serious consideration. Through his Elstree Film Distributors, Grade is a comparative newcomer to the British film scene, but one with a remarkable track record of five hits out of five, with a potential sixth winner now in preparation. His film successes include two Cliff Richard musicals plus "Sparrows Can't Sing" and 'The Servant." Grade advised the NFFC last week that he would be happier with continued government participation, but did not make that a condition of continued negotiations.

Sam Spiegel Group in Race

Other offers have come from a group headed by Sam Spiegel, which is believed to include David Lean: from Douglas Collins, a former chairman of the company who has undertaken to serve without payment for a year; and from a property developer named Ronald Lyon, who has submitted a proposal for the redevelopment of the Shepperton studios.

The names of other independent filmmakers have been reported as possible bidders, among them Bryan Forbes and Richard Attenborough, but no confirmation has been forthcoming. The NFFC admits to having received a total of eight offers, but has declined to disclose the names of those not publicly released.

Despite the ministerial assurance that British Lion would continue as a third force to sustain independent production, there is a growing belief that without actual government backing, it will be virtually impossible for any newcomer to withstand the pressures of the two major companies.

This was one of the points forcibly brought out in the House of Commons, and a request for an assurance that offers would not be considered from people associated with either Rank or ABC was rejected by the Minister.

Dublin Firstrun Biz OK, Nabes Hit

By MAXWELL SWEENEY

Dublin, Jan. 21.

Firstrun film biz in Dublin held up well throughout the year and most provincial spots reported reasonable trade. Worst hit were Dublin nabe houses and several introduced Bingo and others week-end vaude shows. Kinematograph Renters Society has opposed leasing houses for Bingo sessions, but permits it when owner can show loss or hardship.

Three of Rank Organisation's Dublin nabe houses came in this category, but rental from Irish language organisation for Bingo sessions has improved position. Overall drop in business in Ireland is put at around 11%.

Labour troubles again hit Ardmore Studios and production halted in the summer. Later in the year the state-sponsored Industrial Credit Corporation, which made substantial cash advance for studio building, appointed a Receiver for the company. Principal labour difficulties arose over objections by some Irish unions to the number of English technicians brought in by production companies. Dublin was asked to take-over the studios but declined on the grounds that the take-over would not solve the difficulties.

Major prizes at the Cork International Film Festival again went to Iron Curtain countries, partly due to thin support from American and British industries. Italy has also dropped its interest. Number of stars at 1963 event was down and Fest's value as direct tourist gimmick is now doubtful. It is bringing in documentary makers but failure to achieve status to award prizes for feature films has been handicap. Gimmick to extend interest was special competition for tv commercials, this is to be continued in 1964.

Censorship continues to be a headache to renters and exhibitors, and the public is expressing resentment at number of pictures which are being imported belatedly into Republic after extensive cuts which sometimes make nonsense of the picture.

Trade is facing new wage hike demands from staffs and although entertainment tax was removed just over a year ago exhibitors and renters now have to pay a 2-1/2% turnover tax on all business in additional to normal taxation. Despite claim for higher pay unions have observed red light for cinemas and have offered to co-operate with exhibs on an all-industry campaign to attract patrons back to the cinema once current negotiations are over.

Efforts to introduce a pledge similar to the Legion of Decency pledge on cinema-going were made during the year but quietly dropped without headway being made. A head-on clash between a newspaper and cinemas in Clonmel over publication of ratings by National Film Institute resulted in cinemas withdrawing advertising without, it was claimed, hurting biz.

Spanish Exhibs Assn. Names Rafael Mateo

Madrid, Jan. 14.

After 10 years as president of the Spanish Exhibitors Assn., Vicente Guillo lost a close vote in Sindicato exhibitor elections to 35-year old Rafael Mateo, who runs the Gran Vis Palacio de la Musica showcase here. Contest was a heated one among the 62 board members representing the industry branch throughout Spain, final vote, being 34 to 28 in favor of Mateo.

Other officers named were Pedro Balana as vice-prexy and Luis Garcia Ramos as treasurer. Balana and Garcia Ramos are among the major circuit owners in Spain.

A Big 'Day' to Swiss

Geneva, Jan. 21.

According to reports by 20th-Fox's Swiss exchange here, Darryl F. Zanuck's "Longest Day" has been seen, as of last Dec. 10, by 914,000 Swiss since its release in Oct. 1962. This represents 16.3% of Switzerland's total population of 5,600,000, making it one of the most successful pictures in Swiss film annals.

The picture's admission age having been set at 16 for the entire territory by the various autonomous censorship boards (censorship is handled on an individual canton-by-canton basis in Switzerland), it is estimated that one out of five Swiss adults has seen the war epic so far, considered remarkable by local standards.

'Charade,' 'Texas' Cop Italo Honors

Rome, Jan. 14.

Three Christmas releases, two of them Yank-made, are running away with yearend holiday honors at Italian key city boxoffices. Vying for top position among latest releases are: "Charade" (U), "Four for Texas" (WB) and Carlo Ponti Italo-made "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," which gets an Embassy release in the U.S.

While local sources report "Yesterday" as topping the $1,000,000-mark in its first two weeks in several Italo keys, "Four" hit over $345,000 and is continuing in its major city run, with hinterlands not reported as yet. "Charade" is also potent at some $80,000 for two Milan weeks and $72,000 for a similar period in Rome.

In addition, "Texas" hit one of top three figures for all time on Christmas day in Milan, with an over $10,000 gross (other toppers were "How West Was Won" and Italo-made, "Il Vigile").

Recent figures also gave Universal a lead in the local distrib race, topping Metro, Columbia (CEIAD), Dear-UA and Paramount in that order.

Brit. Pix Lab Workers Achieve 40-Hour Week

London, Jan. 21.

The final stage has now been reached in the campaign by the Assn. of Cinematograph, Television and Allied Technicians for a 40-hour week in commercial tele and film labs. This has been accomplished by a gradual reduction in hours worked over a period of years.

The 40-hour week in labs took effect the first week of 1964 or 11 months after its introduction in commercial tv.

Firstrun B.O. Spurt in Paris, Other Key Cities of France Gives Hope To French Exhibs of Brighter Biz

Paris, Jan. 21.

The recent holidays saw a big boxoffice spurt for firstruns here as well as in many key cities. A flock of U.S. and French pix shot over the 100,000 admissions category in the space of two weeks, which is unusual at these top Paris deluxers. It bodes some optimism here even if some film people still are not clear of the usual crisis.

Taxes are still too high and flimgoing generally low despite the sock holiday showings. Foreign income also is rated too low. Rising picture costs are a hindrance, too. But, it is felt, if the recent gains can go on, and a modus vivendi is reached as regards tele, pictures yet may eventually find that elusive even economic keel that has eluded them since the war.

Also a plus is the continuance of 14% rebates on grosses towards next films through government Film Aid in spite of Common Mart attempts to have them cut annually for a future ECM common aid coffer. And there is a subsidy setup for worthy pix which consists of a big handout before production or after the film is finished. It is examined, or the script is read, by a special governmental commission.

How Film Aid Helps

If they feel the film is a prestige item, or one of commercial value, it gets a substantial amount of coin. Money is paid back if the film is a hit, or written off, if a failure. And distribs put up a goodly share of a film's outlay and coproduction hypoing helps allay costs.

So, at least, French pix often finally get some sort of release under this method of aid and distribution. Recent joining of companies is not leading to monopoly but a tightening up of distrib outlets. And a government distribution-production-exhib outfit, UGC, is mainly a non-profit organization with any deficit made up by the government.

Several French comedies were the main beneficiaries of bigger takes via a Fernandel opus "Cooking with Butter"; "Bebert and the Train," a moppet comedy; and a gangster parody, "The Gentle Gunmen." Yank hits were also in the comedy vein, "Charade" (U) and "It's a Mad World" (UA) being standout grossers.

Such things as proper first parts of the program, better seating and technical renovations of houses are being discussed to take advantage of the recent influx of filmgoers. It is thought that films could keep from feeling the tele bite too strongly by setting its house in order now and capitalize on the seeming revival of public interest in pix.

Britain's Disney Execs To H'wood for Confabs

London, Jan. 21.

Cyril Edgar and Arthur Alligan, managing director and publicity topper for the Disney organization in Britain, leave tomorrow (Wed.) for the Disney studios in Burbank to attend a special rough-cut screening of "Mary Poppins," starring Julie Andrews, Dick Van Dyke and David Tomlinson.

During their stay on the Coast, they will confer with Roy Disney, Card Walker and Ned Clarke on the promotion campaign for the picture and on other subjects scheduled for 1964 release.

Lieberson Joins Grade in London

Rome, Jan. 14.

In a move designed to more closely bind a group of leading European talentries, Sanford Lieberson moved to London Jan. 15 from his current headquarters here to join the Grade Organization and London Management in an executive capacity. Lieberson for the last two years has been with Kaufman-Lerner Associates here, having previously served on Coast with William Morris and the Jaffe Agency. In London, he will be jointly employed by Grade, London Management and Kaufman-Lerner.

According to Kaufman, appointment fits the policy of closer integration of the European association of agencies, which in addition to Kaufman-Lerner, Grade and London Management, also include London Artists and Olga Horstig-Primuz of Paris.

"It is the consensus of opinion that such a move will not only be advantageous in progressive agenting suitable to changing conditions in the film and tele industries, but also will give stronger impetus and added cohesiveness to our association with Ashley-Steiner-Famous Artists organization in the United States," Kaufman said.

Lieberson will spend time not only in London but also Paris, Munich and Berlin. Prior to taking up his London post, Lieberson spends two months in New York and Hollywood meeting with Ashley-Steiner toppers and company clients.

Bankrupt Universum Film, UFA Unit, At Last Bought by German Publisher

Duesseldorf, Jan. 14.

The bankrupt Universum Film AG, popularly called UFA, which declared bankruptcy in 1962, has been bought up finally by the German publishing firm of Bertelsmann. For a price of $2,600,000, the publishers have enriched their ownings by about 1,400 old UFA films, most of which will be sold to television in West Germany and other countries. There are absolutely no plans to revive the company's once widely known film productions. With the acquisition, publisher Reinhard Mohn, who controls Bertelsmann, has added a 25th property to his holdings of publishing firms and television corporations.

Only UFA properties remaining of the monopolistic holding that at one time controlled the German theatre industry are four subsid firms—UFA International Corp. of Munich, UFA Sound Recording Corp. of Berlin and Munich, Boheme Publishers of Vienna, German Weekly Newsreel Corp. of Hamburg—and the independently functioning UFA Commercial Film, Television Production and Distribution.

Studios, reproduction and synchronization departments of the Universum Film of Berlin will be taken over by Bertelsmann. It's expected that Dr. Hermann Schwerin and Hello Weber will continue with the management of the Berlin Universalfilm Studios. The UFA theatre chain remains as an independent group functioning entirely outside of this new sellout.

End of UFA Empire?

This just about winds up the UFA empire, that started in 1917 when German General Erich Ludendorff decided to found a film company that would re-do the anti-German hate image engendered by the first World War. With co-financing by the German Reich, which put up a third of the capital, UFA got its start.

In 1926, MGM and Paramount had to help UFA keep going with $4,000,000. Hence, in the next seven years, UFA made some of the films, Marlene Dietrich's "Blue Angel" and Fritz Lang's "Metropolis," that brought it international fame.

When Josef Goebbels took over in 1933, he changed UFA into a hate-mongering propaganda instrument of the Nazis that broke down only in 1944. In helping revive the German film industry, the Allies helped restore UFA in 1956 as the Universum Film Corp. and the Ufa Theatre Corp. The latter is still going, but the former, under Arno Hauke, went broke in 1962.

More Exec Shifts By Yanks in Japan

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Paramount's Japan manager Shozaburo Sasho resigned, bringing about still another recent change in exec posts here with the U. S. majors. No replacement named. Effective Jan. 1, Geza Polaty became 20th-Fox's Far East supervisor. He had been Japan manager for United Artists for five years until last spring, when he quit and was replaced by Ed Kerner from that company's Buenos Aires office. Paul Mizukami remains as Japan manager for 20th-Fox.

Several months ago, Henry Ronge, formerly Warner Bros. manager for Germany, was named MGM manager in Japan. Also resigning in recently was Universal Far East supervisor Alvin I. Cassel. No replacement yet named.

West Germany's Second TV Net Seen Folding; May Be Absorbed By First Web's Nine Stations

By HAZEL GUILD

Frankfurt, Jan. 21.

West Germany's new and impoverished Second Television Net may be completely out of business in a few months, and absorbed by the nine stations that make up the First Television Net.

This surprising report has been issued by one of West Germany's best-informed trade papers, the Film Telegramm, and seems to be backed up by interviews with two of the general managers of the stations now in the First Net.

Film Telegramm reports that the West German federal government is troubled by the mounting debts of the Second Net—now estimated at about $17,500,000 and soon to be increased by about $60,000,000 if the station manages to borrow the money to build its own studios and headquarters in Mainz.

So, reports the trade paper, there are plans that the First Television Net will absorb Mainz and make it a part of its own forthcoming Second Programs. West Germany would then be divided into four regional television outlets, which would function together for the First Channel and separate for regional Second Channels.

This would mean that one-third of the monthly income (raised from the nation's 8,500,000 tv set owners who now pay $1.25 each monthly for viewing the shows) would no longer have to go to help finance the Mainz headquarters of the Second Net, that German taxpayers would no longer be worried about shouldering the growing debts of the Second Net, and that the four proposed Second Programs could be free of commercials.

This latter would be a blow to the nation's advertisers and ad agencies, since the First Net is now overbooked by as much as 300% at the pre-Christmas season, with very limited time for commercials.

The proposed four regional programs would be done partly by

(Continued on page 60)

Fewer USIA Jobs In LBJ's Budget

Washington, Jan. 21.

President Johnson's "tight" new budget cuts the U.S. information agency almost $3,000,000 below the amount President Kennedy requested a year ago, but the figure is almost $10,000,000 above what Congress finally appropriated to USIA in 1963.

The Johnson budget also eliminates 66 USIA jobs, dropping the total from 10,945 to 10,879.

President Johnson requested $143,800,000 for USIA. This compares with the $146,550,000 President Kennedy wanted a year ago and the $133,882,000 which Congress allowed the agency.

Johnson asked $28,315,000 for broadcast service, $5,894,000 for television service, $9,087 for motion picture service and $1,000,000 for the media guarantee fund (which guarantees soft currencies earned by U.S. motion pictures abroad).

'Destry,' 'Sunset Strip' Attract ABC-TV Coin

Via new sales and switches of previously committed coin, ABC-TV is filling up its third quarter replacement programming with bankrollers. Already signed for "Destry," which goes in Fridays at 7:30 p.m. in place of "77 Sunset Strip," are R. J. Reynolds, Armour, Mobil, Colgate, Warner-Lambert, Thomas Leeming, Chese-brough-Pond, True Temper, Bolck Drug, Schlitz, Sherwin-Williams, Norelco and Sunbeam.

Sponsors for the repeats of "77 Sunset Strip," which replaces "Channing" Wednesday at 10 p.m., including Corning Glass, Armour, DuPont, Sunbeam, Miles Labs and Norelco. "Ensign O'Toole" repeats on Thursday nights have been bought by Miller Beer, Remington Rand, Norelco and Sunbeam.

MARCH 26 AIRING ON NBC-PHILCO TUSSLE

Washington, Jan. 21.

FCC set oral arguments for March 26, in the NBC-Philco tussle for Philadelphia's channel 3.

NBC, Philco and RKO General Inc. will be given 30 minutes each to present their cases. Philco had requested 50 minutes per party.

The hassle is in the full Commission's lap following the recommendation of Chief Hearing Examiner James Cunningham to renew NBC's license for WRCV in Philadelphia and allowing the web to trade the station for RKO's WNAC in Boston.

NBC is under a Justice Dept. consent decree order to jettison its Philadelphia outlet.

Commissioners Kenneth Cox and Lee Loevinger are not participating in the case. Cox was involved in arguments when he was Broadcast Bureau chief, Loevinger, as Asst. Atty. Gen. for Anti-trust initiated the NBC action.

Monte Carlo Fest Opens; 24 Vidpix Entries From U.S.

Monte-Carlo, Jan. 21.

The fourth International Monte-Carlo Television Festival started Sun. (19) with its closed circuit series of viewings to last till Feb. 1. Twenty two nations are taking part with 98 films. The U.S. has 24 vidpix alone.

Participants are as follows: U. S. with 24 entries, USSR with four, West Germany seven, Great Britain six, Argentina one, Australia one, Austria two, Belgium four, Canada three, Spain one France 10, Kowelt one, Luxembourg one, Holland three, Poland three, UAR one, Rumania two, Switzerland two, Czechoslavakia seven and Yugoslavia seven.

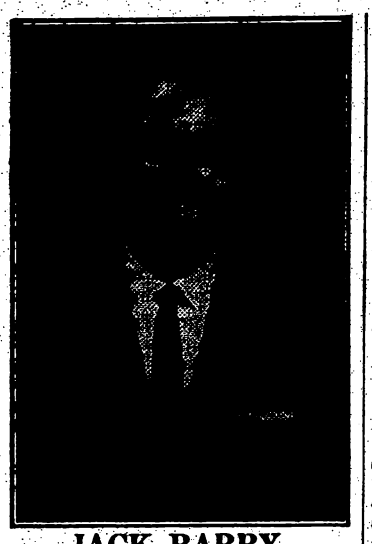
Jury has among its members Marcel Achard and Marcel Pagnol, actress Jessie Royce Landis and actor Gino Cervi. A big tv and press turnout is coming into the principality as the fest gets underway.

Wolper's Oscar 2-Parter

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

A two-parter, tentatively called "The Oscar Story," is being prepared by David L. Wolper Productions for its "Hollywood and the Stars" series on NBC-TV.

Documentary will examine history of the industry's 35-year-old Academy Awards, feature scenes from Oscar-winning pix, and review songs and music which garnered Oscars.



JACK BARRY

Now producing five pilots for CBS-TV—Paramount TV Production Development program

Alberto-Culver's Not-So-Hot '63 On Prime Time Picks

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Alberto-Culver, that big television spender from the midwest which has displayed a remarkable talent for picking 'em in the past, is having one of its rougher years at the prime time track.

Of seven series that it backed at the outset of the season, three clearly failed to score that all important 30-share, two stack up as borderline cases and two made it, although not resoundingly. Only "The Virginian," with a 36.40 share the last two weeks of December (according to Nielsen) placed in the top 20 and even then in the back of the pack. The other good investment was "Dr. Kildare," which registered shares of 34 and 35 for the two December weeks. The two shows constitute Alberto-Culver's main outlay at NBC-TV this season.

Most of the sponsor's prime time business went to ABC-TV, and there was a fast loser in "100 Grand" and another in "Jamie McPheeters," the latter showing only 17-20 shares in the last Nielsen. "Breaking Point," another Alberto-Culver entry, didn't fare much better with weekly shares of 23 and 26. And finally two shows worked both sides of the "magic 30" line—"Ben Casey" with shares of 29 and 32 and "Greatest Show On Earth" with 27 and 32 for the last two weeks of '63.

Daytime is a different story, with Alberto-Culver knee deep in CBS fare, having made at least alternate week quarter hour buys in "As the World Turns," "Edge of Night," "House Party," "Password," "Love of Life," "Secret Storm" and "To Tell the Truth," winners all. The firm, for some reason, backed out of one CBS-TV nighttime entry after the season's start. That was "Gunsmoke" which, had the sponsor stayed, would have been its top point-maker this year.

With $30-40,000,000 worth of billings at stake, Alberto-Culver will be more cagey in the future.

Covering Olympics an Olympic Feat

ABC-TV's coverage of the Winter Olympics from a mountainous site around Innsbruck, Austria, starting Jan. 29, will represent the toughest logistical challenge the web has ever faced. Over 40 camera sites have been spread over the 25-mile Alpine area with the intention of getting the tapes transmitted or jetted to the U.S. for same-day telecasting. The web is devoting one-hour of prime-time each night to the Olympics plus a total of four weekend hours during the two-week run.

A key factor in the web's Winter Olympics coverage will be the radically designed new portable tv camera developed jointly by ABC engineers and Sylvania. Lightweight system, weighing around 25 pounds, is a completely self-powered camera, audio and transmitter. The camera's first test will be on the Innsbruck slopes where ABC pickups will be fed over short distances to central stations. From there, feeds will be made to satellites, if in operation, or by telephone line to Paris for jet transport to New York. ABC-TV's outlay for the production setup will top $500,000.

Roone Arledge, ABC exec producer for sports, left for Innsbruck yesterday (Tues.) to command the force of 100 staffers assigned to cover the Olympics. Arledge pointed out that CBS-TV did a firstrate job on the Winter Olympics four years ago, but that was from Squaw Valley in the U.S. where the technical problems were not as complex as in a European pickup. In addition, Arledge said that heavy programming of winter sports on tv since that time has made the viewing audience far more sophisticated in its expectations.

ABC is cooperating with Eurovision in the Winter Olympics, dividing up the camera sites for better coverage. However, this cooperation introduces a complicating element of differing line systems between U.S. and European television.

Herridge On Drama: 'It's Not Budget But Finding Out TV's Own Styles'

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Robert Herridge, veteran writer-director-producer noted for his readiness to take a creative chance instead of playing it safe, is afraid that the current universal switch to film will put tv drama into a straitjacket.

"Film is great for its ability to capture literal reality," Herridge said, "but it cannot explore the full range of dramatic possibilities. We want to go to the ends of the spectrum, from the naturalistic to the poetic and for that television needs a balance between film and live."

Herridge, currently turning out six one-hour live-on-tape dramas for Metropolitan Broadcasting Co., said that film also represented a serious danger for the performers. "Film tends to free an actor's style. Once he's keyed to the stop-and-go technique of filmmaking, an actor finds it more and more difficult to give the sustained performance demanded on the stage."

Herridge's six for Metropolitan, the first of which bows on WNEW-TV, N. Y., Jan. 26, are an experiment in the production of tv drama under group auspices. The budgets are not of network dimensions, but Herridge is getting enough to test and explore some of his theories about television as a distinctive art form.

"The crucial thing is not the budget, but the possibility of working with important, vital themes for out times," he said. The opening hour show by Herridge will be the story of John Brown. The next one will be "The Night and Morning World of Walt Whitman" and third will be "The Sensualists," based on a Dostoevsky theme.

Herridge will be using an ensemble of actors for all of the shows, creating in effect a television repertory group. The scripts by Herridge will combine dramatic and narrative techniques in a form which he believes is uniquely suitable for the demands of the tv screen. Each show will be taped as a continuous performance to achieve the intensity and penetration of a live performance.

"The important thing," Herridge said, "is for television to find its own style, one that neither stems from Hollywood film or the Broadway stage." Herridge said that one of the most important recent contributions in this direction has been made by John Secondari, chief of ABC-TV's special projects division who is producting "The Saga of Western Man." Herridge kudosed Secondari for "creating a form that can deal with large material."

CRONKITE SET FOR D.C. ORIGINATIONS

In this Presidential election year of '64, Walter Cronkite will originate a number of his evening half-hour news programs from Washington.

Plan is to have a Washington origination for Cronkite two consecutive days every third or fourth week. First such Washington dates for Cronkite are Feb. 5 and 6. While in the capital, Cronkite will interview key politicos, as he did Sen. Goldwater, without having to worry about the logistics of flying back to N. Y. The Washington stint also will enable Cronkite to renew contacts associated with party conventions. Cronkite will be the anchorman for CBS-TV for the conventions, as well as the elections.

Studio on the CBS floor of Broadcast House of WTOP, Washington, is being readied for the upcoming evening news stints. Studio will be remodeled to resemble the newsroom setup of Cronkite's broadcast in N. Y.

Joe Levine Yens Place In TV Sun (Specs & Series)

With one deal completed and others in the works, Joseph E. Levine said last week that he has big plans for television. The Embassy Pictures prez noted that he is presently in negotiations with a variety of tv projects, series and one-shot specs included.

His completed deal is with ABC-TV for the airing in 1965 of a one-hour color series called "Hercules," to be filmed in Italy in partnership with Carlo Ponti this year. Also in partnership with Ponti, Levine has series based on the lives of Casanova and D'Artagnan planned, these to be made after "Hercules" is completed.

Levine said that he is on the verge of another network deal for another series. This series, he said, is not among the Ponti partnerships and will be made entirely by Embassy. He asserted that all three webs have been talking with him at length since he first projected his intention to enter the tv production field.

Just what the other series and specials he has in mind are Levine wouldn't reveal but he did affirm his plan to enter tv in a big and permanent way both via the Ponti series and others which will be solely created and produced by Embassy, as well as the specials.

Embassy already has a syndication operation working, under the directorship of v.p. E. Jonny Graff, which is peddling an array of 30 features to the medium. This syndication arm will likely see considerable action in time to come handling tv series after they have finished their web runs. Also a possibility will be shows produced for syndication, although Levine's thinking at present is geared specifically along network lines.

HAL ROACH JR. TO 7 ARTS IN EXEC SLOT

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Hal Roach Jr., one of the tv film industry's pioneers, has joined Seven Arts as a general exec in tv, and exec producer of upcoming teleshows, in a stepped up drive by Seven Arts in the vidpix area.

Roach is currently developing a number of 60-min. and 90-min. projects for Seven Arts.

The exec started in tv film in 1949, and during the time he produced and supervised series at the Hal Roach Studios, turned out over 1,000 half-hour telefilms. His 1949 series, "Trouble With Father," starring Stu Erwin and his wife, was the second network vidfilm series.

Four Star Posting 3-Show Parlay

It looks like a three-show, three-hour parlay for Four Star Productions on the '64-'65 tv programming sked in the now upped fortunes of Tom McDermott & Co. (in contrast to the solo status of "Burke's Law" this season).

"Burke," a winner in the current ABC-TV sweepstakes, will be back for another season's cycle. Then there's the Gig Young-David Niven-Charles Boyer "Rogues," which has already been pledged sponsor support at the new Sunday at 10 attraction for NBC as successor to DuPont.

And now that both J. Walter Thompson and SSC&B have asked ABC for firm sponsor commitments on the "Royal Bay" hour entry, that one looks headed for a Wednesday night slotting (possibly 9:30 to 10:30, with "Ben Casey" moving up to 8:30).

NBC's $3,500,000 Current Season Sales

NBC-TV last week racked up sales of close to $3,500,000 on the current nighttime schedule.

With all sales involving scatter buys, Procter & Gamble and S. C. Johnson accounted for close to $2,500,000, while Dodge, Polaroid, Vicks and Warner-Lambert came in for another $1,000,000.

PALEY'S POUCH—MONEY, THAT IS

Huntley-Brinkley Ciggie Dilemma

Any effort to curb cigaret advertising before 9 p.m., on the grounds that that's when the kids are watching, will meet with strong resistance from NBC. For the simple reason that there's some $6,500,000 in R. J. Reynolds revenues at stake in the ciggie company's sponsorship of the Huntley-Brinkley news half-hour. The matter is scheduled for resolution when the NAB Board meets in Florida next week to act on the findings of the NAB Code Committee.

For one thing, NBC takes the position that the Huntley-Brinkley cross-the-board news show is not designed to attract the kids; that it's major appeal is for adults, so why penalize a program because it falls within any Code time limit specified?

(While the competing CBS Walter Cronkite news program has some ciggie advertising, it's of minor consequence compared to the major NBC stake).

How Candid Can You Get? Funt Admits New 'Camera' Show a Dud

By BILL GREELEY

With candor rare for show biz (including the producer of "Candid Camera"), Allen Funt declares his new CBS-TV show, "Tell It to the Camera," a bomb.

Such talk has got to be considered subversive in an industry where dead dogs are whipped with enthusiasm. Allen's dog isn't even dead. "Tell It to the Camera" premiered in the new year and has about 20 episodes firm to go.

"I didn't have the insight," says Funt with shock force, while copping the minor plea that three months from order to air didn't allow much time for experimentation. The period of trial and error, he says, is torturous, but at least "we don't have to worry over night."

In the light of his own confession, Funt says the show is getting a new format. The beginnings of major changes can be viewed tonight (22) in the "rough timeslot" of CBS, 8:30 p.m. ("We wanted a quiet timeslot, one in which we couldn't go lower").

Funt says he hasn't seen a national rating yet on "Tell It to the Camera," but he's not waiting. While he didn't derive much of the collective comments of critics (they ranged from personal insults and severe wraps to high praise), he has come up with a consensus from the snipers. The comments that the show was another form of making folks look ridiculous, that the questions were assinine and the use of people not adequate seemed to predominate. Funt says "our own analysis" when puting the show together was that we wanted to do a comedy show, a real-life Allen's (Fred) Alley. While on "Candid Camera" it was always a high concern that people not be made to look ridiculous. Now its apparent, he says, that they will have to be extra censorous on "Tell It," even though subjects are aware of camera exposure. And the enormous new challenge is that the show must capture "Candid's" spontaneity despite awareness—"awareness and spontaneity," he calls it.

"From now on," says Funt, "we are going to give the camera a personality; make it a talking, moving, living thing." In a beauty parlor, for instance, the camera will be in the position of the beautician, up over the victim. The camera will likewise be a waiter, or

(Continued on page 62)

210 Minutes of Woolfolk

William Woolfolk's prime nighttime exposure within one week from Saturday (25), of three and one-half hours of his writings, may be something of a tv record.

This weekend's "Who'll Dig His Grave?" ("The Defenders") is about a Maxwell Bodenheim Greenwich Village-type of poet-derelict; on Sunday (26) Woolfoolk's "Arrest and Trial" 90-minute segment is titled "Echo of Conscience," and the ensuing Saturday (Feb. 1) is another "Defenders," rounding out the 210 minutes.

Bing Crosby Has Situation Comedy Yen For '64-'65

Add Bing Crosby to the list of top performers now anxiouos to enter the weekly tv sweepstakes (as Judy Garland and Danny Kaye did this season). Specifically, Crosby, who has been confining himself to occasional tv specials, wants to do a half-hour situation comedy series. Since he would like to enter the '64-'65 program race, huddles have already been initiated and possible formats discussed.

Also look for a Lever Bros. sponsorship, since the food company, jointly with Pontiac, has been underwriting the Crosby specials. And since Lever has a heavy budget commitment going with CBS for next season, expectations are that that network will get first crack at the series.

'Profiles in Courage' Gets Sun. at 6 Slot

Couldn't exactly be called "blueprint in courage," but NBC-TV has firmed a timeslot for "Profiles in Courage," Robert Saudek's half-hour telementary series based on the late President Kennedy's book.

The biographies of brave Americans will go in the new schedule next fall at 6 p.m. Sundays. Although safely out of prime nighttime, "Courage" will have to show some muscle, anyway, in a minor-league contest with CBS-TV's telementary, "20th Century" if the Prudential-bankrolled show continues in its longtime 6. p.m. time, that is.

More 'WT' Repeats

Now that the American League Football season is over, ABC-TV will again be unreeling repeats of "Wagon Train" on Sunday afternoons at 5 p.m. Series, titled "Trailmaster," is in addition to the five-times-a-week daytime reruns of "Wagon Train" and the regular 90-minute primetime show on Monday nights.

Bankrolling the Sunday outings, starting Sunday (26) are Lehn & Fink, Mentholatum, Norwich Pharmacal, Squibb Drug, and Waterman-Bic Pens.

NBC-TV's 900G For Orange Bowl

NBC-TV has negotiated a three-year contract for exclusive radio and tv rights to the annual Orange Bowl football game and attendant events, which for the last three years have been on ABC-TV. NBC reportedly paid $900,000 for the rights ($300,000 a year).

For the first time in 30 years, the Orange Bowl New Year's Day game will be played at night, giving the network a spread of three bowl games through the day (Rose Bowl and Sugar Bowl).

NBC sports director Carl Lindemann Jr. says the pact covers the Orange Festival events, including parades, the marine regatta and basketball and tennis tournaments.

CBS' 'PAY NOW AND PICK LATER'

By GEORGE ROSEN

CBS, which has dominated the Nielsen ratings both this season and last has just scored the biggest money coup in the history of television.

Bill Paley's network evening prime time (from 8 to 10 p.m., seven nights a week) is virtually sold out for 1964-65. Only scattered CBS availabilities—such as "The Defenders" in the 20 plus Nielsen range—remain unsold.

While Jim Aubrey is still in a position to shoehorn more billings into the prime time CBS money-belt next year (as for example, the Ford-sponsored "Hazel" which still has a chance to grab the CBS 9:30 to 10 Tuesday slot), Aubrey now has in hand almost $200,000,000 in firm '64-'65 orders, enough to buy out all his prime 8 to 10 p.m. time with a few tens of millions left over to sponsor some of the 10 to 11 p.m. periods.

Such an incredible, but now accomplished, feat has no precedent.

In fact, Aubrey's sales force—led by its veteran chief Tom Dawson—has just established two major precedents:

1. The prime time virtual SRO sign was posted on Jan. 16. A few seasons ago, not even a General Foods had bought by so early a date. By that date, a long line of the nation's bluechip advertisers—the GF's, the P&G's, the Lever Bros., the Philip Morrises, the American Homes, the Brown & Williamsons, the Quaker Oats, the Johnson Waxes, et al—have already paid their almost complete sponsorship allegiance to CBS for a '64-'65 tv year which extends to Sept. 15, 1965, still 20 months in the future!

2. What is even less believable, but also true, is the fact that the approximate $200,000,000 in prime time '64-'65 billings was committed to CBS prior, repeat prior, to the selection of the CBS show. The brilliance of the Dawson salesmanship is reflected in the fact that, in many key instances, the P. & G's, etc., are firmly committed to the full year sponsorships for specific time periods and for programs which—hold your hat—"Mr. Aubrey will select." Thus P & G and General Foods, to cite one of several examples, have each bought alternate half hours of Wednesday 9 to 9:30 p.m. (immediately following "Beverly Hillbillies," which moves to 8:30) without knowing what their Aubrey-selected programs will be.

Although this particular Aubrey nod will probably go to Dick Dorso's United Artists situation comedy "Kibbee Hates Fitch," which CBS insiders who've seen it believe has "explosive" top Nielsen potential, no one (outside of the CBS high command), including the already committed advertisers, will know until Aubrey announces his schedule next Monday (27). On that date, Dawson and his sales force will get the word for transmission to the anxiously awaiting advertisers and agency fraternity, not to mention CBS' competitors, who are understandably thoroughly discombulated by Aubrey's unorthodox, but 100% successful, program-sales strategy.

While rival account executives were trying to stir up anti-Aubrey sentiment by pointing out that "the one and only way to enter the CBS Nielsen promised land of prime time Paradise is to obey faithfully the new Aubrey scripture of 'commit your money now, I'll select your program later'," Dawson's desk was flooded by a near $200,000,000 deluge of orders.

Jolting as it was to the growing sponsorship band of the tv faithful, who reluctantly accepted Aubrey as "TV's St. Peter," as an agency put it, the more affluent tv advertiser believed it better to risk Aubrey's network—with the program still to be selected—than to risk being locked out. So strong

(Continued on page 58)

After 35 Years in Radio, Godfrey Still Bullish on Medium's Future

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

Arthur Godfrey, currently celebrating his 30th anni with CBS Radio and 35 years in broadcasting, feels his greatest challenge is today and tomorrow. He's reluctant to talk about his past, which, in a large measure, parallels the history of broadcasting.

"I want to put radio back to the status it deserves in the industry, in the press. Radio should take its place again as one of the media, alongside tv and other media.

"The medium (radio) has all but completely ignored the past five or six years by our business. You can't get a program listed in the press. No one is even making snide remarks about us."

He warmed up to his mission by telling personal success stories he's had with products on his show the past six months, anecdotes which underscore the "power of the medium to sell" and to reach "millions."

Godfrey chose three products, sponsors which used the Monday-through-Friday CBS Radio "Arthur Godfrey Show" exclusively, eschewing other ad outlets. He said Morton House Food Products, after using his show, increased its biz 56% at the end of six months.

Godfrey personally sells an interviewer the way he sells a product on the air. "There was the tuna fish industry, hit hard by stories appearing in the press of poisoned tuna fish cans. Business was down 30%. I had a friend, Arnholt Smith. He's Mr. San Diego and he heads the Breast O' Chicken tuna fish company. I had been through his plant once. Fascinating. I asked him how business was. Now, I make it a policy never to solicit personal friends for my program. I asked him to ride with us and he did, spending $250,000. Sixty days later, Smith informed me business of his

(Continued on page 62)

'Get Lost' Dept.

Apathy of the general public toward the cigaret cancer scare in the wake of the Surgeon General's report was revealed with telling impact in the release of the latest Nielsen 30-market report.

On the Saturday that the report was released, NBC-TV did an hour special on cigaret smoking, slotting it in the 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. period. So what happened? Its 19.6 share of audience for the first half-hour dwindled to a lowly 15.8 for the second half-hour while the competing Jackie Gleason on CBS-TV was whopping it up with a 39.8 share of audience for the first half-hour and a staggering 46.0 share for the second half.

NBC: 'Love Those Specials': Plan 60 For Next Season

With NBC-TV committed to a weekly hour variety show next season, there's a strong possibility that the nod will go to Andy Williams. Latter is currently part of the Tuesday night 10 to 11 "smorgasbord slotting" (in which Williams, Bell Telephone and Huntley-Brinkley alternate).

Henceforth, whether news or entertainment, all specials on the network will be scattered in preempted time periods. All told there will be 40 news specials (half of them are already in production) and 20 entertainment specials, including the five Danny Thomas 60-minute tintspecs. All but five of the 20, as a matter of fact, have been selected.

Unlike CBS and ABC, the Bob Kintner network has committed itself to "maximum" exposure on specials. They've been doing quite handsomely in the Top 10 Nielsens.

Peddle Baez-Seeger As Twosome Package (But Only to NBC, CBS)

Harold Leventhal Management, which handles folk singers Joan Baez and Pete Seeger, has offered the twosome as a package to NBC-TV and CBS-TV, available for either June or fall appearances.

In letters sent last week to NBC and CBS Leventhal offered the Seeger-Baez team as one that had not suffered overexposure in tv.

Seeger last spring was blacklisted by ABC-TV from appearing on "Hootenanny," the networks folk songfest. Miss Baez was the first and foremost of a number folk talents to refuse "Hoot" dates because of Seeger's listing. When the show returned this fall in hour format, ABC asked Seeger to appear on the condition he would sign a loyalty oath. He refused. Refusal came shortly after a long court battle in which the singer had been cleared of contempt of Congress charges.

Needham Retires at 75

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Maurice H. Needham, founder and chairman of Needham, Louis & Brorby ad agency, retired last weekend on his 75th birthday. He plans to devote his time to writing.

He had started the firm in 1925 under his own name and remained its president for 35 years, taking the title of chairman three years ago. NL&B ranks as one of the top 25 ad agencies in the country and billed $55,000,000 last year. Prexy Paul C. Harper Jr. is now top officer of the company.

Another 'Classic' For Mary Martin?

Now that the "Jennie" legiter has folded, Mary Martin and NBC have that "gleam" again. The network is currently in negotiation for Miss Martin to star in another "classic" (a la "Peter Pan"). There are no dates, in fact no property as yet, but the talks have been initiated.

Not that this means the demise of "Peter Pan." This has become a sturdy NBC perennial, with an "every other year" tape exposure commitment.

QUINN EXITS ABC OVER NEWS SHIFTS

Bob Quinn, exec producer for ABC News who moved over from CBS a year and half ago, has quit the network in a disagreement over recent reorganization moves in the web's news operation. It's understood that Quinn felt that he was being relegated into the background by a series of command shifts made by Elmer W. Lower, ABC News prexy.

Lower reshuffled the web's domestic news bureaus last week with the promotion of 10 staff members. Changes include the naming of Donald G. Coe to director of operations, William P. McSherry to Coast manager for tv news in an enlarged Los Angeles bureau, and Everett Aspinwall to midwest manager for tv news in Chicago.

Other promotions include Fraser Head as business manager, Jack O'Grady as assistant manager, Milt Fishman as Coast manager for radio news, Tom Casey as midwest manager for radio news, Bill Lord as Washington producer of the 11 p.m. news show, Charles Klensch and Charles Schuman as editors and Charles Frey as assistant to the director of basic news coverage.

FCC Retreats, Drops Plans To Impose Curb on B'cast Com'ls

Washington, Jan. 21.

FCC abandoned its plans to curb broadcast commercials. The vote to give up the idea of Federalizing the NAB Codes was unanimous.

Commission said "adoption of definite standards in the form of rules limiting commercial content would not be appropriate at this time."

FCC promised to "give closer attention" to commercials on a case-by-case basis. Among other devices to be relied upon for checking station commercials will be the revised tv application form now on FCC's rulemaking agenda.

Reasons cited by the Commission for its retreat were a lack of information for writing blurb curb standards and a paucity of research on the subject of commercial interruptions.

"The information required for the formulation and evaluation of specific regulatory standards is not available in adequate scope or depth," FCC said.

Commission said studies, such as the one upcoming by NAB on public acceptance of commercials, are "greatly needed." FCC added it would follow the NAB and other look-sees and "the action that results."

Until its new applications forms are out, FCC said it would direct its staff to bring to the full Commission's attention station applications showing the "greatest amount of overcommercialization."

FCC said it would also give a close look to stations which deviate in practice from their commercial promises—this an obvious reference to NAB member stations violating the Codes.

FCC said its decision not to adopt the NAB Codes as Federal regulation did not imply "we regard them as of no value or as unsound limitations."

"On the contrary," said FCC, "one of the important considerations underlying our conclusion is that there is in existence an industry-formulated code . . . which, while far from completely successful . . . does serve as one appropriate limitation, and which may be made more effective in the future."

RCA Score Today: One Out of 9 Tint

Chicago, Jan. 21.

RCA Sales Corp. prexy R. W. Saxon looks for a boom in color tv set sales immediately after the tax cut proposed by the Administration goes into effect. "It is our belief," he told the Chicago Marketing Executives Club last week, "that the average consumer has been postponing many purchases of consumer goods for some time. The formal announcement of a reduction of taxes should then have a significant and favorable psychological effect on the consumer . . . We fully expect one of the demand products to be color television."

He said the interest in tint has now reached a point where one out of every nine tv receivers sold is a color set. In 1964, he expects it to grow to one out of five, despite the fact that there is no foreseeable change in color set prices for the next few years. Saxon noted that 30% of the respondents in the latest survey stated firmly that their next set would be color, and that the percentage of consumers who are undecided about it has also increased.

He sees color tv growing into a $750,000,000 industry this year, topping the billion mark in 1965 and quadrupling that retail volume by 1968.

Aloha Station Bumps Steve Allen, Cronkite

Honolulu, Jan. 21.

KGMB-TV, the CBS affiliate here, plans to drop the Steve Allen and Walter Cronkite programs as of Feb. 3. Station spokesmen say it's a matter of low ratings.

The Allen show has started at 10 p.m. with the CBS news stanza breaking in at 11 p.m. In early-to-bed Honolulu, they're considered late hour programs.

Ralston's CBS Spread

Ralston-Purina, in a nighttime participation spread on CBS-TV, signed for minutes in "Mister Ed," "Perry Mason," "Great Adventure," "Alfred Hitchcock Hour," and "Rawhide." The Ralston-Purina spread goes through to September.

In other new biz, B. F. Goodrich signed for one-sixth sponsorship in "Rawhide" and "Hitchcock," starting in March and June, respectively. Whitehall Labs division of American Home Products signed for two-thirds sponsorship of "East Side, West Side."

'22d Century' As SG Sci-Fi Series

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Science fiction specialist Robert Heinlein has created and sold a new vidpix series, "The 22d Century," to Screen Gems, for the 1965-66 season. SG has assigned Howie Horwitz as exec producer on the project.

Present plans anent the sci-fi series call for a 90-minute series but it could be a 60-minute show. Heinlein, who also scripted the pilot, is due in Jan. 27 for confabs on the project at the telefilmery.

Deal for the sci-fi writer was negotiated by Ned Brown. Heinlein is a vet sci-fi writer, and among his pix credits is "Destination Moon."

'Ozzie & Harriet's' New 5-Year Ticket; Split Up $3,000,000

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

One of radio-tv's longest running weekly shows, "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet," tacks on another five years with the extension of its contract with ABC-TV. Over the non-cancellable period, Ozzie and Harriet Nelson and their sons, David and Rick, will split up over $3,000,000 in straight salaries. New contract calls for a minimum of 26 programs and a maximum of 35 each year.

In their 20 years on radio and tv, the Nelsons have never been without sponsorship, currently being bankrolled by American Dairy Assn. and American Gas Assn. Family show in the 12th season on ABC-TV has posted its highest ratings. New pact supersedes agreement to have expired in September.

Andrews Exiting BBC For Britain's ABC-TV

London, Jan. 21.

Longtime BBC-TV anchorman Eamonn Andrews, who in a dozen year association with the web has helmed such shows as "What's My Line?" and "This Is Your Life," among many others, is ankling the Corporation for the lusher grazing in ABC-TV pastures.

Starting in the fall Andrews will host what is loosely described as a "big entertainment show" for the weekend indie which operates in the North and Midlands. Precise details though apparently worked out, are not forthcoming for fear of a swift answer from BBC-TV.

Andrews' switcheroo, coming as a complete surprise to the industry (like Richard Dimbleby he was thought to be one of the pillars of the Corporation's network) was wrapped up fast when it came.

According to Andrews' agent Edward Summerfield (who, incidentally, is also agent to ABC-TV program controller Brian Tesler, a key figure in enticing Andrews from BBC precincts) the on-screener could see no upcoming programs on BBC which excited him following the closedown of "What's My Line?" So, inside a week, ABC-TV's pitch was made and contracts signed and sealed.

Under Andrews' deal, which lasts for three years and secures his exclusive tv services for the weekend contractor, he is allowed a four-month summer rest during which time he intends to visit the U.S. and work in radio-tv there.

Britain's 2-Set Homes

London, Jan. 21.

With the prospect of more national tv channels on the horizon, the tv receiver is rapidly becoming a status symbol once again. According to chairman of one of Britain's largest set—hire firms, Radio Rentals, the local Joneses are now lashing out for two vid receivers per home.

There is a growing tendency, he says, towards two sets per family so that individual tastes can be catered to with contrasting programs.

Mpls. Honeywell: Dream Sponsor?

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

In embarking on a television program sponsorship for the first time, Minneapolis Honeywell Manufacturing Co., while hoping for a mass audience, professes to be unconcerned what ratings will be garnered.

The 13-week "Science All Stars' program, now on the ABC network Sundays, devotes 30 minutes to youngsters who have won honors at national and regional Science Fairs. They demonstrate their complicated home-made devices and converse with name personalities in the science and educational fields.

Company executives have made it clear that they're not counting on the "mass audience" for which they hope. They say that, while their primary motive in sponsoring the program is commercial, they'll be satisfied "if this new sort of tv fare has beneficial effects in technical education and encouragement of youth and the general growth of scientific interest in America."

In the effort to build at least "an interested audience," the company has started a direct mail campaign calling attention to the program. This is directed at regular businessmen customers, science teachers and other educational leaders.

Acad Gleason Tribute: A Case of Everybody Loving Him Too Long

Jackie Gleason, at his best, sings "away we go" and closes his act, disciplined right down to the last few seconds.

Gleason offers a lesson for the stagers of the next "Close-Up" salute of the N. Y. Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences. Friday's (17) "Close-Up" of The Great One went on and on and on, prompting emcee Alan King to thank his audience of some 1,000 for having the patience to witness "From Here to Eternity"—not the pic, but the Academy show.

It was a case of loving Gleason too long, and too much—publicly—at the Americana's Imperial Ballroom, before a hep crowd which stayed and stretched in their seats, remarkably disciplined for showbizites who are part of the action. The show ran about two and three quarter hours, inviting inevitable dull stretches.

When Gleason's name was mentioned from the stage by King, Johnny Carson, Frank Fontaine, et al., the mention and the accompanying anecdotes were more in the nature of affectionate tributes rather than roasts. There were times when the man being honored sounded more like Dr. Albert Schweitzer than the top banana Saturday nights on CBS-TV. It was Gleason, himself, who brought his god-like figure down to earth when he sauntered on stage during Carson's turn and informed Mr. Tonight and the 1,000 assembled guests that he's one his way to see Mr. John.

Bishop Sheen made a surprise appearance on stage and he told a story which honored Gleason, without becoming saccharine.

Produced by Lester Gottlieb, the show opened with a snappy dance and tap by the June Taylor Dancers. King then took over the emceeing chores and he had many a one-liner which sent laughs bouncing around the room. He spent too much time though milking every on-stage guest and every situation. King saved his yock provoking Eastern Airline monolog until late

(Continued on page 62)

TV-Radio Production Centres

IN NEW YORK . . .

CBS pubaffairs producer Roger Smith and director Bruce Minnix to Iowa re upcoming "One of A Kind" program on Iowa's class of '29 . . . Bill Leonard, Bill Eames, Bob Wussler, Fred Capossela Jr., Al Thaler and Marya McLaughlin of CBS News Election Unit back from New Hampshire re web's coverage of March 10 Presidential primary . . . Mickey Rooney to direct upcoming "Twilight Zone" episode, "Sights and Sounds." . . . Bobby Darin set for Jack Benny's Jan. 28 episode . . . Arthur Hull Hayes, CBS Radio prexy, named national radio chairman for the 31st anni observance of Brotherhood Week, to be held Feb. 16-23. National Conference of Christians and Jews is the sponsor . . . Douglas Edwards and Allan Jackson elected president and v.p., respectively, of the Assn. of Radio and Television News Analysts . . . KATI Radio, Casper, Wyo., and WORX Radio, Madison, Ind., join CBS Radio web . . . Alan L. Gleitsman, headquartering in Los Angeles, named v.p. of Walter Reade-Sterling tv division . . . Kirk Douglas, Carol Channing and Merdith Wilson visit WCBS Radio's Norton Mockridge this week . . . Sportscaster Chris Schenkel flies to Texas on two successive weekends to narrate events for the "CBS Sports Spectacular" series. On Sunday (26), he'll be in Dallas to cover CBS' "live" pickup of men's and women's finals of the 23rd Annual All-Star Bowling Tournament. On the following Sunday, Schenkel will be in Ft. Worth to cover the Cutting Horse Championships . . . Stephen Rowan, who has just joined CBS News, will anchor all the newscasts during Saturday's (25) all night 30th anni tribute to Arthur Godfrey on CBS Radio. Rowan will be heard on the hour every hour . . . WHLI's pubrelations director Bill Nelson named to public relations committee of the Long Island YMCA Capital Gift Campaign . . . Negro folk and musical comedy singer Leo Bibb has a dramatic role as guest star on ABC-TV's "Channing" . . . Joe Franklin's WOR-TV daytime strip, "Memory Lane," this week guests Kay Stevens, Georgie Price and Rudy Vallee . . . Zeke Rose, ABC press staffer, has resigned to join the public relations firm of Harsha-Rotman & Bruck Inc. . . . William J. Lamb elected v.p. and treasurer of Educational Broadcasting Corp., operators of WNDT . . . Marty Allen & Steve Rossi cutting radio spots for the Epilepsy Foundation . . . Kenneth H. MacQueen has joined ABC Television Spot Sales as an account exec in the Chicago office . . . Dave Gerber, GAC veepee in from the Coast for the selling season . . . Rip Taylor slated for Ed Sullivan show, Feb. 2 . . . Actor Joe Silver inked for four shots on Sid Caesar show on ABC-TV, first of the taped sessions to be shown Feb. 13.

Bell Telephone will mark its 1,000th broadcast with a special anniversary show on NBC-TV Feb. 25 . . . NBC Opera Co. producer Samuel Chotzinoff in New York Hospital . . . Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R.-Me.) on NBC News "Sunday" Jan. 26 for interview with web's Nancy Dickerson on eve of her announcement of election plans . . . Jimmy Durante on Mitch Miller's "Sing Along" March 9 . . . NBC News producer George Vicas back to Paris after week in city for confabs . . . NBC Radio veep Marion Stephenson to Washington for talk before Federation of Business & Prof. Women's Foundation . . . Bob Bendick, exec producer of NBC-TV's World's Fair spec, has named Kirk Browning head director, Louis Solomon head writers and Harry Sosnik music director . . . NBC public affairs manager George Heinemann speaking at Northwest Drama Conference Feb. 7 at U. of Oregon . . . NBC-TV's "Today" and "Sunday" art critic and author Aline Saarinen named Woman of Achievement by Fed. of Jewish Women's Organizations . . . Ted Yates named one of country's outstanding 10 young men by national Jaycees . . . Dick Noel named announcer for NBC-TV's new "TW3".

IN HOLLYWOOD

William Orr must have designs on Bob Finkel for a top production berth at Warners-TV. A second meeting is scheduled for this week . . . NBC-TV's program chief Mort Werner told Revue producers of the two-hour "Johnny North" to go slow on the budget. Cost of the pilot was getting too close to $900,000. NBC and Revue are partners in the project . . . S. L. "Stretch" Adler, headman at KTLA, fired Tom Duggan one day and hired him back the next. It happened before to the commentator at KCOP and KTTV . . . CBS' helicopter is working overtime, with the comings and goings of James Aubrey. Egg-beater picks him up at the airport and deposits him on the front lawn at Television City . . . KTLA landed the L.A. Angels road games next season but it figures. Owners of the Angels become owners of KTLA within a matter of 60 days. Payoff is $150,000 for tv rights to 30 games . . . If 20th-Fox-TV gets an order from NBC for "Daniel Boone" with Fess Parker back in coonskin, Aaron Rosenberg will take his first dip in tv as producer . . . William Weiss, veepee of Terrytoons, is taking his first aim at network prime time. He has ordered a half-hour cartoon series spoofing the soaps. It's called "Pitiful Penelope" (in her search for misery) and the voice will be that of the wife of Dayton Allen.

IN CHICAGO . .

WBKB has hired M. S. (Tony) Bachman from KXTV, Sacramento, Calif., as director of advertising-promotion. That function is now separate from publicity-press info, which remains Don Peterson's charge . . . WYNR this week initiated a nightly two-hour interview stanza from the Playboy Club. It's being emceed by Alan Abel, who previously based on the Coast . . . Freelancer Gary Arnold signed on with WBBM-TV as host of the Sunday morning series, "Vistas" . . . Ernie Shomo, veep-g.m. of WBBM Radio who's been under the weather the past two weeks, is vacationing in Florida for a fortnight . . . Walter Schwimmer's syndicated "Championship Bridge" will have a Sunday afternoon berth on WCIU when it begins telecasting . . . Bob Lodell, who headed midwest sales for Mutual, quit to join Blair Radio as a rep . . . Pubaffairs writer Fran Coughlin and personnel director David O. Taylor both notched 30 years with WGN Inc. . . . Ceal Ward, WBKB's Sunday night weather girl, is in Detroit this week narrating the American Motors display at the Auto Show . . . Ruth Page has created an original ballet which her dance company will perform on WBBM-TV's Feb. 8 "Rep Workshop" . . . WBBM Radio has launched its largest audience promotion campaign in many years on the theme "You Hear It First on WBBM Radio." Splurge includes spots on WBBM-TV . . . John Justin Smith, ex-Daily News, has been added to the lineup on WBBM-TV's 6 p.m. newscast and the "Saturday News Special", and he gets his own five-minute strip after the "Late Show" . . . Sports director Bob Rhodes has been added to WBKB's news lineup at 10:10 p.m. . . . WBBM Radio's live "Music Wagon," previously aired in two segments, has become a single 90-minute strip. At same time, deejay Pat Sheridan has been assigned the two-hour early morning block.

IN BOSTON

Hub's memorial to John F. Kennedy, two-hour NBC telecast Sunday (19), with performance by Boston Symphony Orch of Mozart's "Requiem Mass in D Minor," at Holy Cross Cathedral, with Richard Cardinal Cushing celebrating the Solemn Pontifical Requiem Mass, had guest list of distinguished visitors from Washington, members of the Kennedy family, and Hub and national leaders, federal, state, local officials and members of the clergy . . . Jim Jensen, WBZ-TV newsman-personality, ankles in February for CBS, New York . . . Heywood Vincent, radio's controversial personality here, switched from WEEI to WNAC . . . WBZ-TV hosted foreign NBC correspondents and World Affairs council

(Continued on page 58)

SARASOTA: NAB WINTER CIRCUS

NAB's Posthumous Award to JFK?

Expectations are that this year's NAB award, generally reserved for a key industry figure, will be presented posthumously to the late President John F. Kennedy. And if so, President Lyndon Johnson will be asked to attend the NAB convention in Chicago in April to accept the award.

The decision will be made next week when the NAB board of directors assembles in Sarasota, Fla., for its annual meeting, with industry sentiment for the JFK award taking on added impetus in the past few weeks. Award will be based on the late President Kennedy's overall contribution to the medium through his tv press conferences the impact rendered via the Great Debates, etc.

TV Networks Crawlin' With Too Many Credits in Revival of Plugola

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Networks again are afflicted with an irritant of yore, the plugola, outlawed in its most virulent form, and the watchdogs have felt it necessary to meet in concert for remedial measures. Department heads of the three nets sessioned last week and traded their views in a two-hour meet that plowed the field but didn't plant any seed. Main point or discussion: how to break up the clutter of credits so prevalent in the closing crawl.

Toppers agreed there are too many unnecessary credits, both production-wise and by suppliers of wearing apparel and the such, and policy set by National Assn. of Broadcasters and their code of good practices, which allows end credits of one minute on an hour show and 45 seconds to the half hour, is lacking in conformity. A set policy by CBS adheres to ruling but other networks don't hold to it. The meeting was called by NBC's Fenton Coe, director of film production, for the purpose of a unified campaign against such abuses.

Said one, "I don't blame the advertisers of a show for objecting to the clutter of credits. They pay around $35,000 a minute for commercial time yet at the close a merchant who provides the show's star with his wearing apparel is given a credit line. I don't think it's fair. The exceptions would be for an item that can't be bought."

CBS allows two supplier credits to each show "but it must be something important and not just a pair of shoes." No single frame credit is permitted. "It's the old plugola all over again," said a network policer," and we've got to stamp it out. Production credits, while held too inclusive of minor crafts, is only a minor issue.

In the old days of the plugola practice, merchandise as prizes on game and panel shows were accepted gratis in return for the plug. CBS, for a time, paid for the prizes but later withdrew the payments and settled for a mention. The more blatant plugs were ruled out, such as free airline tickets and other forms of travel. Local stations still carry the plugs

(Continued on page 66)

NBC-TV In New Look at Daytime

In view of the fact that CBS-TV's 1:30 soaper, "As the World Turns" is the toprated daytime show in television (its 16.6 rating equal to the average prime time nighttime show) NBC is in the process of reassessing its "sunshine spectrum" with a view toward changes.

In view of that, NBC will "recapture" 1:30 to 2 from the stations and program the half-hour slot, with likelihood of a game show going in. As a matter of fact the bid for a network program at that crucial half-hour comes from the affiliates themselves. All of which means that NBC will be programming for its stations from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (with the exception of 1 to 1:30).

Change will go into effect on July 1. At that time Procter & Gamble moves into the 3 o'clock spot with a new soaper series from the pen of vet Irna Phillips.

Post-Grid TV Season: ABC's Hot Sat. Entries

ABC-TV's heavy sports show lineup on Saturday afternoons has taken the rating lead in the first Nielsen 27-market rating report of the three-network post-grid season sports competition on that day. ABC's teeoff "Challenge Golf," against no sports competition from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. racked up a 8.2 rating. "Pro Bowlers," from 3:30 to 5 p.m., scored a 9.4; "Wide World of Sports," from 5 to 6:30 p.m., went up to a 13.9 and the "Pre-Olympic Tryouts," from 6:30 to 7 earned a 12.5.

On NBC-TV, the Bud Palmer show, from 4:30 to 6 p.m., scored a 9.0 rating, while the first "Golf Classic" on CBS-TV from 4 to 5 p.m. hit a 7.4.

British Parliament Nixes BBC Bid To Raise License Fee

London, Jan. 21.

In renewing BBC's Charter for a further 12 years, the Government declined to raise the annual $11.20 license fee by which BBC is financed. Instead, Corporation has been given power to borrow up to $56,000,000 to finance itself. But the Government has renewed its pledge that BBC will have "sufficient income to provide adequate services."

Parliamentary decision not to hike the license fee follows strong BBC campaigning which called for a $5.60 raise in the tab. BBC has recently been at pains to point out that establishment of its UHF tv web, BBC-2, had bitten so deep into reserves that only a nominal amount remains and if it is to meet its commitments—such as extension of radio services, setting up of colorcasts plus meeting the normal rise in production costs—it would have to be financed by an annual license fee of $16.80.

In Parliament, Postmaster General Reginald Bevins said: "In 1962-63, BBC had a deficit of about $7,500,000 which was met out of reserves. There is nothing wrong in that. It is what reserves are for."

The Government, he added, entirely adhered to the assurances it gave in the White Paper that BBC would get sufficient coin to run adequate services. He said later that he hoped that there may be scope for a greater interchange of financial ideas between the Corporation and the Government in order not to affect the essential independence of the BBC.

Earlier in the debate on BBC, Sir Harry Legge-Bourke, Tory, called for an all-party agreement about putting up the cost of BBC's license fee. "In the end it will have to be raised," he said, "and a great deal more than has been talked about."

It is felt in many tv circles that the Government is reluctant to raise the annual broadcast licence so close to an election because it could easily cost votes. There seems little doubt, however, that following the election the Government of the day will hike the licence fee to finance BBC.

COLLINS: MAN ON FLYING TRAPEZE

By MIKE MOSETTIG

Washington, Jan. 21.

Le Roy Collins is the broadcasting industry's version of an instant Caesar blithely traversing a path replete with Rubicons.

Next week in Sarasota, the NAB prexy must again cast the die leaving to his not-so-loyal legions another bowl of financial and political worms to untangle.

It seems every time Collins meets his Board of Directors there is something hotly at issue. This time from Jan. 27-31 interest centers on Collins' broadcast pronouncements, his non-broadcast pronouncements and his political ambitions.

Cigaret's the source of last year's imbroglio, is back again but in so lurid a form that the issue's resolution can be postponed only so long.

Also to be settled by some of the nation's leading exponents of freedom of speech is how to censor Collins' verbal attacks on segregation and Southern jingoism.

Finally the question to be placed to Collins is are you or are you not planning another foray into Florida politics?

But in his upcoming confrontation with the Board Collins is left without one of his finer strategic points. In last year's hassle, he could tell the Board that if he were bounced from his NAB job, he could get a high post in the Kennedy Administration and then make the industry pay for its action.

With Lyndon Johnson as President and hardly enamored of Collins no such threat is possible.

Collins, however, isn't without points as the joint NAB Code Boards meet Jan. 28 on the cigaret issue. The Surgeon General's Committee has issued its downbeat smoking report and several Federal agencies and Congress are talking up anti-smoking proposals of their own.

In the light of renewed interest generally in the smoking question, the Code folk—if they want to preserve the industry's image—can hardly push the issue under the rug.

At best, they can issue a vague declaration saying no Code action will be taken on cigaret commercials until the Federal Government has staked out its course.

As he did last year, Collins will leave the industry in the position of having to take a stand in favor of profits while promoting sin and juvenile degeneracy if not delinquency.

Any more to put the clamps on Collins' oratory will face a stiff fight. The governor has already told the NAB Executive Committee "nothing doing" in regard to proposals for prior review of his speeches.

Gains In Stature

With his Columbia, S.C. speech ripping into the die-hard segregationists and extremists, Collins has gained favor in the "liberal establishment" of Washington.

Members of this "establishment" are generally tv's more persistent critics and any Board move against Collins would renew their wrath against the tube.

Besides, the Board will have to decide if it is better to have at the industry's helm a maverick who knows the Washington political game or a toady who does not. Because he is willing to challenge his membership, Collins has gained stature on Capitol Hill and with the general press.

The last three years have been witness to the premise that criticism from within perhaps stifles criticism and action from without. Suffer as they may with their white knight, broadcasters may still be better off with him than a fireball FCC chairman or an angry Congressional investigator as the only overseer of their public conscience.

As to the hope expressed by some that Collins might run for the U.S. Senate from Florida, this appears to be dimmer and dimmer.

Latest reports from Florida political circles are that Collins plans to "saunter to Talahassee to visit

(Continued on page 58)

ABC, Jimmy Dean Confident They're Now In the Right Rating Groove

On the brink of cancellation only a couple of weeks ago, Jimmy Dean is not only alive on ABC-TV through the summer, but he may still be kicking on the web come next season. The show's ratings, which tumbled badly after the opening weeks, have been inching up to a point where ABC-TV execs are ready to consider Dean as a likely candidate in 1964-65.

Dean will not himself speculate about next season, but he recognizes what went wrong this time. "I was asked to do things on the show that went against my basic philosophy of being myself. I'm no longer making that mistake. We're not around long enough to mess around with things that make us miserable."

One of the first decisions in Dean's determination to be himself was to strengthen the country elements in the show. Initially, the show was promoted as anything but backwoods, but now Dean has at least one hillbilly or folk singer on his show each week. As a result, country & western disk jockeys around the country have been plugging the ABC-TV show on their radio outlets, a factor which has improved the show's rating status.

Dean said: "Mention country music and people get afraid that you're catering to illiterates in the mountains. It's strange though that about half of our audience is in the big cities and seems to cut across the whole population. That's born out by the popularity of country music throughout the country."

Dean, however, is not transforming his show into a "Grand Ol' Opry." Instead, there's been an attempt to vary the rustic and urbanized elements with Dean as the unifying element. Along with such country singers as Buck Owen, Tex Ritter, Eddy Arnold and Johnny Tillotson, there have been comics like George Kirby, Corbett Monica, Jack Carter, Jackie Mason, etc.

Dean, a product of Texas, permits no color lines on his show. "I don't care whether a performer is white, black, green or polka-dotted. If he has talent, we want him." Dean noted that he received no complaints from any of his southern fans about the appearance of Negro performers on his show.

He's slated to make his first personal appearance in Las Vegas July 9 to Aug. 5 in a stand at the Flamingo Hotel. During that period, he figures that ABC-TV will be using reruns of his shows.

British TV Fears

London, Jan. 21.

If a Labor Government is voted in at the next election, the chances are the ciggie tv commercials will be banned, costing the commercial web something like $40,000,000 a year in billings.

Speaking on Associated-Rediffusion's toprated pub-affairs show "This Week," Labor leader Harold Wilson said smoke ads should cease not only on tv but also in the press. "The important thing," he said, "is to stop the vicious effect of advertising in causing young people to take up smoking."

British Com'l TV's 61% Share of Aud, BBC's 39% for '63

London, Jan. 21.

Notwithstanding a major programmic thrust by BBC-TV during 1963, the commercial web averaged approximately a 61% share of the dual channel audience leaving BBC-TV a 39% slice. Television Audience Measurement Ltd., independent ratings outfit (whose clientele includes ad agencies and indie stations but not BBC), supply the following quarterly statistics which spell out the commercial boys triumphant ride over the competitive airways:—

SHARE OF AUDIENCE	Comm'l	BBC-TV
January to March	57%	43%
April to June	61%	39%
July to September	62%	38%
October to Dec.	63%	37%

According to TAM, although through the year on a quarterly basis the independent web has steadily increased its lead over the opposition network, a month-by-month survey shows that BBC has been hitting back and making a tough fight of it.

For instance, on TAM's reckoning, BBC chopped back the indies lead last February to 12% of dual-channel homes when, for the month, the commercial outlet averaged a 56% share of the audience and BBC gained a 44% hold. And the Corporation dittoed the following month.

Throughout the summer months May-August, however, the commercial outlet average more than 60% of the public able to receive both services and, come the fall season, swept into a 63%—37% lead during September, October and November. BBC-TV managed to regain a little ground in December, says TAM, snaring an average of 38% of viewers with a choice compared to the commercial web's 62%. Latter 1% BBC gain is the first it's made since June, '63, per the TAM log.

Another Five-Parter Set For CBS 'Lassie'

"Lassie," starting Feb. 2, begins another five-part story, the first multi-episode story for this season.

Last season, "Lassie" soared into the top 10 Nielsen bracket, when the skein presented a five-part story, a cliffhanger which was continued each successive Sunday. Current five-parter is titled "The Disappearance," dealing with the adventures of the collie following a boat accident on Lake Superior. Telecast this season out will be in black-and-white.

Jack Wrather Productions last season did the five-parter in color, utilizing the footage for a theatrical feature, as well.

Westport Beef To NBC: 'Lay Off Us'

Westport, Jan. 21.

NBC's "Today" size-up of this suburban burg as a town of heavy drinkers and an abnormal share of oddballs drew a flood of protests from indignant realtors, politicos and other indignant citizens.

Frequently studied as a typical community, Westport got the "Today" focus in the program's lately-begun series of visits to localities. The quarter-hour whish through Westport, while showing good schools, fine residential areas, etc., pointed up substantial number of liquor stores, women's chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous and other allusions to liquor consumption.

Town Hall reported considerable complaints received at First Selectman's office, which recommended that gripes be relayed to NBC.

Interesting to note that NBC as well as the other networks have a lot of wheels who reside in this area, and among them is NBC prexy Robert E. Kintner.

WLIB POWER BOOST

New York Harlem radio station WLIB has received an FCC okay to boost power from 1,000 to 10,000 watts.

Station has 30 acres in Lyndhurst, N. J., and is proceeding with construction of a new transmitter there.

The RESULTS Are In...

OVERWHELMING!

'BEAVER' THE STRONGEST INTRODUCED TO

NOVEMBER ARB REPORTS
R=Rating/S=Share

ALBANY—WTEN—TUES. 7:30PM
Replaced—Golf Show—1r/2s
Lead-In—CBS News—13r/26s
BEAVER—17 rating/27 share (vs. Feature & Combat)

ATLANTA—WAII—6PM STRIP
Replaced—Maverick—5r/19s
Lead-In—Robin Hood—3r/11s
BEAVER—12 rating/29 share (vs. WSB News 20r/47s—WAGA News 10r/24s)
BEAVER almost triples lead-in!

BOSTON—WBZ—SAT. 7PM . . . AND 9AM STRIP

Replaced—Highway Patrol—9r/29s
Lead-In—News—17r/43s
BEAVER—16 rating/41 share
(Lawbreaker, Rebel) Beats all!

Replaced—Medic—2r/13s
Lead-in—Today—4r/22s
BEAVER—4 rating/30 share—gets almost 75% of all women viewers—competition gets the kids.

BUFFALO—WBEN—4:30 STRIP
Replaced—Edge of Night—6r/31s
Lead-in—Secret Storm—10r/32s
BEAVER—10 rating/32 share—up from last month's 6r/27s. Building!

CHICAGO—WBBM—3:30 STRIP
Replaced—Burns & Allen—3r/24s
Lead-In—Secret Storm—5r/28s
BEAVER—6 rating/33 share (Daddy, Trailmaster, Stooges) Beats all!

DALLAS—KRLD—3:30 STRIP
Replaced—Edge of Night—8r/33s
Lead-In—Secret Storm—8r/50s
BEAVER—4 rating 37 share (vs. Daddy 2r/18s—Trailmaster 3r/27s—Popeye 2r/18s) Beats all!

DENVER—KBTV—5PM STRIP
Replaced—Lawman—5r/20s
Lead-In—Mouse—5r/28s
BEAVER—9 rating, 28 share (vs. Maverick 24s—Yogi 19s—News 31s)

DETROIT—WJBK—THURS. 7PM . . . AND SUNDAY 7PM

Replaced—Peter Gunn—11r/26s
Lead-In—CBS News—5r/12s
BEAVER—17 rating 35 share Beats all!
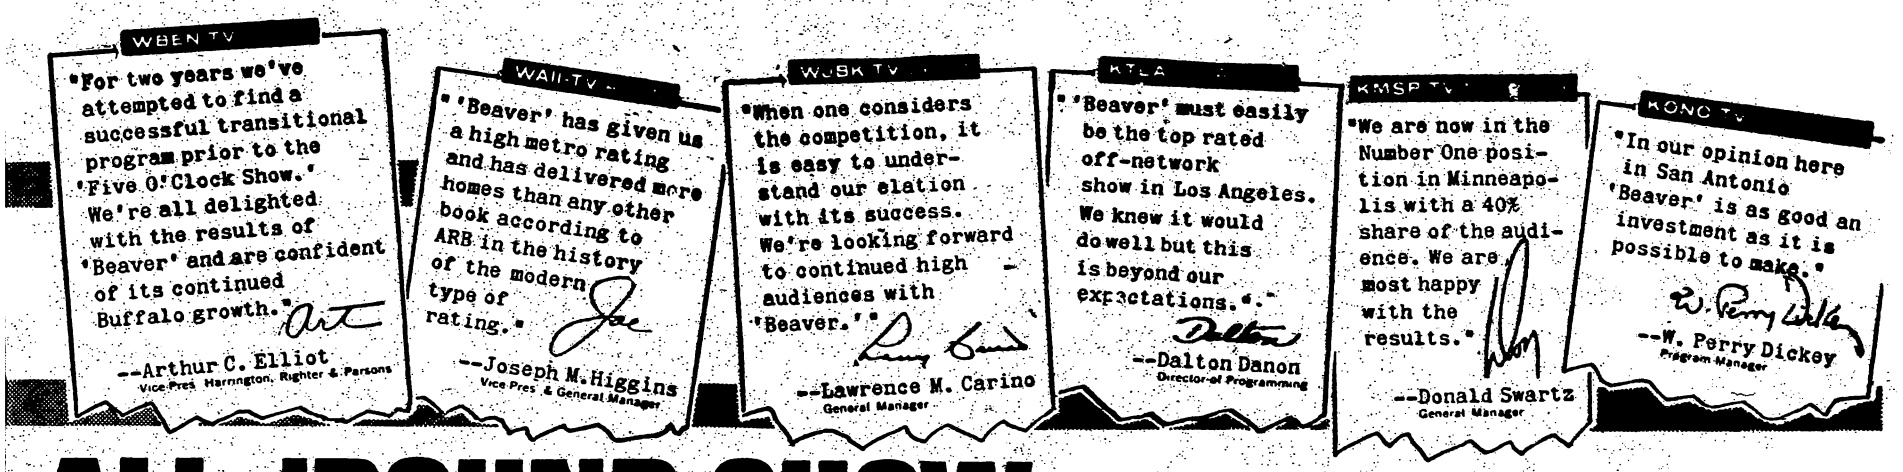
(Pierrot, Michigan Outdoors, Tombstone Territory) Top show in WJBK's Mon.-Fri. 7PM slot.

Replaced—Lassie—12r/28s
Lead-in—Highway Patrol—13r/29s
BEAVER—18 rating/38 share—(Dana, Biography, Magoo) Beats all!

GREENVILLE—ASHEVILLE—SPARTANBURG—WFBC—5:30PM STRIP
Replaced—Kellogg/Paradise—6r/27s
Lead-In—Kellogg Strip—11r/38s
BEAVER—14 rating 43 share (vs. Feature 4r/13s—Fea Wea 14r/42s) Beats all!

HARTFORD—NEW HAVEN—WTIC—9:30AM STRIP
Replaced—Millionaire—4r/50s
Lead-In—Deputy Dawg—12r/71s
BEAVER—13 rating 76 share (vs. Groucho 2r 13s—Romper Room 1r, 6s).
Captures two-thirds of All Women Viewers. Dominates Hartford and New Haven!

LOS ANGELES—KTLA—IND—7PM STRIP
Replaced—Whirlybirds—4r/10s
Lead-In—News—3r/6s
BEAVER—9 rating/17 share. KTLA's top rated weekly show—10 AM to 11 PM M-F
Beats 5 stations!



ALL-'ROUND SHOW SYNDICATION IN YEARS!

MEMPHIS—WMCT—3:30PM STRIP
Replaced—Make Room For Daddy—8r/38s
Lead-In—Match Game/News—8r/42s
BEAVER—6 rating/36 share (vs. Trailmaster 6r/36s—Local Fea 5r/29s)
Tops in Homes! Ties for First!

MILWAUKEE—WISN—6PM STRIP. . . . . AND SATURDAY 6PM
Replaced—CBS News—5r/20s
Lead-In—CBS News—7r/21s
BEAVER—14 rating 34 share (vs. Kids 12r/32s—News/Wea 13r/33s) Tops!
Replaced—Lloyd Bridges—4r/17s
Lead-In—Weather—4r/12s
BEAVER—16 rating/39 share Beats all!

MINNEAPOLIS—KMSP—5:30 STRIP
Replaced—Feature—3r/13s
Lead-In—Ron Cochran News—2r/8s
BEAVER—14 rating/38 share (vs. CBS News 6r/17s—Huntley-Brinkley 10r/27s—Lone Ranger 6r/17s). Beats all!

ORLANDO—DAYTONA—WDBO—5:30PM STRIP
Replaced—Kellogg Strip—9r/52s
Lead-In—Kellogg Strip—9r/39s
BEAVER—11 rating/41 share (vs. News 10r/37s Action Hours 6r/22s). Beats all!

PHILADELPHIA—WCAU—4:30 STRIP
Replaced—Love That Bob—4r/21s
Lead-In—Secret Storm—5r/24s
BEAVER—9 rating/34 share (vs. Daddy 8r/31s—Popeye/Kellogg 9r/36s)

PITTSBURGH—WTAE—SAT. 6PM
Replaced—Major Adams—2r/9s
Lead-In—Bowling—9r/30s
BEAVER—10 rating/26 share—five times its rating of a month ago.

RICHMOND—WTVR—6PM STRIP
Replaced—Kellogg strip—11r/45s
Lead-In—Kellogg strip—15r/47s
BEAVER—23 rating/63 share (vs. WRVA News 6r/15s—WXEX News 8r/22s). Beats all!

SEATTLE—KOMO—TUES. 7PM
Replaced—Expedition—12r/31s
Lead-In—Bold Journey—16r/30s
BEAVER—19 rating/37 share—KOMO's top 7PM show.

SOUTH BEND—WSBT—MON. 5:30PM
Replaced—Zoorama—11r/28s
Lead-In—Kid Show—7r/30s
BEAVER—8 rating/36 share (vs. Robin Hood 5r/22s—Mouse 9r/41s) BEAVER tops in homes and adults!

TULSA—KVOO—4:30PM STRIP
Replaced—Kids show—6r/28s
Lead-In—Lone Ranger—8r/36s
BEAVER—10 rating/41 share—Top Rating, Share, Homes, Adults. Beats All!

234 HALF-HOURS

LEAVE IT TO BEAVER

HUGH BEAUMONT
BARBARA BILLINGSLEY
TONY DOW and JERRY MATHERS as "BEAVER"

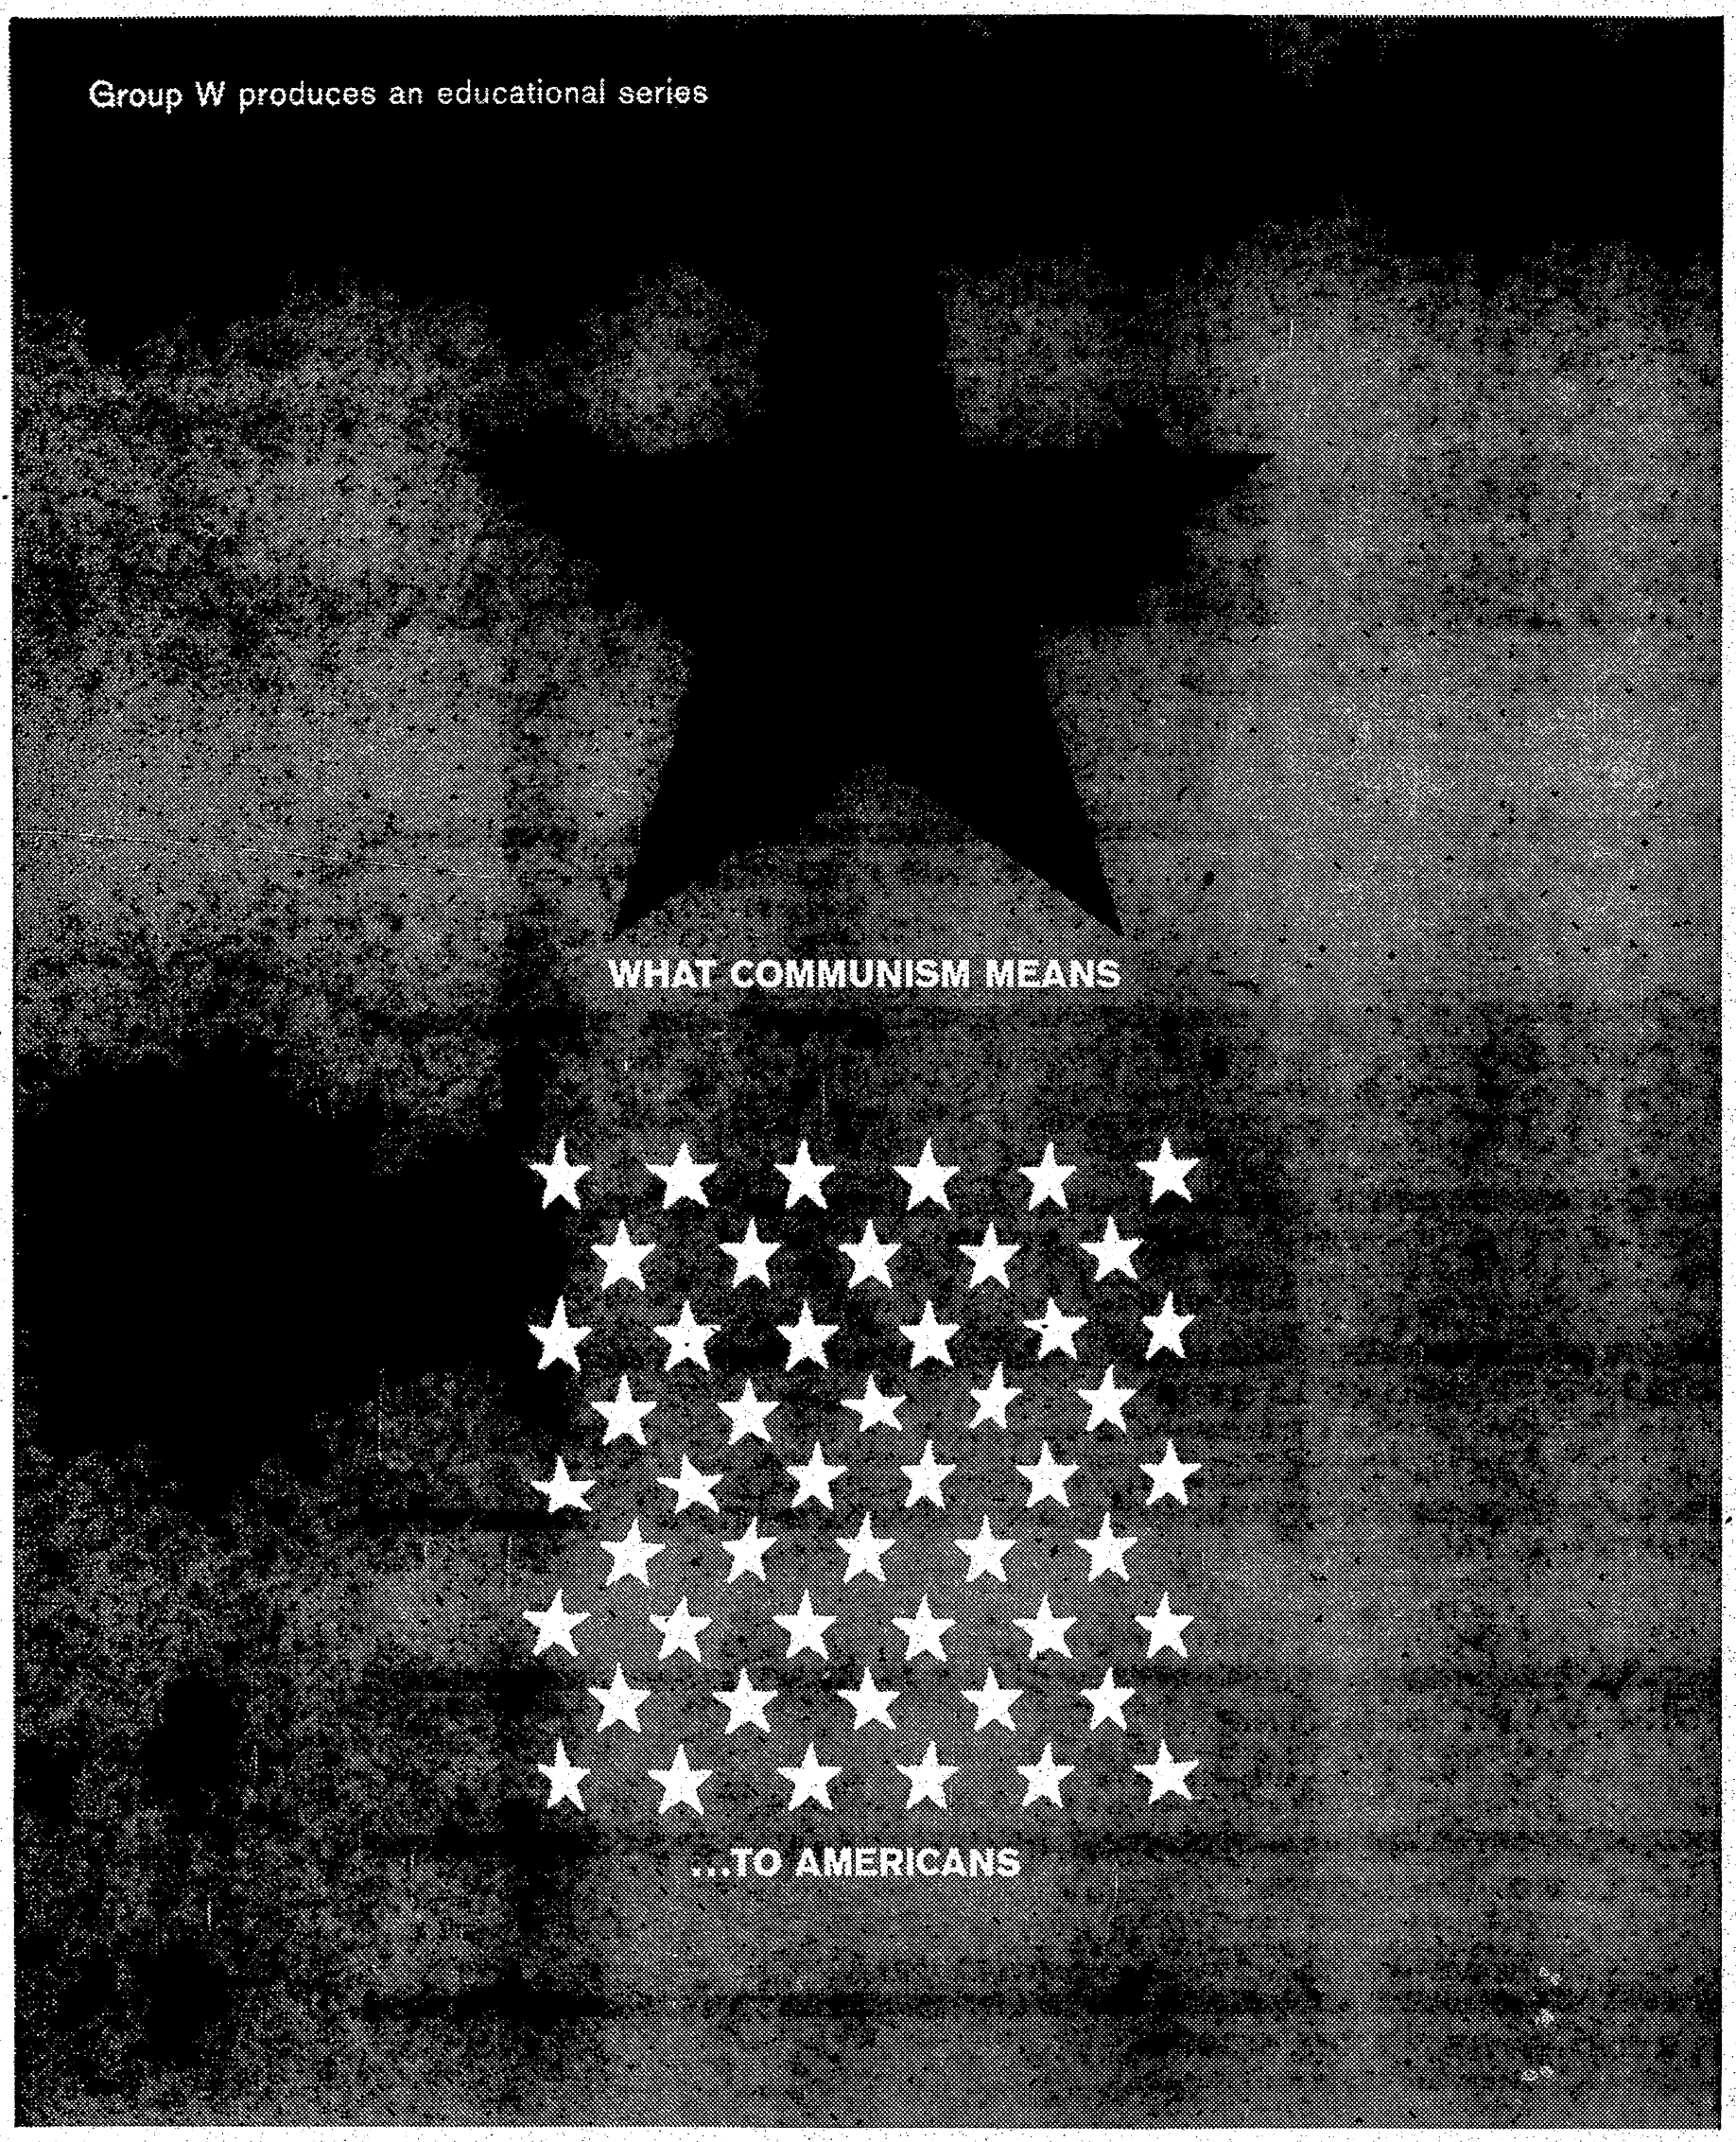
mca
TV FILM SYNDICATION

Group W produces an educational series



Group W has produced a series of thirty television lectures on the "Meaning of Communism."* They were created to arm young Americans with the vital weapon of knowledge in the struggle for freedom.

This series provides a dispassionate analysis of the principles and realities that shape Communism and Russia today. The lectures will appear on Group W stations, and will be made available to other broadcasters and schools who seek to give young Americans a strong foundation of information on this subject.

Broadcasting, with its ability to reach millions of people, is the ideal medium to undertake a project of this nature. And the Group broadcaster, responsive as he is to the needs of the community, has the responsibility to create such programs that enlighten and forearm. To bring the truth to all who seek it, in the belief that education is the strongest weapon of a free people.

GROUP W

BOSTON WBZ · WBZ-TV
NEW YORK WINS
BALTIMORE WJZ-TV
PITTSBURGH KDKA · KDKA-TV
CLEVELAND KYW · KYW-TV
FORT WAYNE WOWO
CHICAGO WIND
SAN FRANCISCO KPIX

WESTINGHOUSE BROADCASTING COMPANY

*The series features Prof. Marshall D. Shulman, Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, and Prof. Henry L. Roberts, Director of Columbia University's Russian Institute, and is based on "The Meaning of Communism" published by the Silver Burdett Company/Time Incorporated.

STORKE'S $25,000,000 TWINS

Top 20: Sumuratings

(Nielsen's Top-Ranking Shows In Japan)

	Rating	Number of Tv Homes (000)
TENAMONYA 3-DO-GASA (Comedy by "samurai" fashion)	39.9	1,799
OWARAI SAN-NIN-GUMI (Comedy variety)	39.4	1,777
WAKAI KISETSU (Comedy variety)	36.9	1,664
AVEC UTA GASSEN (Amateurs' singing contest)	36.7	1,655
JIKEN KISHA (Adventure of newspaper reporters)	36.3	1,637
OMMITSU KENSHI ("Samurai" mystery series)	33.4	1,506
WALT DISNEY HOUR	32.8	1,479
TETSUWAN ATOM (Cartoon series)	31.1	1,402
PRO-WRESTLING	30.3	1,366
HANA NO SHOGAI (Drama series)	30.0	1,353
THE JETSONS	29.5	1,330
GESTURE (Charade quiz: actors vs. actress)	29.1	1,312
TV SHITEI-SEKI (Drama)	28.9	1,303
SAKIKO-SAN CHOTTO (Family comedy series)	28.6	1,290
GETSUYOBI NO OTOKO (Mystery suspense series)	28.1	1,267
AKATSUKI (Drama: multi-weekly — FRI)	26.8	1,208
AKAI DAIYA (Drama series)	26.4	1,190
TELENEWS	26.2	1,181
AKATSUKI (Drama: multi-weekly — THU)	26.0	1,172
10-NIN NUKU NODOJIMAN (Amateurs' singing contest)	25.8	1,163

French Viewers Complain to Govt.: Too Many Boring Documentaries

Paris, Jan. 21.

The private organization set up to safeguard viewers' rights on the state-run tv and radio here, The Assoc. of Television and Listeners of France, recently sent a list of plaints and opinions to the head of the governmental Radiodiffusion Television Francaise, Raymond Bordaz.

For tv, the ATLF felt that gayer and more diverting programs on the old and coming new webs were needed. It was also noted there were too many long, didactic and boring documentaries and a reduction in the so-called "modern" ballet shows was also asked for, plus a cutting down of too many bad film features and local and foreign vidfilm series.

Also wanted were more noted film directors doing vid work and more appearances of state-run theatre groups. ATLF inveighed against institutional advertising of government-controlled industries and services too, which were felt badly done and usually in bad taste. More news, without governmental meddling, and more economic and union news, and less political talks, were also suggested, plus a return of the chansonniers.

(Continued on page 60)

CBS' Two-Coast Talent Auditions

CBS-TV will start its auditions for new talent for possible spotting in the web's variety programs on Feb. 12 in a midtown CBS theatre, yet to be selected.

The regularly scheduled auditions, aimed at securing fresh talent for the web's many variety shows, will be held twice monthly in N.Y. The web plans to inaugurate regularly scheduled auditions on the Coast, as well.

Auditions in N.Y. will be conducted by Robert Dale Martin, director of talent and castings, and supervised by Russell Stoneham, director of live programming, N.Y. CBS-TV programming v.p. Mike Dann said the auditions would be attended by producers of all network variety programs, both in N.Y. and Hollywood. These include "Ed Sullivan Show," "Garry Moore Show," "Jackie Gleason Show," Danny Kaye, Judy Garland, and "Red Skelton Hour."

MBS Moving Hq.

Mutual Broadcasting next month will move to new quarters in the American Management Assn. Bldg., 135 West 50th St., New York. Since the network was established in 1934, the hq has been at 1440 Broadway.

Web will take the entire 16th floor in the new location which will also house several other New York headquarters of parent corp., Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Mutual prexy Robert F. Hurleigh says expanded technical facilities in the new building will accelerate the daily newsgathering activities which make up a major share of the programming for the radio web's affiliate.

Britain Ponders TV for Industry As Ayem Service

London, Jan. 21.

Following preliminary talks with the Independent Television Authority, Television for Industry, Ltd., a group endeavoring to establish industrial broadcasts on the vacant morning airwaves, is readying a formal application to the Authority for said airtime Monday to Friday.

Insiders report that ITA topbrassers are "sympathetic" towards the idea of a vidservice for industry provided it can be mounted under the standard agreed definition of adult education thus allowing it to be transmitted outside of normal broadcasting and by someone outside the commercial contractors.

Television for Industry group, headed by producer Jack Chambers, and backed by Hambros Bank (also in feevee) and Business Publications, Ltd., is hoping to broadcast 10 hours per week between 10 a.m. and noon on weekdays over the whole commercial network. It is intended to sell airtime between programs to finance the service and advertisers are to be approached next month once the company has finalized its market research.

Should the TFI bid go through, Chambers estimates it will be at least nine months before he is ready to go on the air.

'TODAY'-'TONITE' BOFFO BILLINGS

Those NBC-TV fringe (time) gold mines, "Today" and "Tonight," are headed for a record lode in 1964, says William Storke, sales chief for the early and late entries. He predicts a combined total of more than $25,000,000 in the coming year in a "T&T" gross that will top the 1960 peak.

After a "pretty good" 1963, Storke says current sales show the highest first quarter for "T&T" in the last half-dozen years. With higher station and program charges than previously, "Tonight" is 94% sold out in the first quarter of this year and 100% sold out through the second. "Today" is 55% sold in the first quarter, and 70% sold in the second (average minute on "Tonight" costs $13,000, on "Today," $8,700).

So far for '64, both shows have had a total of 15 sponsor renewals. "Today" has eight new clients; "Tonight" 10. Storke breaks down the first half year and estimated second half revenues this way: "Tonight's" first and second quarter total $8,200,000 with an estimated second half of $7,600,000 for a total '64 of $15,800,000 (previous top was $15,000,000). "Today's" first half totals $5,000,000 with an estimate of $4,620,000 for the second half and a total of $9,620,000. Combined total is figured at $25,420,000, which tops the '60 peak gross of the two shows by about $500,000.

For "Today," the new clients this year are American Cyanamid (biggest with more than $600,000), Singer, Glidden, Tappan, Lowrey Organ, Nestle, Scott, Schick and two that have been signed, but are holding up for announcement to dealers at special meetings. "Tonight" has two of the latter in the new-client roster, along with Abbott Labs, Celanese, Lowrey Organ, Dow Chemical, B. F. Goodrich, Budweiser, Glidden, Sara Lee, Colombian, Nestle.

Storke has a lot of reasons why the two shows have snapped back since the good times of Dave Garroway and Jack Paar. To the benefit of both shows has been the combo ratecard established several months ago, and the special buyouts that saw Pontiac taking T&T all the way one day to introduce the new line (Westclock and American Cyanamid are making similar buyouts, the former on the time changes this spring and fall, and the latter in connection with "Today's coverage of the New York World's Fair).

For "Today," however, more important has been the commercial aptitudes of the participants, mainly Hugh Downs, who can intro the blurbs with a personalized touch. The close identity of Downs and cohorts with the commercials has given bankrollers a side benefit in product protection, something that's virtually disappeared most everywhere else in tv with heavy participations in daytime and nighttime and jammed local adjacencies.

Garroway was tough to follow, says Storke, but "Today" is back on a combo news-entertainment kick that virtually disappeared when John Chancellor helmed the show. The nonetheless astute NBC newsman, who wouldn't intro the blurbs, had turned the show into a virtual hard news outing. Since Al Morgan became producer, "Today" has taken fresh telementary tangents and entertainment chances. There were recent junkets to San Juan and last year New Or-

(Continued on page 64)

CBS-TV STILL EYEING A MENOTTI CONTRIB

Gian-Carlo Menotti still has a deal with CBS-TV to prepare original musical dramas or operas for telecasting.

Deal was announced last July, and two Menotti projects were forecast for the current season. Even though a Menotti outing wasn't held this season, web says the deal still is very much in effect, and the hope is that something will materialize for '64-'65.

Jay McMullen In a Tell-All Mood On Background Dope About Heroin

Jay McMullen, the documentarian of crime in the U.S., looks like a solid citizen whose only real-life brush with crime might be accidental—with a neighborhood bank teller who after a life of thrift and meagerness absconds with a $1,000,000 in bank notes and a chorus girl.

"Do you think Boston has changed any?" he was asked. (McMullen produced "Biography of a Bookie Joint," filmed in Boston).

"I doubt it," McMullen answered. "Tonight (Wed.) "CBS Reports: The Business of Heroin," produced by the same laconic "Bookie" producer, will be telecast. "I'm interested in how a crime impinges on our society, its involvements in economics, politics and its sources. When I do a particular crime, I want to examine the particular lives and the setting of those lives. I know reporters tell me they've been doing gambling, crime, corruption and dope stories for a long time. Print men, though, work with pencils. I work with cameras, lights, etc. I have to carry an elephant on my back, and for tv, investigatory crime reporting is new ground."

The words came slowly, but not without humor.

The heroin trail took him to the Middle East.

"I waited three weeks for Government approval to film the locale where hashish, the source of marijuana, is grown illegally. Let the mid-east country be unnamed. After day after day of frustration, a man introduced himself to me at the hotel. He told me he was a newspaperman who would lead me to the fields I wanted to film and if I didn't take his advice not to wait for government approval, I would never get my footage.

"I told him if he said another word I would call government authorities and have him arrested. Next day, the government granted the permit for filming." The timing of the two events wasn't happenstance.

McMullen has patience. It took him two years to do the heroin story. "I need all the pieces of a mosaic before I can say I have a show. I have to be very careful." He recalled he testified under oath three days in Boston following the bookie documentary.

He has some unusual problems associated with the nature of his calling. "I can't let anyone who identifies himself as a former dope

(Continued on page 66)

Sumoists in Shorts

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

Protests are being raised here by traditionalists against the wearing of shorts by the 40 Japanese wrestlers who will tour Honolulu, San Francisco and Los Angeles next month. The mammoth grapplers, who compete here wearing only a skimpy loin cloth, have been asked to wear trunks while in the U.S. to conform with American tv requirements.

Objectors here claim that the ancient sport depends much on its pageantry and ceremony, which won't be the same with the wrestlers in shorts. Nonetheless, the beefcake apparently will be contained, as a Tokyo department store is now making blue trunks to order for the sumoists to wear on the tour.

Goldenson's Plea: Lift TV Barriers, Old Hat Concept

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Leonard H. Goldenson, AB-PT president, urged free access of television into courtrooms with specific safeguards to protect individual rights. Goldenson made his attack on barriers that deny tv privileges enjoyed by other media at the Poor Richard Club last Friday (17) where he received the club's annual Gold Medal to the "outstanding citizen who has made the greatest contribution to the development of communications."

Goldenson said that "old-fashioned concepts of what can or cannot be reported electronically have resulted in a lag in the design of public facilities. Despite the recognition of television as a direct link to the people, there are few conference rooms, convention halls, hearing rooms, and to my knowledge, no courtrooms built with any regard to television—built without any attention to slight architectural changes that would make effective tv reporting possible."

Goldenson, at the same time, stressed that tv has a double responsibility. On the one hand, it has the responsibility to inform. On the other, there is the responsibility to "respect basic American principles."

"We must be sure that the presence of equipment and news personnel who will carry the printed story and the words and face of an accused or a witness to millions, never places unusual pressures upon that person." In an unspecified reference to the influence of newsmen on the course of events in Dallas following the assassina-

(Continued on page 68)

BBC's 'Steptoe & Son' Ousts 'Coronation St.' As No. 1 British Show

London, Jan. 21.

Ray Galton and Alan Simpson's comedy "Steptoe And Son" has become the first ever BBC-TV series to top the national tv ratings, as compiled by Television Audience Measurement Ltd. According to TAM, the Jan. 7 edition, sparking a new series, ousted Granada-TV's "Coronation Street" from its long-held top spot with an audience in 9,481,000 homes (which can receive both services).

BBC claims the audience for the show as 26,000,000 people.

In TAM's log, "Steptoe" which stars Harry Corbett and Wilfred Bramble, rated as top show in more than half a dozen regions including London and the Midlands. But in the North, Granada's "homeland," the station's "Coronation Street" beat it into second place.

LBJ Proposes Hike In Budget for FCC

Washington, Jan. 21.

President Johnson today (Tues.) proposed more money for the FCC in the new government fiscal year.

His budget earmarked $16,910,000 for the agency. This is compared to the $16,500,000 president Kennedy requested a year ago and the $15,600,000 which Congress appropriated for the Commission.

FCC said its workload grows heavier. It said there will be 9,000 broadcasting stations in operation during the next year, compared with 8,430 now.

Commission employment will climb by 61, from the present 1,571 to 1,632, according to the budget.

Budgeted for FCC broadcast activities is $3,947,000, compared to $3,771,000 appropriated by Congress this year.

Field engineering and monitoring work is allowed $4,779,000, against $4,860,000 appropriated this year.

The budget, in addition, contains $15,000,000 for educational tv grants to the states. This program is administered by the department of health, education and welfare.

The Federal Trade Commission is allowed $13,270,000 in the budget, compared to the $12,215,000 appropriated this year by congress and the 13,028,000 which had been included in President Kennedy's budget 12 months ago.

HOW TO IDENTIFY A NETWORK

One sure way to recognize a network is to watch for the station breaks.

An equally sure way is to watch its programs. The millions who viewed last September's "THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION OF '63," for example, could have had no doubt they were tuned to NBC.

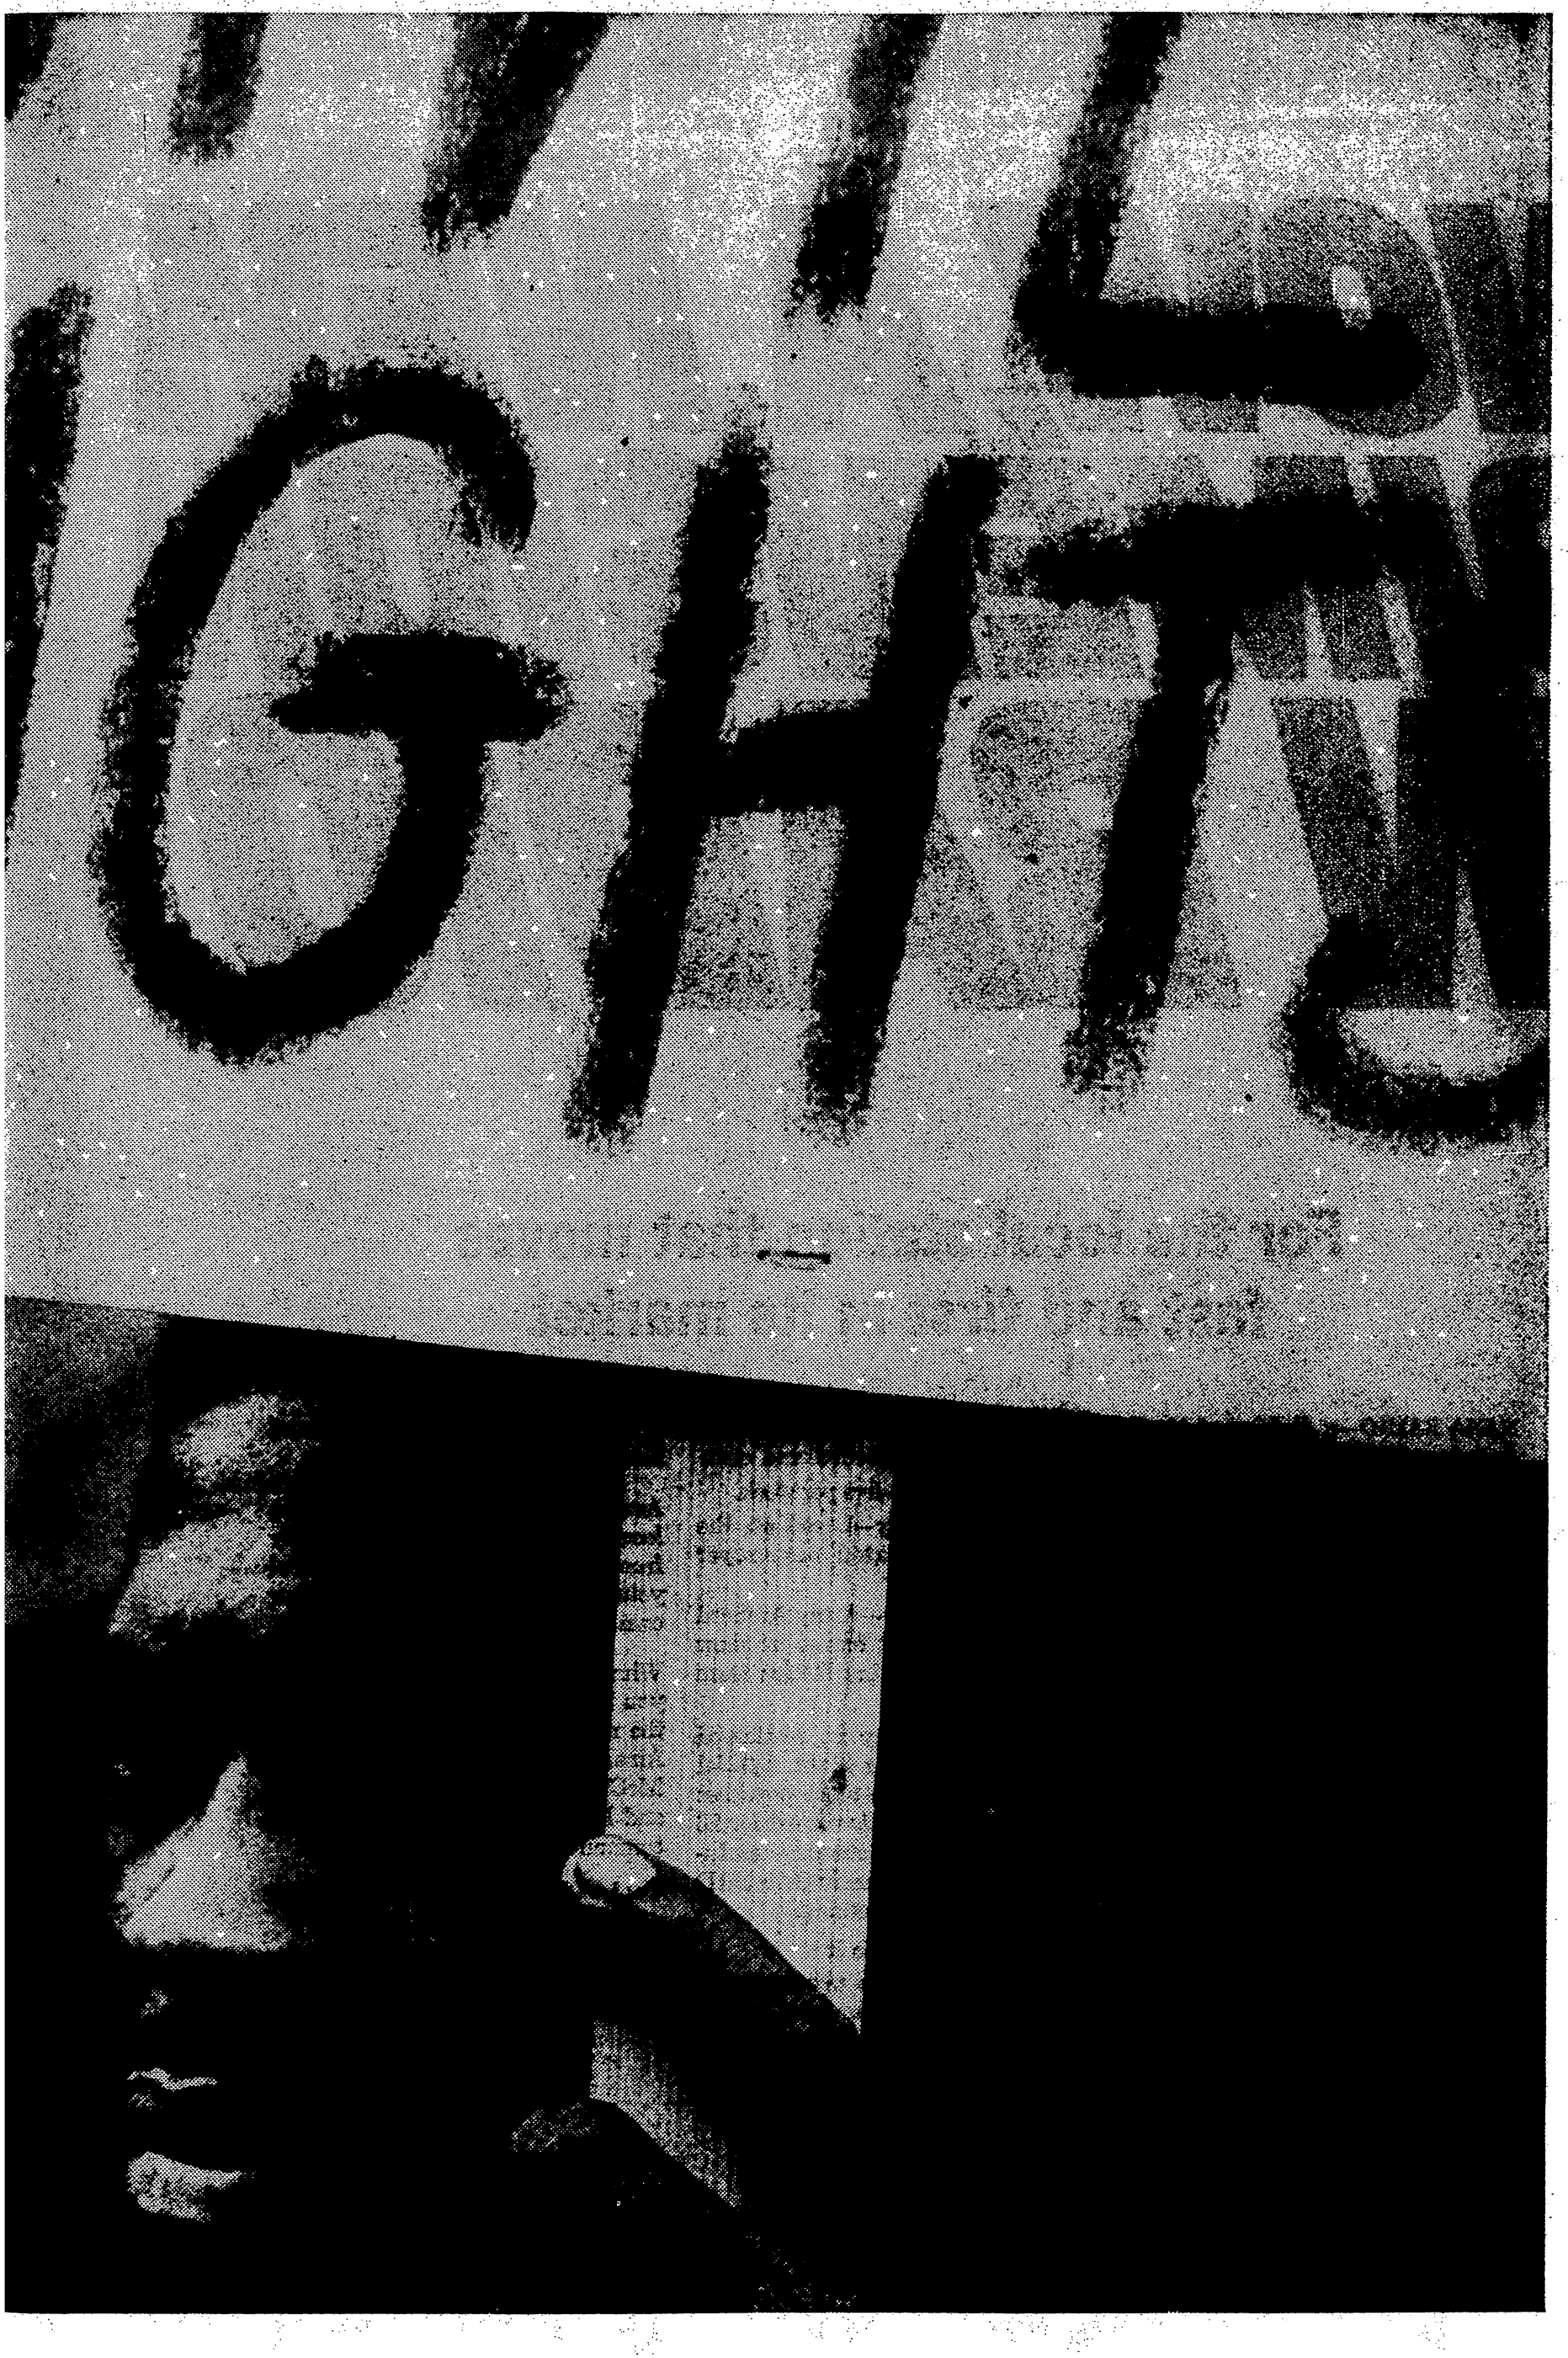
First, this three-hour study of American civil rights replaced an entire evening's prime-time schedule, the sort of unprecedented step that has become a trademark at this network.

Then, the very thoroughness of the program bore a clear NBC stamp. It reviewed the history of civil rights for the past 350 years; stopped at some 68 towns and cities to weigh the problem today; carefully explored the possible course of events in the future; and listened to spokesmen for every opinion on this complex question.

That the program maintained full interest for all of its three hours also revealed the practiced hand of NBC News. Typical of reviewers' comments the next day were, "I doubt that anyone caught up in it could have turned it off..." (Los Angeles Times), and "...it accomplished virtually the impossible—it started strong, it ended strong, and it didn't bog down in the middle." (Chicago's American).

All in all, "THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION OF '63" was so unmistakably an NBC program, it hardly seemed necessary to identify the network at the station breaks. But we did. It's a matter of regulation. The program itself, of course, was a matter of principle.

NBC



NOW, A NEW DIMENSION IN RADIO!

For the local station that moves fast and first in its market

NANA RADIO—a division of North American Newspaper Alliance offers you the opportunity to ride the crest of the new wave in radio programming with proven programs, newly produced for modern radio (some in stereo), plus all-new programs especially designed for today's radio.

NANA RADIO—Phase I

Half hour programs (in stereo)—
NANA Radio half-hours are modern half-hours—25 minutes in length.

Arch Oboler's Plays—narrated, directed and edited by Mr. Oboler.

The Fat Man—all-new scripts starring Tol Avery in the title role.

Quarter hour serial drama—five per week.

Pepper Young's Family—newly-edited, newly-recorded, newly-cast.

Big Sister—starring Paul McGrath; newly-edited, recorded and cast.

Five minute strips—five per week.

Dear Dorothy Dix—based on the NANA syndicated newspaper feature.

Hollywood Talking—Army Archerd with the biggest names in show business answering letters from listeners.

Program series may be purchased individually or in a block. Special discount given for a block purchase of Phase I—discounts earned for 26 and 52 weeks. Stations have exclusive right to programs in their SRD market area. More coming.

NANA RADIO—Phase II

All-new 25 minute programs in stereo, all-new quarter-hour serials, all-new five-minute features. Now in production—ready for airing March 1 and still more coming.

Block purchasers of Phase I will have first refusal on all new programs.

Available immediately to you, the local station only. When you buy from NANA RADIO you control your own show, your own rates, your own profit.

When you buy from NANA RADIO, you buy the 60-year-old reputation, the resources and solidity of North American Newspaper Alliance—Bell McClure—one of the world's oldest and largest syndicators in the mass communications field.

CALL • WRITE • WIRE • TWX COLLECT

NANA RADIO
Quality Radio for the Local Station
76 Ninth Ave.
New York City 11
Phone: 212 CH 2-6700
TWX: 212-640-6219

O'SEAS '64 GROSS: $68,000,000

'Don't Tell Me Homes, Tell Me Women'

Sliderule U., alma mater of the Madison Ave. time buyers, has expanded the curriculum. There are now courses in such as demographics and media mix.

Said advances has brought about a "sophistication" among the buying fraternity, as noted by Four Star Distribution's veepee and general manager Len Firestone, a longtime observer of the grads.

Says Firestone, there was a time when all they asked was the rating of the syndicated show being pitched and the competition. Then they hipped up the operation by taking note of the share of audience. Then followed a concentration on the homes and the ages of the viewers therein. Now it's been refined to the dames per household—"Don't tell me homes, tell me women," is the cry.

When once the agency would have paid $3 per thousand homes, it will now pay $4 per thousand women, and a show with a lower rating, but more women in the breakdown (based on the demographic material in the rating books) will like as not get the nod.

In this eyeing of the women, says Firestone, the buyers are concentrating on tv's day-to-night transitional hours. In the "media mix," the evening is when the audience switches over from kid to adult. To satisfy the spot buyers (a recent Four Star survey showed that almost 80% of the products pitched in the transition were those women buy) stations are in many cases tossing out the kid cartoon strips, etc., in favor of a family type entry that will catch the kinder and the frau. And half-hours are favored over hours because the build of audience can be interrupted by the longer show.

Big in the media mix hours are food and soap advertisers, but also beer makers and others who have found out that it's the women who do the purchasing in a swoop of the supermarket.

The situation has alerted Four Star Distribution to feeding rating info on their shows to the agency folk on a regular basis, and also to consultation with top rep firms (who more and more are advising stations on programming buys) as to specifics the stations and advertisers are looking for.

LBJ Says 'Aye' to TV Press . Conferences, Seeks Suggestions

Washington, Jan. 21.

President Johnson has officially informed the Radio-Television News Directors Assn. that he will hold televised press conferences—and asked for suggestions on "making more effective use of television and radio."

The President gave the assurance and made the request in a letter to Edward F. Ryan, head of WTOP-TV, Washington, news and also prexy of the Assn.

Ryan, in a subsequent statement to the Assn. membership asked broadcasting newsmen to "give particular attention" to this paragraph in the President's letter:

"You may be sure that we will make full use of television in the months ahead and television will be permitted to cover some of our press conferences. We would be most interested in any suggestions you have in making more effective use of television and radio."

Ryan asked suggestions be mailed to him by broadcasting newsmen. A special committee will correlate them for presentation to the White House, he said.

He will head the committee, and members will be John H. Thompson of Los Angeles, Richard E. Cheverton of Grand Rapids, William G. Garry of Chicago and William Small, William B. Monroe and Robert H. Fleming, all of Washington.

WABC-TV Juice-Up Via Feature Pix

There's nothing like a fat film library to beef up local ratings, judging from the performance of WABC-TV in the New York market over the last four months. Two feature presentations, one in the afternoon from 5 to 6:30 p.m. and another at 11:20 p.m., have shot up almost 300% since the ABC-TV flagship station started juicing up its film buying.

WABC-TV has been trying to buy up as many films as it can lay its hands on. Various deals for film packages over the past half-year have added up to a $5,000,000 outlay for WABC-TV, but it has paid off. Where the ratings have triplied, so have the advertising rates in time periods that are crucial for local stations.

Along with the accent on stronger film fare, WABC-TV has moved to deemphasize and eliminate kiddie programming, once a regular programming staple. This has become a general policy for all of

(Continued on page 66)

WBBM-TV's Pix Bundle

Chicago, Jan. 21.

WBBM-TV did some heavy shopping in the feature film marts before the last year ended and in a two-week period made three separate buys that brought 291 new post-1950 titles into the fold.

CBS station bought 36 20th-Fox pictures from Seven Arts (Vol. 8, "Films of the '50s"); 40 Metro titles from MGM-TV and 215 Universal features from Seven Arts.

Cleve. Stations Shift & Scratch; Object: Publicity

Cleveland, Jan. 21.

A series of personnel changes in the area's promotion-publicity departments may herald a broadcasting donnybrook among outlets vying for newspaper and trade space.

Westinghouse Broadcasting continues to pave the way in personnel changes with the announcement that Hugh Harper is leaving his television post and with James Munro slated to move in from New York to direct the publicity spot. Harper, who held the position for 14 months, is the fifth man in just over two years to be involved in the Group W's radio-tv flackery. Recently, KYW-radio hired Merle Levin. At one time, publicity was integrated with Charles Getz as director.

WJW-TV has lost Sheldon Saltman who will direct MCA's television promotion activities. The Storer outlet is now interviewing applicants including several who hopefully wish to leave other area outlets. The third tv outlet, WEWS, recently named Dave Arnold to succeed Robert K. Doerr as publicity and promotion director.

In radio, WERE is reported realigning its promotion-publicity department to continue the station's wholesome community service programming, while at WHK, Linda Zajas has resigned from the promotion department to go into teaching. Mrs. Eileen Kaufman heads the department. WGAR recently named Al Henderson as promotion-publicity head and the station is moving more actively in the field than in past years, while WDCK, which picked up CBS a week ago, is said to be considering a more active role under the station's guidance of Dan Bellus.

60% OF DOMESTIC SYNDIE VOLUME

Foreign market for U.S. tv product, which is estimated to have gone from $53,000,000 in '62 to $60,000,000 in '63, is forecast to hit a record of over $68,000,000 in '64.

The estimate, reflecting a steady climb in foreign grosses, encompasses the sizeable Canadian market. The estimated $68,000,000 covers all types of product, from telefilm series to cartoons to features.

If domestic syndication remains at its '63 level of about $100,000,000, '64 will find the foreign gross climbing to over 60% of the domestic syndication gross. Thus the situation climaxes a development paralleling that of the motion picture industry.

Among the factors contributing to the continued climb of overseas revenues is the hot competition among U.S. distributors for the foreign dollar. There was a time when the foreign market, for some distributors, was a miss or hit proposition. Now, in contrast, everyone is in the act and from Teheran to Singapore to Tokyo to London, representatives of U.S. distributors are pushing hard to sell their wares. This situation, as in past years, is expected to result in hiked overall grosses.

Helping the general overseas picture are freer trading conditions in Japan, one of the key markets. Japan last year lifted its dollar ceiling for foreign product for particular stations. Instead, the Japanese government made an overall dollar ceiling, a provision allowing the price paid for individual programs to be increased. The hope is that in '64, Japan might become a totally free market, without any overall dollar restrictions.

Other factors seen contributing to higher foreign grosses include a forecast of slightly increased prices in Australia, in Canada, Peru, Argentina and Brazil.

There are still nettlesome problems in particular markets. Brazil, for example, which is expected to yield greater prices is bugged by inflation. In Britain, the tough quota limiting foreign product still is expected to prevail. In April, though, BBC's second channel gets underway, a UHF'er which will open the avenue to some American product. The situation in Australia also will be helped by additional stations which are due to get on the air there.

While the markets of the Near East and Africa are small, the growth of tv in that area of the world will offer additional outlets for American product and contribute to the overall gross of U.S. product.

Slightly better prices are forecast for the markets of Mexico and the Philippines. An easement of the remittance problem in the Philippines also is forecast.

Features, too, are getting more of a ride overseas. The foreign market on the whole remains unsophisticated in the use of features on tv. Slight increase in the overall gross of pix on tv in the foreign market is seen for '64, though.

'Battle Line's' Lineup

Official Films reports that initial sales of the new year have brought total markets for its half-hour archives series, "Battle Line," to 134.

Stations added since Jan. 1 include WICU, Erie; WPTV, Palm Beach; KVOS, Bellingham, Wash.; KMVT, Twin Falls; KOTA, Rapid City, S.D.; WRAL, Raleigh-Durham; WHIS, Bluefield, W.V.; and KGLO, Mason City.

Ruttenberg's WNEW Slot

Bernard Ruttenberg has been named publicity chief for WNEW Radio, N.Y., replacing Lou Frankel who resigned.

Ruttenberg moves to WNEW from the corporate headquarters of Metromedia where he was assistant to Phil Cowan, public relations v.p.

'Car 54, Where Are You Now And What Happened In Between?'

WNBC Homosexual Theme

WNBC-TV is blueprinting a telementary on the New York homosexual, most likely for presentation on the "New York Illustrated" half-hour pubaffairs series.

Exec producer of pubaffairs Len Weinles says there is a treatment already prepared, but the show has not yet been scheduled.

London Jammed With Yank Reps Pitching Product

The growing competition of selling shows abroad is illustrated in London, where there are some 50 American sales representatives pitching shows to the English market.

These sales representatives, according to CBS Films foreign sales v.p. Ralph Baruch, are permanently based in London. Baruch, commenting on the outlook in the foreign market for '64, forecast some increase in general, due to additional channels in some markets and the opening up of a few channels in markets new to tv.

At the same time, though, Baruch saw the growth of competition, not only from American companies, but the British to a greater degree. He also didn't wax optimistic on the elimination of quotas and other restrictions. Costs of maintaining and operating a foreign division continue high also, he said.

Growth factors in '64, as listed by the CBS Films foreign sales topper, include a second channel in France and in England (BBC), a third regional channel in Germany and the addition of an educational tv station in Tokyo.

Previous year was marked by the second channel in Italy, second channel in Germany, the growth of tv in African countries, and the installation of additional channel in South America, Singapore and other markets. Canada had CTV, the commercial network, operating for a full year in '63.

Baruch forecast a 10 to 15% increase in the gross of CBS Films from abroad in '64. In '63, CBS Films, in a record year, chalked up an increase of 32% in gross sales from the international market. Baruch attributed the '63 increase to the growing foreign program catalog of CBS Films and the new channels abroad. Costs, too went up, he added.

New Mexico Townsfolk Vote to Retain Name Of Truth or Consequences

Albuquerque, Jan. 21.

By a vote of 891 to 762, the residents of the New Mexico community of Truth or Consequences have voted to retain the unique name, as the result of a city-wide election.

The question voters decided was whether the town was to retain the T or C handle, pegged after the Ralph Edwards radio and television show, or return to the original town title of Hot Springs.

The name was changed in 1950 to Truth or Consequences after Edwards promised the city nationwide publicity if it would change. Since that time, he has annually returned to the town in April for the yearly Ralph Edwards Fiesta. He brings with him a planeload of Hollywood film-tv names.

The whole matter came out again last September when a group of diehard Hot Springs namers petitioned the city council to call an election to vote on the matter.

Syndication execs are wondering what kind of a deal NBC Films made to land the "Car 54, Where Are You?" off-web package after an earlier deal fell through with the Wrather Corp.'s Telesynd syndication wing.

Considered a hot entry in the off-network syndication sweepstakes, "Car 54" originally went to Telesynd under a tie-in that involved the Wrather Corp.'s toy subsidiary, A. C. Gilbert. It's believed that one of the reasons for the fold of the Telesynd deal was the financial difficulties encountered late last year by A. C. Gilbert, as reported in the financial press.

A Telsynd exec will only say that A. C. Gilbert was interested in "Car 54" as a vehicle. Reports are that the series was to be sold to local stations with a built-in A. C. Gilbert commercial buy, but Gilbert hauled in on big promotion plans slated for various toys and games.

It's also known the Eupolis Productions in early negotiations was seeking a production tie-in for the show's creator-producer Nat Hiken which has led observers to surmise that NBC Films may have landed the show via a deal for Hiken with NBC-TV. This, however, is emphatically denied by the NBC programming department. (In fact Hiken has a pilot going for him on CBS). At the same time, NBC Films brass clammed up completely on any inquiries about the contract, referring all to Howard Epstein, a lawyer and negotiating exec at a Eupolis.

Since the ABC-TV o&o's made an initial buy of "Car 54" through Telesynd, it was figured the package would land at ABC Films. Any how, the current question doesn't seem to be so much, "Car 54, Where Are You?" But rather, "Car 54, How Did You Get Where You Are?"

WTOP's $1,000,000 3-Year Ball Pact

Washington, Jan. 21.

WTOP radio and television paid nearly $1,000,000 for three-year broadcast rights to the perennial last place Washington Senators baseball team.

Station refused to divulge the actual amount of the contract, but said it was very close to the $1,000,000 mark. The figure includes a bonus of nearly $50,000 if the Senators make the first division in the American League, a not-too-likely occurence according to baseball insiders.

Contract calls for televising up 35 games a season. All games will be carried on WTOP radio.

WTOP will have first refusal on renewal when the pact runs out at the end of the 1966 season.

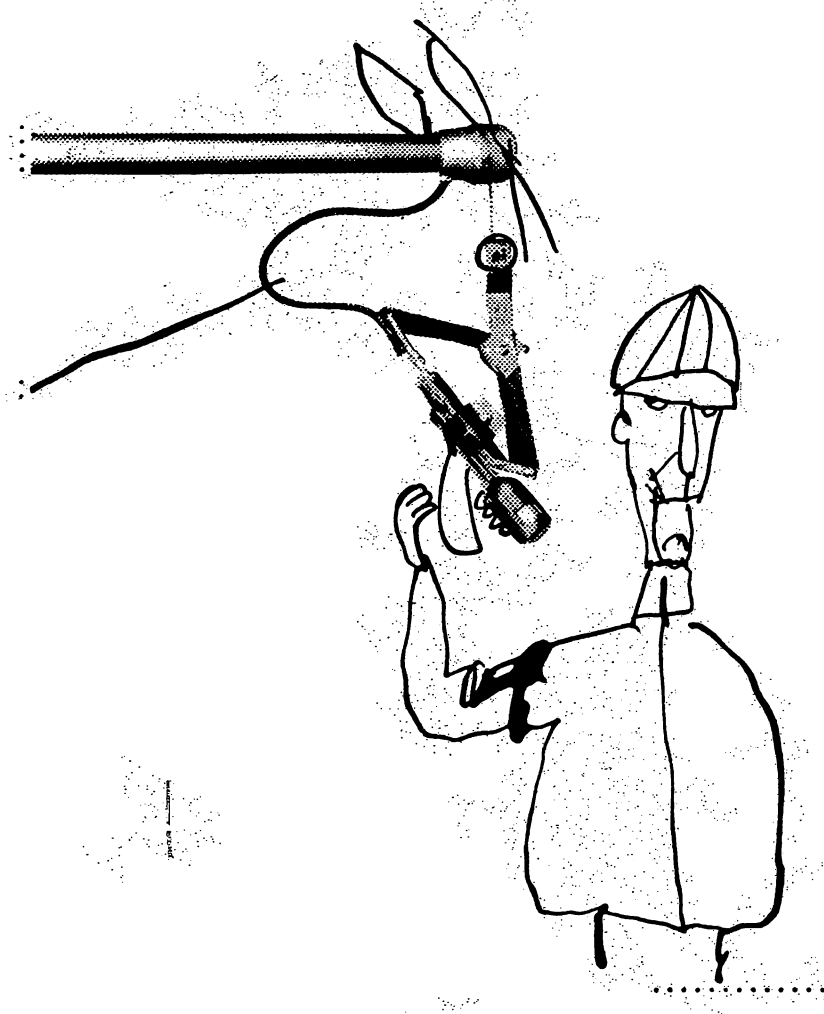
Dan Daniels and John McLean are expected to continue as announcers.

WTOP has carried Senators games for the last five years.

'BIOG' RATINGS UP 2D TIME AROUND

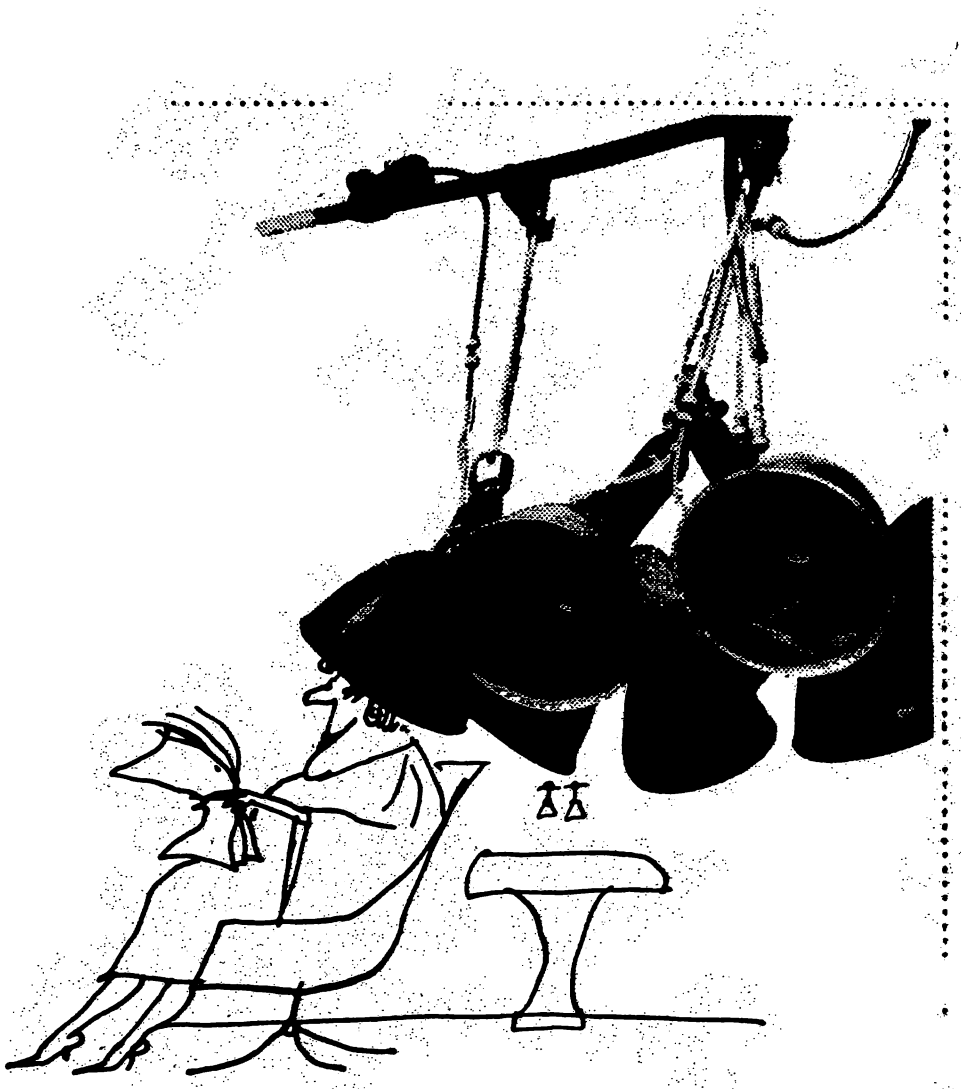
Like good whiskey, it could be that telementaries improve with age. Anyhow, Official Films archives series, "Biography," in several instances, is getting better ratings the second time around in the New York market.

Official prexy Seymonr Reed, says that the Nielsen's and/or ARB's show ratings up as much as 53% in repeat showings on WNBC-TV. Reed figures the increase in numbers emanates in the educational values, the family aspects (parents who remember tell the kids to view) and word-of-mouth endorsement. Viewers, he says, are growing more aware of tv's role in educating as well as entertaining, and "Biog" builds new numbers while keeping a large seg of the old for repeats.



Here are the latest results, straight from the horse's mouth. Our Nielsen average audience rating for the season to date is 19.9. The second network is two lengths back at 17.9. The third network comes in at 15.5. Needless to say the smart money is on the winner. CBS Television Network

Based on Nielsen Television Index estimates subject to qualifications which the CBS Television Network will supply on request. (NTI Average Audience, 6-11pm, seven nights, October-December 1963)



We're all set with the ladies – attracting 57% bigger daytime audiences than the next network, 106% more than the third – and leading for the sixth straight year. The beauty part is that it may be permanent.
CBS Television Network

Based on Nielsen Television Index estimates subject to qualifications which the CBS Television Network will supply on request. (NTI Average Audience, 7am-6pm, Monday-Friday, October-December 1963)

Eye on New York

Every Tuesday in prime evening time, Eye on New York captures the magic of New York, the mecca of fascinating people, the city like no other city anywhere.

In its opening program, Eye on New York turned its inquisitive cameras on the business aspects of show business, as seen through the eyes of a Broadway "angel." Sir Alec Guinness, Zero Mostel, Maurice Evans, Mary Martin and other Broadway personalities appeared on the program. On January 28th, Robert Trout, a man who enjoys the finer things of life, takes his viewers inside some of Manhattan's luxury apartment houses. Coming up in subsequent weeks: "Bunnies, Bachelors and Broken Bones," which could only be about a ski weekend; "...and Suddenly You're Alone," in which actress Maureen O'Sullivan suggests what it's like to be one of the 750,000 widows in the big city; E. G. Marshall in a portrait of William Carlos Williams, a man who found time for two eventful lives, poet and physician; the stories of couples who decided that love is worth the many problems a mixed marriage creates. Every Tuesday night at 7:30, the spectrum of life in the city.

Very simply... Eye on New York is, we think, local television at its best. Created by a television station uniquely sensitive to the special magic that is New York.

WCBS-TV, CHANNEL ◉2

You Can't Say U-All at U-T

Knoxville, Jan. 21

"Hootenanny-U.S.A." started taping two shows at the Univ. of Tennessee today (Tues.) after a big flutter about the 7,800 students being booked in the "hillbilly image." A petition drawn by students protested such action to ABC and sponsors of the shows, which are to be on tv Jan. 25 and March 7.

All of the protest was due to a misunderstanding, according to U-T officials. A rumor started about the campus that students would be required to wear "hillbilly" clothes, blue jeans and checked shirts. Also calico dresses and sit on bales of hay for the filming.

The Orange and White, official student weekly publication brought the controversy to light in a news story and editorial. Julian Harris, public relations director at U-T, stated that ABC had not requested that such an image be given the university. "As a matter fact we would not have permitted this version of our campus," he said.

After learning about the agreement between U-T and ABC, the students withdrew their protest and petitions. Jack Linkletter, the mc, and his staff, arrived well in advance and completed plans for the two-day filming.

Granada's '63 Thrust In Global Vidpix Market as Sales Mount

London, Jan. 21.

Granada-TV sold more than 500 hours of vidprogramming around the world in 1963, according to Paddy Crookshank, the station's offshore sales topper. Naming '63 as a "good year for foreign sales," he reveals that Granada's "Saki," and "Mighty and Mystical" found markets in the U.S. Canadian webs have taken such series as "On Trial," "The Army Game," "Animal Story" and "A to Zoom."

"Saki," along with the "Maupassant" and "Victorians" dramatic skeins, has been picked up in Australia, New Zealand and Rhodesia.

Station's blockbusting "Coronation Street" has been sold to both Australia and New Zealand and the outlet's rapidly building pub-affairs show, "World In Action" is being screened in Italy, Germany, Australia, Nigeria, Holland, New Zealand, Belgium, Rhodesia and several other countries in the Middle and Far East.

Granada has just wrapped up a German deal involving sales of such documentaries as "The Boer War," "The Fanatics," "A Camera Goes To War," "The Troubles" plus four programs in its new "Men Of Our Time" skein. Latter series has also penetrated the Iron Curtain and has been taken by Hungarian television.

Hitting the Japanese market, Granada sold 39 eps of "Four Feather Falls," cowboy puppet show from the A.P. Films stable.

The Emmy award winning production of "War and Peace" has been acquired by ATN-7, Sydney for transmission in six major cities Down Under.

WTOP Symposium Innovation In D.C.

Washington, Jan. 21.

WTOP radio's "Symposium" show, itself something of a programming breakthrough, has come up with still another new idea.

Mixing a heady highbrow brew from 8:10-10:30 p.m. every Sunday since Nov. 10, the station decided to tape four Chekhov plays for an upcoming show and bring in a live audience to listen.

Four actors from D.C.'s Arena Stage gave the dramatic readings with about 40 in the audience.

Taping with a live audience was a Washington first, according to claims by WTOP v.p. and Radio General Manager Lloyd Dennis Jr. He said, "There's every reason to believe that nothing like this has ever happened before in Washington."

Plays were adapted from Chekhov works by Symposium writer-host Roy Meachum. They will be broadcast Sunday (19) on Symposium series which Dennis calls "experimental radio for the few," have included readings from Kafka and Christopher Marlow.

Also featured have been presentations of the first two parts of Aeschylus' "Oresteian Triology: Agammemnon and Choephoroe."

Programs on the life of a Soviet artist, the English language and the guitar have also been aired.

SALE OF WJHL-TV BRINGS $2,171,000

Knoxville, Jan. 21.

Owners of WJHL-TV have received $2,171,000 as the selling price for their video facility. Announcement of the sale to Roy H. Park of Ithica, N. Y. was made by W. H. Lancaster, chairman of the board of the station, and W. H. Lancaster Jr., president and general manager. The station is located at Johnson City, midway between Knoxville and Briston.

Sale finalization will be subject to approval by the FCC. Park, a native of North Carolina, also owns WNCT-TV at Greeneville, N.C. He recently purchased WDEF-TV in Chattanooga.

John Reed King's Big Talent Hunt

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

The talent opportunity vacuum that has existed for many years since vaude died and niteries dwindled with the rise of tv is being partially filled in Pitt as John Reed King begins auditions for his show on KDKA-TV.

This show is taped every day at 1:30 for showing the next morning at 9 and uses out of town guests and most of the performers working in town. However, his sources are constantly drying up and he now feels that a concentrated effort toward developing the unknown amateur of professional will help his show and help the career of some performers now completely unknown.

King said that he and his producer, Derk Zimmerman, will hold talent auditions for everyone who applies. Their appearance on the show will not be the end, for followup attention will be given them by every talent buyer in the area who he can get interested in the project.

"We will invite all the agents and club owners of the area to watch the show or come to the station for the auditions. When we have a singer that might have the talent for the Civic Light Opera, we will invite those people down. We will promote the outside appearance of these performance on the air and do everything to help their careers."

King said there was little difference in his plans on whether or not the performer was an amateur or professional.

Pitt Cites Group W

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

The Group W stations will be given a special award in "Good Government" at the Junior Chamber of Commerce "Man of the Year" banquet at the Pittsburgh Hilton on Jan. 27. The award comes as a result of "Focal Point," the station's year long report on the district's unemployment problems.

In another category, communications, Bill Burns will also be given a special award. Burns is the KDKA-TV newscaster who has the highest rating of any local newscaster in the country.

MERLE TUCKER IN N.M. GUBERNATORIAL BID

Albuquerque, Jan. 21.

Longtime New Mexico radio broadcaster Merle Tucker last week formally announced that he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of this state.

Tucker, 52, owns indie radio station KGAK in Gallup, N. M. He is a former state prexy of the New Mexico Broadoasters Assn. He is also a former owner of the Gallup (NM) Times.

Schnoz Wows 'Em At TRAC Hoopla

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Largest crowd of the year to attend a TRAC (Television & Radio Advertising Club) luncheon turned out at the Warwick. Blair Clark, general manager and v.p. of CBS News, was guest speaker, but officials credited the turnout to the presence of Jimmy Durante, this year's recipient of the club's Liberty Bell award.

The comedian came 45 minutes late for the luncheon and apologized with: "I was up until half past 6 this morning conferring with Capt. Clarence Ferguson about the Lillian Reis case.

The alibi drew a roar from the crowd, since the Ferguson was the police nemesis who rounded up Miss Reis and other figures in the alleged $478,000 Pottsville, Pa., burglary. The policeman also happens to be a close friend and virtual bodyguard for Durante during the comic's visits here.

Chairman Lew Klein presented the award, a replica of the Liberty Bell, which promptly fell apart in Durante's hands. "You know, it didn't look second hand," he commented. "Dis will cost me $40 to get it fixed." TRAC president Klein said the expenditure would make Durante a life member.

Clark's address was concerned with "the four dark days," the coverage of events surrounding the slaying of President Kennedy. "It surprised us that the public was surprised that broadcasting could do so good a job," the CBS veepee said. "We thought we had built up a certain amount of credentials with the conventions and other events."

CBS missed the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, because it felt "an obligation to cover the story of public mourning. There was this great contrast throughout the day, between the greatest political story and the greatest crime story of the century."

CBS had spent months preparing for the JFK inaugural, he said "but we only had a few hours to prepare for those four momentous days. When any of the networks left the actual news story for other memorial events, there was a tremendous tuneout. The sleep quota for CBS people averaged two and a half hours a day."

NAB'S ENGINEERING AWARD TO DEWITT

Washington, Jan. 21.

John DeWitt, Jr., prez of WSM in Nashville and the first person to bounce radio signals off the moon, will receive NAB's 1964 Engineering Achievement Award.

DeWitt, who also helped develop radar, will be presented the award at the Broadcast Engineering Conference of NAB's convention April 8 in Chicago.

The station owner performed his moon feat in 1946 when he was with the Army Signal Corps' lab in Belmar, N.J.

Westhampton Films Sets Post-'60 Features

Westhampton Films, according to v.p. Henry S. White, is currently assembling its next group of post-'60 features for tv.

First Westhampton group has been sold to WABC-TV, N. Y.; WXYZ, Detroit; WNBQ, Chicago; WKRC, Cincinnati; KGO, San Francisco; KABC and KTTV, Los Angeles; WMTW, Portland; WKBW, Buffalo; and WTEN, Albany, among other stations.

Accord on Revenue Split Averts Trans-Canada Break With CTV

Toronto, Jan. 21.

Weekend discussions from indie trans-Canada affiliates with reps gathering in Toronto, threatened to break up CTV Network. But member stations reached an accord, with its Transcanada outlets reaching a new affiliation agreement to take place next fall.

Spencer Caldwell, CTV prexy, said this agreement will be placed before the member stations and the network board of directors for ratification next week. He would not divulge the terms.

He did admit changes in the avenues of revenue sharing and allocation of programming on prime time hours (under the original contract, the Transcanada stations receive 75% of commercial revenue, with 25% going to the national headquarters of the network here as compared with the 55-50 deal which the state-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has with its affiliates.)

Caldwell said the revenue ratio would be changed in the new agreement but would not divulge how much meant defeat for Caldwell, who was unable to sway affiliates who were determined to hang the blame on a share of prime time sponsorship in which they divide more revenue than they would from their share of CTV Television Network Ltd. here.

Mary Has Her KAKE

Wichita, Jan. 21.

ABC-TV, which has been using on-the-air personalities from its affiliate stations for guest appearances in the daytime "Day In Court" series, has cast the wife of KAKE-TV general manager Martin Umansky in the episode to be telecast next Monday (27). She'll have a featured role.

It's not nepotism, however. Mary Umansky is one of the leading actresses here and has been played opposite name stars in many of the Wichita Community Theatre productions.

Kaycee KCMO'S Strike Stalemated

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

Strike of AFTRA members against KCMO Broadcasting division of Meredith Broadcasting appeared to be at a stalemate at week's end. About 30 AFTRA staff members went on strike Jan. 10, and were joined last Tuesday (14) by about 30 station engineers, members of Local 1259 IBEW who refused to cross the picket line.

Television, AM and FM radio stations and Muzak, also owned by KCMO, continued operating with a major effort by station supervisory personnel. This corps was supplemented by engineering supervisory personnel from stations in Syracuse, N.Y., Omaha and Phoenix, also owned by Meredith.

Joseph Kramer, AFTRA president and KCMO newsman, said several issues are involved, but the impasse is believed to be more over job security and staff duties than money. E. K. Hartenbower, KCMO general manager, had no comment on the issues. One issue is a difference over whether announcers who are not newsmen will broadcast news and sports.

About 10 employes who are members of the projectionist and stagehands union, IATSE, did not go on strike, according to Hartenbower. Beryle Carlew, Federal Mediation and Conciliation commissioner said there was no indication of either of the parties wanting to negotiate, and no meeting had been set up to Sunday. Union members said they are prepared for a lengthy holdout, and expect the strike to become a matter of weeks.

WGN-TV'S 4-YEAR BALLCAST CONTRACT

Chicago, Jan. 21.

WGN-TV, which has been telecasting the Chicago White Sox baseball games since it first went on the air in 1948, has signed another four-year pact with the American League team for exclusive tv rights. The indie station will televise a total of 64 games this summer, including 42 daytime and six nighttime home games, 13 night games on the road, and three twilight-night double headers.

Station also telecasts the home games of the Chicago Cubs. On radio the White Sox games are carried by WCFL and the Cubs on WGN Radio.

Reade-Sterling Acquires Jersey U Franchise

Atlantic Video Corp., holder of a UHF construction permit in Monmouth County, N. J., has been acquired by Walter Reade-Sterling, Inc.

Atlantic Video held the broadcast license for WRTV, Channel 58, in Eatontown, N. J., until that station suspended broadcast activities in 1955. Walter Reade Jr., board chairman, described the move as "another corporate diversification step within the entertainment industry." He also pointed out that "the signal from a properly located Monmouth County station would cover part of the New York metropolitan area."

Sohio Off First Time in 28 Years

Cleveland, Jan. 21.

For the first time in approximately 28 years, Standard Oil of Ohio does not have a sponsored newscast on the air. Sohio axed its last program this month with the cancellation of the 7:45 a.m. 10-minute Bill Tomkins Monday-through-Friday KYW show. The newscast was immediately picked up on a 52-week basis by East Ohio Gas.

Earlier, following a ruckus with WJW-TV, Sohio dropped its 11 p.m., across-the-board show, when the station fired Sohio newscaster Warren Guthhrie, Western Reserve University speech department head, who now does a Mon.-thru-Fri. WHK 15-minute stanza at 8 a.m.

Sohio, at one time, ruled the newswaves with an Ohio network of 10 radio ou tlets originating from the former WTAM (now KYW) with 10-minute newscasts at 7:45 a.m., the 6-7 p.m. period, and five minutes at noon and 11 p.m. When television arrived, Sohio latched onto the 11 p.m. spot on Channel 8 and held it until dropping sponsorship last fall.

ABC-TV O&O'S IN POST-50 U BUYS

Seven Arts has sold its package of 215 post-1950 Universal features to three ABC-TV owned stations in Los Angeles (KABC-TV), San Francisco (KGO-TV), and Detroit (WXYZ). This is the same group of films recently sold to four CBS owned stations in New York (WCBS-TV), Chicago (WBBM-TV), Philadelphia (WCAU-TV) and St. Louis (KMO) for about $15,000,000.

Package, of which 109 films are in color, includes such titles as "Magnificient Obsession" "The Glenn Miller Story," "The Far Country," "Winchester '73" "Tomahawk" and "The Shrike."

13 for 'Death Valley'

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Thirteen is the lucky number for telefilm's oldest series, "Death Valley Days," now in its 12th season.

Producer Robert Stabler of Filmaster Productions has received the greenlight to prepare 13 scripts for the 13th season of "DVD" from McCann-Erickson.

Ad agency reps U.S. Borax Co., which not only sponsors the series but is also owner of the negatives. Stabler has three more telefilms to put into production to round out the 13th season of "DVD."

"SUPERLATIVE...Theodore H. White's best-selling book, 'The Making of the President – 1960,' was fashioned into a superlative television documentary told both in absorbing visual terms and in Mr. White's own prose of skillful understatement."

—JACK GOULD—New York Times

"MOMENTOUS...a television achievement. One of the great programs of 1963 or any year. A remarkable slab of history, perhaps the most remarkable in electronic journalism."

—CECIL SMITH—Los Angeles Times

"SPELLBINDING...90-minute political blockbuster."

—DWIGHT NEWTON—San Francisco Examiner

"EXQUISITE recapitulation of that memorable year...One of the television events of this or any season."

—RICK DUBROW—United Press International

"BRILLIANT TV adaptation of the book. I'm certain will be among the season's most talked about shows."

—BERNIE HARRISON—Washington Evening Star

"STUNNING...superb...a fantastic contender for Emmy Awards. This was television for the history books."

—REED PORTER—Hollywood Reporter

"MASTERFUL...It should be rerun until every adult American sees it. All of its elements woven with extreme skill. Immense stature."

—ROBERT J. WILLIAMS—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin

"WONDERFUL...deserves the attention of every viewer with an interest in politics, history or famous men...a fine contribution to the understanding of the main elements of campaigns for the nation's highest office. The documentary has a permanence about it."

—LAWRENCE LAURENT—Washington Post

"EXCELLENT...THE MAKING OF THE PRESIDENT is a film document which will be viewed again and again by generations to come. Outstanding..."

—ANTHONY LaCAMERA—Boston Record American

"SUPERB!"

—ARTHUR E. FETRIDGE—Boston Herald

"SPECTACULAR...the most talked about, most memorable and most worthy of this year's television programs."

—ERNIE KREILING—Santa Monica Outlook

"OUTSTANDING!"

—BEN GROSS—New York Daily News

"MAGNIFICENT...superbly captured the drama and excitement of that fierce campaign..."

—PERCY SHAIN—Boston Globe

"ENTHRALLING...packed with drama, excitement, humor, yes, even suspense...memorable."

—HARRY HARRIS—Philadelphia Inquirer

The Making of the President 1960

Based on Theodore H. White's Pulitzer Prize-Winning Book

Produced and Directed by MEL STUART
Written by THEODORE H. WHITE
Narrated by MARTIN GABEL
Music by ELMER BERNSTEIN

A DAVID L. WOLPER PRODUCTION
(IN ASSOCIATION WITH ABC NEWS)

Televised December 29, 1963 on the ABC Television Network

Sponsored by the Xerox Corp.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week six different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U.S.

NEW ORLEANS

STATIONS: WWL, WDSU, WVUE. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963 (Omitting Nov. 3 - 5)

RK.	Top Network Shows	Sta.	Total Area Homes Reached	Metro Area Rtg
1.	Beverly Hillbillies	WWL	203,700	53
2.	Dick Van Dyke	WWL	172,600	46
3.	Bonanza	WDSU	169,400	40
4.	Mon. Night Movie	WDSU	147,800	37
5.	Candid Camera	WWL	145,000	44
6.	What's My Line	WWL	132,700	45
7.	Mr. Novak	WDSU	131,200	31
8.	Andy Griffith	WWL	126,100	35
9.	Int'l Showtime	WDSU	124,800	28
10.	Petticoat Junction	WWL	122,300	30

RK.	Top Syndicated Shows Day & Time	Sta.	Dist.	Tot. Area Homes Reached	Met. Area Rtg.
1.	Bat Masterson (Sat. 3:30)	WWL	Economee	108,100	30
2.	Honeymooners (Wed. 10:00)	WWL	CBS Films	76,100	26
3.	Mike Hammer (Mon. 10:00)	WWL	MCA	75,900	26
4.	Lawbreakers; Redigo (Tues. 7:30)	WDSU	Official	75,100	17
5.	Highway Patrol (Mon.-Fri. 6:00)	WWL	Economee	69,100	20
6.	Naked City (Fri. 10:00)	WWL	Screen Gems	69,000	23
7.	Adv. In Paradise (Sat. 5:30)	WDSU	20 Fox TV	64,400	14
8.	Marry A Millionaire (Thurs. 10:00)	WWL	NTA	63,400	21
9.	Whiplash (Tues. 10:00)	WWL	ITC	59,300	20
10.	Yogi Bear (Mon. 5:00)	WDSU	Screen Gems	57,200	16

Top Competition	Sta.	Total Homes
Matinee; Inside Spts.	WDSU	25,900
Esso Rpt; Edit; Spts.	WDSU	42,600
Esso Rpt; Edit; Spts.	WDSU	52,200
Red Skelton	WWL	88,600
Huntley-Brinkley	WDSU	106,400
Esso Rpt; Edit; Spts.	WDSU	43,400
Twilight Zone	WWL	55,100
Weekend News; Wea.	WWL	63,100
Esso Rpt; Edit; Spts.	WDSU	50,900
Esso Rpt; Edit; Spts.	WDSU	44,300
Early Show; News; Spts.	WWL	35,300

PROVIDENCE, R.I.

STATIONS: WTEV, WJAR, WPRO. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963 (Omitting Nov. 3 - 5)

1.	Bonanza	WJAR	159,700	36	1.	Death Valley Days (Mon. 7:00)	WJAR	U.S. Borax	106,100	19	Detectives — WTEV 47,000
2.	Dr. Kildare	WJAR	146,900	35	2.	M Squad (Fri. 7:00)	WJAR	MCA	80,200	11	Newsbeat — WPRO 43,200
3.	Hazel	WJAR	145,000	33	3.	Ripcord (Thurs. 7:00)	WJAR	UA-TV	77,100	15	Newsbeat — WPRO 36,300
4.	Beverly Hillbillies	WPRO	123,400	31	4.	Shannon (Wed. 7:00)	WJAR	Screen Gems	76,400	14	Newsbeat — WPRO 47,400
5.	Int'l Showtime	WJAR	119,600	32	5.	Peter Gunn (Mon. 9:30)	WJAR	Official	58,300	12	Andy Griffith — WPRO 110,000
6.	Bob Hope	WJAR	119,000	26	6.	Biography (Sun. 6:30)	WPRO	Official	49,600	14	Hollywood & Stars — WJAR 48,400
7.	Joey Bishop	WJAR	118,900	26	7.	Supercar (Sun. 5:00)	WPRO	ITC	44,200	7	Wild Kingdom — WJAR 74,200
8.	Andy Griffith	WPRO	110,000	29	8.	Sea Hunt (Sat. 6:00)	WPRO	Economee	41,300	8	Mr. Novak — WJAR 80,000
8.	Dick Van Dyke	WPRO	110,000	26	9.	Popeye; 3 Stooges (Sat. 7:00)	WPRO	UAA; Scr. Gems	39,200	10	Pinnochio — WTEV 19,400
9.	Candid Camera	WPRO	109,800	32	10.	Cannonball (Sat. 5:30)	WPRO	ITC	39,000	11	Wide World Sports — WTEV 25,500

SAN FRANCISCO

STATIONS: KTVU, KRON, KPIX, KGO. SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963 (Omitting Nov. 3 - 5)

1.	Bonanza	KRON	389,300	32	1.	M Squad (Tues. 7:00)	KPIX	MCA	215,300	19	Bachelor Father — KRON 159,500
2.	Dr. Kildare	KRON	346,600	28	2.	Gun Will Travel (Mon. 7:00)	KPIX	CBS Films	199,900	16	Flying Doctor — KTVU 135,300
3.	Bob Hope	KRON	340,500	28	3.	San Francisco Beat (Sat. 7:00)	KPIX	CBS Films	192,200	16	Great Movies — KRON 126,500
4.	P. Mason; Bing Crosby	KPIX	336,100	29	4.	Rifleman (Thurs. 7:00)	KPIX	Four Star	171,000	13	Detectives — KRON 160,600
5.	Candid Camera	KPIX	328,400	28	5.	One Step Beyond (Wed. 7:00)	KPIX	ABC Films	163,200	13	Biography; Battle Line — KRON 160,500
6.	Beverly Hillbillies	KPIX	318,400	25	6.	Detectives (Thurs. 7:00)	KRON	Four Star	160,600	13	Rifleman — KPIX 171,000
7.	Virginian	KRON	301,500	24	7.	Biography; Battle Line (Wed. 7:00)	KRON	Official	160,500	13	One Step Beyond — KPIX 163,200
8.	Mr. Novak	KRON	296,700	24	8.	Bachelor Father (Tues. 7:00)	KRON	MCA	159,500	13	M Squad — KPIX 215,300
9.	Dick Van Dyke	KPIX	293,400	25	9.	You Asked For It (Thurs. 7:00)	KTVU	Medallion	138,800	11	Rifleman — KPIX 171,000
10.	Password	KPIX	289,600	24	10.	Yogi Bear (Mon. 6:30)	KTVU	Screen Gems	138,400	11	CBS Films — KPIX 168,500

WASHINGTON, D.C.

STATIONS: WRC, WTTG, WMAL, WTOP, WOOK.
SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963 (Omitting Nov. 3 - 5)

1.	Bonanza	WRC	294,900	36	1.	Yogi Bear (Wed. 6:30)	WTTG	Screen Gems	145,100	16	Huntley-Brinkley — WRC 134,800
2.	Beverly Hillbillies	WTOP	285,800	34	2.	Astro Boy (Tues. 6:30)	WTTG	NBC Films	139,000	15	Huntley-Brinkley — WRC 116,600
3.	Dick Van Dyke	WTOP	234,000	29	3.	Quick Draw McGraw (Mon. 6:30)	WTTG	Screen Gems	136,400	14	Huntley-Brinkley — WRC 131,800
4.	Disney's World	WRC	218,900	30	4.	Three Stooges (Mon.-Fri. 6:00)	WTTG	Screen Gems	135,700	15	News 4 Washington — WRC 75,200
5.	Andy Griffith	WTOP	211,900	26	5.	Huckleberry Hound (Thurs 6:30)	WTTG	Screen Gems	132,700	16	Huntley-Brinkley — WRC 121,200
6.	Candid Camera	WTOP	206,800	25	6.	Popeye (Mon.-Fri. 5:00) (Sat. 6:00)	WTTG	UAA, King	125,400	15	Early Show — WTOP 51,900
7.	P. Mason	WTOP	196,800	26							Wide World Sports — WMAL 68,200
8.	Petticoat Junction	WTOP	196,700	23	7.	Mr. Magoo (Fri. 6:30)	WTTG	TV Personal.	117,900	13	Huntley-Brinkley — WRC 112,600
9.	Benny; Calamity Jane	WTOP	192,400	24	8.	Death Valley Days (Mon. 7:00)	WRC	U.S. Borax	116,300	15	CBS News — WTOP 107,400
10.	Ed Sullivan	WTOP	189,500	23	9.	Highway Patrol (Sat. 7:00)	WTTG	Economee	108,000	9	Trails West — WMAL 64,800
					10.	Hennesey (Tues. 7:00)	WRC	NBC Films	104,200	13	CBS News — WTOP 117,800

DALLAS-FT. WORTH

STATIONS: KRLD, WBAP, WFAA, KTVT.
SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 - NOVEMBER 19, 1963 (Omitting Nov. 3 - 5)

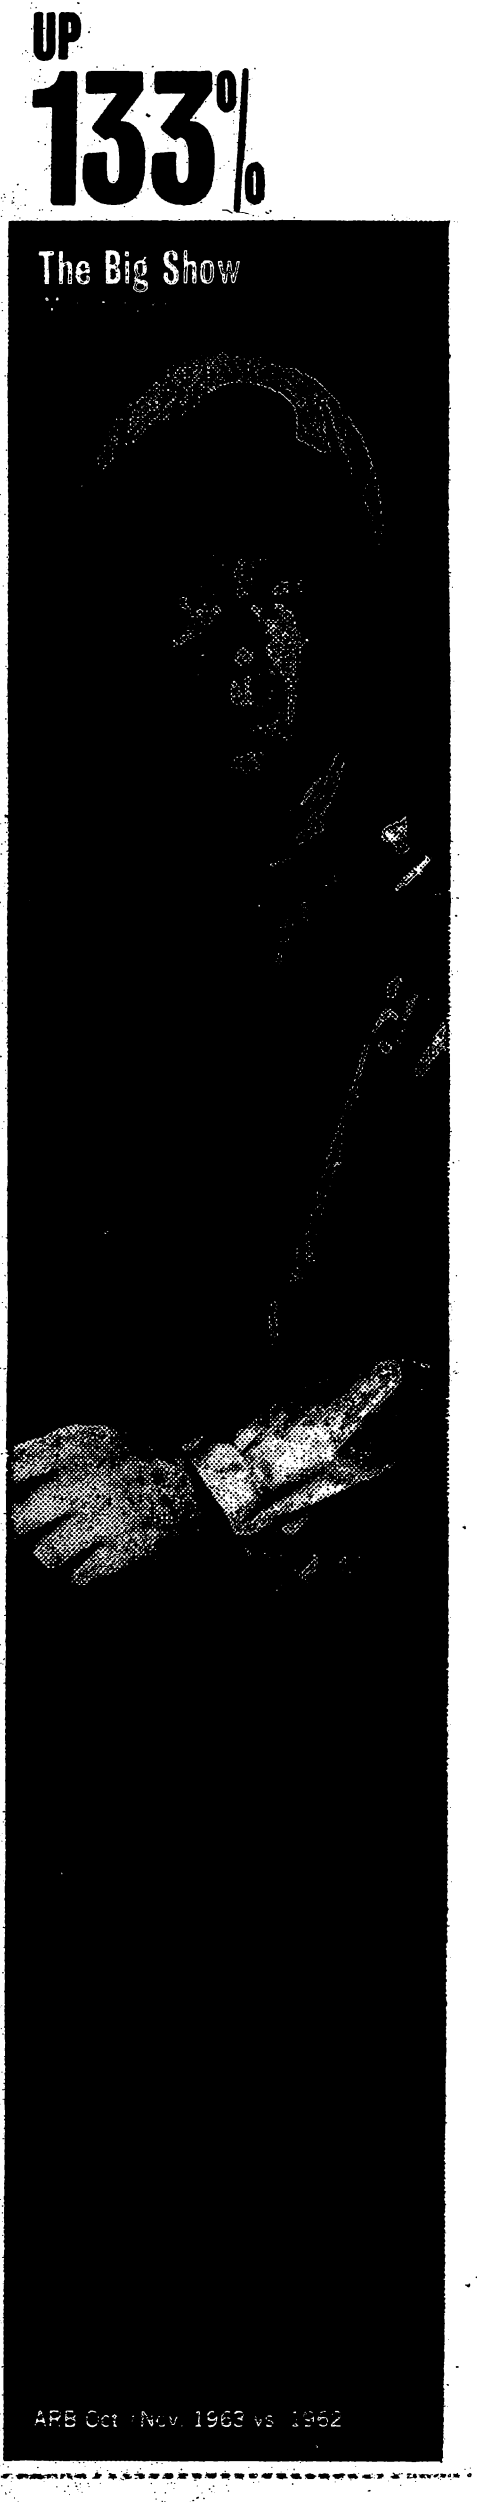
1.	Beverly Hillbillies	KRLD	331,900	48	1.	Death Valley Days (Sat. 10:00)	KRLD	U.S. Borax	123,400	17	Jerry Lewis — WFAA 82,100
2.	Dick Van Dyke	KRLD	303,400	43	2.	Yogi Bear (Mon. 6:00)	KTVT	Screen Gems	67,500	11	News; Wea; Wrapup — KRLD 109,800
3.	Candid Camera	KRLD	290,600	42	3.	Quick Draw McGraw (Tues. 6:00)	KTVT	Screen Gems	53,900	9	News; Wea; Wrapup — KRLD 101,400
5.	What's My Line	KRLD	244,400	34	4.	Lone Ranger (Mon.-Fri. 5:00)	KRLD	Telesynd	47,000	6	4:00 Movie — WFAA 56,800
6.	Gunsmoke	KRLD	243,200	31	5.	Clutch Cargo (Sat. 7:30)	WBAP	Cartoon Dist.	46,300	7	Top Cat — WFAA 20,200
7.	Petticoat Junction	KRLD	241,000	32	6.	Cheyenne (Mon.-Fri. 5:00)	KTVT	Warner Bros.	44,700	7	Alvin Show — KRLD 48,500
8.	Benny; Calamity Jane	KRLD	235,200	32	7.	Huckleberry Hound (Thurs. 6:00)	KTVT	Screen Gems	43,500	8	Password — KRLD 185,100
9.	Danny Thomas	KRLD	229,500	34	8.	Deputy Dawg; Gnagy (Sat. 9:00)	WFAA	CBS Films	41,000	5	I've Got A Secret — KRLD 197,700
10.	Lucy Show	KRLD	214,800	31	9.	Supercar (Wed., Fri. 6:00)	KTVT	ITC	40,700	7	News; Wea; Wrapup — KRLD 82,300
					10.	Three Stooges (Mon.-Fri. 5:00)	KTVT	Screen Gems	40,600	7	Quick Draw McGraw — KRLD 66,100
											News; Wea; Wrapup — KRLD 98,900
											4:00 Movie — WFAA 56,800
											CBS News — KRLD 61,700

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL

STATIONS: WCCO, KSTP, KMSP, WTCN.
SURVEY PERIOD: OCTOBER 27 NOVEMBER 19, 1963 (Omitting Nov. 3 - 5)

1.	Beverly Hillbillies	WCCO	232,600	33	1.	Divorce Court; FB (Sun. 2:00)	WCCO	Storer	128,300	20	Tony Parker; AFL FB — KMSP 23,500
2.	Candid Camera	WCCO	232,300	34							AFL Football — KMSP 32,200
3.	Bonanza	KSTP	219,400	33	2.	Leave It To Beaver (Mon.-Fri. 5:30)	KMSP	MCA	80,800	14	Huntley-Brinkley — KSTP 69,000
4.	What's My Line	WCCO	215,000	32	3.	Dobie Gillis (Mon.-Fri. 6:00)	KMSP	20 Fox TV	77,100	14	News; Wea; Sports — KSTP 90,800
5.	Dick Van Dyke	WCCO	214,200	30	4.	Huckleberry Hound (Tues. 6:30)	WCCO	Screen Gems	76,700	12	Combat — KMSP 105,500
6.	Andy Griffith	WCCO	187,900	27	5.	Superman (Mon.-Fri. 5:00)	WTCN	Flamingo	62,200	11	Clancy & Co. — WCCO 49,900
7.	Benny; Calamity Jane	WCCO	183,700	27	6.	Sea Hunt (Sat. 5:30)	WTCN	Economee	61,100	9	Love That Bob — KSTP 37,900
8.	Petticoat Junction	WCCO	182,900	26	7.	Yogi Bear (Thurs. 5:00)	WCCO	Screen Gems	59,100	9	Superman — WTCN 62,000
9.	Nurses	WCCO	176,200	27	8.	Death Valley Days (Sun. 9:30)	KMSP	U.S. Borax	58,400	10	What's My Line — WCCO 215,000
10.	Red Skelton	WCCO	175,600	26	9.	Surfside 6 (Sun. 5:30)	KMSP	Warner Bros.	55,300	11	Mr. Ed — WCCO 112,500
											Lassie — WCCO 141,300
					10.	Checkmate; Sports; FB (Sat. 4:00; Sun. 3:00)	WCCO	MCA	44,700	7	Epic Theatre — WTCN 33,500
											AFL Football — KMSP 41,700

What's up in New York? WABC-TV!



Television Reviews

EYE ON NEW YORK
(Angel on Broadway)
With Marguerite Cullman, narrator; Sir Alec Guinness, Zero Mostel, others
Exec Producer: Ned Cramer
Producer-Writer: Herbert Appleman
30 Mins.; Tues., 7:30 p.m.
NATIONAL AIRLINES, LIGGETT & MYERS
WCBS-TV, N. Y., (film)
(Pappert, Koenig, Lois; J. Walter Thompson)

New York's CBS-TV o&o flagship opened its Tuesday night half-hour documentary series last night (21) with an interesting behind the scenes glimpse of the Broadway stage. The half-hour didn't disturb anybody's "ice-carts," but it did capture some of the magic of the theatre.

Exec producer Ned Cramer selected the vantage point of a Broadway angel in telling the story of the theatre. Producer-writer, Herbert Appleman, had a natural choice in Marguerite Cullman who authored "Occupation: Angel," for the narration and the development of the documentary.

Mrs. Cullman and producer-writer Appleman gave a little cost accounting lesson on what it takes to mount a production such as "Dylan," which preemed last Saturday (18). The documentary, though, didn't take off until Alec Guinness, Zero Mostel and the girls of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" came on camera. For all but the specialists, the "show's the thing."

The public, too, must of been interested in the size of the beginning kitty of Mr. and Mrs. Cullman. That wasn't stated. There also was little or no exploration of the balance between commerce, taste and purpose in the investment endeavors of the Cullmans or other backers.

There were plenty of glamorous touches as the celebs of the theatre, in the finale, just happened to bump into Miss Cullman. The montage, like the half-hour, was an interesting, although restricted view of the theatre. Horo.

THE ART OF COLLECTING
With Aline Saarinen, others
Producer: Robert Northshield
Director: Walter Kravets
Writers: Northshield, John Lord
60 Mins., Sun., 11 p.m.
HUMBLE OIL
NBC-TV, from N.Y.
(McCann-Erickson)

NBC-TV's "The Art of Collecting," an exploration of the art collections of five Americans, was a visual delight (in color) even though a hurried camera left a viewer in need of a longer look and more exposition (in many cases, any exposition) on several of the works on view.

A highlight was New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller's gadget for the art collector who has everything. This gadget was a three-dimensional Japanese rig that had mobile objects (many resembling the blob shapes in a modern painting) that could be changed via a rully arrangement into various compositions to satisfy the collector's current whim.

Otherwise, the extent of the Governor's collection of modern art works was breathtaking, as were the extensive holding of New York investment banker Robert Lehman and Hunt Food prexy Norton Simon. Alexander Girard, New Mexico designer and architect, seemed submerged in a maze of folk-art objects that would rival a Third Ave. antique dealer. Nicely contrasting the plush collectors was John Denman, Seattle airline pilot, who had compiled a modest but striking collection of modern. Simon and Denman, at different extremes of the genre, came off as the men with a genuine passion for their collections in the interviews with art critic Aline Saarinen.

Scripting by producer Robert Northshield and associate producer John Lord was informative, and Robin Still's photography was up to this highly visual opportunity. Bill.

THE GOLDEN AGE
With Douglas Campbell, Nancy Wickwire, Douglas Rain, Lester Rawlins
Director: Al Kassel
120 Mins.; Sun., 9 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
WNEW-TV (film)

There were gems in this televised concert engagement dealing with the Elizabethan period, but the showcase of two hour dimensions was too much for the poetry and music offered. Unfortunately, the concert reading became static, and even the musical interludes repetitious.

Metropolitan Broadcasting took the legit production of "Golden Age" for telecasting on its o&o's and for syndication in other markets. The same cast prevailed: Douglas Campbell, Nancy Wickwire, Douglas Rain and Lester Rawlins. Betty Wilson, James Stover and Gordon Myers were the Elizabethan singers, accompanied by a consort of appropriate instruments.

All were dressed formally, and they played and articulated with understanding and verve. Only occasionally, though, did the images bounce off the screen with electric flashes. For two hours, it takes more than was offered to hold an audience, except those of very special interests.

The telecast, in celebration of the 400th anni of Shakespeare, was commendable in intent. The works of Shakespeare, Marlowe, Spenser, among others, received an airing. There was a good deal of humanity's spectrum captured in the words and music, yet it was insufficiently theatrical for two hours. Horo.

REVUE A LA CARTE
With Charles Kimbrough, Mary Jane Kimbrough, Barry Burns, Ross Lashbrook, James O'Reilly, Cindy Whitsell, June Ericson, Denise Foster
Producer: Arthur Thorsen
Director: Phil Ruskin
Music & Lyrics: Gerald Myrow, Bernard Kuby, Alfred Engelhard
30 Mins., Wed. 6:30 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
WBBM-TV, Chicago (tape)

WBBM-TV is about a year late for the trend. Those tab revues featuring local thesps with a special talent for mugging were all the rage in Chicago cabarets a year or two ago. But they were all of the same cut, precious and pretending to be New Yorky, and eventually most of them died of their own cliches.

For its latest "Repertoire Workshop" entry the CBS station mounted a so-termed original tab show titled "Revue a la Carte," taped it off the stage at a benefit performance for the Junior League some months back, and offered it in prime time last Tuesday (7). It was the same old stuff: face-making performers doing songs about the Big Time in show biz and skits that take effete pokes at institutions like television programs and folk singers. Culturally it was a setback, and it's doubtful that it made a real contribution to the advancement of any cast member's career.

But one thing must be said for WBBM-TV. It produces live shows with a proficiency that is unmatched in this market, so that even the poorer offerings have a way of looking good. From all production standpoints this was clean and slick, but in panning the audience between numbers the director should have tried to avoid the fellow in the foreground who seemed to be sleeping. That, as they say in show biz, is the unwritten review. Les.

SPECTRUM 2
With John Justin Smith, Sheri Blair
Producer: Lulu Bartlow
Director: Bob Singer
Writers: Blair, Smith
30 Mins., Tues., 6:30 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
WBBM-TV, Chicago, (film, tape)

The format seems unpromising for a once-weekly prime time program, and the director's attempt to stylize had some embarrassing moments, but the premiere of "Spectrum 2" last Tuesday (14) did strike one positive note. It confirmed the soundness of WBBM-TV's judgment in converting two former Chicago newspaper reporters into television personalities.

John Justin Smith, who was with the Daily News until a fortnight ago, and Sheri Blair, who joined from the American a few months earlier, were anything but smooth in their first tandem effort; but both gave evidence that with some seasoning they're going to make the grade. They've got the looks, the nerve, the camera presence and reasonably good articulation. What they lack principally is the ability to make a written script sound the least bit spontaneous, although it must be said that they weren't favored with dialog that would be comfortable even for the pros. But in this they have only themselves to blame, because they authored their own lines.

As for the program, it appears to be an attempt to make television fare out of the kind of general column Smith wrote for the News, with Miss Blair doing the femme slants. First show crammed seven newsreel featurettes into the half hour, with only one of them—a touching and well composed piece of film on a Chicago mother who refuses to place her retarded son in an institution—worthy of prime time. Some of the rest might have sufficed as padding for a long newscast on a bad news day, and some—notably a day in the life of a fashion model—would not even have qualified for that.

Perhaps with more unusual or more topical vignettes, and with a more relaxed and genuine exchange between Smith and Miss Blair in their intros to the reels, the format can yet be made to work. Meanwhile director Bob Singer would do well to work out a better closing than the stagey face-to-face business which looks like a prelude to a love scene. Les.

REGIS PHILBIN SHOW
With Philbin, emcee; Casey Philbin, guests
Producer-director: Tom Battista
PARTICIPATING
KOGO-TV, San Diego

To those who continue to ask where tv will acquire the Johnny Carsons and Jack Paars of the future, the answer should be obvious. The same source that nurtured the Carsons and Paars of the present—the stations in the hinterlands. Example: Regis Philbin, a Notre Dame product who has developed a bigtime style while blossoming as this city's best known—and highest rated—tv personality. Boyish charmer is all over KOGO-TV. He does a feature spot on the 6 p.m. news; each week night he's on at 11:15 for seven minutes of chatter or reporting. But the Saturday night smorgasbord is the key showcase. It caught on several years ago and has demonstrated strong staying power.

Philbin's talent is communication abetted by dark good looks that gets considerable distaff following. An easy going interviewer, Philbin does his homework, enabling him to make a familiar face come off in slightly different fashion through his own offbeat point of view along with an engaging professionalism. Guest list in the last few years has touched variety of bases, including Richard Nixon playing the piano, Archie Moore, Coach Sid Gillman, Walter Winchell, Curt Gowdy and Paul Christman, astronaut Bill Anders, Shelley Berman et al. Typical Saturday night outing might include a visiting or local celeb, music, inquiries to Casey the Phone Girl, stunts such as Philbin lifting weights, riding a camel etc. To his credit, show's pace remains lively whether focus is on names or unknown. Philbin's a name to watch. Don.

THE INNER CITY (PART 1)
BABIES
With Dr. Fred R. Stair, Ed Grider, Dr. Elizabeth Lathem, Mrs. Frances Mauney, Dr. Richard Bloomberg, others
Producer: Carl G. Degen
Director: Jack Ramirez
Writer: Rick Krepela
30 Mins., Tues., 8:30 p.m.
WSB-TV, Atlanta (tape)

This is the first of a series of four documentaries sponsored by the Central Presbyterian Church dealing with three phases of life in Atlanta. Produced by the Protestant Radio and Television Center in Atlanta it is designed as a report on life in Atlanta to the people of the city.

Part 1 was aimed at infant health and disclosed that some 22,000 babies are born in the Atlanta area each year and "some 30% of that number will be tomorrow's charity cases."

This well made documentary was made within the confines of the Central Presbyterian clinic and elsewhere in the city, pointing up

(Continued on page 68)

Tele Follow-Up Comment

The Defenders

The operation of the blacklist—show biz's special contribution to the democratic amenities of the McCarthy era—was fashioned into a probing and moving drama on CBS-TV's "The Defenders" last Saturday night (18). Although it's now a decade beyond the crest of the witch-hunting hysteria, this show jabbed sharply at a highly sensitized nerve in both the broadcasting and film industries. Politically controversial talent may no longer be comepletely tabu, but the risks in employing them are still measured against boxoffice returns and rating points.

Ernest Kinoy's play indicted the system of the blacklist through a story about a freelance character actor who for more than 10 years was not called for another job after being named as a member of a so-called Communist front organization supporting the Spanish Republicans.

Finally, at the present time, a producer approaches the actor, played by Jack Klugman, for a feature role in a civic-sponsored film. But some tiny extremist organization, cranking out mimeographed reminders of the actor's past political affiliations, succeeds in frightening the film's sponsors and producer into dumping Klugman.

The script was marked by its understanding of the complex considerations in the operation of the blacklist. The film producer was depicted as a honest fellow who initially makes a decent gesture towards the actor, but who must either surrender his moral principles or lose the necessary backing for his film. A similar dilemma is faced by the liberal smalltown mayor who wants to carry forward a progressive program but without exposing himself to the charge of fostering Communism.

The only simply drawn characters in the play were the rightwing cranks. Howard St. John gave a persuasive portrait of a political fanatic who learns nothing and forgets nothing. Kinoy introduced a melodramatic element in suggesting that this fanaticism was being exploited by mercenary character assassins.

The drama offered no easy answers to the problems raised by the blacklist. Where no clear libel was perpetrated, such as was established in the case of John Henry Faulk, there can be no relief for the individual.

Klugman, who gave great poignancy to his role, saw the solution as a deepening of the democratic way of life. But that is a long process and a heavy price that must be paid by the anonymous victims of the blacklist. Herm.

NBC Opera

The NBC Opera has a distinguished career. The outfit knows music, production and the medium in which it operates. As a result, it probably has the largest audience of any operatic venture and it has helped bring a better understanding of the masters to the masses.

The latest production of the NBC troupe was on Sunday (19) with its presentation of Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" based on Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor," which is essentially a transplant of the Hatfields and the Coys, or Montagues and Capulets to the Scottish moors.

Vocally and scenically the show was superb. Linda Newman provided an excellent portrayal of the heroine who ultimately goes mad through the machinations of her evil brother Enrico. Her "Mad Scene," always a test for a soprano, was excellently done. Donizetti must have hated sopranos to make a girl go through all that in public. She exhibited a firm control at all times, although there were some lapses in phrasing. Thespically and vocally Miss Newman came across in a superior manner.

The role of Edgardo, sung by Michael Trimbel, was given a smooth tenoring, and he acted the role well with its lyric passages given a brilliant ride. At times, the English lyrics of Anne Grossman, seemed to impede his operations, but there were no other major distractions in his rendition.

Richard Torigi as Enrico, was sufficiently villainous, but tuneful. He carried the melody well in all registers and he wound up as one of the major highlights of the show. Raimondo was sung well by Chester Watson.

Producer Samuel Chotzinoff has welded the NBC company into a highly creditable group. Some of the Metsters have sung with this outfit, and he has assembled some of the top freelancers for various roles.

Kirk Browning directed superbly, blending all elements on stage with an eye on action and movement and a fine ear for the composer's intention.

Miss Grossman's English translation is about as good as can be done without major changes to the basic work. But the normal opera fan, accustomed to Italian lyrics, soon tends to ignore the words and concentrate on the music just as always.

The others in the cast including Jerold Siena, Joan Caplan, Nico Castel and the firm excellence of Alfred Wallenstein's musical support was an additional plus to the production. Jose.

Bob Hope Show

Bob Hope's tours of the military bases overseas have become as much a part of the modern Christmas tradition in America as Santa's visits to the kiddies, and it is this, as much as anything, that has lifted him out of the class of a strictly show biz comic. Hope is a one-man USO, playing now to a second generation. His performances for the boys have hardly changed at all since World War II; in fact, they are ritualistic and somehow satisfying for it.

There is still the battery of jokes about the army camp and the locale; still the double entendre repartee with the shapely gal; still the exchange of nonsense with Jerry Colonna; still the gags about Crosby; still the skits with Hope in uniform; and still the patriotic farewell that is genuinely uplifting and always in good taste. The material changes, but the form remains pretty much the same year after year. And like any of the Yule traditions, it has a way of never growing stale.

Last Friday (17), NBC-TV and Chrysler added an extra half hour to Hope's regular time for filmed highlights of his tour of Middle Eastern military bases this past Christmas. That was good for half a dozen warmup monologs (or excerpts therefrom), each of them sharp and characteristically Hopean. At a desert installation in Turkey, he quipped, "They asked me if I wanted to work the Sands . . . 6,000 miles later I found they didn't mean Las Vegas." In Diyarbakir he got a rise out of the boys with, "I smoked my first Turkish cigaret. That's basic training here."

On the U.S.S. Shangri La, which he called the U.S.S. Crap Game, he observed that the sugar cubes at mess had numbers on 'em and that the Chaplain wore a green eyeshade. In Crete, "They cheered for 15 minutes. Thought we were replacements." In Greece, "If not for Hippocrates, Ben Casey would have been a bellhop." Of NATO, "A coalition of 12 nations sworn to give up borscht." His audience at each site seemed to go on for miles, and no electronic laugh track ever served a comic better.

There was the classic, slightly risque business with Tuesday Weld, a segment marred only by her demonstration of serious acting which really wasn't worth the punchline. Colonna decked himself in bedouin garb and announced he was looking for Florence of Arabia; Phil Crosby assumed his dad's role vis-a-vis Hope and had a good moment dueting on "Small Fry"; John Bubbles did a nifty solo turn; the tapster Earl Twins were okay; Anita Bryant sang a couple of Christmas songs; and Miss U.S.A., Michele Metrinko, was on hand mostly for the visual effect.

A great show for the boys, a good one for the home folks. Les.

Chronicle

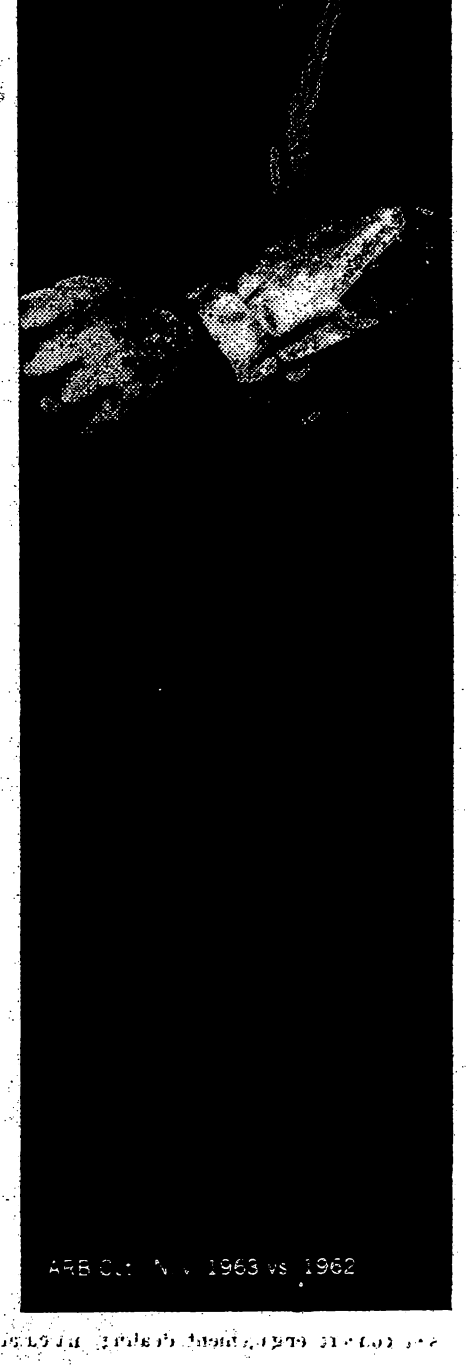
Television producers shopping around for exciting entertainment—or even absorbing documentary material—are not likely to come up with the mapping of the galaxy, the laser-maser light, the mid-ocean ridge and rift, the fourth

(Continued on page 60)

What's up in New York? WABC-TV!

UP
104%

UP
133%



ARB Oct. N.Y. 1963 vs 1962

Foreign Television Reviews

STEPTOE AND SON
With Wilfrid Brambell, Harry H. Corbett
Producer: Duncan Wood
Writers: Alan Simpson, Ray Galton
25 Mins., Tues., 8 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

Quite apart from its popularity—only "Coronation Street," of rival series, won a higher audience in 1963—"Steptoe and Son" is one of the most individual and well-scripted comedy ideas ever seen on local tv. In sustained quality, it can only be compared with the famous "Hancock Halfhours," also authored by the Alan Simpson-Ray Galton duo. An additional plus is the inspired casting of Wilfred Brambell and Harry H. Corbett as the two junkmen, who usually carry the entire acting burden of each segment.

Hence its return to the schedules was an event. But this time around some of the zip has gone out of it. "Steptoe and Son," although a couple of grotesques, have always had their roots in reality. Harold may grumble and be superciliously insulting to his father, and said dad may be a blatant hypocrite, with his mythical ailments and superstitious notions, but the genuine bond of feeling was always apparent.

In the first two segments of the new series, this relationship has been misjudged and coarsened. The opener indulged in embarrassing sentimentality, and, although the second session was an improvement, it stretched a thin situation beyond its true limits and the dialog was less exact, more inclined to the easy crack, than before.

Idea was that Harold bought a load of coffins cheap, and insisted on storing them in the house. Upon which, old Steptoe refused to sleep there, preferring to bed down with the horse. When a storm blew up, Harold, too, got fearful, and joined his father in the stable, pretending that he was worried about him. In fact, it was only the closing minutes of the show that recalled the glories of the past, with Harold profusely explaining that he wasn't afraid and the old man slyly smiling to himself as he agreed.

Duncan Wood's production was as assured as ever, and the skein is still several blocks ahead of its competitors. But it began to look as if this limited situation had exhausted its possibilities, unless surprises are sprung in later sessions. The performances of Corbett and Brambell were as fluent as before.

Otta.

MASTRO DON GESUALDO
With Enrico Maria Salerno, Lydia Alfonsi, Sergio Tofano, Valeria Ciangottini, Franca Parisi, Turi Ferro, Marcella Valeri, Guido Leontinin, Mario de Martino, Romolo Costa, Giuseppe Lo Presti, Luigi Casellato, Giovanni Cirino, Grazia di Marza, Franco Sineri, Gaetano Tomaselli, Salvatore Scalia, Alfredo Danese, Franca Manetti, Maria Tolu, Riccardo, Mangano, Santonio Portale, Ignazio Pappalardo, Angelo Puglisi, Giovanna de Vita, Carmelo Marza, Antonio Vaccaro, Alfredo Mazzone, Giovanna Sclaia, Piero de Santis, G. Davide Ancona, Umberto Insanguine, Mimmo Grasso, Alba Maria Settacioli, Ignazio Daidone, Rosario Arcidiacono, Mariano Piazza, Maria de Benedetto, Antonina Micalizzi, Igea Cali, A. Maria Burgio, Tina Vertuna, Giuseppe Durante, Rosaria Interra, Eugenia Colombo, Vittorio Campagna, Iole Marcellini, Giuseppina Rapicavoli, Gianna Pria de Luca, Valerio Sabel, Maria Bertuna, Andreina de Carli, others
Director: Giacomo Vaccari
Writers: Vaccari Ernesto Guida, based on novel by Giovanni Verga
Music: Luciano Chailly
85 Mins., Thurs. 9:05 p.m.
RAI-TV, from Rome (film)

RAI-TV looks to have a monumental achievement in this serialized version of Giovanni Verga's Sicilian classic, one of the most important novels in Italian literary history. Lasting about seven half hours in all, the work is a labor of love (unfortunately his last, due to a recent fatal car crash) by Giacomo Vaccari, one of RAI's most promising young directors, and it's probably the most expensive single effort ever attempted by the Italo telenet (though it was made as a first coproduction effort with France's RTF).

On the strength of the first two episodes "Mastro Don Gesualdo" is sure to wind up with strong following as well as plenty of critical plaudits. It's a deft blend of prestige and hard-hitting story content, which should please both highbrow aficionados of Verga's writings as well as lovers of full-blooded drama. (Decision to film rather than tape MDG stems from RAI conjecture that future dramas with foreign sale potential should not be limited by technical difficulties in dubbing and cutting of tapes, but given free rein via conventional lensing.)

Story is very similar in parts to that of "The Leopard", which "Gesualdo" however predates chronologically, and may even have partly inspired. Tale here is, very much in brief, about the changes that come over a social and financial climber in Sicily of the early 1800 who marries into a once-rich family now down on its luck.

Director Vaccari, obviously given free rein in elaborately producing his film on actual Sicilian locations, both interior and exterior, deserves great credit for his imaginative conception of story's setting and development, which includes strong, often daring use of camera and pacing (Ernesto Guida, his assistant, is credited with carrying out Vaccari's intentions, based on notes and instructions, after latter's untimely death). The film is also very faithful to the book in spirit and development, and the long running time offered by local serialized format allows for freedom of development in epic form.

Enrico Maria Salerno is an ideal choice for the title role. Though his Sicilian accent is often faulty, he gives the character the strength, cleverness, and earthy quality of the original, while at all times physically fitting the billing. Lydia Alfonsi likewise fits the role, of his high-born wife though in initial stanzas the part is muted and sacrificed. Franca Parisi makes a striking appearance as his fiery but silent mistress; Sergio Tofano is properly doddery as the ancient family topper; Turi Ferro gives an offbeat reading as the local priest; and one of the largest casts ever assembled here fills the picture with colorful human detail at every turn of the camera.

Technical plaudits must go to all concerned for a tremendous job in every department: lensing, settings, costumes, music, etc. It has RAI's top-drawer dramatic imprint transposed for added effect into a natural, real-life setting. Both as a Chronicle of a past era Italian (Sicilian) life, and as an example of how a great writer's work can be filmed with respect, "Mastro Don Gesualdo" is a collector's item.

Hawk.

LE PUITS ET LE PENDULE
(The Pit and the Pendulum)
With Maurice Ronet
Writer-Director Alexandre Astruc
From story by Edgar Allan Poe
37 Mins.; Friday 9:30 p.m.
RTF-TV from Paris

First in a series of special tv film programs by film directors, this one had a feeling for observation, unforced suspense and more intimate dramatics that made it come off. Backed by the state-run tv setup, RTF, this series augurs well for more of the same.

Director Alexandre Astruc wisely watched the torture of a man by the Spanish Inquisition instead of trying to go in and interpret it, by fancy cutting and setups. On vidfilm, it made for a solidly absorbing program.

The ever lowering swinging knife that slowly comes from the ceiling was mainly oppressive because of its sound and there was an avoidance of closeups. The man was finally helped by rats knawing his bonds, but then the walls closed in and almost pushed him into a pit full of poisonous snakes.

The production values were good and actor Maurice Ronet was excellent in mirroring the terrors without any false bathos or hysteria. The stream of consciousness narration was from the original Poe story translated by the poet Bauldelaire. It was a fine counterpoint to the images.

Mosk.

THE HOOT'NANNY SHOW
With Corrie Folk Trio, Ray & Archie Fisher, Eleanor Leith, Nadia Cattouse, Fitzroy Coleman, Barney McKenna
Director: David Bell
Producers: Gordon Smith, Travers Thorneloe
25 Mins: Mon., 6:35 p.m.
BBC-TV, from Glasgow

This new skein takes the cameras cleverly into The Place, w.k. home of folk-song in Edinburgh, and explores the caverns for lusty and interesting warbling from established chirpers around the Scot folk-song terrain. Result is mainly entertaining, and, thanks to deft camera work, comes up with interesting fodder for both ear and eye.

Cameras move in through the cellar regions, and roam over the faces (mainly bearded) of the devotees, some ugly, others not-so-pretty, others refreshing and naturally lookers. Artistes give out bravely, especially the dusky talented Nadia Cattouse, and local thrush Eleanor Leith. Ray & Archie Fisher get a useful innings, as do Fitzroy Coleman, Barney McKenna, and the Corrie Folk Trio, with Paddie Bell. Latter threesome shape well, and camera might have moved in more closely to show the attractive face of Irish chirper Paddie.

Talent is assembled by producers Gordon Smith and Travers Thorneloe. David Bell, a BBC recruit from the commercial 'opposition,' does full justice to the show with his megging. It looks like a worthwhile skein, despite the fact that tv producers in the U.K. are currently overdoing the folk-song kick.

Gord.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS
With Alfie Bass, Bill Fraser, Nicholas Phipps, Arthur Barrett, others Producer: Peter Eton
Director: Milo Lewis
Writer: Barry Took
30 Mins., Thurs., 7:30 p.m.
Granada-TV, from Manchester

Bootsie (Alfie Bass) and Snudge (Bill Fraser) have made a click combo in earlier skeins for Granada-TV. Bootsie is the wily and disrespectful little man, constantly pricking the pomposity of Snudge, a valet with a fund of inaccurate vocabularly and bluster. In this new series, backed by the same producing team, there has been a switch in locale from a London club to a British embassy in Morocco, where the couple serve as before. So far, the change of setting hasn't injected new vigor into the comic partnership. In the one caught, written by the team's best scripter, Barry Took, much of the dialog was weary and the situation was as predictable as Christmas, but less commercial.

Snudge was involved in an argument with a Moroccan official, who challenged him to a duel when he called him a "wog." Bootsie cunningly encouraged the encounter, which gave a spluttering farcical climax to the show. The ingredients were similar to many earlier segments, but they weren't mixed to a consistency.

On the plus side, the performers still jell agreeably—with Alfie Bass scoring in the vein of Chico Marx, and Bill Fraser egregiously supercilious. Other regulars in this series, Nicholas Phipps and Arthur Barrett, are well chosen and give competent support.

Peter Eton's production was smartly directed by Milo Lewis, but, on this showing, the new format is not as promising as it should be.

Otta.

THE SURGEONS
With Stephen Black, John Anthony (narrator)
Producer: Peter Bennett Stone
50 mins., Tues. 9:25 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

As seems to be the fashion in BBC documentaries to date, Peter Bennett Stone's project took a look at professional men and got them talking to the cameras about their work, feelings and beliefs. While Stone is no Richard Cawston, his attempt to get under the skin of four surgeons and thus throw light on what makes such medicos tick was competant.

Embellished with only a straightforward interview technique, the program relied mainly on the four anonymous surgeons' personalities and strength-of-viewpoint. In all fairness, they proved interesting performers with offbeat and sometimes alarmingly flamboyant overtones, which would fit any of Anglo's "Carry On" films.

But the questioning of interviewer Stephen Black was restricted and, more or less, he put to each the same basic queries about such issues as mercy killing, to get, more or less, the same thumbs down answer from each. One exception was a prominent Yank surgeon who said he was opposed to prolonging a hopeless life indefinitely but, in his view, a person would have to be literally vegitating before he would agree to euthanasia.

The show served as a semi-enlightening armchair chat with the medicos about life and life's work, but left great scope for deeper and more controversial probe into varying opinions, doctor-patient relationships, religious views and so on.

Watt.

IT'S LITTLE RICHARD
With Little Richard, The Shirelles, Sounds Inc.
Producer: John Hamp
Director: Philip Casson
35 mins., Wed. 9:40 p.m.
Granada-TV, from Manchester

While Britain is shaking to the beat of the Beatles, local rocksters whose music has strong Negro derivatives, America's Little Richard taped this sweat-and-scream show for Granada which networked it.

For those attuned to his type of music—as the audience of kids obviously were—the show was a success. For others, the often alarmingly wild Richard, with his granite tonsils to boot, presented a ludicrous figure.

Not that he didn't work hard. Literally drenched with sweat from the solid halfhour sesh of screeming leaping, shaking and piano lambasting, he looked close to collapse. His primitive and repetitive numbers delivered at the same inevitable uptempo, and in the same frenzied style, included "Hound Dog," "Lucille," "Rip It Up", "Long Tall Sally," "Jeanie Jeanie" and several others. All effectively served to whip the audience into hand jive action with some actually invading the showfloor.

The Shirelles, in a three song act, were a disappointment and engendered little of the raucous excitement that Richard put over. Sounds Incorporated, a heavily saxed local group, provided a driving r&r background noise, but were unsensational.

Probably having the biggest ball of all was producer John Hamp who lined up some magnificent shots of the participating audience as well as the performers. His sound balancer, on the other hand, had one long headache.

Watt.

MAEDI
(Girlie)
Music: Robert Stolz
With Johanna Matz, Eberhardt Waechter, Rosi Barszony, Fritz Muliar, Carl W. Fernbach, Wilfried Steiner, Hans Christian, Eduard Linkers, Adolf Boehmer, Judith Schmidthofer, Monika Strauch, Liselotte Plauensteiner, Heidemarie Frauendienst.
Producer: Karl Lackner
Director: Peter Hey
Writers: Alfred Gruenwald, Lee Stein
100 Mins.
Austrian Television System

This exceedingly well produced and directed operetta by one of Vienna's last surviving master of that genre, Robert Stolz, was exactly what the local tv population wanted on New Years Eve. The excellent libretto by Gruenwald and Stein, both famous authors, told of a mock marriage by "Maedi" (Johanna Matz)—for inheritance reasons—to a lawyer, specializing in divorce cases.

Quite a few of the songs in this successful operetta, now running on various European stages, are long-time-evergreens, such as the title "Maedi" and "Ein Stueck vom Glueck" (A Bit of Love). These, plus some others, as well as the entire new tv score for this production of the Austrian TV system, went over big.

The carefully selected cast followed the expert adaption by Karl Lackner and director Peter Hey. Especially praiseworthy were the performances by Rosi Barszony, Carl Fernbach, Wilfried Steiner and Hans Christian.

Maas.

SOMETHING TO SAY
With Daniel Farson
Director: Rollo Gamble
30 Mins., Mon., 10:40 p.m.
Associated-Rediffusion, from London

Lawyer Gerald Gardiner, who has earned a Life Peerage and is widely tipped as a future Lord Chancellor in a possible Labor Government, made a splendid subject to launch this new interview skein by Daniel Farson. Farson, sympathetic and unobtrusive, prodded him along nicely, and Gardiner aired persuasive views on law reform, capital punishment, and censorship. Only when Farson, towards the end of the half-hour, tried to get at the man rather than his opinions were there a few clumsy moments. He called Gardiner "cold" and aloof, and the impertinence got him nowhere.

Gardiner coolly criticized the chaos of much British legislation, suggesting that a committee of experts should permanently sit to sift outmoded statutes that have lost their purpose. He favored something on the lines of Swedish Ombudsman to act as guardian of public complaints against government departments, and considered that capital punishment would be abolished for all crimes in the next five years. He amusingly dissected the odd nature of the present law on the subject, opposed theatre censorship, and gave an impressively clearheaded account of himself throughout.

Rollo Gamble's direction was unobtrusive, and the program challenged comparison with the famous "Face to Face" series and did not disappoint, especially when it stuck to ideas rather than personal foibles.

Otta.

FIRST NIGHT:
Stray Cats and Empty Bottles
With Miriam Karlin, Ronald Fraser, James Booth, Irene Worth, Julian Holloway, Bryan Pringle, Jack Rodney, Howard Goorney, Gerald McAllister
Producer: John Elliot
Director: John Jacobs
Writer: Bernard Kops
75 mins.; Sat. 9:45 p.m.
BBC-TV from London

Wilting under the competition on Sunday nights, BBC's new season dramatic skein "First Night" is now shifted to a Saturday night spot. Move means instead of opposing ATV's Palladium show and the indies Sunday Play, it now clashes with ABC-TV's "The Avengers."

Switchover offering, at best, was not calculated to steal away the mass audience dealing, as it did, with lyrical hobos sporting fancy pretentions. But the more discerning viewer author Bernard Kops' well-observed quartet of lowlifers made interesting, if squalid, charracter studies.

Encompassing an old prostitute (Miriam Karlin), a cat strangler (Ronald Fraser), a "dustbin connoisseur" (James Booth) and a "touched lady" (Irene Worth) the author successfully used his grotesque pawns to depict base and worrying aspects of mankind. On Kops' low ebb characters the veneer of social pretence was thinly applied and shown up vividly in view of their pittiable clothes and surroundings.

Though overly "stagey" in presentation, the piece was superbly acted by the four leads each of whom brought great conviction to their roles. This compensated somewhat for the awkward transition the play made from its stage production.

The frequent "jolts" in production, notwithstanding the quality of the work overall shone through and the very least that could be said for the play was that it was fresh and alive.

Watt.

CRANE
With Patrick Allen, Sam Kydd, Gerald Flood, Laya Raki, Patricia Haines, Peter Vaughan, Louis Rayner, Gertan Klauber, Michael Hawking, Leonard Trolley
Producer: Jordan Lawrence
Director: Richard Doubleday
Writer: Patrick Tilley
55 Mins., Mon., 8 p.m.
Associated-Rediffusion, from London

Crane is a freebooting, dogooding, muscular adventurer, with his headquarters in a Moroccan saloon.

(Continued on page 64)

What's up in New York? WABC-TV!

UP
104%

The Big News
(6:30 p.m. Mon. thru Fri.)

UP 40%

7 O'Clock Show
(Mon. thru Fri.)

UP
133%

The Big Show

What's up in New York? WABC-TV!

UP 40%

7 O'Clock Show

UP
104%

The Big News

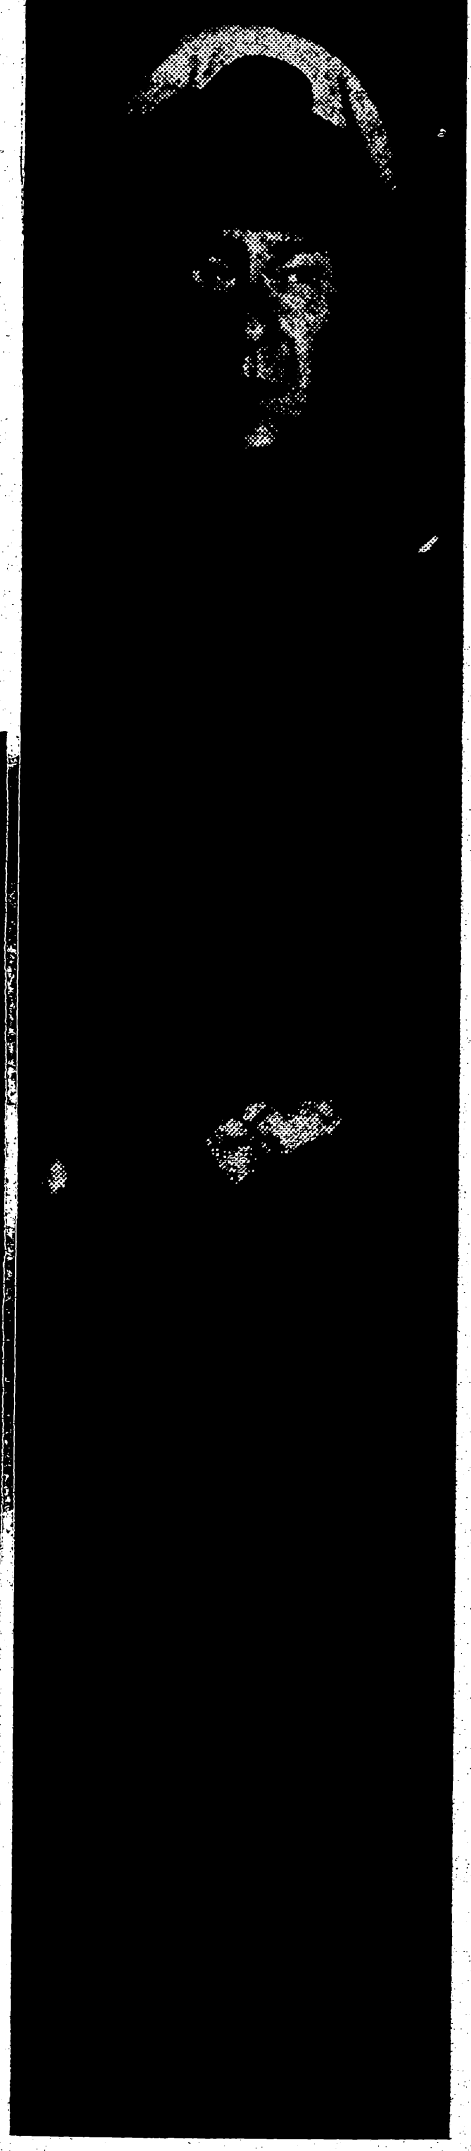
6:30 p.m. Mon. thru Fri.

UP
29%

Best of Broadway

UP
133%

The Big Show



WABC-TV is up in New York!

Here's why:

The spectacular ratings increases of the shows mentioned on the preceding four pages give you a pretty clear notion of what's been happening at WABC-TV during the past year.

Why are so many more viewers watching WABC-TV? Obviously, they like what they see on Channel 7. Programs like The Big Show, The Big News, 7 O'clock Show and The Best of Broadway are what the public looks for and likes.

WABC-TV offers a balanced schedule of entertainment, news and informative public affairs programming to the people who live in the many communities that make up the greater New York metropolitan area. Like every good citizen of these communities, WABC-TV takes an active interest in community affairs. Programs such as New York, New York...Page One...The Les Crane Show...Editorial Opinion deal specifically and significantly with New York area projects and problems.

A dynamic interest in public affairs, popular entertainment and news programs and the exciting new shows of the ABC Televison Network are among the reasons WABC-TV is moving up fast in New York.

WABC-TV NEW YORK abc

The data used herein are estimates from the October November ARB 1963 Vs. 1962. They are subject to limitations of sample size and other qualifications which are available on request.

From The Production Centres

Continued from page 34

members at Algonquin Club Wednesday (15) preceding their talks at John Hancock hall . . . James E. Allen, WBZ-TV general manager, addressing Boston Management club, Thursday (16) . . . WNAC-TV previewed new ABC-TV net show, "Science All Stars," sponsored by Honeywell, at Ritz Carlton, with Phyl Doherty, press for WNAC-TV, and Bob Strayton for Honeywell's EDP div, preceding start of show Sunday (19) from 3 to 3:30 p.m. on WNAC-TV . Don McGannon, prexy Westinghouse, flew in to Boston for special screening at Algonquin Club of new W Group series, "Meaning of Communism," 30-part tv series for young people going on WBZ-TV Monday thru Friday, 6:15-6:45 a.m., and repeated on Saturdays, 12:30-1 p.m., starting Saturday (25) . . . Barbra Streisand, Sidney Chaplin, Kay Medford of new musical "Funny Girl," berthed at the Shubert, guesting on WNAC-TV shows during musical's three-week tryout . . . John H. Pinto, veep RKO General Phonevision Co., detailed the Hartford pay-tv experiment as guest speaker at the Broadcasting Executives Club of N. E. meet, Sheraton Plaza hotel, Boston, Thursday (16), reporting that the test will cost some $10,000,000 in losses for the three-year period which ends in June 1965.

IN LONDON . .

"Melissa," Francis Durbridge's dramatic serial which is headed for BBC-2, the upcoming UHF network, is now in the can . . . Granada-TV's new serial "It's Dark Outside" kicked off with an audience in 7,786,000 homes, among the highest-ever audience scored for a bowing show . . . TWW, indie serving West England and Wales, to set up a special Welsh board to o.o. and generally control Welsh language broadcasting . . . Ron Grainer, ace cleffer responsible for many BBC hit signature tunes, penned a new one for the Corp.'s radio serial "The Dales". . . Announcer John Bacon switched from BBC to Anglia-TV . . . Two of London's indie stations, Associated-Rediffusion and Associated Television, together provided a complete outside broadcast unit for the Yugoslav radio and tv service It will help re-equip the Skopje vidstation wrecked by an earthquake last year . . . Rikki Fulton and Jack Milroy voted top personalities of the year on the Scottish TV station . . . STV is entering a medical program and a "Hogmanay" show for this year's international tv fest at Monte Carlo . . . Rediffusion, tv rental company, is seeking permission to wire-relay BBC-2 programs in the North and Midlands—about a year earlier than BBC's over-the-air transmission will reach the areas . . . Ian L. Yates appointed operations controller at STV . . . During November, Britain's tv licenses throughout U.K. totaled 12,777,635.

IN PHILADELPHIA

The big turnout of the music industry for the farewell party tossed by the "Friends of Dick Clark" at the Venus Lounge, was headed by Leonard Goldenson, pres. of ABC-Paramount; Jim Hagerty, veepee in charge news at ABC-TV, and Roger Clipp, head of Triangle's radio and tv division (16). Clark left Friday for Encino, Cal, where he will make his new home . . Joseph Conway, general manager of WIBG, named veepee of Storer Broadcasting . . . Dick Paisley, former g.m. of WRCV now filling same post with WRAW, Reading . . . Sid Mark, WHAT-FM jazz deejay, preems town's only live jazz telecast over WHYY next month. Vince Scarza directs . . . John Frasca newsman and political publicist, launches a series of editorial broadcasts over WPEN . . . Harvey L. Glascock, veepee and g.m. of WIP, appointed to the Broadcasters' Committee of Radio Free Europe as community coordinator. . . Robert L. Halberstadt Jr., formerly of WFLN and WFIL, joins WRCV as account exec.

IN CLEVELAND . . .

Ronnie Barrett resigned from WJW disk chores . . . Gib Shanley, Browns sportscaster over WERE, will do two sportscasts nightly on WGAR. He also does weekend stint on KYW-TV Herb Score, onetime Cleveland Indian ace, has inside track for tv ball games on Channel 8 . . . Paul Schumacher leaves WBMI for WCRF . . WHK did not renew Dick Clark's 6-8 p.m. deejay show . . Ed Clark, WHK program director, and Marsh Samuel, Cleveland Browns flack, recuperating in hospital . . . Linda Zabas, exiting WHK promotion for teaching profession . . . Martin Sullivan, ex-WJR, now with WGAR news . . Genevieve slated for Mike Douglas guest honors . . . Carl Reese has joined WJW radio deejay staff . . . Al James exits KYW's all-night stanza . . . Herman Spero producing WEWS series of "Festival Five" with pianist Peter Nero kicking off hour-long musical (30).

IN DETROIT

Fred Kendall and Rosemary McGann, regular singers on WJR's "Bud Guest Show," will join many other friends of Arthur Godfrey to help him celebrate his 30th anni with CBS radio . . . G. Mennen Williams, U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs and former six-term governor of Michigan, will guest on WWJ-TV's "Town Meeting" show . . . Marshall Wells, farm editor of WJR, was cited for his support of the 4-H Club program by the Michigan Legislature . . . WWJ will beam 37 hours of programming from its special broadcast center at the 48th annual Detroit Auto Show. Originating from the show will be such personalities as Hugh Roberts, Bob Allison, Fran Harris, John Lynker, Todd Purse and Less Martens . . . WJBK personalities Marc Avery, Clark Reid, Robert E. Lee, Robin Walker, Bob Edington and Bob Layne also will originate from the Detroit Auto Show and will give away cash in a "Luck License" contest . . . WWJ was honored by the Jewish Theological Seminary for 20 years of broadcast service to the Seminary by means of its "Eternal Light" public service programs.

IN ST. LOUIS .

KMOX radio has hired announcer Gene Kelly for duty on the station's "At Your Service" show and for sports broadcasts. Kelly formerly with Cincinnati's WKRC where he did play-by-play for Redleg games. He fills the opening at KMOX left by the departure of Steve Rowan for the CBS News Division in New York . . . KSD-TV's Charlotte Peters will host a Press Club party on Feb. 1 to mark the official start of St. Louis' bicentennial month . . . Howard A. Rader appointed promotion director of KPLR-TV . . . Jane Wyatt in town to address March of Dimes volunteers. Miss Wyatt is National Chairman of the Mothers' Dime committee . . . Arthur J. Casey, station manager of KSD radio, has retired . . . Tony Lang booked for a "Penthouse Serenade" series on KPLR-TV.

IN CINCINNATI . .

Gene Kelly, in tandem the past two seasons with Waite Hoyt on play by play of Cincy Reds games on the Burger Beer network, has resigned to join KMOX-CBS, St. Louis, as a reporter of sports, special and public service events. His successor has not as yet been named . . . Ribbon cutting for opening of new WCKY-Radio offices and studios in Carew Tower was done by Mayor Walton Bachrach . . . WLW-Radio trophy gallery increased by National Safety Council's award for service to farm safety for 11th consecutive year . . . Imogene Coca guested on the Ruth Lyons "50 50 Club" show on WLW-T to plug her "Grindl" Sunday night show . . . Dr. Norman Vincent Peale in focus on Cincy video stations for interviews, including reference to his boyhood in suburban Norwood, and about the upcoming film story of his life, "One Man's Way." . . . WGUC-FM will broadcast Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra concerts on Sundays at 2 p.m. beginning Feb. 2, a switch from last season's Wednesday night airings.

IN SAN FRANCISCO . . .

In clearing out musical library to make room for new material, KFRC program director Bob Marshall gave away hundreds of elpees to institutions . . . American Airlines presenting the California Youth Symphony in Feb. 1 concert as tieup with its KCBS "Music 'Til Dawn" program. Ken Ackerman, host on the all-nighter, will emcee . . . KGO-TV in deal with American Heritage Foundation to distribute portfolios of famous American documents at $1.50 per shot . . . "Today I Fell in Love," composed by KFRC's man Bud Haley, included in "Wonderful Summer," a late Robin Ward album for Dot Records . . . Prof. Herbert Feinstein, of San Francisco State College, giving a series of taped interviews with screen celebs here and abroad on KRON-FM . . . KGO-TV's special projects department coming up with "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Buzz" for the Latham Foundation of Oakland.

IN PITTSBURGH . . .

KQV's Chuck Brinkman won the second prize of $100 from B. F. Goodrich on the basis of his selling the firm's product. The same station has a new program manager in James Gray who moved here from WKPA, New Kensington . . . WTAE sportscaster Ed Conway has taken on an added chore as the station's 11 p.m. Sunday night news and sports show . . . Hilary Bogden, WJAS personality, celebrates his 20th year with the station this week . . . Jack Shenkan, WTAE salesman and sometime performer, is laid up with knee surgery . . . "Woody the Woodpecker" and "Magilla Gorilla" have joined WIIC's regular cartoon lineup of "Huckleberry Hound," "Yogi Bear" and "Mickey Mouse". . . WTAE's Sunday night movie now begins at 10 p.m. and breaks for 15 minutes at 11 for news and sports . . . Don Riggs and Marcy Lynn, stars of KDKA-TV's "Daybreak," celebrating fourth anni of show.

IN MINNEAPOLIS . . .

KSTP-TV will beam the St. Paul Winter Carnival parade and pre-parade show in color Saturday (25). Sharing mike duties on the parade coverage will be KSTP staffers Jim Hutton and Al Tighe and Winter Carnival Queen Roberta Ann Anibas. Bill Dana, featured guest of the civic celebration, and NBC-TV's Bud Palmer will also appear on KSTP shows this chapter. Palmer will be here with an NBC camera crew to film the Carnival's ice fishing contest and other sports events for use on the web's "Sports Spectacular" Feb. 1 . . . A number of other tv luminaries are due in to take part in Winter Carnival festivities. Inger Stevens of ABC-TV's "Farmer's Daughter" will ride in the torchlight parade Feb. 1. Appearing in the fete's coronation show in the St. Paul Auditorium Friday (24) will be Bea Benaderet of CBS-TV's "Petticoat Junction" cast. They'll be joined by Smiley Burnett and Rufe Davis of "Petticoat Junction" and Jon Provost of "Lassie". . . Steve Allen here last frame promoting his weeknight show.

Paley's Pouch—Money, That Is

Continued from page 33

is the CBS Nielsen muscle (it's No. 1 60% of the time in the National Nielsens vs 30% for NBC and 10% for ABC), that most advertisers—agency insiders say—would prefer to buy CBS (with Aubrey subsequently picking their programs) than to take their pick of the already designated shows elsewhere.

—And Daytime

But the most bulging pocket in Paley's wallet is not the more visible nighttime but that "hidden pocket" called daytime, into whose CBS pouch advertisers are stuffing some $190,000,000.

For while CBS may be riding high in the evening, when it dominates five nights of the week and nets a larger after-tax profit than the other two webs combined, as corporate prexy Frank Stanton documented to the St. Louis Society of Security Analysts when he addressed them last week, the after-dark leadership pales in comparison to its virtual stranglehold on the daytime audience. CBS out-Nielsens NBC in the daytime by 51%, ABC by 111%. And so strong is the advertiser response that the 485 Madison Ave. salesmen just can't find more room for the sponsors fighting to get in. Thus, when sales chief Dawson tells prexy Aubrey that its '64-'65 evening schedule will be 85-90% sold out by Feb. 15, Aubrey retorts: "How come you can't sell the evening as well as daytime?"

Perhaps the most dramatic testimony to the CBS "gee whiz" performance lies in the Nielsen rating (16.6) of "As the World Turns," which is stripped at 1:30 to 2 p.m., Monday through Friday. Reaching about 8,500,000 homes per average mintue, this No. 1 CBS daytime show out-Nielsens ABC's average nighttime audience. It outrates some 30 different evening programs, some of which will be renewed next year.

With a cost per thousand of less than a dollar for "World Turns," "Beverly Hillbillies," with a 38.8 Nielsen, would have to double its rating (which would actually be greater than the tv sets in use) to equal its advertising efficiency.

That's why "World Turns" advertisers—P&G, Corn Products, Alberto-Culver, Carnation Milk, National Biscuit, Pillsbury and Sterling Drugs—are the happiest sponsors in all tv, even though, as they expect, those CBS daytime rates—and profits—are due for what even they privately acknowledge is a sizeable and justifiable hike.

In any case, it's the CBS daytime—inconjunction with its rapidly selling '64-'65 evening schedule—that insures Paley & Co. still greater billings and profits in '64-'65.

For the Wall St. investors, who've reaped handsome profits with the fast rising CBS stock and wondered "how high is up?", it's becoming obvious that "up" is still higher than where CBS is.

NAB

Continued from page 35

friends" after the NAB meeting, not before.

Observers say incumbent Democratic Sen. Spessard Holland, whom Collins would have to challenge in the May 7 primary, is stronger now than when he defeated a strong primary opponent by 90,000 votes in 1958.

Last week, the Florida Democrats in the U.S. House of Representatives caucused and went on record to support Holland "against any opponent he might have."

Collins, if he decided to run, would also have a problem getting a campaign organization together. Several of his past supporters are now committed to or working for Holland.

A possible shot a running again for Governor also looks unlikely with five strong candidates already announced for what shapes up as a rip-roaring primary.

Collins would have to make a decision on this score by March 3, the filing deadline in Florida.

Rowan's USIA Post

Continued from page 1

Press Secretary in place of Pierre Salinger.

The truth was the White House job was never discussed. The President had knowledge of Murrow's health problem and discussed the possibility of the USIA opening with Rowan. Rowan expressed an interest.

Murrow's resignation was also officially announced.

Before Rowan entered Government service in January 1961, he was a reporter on the Minneapolis Star-Tribune.

Granada Tops On British Com'l TV Billings for Nov.

London, Jan. 21.

November's pre-Christmas trade on the commercial tv airwaves saw the British indie web with billings totalling $29,089,200, from which the Government took $2,875,600 in ad duty.

Top grosser for the month was again Granada which racked up airtime sales worth $5,163,200, from its weekday operation in the north, according to statistics released by Media Records Ltd., an independent monitoring organization.

Associated Television, which runs a split week operation, took $2,469,600 from its London weekend activities and from its operation in the Midlands, Monday to Friday, grossed a further $2,357,600 giving the station a billings aggregate of $4,827,200 during November.

London weekday station, Associated-Rediffusion, coined $4,334,400. ABC-TV, weekend only operator in the Midlands and North, made $3,768,800.

The regional stations, all operating on a seven-days basis, coined thus in November:

Scottish-TV $1,601,600; TV Wales & West $1,380,400; Southern-TV $1,416,800; Tyne Tees-TV $1,307,600; Anglia-TV $719,600; Ulster-TV $408,800; Westward-TV $509,600; Border-TV $252,000; Grampian-TV $291,200; Channel-TV $67,200; Wales West & North $165,200.

Too Much 'Needle Time' Not Enough Live Tooters, So BBC Radio on Carpet

London, Jan. 21.

BBC Radio, which has of late been battling with the Musicians Union over aspects of the increased output of radio serviced, is expected to take the whole matter to arbitration soon.

MU objects to the fact that half of BBC's proposed "extra time" will be filled with disks rather than live tooters. However, the MU is not directly involved in the dispute.

Phonographic Performance Ltd., an organization formed by the record companies, on the other hand, is and is currently refusing BBC a licence to extend its "needle time" (disk exposure) because, it's thought, PPL might avoid trouble with MU by so doing.

Union, however, is not bound any way by the tribunal's decision and if it grants BBC extra disk time, then PPL will be forced to comply.

SCOT TV'S BID FOR BIGGER DIRECTORATE

Glasgow, Jan. 21.

Scottish Television Ltd., the commercial tv company for Central Scotland, will introduce new elements into the company, both on the board of directors and in the ownership of voting and non-voting shares.

According to James Coltart, a director, the company will invite from three to five leading Scots to join the existing nine directors. Those who accept will be given voting shares (7% Preference shares).

Present directors to Scottish Television are :Roy H. Thompson, chairman; James M. Coltart, deputy chairman; William Brown, deputy managing-director; Lord Balfour of Inchrye; Charles N. McQueen, Iain M. Stewart, John J. Hardy, and James Whitton. McQueen is a stockholder and a director of the theatrical firm, Howard & Wyndham Ltd.

Greenville, N.C. — Roy H. Park, president of Roy H. Park Broadcasting, Inc., named Marion "Hank" Tribley and John G. Clark Jr., to new executive positions with his corporation. Tribley has been appointed acting general manager of WNCT Television and both Clark and Tribley have been named to the station's management committee.

YOU WANT

ACTION DRAMA SUSPENSE ROMANCE?

YOU'VE GOT IT!

Here's the last word in first run features for TV. 72 great motion pictures in all (Al Capone, Angel Baby, Friendly Persuasion, Pay or Die, Dondi, Big Circus, Hell to Eternity, Love In The Afternoon, Armored Command, King Of The Roaring 20's, The Bridge, and many more) — all jam-packed with big name stars (Gary Cooper, David Wayne, Audrey Hepburn, Vincent Edwards, Rod Steiger, Chuck Connors, David Janssen, Sal Mineo, Rita Moreno, Ernest Borgnine, Gina Lollobrigida, Tony Perkins, Maurice Chevalier, Vic Damone, Mickey Rooney and many more)

We call it CAVALCADE OF THE SIXTIES—GROUPS 1 & 2. You'll call it the most exciting package in years.

For more information, rates and promotional material, contact your AATV Sales Representative at any one of these locations.

165 W. 46th Street, N.Y. C. PLaza 7-8530
1232 So. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois WAbash 2-7937
4376 Sunset Drive, Hollywood, California NOrmandy 2-9181
2204 Commerce St., Dallas, Texas Riverside 7-1658

ALLIED ARTISTS TV

W. German TV

Continued from page 32

private industry, with the Axel Springer Publishers, who have long yearned to get the television out of the government's hands, having one portion, studios in Berlin, and a publisher in Munich, also participating, the report ended.

Meanwhile, the general intendant of the Bavarian Television, A. Wallenreiter, gave his suggestion for the solution of the problem faced by the Second Net. Bavarian Television several months ago refused to pay a monthly fee to the Second Net, and the money has been held in a bank pending court action on whether the Mainz station is entitled to a portion. Now, Wallenreiter has suggested cooperation instead of competition—that Mainz should drop its plans for its own studios and production and should function as a 10th station joining the nine members of the First Net.

"Why send two teams from Germany to cover sports events like the Olympics in Inssbruck?" he reasoned. "We can't afford two competing shows."

In addition, he stated, the competition has raised prices—and while Bavarian TV used to pay about $4,000 for the rights to televise a German stage play, the price has now risen to $10,000.

Meanwhile, it's just been reported from Mainz that despite its deficits the Second Television has raised the salaries of its employees by an average of 5%, effective Jan. 1.

In addition, it's announced that during this year the Second Net plans to show considerably more films—another bitter blow to the German cinemas—and will make less of its own special television films because of the high costs.

Last year, the programs ran roughly two-thirds television shows and one-third films, but the percents will be switched for 1964 because it costs roughly 10 times as much to produce an hour or hour-and-a-half television program as it does to buy a film of the same length. Last year, the net produced about 104 television programs and showed about 50 films.

Filmizations directly from the Germans and foreign stages will be used, however, and the station has established a program called "Foreign Theater" to be shown once every six weeks. The Mainz outlet also plans to buy a series of originals from German playwrights for one-acters, to be filmed and run about 25 minutes, in a series called "Little Television Plays." This will give a chance to new writers, and also be less expensive to produce, it was reported.

French Network

Continued from page 39

the no-holds-barred political comedians, to the webs.

Group thought recent changes of radio stations needed more and clearer listings and announcements on programs that were on new webs since they had been cut from four to three. Suggested too were cutting down of too much useless talk, more variety in programming and more scientific vulgarization shows.

A musical education show was felt sorely need as well as more actual subject matter on literary, musical and literary shows that were usually lost in too much trivial talk rather than allowing authors to speak or music to be played.

Godfrey

Continued from page 1

fields was the finest cigaret" at the time. He described Few as understanding and a fine fellow. It was an amicable parting, Godfrey said.

Five years ago, this April, Godfrey was operated for lung cancer. Today (Wed.), he will be the guest speaker at an American Cancer Society luncheon at the Plaza Hotel, in honor of 220 volunteer leaders. He also will be presented the Crusade symbol, the "Sword of Hope," in recognition of his accomplishments in the fight against concer as American Cancer Society Honorary National Public Education Chairman.

VARIETY ARB FEATURE FILM CHART

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. The analysis is confined to the top rated feature slots in the ARB measured period, broken down by days in the week. The ARB measured period usually covers three or four weeks. Other data such as the time slot and total area homes is furnished. Top competition and competitive ratings also are highlighted.

Washington, D. C. • STATIONS: WRC, WTTG, WMAL, WTOP, WOOK.
• SURVEY DATES: OCTOBER 16 - 29, 1963.

WRC — Total Area Homes: 169,900 — Metro Rating: 21 — Share of Audience: 37

MONDAYS 7:30-9:30
Program: MONDAY NIGHT MOVIE

Oct. 21 "THE MATING GAME"
Debbie Reynolds, Tony Randall, Paul Douglas
1959, MGM, MGM

Oct. 28 "GOOD MORNING, MISS DOVE"
Jennifer Jones, Robert Stack
1955, 20th Century-Fox, 20th Century-Fox

TOP COMPETITION

PROGRAM	STATION & TOTAL HOMES
To Tell Truth 7:30-8:00	WTOP 167,900
I've Got Secret 8:00-8:30	WTOP 168,600
Lucy Show 8:30-9:00	WTOP 173,300
Danny Thomas 9:00-9:30	WTOP 167,400

WTOP — Total Area Homes: 55,700 — Metro Rating: 8 — Share of Audience: 30

TUESDAYS 5:00-6:30
Program: EARLY SHOW

Oct. 22 "SOLID GOLD CADILLAC"
Judy Holiday
1956, Columbia, Screen Gems

Oct. 29 "THE BAMBOO PRISON"
Robert Francis
1955, Columbia, Screen Gems

TOP COMPETITION

PROGRAM	STATION & TOTAL HOMES
Popeye 5:00-6:00	WTTG 101,700
Three Stooges 6:00-6:30	WTTG 96,500

WTOP — Total Area Homes: 43,900 — Metro Rating: 6 — Share of Audience: 26

WEDNESDAYS 5:00-6:30
Program: EARLY SHOW

Oct. 16 "ORDERS TO KILL"
Eddie Albert
1959, U-M-P-O, Flamingo

Oct. 23 "FOOTSTEPS IN THE FOG"
Jean Simmons
1955, Columbia, Screen Gems

TOP COMPETITION

PROGRAM	STATION & TOTAL HOMES
Popeye 5:00-6:00	WTTG 76,500
Three Stooges 6:00-6:30	WTTG 91,600

WTOP — Total Area Homes: 39,500 — Metro Rating: 5 — Share of Audience: 21

THURSDAYS 5:00-6:30
Program: EARLY SHOW

Oct. 17 "KISS THE BLOOD OFF MY HANDS"
Burt Lancaster
1948, Universal International, Screen Gems

Oct. 24 "711 OCEAN DRIVE"
Edmond O'Brien
1950, Columbia, Screen Gems

TOP COMPETITION

PROGRAM	STATION & TOTAL HOMES
Popeye 5:00-6:00	WTTG 92,400
Three Stooges 6:00-6:30	WTTG 92,100

WTTG — Total Area Homes: 62,900 — Metro Rating: 9 — Share of Audience: 18

FRIDAYS 9:00-11:00
Program: MOVIE GREATS

Oct. 18 "CASABLANCA"
Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman
1942, Warner Bros., United Artists

Oct. 25 "INSPECTOR GENERAL"
Danny Kaye, Walter Slezak
1949, Warner Bros., United Artists

TOP COMPETITION

PROGRAM	STATION & TOTAL HOMES
Bob Hope 9:00-9:30	WRC 163,100
Twilight Zone 9:30-10:00	WTOP 140,000
Jack Paar 10:00-11:00	WRC 128,800

WRC — Total Area Homes: 186,400 — Metro Rating: 25 — Share of Audience: 43

SATURDAYS 9:00-11:15
Program: SATURDAY AT THE MOVIE

Oct. 19 "THE TALL MEN"
Clark Gable, Jane Russell, Robert Ryan
1955, 220th Century-Fox, 20th Century-Fox

Oct. 26 "SOMETHING OF VALUE"
Rock Hudson, Dana Wynter, Sidney Poitier
1957, MGM, MGM

TOP COMPETITION

PROGRAM	STATION & TOTAL HOMES
Lawrence Welk 9:00-9:30	WMAL 170,100
Defenders 9:30-10:00	WTOP 138,100
Gunsmoke 10:00-11:00	WTOP 163,600

WTOP — Total Area Homes: 112,900 — Metro Rating: 14 — Share of Audience: 56

SUNDAYS 1:30-4:30
Program: PICTURE FOR SUNDAY

Oct. 20 No Picture for Sunday

Oct. 27 "THE GREAT MOMENT"
Joel McCrea
1944, Paramount, MCA

Double Feature
"MYSTERY SEA RAIDER"
Henry Wilcoxon
1940, Paramount, MCA

TOP COMPETITION

PROGRAM	STATION & TOTAL HOMES
Sun. Movie 1:30-3:00	WTTG 70,200
Metro Movie 3:00-4:00	WTTG 43,700
AFL Football 4:00-4:30	WMAL 47,000

TV Followup Comment

Continued from page 52

force or the cracking of the genetic code.

But the CBS-TV "Chronicle" crew came up with all five in one dish last Wednesday (15) and the results were both absorbing and entertaining. Those five topics represent five of the major scientific breakthroughs that have come about in the last 15 years. As such, they surely deserved tv exploitation, and CBS should get some praise for documentary do-gooding alone.

To the small hoorays, however, can be added huzzahs for a treatment that had solid showmanship values almost all the way. Special effects, props and set design lent an especial appeal to the exposition of host Charles Collingwood and his guest professors and scientists, all of whom proved surprisingly communicative in their explanations. On hand were Dr. Gart Westerhout, professor and director of Astronomy, U. of Maryland; Dr. Charles H. Townes, provost of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (and inventor of the maser); Dr. Bruce Heezen, assistant professor of geology, Columbia U., and senior research scientist, Lamont Geophysical Labs; Dr. Chen Ning Yang, permanent staff member of the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, and co-sharer of the 1957 Nobel Prize in physics; Dr. Severo Ochoa, professor of biochemistry, NYU College of Medicine, and 1959 winner of the Nobel Prize in medicine; and Gerard Piel, president and publisher of Scientific American magazine, who summerized the importance of the discoveries. Bill.

From the hungry i

"From the hungry i," out of ABC's KGO-TV, San Francisco is in its fourth week. With a rather unusual format—a faithful studio reproduction of the world-famous North Beach bistro—the show has a good chance.

Half-hour show, beginning at 10:30, is Ed Sullivaned by Enrico Banducci, colorful, beret-topped prop of the hungry i, who has boosted such top performers as Mort Sahl, the Limelighters, Peter, Paul & Mary, Jonathan Winters, Irwin Corey and a host of others. Banducci doesn't seem entirely happy doing the humility bit and is a bit ill at ease in the interview department, but has the good sense—or his director has—to keep his own chatter to a minimum.

Second show spotlighted Barbara McNair and The Committee, an improvisational troupe from a rival nightclub. Miss McNair did her usual competent job, looked and sounded good in three songs. The Committee's first number, an electrocution scene, was neither macabre enough to shock nor funny enough to amuse, but a takeoff on a symphony conductor doing a Leonard Bernstein came off very well. Feigning instruments, each "musician" imitated the sound while the conductor explained its function, then the whole ensemble rendered a "variation on a young people's folk theme." It was "London Bridge is Falling Down".

Big problem, of course, is to give the viewer the feeling he's got a ringside seat at a world-famous nightclub (and without any of the disadvantages, such as noisy neighbors, drunks and cover charges). Technical director Wernher Ruhl and director Jim Baker have created an excellent plain brick wall backdrop, a la the hungry i. Audience pops in off the street and is scattered around the floor. David Allen produced.

It's an interesting experiment, if not new, especially when one considers Banducci can't come up with top names every week, but since he has made his rep as a discoverer of talent, this may be a help rather than a hindrance. He's nationally known as a guy with an eye for promising performers, but whether that is enough to pull in the viewers, only time will tell. As of now, it looks good. Cwin.

'Breakthrough' Specs On Burrud Schedule

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

"Breakthrough," a new one-hour series of color specials, will be produced by Bill Burrud Enterprises. Burrud, who will be exec producer of the series, has secured the cooperation of the U. S. Department of Defense and the U. S. Air Force.

First program will be titled "Breakthrough: Space Medicine."

ONCE-A-WEEK IN SAN FRANCISCO AGAINST NEWS, ACTION AND VARIETY

THE NO. 1 PROGRAM IN 7:00 P.M. TIME SLOT

NOV. 1963 ARB

		Rating	Share
KPIX	THE RIFLEMAN	13.0	29.0
	YOU ASKED FOR IT	11.0	24.0
	THE DETECTIVES	12.5	28.0
	GRIMSBY/COCHRAN	4.5	10.0

ONCE-A-WEEK IN NORFOLK, VA. AGAINST ACTION

BEATS ITS DIRECT COMPETITION, RATES ALMOST 50% HIGHER THAN NEXT SHOW

NOV. 1963 ARB 7 P.M.

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WAVY	THE RIFLEMAN	17.0	40.5	HUNT/BRINK	16.5	37.0
	THE SAINT	12.5	30.0	CBS NEWS	16.0	36.0
	MAVERICK	11.0	26.5	MAVERICK	12.0	27.0

STRIPPED IN SAN ANTONIO AGAINST NEWS

VIRTUALLY DOUBLES THE RATING OF ONE STATION AND TRIPLES THE OTHER

NOV. 1963 ARB 6 P.M.

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
KONO	THE RIFLEMAN	22.5	53.5	LONE RANGER	16.0	47.0
	NEWS	11.5	27.5	HUNT BRINK	11.0	32.5
	NEWS	7.0	17.0	CBS NEWS	6.0	17.5

ONCE-A-WEEK IN PHILADELPHIA AGAINST NEWS AND ACTION

NO. 1 PROGRAM IN ITS TIME PERIOD. TOP RATED SHOW 7:00 P.M. ALL WEEK ON WFIL

NOV. 1963 ARB

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WFIL	THE RIFLEMAN	15.0	40.0	TRUE ADVEN.	8.5	24.0
	RESCUE 8	11.0	29.0	HUNT/BRINK	18.0	50.5
	TV 10 NEWS	11.0	29.9	CBS NEWS	8.0	22.5

. . . ALMOST DOUBLES THE RATING AND SHARE OF LEAD-IN AND MOVES STATION FROM VIRTUAL LAST TO STRONG FIRST PLACE

STRIPPED IN MADISON, WIS. AGAINST NETWORK NEWS

NO. 1 IN TIME PERIOD, MORE THAN DOUBLES RATING AND SHARE OF ITS LEAD-IN

NOV. 1963 ARB 5:30 P.M.

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WKOW	THE RIFLEMAN UHF	13.0	38.5	REB. ROCK & FR	5.0	17.0
	CBS NEWS VHF	11.5	34.5	DRAW, RGNR, YOGI	18.0	61.0
	HUNT/BRINK UHF	8.5	25.0	FEATURAMA	5.5	19.0

MOVES STATION FROM LAST PLACE TO FIRST AGAINST VHF COMPETITION

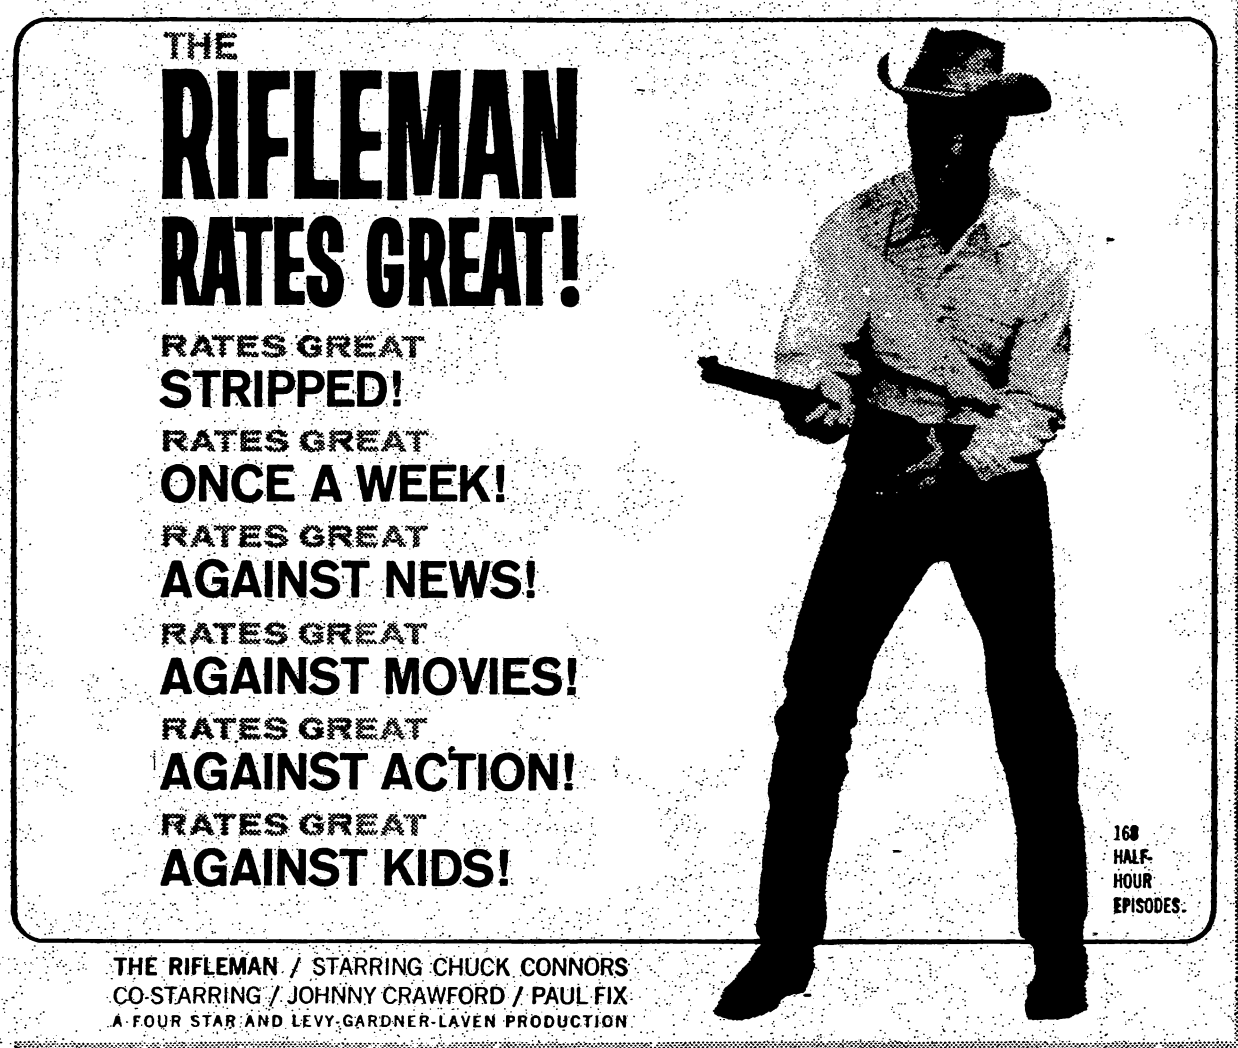
STRIPPED IN CHARLESTON-HUNTINGTON AGAINST NEWS AND ACTION

LEADS ITS TIME PERIOD 7 P.M. . . DOUBLES THE RATING AND SHARE OF LEAD-IN

NOV. 1963 ARB (M.T.W.T.)

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WUSN	THE RIFLEMAN	18.4	38.8	GIANTS MAST PEA	8.3	19.0
	HUCK SLADE, MAR-VIN RIPCORD	18.3	38.6	PIONEER HUNT BRINK	25.8	58.3
	ESSO RPTS	10.1	21.4	CBS NEWS	9.8	22.5

. . . AND MOVED STATION FROM LAST TO FIRST PLACE



THE RIFLEMAN / STARRING CHUCK CONNORS
CO-STARRING / JOHNNY CRAWFORD / PAUL FIX
A FOUR STAR AND LEVY-GARDNER-LAVEN PRODUCTION

STRIPPED IN NASHVILLE AGAINST NEWS

INCREASES RATING 166% AND SHARE 135% OVER LEAD-IN

NOV. 1963 ARB 6 P.M.

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WSIX	THE RIFLEMAN	16.0	33.0	COCH/NEWS/WEA	6.0	14.0
	DATELINE TODAY	21.0	43.5	HUNT/BRINK	21.0	50.0
	NEWS/WEA/SPTS	11.5	23.5	CBS NEWS	15.0	36.0

STRIPPED IN PORTLAND, ORE. AGAINST NEWS

INCREASES ITS OWN RATING 75% AND OWN SHARE 38.9% IN JUST ONE MONTH

	OCT. 1963 ARB 6 P.M.			NOV. 1963 ARB 6 P.M.
		Rating	Share		Rating	Share
KPTV	THE RIFLEMAN	8.0	18.0	THE RIFLEMAN	14.0	25.0
	ANN SOTHERN	3.0	6.5	ANN SOTHERN	4.0	7.0
	NEWS SCENE	16.5	37.0	NEWS SCENE	19.0	34.0
	HUNT/BRINK	17.0	38.0	HUNT/BRINK	18.0	32.0

STRIPPED IN BUFFALO AGAINST MOVIES

TIES FOR FIRST PLACE . . . INCREASES ITS OWN PREVIOUS RATING (7.0) BY 57.1%

NOV. 1963 5 P.M.

		Rating	Share
WGR	THE RIFLEMAN	11.0	35.0
	5 O'CLOCK SHOW	8.0	26.0
	EARLY SHOW	11.0	35.0

STRIPPED IN SCRANTON, PENN.

DOMINATES THE 6:30 P.M. TIME PERIOD AGAINST NETWORK NEWS

NOV. 1963 ARB

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WNEP	THE RIFLEMAN	19.0	42.5	NEWS	10.0	29.0
	CBS NEWS	11.0	24.5	MOVIE	12.0	34.0
	HUNT/BRINK	13.0	29.5	NEWS	12.0	34.0

. . . AND MOVED STATION FROM LAST TO FIRST PLACE

ONCE-A-WEEK IN TOLEDO AGAINST NEWS

TOP RATED 7 P.M. SHOW IN MARKET ALL WEEK INCREASES LEAD-IN RATING BY 80%

NOV. 1963 ARB 7 P.M.

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WSPD	THE RIFLEMAN	23.5	54.0	DEADLINE	13.0	34.0
	JOHN SAUNDERS NEWS/WATCH	16.0	36.5	CARTOONS/ EDITORIAL	18.0	48.0

. . . MOVES STATION FROM LAST TO FIRST PLACE

STRIPPED IN KANSAS CITY AGAINST MOVIES AND KIDS

MORE THAN DOUBLES RATING AND SHARE OF LEAD-IN

NOV. 1963 ARB 5 P.M.

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WDAF	THE RIFLEMAN	8.0	32.5	HND/FUN/DRAW	3.5	15.0
	EARLY SHOW	5.0	20.5	EARLY SHOW	5.5	23.5
	TOREY/ROCK & FR	11.0	45.0	MICKEY HOUSE	14.0	59.5

. . . MOVES STATION FROM LAST TO SECOND PLACE

ONCE-A-WEEK IN NEW YORK CITY AGAINST NEWS AND ACTION

THE HIGHEST RATED 7 P.M. SHOW ALL WEEK ON WABC-TV . . . ALMOST DOUBLES LEAD-IN RATING

NOV. 1963 ARB

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WABC	THE RIFLEMAN	12.0	21.5	NEWS/COCHRAN	6.5	13.0
	EVENING REPORT	13.5	24.5	CBS NEWS	12.0	23.5
	HUNT/BRINK	12.0	21.5	PRESSMAN RYAN	9.5	18.5
	BOURBON ST. BEAT	9.5	17.5	MICKEY MOUSE	13.5	27.0
	TRAILS WEST	3.5	6.5	TRAILS WEST	3.0	6.0
	3-STAR NEWS	4.0	7.0	BRAVE STALLION	5.0	10.0

. . . TIES NBC NEWS, ALMOST TIES CBS NEWS. SOUNDLY BEATS REMAINING THREE STATIONS.

ONCE-A-WEEK IN CHARLOTTE, N. C. AGAINST ACTION

THE HIGHEST RATED 7 P.M. SHOW IN THE MARKET ALL WEEK

NOV. 1963 ARB

		Rating	Share	Lead In	Rating	Share
WBTV	THE RIFLEMAN	32.0	68.0	CBS NEWS	24.5	50.5
	DRAGNET	14.0	30.0	HUNT/BRINK	23.0	47.5

Moves station from a virtual tie for first place to runaway first place

OUTRATES THESE NET SHOWS WHICH ARE D B'd AT 7 P.M.: DR. KILDARE, OUTER LIMITS, OZZIE & HARRIET, LUCY, MR. ED, LASSIE, JAMIE McPHEETERS.

OUTRATES THESE NETWORK SHOWS ALL WEEK ON WBTV: The Defenders, Danny Thomas, Andy Griffith, Bob Hope, Candid Camera and What's My Line . . . ON WSOC: My Three Sons, Donna Reed, Flintstones, Fugitive, Ben Casey, Hazel, and Breaking Point.

NOTE TO TIME BUYERS, REPS AND STATIONS: This random sampling of RIFLEMAN ratings is typical of its success all over the country. We'll be happy to get the complete rating story to you upon request.

"PROVEN-PROGRAMMING" FROM

FOUR STAR DISTRIBUTION CORP.

A SUBSIDIARY OF FOUR STAR TELEVISION

600 FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK 20, N. Y. LT-1-8530

* Ratings and shares subject to the limitations as listed in the ARB reports used.

Saar Radio Hikes Power, Adv. Time Despite Beefs From German B'casters

Saarbruecken, Jan. 21.

The controversial Saarland Radio has defied the powerful Working Group of German Radio and Television, and has upped its power to 300 kilowatts and increased its advertising time.

Despite the word that the Radio and TV Association might ban the Star Radio for defying the group regulations, the Saar doubled its power from 150 kilowatts starting as of 12 (noon) on New Year's Day, and has been streaming out its new program scnedule under the name of "Voice of Europe from the Saar."

Saar Radio decided on the dramatic change for the daytime and nighttime broadcasting following noon so that it could include more commercials in its newly-increased powerful broadcasting setup, and thus up its income.

According to the general manager of the Saar Radio, Dr. Franz Mai, until the Working Group of German Radio and TV has made its final decision—due at a general membership meeting of the organization to be held the end of this month—the Saar station will include its commercials in four blocks of time daily. Then, the plan is to sell whole segments or entire programs to the sponsors, in defiance of the German broadcasting code which states that advertisers shall have no control over the program and can buy spots at regulated times only.

The new Voice of Europe of the Saar, broadcasting at 211 meters wavelength and on channel 3 of the ultra-shortwave, can now be heard throughout West Germany, in many of the border Communist countries such as Yugoslavia, Poland, East Germany and Roumania, in all the Benelex countries, and in much of France.

Funt

Continued from page 33

a member of a crew wrecking a building, or a worker on an auto assembly line, or the passenger in a cab with the cabbie talking to it over his shoulder (all upcoming show incidents).

Serious responses, heretofore cut out to emphasise comedy, will now be compiled and used when they are significant and dramatic. Instead of going all over the country to collect a national response to one question, one question will be posed in one location, like an old sailors' home in Philly, or a ski lodge etc.

"Tell It to the Camera" hasn't had quite as many folks behind camera as on in those fast cuts around the country, but there has been a production turnover. Four units are now working with Al Lessner, Lou Terrell ("Candid Camera" production men) and Burt Cadwell and Howard Felcher acting as unit managers. They may well beat "the torturous process of trial and error" before the 20 weeks are up. "Candid Camera" has had it beat for a decade.

Gleason Tribute

Continued from page 34

in the evening. It scored again despite its placement so late in the show.

George Kirby had a lively turn with songs and immitations. There were the Glee Girls, Nancy Wilson, Alice Ghostley, Elizabeth Allen, as well as Gleason's pal Toots Shor. Also coming up for stage bits were Earl Wilson, Frank Gifford, and Sam Huff. Sonny Fox handled the door prize turn, with Bob Banner winning a trip to Copenhagen (He needed it?, Fox asked). Sammy Spear did the batoning.

Gleason, at about 1:15 a.m. came up for the finale for the thanks.

Horo.

Brit. 'TW3' Cast Wings To N.Y. For Award Re Kennedy Tribute Show

London, Jan. 21.

With the exception of Dame Sybil Thorndyke and Robert Lang, cast members and writers of BBC-TV's "That Was The Week That Was" who contributed to the Kennedy-tribute show will be winging out to the U.S. later this week, while Millicent Martin is on her way by sea. They will join producer Ned Sherrin, already in the States, in receiving an award from the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

Ceremony set for Jan. 27 in Madison Square Garden, New York, will also honor President Johnson and Sol Hurok.

Performers concerned are Kenneth Cope, David Frost, David Kiernan, Roy Kinnear, Bernard Levin, Al Mancini, Millicent Martin, Lance Percival and William Rushton. Also there is musical director Dave Lee.

Writers involved are Christopher Booker, Caryl Brahms and Herbert Kretzmer (who with Dave Lee was responsible for the "In The Summer Of His Years" ballad).

Portsmouth, N.H. — Harold H. Segal has resigned as managing director of the Knight Quality Radio Stations of New England with no immediate announcement of his future plans.

British Com'l A-R In Exec Revamp

London, Jan. 21.

With vet broadcaster John McMillan now at the helm, the London commercial contractor Associated-Rediffusion has effected some executive changes in is programming departments.

Lord Windlesham, formerly head of features and executive producer becomes chief program exec, directly responsible to general manager McMillan. Program chief is to be assisted by Ray Dicks, program production exec, Cyril Francis, program planning topper and G. C. Whitaker, A-R's senior technical factotum.

Station's output structure has been revamped and now creative personnel come under five group heads. They are Elkan Allan (Variety and Outside Broadcasts); Cyril Bennett (Features and Children's programs); Antony Carey (Plays); Eric Maschwitz (scripted series) and Guthrie Moir (Religious Programs and Schools broadcasts).

Godfrey

Continued from page 33

company was 115% of normal. He spent no money anywhere else."

General Cigar came in with two participations per week for the Christmas holidays. "I usually won't do shortterm commercials. I get personally involved in what I'm selling and I get associated with a product. It kills me with competitive products. But this one (General Cigar) I loved. It was a sellout for the special Christmas cigar box and the company president told me he'll be with the show for the rest of this year. He also said he'd like to talk to me about doing a tv special."

It was at this point that he attacked the defeatest attitude towards radio held by so many in the trade. He even belabored many salesmen of his own network of being "order takers," being apologetic rather than proud of the medium. The ratings for radio he simply brushed aside as being not significantly representative of today's listening audience.

Enthusiastically, he talked about being discovered in the west. He referred to some clucks at the network who were feeding his program there at 3 p.m. in the west coast in the past. "Our's is a morning show. They had been getting us in the afternoon. We have men listening to us in cars. Our's is not exclusively a woman's audience. How do you account for the cigars we're selling?"

He was asked about his personal on-the-air selling. "I always put myself in the shoes of the buyer. I always think of him as a little smarter than me. You should hear some agency v.p. trying to tell me how to pose with a product. Point, the agency v.p. tells me, as if the buyer is stupid. They have everything figured out"—all wrong, he indicated.

"I believe in what I sell. You should go through that Breast 'O Chicken tuna fish plant," he urged, remembering all the selling points for the tuna fish product.

The Monday-through-Friday "Arthur Godfrey Show," considered the most expensive buy in radio networking, currently is about 75% sold out. He's capping this week's CBS Radio 30th anni celebration with an all-night program Saturday (25) night, with a roster of guestars. The broadcast will emanate from both coasts (Pat Buttram will co-host in Los Angeles) and the number of show biz celebs set for a visit is as numerous as Godfrey's freckles.

Mgt.: William Morris Agency

WINNERS IN PITTSBURGH!

1963

Golden Quill Awards

FOR DISTINGUISHED ACHIEVEMENT IN JOURNALISM IN WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

DATELINE '63

(6:00 p.m. and 11:00 p.m.)

1st Award TV News Event—Regis Bobonis

1st Award TV News Film—WIIC News Staff

LUNCHEON AT THE ONES

(1:00 p.m. Mon. thru Fri.)

1st Award TV or Radio Women's Program—Alice Weston

WIIC NBC CHANNEL 11

Represented nationally by Blair-TV

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES

still

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES

Fourteen years ago the county seat of Sierra County, New Mexico, voted to change its name to TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES in honor of the 10th Anniversary of our show which is still on NBC daytime TV with Bob Barker, M.C.

This week the almost 6000 citizens of the city voted to retain the name of TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES.

May we take this opportunity to:

1. Thank the people of Truth or Consequences, New Mexico, for this show of continuing friendship.
2. Invite everyone of you to visit this lovely city of the great southwest, on the shores of the Rio Grande.

T. or C., N.M., lies half way between Albuquerque and El Paso on Highway 85. There are 150 fine motels to lodge you and fine restaurants to board you. The natural hot mineral springs baths have made it a renowned health spa since the days of Geronimo.

A SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE FISHING AND BOATING ON ELEPHANT BUTTE LAKE

(One of the largest bodies of impounded water in America)

BRING YOUR FISHING ROD

Trout in the Rio Grande
Giant cat fish in Elephant Butte Lake
—and about anything you want in Cabello Lake next door.

HUNTING, TOO!

The people and the weather are warm!
Reserve space now for the big 15th Fiesta April 23, 24, 25.
Write: Chamber of Commerce, Truth or Consequences, New Mexico.

Yours,

Ralph Edwards

P.S.: While you're at it, tune in TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES – NBC-TV weekdays and see Bob Barker,
"WORLD'S GREATEST MASTER OF CEREMONIES"

Foreign TV Reviews

Continued from page 54

In the impersonation of Patrick Allen—who was considered for the movie part of James Bond, and has the fearless and amorous inclinations of the type—he returns for a further 13 segments in a second skein, last year's reaction having been favorable, but this side of ecstasy.

Chief novelty of the series is the use of North African locations, now keyed in with a wailing signature theme from Ron Grainer that is odd rather than memorable. Crane is rejoined by the other regulars in this initialler, with Sam Kydd stalwart as a Scottish sidekick, Laya Raki protuberant as a well-stacked drink-dispenser in bar, and Gerald Flood pleasantly spruce as Crane's sparring partner, a Moroccan cop.

The opener had Crane trouble-shooting with a comely brunette, Marie (Patricia Haines), who claimed to be on the run from the O.A.S. He helped her to fake her death, to dodge the pursuit. But a cold buddy, Max (Peter Vaughan), claimed that the gal had really run off with some illgotten loot, which he wanted back. But Marie, being prettier, was obviously telling the truth, and, after stereotyped gunplay and chases, Crane saved her for a little private smooching.

The script, by Patrick Tilley, was run-of-the-mill stuff, but Allen managed to be quite dashing and purposeful. Guest performances from Patricia Haines and Peter Vaughan were above average, and Richard Doubleday directed Jordan Lawrence's production competently. Otta.

FACES OF POWER
With Malcolm Muggeridge
Producer: Television Reporters International
25 Mins., Sun., 11:10 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

The freelance outfit of commentators and telepundits, banded together as Television Reporters International, is responsible for this new skein, which promises to examine the nature of personal power by quizzing top personalities who exercise it. First victim was Jawaharlal Nehru, and interviewer Malcolm Muggeridge found him tough going. Rapport was not established, Nehru missed the point of some questions and evaded others, and Muggeridge chopped the air with his arms like he was missing a log.

Nehru, who seemed tired and wary, said nothing remarkable about the program's theme. Some of his incidental remarks, however, were interesting. He thought Britain's character should have improved through losing her Empire. He opined that Gandhi might have changed his pacifist views in face of the Chinese invasion, but that passive non-cooperation might be a dicey proposition in a dictatorship. He also revealed that he found Chou En-Lai chummy, but that Mao Tse-Tung, in conversation with him, had been quite prepared for 200,000,000 casualties in a future war. Nehru considered this an alarming outlook, and on one would quarrel with him.

TRI's production was jumpy, presumably in an attempt to bridge awkward gaps in the conversation. The segment was thus a desultory disappointment, and mighty limp beside the recent, admittedly more extensive, accounts of Kennedy and Krushchev by John Freeman. Otta.

Foreign TV Followup

World in Action

This half-hour pubaffairs skein from Granada-TV celebrated the change of the year by giving two segments to commentator Alistair Cooke, for an appraisal of post-Kennedy America. Cooke, whose weekly reports from the U.S. make a valuable contribution to radio, was given his head, and took it to provide a well-phrased and illuminating examination of 1963 events. Producer Tim Hewat eschewed gimmicks, and merely varied camera distances on Cooke, who held the screen for most of the timespan.

He drew the parallel between 1963, year of Kennedy's assassination and the Negro march on Washington, and 1863, year of the Gettysburg address. This suggested the theme of civil rights, and Cooke's strongest advocacy was for a change in the Congress committee system, which delays and sometimes kills legislation that the majority support. He put this high on the list of President Johnson's headaches, explaining that a "pitiful" number of the Kennedy administration's progressive measures had received Congressional approval.

Cooke also answered questions submitted by viewers, and allayed professed alarm about the ease of acquiring firearms in the States. He put the problem in its historical context, by quoting from the Bill of Rights, and held out some hope that action would result from pending legislation.

In fact, the manner and content of Cooke's discourse was nicely judged to appeal to local viewers, conscious of the "special relationship" between the two countries, but doubtful of some of its details. He neatly explained some American attitudes to its rebellious origins, as of a youngster who had successfully challenged a parent's control and might thus confuse freedom with license. The next segment will examine 1964 prospects. Otta.

Play of the Week

Granada-TV pulled off quite a coup by getting the first-time tv rights to three plays by Tennessee Williams, which are to be slotted into the commercial web's "Play of the Week" skein. First of the trio was "The Rose Tattoo," which will be followed by "The Glass Menagerie" and "Camino Real," the latter being an especially bold choice for a mass audience.

"The Rose Tattoo" is an approachable introduction to the high-voltage emotions of Williams's world, for its torrid involvement with sex or its absence, revenge, and sorrow is made more credible by being concentrated in Sicilians, given to passionate excesses. Paul Almond's direction neatly underlined the background of superstition and honor that give a meaning to Serafina's idolatry of her dead husband, her suspicions of her daughter and her boy friend's intentions, her slatternly dress, and her mixture of pity and affection for the buffoon Alvaro. He slipped in shots of the urn containing the dead husband's ashes, of the statuette of Our Lady, and these visually explained the context of Serafina's behavior.

Despite a certain staginess in Peter Phillips's sets and some unconvincing jabbering from Serafina's neighbors, the production gave a good account of the play. Katharine Blake gave a resourceful performance as Serafina, but she could hardly encompass the range of extravagance and sincerity that came naturally to Anna Magnani in the movie version. This is a part that doesn't easily cross national frontiers, and Miss Blake seemed to be going through the motions with great technical skill, rather than the emotions going through Alex Viespi was appealing as the anxious Alvaro, doing his best to please, and Lelia Goldoni was excellent as daughter Rosa, to whom the sexual side of love was a spontaneous expression of it, unhampered by her mother's inhibitions. Her scenes with Harvey Spencer, as her sailor suitor, were the most touching moments in a worthwhile production. Otta.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

The Radio-Television News Directors Assn. and Time-Life Broadcast are cosponsoring a newsfilm standards conference in New York Feb. 29-March 1 at which 20 news directors and cameramen will discuss the problems of their craft. The two-day sessions will cover equipment, picture-making and editing.

Carroll McGaughey, news director of WSOC-TV, Charlotte, N.C., will chair the discussion on equipment. Jack Bush, director of film for ABC News, will be in charge of the session on picture-making while the editing panel will be chaired by Richard Cheverton, news director of WOOD-TV. Following the formal sessions, there'll be a discussion of the performance of newsfilm during the Presidential assassination story. Robert Shafer, news director of WRCV-TV, Philadelphia, is overall chairman of the conference. Ed Ryan is prexy of RTNDA.

"Twentieth Century" is quite popular at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Number of war episodes have been used as classroom aides in a West Point course dealing with the history of the military art. Yesterday (Tues.), Burton Benjamin, exec producer of the series, was a guest of the Department of Military Art and Engineering. He addressed the cadets after the screening of "The Twentieth Century" documentary, "Stalingrad," which is used to illustrate one of the lectures in the course.

Other episodes utilized in the course are "D-Day: Attack" for the lesson on Western Europe beachhead; "Air Drop at Arnhem" for the lesson on Western Europe-Siegfried; "The Remagen Bridge" for the lesson on Western Europe-Rhineland; and "End of an Empire," for the lesson on Indochina.

Upsurge of CBS Radio fortunes prompted the first yearend letter by web prexy Arthur Hull Hayes to affils. "At year's end, network sales were more than 50% over 1962," Hayes told affils in his letter.

CBS Radio prexy added that sales for the first quarter of this year are already 9% ahead of the same three months in 1963. In discussing radio network programming, Hayes said that "it appears that listeners primarily want news, information, informal entertainment, and music." He went on to say, though, that CBS Radio is seriously investigating the possibility of programming drama and reviving comedy radio faves of the past.

Three entries for the Station Award of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences have been received to date. The Emmy Award organization has a Jan. 31 deadline for entries, which will be judged regionally by members of the Academy in nine Chapter cities.

The first entry received was from WCKT, Miami followed by entries from WMT-TV, Cedar Rapids, and WGAN-TV, Portland, Me. It is anticipated that the number of entries this year will be more than double the 60 which were received for the first Station Award last year. The regional winners of the Award will be announced about March 15.

Jack Harris, v.p. and general manager of KPRC and KPRC-TV, has been appointed chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee of the National Assn. of Broadcasters. Harris succeeds Frank P. Fogarty, the prez of Meredith Broadcasting Co. in Omaha.

The Freedom of Information committee works to establish a goal of freedom of access for all news media to report all phases of public proceedings to the people, particularly for the radio and television broadcasting industries.

Chicago's educational tv station WTTW will be seeking $250,000 in public contributions this year, although its operating budget for the 1964-65 season has been set at $1,150,000. Station expects to earn the $900,000 difference itself, through the production of series for National Educational Television & Radio Center, presentation of tv college courses for the Chicago Board of Education and courses for the Tri-County Educational Television Council, and from miscellaneous recording work. Its seventh annual fund drive will be held March 7-15 on the theme "Give the Gift of Knowing."

WBBM-TV, Chicago, recipient of a $1,500 cash award from the American Trucking Assn. Foundation, turned the sum over to the Transportation Center of Northwestern U. as a grant to sponsor a series of public lectures on the general subject of urban problems. The CBS station received the first prize money from ATA for its contribution toward community understanding of transportation problems in a metropolitan area via its two-part special last yer, "The Strangling City."

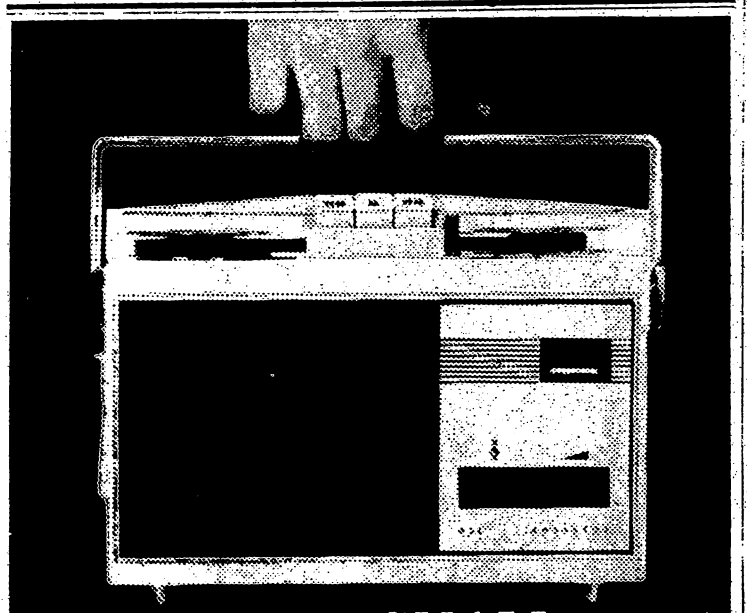
Storke's Twins

Continued from page 39

leans. Coming up is a trip to Italy (not Rome), and recent documentary junkets have covered items from the wheat farms of Nebraska to the rock beaches and juice heads of Westport, Conn. There was a full show devoted to Buster Keaton (with the comedian on hand) and one is in the works on the life of W. C. Fields.

With Johnny Carson, "Tonight" made the transition from Paar with comparative ease. While this gentle host has not mastered the technique of controversial tantrum or redneck innuendo, his charm and quick wit seem to have carried the owl viewers along.

All T&T hands, including the new "Today" girl who should be named this week, not only intro blurbs but also take part in six to seven-minute kinnies produced especially for sponsor sales sessions, conventions, etc. These jolly sales aids, usually written at the ad agency and adapted by the performers, are a tremendous boost to client relations, says Storke.



Don't let the SMALL size fool you!

This tape recorder is BIG quality through and through.

It's the all-new, Norelco transistor, battery portable.

Big in performance...Big in versatility...Big in reliability... Big in everything but size. Think of it. A 7-pound, cordless, over-the-shoulder tape recorder that lets you record any performance, anywhere, any time—auditions, readings, rehearsals, sessions, lessons—whether completely impromptu or scheduled, whether music or spoken word—with big machine fidelity; a professionally-engineered machine that gives you playback, through its own wide-range loudspeaker, so outstanding you will hardly believe your ears.

This new all-transistor Norelco Continental '101' works on ordinary flashlight batteries. It records and plays back up to 2 hours on a single 4" reel. Simple to use? Push two buttons and you're recording—one...and you're playing back. Its dynamic microphone picks up any sound within a broad radius with astonishing fidelity. Its bass and treble-control allows you to adjust the tone to your own taste. Its constant-speed motor with capstan drive insures distortion-free performance and broadcast-quality tapes. Ruggedly built... handsomely styled...surprisingly low priced. See it, hear it, try it...at your favorite hi-fi dealer or camera store.

Write for Brochure W: North American Philips Company, Inc., High Fidelity Products Division, 100 East 42nd Street, New York, New York 10017.

Norelco

Sardi's East
123 East 54th St. New York
PLaza 1-6655

Sardi's
234 W. 44th ST. NEW YORK
LA 4-0707

"COMEDY SHTIKS"
by YUSSEL YAGER
Hilarious SCRIPT of Gag Material
First Issue $3 ppd. to—
J. BERKMAN, 1360 New York Ave.
B'klyn 3, N. Y.

It is with great pride that we congratulate

DANNY KAYE

and the entire staff of

THE DANNY KAYE SHOW

on being voted four distinguished honors in Fame Magazine's 15th Annual Poll of Television Editors,
Critics, and Columnists:

"CHAMPION OF CHAMPIONS" PERFORMER BEST COMEDIAN
BEST NETWORK PROGRAM
BEST VARIETY SHOW

THE ARMSTRONG CORK CO./RAMBLER '64/THE RALSTON-PURINA CO.

Burial Industry to B'casters: 'We're at Your Beck & Call'

Chicago, Jan. 21

The burial industry, caught unprepared for the beating it has lately taken from a couple of best-selling books and a number of television programs, has created an information office to serve the mass communications media with factual materials, background information on funeral customs and even funeral props.

Called the Advisory Board for Radio, Television & Motion Pictures of the National Funeral Directors Assn., it has been created not to debate the recent charges but to offer assistance to producers of pictures of tv series who might sometime be shooting a funeral scene or an episode involving an undertaker. Idea is the same as that of the American Medical Assn. offering technical advice to producers of medical series in the interest of veracity and, of course, the positive representation of their profession.

Funeral directors feel they've been wronged by the exposes which, they say, do not apply to the majority of the nation's 14,000 undertakers who have been doing a regular "family" business in the traditions of the ethnic and religious groups they serve. That's the kind of funeral director they'd like to have represented in pictures and television to counteract the bad publicity generated by the fast-buck operators in their industry whom, they insist, are in the minority.

Headquarters of the Funeral Directors Assn. is in Milwaukee.

More Palance Segs

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Desilu studio's "The Greatest Show on Earth," on ABC-TV, has received its second pickup of the season, this one for four more segs. Series which stars Jack Palance was originally bought for 13 firm, subsequently received a renewal for 13 more episodes, and the latest pickup gives it 30 first-runs for the semester.

Stanley Colbert is exec producer of the series.

CHERMAK'S 'VIRGINIAN' SEG

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Cy Chermak, for past year story editor on Revue Studios' teleseries, "The Virginian," is producing his first episode of the 90-minute show.

Seg, tabbed "Walk in Another's Footsteps," rolled last week with R. G. Springsteen directing the Frank Chase teleplay.

USIA Ratings Up

Washington, Jan. 21.

Acording to its own ratings devices, the U.S. Information Agency reports its radio listening audience is increasing.

USIA asked Voice of America listeners overseas to submit cards with their name, address etc. for an eventual drawing. Fifty winners will receive transistor radios.

USIA reported 85,000 listeners submitted cards this year compared to 64,386 handing in entries in 1961.

Reasons cited by USIA for upbeat listening were a 50,000,000 increase in radio sets, strengthened VOA power from its Greenville, N.C., and Liberia transmitters and a boost from 227 hours weekly to 262 hours of English-language broadcasts.

New Campaign For British Com'l Radio

London, Jan. 21.

A new campaign for commercial radio in Britain was launched last week by Mark Chapman-Walker, joint general manager of the News of the World organization. Attacking the BBC monopoly in sound radio, he complained that the people of Britain were deprived of alternative networks in their own country, and added that British advertisers who supported Radio Luxembourg were paying out British money to provide an alternative program.

Challenging the Government view that there was little evidence of a public demand for local radio services, Chapman-Walker suggested that the only way to prove that point would be to permit experimental transmissions.

He reckoned that introduction of commercial radio would create a great new industry, helping radio manufacturers and would give a considerable boost to the theatrical and musical professions. He estimated that a "very lush outfit" could be provided for around $140,000.

The Pilkington inquiry into broadcasting nixed suggestions for introducing a commercial radio service and the findings were upheld by the Government.

Dunn, N.C.—Pat Grande, formerly of WTIK in Durham, is joining WPYB as news director.

Connie Francis' Nippon Taping of 2 TV Tinters

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

Connie Francis slated to arrive in last week of April to tape two hourlong color tv shows, one for domestic use and the other for global distribution, to be co-produced by Nippon Television Corp. (NTV). Thrush will also perform at one charity concert during her week or ten days here.

Although in large demand—her records have been among the top sellers in Japan over recent years—Miss Francis will not prform in clubs or commercial concerts during her stay. After Japan she goes to Hong Kong and on to Europe.

BBC-TV Wrestles With Format For Music Industry

London, Jan. 21.

The Eurovision Song Contest, one of the most important video shows to the music industry (an entry therein gets prime time tv exposure in more than 20 European countries), is also providing BBC-TV light entertainment chief Tom Sloan with a big headache.

His big problem is creating a successful format for the selection and presentation of British songs which are entered as official British entry to the international contest. Ever since the music publishers, who initially selected entries, "defected" to the commercial tv web to mount another songfest. Sloan has been casting around for an alternate method which will not only be conducive to a good tv show but will set well with the music biz.

Following the pubbers shift, he turned to the disk companies who created something of a fiasco by exploiting the BBC-TV offer to showcase performers they were either launching or for some other reason were not w.k. Further, most of the entered songs were penned by the diskeries a&r men who had a sharp eye on the international hit-making potential of the show.

Sloan thus employed different tactics the following year and commissioned what he considered to be the leading British songwriters to score new numbers for the pre-contest contest. This involved much controversy within the music trade and once again Sloan has been forced to dig deep for a new and, he hopes, acceptable formula.

His try this year involves one "name" performer — Mat Monro. Latter is to select his own songs for the contest which will be specially written for him. In Monro's case he has opted to select just the lyricists. They, in turn, will link with any tunewriter of their choice.

If the Monro-and-tailormade-songs format works out, Sloan will offer next year's contest to another singer of similar calibre.

TV Plugolas

Continued from page 35

for whatever deal they can work out.

It is common practice among small town stations cut off the end commercials on filmed shows to sneak in a commercial. Policing them is beyond the province of the network regulators.

Attending meeting, beside Coe, were Bill Tankersley, CBS head of standards and practices; Ed Smith, manager of practices for NBC; Dorothy Brown, head of continuity acceptance for ABC, and Roe Giesen, ABC general executive. The government report of cigaret smoking and its effects on health, was only lightly discussed. That policy will be instituted by the network brass in N.Y. Only mention in this connection was the possibility that no cigaret advertising will be broadcast earlier than 9 p.m.

Japan Count: 14,720,337

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

At end of October, count of registered tv sets in Japan was 14,720,337, second only to the U.S. In addition to official figures, 15% is generally acknowledged to cover unregistered sets.

Of official total, 1,768,022 were in the Tokyo area and 1,099,909 in Japan's second city of Osaka.

FRANKFURT STARTING 3D CHANNEL IN MAY

Frankfurt, Jan. 21.

West German television will have its third channel in operation in the state of Hesse—with headquarters in Frankfurt—this coming May 5.

Thus, Frankfurt will be the first of the nine stations comprising the First Television Net that will get its own regional television channel going. All the others are slated to follow suit in the next year or so.

Of the 750,000 television sets in the state of Hesse (as compared with 8,500,000 in the entire country) about half will be able to receive the Third Television Channel. The one which can receive the new programs are the same ones which can now view the Second Television Net, headquartered at nearby Mainz.

There will be no extra charge for reception of the Third Channel, other than the $1.25 monthly now paid by each of the country's television set owners.

And in addition, it is planned that the new channel will have no advertising—a blow to the country's name-brand manufacturers and ad agencies, who had hoped to get some additional time for their commercials.

The Third Program will begin its operation only on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 8:15 p.m. until 10 p.m., with Russian language courses, art and mathematics courses, plus newscasts and politics, sports and documentaries.

Additional costs of presenting the new programs will be "minor," acording to an official with the First Network in Frankfurt. It's estimated that a minute of programming will cost only about $60, and will require no added personnel for the First Net.

Jay McMullen

Continued from page 39

pusher come on camera. How do I know who he is? I have to look at his police record."

Producer, when he travels, doesn't take his family.

Locale of Afyon in Turkey legally grows opium, the source of heroin. Opium is used in morphine and other medicinal drugs, but a certain amount of this permissably legal opium (poppies) crop finds its way in the black market.

McMullen was in Afyon, as he was on a Harlem streetcorner, hidden in a truck, filming footage for the documentary. All the footage has gone to law enforcement agencies. Producer indicated that there isn't the police tie with dope in tonight's documentary as was evidenced in his exploration of gambling, which captured what looked like police hanky-panky.

"What are you going to do next?," McMullen was asked.

"I doubt if it'll be a crime story."

Denver — Ed Carroll, onetime Dumont exec and for six years head of Ted Bates ad agency commercial film department, has been named general manager of KCTO-TV here. Carroll's broadcast experience goes back to network radio when he produced such shows as "Gangbusters," "Counterspy" and the Henry Morgan show for ABC.

Radio Followup

Barry Gray Show

A planned bout between Carl Foreman, producer-director-writer of "The Victors," and Bosley Crowther, N.Y. Times critic who rapped the film mercilessly, didn't come off on Barry Gray's WMCA's show Monday night (20) because Crowther couldn't make it. So, reluctantly and under coaxing from Gray, who's a passionate partisan of "The Victors," Foreman went to work on the absent Crowther. In Foreman's book, Crowther only has the virtue of being honest. Otherwise, the Times critic is not very bright (he didn't even understand Foreman's point in "The Victors"); he's stubborn (Crowther refused to yield to Foreman's objections); and he's a snob (Crowther automatically "adores" every foreign film).

Other critics on the Gray show, including Jesse Zunser of Cue, Paul Beckley of WNDT, N.Y., and Prof. Robert Gessner of N.Y.U. refused to engage with Foreman. On the contrary, they were extremely deferential. While no unqualified enthusiasm was voiced for "The Victors," they did praise "High Noon," scripted by Foreman a dozen years ago, as a "classic."

Gray appeared to be particularly hungry for a fight with Crowther. That's okay as long as he observes the Marquis of Queensbury rules. Elementary fairness should have demanded that at least Crowther's review of "The Victors" should have been available for quotation. Instead, Gray had to make a lame paraphrase of the Crowther rap. But he did have on hand a letter to the N.Y. Times attacking Crowther's opinion.

There was also much talk on the Gray show about the general function of critics and the economics of filmmaking here and abroad. Arnold Schulman, scripter of the film, "Love With A Proper Stranger," was also present on the Gray panel, contributing some modest and sensible comments from the film industry's viewpoint.

Herm.

WABC-TV

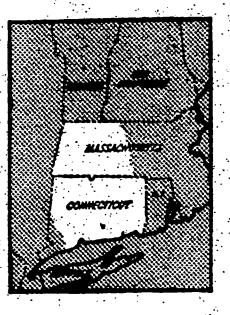
Continued from page 43

ABC-TV owned stations which have decided to pitch for the bigger dollar of the adult-slanted products.

WABC-TV's click with a couple of locally produced specials, "The Babe Ruth Story" and "The Phyllis Diller Show," is cueing more shows along this line. Howard Cosell, sports director, is slating six more specials and, in addition, the station is planning to put top nitery talent in a late evening showcase. Extra gravy from these shows come in by way of syndication through ABC Films which has already sold the Phyllis Diller stanza in about a dozen markets.

On the public service front, WABC-TV is laying on two Sunday shows, the hourlong "New York, New York" and the half-hour "Page One," both of which feature prominent politicos and other public figures. In addition, the station has a non-stop editorial policy. In the six months since he's taken over as v.p. and general manager of the station, John O. Gilbert has delivered 150 editorial statements, or an average of three a week.

WTIC MEANS GREATEST COVERAGE TOP PERSONALITIES ADULT ACCEPTANCE DEDICATED SERVICE IN RICH, RICH SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND



WTIC 50,000 watts
HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT
REPRESENTED BY THE HENRY I. CHRISTAL COMPANY

NEED SOMEONE TO CARRY THE BALL?

To sell your product in the big Northwest market, KSTP-TV is a triple-threat performer.

The Northwest's first TV station, KSTP-TV combines maximum coverage, top entertainment and superior service to dominate this market of 810,800 TV families and over $5 Billion in spendable income.

KSTP television 5
100,000 WATTS NBC
MINNEAPOLIS · ST. PAUL

THE SMOTHERS BROTHERS ARE BREAKING IT UP!

AND LOOK WHAT'S COMING...

FEB. 4, GARRY MOORE SHOW (CBS-TV) ■ FEB. 6-12, TROUBADOR, LOS ANGELES ■ FEB. 15, MASSEY HALL, TORONTO ■ FEB. 16, KLEINHANS AUDITORIUM, BUFFALO ■ FEB. 18, LAFAYETTE AUDITORIUM, LAYFAYETTE ■ FEB. 19, OKLAHOMA UNIVERSITY, STILLWATER ■ FEB. 25, WITTENBURG COLLEGE, SPRINGFIELD ■ FEB. 26, BALL STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE, MUNCIE ■ FEB. 27, ORPHEUM THEATER, MADISON ■ FEB. 28, MORRIS AUDITORIUM, SOUTH BEND ■ FEB. 29, UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN, ANN ARBOR ■ MARCH 1, JUDY GARLAND SHOW (CBS-TV) ■ MARCH 5, TAFT AUDITORIUM, CINCINNATI ■ MARCH 6, MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM, CLEVELAND ■ MARCH 8, MASONIC TEMPLE, DAVENPORT ■ MARCH 12, CHICO STATE COLLEGE, CHICO ■ MARCH 13, SACRAMENTO STATE COLLEGE, SACRAMENTO ■ MARCH 14, UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC, STOCKTON ■ MARCH 15, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SANTA BARBARA ■ MARCH 16, LOS ALTOS HIGH SCHOOL, LOS ALTOS ■ MARCH 17, COLLEGE OF SAN MATEO, SAN MATEO ■ MARCH 19, UNIVERSITY OF SAN FRANCISCO, SAN FRANCISCO ■ MARCH 20, KENNEDY MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM, SAN JOSE ■ MARCH 21, CAL. POLY. INSTITUTE, SAN LUIS OBISPO ■ MARCH 29, HOSTS OF "MARINELAND CARNIVAL" SPECIAL (CBS-TV) ■ APRIL 3, ARIZONA STATE COLLEGE, FLAGSTAFF ■ APRIL 4, UTAH STATE UNIVERSITY, LOGAN ■ APRIL 6, IDAHO STATE UNIVERSITY, POCATELLO ■ APRIL 7, UNIVERSITY OF NEW MEXICO, ALBUQUERQUE ■ APRIL 8, UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO, BOULDER ■ APRIL 9, COLORADO STATE UNIVERSITY, FT. COLLINS ■ APRIL 11, DENVER UNIVERSITY, DENVER ■ APRIL 12, KANSAS STATE COLLEGE, PITTSBURG ■ APRIL 13, WASHBURN UNIVERSITY, TOPEKA ■ APRIL 14, UNIVERSITY OF NORTH DAKOTA, GRAND FORKS ■ APRIL 15, DRAKE UNIVERSITY, DES MOINES ■ APRIL 16-MAY 13, FLAMINGO HOTEL, LAS VEGAS ■ MAY 15, CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK CITY ■ JUNE 1-7, GLEN CASINO, BUFFALO ■ JUNE 2, GARRY MOORE SHOW (CBS-TV) ■ JUNE 8-26, BASIN STREET EAST, NEW YORK CITY ■ AUGUST 1, RED ROCKS THEATER, DENVER ■

PERSONAL MANAGEMENT
KRAGEN-CARROLL INC.

AGENCY REPRESENTATION
WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY INC.

Mercury RECORDS

PHOTOGRAPHY FRED SCHNELL

Television Reviews

Continued from page 52

that many lower income bracket children need not only food and medicine, but guidance for themselves and their parents, as well.

No complete solution was offered, but forward steps were suggested by Mrs. Frances Mauney, supervisor of Family Service Society; Dr. Richard Bloomberg, chief of pediatrics of Grady Memorial Hospital; Dr. Fred R. Stair, pastor of Central Presbyterian, program host.

Ed Grider, minister of the church's community service was the narrator. Volunteers of the Baby Clinic Staff and clinic patients and their neighbors also appear in the program.

Scenes filmed in the clinic and elsewhere around Atlanta, interviews of mothers with large broods of children, shots of substandard housing, indicating the desperate need of care for youngsters, forcefully brought home the program's message.

Second and third in this series of documentaries will deal with problems of teenagers in the Inner City and the fourth "The Search" exposes insecurity by a man who is lost in the Inner City.

Series is hard hitting and provocative. Camera work was fine, editing crisp, and the musical score a real plus. Lucc.

THE PIERRE BERTON SHOW
With Alexander Cohen, Nathan Cohen
Producer: Ross McLean
Director: John Spalding
30 Mins., Mon., 11:40 p.m.
CJOH, Ottawa

Asked by Pierre Berton about his "battle" with fellow producer David Merrick, Alexander Cohen replied, "Yes, he's a wholesaler and a junkman—but I'm not in a battle with him."

That was one of the stray moments in this lively seg when saturnine Cohen — somewhat resembling the late H. L. Mencken—didn't manage to get in a plug for either the Italian musical "Rugantino," current at, or "Hamlet," coming to the O'Keefe Centre, Toronto, where Cohen usually tries out his Broadway shows. At one point, after he had reeled off all possible data (except prices), Berton remarked, "Now let us pause for some OTHER commercials." (Cohen predicted that if the "subtitled" "Rugantino" succeeds in North America, '65 would bring Berliner Opera, '66 Moscow Ensemble, '67 Chinese Opera.)

Fellow guest Nathan Cohen (no relation), Toronto Star's entertainment editor and legit critic, admitted that he considers himself "the best drama critic in North America", but modestly added "on a daily newspaper." The other Cohen rated him one of the top three or four and said, "I believe Toronto has three very good critics. That's why it is one of North America's important cultural centres." (The other daily pundits are Globe & Mail's Herbert Whittaker, who once subbed several months for Walter Kerr on the N. Y. Herald-Tribune; and Telegram's Ron Evans.)

"Cohen (Alex) says you fellows are good, but you made Herman Levin foam at the mouth," observed Berton—referring to Levin's outburst at Toronto pans of his "Girl Who Came to Supper." Nathan Cohen promptly termed it "a bad musical; the New York critics were basically in agreement with me. Mr. Levin might have improved it had he heeded my comments." (Alexander Cohen) (who later cracked about the Noel Coward score: "It has no music—not six consecutive notes.") said, "I read mainly the critics I respect . . . I pay great attention to Elliott Norton of Boston, for instance . . . Canadian audiences pay less attention to critics than New York audiences."

When Berton predicted that Richard Burton's and Elizabeth Taylor's converging on Toronto (when Burton comes to rehearse "Hamlet") would create the greatest uproar "since Gina Lollobrigida became a Canadian citizen for a week," producer Cohen said he'd "move them out" if anything untoward happened. Both Cohens heaped encomia on Miss Taylor's acting ability, but Alexander added, "I think 'Cleopatra' was so badly produced and directed, she didn't have a chance."

The producer said his "Barnum" musical would not be ready for the N. Y. World Fair this season after all—"I'm not satisfied with it." Berton asked would it be ready for the Montreal World Fair in '67—a gibe received in dignified silence. Asked what he thought of "Barnum of Broadway," he replied, "It is a cheap and shoddy appellation"—to which Berton gleefully retorted, "Your own publicity man has sent me a pile of releases calling you that." "Well," purred Cohen, "you change your tactics over the years."

Berton interrupted Nathan Cohen's paean to Elizabeth Taylor, artist, (whose talent Berton rated less highly) with, "You're a critic? You like monster pictures!" Cohen replied with aplomb, "Yes, but I don't think they're good." Gard.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM—HOW MUCH?
With Dave Moore, George Shapiro, Mulford Q. Sibley, Milton Rosen Producer: Rollie Johnson
Director: Clarence Anderson
63 Mins.: Wed. 3:30 p.m.
WCCO-TV, Mpls. & St. Paul

Hats should be doffed to WCCO, local CBS affiliate, for going to what no doubt was a considerable expense to provide this live tv and radio program sans commercial interruptions. Reason for this deserved thanks is that, by doing so, the station gave setowners the chance to witness or hear a debate on a currently much-in-the-limelight and very controversial subject, academic freedom.

It was a debate from the U. of Minnesota campus that a large segment of the area's population undoubtedly wished to catch, and tv and radio made it possible for many to listen to the debaters express their opposite views.

The debated subject has had the area in a frenzy because of opinion extremes and the several delicate issues involved, together with the fact that it finds the U. of Minnesota and the school's administration on the carpet with numerous folks.

On the program WCCO-TV tossed in, from time to time, closeups of members of the live audience, revealing emotions and making for good drama. Credit for the program's topdrawer handling goes to producer Rollie Johnson and director Clarence Anderson, station staffers.

Debaters were Dr. M. Q. Sibley, visiting U. of Minnesota political science professor from Stanford and Cornell, an admitted Quaker socialist-pacifist, and Milton Rosen, a St. Paul municipal office holder for 28 years and a successful auto tire dealer. The debate eventuated from the heat the two men stirred up with the public and was arranged by a U. of Minnesota students' group. What got the whole thing started was a Dr. Sibley letter published in the college's daily newspaper, stating he'd like to see the school have two communist professors and student clubs advocating communism, nudism and free love.

This provoked a considerable public outburst and found Rosen, up for re-election in April, sounding off in the press against Sibley and demanding that the university fire him.

The impression gained by a tv viewer was that the auditorium had been packed with those favoring Sibley's stand in the matter. Heavy applause punctuated his arguments and at the end he received a standing ovation. On the other hand, there was little applause, inappropriate laughs and even some boos for what Rosen had to say.

WCCO staffer Dave Moore told dialers what the affair would be about and George Shapiro, U. of Minnesota speech professor, acted as moderator, both performing their tasks well. Each debater had 15 minutes to present his side of the controversy and two minutes for an answer to each of the live audience questions directed at one or the other or both. These questions had been in writing and collected in a box passed out in the auditorium. They were taken by Shapiro from the box and read to the debaters.

This WCCO entry into the academic freedom controversy must have won it public good will and enhanced its public relations as well. The American Legion in Minnesota has asked for an investigation of the two campus groups with which Sibley is associated. Twin City newspapers played up the debate on their front pages. Rees.

WRONGWAY RIEGELS
With Hank Morgan, Vance Maree, Bill Munday, Roy Riegels, Benny Lom, Bill Munday Producer-Director: Roger Marx
15 Mins., Sat. 7 p.m.
CREST, RAMBLER
WSB-TV, Atlanta

Hank Morgan, WSB-TV's sports director, via cooperation by his KTVU, Oakland-San Francisco, counterpart, came up with this nostalgic (to football fans) segment dealing not only with a fantastic gridiron boner, but an exciting football game between Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets and UCLA's Bears in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1, 1929. Tech won, 8 to 7.

Morgan rounded up Vance Maree, huge Tech lineman, who, in a way, was a hero of the game, supplying the winning margin, and Bill Munday, pioneer sports spieler, who was doing the play-by-play for NBC, and who recalled vividly the odd ball happenings of the contest.

Meanwhile, Venter corralled Benny Lom, fleet backfield man and punter for UCLA, and Riegels, their star center, on the West Coast, for a taped interview on the wrongway run by Riegels. Into this conversation was spliced a segment of film of the game itself showing Riegels plucking a Tech fumble out of the air, heading into a mass of enemy players and, in dodging them, getting turned around and legging it for his own goal, closely pursued by Lom.

Lom explains that he kept telling Riegels he was going in the wrong direction. Riegels said he heard Lom, all right, but figured the Techs had knocked HIM silly and he didn't know what he was talking about. Film showed Lom tackling Riegels on the one-yard line, where Riegels sat, in obvious abject misery, as both teams gathered around him.

Shortly thereafter, Maree crashed through the UCLA line to block a Lom punt behind goal line, adding two points to six Tech already had and this proved to be the winning margin.

All this happened 35 years ago, but its presentation stirred a lot of nostalgic comment among football fans and Morgan deserves much credit for working it up with Venter's help. Lucc.

'CHRONICLE' TAKING A COMEDIC FLYER

"Chronicle," pubaffairs series loosely examining the arts and the human situation, is going to take a flyer with a comedy.

The CBS-TV hourlong comedy-drama will be a televersion of "A Trip to the Moon," the prophetic novel by Jules Verne. Signed to star are Jonathan Miller, Peter Cook, Alan Bennett and Dudley Moore, the quartet of Englishmen who comprised the original cast of "Beyond the Fringe" on Broadway. Vidversion was penned by Miller and producer Robert Goldman from Verne's novel, "From the Earth to the Moon."

"Chronicle" alternates Wednesday nights with "CBS Reports."

Goldenson

Continued from page 39

tion of Pres. John F. Kennedy, Goldenson said: "In our enthusiasm, we must not encourage law enforcement officials to go beyond normal cooperation with news personnel and jeopardize the rights of a defendant. We must consider the lasting effects on a man's career and family when millions of Americans see, hear and read about him when he appears before a committee of inquiry where the question of innocence or guilt is not judically determined."

Goldenson pointed out that it is now technically possible to cover trials, hearings, conferences and other events of major public interest without the distraction of massive equipment. The new electronic techniques, he said, must be put to the service of informing the public.

He compared the days following Pres. Kennedy's death with the unrest and violence which, out of confusion and suspicion, came in the wake of Lincoln's assassination. Goldenson noted that radio and television "made every citizen aware of every available detail of the tragedy and of the orderly transition of leadership.' He said that "one test of a free people is how they respond to crisis. A wise, rational and quick response requires a wise, rationale and equally quick dessemination of the facts. Television and radio met a stern challenge during those tragic days last November."

W. Germany Sets Near Saturation

Frankfurt, Jan. 21.

Upcoming Olympic Winter Sports in Innsbruck, Austria, have not had the desired effect of booming sales of television sets in West Germany. And the wholesalers and retailers report that the country—with a current count of about 8,500,000 television sets for 55,000,000 people—appears to be at near the saturation point.

Last Olympic Games and even the world football championships last year did much more to increase sales of television sets in West Germany than has the forthcoming winter championships which begin at the end of this month.

German television and radio industry reported that its sales for the 1963 Christmas season were off from the holiday season of 1962, and that particularly television sales dropped off. It's usually anticipated that about 40% of the television sets are sold in November and December, and dealers are stuck with many models that did not go. Pocket radios, transistor radios and tape equipment went well, however.

Brit. ABC-TV Steps Up Its Network Image

London, Jan. 21.

ABC-TV, Midlands and North contractor at weekends, is readying a production schedule designed to step up its networked programming. For instance, ABC's "Armchair Theatre" show which holds a key Sunday night berth alternately with Associated Television's "Studio '64," is to step up output to contribute two out of three weeks to indie network Sabbath drama from next April.

Similarly, its prestige offering, "Tempo," dealing with the lively arts, is also to get more frequent exposure on the web.

Benwitt's NAB Post

Washington, Jan. 21.

NAB signed on Robert Benwitt as an assistant to Code radio manager Charles Stone.

Benwitt, formerly business manmanager of WTVH-TV, Peoria, Ill., succeeds John Mandelbaum in the NAB job. Mandelbaum plans to resume studies toward a Masters degree.

Portland, Ore.—Robert Hawkins, formerly with KSFO, San Francisco, has been named program director of KEX here. At KSFO, he was production coordinator and assistant program director.

REAL ESTATE

NEW YORK CITY
Fashionable East Side
Penthouse Apartment
Exquisitely Furnished
In new building, 3½ rooms. Spacious living rm. walled on 2 sides w/sliding glass doors and surrounded by 20x60 terrace. Beautiful view of City from anywhere in room. Fully carpeted and furnished with elaborate silk and Persian decor. Bedroom has elaborate Austrian silk drapes around oversized round bed, fully carpeted. Fully equipped modern bathroom and fully equipped kitchen and dining area. Air conditioned. Sub lease for one year, completely furnished, at $400 mo., or buy approx. $17,500 worth of complete furnishings at sacrifice for $2,750 and renew lease at $300 mo.
Call PLaza 2-8987
209 East 56th Street, NEW YORK 22

Unusual Corner Duplex
Central Park West, New York, near Lincoln Center and T.V. Studios. Grand manner small family. Living room on park 48'x24'; full dining; 2 masters; 1 maids; 3 baths; library; large kitchen. Maintenance $426. Asking $50,000. TR 4-2087.
Box V-3559, VARIETY
154 W. 46th St., New York 10036

SHOCK!
72 OF THE MOST FAMOUS HORROR FILMS OF ALL TIMES!
The original great horror films that made motion picture and TV history...are still making TV history from coast-to-coast!
Available only from SCREEN GEMS, INC.

in the EAST it's MOVIELAB for...
COLOR
BLACK & WHITE
FOR YOUR SCREENINGS
Film & Tape EDITING & STORAGE Rooms
MOVIELAB BUILDING, 619 WEST 54th STREET, NEW YORK 19, PHONE 586-0360 (AREA CODE 212)

Goffin & King Top 119 Writers on BMI Annual Awards; 77 Pubs Also Cited

Gerry Goffin and Carole King will top the Broadcast Music Inc. songwriter awards list tonight (Wed.) when BMI hands out its "Citations of Achievement" for success in the pop music field during 1963. Each writer copped five awards.

On the music publishing firm end, Screen Gems-Columbia Music will lead the field with 12 awards. Coincidentally, the songs written by Goffin and Miss King are published by Screen Gems-Columbia Music.

The BMI awards are presented annually, and are based on trade-paper polls on national popularity and public acceptance, reflecting record and sheet music sales, radio-tv performances, coin machine plays, and other factors measured in those polls.

In all, there will be 119 writers and 77 publishers (of 94 award-winning songs) on the BMI citations list at tonight's award-giving dinner at New York's Hotel Pierre.

Other multiple writer-award winners will be Jerry Lieber, Barry Mann, Mike Stoller, Cynthia Weill, and Brian Wilson, with four; Jeff Barry, Lamont Dozier, Ellie Greenwich, Eddie Holland, Ben Raleigh, and Phil Spector, with three.

The songs that copped prizes for Goffin & King are: "Don't Say Nothin' Bad (About My Baby)," "Hey, Girl," "I Can't Stay Mad At You," "One Fine Day" and "Up On The Roof."

In addition to aforementioned five songs, other winners for the Screen Gems-Columbia Music firm are: "Blame It On The Bossa Nova" by Barry Mann & Cynthia Weil; "Foolish Little Girl" by Howard Greenfield & Helen Miller; "He's Sure The Boy I Love" by Barry Mann & Cynthia Weill; "Honolulu Lulu" by Lou Adler, Jan Berry & Roger Christian; "My Dad" by Barry Mann & Cynthia Weill; "On Broadway" by Jerry Leiber, Barry Mann, Mike Stoller & Cynthia Weill; "Surf City" by Jan Berry & Brian Wilson.

Other Winners

Other winners are: "Another Saturday Night" by Sam Cooke, Kags Music; "Baby Workout" by Alonzo Tucker & Jackie Wilson, Merrimac Music; "Be My Baby" by Jeff Barry, Ellie Greenwich & Phil Spector, Trio-Mother Bertha Music; "Be True To Your School" by Brian Wilson, Sea of Tunes; "Blue Velvet" by Bernie Wayne, Vogue Music; "Bossa Nova Baby" by Jerry Lieber & Mike Stoller, Elvis Presley Music; "Busted" by Harlan Howard, Pamper Music; "Can't Get Used To Losing You" by Mort Shuman & Jerome (Doc) Pomus, Brenner Music; "Cry Baby" by Norman Meade & Bert Russell, Mellin-Rittenhouse; "Da Doo Ron Ran (When He Walked Me Home)" by Jeff Barry, Ellie Greenwich & Phil Spector, Trio-Mother Bertha Music.

"Danke Schoen" by Bert Kaempfert & Kurt Schwaback, Roosevelt Music; "Drip Drop" by Jerry Lieber & Mike Stoller, Tiger Music; "Easier Said Than Done" by Larry Huff & William Linton, Nom Music; "Eighteen Yellow Roses" by Bobby Darin, T. M. Music; "Everybody" by Tommy Roe, Low-Twi Music; "Fingertips" by Henry Cosby & Clarence Paul, Jobete Music; "From a Jack To A King" by Ned Miller, Dandelion Music; "Green Green" by Barry McGuire, New Christy Music; "Hello Stranger" by Barbara Lewis, McLaughlin Publishing; "He's So Fine" by Ronnie Mack, Bright Tunes Music.

"Hey, Paula" by Ray Hildebrand, Le-Bill-Marbill Music; "Hot Pastrami" by Dessie Rozier, Sherlyn Publishing; "I Love You Because" by Leon Payne, Fred Rose Music; "I Saw Linda Yesterday" by Dickey Lee & Allen Reynolds, Jack Music; "If I Had A Hammer" by Lee Hays & Pete Seeger, Ludlow Music; "If You Wanna Be Happy" by Frank Guida, Joseph Royster & Carmela Guida, Rock Masters; "I'm Leaving It All Up To You"

(Continued on page 72)

Glen Gray in Cap's Wax -Museum Via Agreement With Bandleader's Estate

Glen Gray, the bandleader who died last year, will be perpetuated on disks via Capitol Records. The diskery has signed a contract with the estate of the late maestro to continue the series of "Sounds Of Great Bands" which was begun in 1956.

The first recording sessions under the new contract were started last week on the Coast with Dave Cavanaugh producing. The new album will be titled "Today's Best, Vol. 2," a sequel to its current clicko LP, wherein current hits are performed in the style of the various name bands.

Cork O'Keefe, Gray's longtime manager, planed to the Coast from New York to represent the estate at the sessions. The arrangements were written by Gray's Casa Loma orch veteran Larry Wagner.

'Liverpool Sound's' Label

"The Liverpool Sound," which emerged as a hot disk sound in England late last year, has now become the tag for a new U.S. label. The Independent Producers Group has formed the Liverpool Sound Label which will debut with three sides made in England, with "The Liverpool Sound," natch.

The sides are "Beautiful Dreamer" by John Leyton, a current click in England; "Please Mr. Postman" by Mike Sheridan & The Nightriders, and "Poison Ivy" by The Paramounts.

802 Moves For Officer Elections Via Mail Ballots

All future elections of union officers of AFM Local 802 will be conducted through the mail if the proposal is approved by the Local's 30,000-plus membership.

The unprecedented bid for mail elections, spelled out in the January issue of Allegro (tooters official journal), set off a mixed wave of reaction at the Local's exchange floor where a good cross-section of New York sidemen gather thrice weekly.

Some administration supporters took a dim view of the action while other members, though hoping for a modification of the referendum principal, predicted a sure administration victory for such a new setup. However, they felt it an admission by 802 officialdom of inability to secure re-endorsement under the old rules.

One immediate effect was to change the agenda for the "working musicians rally," a midnight midtown affair sponsored by a rank and file group (the Musicians' Voice Emergency Committee) next Monday (27). The new referendum now becomes the meet's prime topic. A previous referendum on

(Continued on page 74)

FD&H Names David Day Director & General Mgr.

London, Jan. 21.

David Day, 27-year-old son of Fred Day, has joined his father as director of Francis, Day & Hunter. The younger Day has also been appointed general manager of the pubbery.

He assumes, at the same time, directorship of 11 other associated pubberies. David Day joined FDH some five years ago and repped his company in New York for 18 months.

Victor & Boston Symph Groove Longrange Pgm. To Cut Prokofieff Works

A longrange program to record all the major orchestra works of the late Sergei Prokofieff has been inaugurated by RCA Victor and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The first works chosen for the project—"The Fifth Symphony," "First Violin Concerto," "Fifth Piano Concerto" and "Symphony Concerto For Cello and Orchestra, Opus 25"—were initially performed in the U.S. by the Boston Symph.

The orch gave American premieres to 12 Prokofieff compositions and the world preem of his "Fourth Syphony." Also Prokofieff was guest conductor on one occasion and a piano soloist on five occasions. During those concerts, he performed American premieres for two of his five piano concertos.

The Boston programs in Symphony Hall list some 80 performances of about 25 of Prokofieff's works beginning in 1922. In addition there have been numerous performances at Tanglewood (Mass.) and elsewhere.

In addition to the February release of the "Fifth Symphony," other recordings in the immediate future will be of the "Symphony—Concerto for Cello and Orchestra, Opus 125," with Samuel Mayes as soloist. This work was given its American preem by the Bostonians in 1940 under the title of "Cello Concerto No. 1 with Orchestra." It subsequently was revived by the composer and later was given its present title.

Releases of the "Violin Concerto No. 1" with Erick Friedman as the violin soloist, and the "Fifth Piano Concerto" with Lorin Hollander as the pianist, will follow.

Capitol Wins First Round in Battle Over Beatles; Disk Orders Top 1-Mil

Rich Joins Harry James

Holywood, Jan. 21.

Drummer Buddy Rich has been inked by Harry James to a one-year contract and joins James' band immediately at Harrah's Tahoe.

Following dates at Harrah's Reno and current stand, Flamingo in Las Vegas, recording stints and tv guest spots, James starts tour of Japan with his New Swingin' Band April 5.

Price Fixing's End In Britain Worries Record Industry

London, Jan. 21.

British Government's decision to abolish Retail Price Maintenance—i.e. manufacturer's price fixing—has the local disk business worried. It is axiomatic that waxers will apply for exemption from the fixed price ban on grounds that RPM, in their case, does not operate against the public interest, but they must prove this to a judicial tribunal.

Exemption seekers have six months in which to make their move, and this gives the disk industry time to mount a united front of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. No plan of campaign can be worked out yet however, for exact provisions of the bill which will axe RPM are not yet known.

What worries local diskers, distributors and many record stores is the lifting of RPM will reduce the currently booming and stable market into a chaotic competitive scramble in which price cutting and deal making will kill off many of the smaller outlets. In short, the British biz fears its marketing process will become similar to the more cutthroat methods of the U.S. wax trade.

According to Sir Joseph Lock-

(Continued on page 74)

With over 1,000,000 disk orders in less than three weeks claimed by Capitol Records for its etching of "I Want To Hold Your Hand" by The Beatles, the hit English quartet has now become the center of suits and countersuits over who owns the U.S. rights to their platters.

Capitol won the first round when its infringement suit filed in Chicago last Monday (13) against Vee Jay Records was upheld later in the week and an injunction granted which prohibits the Chicago-based diskery from further manufacture and distribution of any recordings by The Beatles.

Cook County Circuit Judge Cornelius J. Harrington handed down the court order restraining Vee Jay, its "agents, attorneys or servants from manufacturing, selling, distributing or otherwise disposing of . . . any and all recordings by The Beatles."

And in New York Federal Court last Friday (17), Vee Jay filed a suit against both Capitol and Swan Records seeking an injunction restraining the companies from manufacturing, distributing or advertising disks by The Beatles. The court reserved decision.

According to a Capitol spokesman the battle over The Beatles stems from a mixup that arose in January, 1963, when Vee Jay acquired rights to record the then unknown Beatles. EMI (Electric & Musical Industries) had awarded Transglobal Inc. of New York—a clearing house for foreign-originated disks—power to license records on which The Beatles perform to any diskery.

Vee Jay obtained said license and released two singles by The Beatles early last year. On Aug. 8, 1963, Transglobal, after receiving no payment from Vee Jay, notified the diskery its rights were being cancelled, according to the Cap spokesman.

Subsequently, Transglobal relinquished its rights and the entire matter returned once again to EMI. Cap took over the rights in November, 1963.

Early this month word reached Cap anent Vee Jay's having distributed its Beatles album, "Introducing The Beatles," in Chicago. A similar message came from Milwaukee and other midwest and eastern towns. Apparently, the LP has not yet reached the Coast where Capitol is based.

On still another front, Beechwood Music, subsidiary of Capitol Records, and Ardmore & Beechwood Ltd. of England also filed suit in N.Y. Federal Court last week to stop Vee Jay from manufacturing and selling "in the state of New York and elsewhere" the album, called "Introducing The Beatles." Also affected was Malverne Distributors, Vee Jay's N.Y. distributor.

Meantime, Cap rushed into market last week its first Beatles album called "Meet The Beatles." According to Alan W. Livingston, Capitol president, "the pressure has been too great for us to hold back any more." Cap originally had planned to release the album this week when there would be sufficient stock on hand to meet orders.

Top 50 Disks of 1963

Listed below in alphabetical order are the top 50 disks of 1963. Compliation is based on the information contained in VARIETY*'s weekly Tune Index of Performance and Sales charts.*

BILL ANDERSON—"Still"	Decca
ANGELS—"My Boyfriend's Back"	Smash
BEACH BOYS—"Surfer Girl"	Capitol
BEACH BOYS—"Surfin U.S.A."	Capitol
CASCADES—"Rhythm of the Rain"	Valiant
CHANTAYS—"Pipeline"	Dot
CHIFFONS—"He's So Fine"	Laurie
LOU CHRISTIE—"Two Faces Have I"	Roulette
CRYSTALS—"Then He Kissed Me"	Philles
BOBBY DARIN—"You're the Reason I'm Living"	Capitol
SKEETER DAVIS—"End of the World"	Victor
DION—"Ruby Baby"	Columbia
DOVELLS—"You Can't Sit Down"	Parkway
ESSEX—"Easier Said Than Done"	Roulette
FOUR SEASONS—"Walk Like A Man"	Vee Jay
JAMES GILMER—"Sugar Shack"	Dot
LESLIE GORE—"It's My Party"	Mercury
EYDIE GORME—"Blame It On the Bossa Nova"	Columbia
ROLF HARRIS—"Tie Me Kangaroo Down"	Epic
JAN & DEAN—"Surf City"	Liberty
JAYNETTES—"Sally Go Round the Roses"	Tuff
STEVE LAWRENCE—"Go Away Little Girl"	Columbia
BRENDA LEE—"Losing You"	Decca
BARBARA LEWIS—"Hello Stranger"	Atlantic
TRINI LOPEZ—"If I Had a Hammer"	Reprise
LONNIE MACK—"Memphis"	Fraternity
LITTLE PEGGY MARCH—"I Will Follow Him"	Victor
MARTHA & VANDELLAS—"Heat Wave"	Gordy
AL MARTINO—"I Love You Because"	Capitol
NEAL MILLER—"From a Jack to a King"	Faber
RICK NELSON—"Fools Rush In"	Decca
ROY ORBISON—"In Dreams"	Monument
ORLONS—"South Street"	Cameo
PAUL & PAULA—"Hey Paula"	Phillips
PETER, PAUL & MARY—"Puff"	Warner Bros.
RONETTES—"Be My Baby"	Philles
ROOFTOP SINGERS—"Walk Right In"	Vanguard
RUBY & THE ROMANTICS—"Our Day Will Come"	Kapp
KYU SAKAMOTO—"Sukiyaki"	Capitol
SHIRELLES—"Foolish Little Girl"	Sceptor
JIMMY SOUL—"If You Wanna Be Happy"	SPQR
APRIL STEVENS & NINO TEMPO—"Deep Purple"	Atco
SURFARIS—"Wipe Out"	Dot
JOHNNY THUNDER—"Loop de Loop"	Diamond
TYMES—"So Much In Love"	Parkway
VILLAGE STOMPERS—"Washington Square"	Epic
BOBBY VINTON—"Blue on Blue"	Epic
BOBBY VINTON—"Blue Velvet"	Epic
ANDY WILLIAMS—"I Can't Get Used to Losing You"	Columbia
LITTLE STEVIE WONDER—"Fingertips"	Tamla

Vegas' Twin Legituners, 'Goes'-'Shoes' to Spin Into 20th Orig Cast LP

The Las Vegas nitery edition of the legituners, "Anything Goes" and "High Button Shoes," will get the original cast album treatment via the 20th Century-Fox label. The shows were cut last week during the actual performances at the Thunderbird Hotel.

Dick Shawn, who stars in both shows, will top the album cast with Eileen Rodgers featured with Shawn in "Anything Goes" and Patricia Marand the femme feature in "High Button Shoes."

Score for "Anything Goes," which was "recreated" for LP several years by Columbia Records, was written by Cole Porter. Score for "High Button Shoes," which had an original Broadway cast album release by RCA Victor, was cleffed by Jule Styne and Sammy Cahn.

'Meet the Beatles,' Surfaris' 'Hit City,' Wilson's 'Favorites' Top New LPs

"MEET THE BEATLES" (Capitol). The Beatles' takeover of the singles market in the U.S. began just a few weeks ago with "I Want To Hold Your Hand" and now they're headed for a similar move-in on the album market with the first LP in their new Capitol tie. In addition to the hot turntable action given their first single, the English group is riding the crest of a strong publicity wave which has built up wide interest in all their efforts. This package offers a solid sampling of their "Liverpool Sound" and in addition to the clicko "Hold Your Hand," there are such inimitable goodies as "I Saw Her Standing There," "All My Loving," "I Wanna Be Your Man" and "Hold Me Tight." Capitol has a hot disk property here and once the boys start getting their U.S. tv exposure via shots on Ed Sullivan's CBS show, the package is sure to shoot up in sales and spins.

THE SURFARIS: "HIT CITY 64" (Decca). The Surfaris rode in on the surf music craze last summer but their longrange potential is proved by the fact that they're still around and still a potent influence in the disk market. In their latest LP outing, the group takes some of the recent single clicks like "Scatter Shield," "Be True To Your School," "Little Deuce Coupe," "Louie Louie" and "Sugar Shack" and apply some of their high-flying sounds and driving beat to make the teeners want to hear them all over again. The young disk fan will find it all pulsating and persuasive.

JACKIE WILSON: "MY GOLDEN FAVORITES . . . VOL. 2" (Brunswick). This second volume of Jackie Wilson's "Golden Favorites" is representative of his clicko disk work over the past three years. Such exciting sides as "Baby Workout," "Doggin' Around," "The Tear of The Year," "Night," "Am I The Man" and "Please Tell Me Why" are included here and serve as a good refresher to Wilson's platter work over the past few years. He's a dynamic disker and this package continually shows why. Dick Jacobs handles the orch expertly on all sides except for "My Heart Belongs To Only You" in which the baton is turned over to Bob Mersey, who also does a nifty helming job.

CHET HUNTLEY - DAVID BRINKLEY: "A TIME TO KEEP —1963" (RCA Victor). This is an arresting and valuable document of one of the most dramatic years in American history. Two main crises provide the axis for this summary—the civil rights movement and the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Other events, such as the Profumo affair, coup in South Vietnam, the Valachi testimony, are also touched upon. NBC commentators Chet Huntley and David Brinkley crisply narrate around the extracts from history itself.

TERESA BREWER: "MOMENTS TO REMEMBER" (Philips). The album lays it straight on the line when it says "The ballad side of Teresa Brewer." That's just what it is, and it's a good side, too. From the solid "Moments To Remember," a Four Lads click in the mid-1950s, through "A Cottage For Sale," "Far Away Places," "The Old Lamplighter" and the comparatively new "I Left My Heart In San Francisco," Miss Brewer hits a ballad style that's warm and appealing. There's plenty of spinning potential throughout.

"FROM TITO RODRIGUEZ WITH LOVE" (United Artists). This is a change of pace session for Tito Rodriguez who generally specializes in the rapidly-paced Latino groove. For this outing he has chosen a more mellow Latin mood and the result is effective. Rodriguez smoothly vocalizes on an array of ballads, backed by an orchestra under the direction of LeRoy Holmes. The orch presents a likewise smooth sound, with lotsa string work and the familiar Latin beat which is soft and modified for the outing. The disk is a pleasant Latino effort which should cut a nice niche for itself among south of the border music fans.

PAT BOONE WITH GORDON JENKINS: "THE TOUCH OF YOUR LIPS" (Dot). Continuing to swing successfully between the hot-paced music of the pop market and the more subdued stylings preferred by fans of the more standard brand of music, Pat Boone has come up with another lively LP. Coupled with Gordon Jenkins, he has selected a group of standard ballads and Jenkins has dressed them in soft and mellow orchestrations. Boone croons with gentle effectiveness, using the kind of approach which would have had 'em swooning in the aisles a generation ago. It's a satisfying outing that should attract a share of coin in the "good" music groove and give programmers material as well.

LIVING STRINGS: "MUSIC TO HELP YOU STOP SMOKING" (RCA Camden). This is a mood music album cleverly pegged to the current headlines about cigarets and health. If the title of this set actually worked, it would be the alltime bestselling album. Actually, it's a potpourri of standards, ranging from "Autumn Leaves" to "Love's Old Sweet Song," dished up with plenty of fiddles. Among obvious standards missing are "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" and "Smoke Rings."

THE BRIARWOOD SINGERS: "WELL, WELL, WELL" (United Artists). The continued folk craze has given birth to yet another ensemble which concentrates in this vogue. The Briarwood Singers, which has been making noise in the Miami area, spreads into its disk debut with a slick effort. The four men and one girl who make up the unit blend their vocal and guitar-bass-banjo musical talents skillfully on an array of mostly-familiar folk ditties. Although they are selliing a now-common commercial folk sound, they do so with knowhow and enthusiasm which should make this a solid debut platter.

"SHOSHANA" (Vanguard). Shoshana Damari, the Israeli songstress who has been widely concertizing in U.S. auditoriums and

LAWRENCE WELK
Has Another Hit Dot Album!
"WONDERFUL, WONDERFUL"

niteries, turns up here with another fascinating set of folk material. In this LP, she mixes Hebrew songs with Turkish, Spanish, Rumanian and Arabic numbers for a varied, but related program. As usual, Miss Damari delivers lucidly and zestfully.

K.C. Philharmonic Off On 6,000-Mile Concert Tour

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

Hans Schwieger, conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic orchestra, and his 80-piece ensemble planed to Palm Springs, Calif., the first stop on a jaunt of almost 6,000 miles during which they will play 23 concerts in 24 days. Traveling with the orchestra is Zvi Zeitlin, the Israeli violinist, who solos at each tour concert.

Tour is part of the Philharmonic's five-year plan to increase salaries of musicians and to lengthen its season. With one more year to go in present project, orchestra can compare salary minimum of $85 per week for guarantee of 20 weeks at start to present $105 minimum for 23 weeks, a typical boost of $715 for season.

Longplay Shorts

The Four Lads, United Artists diskers, who have returned from a five-week tour of Japan, completed an album of film themes in Japanese during their stay there. The album includes Japanese versions of such pic themes as "It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," "The Great Escape March," "Lilies of the Field" and "The Stolen Hours". . . The Serendipity Singers wrapped up their first LP for Philips Records and are now set for 10 "Hootenanny" shows for ABC-TV . . . Columbia Records has introduced a new advertising campaign for its January and February releases. Titled "Fly Columbia Records," the new program is aimed at local newspapers coordinated with new full-color in-store promotional material.

Leo Pinkus, singer and owner of the Jersey Steak Pit, cut a pop LP for the Old Town label . . . Wilma Freeman handling special promotion for Roger Williams' 10th anni with the Kapp label and his new LP, "The Solid Gold Steinway". . . . Duke Ellington, Joe Williams and 31 other artists have made a two-record package for Roulette called "The Jazz Salute To Freedom" with proceeds going to the Congress of Racial Equality . . . Milton Karle handling disk promotion in New York and the east for the just-released New Tommy Dorsey Orchestra album on RCA Victor . . . Columbia Records has cut the price on a series of Bruno Walter album sets: Among them are the seven-record package of Beethoven's nine symphonies, the four-record set of Johannes Brahms orchestral music and the three-record set of Mozart's last six symphonies.

Hefty batch of releases on the diskery schedules for the new year: Upcoming are 16 pop albums from RCA Victor; five releases from RCA Camden and four RCA Victrola albums; Columbia has 24 albums on its January schedule including nine Bruno Walter recordings, 12 pop albums, two Latin American LPs and the original cast album of "The Girl Who Came To Supper"; Epic has 10 LPs on tap including four pop, one international and five classical albums; the Decca-Coral-Brunswick combine has 25 new releases; United Artists is spotlighting 36 new albums in its "Winter Wonderland Sales Magic" program; ABC-Paramount unveiled 33 new LPs at its Miami meet last week; Warner Bros. Records will issue 13 new albums for the first two months of 1964; Reprise opens the '64 selling season with five albums; Vee Jay has 19 new albums on tap, and Golden Records swings into January with four LPs headed by "Casper, the Friendly Ghost," a tv cartoon series.

Also on the new release schedule are 22 albums from Roulette Records which were unveiled at a Miami meet . . . Columbia Records is releasing seven four-track stereo tapes this month including one Masterworks and six pop tapes.

Malverne Distributors has taken over the Elektra line in the New York area . . . Realm Records, newly formed jazz label, has appointed Alpha Distributing in New York and M. S. Distributing for Chicago . . . Carl Weinrich, organist at Princeton U., will be organ soloist for St George's Concert of Sacred Music in New York's Philharmonic Hall on Jan. 26 . . . Jake Holmes, of Allen & Grier (he's Allen) on the FM LP "Better To Be Rich Than Ethnic," is now a solo act. He debuted last week at The Bitter End in New York's Greenwich Village . . . Allied Records, of Canada, has purchased masters of the entire Regina Records catalog for distribution throughout Canada and British Columbia . . . Caedmon Records has appointed Decca Distributing Corp. to handle its distribution in Dallas, Memphis, Kansas City, and Cohoes, N.Y. From Cohoes, Decca services the Albany-Buffalo territory . . . Professor Heinz Wallberg, the general music director of the Weisbaden (W. Germany) State Theatre, has been engaged for 10 guest appearances by the Munich State Opera during the 1964/65 season.

Top Singles Of The Week

(The 'Best Bets' of This Week's 100-Plus Releases)

SAM COOKE . . . . . GOOD NEWS
(RCA Victor) . . . . . Basin Street Blues

Sam Cooke's "Good News" (Kags†) spreads a neat rhythmic beat with a potent vocal attack that will pull plenty of play on all levels for another Cooke payoff. "Basin Street Blues" (Mayfair) takes the oldie for an effective vocal spin that should go over especially well in juke areas.*

* * *

THE FOUR SEASONS . . . DAWN (GO AWAY)
(Philips) . . . . . No Surfin' Today

The Four Seasons' "Dawn (Go Away)" (Saturday-Gavadima) shows that nothing has changed in their move away from the Vee Jay label and that the boys still have that unique harmony styling that builds into hit proportions. This teen-messaged tune will continue their clicko streak. "No Surfin' Today" (Saturday-Gavadima*) is a fair salute to the surfing craze and may appeal to those who still go for that musical splash.*

* * *

BARRY & THE TAMERLANES. . . . . BUTTERFLY
(Valiant) . . . . . Roberta

Barry & The Tamerlanes' "Butterfly" (Sherman-DeVorzon†) will fly at a payoff spinning pace because of the appealing lilt and vocal message that's right up teener alley. "Roberta" (Sherman-DeVorzon†) snaps out another song salute to a femme name with only so-so results.

* * *

JOHNNY CASH . . . . . DARK AS A DUNGEON
(Columbia) . . . . . Understand Your Man

Johnny Cash's "Dark As A Dungeon" (American†) is one of those country blues songs that grabs pop attention and this one should go high on all spinning circuits. "Understand Your Man" (Johnny Cash Music†) has a lively country beat and should get some spirited play on the pop level.

* * *

THE PARKAS . . . . . SNOWPLOW
(MGM) . . . . . Back At The Lodge

The Parkas' "Snowplow" (Al Gallico Music†) will start another teen terp craze for the winter season because the beat and the lyric instruction are easy for the teeners to take to. "Back At The Lodge" (Wherefore) is an easy-going melodious ballad pegged at the skiing crowd and they may go for it after a day on the slopes.*

* * *

THE VILLAGE STOMPERS . . . . . THE LA-DEE-DA SONG
(Epic) . . . . . Blue Grass

The Village Stompers' "The La-Dee-Da Song" (Showboat) is in the folk-dixie style that worked so well for them in "Washington Square" and this one's lively beat makes it a surefire item for the juke trade as well. "Blue Grass" (Showboat*) has an infectious strumming sound which their fans will recognize from their previously released "Washington Square' album.*

* * *

THE ASTRONAUTS . . . . . COMPETITION COUPE
(RCA Victor) . . . . . Surf Party

The Astronauts' "Competition Coupe" (Four Star Sales†) fits neatly into the hot rod music area and rolls at a speedy pace that will keep the teen trade jumping and happy. "Surf Party" (Angelica) splashes out a frantic instrumental beat that the energetic teeners will find just right for their frenzied movements*

* * *

JONI JAMES . . . . . TEACH ME TO FORGET YOU
(MGM) . . . . . Un Cafe

Joni James' "Teach Me To Forget You" (Sunbeam†) is a fine ballad offering delivered handsomely in all departments and should bring the singer on the hit lists again. "Un Cafe" (Southern†) has a sparkling Continental flavor that will brighten lots of programming time with its infectious lilt.

* * *

JIMMY DURANTE . . . . . THIS IS ALL I ASK
(Warner Bros.) . . . . . Hello, Young Lovers

Jimmy Durante's "This Is All I Ask" (Massey) continues in his "September Song" style that clicked last year and although the tune has had wide disk coverage and a good spinning run, this warm interpretation will get it another good turntable ride. "Hello, Young Lovers" (Williamson*) dishes out another sentimental platter and the adults around the jukes will probably go for it in a big way.*

* * *

RUFUS THOMAS . . . . . CAN YOUR MONKEY DO THE DOG
(Stax) . . . . . I Want To Get Married

Rufus Thomas' "Can Your Monkey Do The Dog" (East†) crossbreeds two terp fads, "The Monkey" and "The Dog," for a swinging side with tailor-made teen appeal. "I Want To Get Married" (East†) shouts out a marriage proposal with a hard-hitting beat and vocal attack for noisy results.

* * *

THE DRIFTERS . . . . . VAYA CON DIOS
(Atlantic) . . . . . In the Land of Make Believe

The Drifters' "Vaya Con Dios" (Ardmore) is a re-workover of the tune Les Paul & Mary Ford popularized in the early 1950s with the harmony gimmickry that goes over so well today, and the new group of teeners will find it to their liking. "In The Land Of Make Believe" (U.S. Songs*) gives the group some good ballad material to work with.*

* * *

CORINNE BUCCI . . . YOU GOTTA WALK IT BY YOURSELF
(Decca) . . . . . Wildwood Flower

Corinne Bucci's "You Gotta Walk It By Yourself" (Varona) has a strong inspirational beat that can make its mark in the pop market because of its especially forceful vocal. "Wildwood Flower" (Varona*) stems from the folk field and its unusual handling should make the disk jockeys quite attentive.*

* * *

WAYNE NEWTON
I'M LOOKING OVER A FOUR-LEAF CLOVER
(Capitol) . . . . . Dream Baby

Wayne Newton's "I'm Looking Over A Four-Leaf Clover" (Remick) picks up a hot beat and a vibrant vocal to give the oldie another payoff spinning run. "Dream Baby" (T.M.Music†) pushes across an okay ballad that's good enough to pull the jock and juke play.* Gros.

*ASCAP. †BMI.

Elektra Holds Judy Collins; Colpix Tags Guy Mitchell; Other Deals

Folksinger Judy Collins has been re-signed by Elektra president Jac Holzman to a new long-term contract.

She's currently represented in the album field with "Judy Collins No. 3" and in the singles field with "Turn! Turn! Turn!"

In addition to Miss Collins, Elektra has tapped the Ian Campbell Folk Group, a British five-some; singer-songwriter Phil Ochs, and the Irish Ramblers, a trio of Irish folksingers.

Albums by the new pactees already have been recorded and are being scheduled for release in the near future.

Colpix: Guy Mitchell

Guy Mitchell will get back into recording action via the Colpix label. He'll record both singles and LPs for the label.

Walt Maguire, veepee and general manager of Colpix, has scheduled a single release for Mitchell in the near future.

Atco: Carl Dobkins Jr.

Singer Carl Dobkins Jr. has been signed to an exclusive long-termer by Atco Records. He recently returned to the music scene after serving a two-year hitch in the U.S. Army.

His first record for Atco, "If Teardrops Were Diamonds," is being released this week. Dobkins' records are being produced by Award Music, which also produces records by The Vibrations, Doris Troy, Carol Shaw, Ruth Brown and The Crests. Before entering the service Dobkins recorded for Decca Records.

ABC-Par: Steve Alamo

Steve Alamo, who clicked in the singles market with "Every Day I Have To Cry," has joined the ABC-Paramount roster.

The singer is currently at the Club Elegante in Brooklyn and will record for ABC-Par in the near future.

Motown: Bobby Breen

Singer Bobby Breen will return to the disk field under the Motown banner.

He's currently appearing at New York's Latin Quarter.

Dutch Disk Best Sellers

Amsterdam, Jan. 21.

If I Had Hammer ..... Lopez (Reprise)
Nimm Deine Gittare ..... Timmermans (Telefunken)
Spiegelbeeld ..... Alberti (Philips)
Ik Heb Eerbied ..... Timmermans (Telefunken)
Don't Talk to Him ..... Richard (Columbia)
Pour Moi La Vie ..... Halliday (Philips)
Tous Les Garcons ..... Hardy (Vogue)
Red Sails in Sunset ..... Domino (ABC Paramount)
Tes Tendres Annees ..... Halliday (Philips)
She Loves You ..... The Beatles (Parlophone)

PHILLY ACAD OF MUSIC NOW HISTORIC SHRINE

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

The Academy of Music, which celebrates its 107th anniversary with a concert and ball Saturday evening (25), has been dedicated as an historic shrine, the 98th in this area.

The plaques were presented to the venerable concert hall by Ronald F. Lee, regional director of the U.S. Dept. of the Interior, and Grant Simon, chairman of the Philadelphia Historical Commission.

Present at the ceremonies were Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, and members of the board of the Orchestra which now owns the Academy.

Stuart F. Louchheim, president of the Academy, said $2,000,000 had been spent in restoring the concert hall, which was originally erected for $250,000. The funds had been raised by the series of anniversary programs which began with the Academy's centennial celebration.

Elect Goddard Lieberson RIAA Prexy; Maxin, V.P.

Goddard Lieberson, Columbia Records prexy, was voted prez of the Record Industry Assn. of America in elections held yesterday (Tues.) in New York. Voted first v.p. was MGM prez Arnold Maxin. V.P. stripes also went to John K. (Mike) Maitland, Warner Bros. Records topper, and Robert M. Schwartz, head of the Laurie label. Elected veep-treasurer was John Stevenson, of Young Peoples Records.

RIAA also named its new board of directors as follows: Lieberson, Archie Bleyer, Irving B. Green, David Kapp, George R. Marek, Rose Rubin, D. H. Toller-Bond, Glenn E. Wallichs and Randy Wood. Henry Brief was reappointed exec secretary of the organization and Ernest S. Meyers was named general counsel again.

Vienna Symph Rolls 1st U.S. Concert Tour Feb. 5

The Vienna Symphony Orchestra, and its conductor Wolfgang Sawallisch, arrive in New York Feb. 5 on the first leg of a six-week concert tour of the U.S. which begins Feb. 9 at Carnegie Hall.

The orch will play a total of 31 concerts in 13 states and Washington (D.C.) and will finish its tour at Carnegie Hall on March 15.

The first American tour of the Vienna Symph is sponsored by the Mayor of Vienna, Franz Jones, and the Austrian Ambassador to the U.S., Dr. Wilfried Platzer.

Cliburn: Their Best Ad

Shreveport, Jan. 21.

Van Cliburn, classical pianist who makes his home here, was voted town's best advertisement of 1963 by the Shreveport Advertising Club last week.

"Advertising is here to stay," said virtuoso as he accepted plaque from club prexy, Fisher George at monthly luncheon. George had recalled Cliburn's first public concert when, aged four, he had to be lifted to piano stool at local college to play Bach C Major Prelude.

D.C. Crix on Johnsons' Hootenanny: 'Talent Not Like Kennedys Figured'

By LES CARPENTER

Washington, Jan. 21.

The first effort of President and Mrs. L. B. Johnson in choosing entertainment for a major White House social event was a solid success, based on the reception given it by the 174 highranking guests.

As a White House "first," the new Presidential couple, with Richard Adler as their consultant, settled on a double bill. Robert Merrill sang opera, and the New Christy Minstrels sang American folk songs.

The event was the state dinner honoring the visiting president of Italy, Antonio Segni. Segni warmly applauded Merrill, who performed first, and then tapped his foot in rhythm with the youthful vocal group and gave them a big hand, too. Both of the presidents congratulated each of the performers after the show.

Segni and his top aides confessed they had never before heard a hootenany, but said they could easily understand the popularity of American folk music here.

Washington's three music critics wrote favorable notices, but two (Irving Lowens of the Star and Paul Hume of the Post) questioned whether the New Christy Minstrels should have been included on the same program with the Metropolitan Opera baritone. Wrote Lowens: "The music was good, it was relaxed and it was pleasant, but most of what was heard last night was frankly entertainment. There's nothing wrong with entertainment, but it is not the same thing as high art—and high art was what the Kennedys seemed to be reaching for on occasion and not just a good show."

Adler acted as emcee and greeted Segni in a long speil of Italian. (He doesn't know the language; he

(Continued on page 74)

RCA Cuts Non-Profit LP Of Boston Symph & Chorale Memorial Mass for JFK

Boston, Jan. 21.

With Jacqueline Kennedy in a front row pew, Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orch and 180-voice chorale in a nationally televised memorial mass for the late President Kennedy at Holy Cross cathedral here Sunday (19) with Richard Cardinal Cushing the celebrant before 1,800 invited guests.

It marked the orch's first performance inside a church as part of a religious ceremony in its 83 year history. The last time the "Requiem" was performed inside a religious edifice was in Vienna at the 200th anni of Mozart's death in 1956.

The entire mass was recorded by RCA Victor, profits from the album going to the Kennedy Memorial Library, to be built on Harvard-donated land in Boston.

Leinsdorf used 54 musicians, four soloists and the 180 persons in the choir. The mass and program was carried by 204 tv and 373 radio stations via NBC webs. At the conclusion, Cardinal Cushing presented Mrs. Kennedy to the conductor.

The widow thanked Leinsdorf at the conclusion of the mass as the other members of her party stood in a semicircle around them. She was then presented by the Cardinal to Henry R. Cabot, president of Boston Symphony, and his wife.

Mozart's "Requiem Mass in D Minor" is not usually offered in Catholic churches. It is considered just a bit too secular in its lyrics, it was said, but it is not on the other hand, condemned. The Cardinal obtained special permission for the Memorial Mass, which also was unique in that it was a Requiem Mass offered on a Sunday.

Cardinal Cushing, in his address, touched on the Kennedy interest in the performing arts saying: "He and his 'dear Jacqueline' enriched the White House with the best in art and music. During a comparatively brief residence, therein, they frequently filled that Presidential abode, with the inspiration of classical entertainment presented before kings and queens, princes and paupers who came in an endless procession to pay their respects to the leader of the world's most powerful nation.

Inside Stuff—Music

Elizabeth Heazlett Kury, a 1963 graduate of the U. of Pittsburgh School of Law, was awarded the $1,000 national first prize in the Nathan Burkan Memorial Competition for her paper entitled "Protection for Creators in the U.S. and Abroad," the best paper on Copyright Law submitted by law students throughout the U.S. The competition, sponsored annually by the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers in tribute to the memory of the Society's first general counsel, is designed to promote better understanding of the Copyright Law. ASCAP awarded a total of $1,750 to the national winners chosen from among 46 papers first selected by law school deans across the country as the best essays on copyright submitted by students in their own schools.

Second prize ($500) went to Charles McGuire, a graduate of the NYU School of Engineering and Suffolk U. Law School. Winner of the third prize ($250) was Joseph G. Cook, a graduate of the U. of Alabama School of Law.

The first who's who directory in the history of the tape recording industry has been published by the Magnetic Recording Industry Assn. A preface to the 15-page directory tells the history and growth of the association whose numbers represent more than 90% of the tape sold in the U. S., the manufacturers of three-quarters of the pre-recorded tape in the market, and the producers of the bulk of American-made recorders as well as a number of recorders made abroad.

Russ Sanjec, public relations head of Broadcast Music Inc., is hitting the N.Y.-to-Washington axis to produce shows for the D.C. solons. Last Friday (17), Sanjec put on a show with Jane Morgan and Max Kaminsky's dixieland group for the FCC Bar Assn., and tomorrow (Thurs.) he's got one going for the Patent Law Assn. with Marguerite Piazza and Cozy Cole entertaining. On Saturday (25), Sanjec will be back in Washington to do a show for the Alfalfa Club Dinner with Patrice Munsel headlining.

The Chicago Federation of Musicians, AFL-CIO, and the Orchestral Assn., sponsoring body of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra have agreed upon a set of grievance procedures and incorporated it into the present contract. It's the first such agreement in the 73-old history of the orchestra, and de-fuses one of most potentially divisive issues left unresolved in the contract that was forged under the pressure of a near-cancellation of the 1962-63 season.

MARCH, the women's philanthropic organization for music biz femmes, has elected the following officers: president, Jeannette Hendler (JLJ Enterprises); vice president, Betty Smith (Cadence); secretary, Adrienne Lawner (Francon Music); treasurer Edie Sohmer (Ivan Mogull Music). The org's next general meeting, open to women in the music and allied industries, will be held in New York at Al & Dick's on Jan. 8.

Tooters Vote Landslide Approval Of AFM's New Pact With Diskeries

British Disk Best Sellers

London, Jan. 21.

Glad All Over ..... Clark Five (Columbia)
Want Hold Hand ..... Beatles (Parlophone)
Hippy Hippy Shake ..... Blue Jeans (HMV)
Only Want Be With You ..... Springfield (Philips)
24 Hours From Tulsa ..... Pitney (United Artists)
She Loves You ..... Beatles (Parlophone)
Swinging On A Star ..... Irwin (Colpix)
Were Made For Me ..... Dreamers (Columbia)
Dominique ..... Singing Nun (Philips)
Secret Love ..... Kirby (Decca)

ROME OPERA OPENS FREE OF PROTEGES

Rome, Jan. 21.

Although the flagship of Italian opera, La Scala in Milan, opens its seasons in November nearly all other cities of this country start on the day of Santo Stefano, meaning Dec. 26. Another dependable tradition is that the first performance will be a work of Verdi. So it was at the Rome Opera House with "Falstaff."

This institution has been so-so in standard in recent years, commonly attributed to over-abundant casting of proteges of Italian politicians. But would now seem, and is hoped, that this has ended. "Falstaff" was conducted by Carlo Maria Giulini, staged and designed by Franco Zeffirelli with Tito Gobbi in the lead. Apart from Gobbi who manages to bring to life what Verdi presumably had in mind, Luigi Alva's Fenton and Renato Capecchi's Ford were excellent and even better was the female cast with Ilva Ligabue as Alice, Fedora Barbieri's Quickly, Fernanda Cadoni's Meg and the spirited Mariella Adani as Nanetta.

The President of the Italian Republic, Antonio Segni and the government leaders as well as the diplomatic, financial and artistic society of Rome—in white tie and haute couture gowns—filled the house decked out in thousands of pink carnations.

The new contract between the recording companies and the American Federation of Musicians has been ratified by the recording musicians in a secret ballot.

Of the 1,285 eligible musicians voting, 1,150 approved the agreement, retroactive to Jan. 1. In addition to substantial wage-hour gains, the new contract provides for the first time that musicians who make disks shall participate directly and individually in the industry's sales.

The musicians' revenues from sales will be one-half of the contributions heretofore paid by the industry to the Music Performance Trust Funds, a trustee-operated agency supplying free music to worthy causes. The new agreement is for five years.

"It is gratifying to see established a policy pronouncement made by me, and approved by our annual convention, in 1961," AFM prexy Herman Kenin said. "At that time I announced that it was the considered position of every member of our executive board that we stand ready to exchange any part of the Trust Funds' payments for a better deal for the working musician. The new contract is in line with that policy.

"It represents a significant 'breakthrough' for musicians in our continuing struggle toward the recognition of performers' rights in records. At the same time, in view of constantly expanding markets for records, the agreement represents no appreciable deterrent to the Trust Funds' operation," Kenin concluded.

Kenin said he would immediately notify recording companies of the ratification of the contract, as certified to him by the Honest Ballot Assn. Attorneys already are preparing the language of the contracts to which individual recording companies will become signatories.

The agreement was reached in late December after protracted negotiations with spokesmen representing more than 80% of the total disk recording output.

Big Workup to One-Night Stand: Per Concert Assn. Verdi 'Vespers' Re-do

By LEONARD LEVINSON

Musical archaeology is frequently a thankless task requiring, as recently demonstrated at Philharmonic Hall in N. Y. dedication, scholarship, long hours of preparation by many people on a foreordained one-night stand. Concert Opera Assn. is one of several who promote such resurrections of cobwebbed manuscripts presented before audiences with a chip on shoulder on which is "If it was any good how come they let it die?" For the singers it means committing to memory a huge amount on unfamiliar words and music.

"Sicilian Vespers" is full of thud and blunder laid in the neighborhood of Palermo and the end of the 13th Century. Its neglect can be blamed on a libretto that gory Richard Wagner described as "a night of carnage," since the opera-goer can only look forward to a finale where the French are all massacred as the Sicilian chorus shoults "Vendetta! vendetta!"

Verdi provided a generally strong, pleasant score, the highlights of which live in the frequently performed overture to the opera. At Lincoln Center it received a respectful, if not always superior, performance under the baton or Thomas Scherman, with the leading roles played by Giuseppe Taddei, most outstanding as the French governor; Eddy Ruhl, as the hot-headed rebel who turns out to be the governor's son; Nicola Moscona, the mover of the plot in both senses; Irene Jordan, vengeful duchess; and Lillian Garabedian, Robert Robert, Raymond Michalski, and Herbert Kraus in utility roles. Ruhl incurred the wrath of a small claque of booers who betrayed their venom by demonstrating after duets and trios in which he was involved, instead of confining their disapproval to his solo bows. The tenor did his best and any booing should have been aimed at those

(Continued on page 72)

VARIETY

ALBUM BESTSELLERS

(A National Survey of Key Outlets)

This Wk.	Last Wk.	No. Wks. On Chart
1	1	10	THE SINGING NUN (Philips) Soeur Sourire (PCC 203)
2	2	14	PETER, PAUL & MARY (Warner Bros.) In the Wind (W 1507)
3	3	18	BARBRA STREISAND (Columbia) Volume II (CL 2054)
4	24	8	BEACH BOYS (Capitol) Little Deuce Coupe (T 1998)
5	8	24	JOAN BAEZ (Vanguard) Vol. II (URS 9094)
6	6	10	VILLAGE STOMPERS (Epic) Washington Square (LN 24078)
7	17	6	SMOTHERS BROS. (Mercury) Curb Your Tongue, Knave (MG 20862)
8	9	9	LOS INDIOS TABAJAREZ (Victor) Maria Elena (LPM 2822)
9	39	11	AL HIRT (Victor) Honey in the Horn (LPM 2733)
10	4	6	ELVIS PRESLEY (Victor) Fun in Acapulco (LSP 2756)
11	30	3	THE WEEK THAT WAS (Decca) Original Sound Track (DL 9116)
12	7	15	AL MARTINO (Capitol) Painted Tainted Rose (T 1975)
13	18	41	ANDY WILLIAMS (Columbia) Days of Wine & Roses (CL 2015)
14	27	2	JFK-PRESIDENTIAL YEARS (20th-Fox) 1960-63 (TFM 3127)
15	11	12	SWINGLE SINGERS (Philips) Bach's Greatest Hits (PHM 200-097)
16	16	18	ELVIS PRESLEY (Victor) Golden Records, Vol. III (LPM 2765)
17	23	11	ROBERT GOULET (Columbia) In Person (CL 2088)
18	10	15	FRANK SINATRA (Reprise) Sinatra's Sinatra (R 1010)
19	22	10	JOHN GARY (Victor) Catch a Rising Star (LPM 2745)
20	28	5	HENRY MANCINI (Victor) Charade (LPM 2755)
21	—	64	TONY BENNETT (Columbia) I Left My Heart in San Francisco (CL 1869)
22	19	16	BOBBY VINTON (Epic) Blue Velvet (LN 24068)
23	31	45	JOAN BAEZ (Vanguard) Baez in Concert (VRS 9112)
24	26	22	NEW CHRISTY MINSTRELS (Columbia) Ramblin' (CL 2055)
25	44	33	SMOTHERS BROS. (Mercury) Think Ethnic (MG 30777)
26	50	6	TRINI LOPEZ (Reprise) More at P.J.'s (6103)
27	5	115	WEST SIDE STORY (Columbia) Soundtrack (OL 5670)
28	35	42	ROY ORBISON (Monument) Greatest Hits (MLP 8000)
29	14	39	BARBRA STREISAND (Columbia) Barbra Streisand Album (CL 2001)
30	—	1	DRAGS (Capitol) Big Sounds of the Drags (T 2001)
31	12	53	PETER, PAUL & MARY (Warner Bros.) Moving (W 1473)
32	49	29	JAMES BROWN (King) James Brown Show (826)
33	41	17	JOAN BAEZ (Vanguard) Vol. I (URS 9078)
34	45	46	LAWRENCE OF ARABIA (Colpix) Soundtrack (CP 514)
35	38	2	RICK NELSON (Decca) For You (DL 4479)
36	40	16	BOB DYLAN (Columbia) Freewheelin (CL 1986)
37	20	23	TRINI LOPEZ (Reprise) Trini Lopez at PJ'S (6093)
38	15	86	PETER, PAUL & MARY (Warner Bros.) Peter, Paul & Mary (W 1449)
39	—	—	LAWRENCE WELK (Dot) Wonderful Wonderful (DLP 3552)
40	—	1	BRENDA LEE (Decca) Let Me Sing (DL 4439)
41	33	42	HOW THE WEST WAS WON (MGM) Soundtrack (1E5)
42	21	38	BYE BYE BIRDIE (Victor) Soundtrack (LOC 1081)
43	46	21	NANCY WILSON (Capitol) Hollywood My Way (T 1934)
44	48	2	JOHNNY MATHIS (Columbia) Romantically (CL 2098)
45	47	12	CHAD MITCHELL TRIO (Mercury) Singing Our Minds (MG 20838)
46	25	14	BEACH BOYS (Capitol) Surfer Girl (T 1981)
47	43	5	JIMMY SMITH (Verve) Any Number Can Win (V 8552)
48	29	18	RAY CHARLES (ABC-Par) Recipe for a Soul (465)
49	37	10	HERE'S LOVE (Columbia) Original Cast (KOL 6000)
50	42	20	MONDO CANE (United Artists) Soundtrack (UAL 4105)

Colpix JFK Album Hitting Global Mkt. Via 16 Distribs

Colpix Records' documentary LP, "Four Days That Shocked The World," is going into world-wide distribution through 16 foreign outlets and more to follow. Countries in which the album is being sold include Australia, Canada, England, France, Germany, Greece, Holland, Italy, Israel, Japan, the Philippines, Mexico, Puerto Rico, New Zealand, South Africa and Venezuela.

The album, which was prepared from tapes and photos in the files of the United Press International, is a record of the actual events and voices as reported from the time the late President Kennedy arrived in Texas to his burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

BMI Awards

Continued from page 69

by Dewey Terry & Don F. Harris, Venice Music; "In Dreams" by Roy Orbison, Acuff-Rose; "It's All Right" by Curtis Mayfield, Curtom Publishing, "It's Up To You" by Jerry Fuller, Four Star Sales-Hilliard.

"Just One Look" by Gregory Carroll & Doris Payne, Premier Albums Music; "Loop De Loop" by Teddy Vann, Tobi-Ann Music; "Louie, Louie" by Richard Berry, Limax Music; "Love Is Like A Heat Wave" by Lamont Dozier, Brian Holland & Eddie Holland, Jobete Music; "Maria Elena" by Lorenzo Barcelona, Peer International; "Memphis" by Chuck Berry, Arc Music; "Mickey's Monkey" by Lamont Dozier, Brian Holland & Eddie Holland, Jobete Music; "Midnight Mary" by Ben Raleigh & Art Wayne, Jimskip Music; "Mockingbird" by Charlie Fozz & Inez Foxx, Saturn Music; "The Monkey Time" by Curtis Mayfield, Curtom Music; "More" by M. Ciorciolini, Nino Oliviero, Riz Ortolani & Norman Newell, E. B. Marks Music; "My Boyfriend's Back" by Robert Feldman, Gerald Goldstein & Richard Gottehrer, Blackwood Music; "My Coloring Book" by Fred Ebb & John Kander, Sunbeam Music.

"The Nitty Gritty" by Lincoln Chase, Al Gallico Music; "Not Me" by Gary Anderson & Frank Guida, Rock Masters Inc.; "One Broken Heart For Sale" by Otis Blackwell & Winfield Scott, Elvis Presley Music; "Our Winter Love" by John Cowell, BMI Canada-Cramart Music; "Papa Joe's" by Jerry Dean Smith, Tuneville Music; "Pepino The Italian Mouse" by Ray Allen & Wandra Merrell, Ding Dong Music; "Pipeline" by Brian Carman & Bob Spickard, Downey Music; "Popsicles & Icicles" by David A. Gates, Dragonwyck; "Pride and Joy" by Marvin Gaye, William Stevenson & Norman Whitfield, Jobete Music.

"Quicksand" by Lamont Dozier, Brian Holland & Eddie Holland, Jobete Music; "Rhythm of the Rain" by John Gummoe, Sherman-DeVorzan; "Ruby Baby" by Jerry Lieber & Mike Stoller, Tiger Music; "Sally Go Round The Roses" by Zelma Sanders & Lona Stevens, Winlyn Music; "She's A Fool" by Ben Raleigh & Mark Barkan, Helios Music; "So Much In Love" by William Jackson & George Williams; "Still" by Bill Anderson, Moss Rose Publications; "Sugar Shack" by Keith McCormack & Faye Voss, Dundee Music; "Sukiyaki" by Hachidai Nakamura & Rokuski Ei, Beechwood Music; "Surfer Girl" by Brian Wilson, Guild Music; "Surfin' U.S.A" by Chuck Berry & Brian Wilson, Arc Music; "Talk Back Trembling Lips" by John D. Loudermilk, Acuff-Rose.

"Talk To Me" (no writer credit given), Lois Publishing; "Tell Him" by Bert Russell, Robert Mellin Music; "Then He Kissed Me" by Jeff Barry, Ellie Greenwich & Phil Spector, Trio Music; "Tie Me Kangaroo Down, Sport" by Rolf Harris, Beechwood Music; "Two Faces Have I" by Twyla Herbert & Lou Sacco, Painted Desert Music; "Two Lovers" by William Robinson, Jobete Music; "Walk Right In" by Gus Cannon & Hosie Woods, Peer International; "Walking The Dog" by Rufus Thomas, East Publications; "Watermelon Man" by Herb Hancock, Hancock Music; "Wild Weekend" by Tom Shannon & Phil Todaro, Shan-Todd-Tupper Publishing; "Wipe Out" by Robert Berryhill, Patrick Connolly, James Fuller & Ron Wilson, Miraleste-Robin Hood Music; "Wonderful Summer" by Perry Botkin Jr., Rock Music.

"Wonderful! Wonderful!" by Ben Raleigh, E. B. Marks Music; "You Can't Sit Down" by Dee Clark, Cornell Mukdrow & Philip Upchurch, Conrad Publishing; "Young Lovers" by Ray Hildebrand & Jill Jackson, LeBill-Marbill Music; "You're The Devil In Disguise" by Bill Giant, Elvis Presley Music; "You're The Reason I'm Living" by Bobby Darin, Adaris Music, "You've Really Got A Hold On Me" by William Robinson, Jobete Music.

Big Workup

Continued from page 71

who cast him in so important a role.

Concert Opera Assn., which opened with "Rienzi" on the Monday following President Kennedy's assassination, was again dogged, this time by the snowstorm-of-the-season and the sold-out house was half-filled with dinner jackets and galoshes and a rare display of evening gowns topped with raccoon coats and the like. At intermission the gusty swirls of snowfalls proved too much competition for the immobile mobile of the foyer. An annoying custom which has arisen at Philharmonic Hall is that of sounding a most insistent, unmusical hooter, almost as soon as the audience comes out at intermissions. It presumably is intended to hurry the exiters back into their seats, but what with the three-deck construction of the foyer, and all, it seems to be saying: "Abandon Ship! Abandon Ship!"

VARIETY

SINGLE RECORD T.I.P.S.

(Tune Index of Performance & Sales)

This Wk.	Last Wk.	No. Wks. On Chart		Label
1	1	8	THERE, I'VE SAID IT AGAIN Bobby Vinton	Epic
2	4	7	POPSICLES & ICICLES Murmaids	Chatahoochee
3	3	9	LOUIE LOUIE Kingsmen	Wand
4	6	5	SURFIN BIRD Trashmen	Garrett
5	22	3	HEY LITTLE COBRA Ripchords	Columbia
6	30	3	AS USUAL Brenda Lee	Decca
7	36	2	YOU DON'T OWN ME Leslie Gore	Mercury
8	5	6	FORGET HIM Bobby Rydell	Cameo
9	2	10	DOMINIQUE Singing Nun	Philips
10	8	5	OUTER LIMITS Marketts	Warner Bros.
11	43	2	DAISY PETAL PICKIN' Jimmy Gilmer & Fireballs	Dot
12	—	1	WHISPERING April Stevens & Nino Tempo	Atco
13	12	10	SINCE I FELL FOR YOU Lenny Welch	Cadence
14	7	7	NITTY GRITTY Shirley Ellis	Congress
15	9	6	DRAG CITY Jan & Dean	Liberty
16	28	2	FOR YOU Rick Nelson	Decca
17	—	1	ANYONE WHO HAD A HEART Dionne Warwick	Scepter
18	—	1	UM UM UM UM UM UM Major Lance	Okeh
19	15	10	TALK BACK TREMBLING LIPS Johnny Tillotson	MGM
20	16	7	WIVES & LOVERS Jack Jones	Kapp
21	13	7	MIDNIGHT MARY Joey Powers	Amy
22	10	9	YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE A BABY Caravelles	Smash
23	22	7	QUICKSAND Martha & The Vandellas	Gordy
24	—	1	HOOKA TOOKA Chubby Checker	Parkway
25	—	1	WHAT KIND OF FOOL Tams	ABC-Par
26	29	5	WHEN LOVE LIGHT SHINES Supremes	Motown
27	11	8	DRIP DROP Dion	Columbia
28	—	1	I WANT TO HOLD YOUR HAND Beatles	Capitol
29	—	1	LETTER FROM SHERRY Dale Ward	Dot
30	—	1	THAT LUCKY OLD SUN Ray Charles	ABC-Par
31	—	1	SOMEWHERE Tymes	Parkway
32	—	1	JAVA Al Hirt	Victor
33	—	1	BABY I LOVE YOU Ronettes	Philles
34	20	12	EVERYBODY Tommy Roe	ABC-Par
35	39	4	STEWBALL Peter, Paul & Mary	Warner Bros.
36	18	11	LODDY LO Chubby Checker	Parkway
37	26	11	CAN I GET A WITNESS Marvin Gaye	Tamla
38	17	14	SHE'S A FOOL Leslie Gore	Mercury
39	24	11	WONDERFUL SUMMER Robin Ward	Dot
40	—	1	IT'S ALL IN THE GAME Cliff Richards	Epic
41	—	4	LONG TALL TEXAN Murray Kellum	M.O.C.
42	—	1	I CAN'T STOP TALKING ABOUT YOU Steve & Eydie	Columbia
43	41	10	BE TRUE TO YOUR SCHOOL Beach Boys	Capitol
44	37	9	THE BOY NEXT DOOR Secrets	Philips
45	23	6	KANSAS CITY Trini Lopez	Reprise
46	40	5	PRETTY PAPER Roy Orbison	Monument
47	—	1	IN SUMMER OF HIS YEARS Connie Francis	MGM
48	33	15	MARIA ELENA Los Indios Tabajaias	Victor
49	—	1	PAIN IN MY HEART Otis Redding	Volt
50	—	1	HARLEM SHUFFLE Bob & Earl	Marc

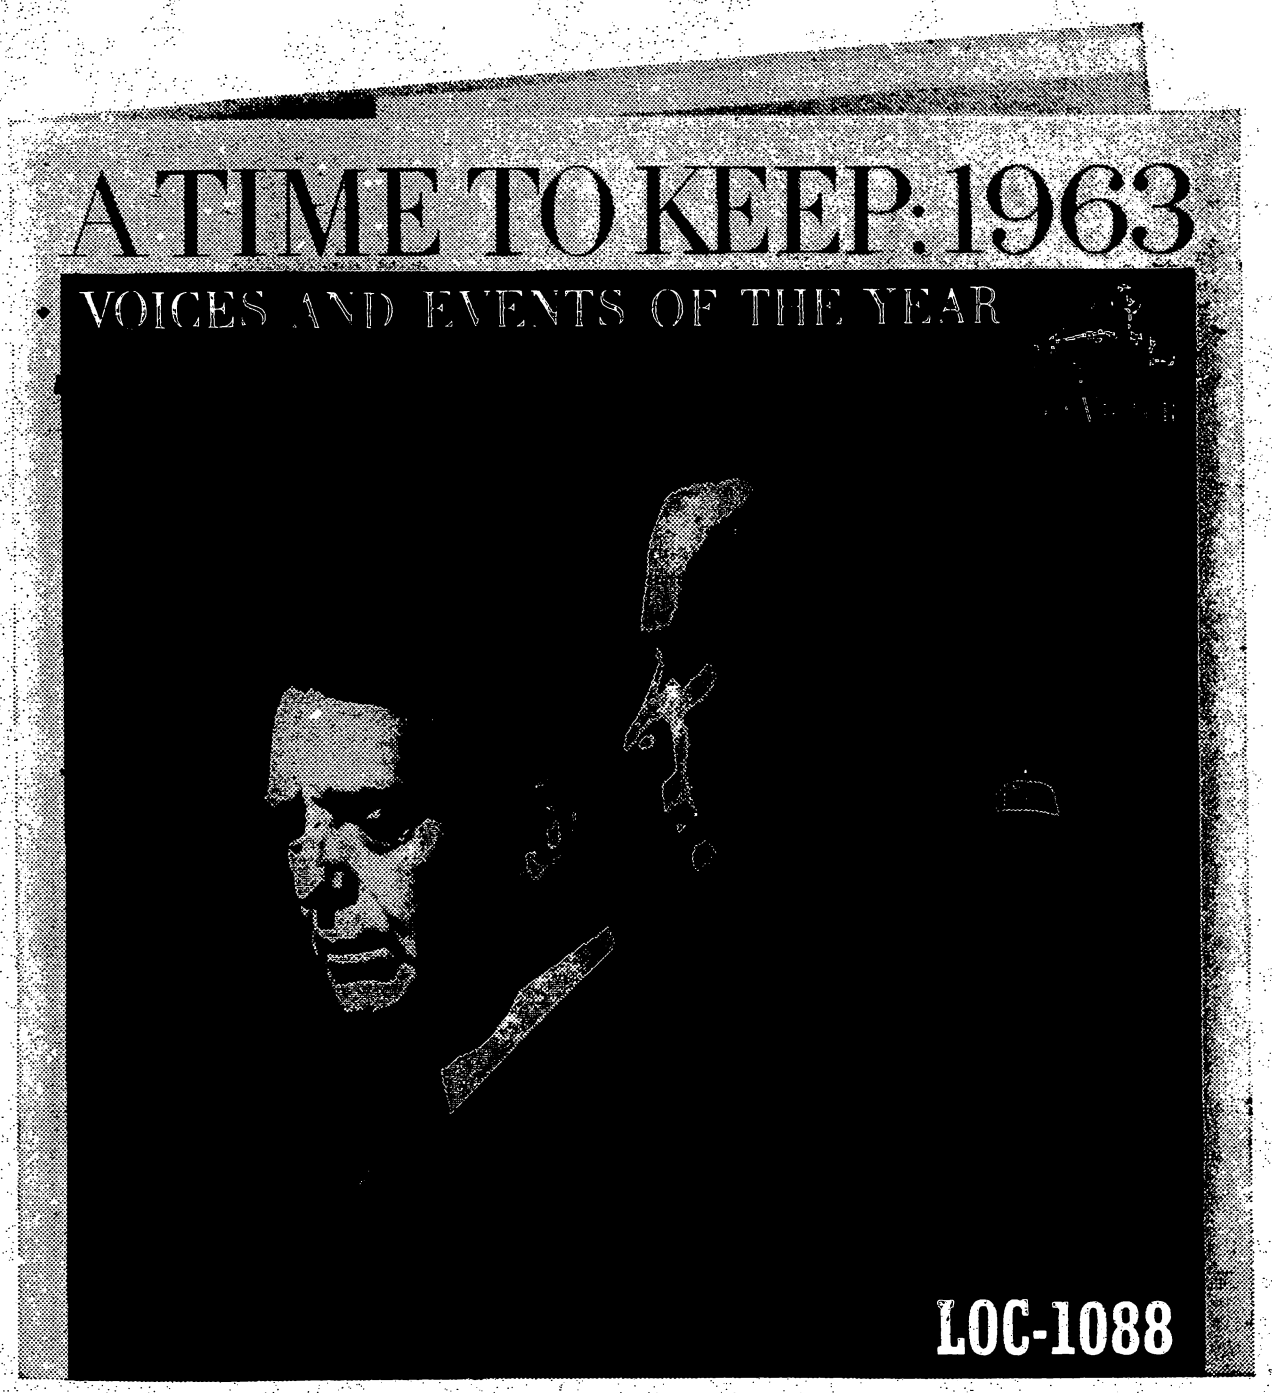
HUNTLEY/BRINKLEY REPORT THE YEAR 1963



ONLY RECORD TO COVER THE ENTIRE MOMENTOUS YEAR 1963

EXCITING ON-THE-SPOT RECORD

ABOUT PEOPLE, PLACES AND EVENTS:

Dr. Martin Luther King ■ Profumo affair ■ Governor Wallace ■ South Vietnam ■ Sandy Koufax ■ Jack Ruby ■ DeGaulle ■ Cooper Space Flight ■ Pope John ■ Valachi ■ Robert Frost ■ JFK ■ Test Ban Treaty ■ March on Washington ■ Dallas ■ LBJ

Handsome fold-out album is beautifully illustrated with pictures and commentary of the year 1963.

EXCLUSIVELY ON

RCA VICTOR

The most trusted name in sound

Tin Pan Valley

By RED O'DONNELL

Nashville, Jan. 21.

Singer-writer Joe South out of Atlanta named manager of Lowery Music, succeeding Decca artist Bob Beckham, who grabbed similar assignment with Raleigh Music.

Brook Benton, Brian Hyland, Clyde McPhatter, Jimmy Clanton, Teresa Brewer incoming for wax-workouts.

ABC-Paramount brought Fats Domino in for four days of record-making.

Acuff-Rose staff songsmith John D. Loudermilk back from South Africa five-weeker, during which he bought 20-acre farm on Indian Ocean, 15 miles from downtown Johannesburg.

Quickie quote from Monument prez Fred Foster in re '64: "Rock 'n' roll's big beat may partially replace the folk-singers and their banjos. I think England's Beatles will have a great influence on American music this year. I believe Beatle-mania will hit the U.S."

Lonzo & Oscar due in this week from tour of GI bases in Germany.

Mercury artist Faron Young investing some of his country music royalties in construction of office building on Record Row.

Paul Cohen signed The Log Cabin Boys (5), a Bluegrass group out of Columbus, O., for his Todd label.

Marty Robbins jetted to Coast for powwow with his manager, Marty Landau.

Minnie Pearl vacationing in Palm Springs, prior to four appearances on Tennessee Ernie Ford's daytimer.

Hickory Record execs Wesley Rose, Roy Acuff and Lester Rose, plus artist Kris Jensen packing for hop to England, where label will be introduced to Ole Blighty in firm's most extensive yet promotion campaign.

Eddy Arnold does the Ed Sullivan CBS-TVer Jan. 26 and guests on Jimmy Dean's ABC-TV program Feb. 27.

Freddy (Quinn), "the Elvis Presley of Germany" at Bradley-Columbia studio for session. MGM's Jim Vienneau supervised for Polydor.

SHORT SHOTS—Ray Butts resigned as manager of Sam Phillips' recording studio . . . Sideman Scotty Moore in charge pending appointment of fulltime operator . . . Audrey Williams now manages son Hank Williams Jr.'s career . . . The 15-year-old singer started under Hubie Long and Oscar Davis.

United Artists' Pappy Dailey in from Texas to supervise disk-making of George Jones and Melba Montgomery . . . Jake Hess (ex-lead of The Statesmen) organized new gospel group under tag of The Imperials . . . Chet Atkins back at RCA Victor diggings after a & r'ing on-stage, live-performance album of a Porter Wagoner show.

Coast impresario Charley Adams here for look-see at Canadian tv and radio personality Stu Phillips (Winnipeg) during Columbia platter-cutting sesh . . . Latter label's Don Law into N.Y. for session discussion with Jimmy Dean . . . Decca's a & r staffer Owen Bradley & Harry Silverstein also Manhattan visitors.

Barbara Williamson is new Gal Friday to Marvin Hughes at Capitol's Music City office. She succeeds Kathy Copas (Mrs. Hughes), who resigned to become fulltime homemaker.

The Wilburn Bros. Teddy and Doyle — have been appointed colonels on the staffs of Govs. Frank G. Clement of Tennessee and Jimmie Davis of Louisiana . . . The Wilburns' syndicated television series has been renewed through 1964 by its Memphis sponsor (American Snuff & Tobacco Co.).

Lucky Moeller became president-partner of the Jim Denny Talent Agency—and firm's name has been changed to Denny-Moeller Agency.

JACK JONES
Sings
LOVE WITH THE PROPER STRANGER
on Kapp Records
From the Paramount Picture
"LOVE WITH THE PROPER STRANGER"
PARAMOUNT MUSIC CORPORATION

It's a Hit!
THE TAMS
What Kind of Fool
(Do You Think I Am)
b/w
Laugh It Off
ABC—10502
ABC-PARAMOUNT

N.Y. Central

Continued from page 1

before it can take back the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria from the Hilton chain. James Boisi, of Realty Hotels Inc., the N. Y. Central's subsidiary which operates its inns, said that the return of the Waldorf is a matter of about 25 years.

Harry Annholt, general manager of the Hotel Biltmore, is prexy of the Central's hotel division. According to his office, the new manager of the Roosevelt has not yet been appointed. Arthur Dooley, the Roosevelt's current manager, will go to Hartford as manager of the Hotel America when HCA steps out of the Roosevelt.

The Roosevelt Grill now has the Joan Fairfax All-Girl Band. Whether the inn will continue with a band and act format under the Central banner is unknown as yet.

The railroad presently owns and operates the Biltmore, Park Lane and Barclay hotels. After it recovers the Roosevelt, it has only to bide its time before recapturing the Commodore and Waldorf-Astoria.

THE BROTHERS CAIN
Currently (Jan. 14 thru 26)
VILLAGE CLUB, Dallas, Texas
Feb. 3-15—THE DOWNTOWNER MOTEL, Minneapolis
Feb. 17-29—VIRGINIAN RESTAURANT, Shaker Heights, Ohio
Pers. Mgt.—ANN HOLIDAY
BOOKED EXCLUSIVELY BY ASSOCIATED BOOKING CORPORATION
JOE GLASER, President
50 WEST 57 STREET, NEW YORK 19 JUdson 2-7700
CHICAGO • MIAMI • BEVERLY HILLS • LAS VEGAS • DALLAS • LONDON

Local 802

Continued from page 69

dues and work tax precipitated the formation of the MVEC and membership court actions against their union.

That all-out internecine war seems imminent in the tooters union is underscored by the additional Allegro announcement booking Manhattan Center in N.Y. (capacity of which is five times the 1,200 record crowd that jammed the September, 1963, meeting in Palm Gardens) for the Feb. 17 bylaw meeting. Palms Gardens has been the traditional site of 802 meets for decades.

In addition, the January issue of Allegro (devoted almost exclusively to the Feb. 17 meeting) prints several resolutions (reported out "favorable" by the Local's exec board) that seek to cancel two of three bylaws passed by almost unanimous voice vote last September and operative only since Jan. 1. The third (eliminating a work-tax and raising the annual dues) is the subject of the controversial first referendum currently before the courts.

Erasure of the two new bylaws would scratch an untried three-by-law meetings a year system of membership participation, and re-establish the old 500 quorum figure (now 250) of the past. Historically 500 showing was a rare event at 802 meetings. And in the event of "no quorum" action on resolution reverts to the nine-man executive board plus the four top officers.

The Honest Ballot Assn. (which has run 802 pollings for many years) is slated to conduct the new referendum and the mail-order election if approved.

Price Fixing

Continued from page 69

wood, topper of EMI, one of the two major diskeries here (Decca is the other), abolition of RPM is bound to put many small dealers out of business which would be a disaster for the trade. "We all know what the American market is like," he said, "and we don't want the same thing over here."

Sir Edward Lewis, chief of Decca and the man who named the U.S. market a "profitless prosperity," asserted that withdrawal of the RPM safeguard would see disk trading drifting to discount houses, supermarkets, etc. "What we want to retain," he said, "is a larger number of dealers in all parts of the country."

Current disk prices here are 94c per single, LP prices range from $3 to $5 and four-track "extended play" disks cost $1-$1.50 according to their categories. Of these prices, 33% goes to dealers, 17½% to wholesalers and the rest to the waxery, apart from purchase tax.

Hootenanny

Continued from page 71

memorized his lines phonetically.) It was a new role for the producer-composer. He emphasized the purpose, which was to have both Italian and U.S. music.

Merrill, accompanied on the East Room grand piano by his wife, Marion, sang Verdi's "Di Provenza" from "La Traviata" and Rossini's "Largo al Factotum" from "Barber of Seville."

The New Christy Minstrels, with a well staged entrance and an imaginative use of lights, sang "Jump Down, Turn Around," "This Land is Your Land," "I'm Going Away," "The Blacksmith of Brandywine," "Green, Green" and their special arrangement blending "This Train" and "Saints Go Marching In."

The East Room stage has a red velvet backdrop, with panels at each side to make entrances and exits as easy as in a theatre. Almost anything can be done in lighting.

The event was the only one in memory when two types of entertainment have been presented at the same time on a White House program. President and Mrs. Johnson seem to like variety, affording, as it does, an opportunity to present more than one example of American talent before a visiting foreign head of state.

The cast was invited to remain for champagne in the Red Room after the performance. President Johnson returned after bidding his guests goodnight to visit again with the entertainers. Carp.

On the Upbeat

New York

Hildegarde's new song on the Spiral is "Peace and Harmony," penned by Gladys Shelley & Ray Ellis. It's backed with "Leave It To The Girls" which Miss Shelley cleffed solo.

The case in N. Y. Federal Court on "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" filed by composer Robert Nolan against Williamson Music and Sam Fox Publishing Co. is still pending and has not been dismissed as inadvertently reported in VARIETY last week.

A special benefit concert by the American Symphony Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski's direction will be presented at Carnegie Hall on March 4 to raise funds for Verrazzano College, a new school of higher learning to be established in upstate New York (Woodridge) in 1966. The recital will feature the Schola Cantorum, soprano Veronica Taylor, contralto Jean Madeira, tenor David Dodds, among others . . . Timi Yuro, Liberty disker, left for a tour of the Orient yesterday (Tues.). Martin Walker, ABC-Paramount disker, into the Chateau Club, Cleveland, Feb. 1 for one week . . . Organist Richard Ellsasser will head the organ department of the U. of Michigan's National Music Camp during the summer of 1964 for his fifth consecutive year. Signed as his associate is Jeanne Rae Anderson . . . Bobby Vinton was the VIP at a cocktailery hosted by Epic Records at the New York Hilton last Thursday (16).

Peter Nero has set out on a three-month personal appearance tour on which he'll appear in concert at more than 60 colleges and universities. In his repertoire are selections from his score for the pic "Sunday In New York," in which he also appears as an actor . . . Maria Randall, 3-D disker, hitting upstate New York and Canada for nitery engagements and deejay promotion.

"The Loving Heart," the official song of the American Heart Assn., was written by Chet Gierlach and Phyllis Fairbanks and published by their firm, Music/Music/Music. All publishers' royalties from the tune have been assigned to the Heart Assn. . . . The Uptowners are currently at the Bon Vivant in Great Neck, L. I. . . . Bandleader Herb Zane takes a week off from playing for the shows at the Jersey Steak Pit on March 23 to open a week's stand at the Golden Triangle Motel, Norfolk, Va. . . . Miriam Makeba headlines the new show opening at Basin Street East tonight (Wed.). Also on the bill are Warner Bros. disker Bill Cosby and the Stan Getz Quintet.

Elmer Bernstein has been signed by the Pan Arts Co. to compose the score for "The World of Henry Orient," a United Artists release . . . Steve Mogull has joined Shapiro, Bernstein as assistant to Dick Voltter . . . Erroll Garner has taken first place again in the British Melody Maker mag's annual poll, being voted the favorite American pianist . . . Earl Wrightson and Lois Hunt will do a concert at the Lyric Theatre, Allentown (Pa.) Feb. 2. . . The New Christy Minstrels set for a concert at the KRNT Theatre, Des Moinse, Ia., Jan. 24.

Louis Prima, Gia Maione, Sam Butera & The Witnesses on a 10-day stint at Chicago's Palmer House . . . Nancy Wilson's act at the Waldorf's Empire Room was penned by Earl Barton with music by Johnny Mandell . . . Regina disker Cee Cee Joy enrolled at NYU in music and drama courses . . . Singer Billy Daniels set for a role in the musical version of "Golden Boy" . . . Lionel Hampton's band spotlighting Japanese thrush Miyoko Hoshino at the Wagon Wheel in Lake Tahoe . . . Stan Levine's society jazz band signed for Sunday nights at Charlie Bates Saloon . . . Pianist Charlie De Forrest and the Jimmy Butts duo at The Apartment through Feb. 1 . . . The Cecil Young Trio signed with agent Joe Sully at Joe Glaser's office.

Actor-singer Jeno Mate will helm his own Album Room Club in early February . . . Singer Tony Lawrence packaging a revue for N.Y. area appearances . . . Eddie Hazell, singer-guitarist, into the Embers, Indianapolis, Feb. 3 for two weeks . . . A faculty concert for the benefit of the Blind Artists Fund will be given Jan. 26 at The Lighthouse . . . The Friends of Live Music will honor the 100th anni of Richard Strauss' birth with two concerts at Town Hall tonight Jan. 22.

Casting 'Bible'

Continued from page 1

connected with the pic, but "desire and agreement to be in the film" has been expressed by many top names in the business, according to Huston.

Peter O'Toole as Nimrod seems almost certain, but other names are iffier, and many depend on availability. "Burton will almost certainly be in it," Huston said, "either as the voice of the narrator, or perhaps as Cain."

Marlon Brando and Paul Newman are other possibilities — but there's no commitment. Opera's Maria Callas might be Sarah. Francoise Prevost, Annie Girardot, or Jeanne Moreau are being considered for role of Mary Magdalen. There'll be many Italian actors naturally, producer noted, adding that he'd know a lot more after an upcoming casting call to London with Huston.

Igor Straowsky is almost certain to write music for pic, Huston said, while an attempt is being made to dis-engage Jack Cardiff from upcoming directorial stints to coordinate giant lensing chore on "The Bible." Adam and Eve will be played by unknowns, and will be photographed "in the nude, but discreetly, with taste."

Youngblood Joins SESAC

T. Doug Youngblood, secretary-treasurer of the South Carolina Broadcasters Assn. since 1951 and general manager of WFIG (Sumter, S.C.), has joined the field staff of SESAC.

The HIT! OF THE WEEK
CHRIS CROSBY
Sings
YOUNG AND IN LOVE
K-13191
M-G-M Records

Heading for the Charts!
The French Hit
SARA DARLING
(Elle Etait, Si Jolie)
GEORGE MAHARIS
(Epic)
The Italian Novelty
GRAZIE, PREGO, SCUSI
DEAN MARTIN
(Reprise)
B. F. WOOD MUSIC CO. INC.
1619 B'way, New York, N. Y.

Announcing
Two Great Songs...
CIUMACHELLA &
THE LIGHTS OF ROMA
From the Hit Italian Musical Comedy
RUGANTINO
MILAN . . . FLORENCE ROME
MUSIC PUBLISHERS HOLDING CORP.

BMI 12th Annual Citation of Achievement Awards

1963

ANOTHER SATURDAY NIGHT
Kags Music
SAM COOKE

BABY WORKOUT
Merrimac Music Corp.
ALONZO TUCKER, JACKIE WILSON

BE MY BABY
Trio Music Co., Inc.;
Mother Bertha Music, Inc.
JEFF BARRY, ELLIE GREENWICH, PHIL SPECTOR

BE TRUE TO YOUR SCHOOL
Sea of Tunes Publishing Co.
BRIAN WILSON

BLAME IT ON THE BOSSA NOVA
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
BARRY MANN, CYNTHIA WEIL

BLUE VELVET
Vogue Music, Inc.
BERNIE WAYNE

BOSSA NOVA BABY
Elvis Presley Music, Inc.
JERRY LEIBER, MIKE STOLLER

BUSTED
Pamper Music, Inc.
HARLAN HOWARD

CAN'T GET USED TO LOSING YOU
Brenner Music, Inc.
MORT SHUMAN, JEROME "DOC" POMUS

CRY BABY
Robert Mellin, Inc.; Rittenhouse Music
NORMAN MEADE, BERT RUSSELL

DA DOO RON RON
(When He Walked Me Home)
Trio Music Co., Inc.;
Mother Bertha Music, Inc.
JEFF BARRY, ELLIE GREENWICH, PHIL SPECTOR

DANKE SCHOEN
Roosevelt Music Co., Inc.
BERTHOLD KAEMPFERT, KURT SCHWABACH

DON'T SAY NOTHIN' BAD
(About My Baby)
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
GERRY GOFFIN, CAROLE KING

DRIP DROP
Tiger Music, Inc.
JERRY LEIBER, MIKE STOLLER

EASIER SAID THAN DONE
Nom Music, Inc.
LARRY HUFF, WILLIAM LINTON

EIGHTEEN YELLOW ROSES
T. M. Music, Inc.
BOBBY DARIN

EVERYBODY
Low-Twi Music
TOMMY ROE

FINGERTIPS
Jobete Music Co., Inc.
HENRY COSBY, CLARENCE PAUL

FOOLISH LITTLE GIRL
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
HOWARD GREENFIELD, HELEN MILLER

FROM A JACK TO A KING
Dandelion Music Co.
NED MILLER

GREEN GREEN
New Christy Music Publishing Co.
BARRY MCGUIRE

HELLO STRANGER
McLaughlin Publishing Co.;
Cotillion Music, Inc.
BARBARA LEWIS

HE'S SO FINE
Bright Tunes Music Corp.
RONNIE MACK

HE'S SURE THE BOY I LOVE
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
BARRY MANN, CYNTHIA WEIL

HEY, GIRL
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
GERRY GOFFIN, CAROLE KING

HEY, PAULA
LeBill Music; Marbill Music
RAY HILDEBRAND

HONOLULU LULU
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
LOU ADLER, JAN BERRY, ROGER CHRISTIAN

HOT PASTRAMI
Sherlyn Publishing Co.
DESSIE ROZIER

I CAN'T STAY MAD AT YOU
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
GERRY GOFFIN, CAROLE KING

IF I HAD A HAMMER
Ludlow Music, Inc.
LEE HAYS, PETE SEEGER

IF YOU WANNA BE HAPPY
Rock Masters, Inc.
FRANK GUIDA, JOSEPH ROYSTER, CARMELA GUIDA

I LOVE YOU BECAUSE
Fred Rose Music, Inc.
LEON PAYNE

I'M LEAVING IT ALL UP TO YOU
Venice Music, Inc.
DEWEY TERRY, DON F. HARRIS

IN DREAMS
Acuff-Rose Publications, Inc.
ROY ORBISON

I SAW LINDA YESTERDAY
Jack Music, Inc.
DICKEY LEE, ALLEN REYNOLDS

IT'S ALL RIGHT
Curtom Publishing Co.
CURTIS MAYFIELD

IT'S UP TO YOU
Four Star Sales Company, Inc.;
Hilliard Music Co.
JERRY FULLER

JUST ONE LOOK
Premier Albums Music Publishing
GREGORY CARROLL, DORIS PAYNE

LOOP DE LOOP
Tobi-Ann Music Publishing Corp.;
Unbelievable Publishing Corp.
TEDDY VANN

LOUIE, LOUIE
Limax Music, Inc.
RICHARD BERRY

LOVE IS LIKE A HEAT WAVE
Jobete Music Co., Inc.
LAMONT DOZIER, BRIAN HOLLAND, EDDIE HOLLAND

MARIA ELENA
Peer International Corporation
LORENZO BARCELONA

MEMPHIS
Arc Music Corp.
CHUCK BERRY

MICKEY'S MONKEY
Jobete Music Co., Inc.
LAMONT DOZIER, BRIAN HOLLAND, EDDIE HOLLAND

MIDNIGHT MARY
Jimskip Music, Inc.
ART WAYNE, BEN RALEIGH

MOCKINGBIRD
Saturn Music, Inc.
CHARLIE FOXX, INEZ FOXX

THE MONKEY TIME
Curtom Publishing Co.; Paliro Music Co.
CURTIS MAYFIELD

MORE (Theme from MONDO CANE)
E. B. Marks Music Corp.
M. CIORCIOLINI, NORMAN NEWELL, NINO OLIVIERO, RIZ ORTOLANI

MY BOYFRIEND'S BACK
Blackwood Music, Inc.
ROBERT FELDMAN, GERALD GOLDSTEIN, RICHARD GOTTEHRER

MY COLORING BOOK
Sunbeam Music Corp.
FRED EBB, JOHN KANDER

MY DAD
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
BARRY MANN, CYNTHIA WEIL

THE NITTY GRITTY
Al Gallico Music Corporation
LINCOLN CHASE

NOT ME
Rock Masters, Inc.
GARY ANDERSON, FRANK GUIDA

ON BROADWAY
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
JERRY LEIBER, BARRY MANN, MIKE STOLLER, CYNTHIA WEIL

ONE BROKEN HEART FOR SALE
Elvis Presley Music, Inc.
OTIS BLACKWELL, WINFIELD SCOTT

ONE FINE DAY
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
GERRY GOFFIN, CAROLE KING

OUR WINTER LOVE
BMI Canada, Ltd.; Cramart Music, Inc.
JOHN COWELL

(Down At) PAPA JOE'S
Tuneville Music, Inc.
JERRY DEAN SMITH

PEPINO, THE ITALIAN MOUSE
Ding Dong Music Corp.;
Romance Music, Inc.
RAY ALLEN, WANDRA MERRELL

PIPELINE
Downey Music Publishing Co.
BRIAN CARMAN, BOB SPICKARD

PRIDE AND JOY
Jobete Music Co., Inc.
MARVIN GAYE, WILLIAM STEVENSON, NORMAN WHITFIELD

QUICKSAND
Jobete Music Co., Inc.
EDDIE HOLLAND, LAMONT DOZIER, BRIAN HOLLAND

RHYTHM OF THE RAIN
Sherman-DeVorzon Music
JOHN GUMMOE

RUBY BABY
Tiger Music, Inc.
JERRY LEIBER, MIKE STOLLER

SALLY GO ROUND THE ROSES
Winlyn Music, Inc.
ZELMA SANDERS, LONA STEVENS

POPSICLES AND ICICLES
Dragonwyck Music
DAVID A. GATES

SHE'S A FOOL
Helios Music Corp.;
MRC Music, Inc.
BEN RALEIGH, MARK BARKAN

SO MUCH IN LOVE
Cameo-Parkway Publishing Co., Inc.
WILLIAM JACKSON, GEORGE WILLIAMS

(I Love You) STILL
Moss Rose Publications, Inc.
BILL ANDERSON

SUGAR SHACK—Dundee Music
KEITH MCCORMACK, FAYE VOSS

SUKIYAKI—Beechwood Music Corp.
ROKUSUKE EI, HACHIDAI NAKAMURA

SURF CITY
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
JAN BERRY, BRIAN WILSON

SURFER GIRL—Guild Music Company
BRIAN WILSON

SURFIN' U.S.A.—Arc Music Corp.
CHUCK BERRY, BRIAN WILSON

TALK BACK TREMBLING LIPS
Acuff-Rose Publications, Inc.
JOHN D. LOUDERMILK

TALK TO ME—Lois Publishing Co.

TELL HIM—Robert Mellin, Inc.
BERT RUSSELL

THEN HE KISSED ME
Trio Music Co., Inc.
JEFF BARRY, ELLIE GREENWICH, PHIL SPECTOR

TIE ME KANGAROO DOWN, SPORT
Beechwood Music Corporation
ROLF HARRIS

TWO FACES HAVE I—Painted Desert Music Corp.; RTD Music Corp.
TWYLA HERBERT, LOU SACCO

TWO LOVERS—Jobete Music Co., Inc.
WILLIAM ROBINSON

UP ON THE ROOF
Screen Gems-Columbia Music, Inc.
GERRY GOFFIN, CAROLE KING

WALKING THE DOG
East Publications
RUFUS THOMAS

WALK RIGHT IN
Peer International Corporation
GUS CANNON, HOSIE WOODS

WATERMELON MAN
Hancock Music Co.
HERB HANCOCK

WILD WEEKEND—Shan-Todd Publishing; Tupper Publishing Co.
TOM SHANNON, PHIL TODARO

WIPE OUT
Miraleste Music; Robin Hood Music Co.
ROBERT BERRYHILL, PATRICK CONNOLLY, JAMES FULLER, RON WILSON

WONDERFUL SUMMER
Rock Music Company
PERRY BOTKIN, JR.

WONDERFUL! WONDERFUL!
E. B. Marks Music Corp.
BEN RALEIGH

YOU CAN'T SIT DOWN—Conrad Publishing Co., Inc.; Dasher Music
DEE CLARK, CORNELL MULDROW, PHILIP UPCHURCH

YOUNG LOVERS
LeBill Music; Marbill Music
RAY HILDEBRAND, JILL JACKSON

YOU'RE THE DEVIL IN DISGUISE
Elvis Presley Music, Inc.
BILL GIANT

YOU'RE THE REASON I'M LIVING
Adaris Music, Inc.
BOBBY DARIN

YOU'VE REALLY GOT A HOLD ON ME—Jobete Music Co., Inc.
WILLIAM ROBINSON

BROADCAST MUSIC, INC. · 589 Fifth Ave., New York 17, N.Y.

Weissberg Hotels Link Puerto Rico, Palm Beach Into Booking Combine

The H. R. Weissberg Hotel Corp. has worked out a dual booking arrangement between the Ponce de Leon Hotel, San Juan, and the Biltmore, Palm Beach. The hotel chain later hopes to bring the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago, into this setup.

Booking for the Weissberg chain is done out of New York. The stress, of course, in this type of operation is sharing transportation costs. But at the same time it enables the hotel system to offer two consecutive dates in resort areas.

Presently, the Biltmore is a weekend date to be played following the stand at the Ponce de Leon. However, there's a possibility it may be expanded to a full week by next season.

Julie Wilson is currently in San Juan. She'll work the Biltmore, Jan. 24 and 25. Sheila Reynolds, who closes a two-weeker at the Puerto Rican spot, Feb. 5, will play Feb. 7 and 8 at the Palm Beacher. Vicky Autier, who ends her fortnight in Puerto Rico, Feb. 19, goes to the Biltmore, Feb. 21 and 22. Bill Hayes exits the Ponce March 11, hits the Biltmore, March 13-14.

This arrangement gives the Biltmore an open weekend because of the bi-weekly change on Puerto Rico. To fill the gap, the Weissberg chain is lining up talent playing convention or cafe dates in the Florida area to fill in the other weekends. Betty Madigan is set for two days starting Jan. 31 and Bob Carroll is inked for Feb. 28.

The Edgewater Beach Hotel's entertainment room is currently closed for redecorating and will reopen shortly after Easter Sunday with a 350 capacity. The hotel's operators felt that it was a difficult room for singers. Hence, it's cutting down its capacity and making it a more intimate site for entertainers.

AUSSIE HOTELS, CAFES ON INT'L NAME KICK

Melbourne, Jan. 21.

There's to be a block of international names descending on Melbourne during 1964 for dual floorshow engagements at Federal Hotels' Manzies and Savoy Plaza hostelries.

Current headliner is Helen Traubel, who'll be followed on Jan. 27 by Nina & Frederick for a three-week stint with Dickie Valentine next for a four-week date. Others already inked for the year include Vickie Benet on a return visit, the Kirby Stone Four, Joan Regan, Dave Barry, Yana, Morey Amsterdam and Rose Marie of the Dick Van Dyke Show, Joan Turner, Julius La Rosa, Alma Cogan on a return visit, Frankie Vaughan.

Either Jane Powell or Van Johnson will also go Down Under and possibly Aussie-born Shirley Abicar. Responsible for bringing all these artists Down Under is Jack Neary of N.L.T. Productions, who made an overseas trip last year to set the deals. He's partnered in the venture by Aussie tv comic Bobby Limb.

'Ice Twist' Parties Luring Teeners to Mpls. Inn's Rink

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

The new Hotel Sheraton-Ritz's ice rink supper club, probably the only nitery of its kind operated by a swank hostelry, is now aiming for the patronage of teenagers along with their elders.

It has launched Friday night highschool students' "Ice Twist" parties with admission $1 and the serving of "Ritz Fizz" (blackberry soda) as the principal beverage and "The Huskee" (a long hot dog) as the main food item. In addition there's rock 'n' roll music on records spun by local disk jockey guests who also provide their patter.

Dorothy Lewis, onetime "Ice Follies" star and owner of supper club and other ice shows, "calls" skate mixers as a warmup for the parties which start at 8 p.m. and run to 11:30 o'clock. Miss Lewis also is the ice rink supper club's emcee, does some performing on the ice and gives instruction to those desiring it.

Toronto Nets $532,853 From CNE's '63 Stand

Toronto, Jan. 21.

Sum of $532,853 will be turned over to Toronto coffers through operations of the Canadian National Exhibition for in 1963, reported general manager Hiram McCallum in his annual statement to CNE board of directors. Amount was less $321,211 for capital improvements and additions to plant and equipment.

McCallum said that last summer's CNE was a good one but not exceptional. He added that the CNE surplus was $90,000 larger than forecast. Year-round operations at Exhibition Park (355 acres) had provided a surplus of $794,148.

Minn. Fair Racked Up Record '63 Net

St. Paul, Jan. 21.

The annual 10-day Minnesota State Fair, which unfailingly chalks up a more than 1,000,000 attendance, enjoyed the best year profitwise in 1963 in its entire 115-year history, coming through with $279,704 earnings. The previous high was 1950's $252,769.

Expo rolled up the peak profit although its 1,181,845 admissions mark was exceeded by centennial celebration 1958's 1,193,661, which continues to be the record.

While 1963 showed larger earnings than 1958, it's pointed out that since the latter year the gate admission has been boosted from 50c to 75c. At this Fair every adult passing through the gates, including even officials, concessionaires and newspapermen covering the exposition, pays admission.

In making his report to the Minnesota Agricultural Society, which operates the Fair, J. E. Libby, secretary-general manager, pointed out that the night grandstand show, now aided by important name acts, pulled 76,346 spectators, the most since before World War II and a 25% increase over 1962.

"This 1963 night show attendance gain is all the more encouraging because 1962 crowds were 23% better than 1961's," Libby told the meeting. "We are convinced that these attendance gains are due to our now two-year-old policy of presenting nationally headline acts."

Libby also said that the policy of booking the bigger name acts will be expanded this year. Auto races comprise the Fair's grandstand daytime shows.

County Fairs' $1,766,129

Giving what's considered a very good account of themselves, Minnesota's 96 county and district fairs grossed a total of $1,766,129 in 1963, a gain over the preceding year's $1,722,934. With expenses aggregating $1,395,783, the fairs' net profits were $370,346, compared to 1962's $366,812.

Premiums, as well as receipts and profit, were in excess of the preceding year's, it was disclosed at the Minnesota Federation of County Fairs' annual meeting here. The 1963 gates' total hit was $948,-021.

Anita O'Day Finds Scant Employment Harmony For Middle-Income Acts

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

Although she is still one of the most imitated jazz singers and retains a hard core of followers who buy her records, club bookings have been spotty for Anita O'Day.

Exploring the situation, she pointed to the club structure in the U.S. today, where there is a scarcity of work in the middle-income brackets. "You either have to play little-bitty clubs for $500 a week or be at least a $3,000-a-week act," she said. "That means you can work all the time if you're an unknown or a Peggy Lee. But you can't do anything with $500 or $600 a week after

(Continued on page 81)

OR WAS IT 'EXOTIC'?

Morals Squad's Squint at Suspected Ballets

Ottawa, Jan. 21.

A morality-squad officer backstage at 2,357-seat Capitol Theatre here last week for the preem of Harry Somers and Grant Strates' "House of Atreus" faced a vexing problem: which of the three ballets was supposed to be dirty? He had to scrutinize all three, then found nothing immoral after all. (Last November, Riverside Hotel here was ordered to cover up two semi- and one all-nude in "The Guilda Revue.")

Reportedly because Ottawa's fiery mayor Charlotte Whitton had heard the ballet's designer, offbeat Toronto artist Harold Town, describe his costumes on tv as "erotic," the morals man was posted, but not told which ballet was suspect. Incidentally, not only that night but the next—when Atreus" was replaced by "Giselle," was SRO. Ottawa Citizen gave a full section to Laureatt Thistle's critique and to large photos of the "erotic" costumes, which were far from skimpy but emphasized erogenous areas, with no mention of the vice squad's visit.

NBCC's premier danseur David Adams is back after two seasons with London Festival Ballet. His wife Lois Smith is also back after a season out because of an injury. She danced Electra in "Atreus," while Adams and internationally known Galina Samtsova were partnered in "Allegresse."

Hanabasha Fold Spotlights Tokyo Cafe's Erratic Biz

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

The Hanabasha, Tokyo's biggest club featuring headline acts, shuttered at the yearend due to dwindling biz and reportedly will be converted into a store. It will be replaced on the Akasaka nitery scene with a club now being reconstructed from a dance hall located directly under the Hanabasha. The new club, under different ownership, is expected to have about 400 seats and is targeted to bow next month.

The 600-seat Hanabasha was one of the first niterys to open in the Akasaka area about five years ago, when the district for the plushier clubs started shifting there from the Ginza. Its folding climaxed a generally bad year for Tokyo niteries.

Clubs remaining in the section are the New Latin Quarter, the Copacabana and the Golden Akasaka.

The Copa, smaller than the others with about 200 seats, is believed to be the most successful operation. Shunning steep-priced talent, the bistro's big draw is what is considered the most attractive array of "hostesses" in town.

The New Latin Quarter, where talent promoter Tats Nagashima is entertainment director, had a disappointing season with a policy that leaned heavily on big foreign names. The Golden Akasaka continues to get spotty action with booking agents claiming to be paid in four-month promissory notes.

In the same area, the mammoth Mikado theatre-restaurant continues to do good biz, drawing heavily on both the Japanese and foreign tourist trade. With a package dinner-show deal, it remains the best nitery value in Tokyo, contrasted with skyrocketed prices elsewhere, although their productions are often second-rate.

While Japanese tax laws are liberal regarding expense account entertaining, there seems to be an increasing resistance to getting nipped for the lofty tabs here, called the highest in the world. Even some of those who can afford the tariffs have been staying away, saying the fun has gone now that they are being clipped so obviously.

Another factor cutting into the solvency of the clubs is the high rate of delinquent accounts. Much of the action is supposed to be settled by the payment of monthly bills submitted to the companies of the spenders, but they are treated with a cavalier attitude.

Dance Studio Alibi: Everybody Does It

Case May Reach Jury This Week—Old Gals Paid Fat Fees For Lessons

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

There's a veritable parade of defense witnesses in the Federal court trial here of nine men accused by the Justice Dept. of having been involved in the operation of two former Twin Cities' dance studios which allegedly bilked many never-married women and widows, some in the 70s, out of thousands of dollars. A long drawn-out trial has ensued.

Indications, however, are that after two months' duration the case may reach the jury this week.

The now defunct studios were the Minneapolis National and St. Paul Dale. Defendants, allegedly guilty of a mail fraud hoax, include a New Yorker who owned the studios and also some salesmen and instructors.

Addressing the jury, Harold Field Jr., a defense attorney, admitted that while some of the women pupils paid as much as $6,-950 for a couple of years of the dancing lessons, the studios' owners and employes "acted in g faith at all times."

Field also told the jury that the dance instruction format and contract sales followed an "industry pattern."

Testifying for the defense, Donald F. Andrews, who had been a consultant for the two studios, said that the dance manuals used were not only similar to, but in some instances identical to, those used by the Arthur Murray chain of nearly 450 dance studios when he was associated with the latter.

On the witness stand, Alvin Mueske, who had been a supervisor for one of the two allegedly wrongdoing studios and now is one of the defendants under trial, testified on cross examination that in the space of three years he had sold about $50,000 worth of lessons, mostly to women.

Cross-examination also brought out from Mueske that one of the contracts sold by him was to a woman "who had leg trouble," that many of his sales were to women in the 60s and 70s, that his weekly sales ran as high as $3,200, that an inquiry was made into the financial circumstances of women prospects and it was a practice for instructors not to let a woman pupil out of their sight at the studio.

He also estified under cross-examination that every person coming to the studios was considere a contract prospect, "only cripples and senile persons being excluded." There were complaints from women who felt they had been "high pressured" into contracts and in some instances refunds were made, he said. Memberships in various kind of clubs were a gimmick used in the solicitations for the m expensive lessons, the jury was told.

Stanley Friedman, a former owner of the studios that went out of business 18 months ago, also had been the proprietor of dance studios in some other cities.

Eddie Albert to Debut Nitery Act in Houston

Actor Eddie Albert is to do a cafe act. He'll break in a turn with four girls at the Cork Club, Houston, Jan. 23, and follows with the Chase Hotel, St. Louis, Feb. 7. Also on his schedule are the Miramor, Columbus, Feb. 22, and the Southern Club, Hot Springs, March 5.

The turn is being written by Sid Kuller and Sid Muller. William Morris Agency is booking.

Waikiki Becoming Haven for Yen

Honolulu, Jan. 21.

A Japanese-financed theatre-restaurant-hotel project is shaping up in Waikiki ,which is becoming a mid-Pacific bastion for yen from Japan.

Multi-story, multi-purpose structure would be built by Kunizo Matsuo, who owns a Disneyland-type attraction called Dreamland, near Tokyo. He also owns a kabuki theatre and hotel there and his hulaland theatre operation would specialize in imported kabuki plays.

Initial reports say the complex, which would include shops and a cultural center, represents a potential $10,000,000 project. Some observers, however, suspect that figure may be enthusiastically overboard.

Japanese interests recently bought the Moana-SurfRider and Princess Kaiulani Hotels from the Sheraton chain. Matsuo's venture, incidentally, virtually adjoins the Princess Kaiulani.

Members of Honolulu's long established Japanese community own the new $2,500,000 172-room Waikiki Grand hotel and the on-beach Kaimana hotel, latter still under construction. Both of these home-owned facilities are designed to cater primarily to visitors from Japan.

Japan's big Toho studio and circuit is rushing work on a $1,000,000 motion picture theatre near Waikiki.

Emergence of Waikiki as a "Little Tokyo" coincides with the fact that Japan's citizens have a yen (and yen) for travel and soon will be permitted to trek outside their homeland on pleasure trips. Hawaii is figured the No. 1 destination target, to the tune of some 50,000 Japanese nationals per year.

Delay Lil Reis' 2d Trial As Alleged Heist Femcee Gets Psychiatric Care

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

The second trial of Lillian Reis, chorine and former owner of the Celebrity Club here, as the alleged mistress of ceremonies in the $478,000 Pottsville, Pa., heist, was postponed when it was learned the defendant had had herself committed to a psychiatric rest home here.

Schuylkill County Judge Charles W. Staudenmeier ordered an investigation by the upstate District Attorney's office. The psychiatrist, Dr. Aaron W. Mallin, told court officers that Miss Reis had been "contemplating suicide" and he believed it would be a few weeks before the defendant would be fit to appear in court.

With only two weeks left to draw a jury from the January term venire, the trial may face another long delay. Miss Reis' first appearance in court ended with a hung jury in Oct., 1961. The Schuylkill County Court has been under orders of the State Superior Court to proceed with the trial after it turned down the club owner's plea for suppression of evidence relating to her arrest.

Three men have already been convicted in the much-publicized burglary of the home of Pottsville coal baron John C. Rich, and two others who figured in the case have been slain.

HELEN TRAUBEL CLICKS IN DOWN-UNDER DEBUT

Melbourne, Jan. 21.

Helen Traubel, on her first visit Down Under, is playing a three-week dual date at the Menzies and Savoy Plaza for Federal Hotels here, then goes to the Chevron in Sydney for a two-week stand.

Miss Traubel, who has been brought Down Under by N.L.T. Productions, said here that Australia was one place she'd always wanted to visit but had never been able to fit it into her commitments until now.

Wih a varied act lasting 30 minutes, the singer has been received very well here. She's accompanied on piano by her musical director, Richmond Gale, supported by five other musicians. She's strongly backed by Aussie tv comic Bobby Limb.

Miss Traubel will likely do some tv stints while Down Under. Accompanied on the trip by her husband, William L. Bass, she says she has to be back in New York by late March to fulfill nitery engagements there.

Britain Reviving Music Hall as TV's 'Passive Entertainment' Bores Public

By ROGER WATKINS

London, Jan. 21.

British entertainment apparently has turned full circle and the next significant phase of local show biz will be the resurgence of music hall. Having been largely killed off by television, bingo, bowling and a dozen other contributory reasons, this art form seems about to burst back into prominence.

Harold Fielding will "convert" the Prince Charles Theatre next month into Fielding's Music Hall, where he'll present modern vaude bills on a permanent basis. At the same time Daniel Farson, who made a smash tv show of tavern entertainers called "Time Gentlemen Please", will offer a music hall show based on the type of entertainment which kept the East End of London aislerolling way back in the boom days of vaudeville.

Meantime, Arthur Lane is searching for a third West End theatre in which to present a vaude show, "Night At The Tivoli," next March following a successful test of the show at Wimbledon.

Even in Suburbs

In the London suburbs, too, there are signs of the re-emergence of "the halls" and the old Brixton Empress (now a Granada cinema) is skedded to return to live variety in March.

Stock theatres in Richmond and Chelmsford within the next few weeks are also switching over from legit to vaude as the demand for the latter seems to be growing.

Ray MacKender, manager of pop singer Mark Wynter, and a strong vaude enthusiast, has set up the British Music Hall Society, a body which was inaugurated only at the beginning of the month but already has 450 subscription-paying members (including, incidentally, nine from various parts of the U.S.).

An exhibition which MacKender arranged at the Hoxton Hall last month, depicting a 100 year history of vaude, attracted more than 2,000 people and, as MacKender put it, "you don't just pass Hoxton Hall, you have to make your way there."

Points Up Interest

Success of the exhib at Hoxton—now moved to a permanent address at 63 Great Cumberland Place, London—served to demonstrate the widespread interest in music halls that still exists today, he says.

What is certainly true is that summer season shows around the coast are still making the old routines pay and among the most popular shows on tv here are "The Good Old Days" from the City Varieties, Leeds and "Stars And Garters," a tavern show spinoff from "Time Gentlemen Please."

Reason vaude will again take the West End by storm, according to MacKender, is that "people are growing tired of the passive entertainment they get from television." They want to participate in shows in a way they cannot by just watching tv.

Civil Righters, Ministers Force Delaware, O., Elks To Drop Blackface Pgm.

Delaware, O., Jan. 21.

Protests by a local civil rights committee, composed largely of Ohio Wesleyan U. faculty members, and the Delaware County Ministerial Assn. last week resulted in the Elks Lodge changing its home-talent minstrel show scheduled for Jan. 24 and 25 to a "no-blackface" performance.

In addition, the name of the program was changed from "Elks Minstrel Show" to "Elks Charity Revue" to better reflect the nature of show, and trustees of the Elks Lodge agreed to remove anything offensive.

It was pointed out that the complaints were registered because the program was to be presented at Willis Junior High School, a public school. "If the show was to be held in the Elks Hall, we'd have no right to question the matter," according to the ministerial association. The ministers said they could not condone the use of blackface comedians in places of public entertainment.

Harry Moller, who is producing the show, said he was changing the format to comply with the wishes of the civil rights group, which had threatened to picket the program if blackface makeup were used.

Mpls. Greenlights New $7,275,138 Exhib Hall

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Even though the low $7,275,138 total construction bids exceed architects' estimates by nearly $1,250,000, the city council has made known it will accept them and go through with the local municipal auditorium's new exhibition hall.

Although the cost will be considerably higher than anticipated, this city will be getting a much expanded and remodeled municipal auditorium which was expected to involve only a $10,000,000 expenditure.

The new exhibition hall is only part of the project which will be designed to make the auditorium much more suitable for various touring stage and other attractions as well as big league indoor sports and the biggest conventions. Plans call for work to start this summer. Completion is expected by late 1965.

Shawn to B'way, Proser Soloing 'Anything Goes'

Las Vegas, Jan. 21.

Monte Proser's experiment of presenting two Broadway tab shows each night in a nitery lasted only 28 nights—but it wasn't because the novel idea wasn't successful.

On Dec. 20 Proser opened "Anything Goes" and "High Button Shoes" at the Thunderbird Hotel showroom, with the former being presented as the dinner show, and the latter at midnight. The twin bill did more initial biz than the previous b.o. champ, "Flower Drum Song," but because of stiff Equity requirements and because the star of both shows, Dick Shawn, decided to accept a Broadway role, Proser is now presenting "High Button Shoes" alone.

If Equity terms could be modified, "High Button Shoes" would again be presented nightly with "Anything Goes" when and if Shawn returns to the Thunderbird this summer. During the four-week run of the twin bill, Equity had demanded that its members be paid double salary.

Shawn will close Feb. 5, with Pete Marshall (and Tommy Noonan) taking over in "Goes," in the role created by William Gaxton. Irving Benson continues in the Victor Moore comedy role.

On Feb. 18 Shawn opens on Broadway in "A Funny Thing Happened To Me On The Way To The Forum," subbing in the Zero Mostel starring spot, and will do the show for at least 90 days.

While in New York, Shawn will be a panelist on the "To Tell The Truth" tv daily show, will also appear on the tv "Missing Link" series, and will do an indie film which has been offered, and which will be shot in Gotham.

PP&M SRO $14,500 IN PITT ONE-NIGHTER

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

Peter, Paul & Mary drew on a SRO crowd who paid $14,500 at a concert here Saturday (18) night as Syria Mosque.

The group was sold out on Monday (13). Pit seats and standing room brought the attendance to well over 4,000. When the 100 pit seats went on sale on Monday, the city was in the middle of its worst snow storm in years. But from somewhere came the customers and the ducats were sold out at Horne's Department store in 45 minutes.

Albany Armory Date

Albany, Jan. 21.

Peter, Paul & Mary will concert at Albany Armory Saturday night (24). Scale is $2.50 to $3.50.

Kummer Adds Clients, Turns Down GAC Bid

Marty Kummer, who recently resigned from Creative Management Associates to enter the personal management field, has signed Wayne & Shuster and Joan Fairfax. Latter heads the all-girl band current at the Roosevelt, N. Y. Kummer left CMA with Jack Paar in his fold.

According to Kummer, a bid to take his stable into General Artists Corp. was turned down, and Kummer will stay on his own.

Niteries' Big Biz Melts N. Y. Snow

The New York cafe business started to dig out from last Monday's (13) snowfall over the weekend. The niteries had a huge weekend with the Hotel Americana's Royal Box scoring some of the biggest business in town. According to a hotel spokesman, Pearl Bailey pulled the biggest business since the Americana's opening attraction, Harry Belafonte. Miss Bailey has been collecting overages since her Dec. 30 preem at the hotel.

The cafemen declare that with a decent break in the weather last week might have been "very big," but the difficulty in travel brought business down to "normal." An advance vanguard of exhibitors and officials of the Motor Boat Show at the Coliseum, plus the annual invasion of buyers shopping about for spring items, pumped some life into nitery trade.

Operators had been complaining that the business hasn't really bounced back since the assassination of President Kennedy on Nov. 22. However, they're hopeful that an upbeat will come because of convention and other pre-booked business.

Far East GI Circuit Will Continue Perking Despite Some Troop Withdrawals

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

The expected withdrawal of 3,500 Air Force personnel and 2,000 dependents from Japan is not expected to have a significant effect on bookings on the military club circuit, according to several promoters of foreign talent.

They point out that there are still plenty of Yank servicemen in Japan and other Far Eastern locations and that military club bookings is mainly weekend action anyway. Tats Nagashima, the most active importer of foreign talent here, noted that he usually has excessive demand for Friday and Saturday night dates at the military clubs for his better acts.

U. S. military strength in Japan now totals 46,000 men, plus 54,000 dependents and 3,000 American civilian government employes.

The military club circuit in this area has become of increasing importance to talent bookers. Acts like Jimmie Rodgers and the Four Lads, which recently toured these parts, played military dates exclusively except for one Tokyo club, tv shots and in the case of Rodgers, several concerts.

The structure is now of such a level that an Eartha Kitt was able to play four shows in two nights at military clubs in Taipei whereas previously such locations wouldn't come up with her kind of coin.

Econo-Car System Inks Kelly Jr. as Ad Image

Big business seems to be continuing to try to create commercial images through show biz personalities. Latest to get a deal to work in the mercantile field is Emmett Kelly Jr., who frequently substitutes for his father in portraying the sad clown.

The younger Kelly has been inked to be the advertising image and personal representative of Econo-Car Rental System, said to be the fourth largest car rental operation in the field.

Econo-Car has also retained Kurt Hofmann Associates, a theatrical publicity firm to handle its press relations in its quest to use show biz personalities and methods.

Decree Ends AGVA Trusteeship Of Philly Local; Set Election in 60 Days

The American Guild of Variety Artists last week signed a consent decree with the U. S. Dept. of Justice which ends the union's trusteeship of its Philadelphia local. The decree stipulates that upon dissolution of the trusteeship, AGVA within 60 days, will call for an election in the Philadelphia area to be supervised by the U. S. Dept. of Labor under terms of the Landrum-Griffin Act.

The decree forces AGVA's national office to agree that the Philadelphia branch is a local organization entitled to as much power and autonomy as any other branch.

The decree also ends a court suit through which AGVA sought to appeal a Dept. of Labor ruling that ordered termination of the trusteeship imposed on the Philadelphia local a number of years ago. The local had been acting in a manner contrary to the dictates of the AGVA administration at that time. The union removed all officers and governed the local from New York.

In March of 1961, Dick Jones asked the Dept. of Labor to terminate the trusteeship. Jones, one of the leaders in the rebel group of Philadelphia and now a member of the interim committee now governing AGVA, had been fighting the administration.

His plea to the Dept. of Labor produced the ruling which declared the trusteeship illegal under the Landrum-Griffin Act. This law makes it mandatory that trusteeships imposed by a union on any of its branches be ended after 18 months unless special conditions prevail.

AGVA appealed the order. But with the advent of the new administration last September the new national board voted to make peace with the Federal Government and save the costs of expensive litigation necessary to fight the case.

Harold Berg, national counsel for AGVA, and Asst. U. S. Attorney Arthur Olick signed the decree. Federal Court approval is expected within a few days.

No Far-Reaching Effect

The implications of the consent decree are difficult to predict, according to Assistant U. S. Attorney Arthur Olick. As far as the present decree is concerned, it applies only to Philadelphia and the ending of the AGVA national office trusteeship over the local in that city.

The question of autonomy for all AGVA locals which would enable them to rule without interference from the head office has not been settled by the decree.

AGVA Members Urge Expert For Nat'l Adm. Sec'ty

The first indication by cardholders of the American Guild of Variety Artists on the type of executive they want for the post of national administrative secretary was voiced last week at the New York membership meeting held Wednesday (15) at the Hotel Americana. Members passed a resolution asking that an experienced hand in labor administration be hired for the top AGVA job.

Resolution stated that members were tired of seeing actors not skilled in labor administration get this post and advised the national board, which would okay the appointment, to hire an experienced labor administrator.

The resolution also asked that the national board confer with the N.Y. Central Labor Council head, Harry Van Arsdale, who also is top man of the Electrical Workers, to help AGVA find a qualified man.

At the same time, the meeting backed up the members original preference by defeating separate motions that Johnny Woods, now chairman of the interim committee governing AGVA, get the post of national administrative secretary. Also turned down was a motion to put Ernie Fast, on the interim committee and former eastern regional director of the union, into the post.

Under present procedure, motions passed by local meetings are construed as recommendations to the national office which may veto any resolution passed locally.

TOKYO HILTON ADDING FOREIGN ACTS TO BILL

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

The Tokyo Hilton's Star Hill supper club will soon present foreign acts in addition to local talent. The foreign performers will be selected from those already on the scene rather than especially brought in from overseas, according to Olaf S. Bonde, the hostelry's managing director.

Dancing was restored in the room last month, with cards on the tables explaining that terpers must be registered at the hotel. Police have ogled the place, but thus far have not nabbed any bootleg dancers. Some months ago police found several non-guests on the floor and hauled several management members of the Hilton to the station house to warn them against repeating the violation.

Scotch Reported Sale Of Glasgow Metropole

Glasgow, Jan. 21.

Reports that the Metropole vaudery here is to be sold have been denied by Stanley Frutin, a director of the company owning the theatre. The house has been mentioned as a likely building to be bought by the city council.

Current revue is "Bonnie Scotland," a tartan song-and-dance twice-nightly show, with local comedy duo Gracie Clark & Colin Murray. It's playing to solid biz. "The Calum Kennedy Show" is skedded as a package deal in June after a month of vaude in May, with comedian Jimmy Fletcher.

Contemporary Concerts Latest Outfit to Step Into W'peg Promotional Arena

Winnipeg, Jan. 21.

Still another group of local businessmen has entered the theatrical promotion field. Contemporary Concerts, formed by lawyer Roland Penner and CBC writer Mort Forer, is the latest outfit to go after the local entertainment dollar.

Already sharing the local field are Celebrity Concerts, operated by brothers Bill and Ed Gee throughout western Canada from headquarters here; the Winnipeg Symphony, which specializes in importing name soloists for guest shots with the orchestra; Marilyn Payne, of Billings, Mont., and locally-based Canadawide Attractions, both specializing in c&w and rock 'n' roll shows; Coop Folk Concerts, with which Penner and Forer are indirectly associated; Royal Winnipeg Ballet; the Manitoba Theatre Centre, and Rainbow Stage, besides numerous civic groups that promote one-shot touring attractions.

Contemporary Concerts was formed eight months ago, but for lack of facilities hired a local promotion group to act as frontmen. When the promotional group stopped acting as agents and started taking credit as impresarios, and with a season of attractions booked, Contemporary decided to "come out in the open and blow our own horn," as president Penner described the situation.

The new group has a promotional arrangement with Nicholas Koudriavtsev's Montreal-based Canadian Concerts and Artists. The Montreal group has Canadian rights to present attractions originating in the U.S.S.R., as well as other interests.

Under the current arrangements, Contemporary has presented Mantovani. Stars of the Bolshoi Ballet and the Obraztsov Puppets. Set for the forthcoming months is the Ballet Folklorico de Mexico, Ballet de Madrid d'Antonio and Moscow's Moiseyev Dancers.

Japanese Bookers Yen More Foreign Talent Despite Existing Act Surplus

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

While importers of foreign talent are complaining over problems of survival during the heavy upcoming schedule of expensive imported acts, they continue to book more. And since some of the artists from overseas presented here during the latter part of 1963 proved disappointing draws, this year's action should determine the saturation point.

Currently on the scene are Ella Fitzgerald with the Roy Eldridge Quartet, Anita O'Day, Rusty Draper, Four Freshman, Peking Opera, Susan Barrett and Leo Diamond. Those expected during the early months of 1964 include Ray McKinley's Glenn Miller Orch, Frankie Laine, Damita Jo, Pat Boone, Connie Francis, Paul Anka, Benny Goodman Septet, Chico Hamilton Quartet, Timi Yuro, Helen O'Connell, Harry James Orch, John Coltrane combo, the Treniers, Roland Kirk Trio, Arturo Romero and his Villa Fontana Strings.

Returning to wind up engagements of last year are the Gertrude Ward Singers and George Lewis Preservation Hall Jazz Band. Other top names are in negotiation. Traffic in smaller and European acts is expected to be equally brisk.

Reasons for the splurging include increased allowances for foreign currency payments to entertainers since last April, permission to convert local yen currency for purchasing transportation tickets, boosted entertainment budgets by U.S. military in Japan, Okinawa, Taipei and the Philippines and several new talent promotion outfits.

New companies are the Japan Booking Corp., which presented the Cannonball Adderly Sextet and the Max Roach Quartet with Abbey Lincoln last year; Musashi Promotions, which presented the Sam Taylor Quartet for 10 weeks until the yearend and Target Productions, now presenting Ella Fitzgerald with the Roy Eldridge Quartet as its first venture.

Standbys in the pop and jazz field are Tats Nagashima's Kyodo Kikuka Productions, Dan Sawyer's Gekko Promotions, Eddie Sereno, Art Friends Assn., Tom Nomura's Shin-Nichi Promotions, Butz Productions and Swan Promotions, which uses various corporate names.

Pan Pacific Promotions Has Aussie Surf Craze Paying Off Via U.S. Acts

Melbourne, Jan. 21.

Cashing in on the surf craze Down Under, Pan Pacific Promotions, which last year imported Sammy Davis Jr. and Shelley Berman, is now booking some of the top American surf names in Aussie under the title of "Surfside '64."

Leading the group is Roy Orbison, with The Beach Boys, The Surfaris and Paul & Paula, plus Australia's own quintet—The Joy Boys. The show kicked off in Brisbane last week. It later plays one or two night stands in Sydney, Adelaide, Melbourne and Hobart with a six-day tour of New Zealand.

Pan Pacific Promotion director Harry Miller told VARIETY "I think we're riding right on the crest of this surf and stomp wave and through careful promotion have succeeded one step further in trying to re-establish te concert business in Australia as it used to be in the old days."

Pan Pacific has also signed Erroll Garner for Down Under in April and Peter, Paul & Mary for May. In Sydney currently, it has Dick Haymes appearing at Chequer's night club and in association with Diamond Music Co. of Hong Kong is presenting Ella Fitzgerald with the Roy Eldridge Quartet at the Hong Kong City Hall later this month.

Expo Review

Home Show

Portland, Ore., Jan. 14.

Ames Bros. (3), Rowena Rollins, Harmonitones (2), George Arnold Orch (12). At Memorial Coliseum, Jan. 11-19; $1.50-$1 admission.

Producer Tom O'Loughlin has geared an interesting and entertaining 1964 Home Show for the family trade and exhibitors. The nine-day offering set a new attendance record of 71,883. Main gate tab entitles holder to all exhibits and stage show.

A vaude layout is presented nightly with weekend matinees. After an intro, act is driven from under grandstand seats to the nifty platform at arena center and atop one of the huge exhibits. Entertainment is on the light side.

The Ames Bros. (Vic, Joe and Gene) are headlining the 50-minute show. They are in good voice but leave a lot to be desired. The brothers, minus one, lack the sound that made them a blockbuster attraction.

Trio sings a medley of Ames old faves, but results are minus the body of quartet days. Joe impresses with his rich bass "Climb Every Mountain." Vic garners mitting for his impresh of Chevalier's "Thank Heaven." Vic also handles the mike chores for their 20-minute stint.

Lads reportedly are getting $7,500 for the bash which seems out of line once the trio is heard. Audience is busy searching for the missing ingredient and appreciation is mild.

Harmonitones (2) get things underway with some standard harmonica tunes on their assorted electronic instruments. Tall comedienne Rowena Rollins has the customers chuckling with her "Chicken In Every Pot" routine. Some of the humor is lost in the huge hall but she is a capable femcee. George Arnold's Orchestra backstops the show nicely.

Feve.

ELLA ENDING JAPANESE TOUR WITH CHARITY GIG

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

In response to requests from Japanese show folk unable to attend Ella Fitzgerald's regular performances here, the singer will do a late-hour show tomorrow (Wed.) in public room at Okura Hotel under sponsorship of Diner's Club of Japan, with profits going to charity. With mainly Nipponese performers in attendance and Miss Fitzgerald on stage with the Roy Eldridge Quartet, the outing will undoubtedly turn into a jam session.

The special show will wrap up a tour of 11 concerts, one tv date and a performance at Camp Zama for U.S. military personnel by the singer. Although audience response was solid, houses at Tokyo performances were less than capacity for this first presentation by Target Productions in association with Eddie White's White Way Music Inc. Opening night at Kosei Nenkin Hall drew about 70% of capacity, including many Oakleys.

Vaude, Cafe Dates

Chicago

Lineup for Mister Kelly's includes Serendipity Singers and Jack Sheldon Feb. 17 for three frames, Woody Allen and Judy Henske March 2-29, and Don Adams and The Turtles March 30-April 12 . . . Allen Di Blasio plays Mickey Mantle's Holiday Inn, Joplin, Mo., Jan. 24 for a month, the Mayfair Lounge in Green Bay, Wis., Feb. 24 for three weeks, and D'Amico's in Joliet, Ill. March 15 for three weeks . . . Dick Smith down for a week at the Domino Lounge, Atlanta, starting Jan. 24 . . . Marge Cameron into Eddys', K.C., Jan. 30 for a fortnight . . . Vaughn Monroe to the Holiday House, Pittsburgh, Jan. 24-Feb. 1 . . . Jan Murray set for the Southern Club, Hot Springs, Feb. 20 for a week.

Ella Fitzgerald Kicks Off 2-Week Japan Tour To Smash Tokyo Reception

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Performing for the first time since a holiday break, probing to gauge the preferences of the Japanese audience and working on the stage of the 2,300-seat Kosei Nenkin Hall with winds that could have floored a polar bear, Ella Fitzgerald only pulverized the house on the opening night of a two-week Japan tour.

Miss Fitzgerald, ignoring the arctic climate, quickly warms up an audience containing a goodly number of Nipponese show bizites with her wonderful way with a song. Warbling some 30 numbers from palpitating jazz to tender ballads and making all the stops between the headliner proves anew that she's a most complete singer.

With the musical support of the cooking Roy Eldridge Quartet behind her and the encouragement of joyous fans out front, Miss Fitzgerald made each song her own.

The immediate response of recognition at the beginning of each number convinced that Miss Fitzgerald's records receive wide exposure here. The people were familiar with virtually everything in her large songbag, from the multitude of jazz standards to the tunes from her various "song books" of great composers. Whether scat-singing on "Them Their Eyes" and "Perdido" or clearly enunciating "Ten Cents A Dance" or "Misty," her bell tones and warmly engaging manner readily communicated.

Among tunes best received were "Mack the Knife" (she's learned the words) and "Hallelujah I Love Him So," on which she was applauded into an extra chorus. Finale of "Stomping at the Savoy."

Kosei Nenkin Hall

Ella Fitzgerald with Roy Eldridge Quartet presented by Target Productions in association with Whiteway Music; $8.33 top.

(Continued on page 80)

Opening JANUARY 16th for THREE WEEKS at the
OLYMPIA THEATRE
PARIS, FRANCE

GIL MILLER and ARNOLD ARCHER
"THE COMEDY MUSIC MEN"
—Just Concluded—
ROYAL YORK HOTEL, Toronto • PLAYBOY CLUBS: Chicago, New Orleans, St. Louis
BBC-TV (DICK EMERY SHOW) LONDON • MUNICIPAL CASINO, Cannes, France

Personal Management:
GRAY GORDON
37 West 57 Street
New York 19, N. Y. 10019
TEmpleton 8-2746

Direction
GAC

European Representatives:
BERNARD HILDA (Continent)
33 Champs Elysees
Paris, France
Elysees 02-00

BLACKBURN-LEWIS AGY. (Great Britain)
35 Curzon Street
Mayfair
London, W.1., England
Grosvenor 8312

DAILY TELEGRAPH NOVEMBER 19, 1963

SILVER SPADE: Frank Gorshin

AN AMERICAN WHO REALLY ENTERTAINS

American cabaret entertainers parade through Sydney these days like diamantes opening night.

NOT many prove to be so arrestingly genuine, so legitimately entertaining, as Frank Gorshin.

Mr. Gorshin is an unusually gifted impressionist.

That is one of his many gifts; he is also a dancer, singer, TV actor, etc.

But it is as an impressionist that he is appearing at the Silver Spade, where he opened a two-week season last night.

A stringbean of a man, he is everyone from Broderick Crawford to W. C. Fields.

His impressions are not merely vocal imitations—they are very clever character parodies.

He gives a complete theatrical show.

Minister for Trade
the House of C would be ir current
ment.
The m observ guise vati port era
F wit fo g

THEATRE
By Norman Kessell

The SUN
Tuesday, Nov. 19, 1963

Impressions in depth

BESIDE the virtuosity of American entertainer Frank Gorshin, who opened at the Chevron Silver Spade Room last night, all other impressionists fade almost into insignificance.

Where the average such entertainer will offer half a dozen or so characterisations, Gorshin presented more than 30 in his first show.

Moreover, each portrait is an impression in depth.

In addition to the extraordinary facial resemblances he is able to achieve and the vocal similarities, there is a wealth of subtler character observation.

Indeed, there are points that must escape local audiences not so familiar with some of the stars' mannerisms Gorshin caricatures.

But there is sheer delight in his Hitchcock, his Kirk Douglas, his Steve McQueen, his Brod Crawford and his devastatingly brilliant Sir Alec Guinness of the bridge over the River Kwai.

As if all this were not enough, he scores also as a vocalist with some first-class arrangements of numbers like "Up A Lazy River" and "Build A Mountain" and tells some good stories.

This is really first-class entertainment by an accomplished artist—who, incidentally, will be readily recognized by televiewers as an actor in several series.

It's no wonder everyo den islands are arm, waitin

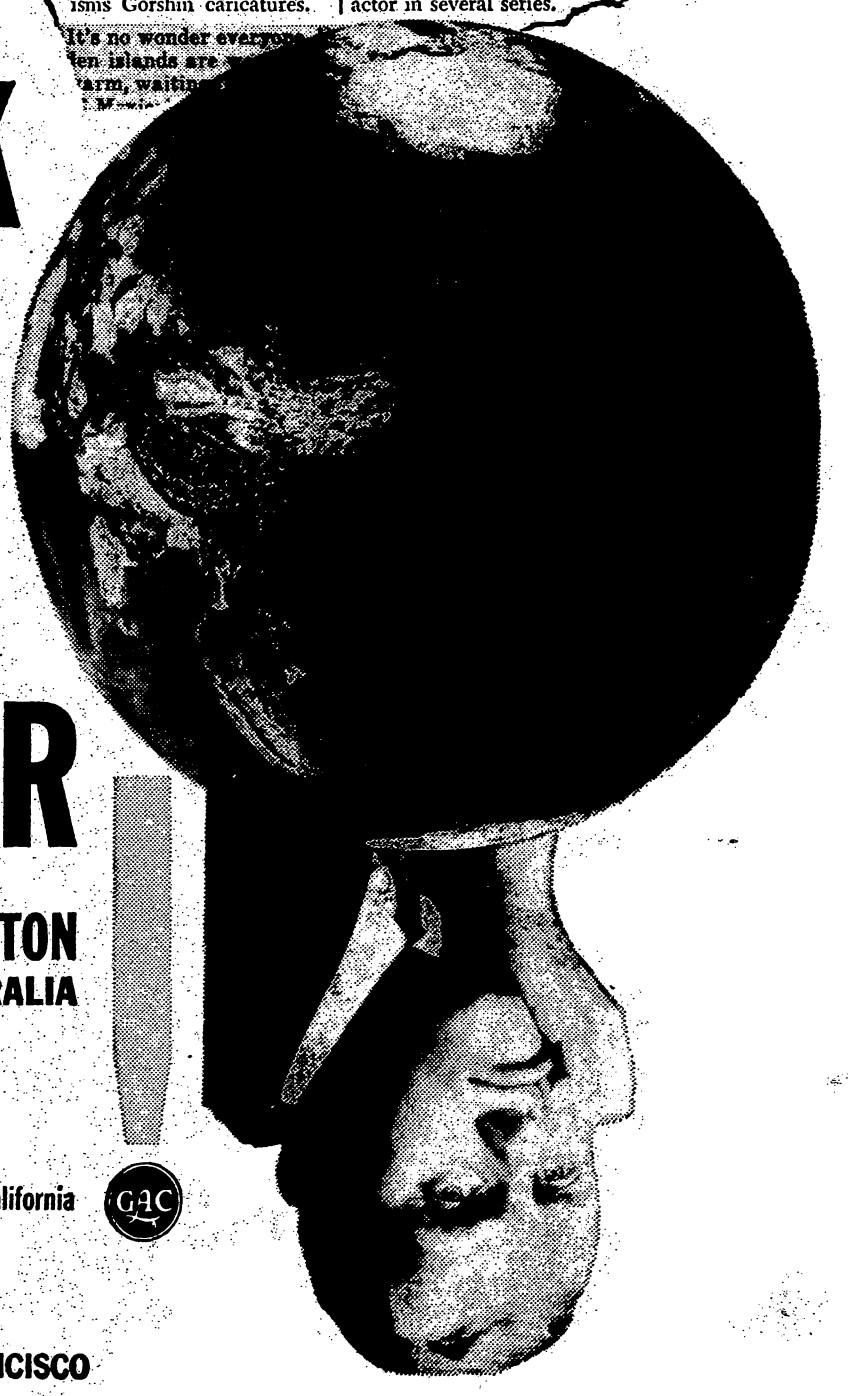
FRANK GORSHIN DOWN UNDER!



CHEVRON HILTON
SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA

Personal Management: Leonard J. Grant, Hollywood, California

Upcoming:

- JAN. 24—CHI CHI, PALM SPRINGS
- FEB. 9—ED SULLIVAN SHOW (6th)
- MAR. 17—FAIRMONT HOTEL, SAN FRANCISCO

EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE,

the whole town is swinging with

A.P.A.

attractions

ROOSEVELT
JOAN FAIRFAX and Her All Girl Orchestra
(Closing January 30 to Open Harrah's, Lake Tahoe)
BOB KASHA Trio

•

Opening January 31—TONI CARROLL, CHARLES FISK and The Boys • BOB KASHA Trio

AMERICANA
LESTER LANIN Orchestra, AL CONTE Trio, GEORGE RUDOLPH

PLAZA
EMIL COLEMAN and His Orchestra
MARK MONTE and His Continentals

SHERATON EAST
MILT SHAW and His Orchestra

REGENCY
HOWARD "RACK" GODWIN

APOLLO
LENNY WELCH

ALAMEDA ROOM
DI MARIE

INTERNATIONAL CLUB
LONDON LEE

BASIN STREET EAST
MIRIAM MAKEBA, STAN GETZ

NEW YORKER
MILTON SAUNDERS and His Orchestra

EMBERS
HAROLD QUINN

LIVING ROOM
EMILY YANCY

CHATEAU MADRID
LOS CHAVALES

BERGEN PLAYHOUSE
HENNY YOUNGMAN "Thurber Carnival"

and on Television

CAROL BURNETT TV Spectacular
(In Preparation)
HARRY ZIMMERMAN—Conductor and Orchestrator

GARRY MOORE SHOW
SHANI WALLIS, January 21 and January 28
HARRY ZIMMERMANN, from February 3 on,
Conductor and Orchestrator

MIKE DOUGLAS SHOW
ANITA BRYANT, January 20-24

THE HOLLYWOOD PALACE
MIRIAM MAKEBA, January 25

apa

AGENCY FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS, INC.
New York Chicago Beverly Hills Miami San Juan

Ella Fitzgerald

Continued from page 78

which had her swapping phrases with trumpeter Eldridge also generated much excitement and brought encores of her trademarked "A Tisket A Tasket" and "'S Wonderful" before begoff after two hours. Ovation at conclution was loudest and longest given a vocalist here.

Although she does several standup numbers, for the most part Miss Fitzgerald works with the hand mike, moving around the stage while slapping a thigh or snapping her fingers and frequently breaking into dance steps that showed her to be surprisingly lightfooted. It was hard to realize it was Miss Fitzgerald's first show in Japan since 1953.

If there were drawbacks to her performance—and they seem lost in the overall excellence — they were in ill-advised special material and one lapse of taste. The number wrapped around U.S. tv commercials, which are alien to the Japanese, did not register full effect. Neither did the interpolated impersonations of Sophie Tucker, Della Reese, Pearl Bailey and the late Dinah Washington.

Miss Tucker is generally unknown here and her impresh must have sounded like Satchmo to the Nipponese. And while Miss Fitzgerald acknowledged the recent passing of Miss Washington, it struck a sour note to introduce her name in the exuberance of the moment.

Miss Fitzgerald's presentation is aided immeasurably by the Eldridge unit. The vet trumpet man, working mainly with mutes, makes fine complimentary sounds behind the singer, often dueting with the thrush for jam session effects. Other members of the combo helping to create a big sound and steady beat are Tommy Flanagan on piano, Gus Johnson on drums and Bill Yancy on bass. Jamp.

STRIPPER SHEDS $100

Dayton, O., Jan. 21.

Marjorie Maddoz, 26, of Perma, Calif., charged with performing at the Mayfair Theatre in less than the minimum clothing allowed by law, changed her former plea of not guilty and entered a guilty plea.

Judge Cecil Edwards fined her $100 and court costs and sentenced her to 30 days in the workhouse. The workhouse time was suspended.

38-24-36 Formula May Be Titillating But Doesn't Match Bard's Art, Sez Ct.

Columbus, O., Jan. 21.

Shakespeare and nightclub strippers have little in common, according to Franklin County Common Pleas Court Judge Kenneth L. Sater, of Columbus, who viewed films of dancers at the Jack and Jill Bar in Cleveland. State liquor enforcement agents had charged that the bar's operators had permitted "suggestive and immoral dancing." Spot's license was later suspended for 28 days.

In an appeal, Theodore Saker, counsel for the defense, argued that dancing was a form of art indigenous to the American way of life. He added that such dancing was as much a form of art and specialized skill as Shakespeare's sonnets in iambic pentameter.

Judge Sater said, "Shakespeare's art lay in the meter of his work rather than in his physical attributes, while in the dancer's case (Rebecca Montford, billed as Renee) a different type of rhythm lay primarily in the titillating use of the mystic formula, 38-24-36.

"Out, damned (night) spot! Out, I say," the judge concluded, as he upheld the state liquor department's suspension order.

Strippers Must Go

Gulfport, Miss., Jan. 21.

Strippers at Harrison county night spots will not be exhibiting their wares much longer, Sheriff Ed McDonnell said here Thursday (16). McDonnell, who took office Jan. 6 for a four-year term, served notice on operators of strip joints that "strippers must go."

The sheriff said operators were given two weeks' grace to comply with the order so they can fulfill contracts with performers on current engagements.

Pinch Tokyo Peelers

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

Two strippers and three staff members of the France Theatre in the Ikebukuro section of this city were arrested by the Metropolitan Police last week and charged with public indecency.

Pinched peelers were Sestsuko Sato and Hirmi Shimokawa. Accompanying them to the station house were theatre manager Kinrei Machida and two others. Police said the theatre was one of several Tokyo stripperies which have been baring too much.

Agents & N.Y. Fair

Continued from page 1

Wonderama located on the sit of the old Billy Rose Aquacade.

However, the talent agencies ar hopeful that some means will b found when the shows get rollin sans names to install some hea liners. It's felt that the Fair shov men will seek top attractions onc the novelty of the Fair has wor off. The percenters feel that onc competition sets in among the var ous shows, some may find it nece sary to go in for names on eithe a permanent or an occasional basi

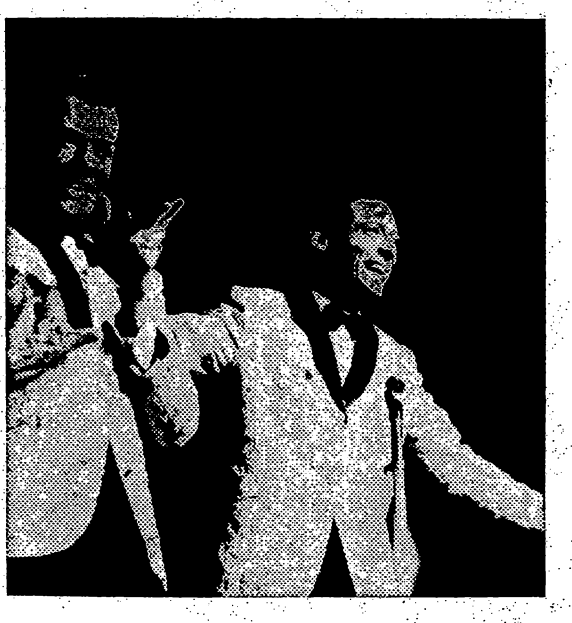
For the time being the taler offices are stressing the Fair value to the Broadway showmen. The hope to cash in on the boom i conventions and visitors during th Fair by convincing nitery and hote men that they can create a boon ing Broadway night life wit names.

365 LBS. of DYNAMITE!

TUBBY BOOTS
Currently HELD OVER
TOWN HILL CLUB
New York
Personal Management
PETER VAN DE NORTH
77 West 55 Street, New York
Circle 5-0946

"THE COMEDIAN"
The Only Real Monthly
PROFESSIONAL GAG SERVICE
THE LATEST — THE GREATEST — THE MOST-UP-TO-DATEST
Now in its 158th Issue, containing stories one-liners, poemettes, song titles, hecklers, audience stuff, monologs, parodies, double gags, bits ideas, intros, impressions and impersonations, political, interruptions. Thoughts of the Day, Humorous Views of the News, Vignettes, etc. (20 Pages)
$25 YR.—SINGLE ISSUES $3
Foreign
$35 YR.—SINGLE ISSUES $4
No C.O.D.'s
BILLY GLASON, 200 W. 54th St.
New York City 10019, CO 5-1316

tommy wonder and don dellair



Currently at the
CASINO DE PARIS
(PARIS)

EXCLUSIVE XXX MANAGEMENT
WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY, INC.
SINCE 1898 THE AGENCY OF THE SHOW WORLD
NEW YORK BEVERLY HILLS CHICAGO
LONDON PARIS ROME MADRID

AGVA to Name Rank & File Groups To Aid in Contract Negotiations

Rank and file committees representing performers in a show for which a contract is under negotiation will be a permanent policy of all American Guild of Variety Artists negotiations. This arrangement was revealed last week by Johnny Woods, chairman of the interim committee now heading AGVA since the ousting of national administrative secretary Bobby Faye.

According to Woods, committees will be appointed so that they can gather grievances from the cast, have a hand in creating the terms of the new deal and sit in on all negotiations. Woods said this will be the policy in all shows which have a permanent cast. Included are circuses, ice shows, and chorus lines in longrunning shows.

